Reclamation of Property or Proceeds in Equity.—Where property has been obtained by fraud, equity recognizes the law to be that the property always belongs to the true owner, and therefore its proceeds must also belong to him and may be reclaimed in a suit in equity against the voluntary assignee or one holding in bad faith.[28]

Recovery by Government.—The government, like an individual, may maintain any appropriate action to recover property of which it has been defrauded.[29]

4. Fraud as Defense.—While the general rule is that the performance of every contract may be resisted on the ground of fraud, at law as well as in equity, yet upon a contract of sale, the defendant, having accepted performance, cannot interpose this defense to defeat the contract, unless he returns the article or proves it to have been entirely worthless, though he may ordinarily re-

24. Not an action for breach of contract.—Smith v. Bolles, 132 U. S. 125, 129, 33 L. Ed. 279.

But its gist is fraudulently producing a false impression upon the mind of the other party by words or acts, or concealment or suppression of material facts not equally within the knowledge or reach of the plaintiff. Stewart v. Wyoming Cattle Ranche Co., 128 U. S. 383, 388, 32 L. Ed. 439.

25. When action of deceit lies.—Butler v. Watkins, 13 Wall. 456, 464, 20 L. Ed. 629; Angle v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 U. S. 1, 10, 38 L. Ed. 55. See, generally, ante, "Definitions," II.

As to legal nature of remedy, see ante, "Remedy at Law Must Be Inadequate," VI, A, 1, b.

25a. Defenses.—National Bank v. Petrie, 189 U. S. 423, 425, 47 L. Ed. 879.

26. Measure of damages.—Cooper v. Schlesinger, 111 U. S. 148, 28 L. Ed. 382. See the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 163, et seq.

Speculative profits and expenditures.—See the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, pp. 184, 185.

Damages for breach of unconscionable contract.—See the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 193.

27. Recovery generally.—United States v. Piatt, 157 U. S. 113, 118, 39 L. Ed. 639; United States v. Stinson, 197 U. S. 200, 204, 49 L. Ed. 724.

28. Reclamation in equity.—United States v. Bitter Root Development Co., 200 U. S. 451, 473, 50 L. Ed. 550. See the title DISCOVERY, vol. 5, p. 351.

29. Recovery by government.—United States v. Stinson, 197 U. S. 200, 204, 49 L. Ed. 724.

Excessive payments made under a contract, induced by fraudulent representations in the transaction leading to their disbursement, may be recovered back from the payee by the party defrauded, in this case the government. United States v. Piatt, 157 U. S. 113, 118, 39 L. Ed. 639. See the titles PAYMENT; POSTAL LAWS.

Assumpsit for money paid on fraudulent representations.—See the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, pp. 636, 641, 645, 654. See, also, the titles PAYMENT; POSTAL LAWS.

Participation in fraud—Effect.—See ante, "Effect on Validity of Transaction," V, A; "Loss Therefrom as Between Innocent Parties," V, D.

coup the damages which he can show he has sustained through the fraud.[30]

Fraud in Esse Contractus.—The fraud or circumvention intended by the statute of Illinois, allowing "fraud or circumvention" used in obtaining the making of written instruments for the payment of money or property or the performance of covenants or conditions, to be pleaded in bar to any action thereon, which only embodies a rule of the common law, is not that which goes merely to the consideration of the instrument, but it must go to the execution or making; and there must be a trick or device by which one kind of instrument is signed in the belief that it is of another kind, or the amount or nature or terms of the instrument must be misrepresented to the signer.[31]

5. INJUNCTION.—See the title INJUNCTIONS.

6. LIMITATIONS OF RIGHT TO RELIEF.—See the titles LACHES; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION. See, also, ante, "Ratification, Waiver and Estoppel," V, H.

C. Parties—1. PARTIES PLAINTIFF.—In suits brought for relief against an instrument alleged to have been obtained by fraud or deceit, or any practice which would justify a court in granting relief, the plaintiff must show, that he has such an interest in the relief sought as entitled him to move in the matter. If it be a question of property, a case must be made in which the court can afford a remedy in regard to that property; if it be a question of fraud, which would render the instrument void, the fraud must operate to the prejudice of the plaintiff; and if it is apparent that the suit is brought for the benefit of some third party, and that the plaintiff has no pecuniary interest in the remedy sought, and is under no obligation to the party who will be benefited, to sustain an action for his use, such action cannot be sustained.[32]

30. Fraud as a defense.—Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 413, 33 L. Ed. 393; Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501.

In Sawyer v. Prickett, 19 Wall. 146, 163, 165, 22 L. Ed. 105, it is held that, to make an alleged misrepresentation of existing facts matter of defense to a contract based thereon, it must be false, have been made in fact, by the other party or his duly authorized agent, and have been relied upon by the party seeking relief on account thereof. And see ante, "Nemo Allegans Rule," V, A, 3.

Defense to note.—In order to entitle a party to succeed in a defense to a note setting up false and fraudulent representations of plaintiff respecting the property, for the purchase of which the notes were given, it must be shown that the representations were made; that the representations, if made, were fraudulent; were material; that the defendant relied upon the representation to his injury; and that he had a right to rely upon them. Those are four material elements of fact that must enter into the case. Marshall v. Hubbard, 117 U. S. 415, 416, 29 L. Ed. 919.

Fraudulent representations as defense to action on guaranty.—See the title GUARANTY.

Fraud as set-off to action.—See the title SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT AND COUNTERCLAIM.

Fraud in sale as defense to action by vendee against officer for levy thereon.—See the title SHERIFFS AND CONSTABLES.

31. Fraud in esse contractus.—Especially where, as here, the holder of the instrument is a bona fide holder of it, before maturity, for a valuable consideration, without notice. Circumvention seems to be nearly, if not quite, synonymous with fraud. Oregon v. Jennings, 119 U. S. 74, 89, 30 L. Ed. 323.

Quære, if the statute applies to town bonds and their coupons, no fraud or imposition being practised on the town clerk or supervisor to induce them to sign these bonds and coupons. They knew what they were signing and signed intentionally. Oregon v. Jennings, 119 U. S. 74, 89, 30 L. Ed. 323.

32. Parties plaintiff.—United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 272, 308, 31 L. Ed. 747.

And the same rule applies to a suit brought by the government for such relief. In short, if there does not appear any obligation on the part of the United States to the public, or to any individual, or any interest of their own, they cannot more sustain such an action than any private person could under similar circumstances. United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 272, 273, 308, 31 L. Ed. 747. See, also, the title UNITED STATES. See, generally, the title PARTIES.

Parties have the right to make their own contracts; and, in general, when they are satisfied, that is sufficient, and others have no right to complain. Cases, however, occasionally arise, where a contract, though bona fide between those who made it, may operate as a fraud upon

Inurement.—And the right to avoid does not inure to subsequent creditors and purchasers on failure of party entitled to avoid to do so.[33]

2. PARTIES DEFENDANT.—Necessary Parties.—The former owner of an equitable interest in land purchased jointly, who has parted with all his interest to his co-owners, is not a necessary party to a bill alleging fraud on the part of real estate agents negotiating the purchases, and seeking relief therefor,[34] as also are third parties in interest generally, at least in equity.[35] And so with the alleged instigators of a fraudulent conspiracy.[36] third parties. Barreda v. Silsbee, 21 How. 146, 170, 16 L. Ed. 86.

Misrepresentation as to capital—Creditors of corporation.—A creditor, who has been defrauded by misrepresentation of the real capital of the company, has his remedy in an action of tort against all who participated in the fraud. But the wrong done to him cannot entitle the entire body of creditors, who have not suffered from the alleged fraud, to recover of the entire body of stockholders, who have taken no part in it. Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 151, 26 L. Ed. 968.

An heir at law, who has never accepted the succession as unconditional heir, not being liable for the ancestor's debts, under the Louisiana law, is not estopped by her warranty from claiming lands which such ancestor had fraudulently conveyed and through whose conveyance the defendants held possession of the lands as purchasers thereof. New Orleans v. Gaines, 138 U. S. 595, 614, 34 L. Ed. 1102.

33. Inurement.—Semble, that where a corporation has waived, or omitted to exercise, the right to institute proceedings to recover lands of which it has been defrauded, such right does not inure to the benefit of subsequent creditors or purchasers. Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 26 L. Ed. 106.

It seems clear that subsequent creditors have no better right than subsequent purchasers, to question a previous transaction in which the debtor's property was obtained from him by fraud, which he has acquiesced in, and which he has manifested no desire to disturb. Yet, in such a case, subsequent purchasers have no such right. Dicta of judges to that effect may undoubtedly be produced, but they are not supported by the facts of the cases under consideration. Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 154, 26 L. Ed. 106.

"Even though the debtor should assign his supposed right to the creditor, * * * the transaction savored of champerty, and was opposed, at least, to the spirit of the law against champerty and maintenance. This was the substance of the decision by the Court of Exchequer in 1835, in Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 Y. & C. 481." Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 155, 26 L. Ed. 106.

"The principle established in Prosser v. Edmonds has been adopted by the supreme court of Wisconsin, in which state the lands in question are situated. In Crocker v. Belangee et al. (6 Wis 645), decided in 1858, it was held that a deed obtained from the grantor, through fraudulent representations made by the grantee, is not void, but voidable only at the election of the grantor; and that the conveyance of the same land by the grantor to another person is not the exercise of such election, and does not avoid the former deed; that, in order to avoid such former deed, some proceeding must be had by the grantor to which the grantee is a party; and that a subsequent purchaser from the grantor cannot set up the alleged fraud of the first grantee to defeat his title, the court holding that the right of a vendor to avoid a sale or deed on the ground of fraud practiced by the vendee is not a right or interest capable of sale and transfer, so as to enable a subsequent vendee of such right, for such cause, to attack the title of the first vendee; that it is a mere personal right, incapable of sale or transfer." Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 156, 26 L. Ed. 106.

34. Necessary parties defendant.—Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 513, 32 L. Ed. 1005.

35. Third parties in interest.—A court of equity, on an application to set aside the agreements on the ground of fraud, would have required that third parties in interest should have been made parties to the suit, and would have protected their rights, or secured them against loss, if it interfered at all, upon the commonest principles of equity jurisprudence. Hartshorn v. Day, 19 How. 211, 223, 15 L. Ed. 605.

36. Instigators of conspiracy charged.—It would seem, that to a suit in equity for damages for a fraudulent conspiracy, if maintainable, the parties for whose benefit the fraud was committed, and who were its principal instigators, and whose actions were essential to its success, should be made parties. The charge is that they had assumed to pay the mortgage to defendant and had paid it, and then conspired with him to have the property, which was in their possession, and to which they had title, sold to defraud complainant out of his $14,000. However it may be at law, in chancery they are necessary parties to such a suit. Nougue v. Clapp, 101 U. S. 551, 553, 29 L. Ed. 1026. See the title CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1109.

Joinder.—Where it appears that each of the defendants participated in a fraudulent transaction, it was proper to sue them as jointly and severally liable.[37]

D. Pleading—1. JOINDER OF COUNTS.—Counts for deceit may be joined with special counts in tort for fraudulent wrongs.[38] And with counts in assumpsit.[39]

2. PLEADING FRAUD—a. Fraud Must Be Expressly Charged.—In Bill.—Affirmative relief will not be afforded upon the ground of fraud, unless it be made a distinct allegation in the bill, so that it may be put in issue by the pleadings.[40] Although a formal charge of fraud may be added when it is necessary and has been omitted, and must be so added to be availed of.[41]

In Answer.—The allegation of fraud having been stricken from the answer, by the order of the court, the defendant, of course, could not introduce evidence to prove it.[42]

b. Grounds Must Be Specifically Stated—(1) General Statement of Rule.—To allow fraud to be set up, a case of fraud must be made by the pleadings.[43] And a charge of fraud, to be considered, must be adequately alleged.[44]

37. Joinder of parties.—United States v. Piatt, 157 U. S. 113, 120, 39 L. Ed. 639.

Person not a party to contract induced by the fraud.—See ante, "Fraud a General Ground of Relief," VI, A, 1, a.

38. Joinder of counts.—Schuchardt v. Allens, 1 Wall. 359, 369, 17 L. Ed. 642. If the declaration be in tort for a false warranty on a sale of personalty, counts for deceit may be added to the special counts, and a recovery may be had for the false warranty or for the deceit, according to the proof. Either will sustain the action.

39. Same.—See the title ACTIONS, vol. 1, p. 111.

40. Fraud must be expressly charged.—Noonan v. Lee, 2 Black 499, 17 L. Ed. 278; Moss v. Riddle, 5 Cranch 351, 357, 3 L. Ed. 123; Patton v. Taylor, 7 How. 132, 12 L. Ed. 637; Stockton v. Ford, 11 How. 232, 246, 13 L. Ed. 676; Very v. Levy, 13 How. 345, 362, 14 L. Ed. 173; Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 14 L. Ed. 592; Magniac v. Thomson, 15 How. 281, 14 L. Ed. 696; Moore v. Greene, 19 How. 69, 15 L. Ed. 533; Beaubien v. Beaubien, 23 How. 190, 16 L. Ed. 484; New Albany v. Burke, 11 Wall. 96, 106, 20 L. Ed. 155; Voorhees v. Bonesteel, 16 Wall. 16, 21 L. Ed. 268.

41. Addition by amendment.—Graffam v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 180, 195, 29 L. Ed. 839; Very v. Levy, 13 How. 345, 361, 14 L. Ed. 173. See the title AMENDMENTS, vol. 1, pp. 294, 295.

Where neither in the original bill, nor in the amendments (for there were two amendments), is there to be found a charge impeaching the good faith or validity of the assignment of a judgment, although its existence was well known to the plaintiff; and while it remained, it was fatal to his deduction of title under the sheriff's sale, the question of fraud is not in the case. Stockton v. Ford, 11 How. 232, 246, 13 L. Ed. 676.

Where all the evidence as to fraud is brought out in answer to interrogatories relating to wholly different matters, and is merely to the effect, without further explanation, that he subsequently found the representations to be false; that he had any personal knowledge of their falsehood he does not say; and his statement indicates only that, by subsequent inquiry, and the information elicited thereby, he became satisfied that he was deceived; it would not be in conformity with settled rules of pleading and evidence in courts of equity, to convict a party of a fraud, not charged on the record, and brought out for the first time by the voluntary statements of a witness in answer to no question, and resting at last upon mere hearsay. Very v. Levy, 13 How. 345, 362, 14 L. Ed. 173.

42. Answer.—Hozey v. Buchanan, 16 Pet. 215, 219, 10 L. Ed. 941. And see ante, "Fraud as Defense," VI, B, 4.

43. Case must be made by pleadings.—New Albany v. Burke, 11 Wall. 96, 106, 20 L. Ed. 155.

Averments of fraud, to be considered, must be in themselves sufficient to make out a case of fraud practised directly upon the party complaining. Kent v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 144 U. S. 75, 91, 36 L. Ed. 352.

44. Adequate allegations essential.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Babcock, 204 U. S. 585, 592, 51 L. Ed. 636, citing Stearns v. Page, 7 How. 819, 12 L. Ed. 928; Farmers' Bank v. Groves, 12 How. 51, 13 L. Ed. 889; Moore v. Greene, 19 How. 69, 15 L. Ed. 533; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 478, 25 L. Ed. 800; United States v. Atherton, 102 U. S. 372, 26 L. Ed. 213; Greene v. Taylor, 132 U. S. 415, 443, 33 L. Ed. 411; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Price, 138 U. S. 185, 34 L. Ed. 917; Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 527, 533, 39 L. Ed. 520; Missouri v. Dockery, 191 U. S. 165, 170, 48 L. Ed. 133.

Averring fraudulent concealment of insolvency by bank.—See the title BANKS AND BANKINGS, vol. 3, p. 177.

Vague and general allegations of fraud, without averring by what representations or other fraudulent means it was accomplished, are insufficient.[45]

(2) Rule to Be Reasonably Interpreted.—While the facts constituting the cause of action in equity must be distinctly alleged so that the defendant may know what he has to meet and so that he may, if he choose, put them in issue, the rule must receive a reasonable interpretation and must be so enforced as to further and not obstruct the administration of justice.[46]

45. Vague and general charges insufficient.—Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 527, 534, 39 L. Ed. 520; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 478, 25 L. Ed. 800; United States v. Atherton, 102 U. S. 372, 26 L. Ed. 213; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 426, 26 L. Ed. 800; Hardt v. Heidweyer, 152 U. S. 547, 559, 38 L. Ed. 548; Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 458, 34 L. Ed. 1054.

"If fraud is relied on, it is not sufficient to make the charge in general terms. 'Mere words, in and of themselves, and even as qualifying adjectives of more specific charges, are not sufficient grounds of equity jurisdiction, unless the transactions to which they refer are such as in their essential nature constitute a fraud or a breach of trust, for which a court of chancery can give relief.' Van Weel v. Winston, 115 U. S. 228, 237, 29 L. Ed. 384; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 586, 591, 27 L. Ed. 322. The defendant should not be subjected to being taken by surprise, and enough should be stated to justify the conclusion of law, though without undue minuteness." St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 133 U. S. 566, 577, 33 L. Ed. 683.

Words "fraudulent and corrupt," "imposition," "fraud," "conspiracy," "deceit," and general charges of conspiracy and violation of trust obligations are insufficient. Van Weel v. Winston, 115 U. S. 228, 237, 29 L. Ed. 384; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 586, 590, 27 L. Ed. 322; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 272, 273, 300, 31 L. Ed. 747.

The mere allegation of a fraudulent intent and purpose in a course of action, amounts to nothing. If the act was legal, it is not made illegal by a mere epithet. McLane v. King, 144 U. S. 260, 263, 36 L. Ed. 428.

Where complainant impugns the good faith of a transaction, it is incumbent upon him to state the essential, ultimate facts upon which his cause of action rested, and not content himself with charging, generally, that what was done was "colorable," a "fraud," "a breach of trust," and a "scheme" by which a fraud was consummated. These are allegations of legal conclusions merely, which a demurrer does not admit. Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 118, 127, 35 L. Ed. 104; Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wall. 430, 437, 22 L. Ed. 673; United States v. Ames, 99 U. S. 35, 45, 25 L. Ed. 295; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 115 U. S. 587, 596, 29 L. Ed. 499.

In Dean v. Younell, 8 Wall. 14, 19 L. Ed. 365, a bill had been filed below to set aside a deed of land for fraud and inadequate consideration. The allegations of fraud were founded wholly upon the circumstance, that the land was sold for Confederate notes. There was no averment that the complainant was induced to take the Confederate notes by fraudulent misrepresentations of the decedent. A decree sustaining a demurrer and dismissing the bill was affirmed on the ground that upon the principles of Thorington v. Smith, just preceding, the fact that the land was sold for Confederate notes did not, in the absence of all averment that the complainant was induced to take them by fraudulent misrepresentations of the decedent, afford ground for the interposition of a court of equity.

Where a deed was objected to in the circuit court on the ground of fraud, but no specific grounds of objection were made, the federal supreme court cannot inquire into the correctness or incorrectness of the objection. Thomas v. Lawson, 21 How. 331, 16 L. Ed. 82.

46. Reasonable interpretation.—Where all the facts upon which the plaintiff seeks relief from a court of equity are clearly stated in the bill, the facts constituting the fraud are set forth, and it is alleged that the parties doing the acts mentioned concealed them from the plaintiff for the purpose of defrauding plaintiff out of his interest and ownership in a mine, and having set out all the facts upon which the right to relief is based, the plaintiff asks specially for the possession and also for the proceeds of the mine, because, by reason of the facts, the location made by the defendants was a void location, and the plaintiff now under his prayer for general relief contends that, although the location by the defendants may have been so far valid as to create a title in the defendants, yet that by reason of the fraud already distinctly set forth in the bill the plaintiff was entitled to avail himself of that title, and to hold them as trustees ex maleficio, for his benefit: held that there is nothing in the intricacy of equity pleading that prevents the plaintiff from obtaining the relief under the general prayer, to which he may be entitled upon the facts plainly stated in the bill. There is no reason for denying his right to relief, if the plaintiff is otherwise entitled to it, simply because it is asked under the prayer for general relief and upon a somewhat different theory from that which is advanced under

(3) Evidence Need Not Be Set Out.—But the evidence need not be set out.[47]

(4) Averment of Legal Conclusion.—Pleadings must state facts, and not conclusions of law merely, and the allegation in this case that the loss arose from the fraud is only a conclusion of law. If the facts from which the conclusions are drawn are not sufficient to show that in law the loss was attributable to the fraud, the declaration is bad. They must show that the loss was both the natural and immediate consequence of the wrongful and fraudulent acts referred to.[48]

(5) Demurrer the Test of Sufficiency.—The bill is sufficiently explicit, when there can be no question that, if the bill, as is the general rule on demurrers, is to be taken as true, there is enough in it to establish the fraud.[49]

one of the special prayers. The cases of English v. Foxall, 2 Pet. 595, 7 L. Ed. 531; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 9 L. Ed. 383; Hobson v. McArthur, 16 Pet. 182, 10 L. Ed. 930; Hayward v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 611, 24 L. Ed. 855; Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. 50, 18 L. Ed. 721, are not opposed to the views just stated. Lockhart v. Leeds, 195 U. S. 427, 436, 49 L. Ed. 263. See the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 852.

The court below erred in holding that there was no sufficient averment as to the time of the discovery by plaintiff of the alleged fraud set forth in the bill, assuming such averment to have been necessary, where the plain import of these averments is that the conspiracy and combination did not become known to the plaintiff until after the expiration of the ninety days from the discovery of the mine, in which to file a copy of the notice posted on the ground, in the recorder's office of the proper county. That is a sufficiently definite averment of time, and it is enough to show that the failure to file a copy of the notice within the necessary time was owing to the action of the defendants. Lockhart v. Leeds, 195 U. S. 427, 434, 49 L. Ed. 263.

47. Evidence.—"While it is entirely true that an allegation of fraud is insufficient, either in an indictment or in a bill in equity, without giving the particulars of the fraud, an intent to defraud is only to be gathered by the jury from all the facts and circumstances of the case. There is no greater need of setting out the evidence to prove such intent than there would be of averring in detail the evidence of a scienter, or of any other fact material to the offense." Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830.

It is said in a dissenting opinion in this case, that fraud is a conclusion of law from facts respecting the transactions designated, and if they do not necessarily tend to such conclusion, the allegation falls to the ground, however often repeated or with whatever amount of earnest asseveration. It is of no avail unless accompanied by a statement of facts from which such fraud must necessarily be inferred. Field, J., dissenting, in Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 606, 38 L. Ed. 830. The difference seems merely a difference of opinion as what constituted the particulars of the fraud, which both agreed were necessary to be alleged, and what was mere evidence thereof.

"It is a mistake to suppose that in stating the facts which constitute a fraud, where relief is sought in a bill in equity, all the evidence which may be adduced to prove that fraud must be recited in the bill. It is sufficient if the main facts or incidents which constitute the fraud against which relief is desired shall be fairly stated, so as to put the defendant upon his guard and apprise him of what answer may be required of him. 1 Story's Equity Pleadings, § 252." United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 128 U. S. 315, 356, 32 L. Ed. 450.

48. Averment of legal conclusion insufficient.—Alabama v. Burr, 115 U. S. 413, 426, 29 L. Ed 435; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 133 U. S. 566, 577, 33 L. Ed. 683; Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 118, 127, 35 L. Ed 104; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 606, 38 L. Ed. 830; United States v. Des Moines, etc., Co., 142 U. S. 510, 544, 35 L. Ed. 1099. See, also, Teall v. Schroder, 158 U. S. 172, 175, 39 L. Ed. 938. And see ante, "General Statement of Rule," VI, D, 2, b, (1).

Epithets do not make out fraud, and the averments substantially of legal conclusions not admitted by the demurrers are insufficient. Kent v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 144 U. S. 75, 91, 36 L. Ed. 352; Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 118, 127, 35 L. Ed. 104.

49. Demurrer rule.—United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 128 U. S. 315, 356, 32 L. Ed. 450; Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 103, 6 L. Ed 429; St. Louis v. Knapp Co., 104 U. S. 658, 26 L. Ed. 883.

A general averment of fraud, though repeated once or twice, is to be taken as qualified and limited by the specific facts set out to show wherein the transaction was fraudulent. Where a bill sets out a series of facts constituting a transaction between the two parties, a demurrer admits the truth of those facts and all reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom, but not the conclusion which the pleader has seen fit to aver. United States v. Des Moines, etc., Co., 142 U. S. 510, 544, 35 L. Ed. 1099.

Availed of by special demurrer.—Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 18 L. Ed. 475.

c. Averment of Intent and Scienter.—While fraud consists in intention, and that intention is a fact, which must be averred in a plea of fraud,[50] allegations that the representations were falsely and fraudulently made with the intent to further the pecuniary interest of the maker, and were known to be false when made, have frequently been held the equivalent of averments of specific intent. Indeed, it is difficult to perceive how a statement falsely and fraudulently made can be otherwise than intended to deceive. A statement fraudulently made with knowledge of its falsity must necessarily be intended to deceive.[51] And knowledge of falsity need not be alleged in terms in an action of deceit for obtaining money by false and fraudulent representations.[52]

3. Identification of Subject Matter or Proceeds.—In a suit in equity to reclaim the proceeds of property obtained from plaintiff by fraud, against the voluntary assignee or one holding in bad faith, they must be accurately and certainly identified by the allegations of the bill.[53]

4. Plea or Answer Denying Fraud.—Necessity for Verification and Effect of Want Thereof.—The proper mode of treating a plea is to set it down for hearing as to its sufficiency to meet the bill, or so much of the bill as it purports to cover. If found to be sufficient, the complainant has a right to reply to it by denying its allegations, or otherwise putting it in issue. See Equity Rules, 32, 33, and 34, prescribed by this court. So also by these rules the charge of a fraudulent combination to cheat the complainant required that the plea should have been accompanied by an answer denying the fraud under oath. The plea may, therefore, be considered as out of the case. The demurrer may be held to include the exception as one of its grounds, and thus the case stands on bill and demurrer, and the sole question is whether, though there may be things in the bill which, if specially demurred to, would be bad, it is a bill on which a court of equity could found relief.[54]

E. Instructions.—Based on Evidence.—Instructions must of course be based on evidence in the case, or they should not be given.[55]

See the title DEMURRERS, vol. 5, p. 298.

50. Intent.—Moss v. Riddle, 5 Cranch 351, 3 L. Ed. 123.

"There is no allegation of fraud, and the circumstances pleaded do not, in themselves, amount to fraud. Fraud consists in intention, and that intention is a fact which ought to have been averred, for it is the gist of the plea, and would have been traversable." Moss v. Riddle, 5 Cranch 351, 357, 3 L. Ed. 123.

51. Intent and scienter.—It was held in Bullis v. O'Beirne, 195 U. S. 606, 618, 49 L. Ed. 340, that an inspection of the record as well as the interpretation put upon the pleadings and judgment by the courts of New York in the various trials and proceedings had, showed that the relief was granted upon the ground of fraud.

52. Action of deceit—Knowledge.—Where the declaration alleges a false and fraudulent representation by means of which the plaintiff below was induced to advance money to the defendant to his damage in a named amount, and the defendant pleaded not guilty, although the declaration did not, it is true, contain the allegation that the representations of the defendant were false to his knowledge, but simply said that the representations of the defendant were false and fraudulent, it would seem that the action was in tort for false and fraudulent representations. Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 179, 44 L. Ed. 723.

"Where the state court has decided that the action was for fraud and deceit, and has held that in order to have maintained such action the fraud must have been proved as laid in the declaration, it must be assumed that the verdict and judgment in that action were obtained only upon the proof and a finding by the jury of the fact of fraud." Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 180, 44 L. Ed. 723.

53. Identification of subject matter or proceeds.—United States v. Bitter Root Development Co., 200 U. S. 451, 473, 50 L. Ed. 550.

54. Unverified plea denying fraud.—Nougue v. Clapp, 101 U. S. 551, 552, 29 L. Ed. 1026.

Answer.—See post, "To Overcome Answer under Oath," VI, G, 3, a, (2).

55. Based on evidence.—Elwood v. Flannigan, 104 U. S. 562, 570, 26 L. Ed. 842; Thorwegan v. King, 111 U. S. 549, 555, 28 L. Ed. 514.

There is no error in refusing a request which was made of the court to charge the jury as to the effect of fraud in the procurement of the deed, where there is not a particle of evidence in the record to sustain such a claim. If the jury had found for the plaintiff on any such theory, it would have been the duty of the court

Instruction Substantially as Defendants Claimed.—Where an instruction is given substantially as claimed by defendants, they cannot complain.[56]

Knowledge and Intent.—Where the issue upon the pleadings and evidence was whether the contract sued on was induced by knowingly false and fraudulent representations of the plaintiff, and certain passages from the charge are excepted to, if the charge as a whole and in substance instructs the jury that a statement recklessly made, without knowledge of its truth, was a false statement knowingly made, within the settled rule, it is sufficient and no error can be assigned therein.[57]

Liability for Recommendation to Credit.—Where taking an instruction together it means this: That if the jury believed due inquiry as to the credit of W. had not been made by L. and that L. had signed the letter ignorantly, and regardless of the fact, whether the persons recommended were or were not entitled to credit, then the jury should charge the defendant: the real test of conduct, according to the charge, obviously being, whether L. ought to have accorded confidence to the source of his information, and whether this information was of such a character as to justify him in writing the letter to plaintiff without further inquiry, it was held, that this instruction, taken in its proper sense, was evasive of the true rule, and calculated to mislead the jury.[58]

Notice and Waiver.—An instruction which said: "Before the plaintiff was required to affirm or rescind the contract, he must be shown to have had actual knowledge of the imposition practiced upon him. It is not enough to show that he might have known or suspected it from data within his reach," was held under the circumstances, exactly right.[59] to set the verdict aside and grant a new trial. Consequently there was no error in refusing the charge requested.

An instruction suggesting to the jury the existence of false representation or deceit, when there is no testimony in the case to support such a suggestion, is erroneous. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Phinney, 178 U. S. 327, 341, 44 L. Ed. 1088.

Same — Nondisclosure. — Where the whole case as exhibited in the petition or complaint in an action of deceit to recover damages therefor, rested upon an alleged positive misrepresentation of an existing fact; and all the evidence intended to establish the fraud charged was directed to the proof of that actual misrepresentation, there being no suggestion of any such relation between the parties, or of anything in the circumstances of the transaction, that imposed upon the defendant the legal obligation of making any disclosures, in respect to which he failed to speak, and the whole charge was, that having undertaken to make a statement of a particular condition of facts, he had done so falsely and fraudulently; held, that the court therefore should have confined its instructions to the jury, on their request, to the point really involved in the issue, and, omitting what was said in respect to fraudulent suppressions, informed them, that there was no evidence in the case that authorized their request for further instructions, upon the point involved in their inquiry. Thorwegan v. King, 111 U. S. 549, 555, 28 L. Ed. 514.

56 Substantial compliance with request.—It was held in Cooper v. Schlesinger, 111 U. S. 148, 155, 28 L. Ed. 382: "As to the rule of damages, the court, after setting forth the general rule correctly, stated the rule applicable to the special circumstances of this case; and we understand that rule to have been substantially given as claimed by the defendants. It was, that where a person is induced by false representations to buy an article, at an agreed price, to be delivered on his future order, he can recover, as damages for the deceit, the diminution caused thereby in the market price at the time of delivery. The instruction as claimed by the defendants having been given, they cannot complain of it."

57. Knowledge and intent.—Cooper v. Schlesinger, 111 U. S. 148, 155, 28 L. Ed. 382. See, also, Marshall v. Hubbard, 117 U. S., 415, 29 L. Ed. 919, where an instruction that the misrepresentations relied on must have been fraudulently made, was upheld.

58. Liability for recommendation to credit.—Lord v. Goddard, 13 How. 198, 211, 14 L. Ed. 111.

59. Notice and waiver.—Pence v. Langdon, 99 U. S. 578, 581, 25 L. Ed. 420.

In Pence v. Langdon, 99 U. S. 578, 581, 25 L. Ed. 420, an instruction which said: "It was not enough to charge the plaintiff with knowledge of the mal-character of the transaction, that the language used was such as might have caused some persons to suspect it. He might, in view of previous friendly relations, have no suspicion of bad faith, and might naturally regard expressions as inaccurately used, rather than put upon them a construction which would show bad faith on the part

Additional Instructions.—Where additional instructions are given the jury at their request, they must be consistent with the first, and if tending to mislead the jury, they are erroneous.[60]

F. Verdict and Decree.—Harmless Error.—In equitable remedies given for fraud, accident or mistake, it is the facts as found that give the right to relief, and it is often difficult to say, upon admitted facts, whether the error which is complained of was occasioned by intentional fraud or by mere inadvertence or mistake. Indeed, upon the very same state of facts, an intelligent man, acting deliberately, might well be regarded as guilty of fraud, and an ignorant and inexperienced person might be entitled to a more charitable view. Yet the injury to the complainant would be the same in either case. A defendant in a suit therefor has no reason to complain of the language of the court below in attributing the appellant's misconduct to mistake and inadvertence, rather than to intentional fraud.[61]

Decree against Parties Not Charged by Evidence.—Where a bill charges a conspiracy to defraud against several defendants, and the evidence fails to connect two of the defendants with the alleged fraud, on appeal by these two from a decree against all the defendants, the decree must be reversed as to them and the cause remanded with instructions to dismiss the bill as to them.[62]

G. Evidence—1. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.—See, generally, the title PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

a. Fraud Never Presumed but to Be Proved.—Fraud Never Presumed.—Fraud cannot be presumed, but must be proved by him alleging it,[63] and ex-of the defendant, which he had no reason to anticipate," was held to have been exactly right under the circumstances.

60. Additional instructions.—Rea v. Missouri, 17 Wall. 532, 21 L. Ed. 707.

The jury having been charged by the circuit judge in a way not excepted to, and coming in for additional instructions and being again charged by the district judge, who now happened to be on the bench, it was held, first, that where the manifest tendency of the additional instructions, contrary to that of the original charge, was to give the jury the impression that evidence was required of a character more direct and positive than that of facts and circumstances tending to the conclusion of fraud, and such as might reasonably induce the jury to believe that C. held the property but in trust for B., the additional instructions were erroneous. And further, that it would not be inferred by the federal supreme court that the jury had taken them in connection with the qualifications made in the original charge. Second, that any statements made by B. in the absence of C., which were afterwards assented to by the latter or were part of the res gestæ, were evidence in the suit. Rea v. Missouri, 17 Wall. 532, 21 L. Ed. 707.

An intimate personal and business relation between B. and C. having been shown, it was error to instruct the jury that it was immaterial as to the ownership of the goods how C. acquired his means, or whether his exhibit of them was correct or not. Rea v. Missouri, 17 Wall. 532, 21 L. Ed. 707.

61. Harmless error.—Wasatch Min. Co. v. Crescent Min. Co., 148 U. S. 293, 298, 37 L. Ed. 454.

62. Decree against parties not charged by evidence.—Hunt v. Oliver, 118 U. S. 211, 219, 30 L. Ed 128; Frow v. De La Viga, 15 Wall. 552, 21 L. Ed. 60. See the titles CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1109; DISMISSAL, DISCONTINUANCE AND NONSUIT, vol. 5, p. 385.

Directing verdict.—See the title VERDICT.

63. Fraud never presumed.—Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 51 L. Ed. 945; Conard v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 297, 7 L. Ed. 862; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 716, 8 L. Ed. 547; Brashear v. West, 7 Pet. 608, 613, 8 L. Ed. 801; Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. 178, 196, 9 L. Ed. 1046; Atkins v. Dick, 14 Pet. 114, 10 L. Ed. 378; Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. 356, 364, 13 L. Ed. 172; Gratz v. Cohen, 11 How. 1, 13 L. Ed. 579; Adams v. Preston, 22 How. 473, 487, 16 L. Ed. 273; Thompson v. Bowie, 4 Wall. 463, 472, 18 L. Ed 423 (per Grier, J., dissenting); Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 369, 19 L. Ed. 461; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 615, 29 L. Ed. 742; Maxwell Land-Grant Case, 121 U. S. 325, 377, 30 L. Ed. 949; Farrar v. Churchill, 135 U. S. 609, 615, 34 L. Ed. 246; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Price, 138 U. S. 185, 34 L. Ed. 917; United States v. Detroit, etc., Lumber Co., 200 U. S. 321, 332, 50 L. Ed. 499; Kann v. King, 204 U. S. 43, 61, 51 L. Ed. 360.

The presumptions are against fraud and in favor of innocence. The Bothnea, 2 Wheat. 169, 4 L. Ed. 211; Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. 481, 498, 5 L. Ed. 311; United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 167 U. S. 224, 242, 42 L. Ed. 144; Colorado, etc., Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 317, 31 L. Ed. 182.

"Fraud cannot be presumed or inferred pressly found,[64] or admitted.[65] Fraud should not be lightly imputed,[66] particularly after considerable lapse of time.[67] Mere averments of fraud, unsupported by proof, will not support the jurisdiction of equity over a suit based thereon.[68]

b. Burden of Proof.—The burden of proving fraud is on the party alleging it,[69] without proof in a court of equity, any more than in a court of law; and in both the rule is, that he who makes the charge must prove it." Hager v. Thomson, 1 Black 80, 91, 17 L. Ed. 41.

"The law presumes, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the business transactions of every man are done in good faith and for an honest purpose; and any one who alleges that such acts are done in bad faith, or for a dishonest and fraudulent purpose, takes upon himself the business of showing the same." Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 615, 29 L. Ed. 742; Conard v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 297, 7 L. Ed. 862; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 716, 8 L. Ed. 547.

Fraud, it is said, will never be presumed, though it may be proved by circumstances. Now, where an act does not necessarily import fraud, where it is more likely to have been done through a good than a bad motive, fraud should never be presumed. Gregg v. Sayre, 8 Pet. 244, 8 L. Ed. 932.

"Upon the subject of motives and intention, the improbability of their existence deserves consideration." Conrad v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 300, 7 L. Ed. 862.

Opportunity for explanation must be given.—"If circumstances of doubtful appearance occur, justice requires that an opportunity to explain those circumstances should be given; and that fraud should never be fixed on an individual, until he has been allowed to clear himself from the imputation, if in his power." The George, 1 Wheat. 408, 4 L. Ed. 128.

64. Express finding.—Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. 178, 196, 9 L. Ed. 1046.

65. Admission.—Atkins v. Dick, 14 Pet. 114, 10 L. Ed. 378.

66. Not lightly imputed.—Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224, 257, 36 L. Ed. 134; Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. 481, 498; 5 L. Ed. 311; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 615, 29 L. Ed. 742.

67. Lapse of time.—"But length of time necessarily obscures all human evidence; and as it thus removes from the parties all the immediate means to verify the nature of the original transactions, it operates by way of presumption, in favor of innocence, and against imputation of fraud. It would be unreasonable, after a great length of time, to require exact proof of all the minute circumstances of any transaction, or to expect a satisfactory explanation of every difficulty, real or apparent, with which it may be incumbered." Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. 481, 498, 5 L. Ed. 311. See the titles LACHES; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION. See, also, ante, "Ratification, Waiver and Estoppel," V, H.

Deceased persons.—"If fraud or breach of trust ought not lightly to be imputed to the living, the evidence of fraud should be convincing before the sanctity of the grave is disturbed." Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224, 257, 36 L. Ed. 134; Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. 481, 498, 5 L. Ed. 311.

68. Mere averments will not support jurisdiction.—United States v. Bitter Root Development Co., 200 U. S. 451, 471, 50 L. Ed. 550.

A mere charge of fraud does not give equity jurisdiction. Buzard v. Houston, 119 U. S. 347, 30 L. Ed. 451; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 586, 27 L. Ed. 322. Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 36 L. Ed. 82, bears no resemblance to the case at bar. As the court there said, there were in the case discovery, account, fraud, misrepresentation and concealment. There was no demurrer for multifariousness, and no objection in the court below for want of equity, and the case was not one of a plain defect in equity jurisdiction. United States v. Bitter Root Development Co., 200 U. S. 451, 472, 50 L. Ed. 550. See, also, United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 272, 273, 300, 31 L. Ed. 747. See ante, "Pleading Fraud," VI, D, 2.

The bill to set aside a deed and agreement on the ground of fraud, and also for discovery and account, where no fraud is made out, must be dismissed, unless it be so amended as to include all the parties interested, and be confined to a claim for the surplus of the proceeds of the lands, after paying reasonable expenses and legal claims, and carrying out the alleged fraudulent agreement. Gratz v. Cohen, 11 How. 1, 13 L. Ed. 579.

Inference from circumstances.—See post, "Circumstantial Evidence," VI, G, 2, e.

69. Burden of proof.—Rankin v. Chase Nat. Bank, 188 U. S. 557, 565, 47 L. Ed. 594; Connor v. Featherstone, 12 Wheat. 199, 6 L. Ed. 601; Sawyer v. Prickett, 19 Wall. 146, 22 L. Ed. 105; Life Ins. Co. v. Bangs, 103 U. S. 780, 26 L. Ed. 608; Oil Co. v. Van Etten, 107 U. S. 325, 27 L. Ed. 319; Hunt v. Oliver, 118 U. S. 211, 30 L. Ed. 128; Cissel v. Dutch, 125 U. S. 171, 31 L. Ed. 642; Southern Development Co. v. Silva, 125 U. S. 247, 31 L. Ed. 678; Telephone Cases, 126 U. S. 1, 568, 31 L. Ed. 863; Goodwin v. Fox, 129 U. S. 601, 632, 32 L. Ed. 805; Synnott v. Shaughnessy, 130 U. S. 572, 32 L. Ed. 1038; Cleaveland v. Richardson, 132 U. S. 318, 33 L. Ed. 384; Greene v. Taylor, 132 U. S. 415, 443, 33 L. Ed. 411; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 132 U. S. 565, 33 L. Ed. 438; Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 33 L.

even though it involve the proof of a negative.[70] And so with notice of fraud,[71] and so with knowledge of the fraud and the time of its discovery.[72]

Allegations of Bill Denied by Answer Shifts Burden.—See post, "To Overcome Answer under Oath," VI, G, 3, a, (2).

2. COMPETENCY—a. In General.—Parties contemplating a fraud frequently pursue such devious courses to conceal their designs, and resort to such subtle practices to mislead their unsecured creditors, that the fraud becomes impossible to detect, unless the door be swung wide open for the admission of all testimony having any possible bearing upon the question. Facts which to the court might seem of no pertinence and be rejected as having no legal tendency to show knowledge of the fraud, might be considered by the jury as significant and indicative of a guilty participation. Even negative evidence may sometimes have a positive value.[73]

Irrelevant and Confusing Evidence.—Irrelevant and misleading testimony ought not to be admitted.[74]

Evidence Tending to Show Falsity of Recommendation to Credit.—Where an action was brought against a person for making false representations of the pecuniary condition of a certain party, whereby the plaintiff had been induced to sell goods upon credit, and had incurred loss, evidence conducing to

Ed. 955; Chandler v. Pomeroy, 143 U. S. 318, 36 L. Ed. 169; McLane v. King, 144 U. S. 260, 263, 36 L. Ed. 428; Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 162, 40 L. Ed. 374.

While certain circumstances will give rise to an inference of fraud, yet the law never presumes it. It devolves on him who alleges fraud to show the same by satisfactory proof. Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 615, 29 L. Ed. 742; Sanger v. Nightingale, 122 U. S. 176, 186, 30 L. Ed. 1105; Farrar v. Churchill, 135 U. S. 609, 615, 34 L. Ed. 246; Voorhees v. Bonesteel, 16 Wall. 16, 29, 21 L. Ed. 268.

The burden of proof is on the complainant alleging fraud; and unless he brings evidence sufficient to overcome the natural presumption of fair dealing and honesty, a court of equity will not be justified in setting aside a contract on the ground of fraudulent representations. Southern Development Co. v. Silva, 125 U. S. 247, 249, 31 L. Ed. 678.

The fact of fraud or mistake must be established by competent evidence, the same as any other fact in issue. United States v. Savings Bank, 104 U. S. 728, 734, 26 L. Ed. 908.

Charges of fraud made upon information and belief only, where there is no evidence to support them, except the similarity of names, must also be treated as not sustained. Monroe Cattle Co. v. Becker, 147 U. S. 47, 55, 37 L. Ed. 72. See post, "Sufficiency and Weight," VI, G, 3.

70. Proof of negative.—Colorado, etc., Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. Ed. 182.

71. Notice of fraud.—Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 162, 40 L. Ed. 374. See, also, Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 615, 29 L. Ed. 742.

See 1 Greenleaf on Evidence, § 80, where it is said: "So, where the negative allegation involves a charge of criminal neglect of duty, whether official or otherwise; or fraud; or the wrongful violation of actual lawful possession of property; the party making the allegation must prove it; for in these cases the presumption of law, which is always in favor of innocence and quiet possession, is in favor of the party charged." United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 167 U. S. 224, 242, 42 L. Ed. 144; Colorado, etc., Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 317, 31 L. Ed. 182.

72. Knowledge of fraud and time of discovery.—Pence v. Langdon, 99 U. S. 578, 582, 25 L. Ed. 420.

73. Competency in general.—Sonnentheil v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co., 172 U. S. 401, 410, 43 L. Ed. 492; Butler v. Watkins, 13 Wall. 456, 20 L. Ed. 629; New York Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 117 U. S. 591, 599, 29 L. Ed. 997.

Declarations in evidence.—See the titles DECLARATIONS AND ADMISSIONS, vol. 5, p. 227; RES GESTÆ.

74. Irrelevant and confusing evidence.—In an action of deceit for fraud in the sale of a boat, evidence, taking up much space in the record, consisting of accounts showing receipts and disbursements on account of the boat for sixteen trips, most of them made after the sale, and of the examination of the clerk in reference thereto, ought not to have been admitted. It was irrelevant, and tended to confuse and mislead the jury to the prejudice of the defendant by suggesting questions of good faith as to the management of the boat, after the transaction in question, which were not part of the issue, and which threw no light upon it. Thorwegan v. King, 111 U. S. 549, 553, 28 L. Ed. 514.

show that the statements of the defendant were false, ought to have been allowed to go to the jury.[75]

Evidence of Fraud as Defense to Bond.—See the title BONDS, vol. 3, pp. 424, 435.

Order of Proof.—The court has a large discretion in the matter of the order of proof.[76]

b. In Rebuttal.—Evidence will be legal, as rebutting testimony (as to repel an imputation or charge of fraud), which would not be admissible as original evidence.[77]

c. Evidence of Other Frauds.—See the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1019.

d. Parol Evidence.—Parol testimony is always admissible in matters of contract, to show fraud, notwithstanding its effect may be to contradict what is in writing. That principle is too well established and too generally acknowledged to require any confirmation.[78]

e. Circumstantial Evidence.—See post, "Circumstantial Evidence," VI, G, 3, b.

3. SUFFICIENCY AND WEIGHT—a. Amount of Evidence Necessary to Establish Fraud—(1) In General.—Fraud must be clearly proven to justify the interposition of a court of equity.[79] Evidence of fraud must be clear, unequivocal and convincing, and not merely preponderating,[80] and circumstances of suspicion

75. Evidence tending to show falsity of recommendation to credit.—Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 15 L. Ed. 205.

Any evidence conducing to prove that the statements of the defendant, in the letter of the 7th of April, in regard to the condition of the Thompsonville Company and Orrin Thompson, and their ability to meet their engagements, and in regard to the value of Thompson's property, were false, was competent evidence as tending to prove the facts. And especially was the testimony of G. admissible, who heard the defendant say, if the plaintiffs had called on them personally, they would not have sold their wool to the company; also the statement that before the letter was written, defendant admitted that he had lost confidence in Thompson, and therefore the letter of the 7th of April was guarded. These, and all other facts which conduce to show that the defendant acted in bad faith in writing that letter, are proper to be considered by the jury. Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 196, 15 L. Ed. 205.

76. Order of proof.—"The fraud being to be made out in evidence, the order in which the proof should be brought to establish it was rather a matter in the discretion of the court, than of strict right in the parties. It is impossible to lay down any universal rule upon such a subject. Much must depend upon the posture and circumstances of the particular case; and at all events, if the proof be pertinent and competent, the admission of it cannot be matter of error." Wood v. United States, 16 Pet. 342, 361, 10 L. Ed. 987.

77. In rebuttal.—Zacharie v. Franklin, 12 Pet. 151, 9 L. Ed. 1035.

78. Parol evidence.—Barreda v. Silsbee, 21 How. 146, 170, 16 L. Ed. 86.

Parol evidence is admissible to show fraud, and consequently a resulting trust, in a deed absolute on its face, notwithstanding any denial by the answer. Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 300, 15 L. Ed. 644. See the title PAROL EVIDENCE.

79. Amount of evidence necessary.—Johansson v. Stephanson, 154 U. S. 625, 23 L. Ed. 1009; Day v. Union India Rubber Co., 20 How. 216, 218, 15 L. Ed. 883; Atlantic Delaine Co. v. James, 94 U. S. 207, 214, 24 L. Ed. 112; Baltzer v. Raleigh, etc., R. Co., 115 U. S. 634, 29 L. Ed. 505; Hunt v. Oliver, 118 U. S. 211, 30 L. Ed. 128; Maxwell Land-Grant Case, 121 U. S. 325, 381, 30 L. Ed. 949; Union R. Co. v. Dull, 124 U. S. 173, 183, 31 L. Ed. 417; Cissel v. Dutch, 125 U. S. 171, 31 L. Ed. 642; Southern Development Co. v. Silva, 125 U. S. 247, 253, 31 L. Ed. 678.

"Those who seek to set aside their solemn written contracts, by proving loose conversations, should be held to make out a very clear case; and when they charge others with fraud, founded on such evidence, their own conduct and acts (which speak louder than words) should be consistent with such a hypothesis." Ogilvie v. Know Ins. Co., 22 How. 380, 390, 16 L. Ed. 349. And see ante, "Burden of Proof," VI, G, 1, b.

80. Clear and convincing, not merely preponderating.—United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 161, 36 L. Ed. 384; Maxwell Land-Grant Case, 121 U. S. 325, 381, 30 L. Ed. 949.

Charges of fraud must be supported by evidence that is clear, unequivocal and convincing, and a bare preponderance of evidence, leaving the issue in doubt, is insufficient. United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 272, 300, 31 L. Ed. 747, citing Maxwell Land-Grant Case, 121 U. S. 325, 30 L. Ed. 949; United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 167 U. S. 224, 241, 42 L. Ed. 144.

"In all proceedings instituted to recover moneys or to set aside and annul deeds or contracts or other written instruments on the ground of alleged fraud practised by a defendant upon a plaintiff,

merely are not sufficient to establish it,[81] when not inconsistent with good faith.[82]

Illustration.—Illustrations of when the evidence establishes fraud or not will be found in the notes.[83] the rule is of long standing and is of universal application that the evidence tending to prove the fraud and upon which to found a verdict or decree must be clear and satisfactory. It may be circumstantial but it must be persuasive. A mere preponderance of evidence which at the same time is vague or ambiguous is not sufficient to warrant a finding of fraud, and will not sustain a judgment based on such finding." Lalone v. United States, 164 U. S. 255, 257, 41 L. Ed. 425.

Fraudulent representations to government officer.—"The rule obtains in cases of alleged fraudulent representations made to an officer of the government upon the faith of which the officer has issued a patent or done any other official act upon which the rights of the party making the misrepresentations may be founded. This principle is exemplified in United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co., 128 U. S. 673, 32 L. Ed. 571, and cases cited, and is not confined to cases of patents for lands." Lalone v. United States, 164 U. S. 255, 257, 41 L. Ed. 425.

Examining the record in this case and the whole evidence contained therein, and having in mind the rule above stated, the evidence on the part of the plaintiff, when read in connection with that which was given on the part of the defendants, falls far short of the requirements of the rule. Lalone v. United States, 164 U. S. 255, 258, 41 L. Ed. 425.

81. Mere suspicion not enough.—Sanger v. Nightingale, 122 U. S. 176, 186, 30 L. Ed. 1105; Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. 178, 196, 9 L. Ed 1046; Colorado, etc., Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 317, 31 L. Ed. 182; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 132 U. S. 565, 33 L. Ed. 438; United States v. Hancock, 133 U. S. 193, 197, 33 L. Ed. 601.

Denunciation and allegation of "fraud," "deceit" and "imposition," is not enough. There must be ample proof, and not a mere suspicion raised. United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 272, 273, 300, 31 L. Ed. 747.

Proofs which create nothing more than a suspicion may leave a doubt, but they do not bring the assurance of certain wrong. United States v. Hancock, 133 U. S. 193, 197, 33 L. Ed. 601.

Mere suspicion of fraud or want of good faith is not enough to call for relief in equity. Hoffman v. Overbey, 137 U. S. 465, 34 L. Ed. 754. See, generally, the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004.

Other frauds.—Even conceding that testimony of fraud in another and independent transaction be competent, as to which quære, it is merely circumstance of suspicion, not evidence of fraud in itself as to the case at bar. United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 164, 36 L. Ed. 384.

82. Not inconsistent with good faith.—Fraud should not be imputed upon doubtful and unsatisfactory evidence not inconsistent with perfect good faith. Darlington v. Turner, 202 U. S. 195, 50 L. Ed. 992.

Constructive and actual fraud contrasted.—"Although cases of constructive fraud are equally cognizable, by a court of equity, with cases of direct or positive fraud, yet the two classes of cases would be met by a defendant in a very different manner. It seems to be an established doctrine of a court of equity, that when the bill sets up a case of actual fraud, and makes that the ground of the prayer for relief, the plaintiff will not be entitled to a decree, by establishing some of the facts quite independent of fraud, but which might of themselves create a case under a totally distinct head of equity from that which would be applicable to the case of fraud originally stated In support of this position may be cited, as directly in point, the case of Price v. Berrington, decided by Lord Chancellor Truro, in 1851. Vide 7 Eng. Law & Eq., 254." Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 56, 14 L. Ed. 592.

Party complaining chief witness to fraud.—The fact that the party complaining of fraud is the chief witness to make out the charge, may be considered on the question of fraud or no fraud. Day v. Union India Rubber Co., 20 How. 216, 218, 15 L. Ed. 883.

Interest and death of opposite party.—The uncorroborated statements of an interested witness, largely discredited by his behavior, cannot be held sufficient to establish a charge of fraud in their mutual dealings together, made against a deceased person. Darlington v. Turner, 202 U. S. 195, 223, 50 L. Ed. 992.

Personal character.—"Judicial inquiries are into the rights of the parties; and, although high and honorable character has, and ought to have, great influence in weighing testimony in which that character is in any manner involved; yet, when the inferences from that testimony are drawn by others, and a court is required to pronounce the law arising upon them, character is excluded from the view of the judge, and legal principles alone can be acknowledged as his guide." Etting v. United States Bank, 11 Wheat. 59, 73, 6 L. Ed. 419.

Badges of fraud.—As to badges of fraud in Twyne's case, see the clausulæ inconsuetæ, Taylor v. Taylor, 8 How. 183, 205, 12 L. Ed. 1040. And see the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES.

83. Illustrations.—Baker v. Cummings, 169 U. S. 189, 42 L. Ed. 711, was a case

(2) To Overcome Answer under Oath.—Where, on a bill alleging fraud, answer under oath is called for or not waived, and is made denying the fraud explicitly and positively, the usual rule applies and unless the effect thereof is overin which the court, while holding that, if there was fraud, laches and limitations prevented its being set up by the party alleging it, expressly disclaimed intimating a conclusion that there was even a preponderance of evidence showing fraud.

Held no fraud shown.—It was said in United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 747, 8 L. Ed. 547: "The question of fraud has been pressed in the argument, but we perceive nothing in the evidence which shows its existence, so as to bring it home to the claimants, or that it exists at all, according to the definition and rules heretofore settled."

In Hunt v. Oliver, 118 U. S. 211, 30 L. Ed. 128, it was held that the evidence, as detailed in the opinion, did not support the charges of fraud made in the bill. See, also, Warner v. Godfrey, 186 U. S. 365, 46 L. Ed. 1203.

In Hunt v. Blackburn, 128 U. S. 464, 471, 32 L. Ed. 488, it was held that the testimony of the witnesses, together with the documents in the case, failed to show that there was any deceit or misapprehension in the premises, or any advice given, in fraud or in mistake of fact or law, to the party alleging the same by an attorney in defendant's employ, so as to prevent her being estopped by her conduct.

Surrender of subscription to stock of railroad by city.—In New Albany v. Burke, 11 Wall. 96, 105, 20 L. Ed. 155, an arrangement between a city and the directors of a railroad company, by which a subscription by the former to the stock of the latter was surrendered and canceled, was held not to have been fraudulent either in law or fact.

Bill to set aside titles.—In Moore v. Greene, 19 How. 69, 15 L. Ed. 533, it was held, where a bill was filed to set aside titles for frauds alleged to have been committed in 1767, that the bill did not make out a sufficient case; and the evidence did not even sustain the facts alleged.

On a question of fact, upon a bill filed to set aside the sale and assignment of a land warrant, on the ground, that it was obtained by fraudulent misrepresentation, and taking undue advantage of the party's imbecility of body and mind, evidence deemed insufficient, and bill dismissed. The burden of proof is on the party alleging the fraud. Connor v. Featherstone, 12 Wheat. 199, 6 L. Ed. 601.

A letter written by a defendant to a third party, in which he says, "Mr. H. has found out that I made an advantageous trade with him, that the land was in the state of Tennessee, contrary to his expectation, and complains heavily that I took an advantage of him, that he was a little deranged at the time," was greatly relied on in argument, not only to prove H.'s insanity, but to prove that defendant misrepresented the situation of the entry of 5,000 acres, and thereby deceived and defrauded H. Held that, so far as the letter alludes to the state of H.'s mind at the time of the contract, and to "an advantage" having been taken of him, the writer evidently means to state only H.'s subsequent complaints, and not the facts or circumstances actually attending the transaction. The letter cannot then prove that H. was deranged, or that defendant took advantage of him, unless it is inferable from other parts of the letter. He says H. had found out that defendant had made an advantageous trade; but it would be a very strained construction of this language, to suppose defendant meant anything more by it than a good bargain. Connor v. Featherstone, 12 Wheat. 199, 203, 6 L. Ed. 601.

Alleged fraud on rights of widow.—Where a widow filed a bill in chancery, complaining that immediately upon the death of her husband, the son of that husband, together with another person, had imposed upon her by false representations, and induced her to part with all her right in her husband's estate for an inadequate price, the evidence in the case did not sustain the allegation. Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 14 L. Ed. 592.

It is not alleged to be a case of constructive fraud, arising out of the relative position of the parties towards each other, but of actual fraud. The answers deny the fraud and are made more emphatic by the complainant's having put interrogatories to be answered by the defendants, and the evidence sustains the answers. Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 14 L. Ed. 592.

Charge of fraud in procuring passage of ordinance.—A bill charging fraudulent misrepresentations in procuring the passage of an ordinance to pave a street, with the intent to cast on lessees of certain property on the street the burden (the lessees, by their leases, being bound to pay all taxes), and so to benefit the lessor's reversionary interest, dismissed on proofs held insufficient. Willard v. Presbury, 14 Wall. 676, 20 L. Ed. 719.

In execution of deed, power of attorney, etc.—Where the complainant set up in his bill that a deed, power of attorney, and other writings, all of which, as alleged, were executed in contemplation of a suit for the recovery of his patrimonial inheritance of which he had been unjustly deprived, were obtained by imposition and fraud, and also that a deed, executed by him in the adjustment of the estate among the parties participating in the litigation to recover it, was obtained by like fraud come by the testimony of two credible witnesses or one with corroborating circumstances, no right to relief is made out.[84] When the allegations of a bill charging fraud are explicitly met and denied by the answers, this puts the burden of establishing them upon the complainant.[85] But the answer must be positive, and imposition, held, that upon the pleadings and proofs, the allegations are not sustained; on the contrary, the transactions in both respects referred to were fair, open, and unexceptionable. Collins v. Thompson, 22 How. 246, 16 L. Ed. 280.

Where the whole arrangement, therefore, between the parties, in respect to the property, entered into with a view to the institution of the suit, which is complained of, was given up, and a new one substituted, which was not only unexceptionable, but highly equitable and just, as concerned the complainant, the charge of fraud and imposition depending upon it, even if originally it had any foundation, falls with it. Collins v. Thompson, 22 How. 246, 250, 16 L. Ed. 280.

In exchange of property.—See the title EXCHANGE OF PROPERTY, ante, p. 75.

In compromise with creditors.—See ante, "Of Person Making Representation," IV, B, 2, a, (1).

Fraud under guise of legal proceedings.—It was held in McIntire v. Pryor, 173 U. S. 38, 43 L. Ed. 606, that the evidence showed conclusively the conception and carrying out of a glaring scheme of fraud to deprive of their property, under the guise of legal proceedings and conveyances, the owners thereof, who were ignorant and uneducated people, and that the case was one which should prevent the doctrine of laches from being applicable. See the titles LACHES; LIMITATIONS OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

In Monger v. Shirley, 131 U. S., appx. cxxxi, cxxxiv, 22 L. Ed. 449, it was held that the evidence amply showed a fraud by which the title to complainant's land had been acquired by defendant, under guise of a fraudulent execution sale, and confiscation proceedings.

Scheme to defraud co-owner of rights to land.—After land was purchased and conveyed to the plaintiff D. and defendant P. jointly, the latter conceived the purpose of acquiring the title to the whole of it. To that end he pretended to have made a sale of it to B., and induced the plaintiff not only to believe that it was a real sale at a named price, but to join in the deed to B. The day after the title was vested in B. the latter reconveyed the property to P. According to the preponderance of evidence, that transaction was a sham, but not more so than the pretended sale and conveyance to one M. The proof makes it clear that the pretended sales to B. and M. were in execution of a scheme devised by P. to deprive D. of his interest in these lands without his receiving the full value of such interest, and thus to become himself the sole owner. It was held that the evidence fully sustained the allegations of fraud made in the original and amended complaint. Dickson v. Patterson, 160 U. S. 584, 589, 40 L. Ed. 543.

Release induced by fraud.—In Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 398, 422, 22 L. Ed. 520, it was held that, examined in connection with the attending circumstances, it is manifest that the discharge of the debt procured from the father to his sons, insolvent debtors owing him a large sum, is null and void, because it was obtained by gross deception, misrepresentation, and shameless fraud. See the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 842.

84. To overcome answer under oath.—Monroe Cattle Co. v. Becker, 147 U. S. 47, 54, 37 L. Ed. 72; Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 94, 3 L. Ed. 271; Hughes v. Blake, 6 Wheat. 453, 5 L. Ed. 303; Connor v. Featherstone, 12 Wheat. 199, 6 L. Ed. 601; Garrow v. Davis, 15 How. 272, 277, 14 L. Ed. 692; Vigel v. Hopp, 104 U. S. 441, 26 L. Ed. 765; Beals v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 133 U. S. 290, 33 L. Ed. 608.

85. Allegations of bill denied by answer.—Brown v. County of Buena Vista, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. Ed. 422; Connor v. Featherstone, 12 Wheat. 199, 204, 6 L. Ed. 601; Stephen v. Beall, 22 Wall. 329, 22 L. Ed. 786; Lea v. Polk County Cooper Co., 21 How. 493, 505, 16 L. Ed. 203; Allen v. Smith, 129 U. S. 465, 32 L. Ed. 732.

Where the answer of the defendant is direct, positive, and unequivocal in its denials of the allegations of the bill, and, as an answer on oath is not waived, unless these denials are disproved by evidence of greater weight than the testimony of one witness, or by that of one witness with corroborating circumstances, the complainant will not be entitled to a decree; and this effect of the defendant's answer is not weakened by the fact that the equity of the complainant's bill is the allegation of fraud. Vigel v. Hopp, 104 U. S. 441, 26 L. Ed. 765; Story Eq. Jur., § 1528; Daniell Ch. Pr. 844. Southern Development Co. v. Silva, 125 U. S. 247, 249, 31 L. Ed. 678; Farrar v. Churchill, 135 U. S. 609, 620, 34 L. Ed. 246.

"The positive denial of fraud in every answer in the cause, and the absence of any proof to sustain it, should alone be taken as a complete refutation of the charge." Ladd v. Ladd, 8 How. 10, 28, 12 L. Ed. 967.

And a decree, dismissing the bill, was proper and will not be reversed on merely suspicious evidence. Morrison v. Durr, 122 U. S. 518, 30 L. Ed. 1225.

Where the answer of the defendant in and not merely as to remembrance and belief.[86]

b. Circumstantial Evidence.—The circumstances of a transaction may create an inference of fraud.[87] And to establish fraud, it is not necessary to prove it a bill alleging fraud denied specifically all the material allegations of the complaint, and set out in detail the circumstances attending the transaction which, if proved, would establish his good faith and the absence of any fraudulent acts on the part of himself or any of his agents connected with such transactions, and the cause having been heard upon the pleadings and proofs, the court found the facts in favor of the defendant, and entered a decree in his favor, it was held that such findings were in the main responsive to the allegations and would not be disturbed. Synnott v. Shaughnessy, 130 U. S. 572, 575, 32 L. Ed. 1038.

Answers to interrogatories.—Positive denials of fraud in the answers, being directly responsive to the charging part of the bill, the latter, by every rule of equity pleading, must be displaced by them, unless those denials can be overcome by evidence aliunde. But by the peculiar frame and structure of the bill, in this case, the complainant has imparted to the answers a function beyond a mere response to the recitals or charges contained in the bill. The complainant has thought proper specifically to interrogate the defendants, as to the origin, progress, and conditions of the transactions impugned by her; and as to the part borne in them, both by the defendants and the complainant herself. By the answers to these interrogatories, the complainant must, therefore, be concluded, unless they can be overthrown by proofs. Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 57, 14 L. Ed. 592.

Rule not affected by failure to testify.—Where, in a bill filed by the government charging fraud, answers under oath were called for, and were filed, denying specifically the existence of any fraud, an answer under oath in an equity case, when called for, is to be taken as evidence, and no adverse inference is to be drawn from the fact that neither one of the defendants appeared as a witness. If the government doubted their statements under oath, it could have called either one and cross-examined him to its satisfaction. United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 165, 36 L. Ed. 384.

Where evidence conflicting.—There is a failure of proof of fraud where neither a neglect nor wrong is shown by the positive testimony of any one witness; and whatever is sworn to by any one in behalf of the complainant is counteracted by opposing circumstances, rather than strengthened, as it should be, after a sworn denial in the bill, and in so grave a charge as fraud, by very satisfactory auxiliaries, though not perhaps by so strong evidence as is necessary in reforming contracts; that is, by evidence which is "irrefragable," and not open "to opposing presumptions." 1 Bro. Ch. 347; Graves v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 2 Cranch 419, 2 L. Ed. 324; 1 Ves. Sr., 317; 6 Ves. 332; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 173, 5 L. Ed. 589; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 1 Pet. 1, 13, 7 L. Ed. 27; 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 595, 630. Carpenter v. Providence, etc., Ins. Co., 4 How. 185, 224, 11 L. Ed. 931.

86. Answer must be positive.—Where a bill is filed to recover property obtained by an alleged fraud, if the property was acquired by unfair means the fact was one within the defendant's own knowledge, and in such cases the general rule of equity pleading is that the defendant must answer positively and not merely to his remembrance or belief. The distinction which is generally made between recent and remote acts or declarations of the defendant would hardly seem applicable to a case like the present. Slater v. Maxwell, 6 Wall. 268, 274, 18 L. Ed. 796.

87. Inference from circumstances.—Gregg v. Sayre, 8 Pet. 244, 8 L. Ed. 932.

"And there may be contracts so extortionate and unconscionable on their face as to raise the presumption of fraud in their inception, or at least to require but slight additional evidence to justify such presumption. In such cases the natural and irresistible inference of fraud is as efficacious to maintain the defense at law as to sustain an application for affirmative relief in equity. When this is so, if performance has been accepted in ignorance and under circumstances excusing the non-return of articles furnished, and these have some value, the amount sued for may be reduced to that value." Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 414, 33 L. Ed. 393.

The court said: "If the claimant intended to induce the agents of the government to contract to pay for these shucks thirty-five times their highest market value, and the agents of the government knowingly entered into such a contract, it will not be denied that such conduct would be fraudulent and the agreement vitiated accordingly. If the claimant knew that a clerical error had been committed, of which the agents of the government were ignorant, and deliberately intended to take advantage of the error to obtain the execution of a contract for the payment of so grossly unconscionable a price, or if the facts were such that he must be held to have known that their action, if understandingly taken, would be in palpable dereliction of their duty to their principal, and, notwithstanding, sought to profit by it, the character of the fraud, so far as the claimant is concerned, is not changed by the fact that such action was the result of the negliby direct and positive evidence. Circumstantial evidence is not only sufficient, in most cases it is the only proof that can be adduced.[88]

c. Inadequacy of Consideration.—Inadequacy of consideration of a nature so gross as to shock the conscience, will amount to proof of fraud. But it must be extremely gross.[89] But mere inadequacy alone will not ordinarily be per se proof of fraud.[90] gence or mistake of the government's agents, untainted by moral turpitude on their part." Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 414, 33 L. Ed. 393.

88. Competency and sufficiency.—Rea v. Missouri, 17 Wall. 532, 543, 21 L. Ed. 707; Thompson v. Bowie, 4 Wall. 463, 472, 18 L. Ed. 423 (per Grier, J., dissenting); Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 369, 19 L. Ed. 461; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 601, 21 L. Ed. 504; Lalone v. United States, 164 U. S. 255, 257, 41 L. Ed. 425.

Fraud, being essentially a matter of motive and intention, is often deducible only from a great variety of circumstances, no one of which is absolutely decisive; but all combined together may become almost irresistible as to the true nature and character of the transaction in controversy. Wood v. United States, 16 Pet. 342, 360, 10 L. Ed. 987. See Gregg v. Sayre, 8 Pet. 244, 8 L. Ed. 932; Butler v. Watkins, 13 Wall. 456, 464, 20 L. Ed. 629; Thompson v. Bowie, 4 Wall. 463, 472, 18 L. Ed. 423, per Grier, J., dissenting. Especially when corroborated by moral coincidences. Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 601, 21 L. Ed. 504. And see the title CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE, vol. 3, p. 786.

Illustration—Collusion or secret trust.—Where A had levied on certain goods as owned by B, which C claimed, the allegation of A being that there had been collusion between B and C, and that C was a mere instrument of B, it was held, on a suit by C against A for damages, that it was not necessary in this case, for the defendants, in order to maintain the issue on their part, to prove by direct and positive evidence that B had a secret trust or property in the goods. It was sufficient if they proved such facts and circumstances tending to that conclusion as might reasonably induce the jury to believe that he had such trust or property. Rea v. Missouri, 17 Wall. 532, 543, 21 L. Ed. 707.

On question of fraudulent recommendations to credit.—See ante, "Financial Standing," IV, B, 2, a.

89. Inadequacy of consideration.—Byers v. Surget, 19 How. 303, 311, 15 L. Ed. 670; Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 369, 19 L. Ed. 461; Veazie v. Williams, 8 How. 134, 150, 12 L. Ed. 1018; Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 414, 33 L. Ed. 393.

"Great inadequacy of price is a circumstance which a court of equity will always regard with suspicion, unless it appears by the circumstances of the case, or by evidence, that it is no fault of the buyer." Graffam v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 180, 194, 29 L. Ed. 839.

Where the purchase has been made for a full price and on fair conditions without special advantage to the vendee, the proofs to impeach it ought to be more full and direct, more unequivocal and certain, than would be required in the case of a hard or unequal bargain. Calais Steamboat Co. v. Scudder, 2 Black 372, 17 L. Ed. 282.

Illustrations.—In Barribeau v. Brant, 17 How. 43, 15 L. Ed. 34, it was held that the allegation that a deed which complainant executed ought to be set aside, upon the ground of fraud and misrepresentation and inadequacy of price, was not sustained by the evidence.

"Although the prices paid for the different interests were undoubtedly very moderate; yet they were not so inadequate as to authorize the court to declare the deeds void on that ground. The inadequacy must be tested by the value of the property at the time of the sales, and not by its present value." Barribeau v. Brant, 17 How. 43, 45, 15 L. Ed. 34.

In Warner v. Godfrey, 186 U. S. 365, 46 L. Ed. 1203, on a bill to establish plaintiff's title to land, of which she claimed to have been defrauded by one of the defendants, the main asserted badges of fraud were a gross inadequacy of consideration, and other fraudulent and criminal practices, haste and concealment, both the trial and the appellate courts concurred in holding that the proof absolutely vindicated the defendants, and it is held by this court that "the entire want of foundation for the charges of wrongdoing urged against the defendants, and upon which the long litigation proceeded, may be taken as conclusively established."

90. "Mere inadequacy of price, or any other inequality in a bargain, we are told, is not to be understood as constituting per se a ground to avoid a bargain in equity, for courts of equity, as well as courts of law, act upon the ground that every person who is not, from his peculiar condition or circumstances, under disability, is entitled to dispose of his property in such manner and upon such terms as he chooses; and whether his bargains are wise and discrete or otherwise, or profitable or unprofitable, are considerations not for courts of justice, but for the party himself to deliberate upon." Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 59, 14 L. Ed. 592.

d. Question for Jury.—Fraud or no fraud is generally a question of fact to be determined by all the circumstances of the case.[91]

4. VARIANCE.—Proof of false representations of the same general character

See, also, Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 369, 19 L. Ed. 461.

"Still, there may be such an unconscionableness or inadequacy in a bargain, as to demonstrate some gross imposition or some undue influence; and in such cases courts of equity ought to interfere, upon satisfactory ground of fraud; but then, such unconscionableness or such inadequacy should be made out as would, to use an expressive phrase, shock the conscience, and amount in itself to conclusive and decisive evidence of fraud." Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 60, 14 L. Ed. 592.

"But the contract between the parties in this case should not be controlled by a comparison between the subject obtained and the consideration given in a mere pecuniary point of view; added to this, were the motives of affection for the wife of the grantee, the granddaughter of the grantor, a conviction in the latter of what justice dictated towards the children of the decedent in relation to his property; the prospect of ease and independence on the part of this elderly female; her exemption from the expense, the perplexities, and hazards of managing a species of property to the management of which expense and energy and skill were indispensable; property to the tenure of which she entertained and expressed insuperable objections. Here, then, in addition to the sums of money paid, or secured to be paid, we see considerations of great influence which, naturally, justly, and lawfully, might have entered into this contract, and which we think cannot be disregarded in its interpretation, upon any sound construction of the testimony in the cause." Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 60, 14 L. Ed. 592. See, also, the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, pp. 565-567.

91. Question of fact for jury.—Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 28, 24 L. Ed. 51; Remington v. Linthicum, 14 Pet. 84, 94, 10 L. Ed. 364; Swayze v. Burke, 12 Pet. 11, 24, 9 L. Ed. 980.

"It may be said in general that there is no class of cases which are more peculiarly within the province of the jury than such as involve the existence of fraud." Sonnentheil v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co., 172 U. S. 401, 410, 43 L. Ed. 492.

"In a charge of fraud courts have said, what is evidence to affect the mind of a jury is often difficult to decide or distinguish. But any fact, though in itself of slight importance, will not be withheld. In such cases it is not for the court to treat the jury as persons without discernment, where the issue is one purely of fact." Thompson v. Bowie, 4 Wall. 463, 474, 18 L. Ed. 423 (per Grier, J., dissenting). See the title QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.

If a written contract between the parties be offered in evidence, and the opposite party either denies the authenticity of the paper or alleges that it was obtained by fraud, the question at issue is still open to the jury upon the whole of the evidence. Jewell v. Jewell, 1 How. 219, 11 L. Ed. 108.

Conflicting evidence.—The jury must pass upon conflicting evidence upon the question of the existence of fraud. Stewart v. Wyoming Cattle Ranche Co., 128 U. S. 383, 387, 32 L. Ed. 439.

As to liability for false recommendations to credit.—By whatever motives the defendant may have been actuated he is not to be held responsible, unless his letters of recommendation to credit did mislead and were intended to mislead the plaintiffs. And it will be for the jury to say, on a thorough examination of the letters, and the facts and circumstances connected with them, whether they were calculated to inspire, and did inspire, a false confidence in the pecuniary responsibility of the parties recommended. If an impression, not only of their solvency but of their success in business, so that by selling largely to them no more than the ordinary risks of business were incurred, was made and authorized by the letters, while, at the same time, their true condition was known to the defendant, which did not authorize such a representation, and which was intended to deceive and mislead the plaintiffs, the defendant may be justly held responsible. But of this the jury are to judge, they being the triers of the facts outside of the letters, which should be submitted to them for their consideration and decision. Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 196, 15 L. Ed. 205.

The defendant having written to his own agent, and headed the letter "confidential," it was for the jury to say whether or not it was intended for the exclusive perusal of the agent. Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 15 L. Ed. 205.

It was also for the jury to say, on a thorough examination of the letters and the facts and circumstances connected with them, whether they were calculated to inspire, and did not inspire, a false confidence in the pecuniary responsibility of the party, to which the writer knew he was not entitled. Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 15 L. Ed. 205.

Absolute instruction erroneous.—It was said in Laidlaw v. Organ, 2 Wheat. 178, 195, 4 L. Ed. 214: "The court thinks that the absolute instruction of the judge was erroneous, and that the question, whether as those alleged in the bill as fraudulent, though not in the precise language alleged, is sufficient to support the bill and the relief decreed.[92]

VII. Criminal Fraud.

Fraudulent Purchase of Goods on Credit.—If a person buy goods on credit in good faith, knowing that he is unable to pay for them at the time, but believing that he will be able to pay for them at the maturity of the bill, he is guilty of no offense even if he be disappointed in making such payment. But if he purchases them, knowing that he will not be able to pay for them, and with an intent to cheat the vendor, this is a plain fraud, and made punishable as such by statutes in many of the states.[93]

Promissory Representations.—Although, to make a false representation the subject of an indictment, it is generally necessary that it should be the statement of an existing fact,[94] some schemes may be promoted through mere representations and promises as to the future, yet are none the less schemes and artifices to defraud. Punishment because of the fraudulent purpose is no new thing.[95] any imposition was practised by the vendee upon the vendor, ought to have been submitted to the jury."

Certificate of division of opinion.—In a litigation in respect to an alleged fraud in obtaining a deed of large tracts of land by the principal defendant from the complainant, where the decree found the fraud alleged, and held the deed null as to the principal defendant, but stated that the judges were opposed in opinion on the question whether his four codefendants, who claimed by deeds under him, were chargeable as privies to the fraud, this question was one of fact, only to be determined by an examination of the evidence in the record, and to be taken up on certificate of division. Brobst v. Brobst, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 387. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 31, et seq.

Fraud as a mixed question of law or fact.—See ante, "Fraud as Question of Law and Fact," III, A.

Directing issue to jury.—See the title ISSUES TO JURY.

92. Variance.—Turner v. Ward, 154 U. S. 618, 23 L. Ed. 391. See the title VARIANCE.

93. Fraudulent purchase of goods on credit.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 592, 38 L. Ed. 830; Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 313, 40 L. Ed. 709. See ante, "Fraudulent Purchase of Goods on Credit," IV, C, 2.

94. Promissory representations generally.—Sawyer v. Prickett, 19 Wall. 146, 160, 22 L. Ed. 105. See ante, "Must Be of Existing or Past Fact, Not a Mere Opinion," IV, B, 1.

95. Scheme or artifice to defraud—Promissory representations.—As held in Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 40 L. Ed. 709, the misrepresentation of existing facts is not necessary to a conviction under a statute applying to "any scheme or artifice to defraud." As was observed by Mr. Justice Brewer (p. 313): "Some schemes may be promoted through mere representations and promises as to the future, yet are none the less schemes and artifices to defraud. * * * In the light of this the statute must be read, and so read it includes everything designed to defraud by representations as to the past or present, or suggestions and promises as to the future. The significant fact is the intent and purpose." Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 516, 48 L. Ed. 1092.

Fraudulent claim against United States.—Where an act of congress declared, that, if any person "shall transmit to, or present at, or cause or procure to be transmitted to, or presented at, any office or officer of the government of the United States, any deed, power of attorney, order, certificate, receipt, or other writing, in support of, or in relation to, any account or claim, with intent to defraud the United States, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited, every such person shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony," etc., the transmission or presentation of any deed, or other writing, to any office or officer of the government, in support of, or in relation to, any account or claim, with the intent to defraud the United States, knowing the same to be false, are the only essential ingredients. The felonious intent is no part of the description, as the offense is complete without it. Felony is the conclusion of law from the acts done with intent described; and makes part of the punishment; as, in the eye of the common law, the prisoner thereby becomes infamous, and disfranchised. These consequences may not follow, legally speaking, in a government where the common law does not prevail; but the moral degradation attaches to the punishment actually inflicted. United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 45, 12 L. Ed. 979.

Where the act done was the transmission to the commissioner of pensions of Indictment—Alleging Intent.—Where the statute defining an offense involving fraudulent conduct uses words which are not absolutely inconsistent with an honest purpose, the allegation of an intent to defraud becomes material in the highest degree. Where, in fact, the gravamen of the offense consists in the evil design with which the act is done, a count which should omit the words "willfully," etc., and with intent to defraud, would be clearly bad.[96]

Alleging Facts.—Fraud is an inference of law from certain facts. A fraud, therefore, is not sufficiently set forth in an indictment, unless all the facts are averred which in law constitute the fraud. Whether an act be done fraudulently or not is a question of law so far as the moral character of the act is involved. To aver that the act is fraudulently done is, therefore, so far as the guilt or the innocence of the act is concerned, to aver a matter of law, and not a matter of fact. An averment that the act was done with intent to commit a fraud is equivalent to an averment that the act was done fraudulently. No epithets, no averment of fraudulent intent, can supply the place of an averment of the fact or facts from which the legal inference of fraud is to be drawn.[97] an affidavit which was false in the facts which it professed to narrate, although sworn to by a person who really existed, and the person who transmitted it knew that it was false, it was an offense within the meaning of the act of congress. United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. Ed. 979.

"A genuine instrument containing a false statement of facts, used in support of a claim, the party knowing it to be false, and using it with the intent to defraud, presents a case not distinguishable in principle, or in turpitude, or in its mischievous effects, from one in which every part of the instrument is fabricated; and when the one is as fully within the words of the statute as the other, we may well suppose that it was intended to embrace it." United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 47, 12 L. Ed. 979.

Construction of statutes.—See ante, "Construction of Statutes against Fraud," III. G.

96. Indictment—Alleging intent.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 604, 38 L. Ed. 830. See United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 27 L. Ed. 520. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 107, et seq.

Criminal intent generally.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 60, et seq.

Crimen falsi.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 66.

Charging felonious intent.—See the title FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING, ante, p. 380.

97. Alleging facts.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 606, 38 L. Ed. 830 (per Field, J., dissenting).

"Starkey, in his late treatise on Criminal Pleadings, says: 'Whether particular circumstances constitute an indictable fraud is a question of law; and, therefore, according to a fundamental rule of description in indictments, such circumstances must be set out in order to show that the facts amount to an indictable offense.'" (Per Field, J., dissenting.) Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 607, 38 L. Ed. 830. The indictment, however, was in this case held sufficient by the majority of the court. See ante, "Evidence Need Not Be Set Out," VI, D, 2, b, (3).

See also, generally, the title INDICTMENTS, etc.

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.

BY WALTER CARRINGTON.

I. Construction of Statute Considered as Incorporated into Act, 452.

II. Conflict of Laws, 452.

III. Statute of a State a Rule of Decision in the Federal Courts, 453.

IV. What Contracts Are within the Statute, 453.

A. In General, 453.
B. Promise to Answer for Debt, Default or Miscarriage of Another, 453.
C. Promise Made in Consideration of Marriage, 455.
D. Grants of and Contracts Relating to Real Estate, 455.
1. In General, 455.
2. Sales, 456.
a. Nature of the Contract, 456.
b. Nature of the Property, 456.
c. Sheriff's or Marshal's Sales, 456.
3. Contracts of Exchange, 456.
4. Leases, 456.
5. Trusts, 456.
a. Express Trusts, 456.
b. Implied or Resulting Trusts, 456.
6. Agreements for the Settlement of Boundary Lines, 457.
E. Agreements Not to Be Performed within One Year, 457.
1. Rule Stated, 457.
2. What Agreements Are within the Rule, 457.
F. Agreement for Sale and Assignment of Right to Obtain a Patent, 458.

V. Effect of Statute upon Courts of Equity, 458.

VI. When the Statute Does Not Apply, 459.

A. Effect of Full Performance, 459.
B. Effect of Part Performance, 459.
1. In General, 459.
2. Part Performance of Contracts Relating to Lands, 460.
a. In General, 460.
b. Particular Contracts, 460.
(1) Sales, 460.
(a) In General, 460.
(b) Payment of Consideration in Money, 461.
(c) Payment of Consideration and Entry into Possession, 461.
(d) Possession and Improvements, 461.
(2) Contracts of Exchange, 461.
(3) Gift Accompanied by Possession and Improvements Made by Donee, 462.
(4) Agreement of Heirs to Sell Estate and Divide Proceeds, 462.
(5) Agreement to Purchase Lands on Joint Account, 462.
c. Effect of Fraud, 462.

VII. Requirements of the Statute, 462.

A. In General, 462.
B. The Writing, 462.
1. What the Term Writing Includes, 462.

2. Sufficiency of the Writing, 462.
a. In General, 462.
b. Contracts Evidenced by Two or More Writings, 463.
c. Designation of Parties, 464.
d. Subject Matter, 464.
e. Consideration, 465.
f. Representations or Assurances Concerning Another, 466.
g. Contracts for the Sale of Goods, 466.
(1) What the Memorandum Imports, 466.
(2) Terms of the Bargain, 466.
(3) Law Supplies Omission of Time or Place of Delivery, 466.
h. The Signature, 467.
3. Purpose for Which Writing Was Created Immaterial in Equity, 467.
4. Verbal Promise Subsequently Reduced to Writing, 467.
C. Receipt and Acceptance of Goods Sold, 467.
1. What Constitutes Receipt and Acceptance, 467.
2. Time of Acceptance, 469.
3. Evidence, 469.
a. Burden of Proof, 469.
b. Admissibility, 469.
4. Province of Court and Jury, 469.

VIII. Effect of Statute upon the Contract, 470.

IX. Pleading, 470.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 636; BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 257; BOUNDARIES, vol. 3, p. 461; CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1020; CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552; EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913; EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004; EXCHANGE OF PROPERTY, vol. 6, p. 75; FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394; GIFTS; JURISDICTION; LANDLORD AND TENANT; MARRIAGE CONTRACTS AND SETTLEMENTS; MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST; PAROL EVIDENCE; PARTITION; PATENTS; PLEADING; PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT; PRINCIPAL AND SURETY; QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT; SALES; SHERIFFS', CONSTABLES' AND MARSHALS' SALES; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE; STATUTES; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

As to fraudulent and voluntary conveyances, see the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES. As to the requirement that contracts made with certain executive departments of the United States shall be made in writing, see the title UNITED STATES.

I. Construction of Statute Considered as Incorporated into Act.

Where the statute of frauds has been adopted into our own legislation, the known and settled construction thereof by courts of law has been considered as silently incorporated into the act, or has been received with all the weight of authority.[1]

II. Conflict of Laws.

The Massachusetts statute, which provides that "No action shall be brought to charge any person, upon or by reason of any representation or assurance, made concerning the character, conduct, credit, trade, or dealings of any other person, unless such representation or assurance be made in writing, and signed by the party to be charged thereby, or by some person thereunto by him lawfully authorized,"[2] applies to the case of a letter written in New York but intended to

1. Construction of statute considered as incorporated into act.—McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619, 628, 28 L. Ed. 269. See post, "What Agreements Are within the Rule," IV, E, 2. And see the title STATUTES.

2. Conflict of laws.—Revised Statutes of 1836, § 3.

operate in Massachusetts.[3]

III. Statute of a State a Rule of Decision in the Federal Courts.

See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1120.

IV. What Contracts Are within the Statute.

A. In General.—The supreme court of the United States has expressed the opinion that the relaxing construction of the statute of frauds under which so many cases have been taken out of its operation, which seem to be within its letter, ought not to be extended further than it has already been carried.[4]

B. Promise to Answer for Debt, Default or Miscarriage of Another.—The statute of frauds forbids the maintenance of an action to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person, unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged.[5] It does not apply to promise in respect to debts created at the instance and for the benefit of the promisor.[6] But only to those by which the debt of one party is sought to be charged upon and collected from another.[7] The real character of a promise does not depend altogether upon the form of expression, but largely on the situation of the parties. The question always is, what the parties mutually understood by the language, whether they understood it to be a collateral or a direct promise.[8] Whenever the alleged promisor is an absolute stranger to the transaction, and without interest in it, courts strictly uphold the obligations of the statute,[9] but if there is an original consideration

3. Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 194, 15 L. Ed. 205. See the title CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1020.

4. Construction of statute.—"Already have so many cases been taken out of the statute of frauds, which seem to be within its letter, that it may well be doubted, whether the exceptions do not let in many of the mischiefs against which the rule was intended to guard. The best judges in England have been of opinion, that this relaxing construction of the statute ought not to be extended further than it has already been carried, and this court entirely concurs in that opinion." Marshall, C. J., in Grant v. Naylor, 4 Cranch 224, 235, 2 L. Ed. 603. See, also, Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 463, 14 L. Ed. 493.

5. Terms of statute.—Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 487, 35 L. Ed. 826; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 183, 11 L. Ed. 89.

The statute of frauds of New York is a transcript of the statute of 29 Car. II, c. 3; it declares, "that no action shall be brought to charge a defendant on a special promise for the debt, default or miscarriage of another, unless the agreement or some memorandum or note thereof be in writing, and signed by the party, or by any one by him authorized." De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 499, 7 L. Ed. 227.

6. To what promises the statute applies.—Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 487, 35 L. Ed. 826.

"The statute contemplates the mere promise of one man to be responsible for another, and cannot be interposed as a cover and shield against the actual obligations of the defendant himself." Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 488, 35 L. Ed. 826, quoting Browne on the Statute of Frauds, § 165.

7. Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 487, 35 L. Ed. 826.

"The reason of the statute is obvious, for in the one case if there be any conflict between the parties as to the exact terms of the promise, the courts can see that justice is done by charging against the promisor the reasonable value of that in respect to which the promise was made, while in the other case, and when a third party is the real debtor, and the party alone receiving benefit, it is impossible to solve the conflict of memory or testimony in any manner certain to accomplish justice. There is also a temptation for a promisee, in a case where the real debtor has proved insolvent or unable to pay, to enlarge the scope of the promise, or to torture mere words of encouragement and confidence into an absolute promise; and it is so obviously just that a promisor receiving no benefits should be bound only by the exact terms of his promise, that this statute requiring a memorandum in writing was enacted." Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 487, 35 L. Ed. 826.

8. Understanding of parties test as to character of promise.—Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 489, 35 L. Ed. 826.

9. Statute applies where promisor is an absolute stranger to transaction.—Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 488, 35 L. Ed. 826.

moving between the promisor and the promisee, the statute does not apply.[10] Damages to the promise constitutes as good a consideration as benefit to the promisor.[11] Though a third party is the original obligor, the primary debtor, yet if the promisor has a personal, immediate and pecuniary interest in the transaction, and is therefore himself a party to be benefited by the performance of the promisee, the reason which underlies and which prompted the statutory provision fails, and the courts will give effect to the promise.[12] Cases in which the guaranty or promise is collateral to the principal contract, but is made at the same time, and becomes an essential ground of the credit given to the principal debtor, are, in general, within the statute.[13] Other cases arise which also fall within the statute, where the collateral agreement is subsequent to the execution of the debt, and was not the inducement to it, on the ground that the subsisting liability was the foundation of the promise on the part of the defendant, without any other direct and separate consideration moving between the parties.[14] An undertaking by a defendant to pay his own debt is not brought within the statute of frauds by the fact that the payment is to be made in a particular way and to a third person, where the promise is made to and the suit brought by, not the third person, but by the person to whom the debt is owed.[15]

An acceptance of a bill of exchange is not a collateral engagement to pay the debt of another; it is an absolute engagement to pay the money to the holder of the bill.[16]

10. Statute not applicable where there is an original consideration moving between the parties.—Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. 170, 7 L. Ed. 386.

In cases not absolutely closed by authority, the supreme court has expressed a strong inclination not to extend the operation of the statute of frauds, so as to embrace original and distinct promises, made by different persons, at the same time, upon the same general consideration. Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. 170, 182, 7 L. Ed. 386.

11. Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. 170, 7 L. Ed. 386. See the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 565.

If A says to B, pay so much money to C, and I will repay it to you, it is an original independent promise; and if the money be paid upon the faith of it, it is an obligatory contract. Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. 170, 7 L. Ed. 386.

Guaranty as to value of corporation stock.—A guaranty to one who has proposed to sell land in exchange for stock of a corporation, that the stock shall be worth par at a certain date, or if it is not it shall be made so by the corporation, is an original independent contract and not a collateral undertaking to pay the debt of another. Hill v. Smith, 21 How. 283, 286, 16 L. Ed. 113. Grier, J., who delivered the opinion of the court, said: "Although the term 'guaranty' is usually applied to a collateral undertaking to pay the debt of another yet, when taken in connection with the other terms of the instrument, this is clearly an original independent contract."

A promise contained in a written agreement held to be an original undertaking, on a good and valid consideration moving between the parties to the instrument, and not a special promise for the debt, default or misdoings, of another. Such agreement held therefore not to be within the operation of the statute of frauds. Emerson v. Slater, 22 How. 28, 16 L. Ed. 360.

12. Third party primary debtor, but consideration moving to promisor.—Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 488, 35 L. Ed. 826.

"Whenever the main purpose and object of the promissor is not to answer for another, but to subserve some pecuniary or business purpose of his own, involving either a benefit to himself, or damage to the other contracting party, his promise is not within the statute, although it may be in form a promise to pay the debt of another, and although the performance of it may incidentally have the effect of extinguishing that liability." Emerson v. Slater, 22 How. 28, 43, 16 L. Ed. 360; Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 488, 35 L. Ed. 826.

Where the original promisor was a mining company, and the undertaking was for its benefit, but the performance of the contract enured equally to the benefit of the promisor and the mining company, it was held that it was not within the statute of frauds. Davis v. Patrick, 141 U. S. 479, 488, 35 L. Ed. 826.

13. Collateral promise made at time of principal contract.—Emerson v. Slater, 22 How. 28, 43, 16 L. Ed. 360.

14. Collateral agreement subsequent to execution of debt.—Emerson v. Slater, 22 How. 28, 43, 16 L. Ed. 360.

15. Undertaking to pay one's own debt in a particular way and to a third person.—Townsend v. Jennison, 7 How. 706, 723, 12 L. Ed. 880.

16. Acceptance of bill of exchange not a collateral promise.—Raborg v. Peyton, 2 Wheat. 385, 386, 4 L. Ed. 268. See the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 285.

If a person undertake verbally to ac-

C. Promises Made in Consideration of Marriage.—In states where the provision of the English statute of frauds touching promises made in consideration of marriage is in force, a verbal promise to settle property upon an intended wife, is void.[17]

D. Grants of and Contracts Relating to Real Estate—1. IN GENERAL.—The statute of frauds requires a contract concerning real estate or some memorandum or note thereof, to be in writing,[18] and signed either by the party to be charged, or by some person lawfully authorized.[19] This provision of the English statute has been incorporated into the legislation of most of the United States, but sometimes in a somewhat changed or modified form.[20] No statute of frauds had been adopted in New Mexico in 1868, but under the laws of the territory, then in force, a transfer of real estate to be valid was required to be in writing.[21] It has never been held that the statute of frauds applies to cases of enurement by way of estoppel and it has been conceded that it does not affect cases of dedication.[22] cept a bill, in consideration that another will purchase one already drawn, or to be thereafter drawn, and as an inducement to the purchaser to take it, and the bill is purchased upon the credit of such promise, for a sufficient consideration, such promise to accept is binding upon the party; it is an original promise to the purchaser, not merely a promise for the debt of another. Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. 170, 7 L. Ed. 386.

It can make no difference in law, whether the debt for which such a bill of exchange is taken, be a pre-existing debt, or money then paid for the bill. In each case, there is a substantial credit given by the party, to the drawer, upon the bill, and the party parts with his present rights, at the instance of the promisee, whose promise is substantially a new and independent one, and not a mere guarantee of the existing promise of the drawer. Under such circumstances, there is no substantial distinction, whether the bill be then in existence, or be drawn afterwards; in each case, the object of the promise is to induce the party to take the bill upon the credit of the promise. Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. 170, 7 L. Ed. 386.

17. Promise to settle property upon an intended wife.—So held as to such a promise made in Georgia where the provision of the English statute of frauds is in force. Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 23 L. Ed. 363.

18. Contract concerning real estate must be evidenced by a writing.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 454, 24 L. Ed. 360; Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 9, 19 L. Ed. 590.

Parol agreement void.—A parol agreement concerning an interest in lands is void under the statute. Randall v. Howard, 2 Black 585, 589, 17 L. Ed. 269; Caldwell v. Carrington, 9 Pet. 86, 103, 9 L. Ed. 60.

19. Writing must be signed.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 454, 24 L. Ed. 360.

20. "The existing statutes of Texas, while they substantially follow the English statute of frauds, so far as to require a conveyance of any 'estate of inheritance or freehold, or for a term of more than one year, in lands and tenements,' as well as 'any contract for the sale of real estate, or the lease thereof for a longer term than one year,' to be in writing, omit to re-enact the additional words of the English statute, in the clause concerning conveyances, 'or any uncertain interest of, in, to or out of' lands or tenements, and, in the other clause, 'or any interest in or concerning them.' Stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, §§ 1, 4; Texas Rev. Stat. of 1879, arts. 548, 2464; 1 Paschal's Digest, arts. 997, 3875." Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 435, 41 L. Ed. 495.

Under the Oklahoma statute, Laws 1897, ch. 8, § 4, no contract relating to real estate, other than for a lease for not over one year, was valid until reduced to writing and subscribed by the parties thereto. This statute, if taken literally and naturally, goes further than its English prototype. It is not satisfied by a memorandum made with a different intent, but requires an instrument drawn for the purpose of embodying the contract, and, in the case of an agreement to buy and sell, the subscription of both the buyer and seller, not merely that of "the party to be charged therewith." Halsell v. Renfrow, 202 U. S. 287, 292, 50 L. Ed. 1032.

21. Rule in New Mexico in 1868.—Maxwell Land Grant Co. v. Dawson, 151 U. S. 586, 598, 38 L. Ed. 279. The court held that it was unnecessary to express an opinion whether under the civil law as enforced in the territory a transfer of land was valid without a written instrument, as, though no statute of frauds had been adopted in the territory as early as 1868, yet under the compiled laws of 1865, art. 18, ch. 44, §§ 4, 5, all conveyances of real estate were required to be subscribed by the person transferring his title or interest, and to be acknowledged and certified by a public officer.

22. Enurement by way of estoppel and dedication not affected by statute.—Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 583, 25 L. Ed. 618.

2. Sales—a. Nature of the Contract.—Where one party agrees with another to acquire title to a tract of land in his own name upon the best terms possible, and then to convey to the other an interest in the premises, for which the latter promises to pay to the former one-third of the purchase money and one-half of the expenses incurred in obtaining title, the contract is one for the sale of lands within the meaning of the statute of frauds.[23] So a promise to pay a sum of money, as a compensation to the plaintiff, for the injury done by the misconduct of the defendant, in obtaining a patent in his own name, for land which he ought to have patented in the name of the plaintiff, and in preventing the plaintiff from obtaining a patent in his own name, and in consideration of the defendant's having procured the patent to be issued to himself, is a contract for the sale of land, within the statute.[24]

b. Nature of the Property.—A conveyance in writing is not necessary to the valid transfer of a mining claim.[25] In Texas land certificates are chattels, and may be sold by parol agreement and delivery, whereby the purchaser acquires a right to locate the certificate and procure a patent in the name of the grantee, but for his own use.[26]

c. Sheriff's or Marshal's Sales.—Under the laws of Maryland, a sale by a sheriff or marshal of land seized under a fieri facias, transfers the legal estate to the vendee by operation of law, and does not require a sheriff's or marshal's deed to give it validity; but as such sales are within the statute of frauds, some memorandum in writing of the sale is required to be made.[27]

3. Contracts of Exchange.—A valid exchange of lands cannot be made by parol.[28] Such a contract is as much within the statute of frauds as a contract for their sale.[29]

4. Leases.—Verbal contracts of lease, not exceeding the term of one year, are valid by the laws of Mississippi.[30]

5. Trusts—a. Express Trusts.—The declaration of an express trust of real property under the statute of frauds of 29 Charles II, is required to be in writing and cannot be proved by parol testimony.[31] But trusts are not embraced by the statute of frauds of Texas, and may there be proved, as at common law, by parol.[32]

b. Implied or Resulting Trusts.—A resulting trust may be established by parol evidence.[33] In some jurisdictions implied or resulting trusts are expressly ex-

23. Contracts for the sale of land.—Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 496, 29 L. Ed. 703.

24. Hughes v. Moore, 7 Cranch 176, 3 L. Ed. 307.

25. Conveyance in writing not necessary to transfer of mining claim.—Mining Co. v. Taylor, 100 U. S. 37, 25 L. Ed. 541. See the title MINES AND MINERALS.

26. In Texas land certificates may be sold by parol agreement and delivery.—Miller v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 132 U. S. 662, 684, 33 L. Ed. 487. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

27. Sheriff's or marshal's sales.—Remington v. Linthicum, 14 Pet. 84, 10 L. Ed. 364. See the title SHERIFFS', CONSTABLES' AND MARSHALS' SALES.

28. Contract for exchange of lands within the statute. Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. 577, 580, 5 L. Ed. 334.

29. Purcell v. Miner, 4 Wall. 513, 18 L. Ed. 435.

Parol proof of an intention to convey land in exchange for other land, will not operate to convey any estate or interest in the land. Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. 577, 580, 5 L. Ed. 334.

30. Code, 1871, § 2892. Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 246, 25 L. Ed. 850. See the title LANDLORD AND TENANT.

31. Express trust within statute of frauds.—Osterman v. Baldwin, 6 Wall. 116, 123, 18 L. Ed. 730; Howland v. Blake, 97 U. S. 624, 628, 24 L. Ed. 1027.

Real property conveyed in a deed of trust for the payment of debts cannot be retained as a security for the advances or debts subsequently made on the strength of a parol engagement. Williams v. Hill, 19 How. 246, 250, 15 L. Ed. 570. See the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

32. Trusts not embraced by Texas statutes of frauds.—Osterman v. Baldwin, 6 Wall. 116, 18 L. Ed. 730. See the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

33. Resulting trust may be established by parol evidence.—Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 300, 15 L. Ed. 644.

Parol evidence is admissible to show fraud, and consequently a resulting trust, in a deed absolute on its face. Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 300, 15 L. Ed. 644.

Such evidence is admissible to show that cepted from the statute of frauds.[34]

6. Agreements for the Settlement of Boundary Lines.—An agreement, by parol, between two proprietors of adjoining lands, to settle the dividing line, between them by a surveyor, mutually employed, is not within the statute of frauds, as being a contract for the sale of lands or any interest in or concerning them.[35]

E. Agreements Not to Be Performed within One Year—1. Rule Stated.—The English statute of frauds[36] provides that no action shall be brought "upon any agreement which is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof," unless the "agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some person by him thereunto lawfully authorized." This provision is in force in the District of Columbia,[37] and has been embodied in the statutes of a number of the states.[38]

2. What Agreements Are within the Rule.—The several states of the Union, in re-enacting this provision in its original words, must be taken to have adopted the known and settled construction which it had received by judicial decisions in England.[39] And the rule established in England by those decisions has ever since been generally recognized in England and America, although it may in a few instances have been warped or misapplied.[40] The statute applies only to contracts which, by their terms, are not to be performed within the year,[41] and not to contracts which may not be performed within that time.[42] In other words, to make a parol contract void it must be apparent that it was the understanding of the parties that it was not to be performed within a year from a conveyance of property, absolute upon the face of it, was really a mortgage or deed of trust. Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 15 L. Ed. 644.

Parol evidence, taken in conjunction with corroborating circumstances, held to show that a deed was not intended to be absolute. Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 15 L. Ed. 644. See the titles MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

Where an estate was purchased in the name of one person, and the consideration came from another, a resulting trust may be established by parol. Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 300, 15 L. Ed. 644. See the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

34. District of Columbia.—An implied or resulting trust is expressly excepted from the provisions of the statute of frauds of the District of Columbia, Comp. Stat. D. C. 231, §§ 8, 9, and, therefore, the nature of such a trust may be shown by parol evidence. Smithsonian Institution v. Meech, 169 U. S. 398, 407, 42 L. Ed. 793.

Montana.—The trust which results to one who pays the consideration for an estate, where the title is taken in the name of another, is not within the statute of frauds of Montana, Compiled Statutes, § 217, and parol evidence is admissible to show whose money is actually paid for the property. Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 587, 592, 34 L. Ed. 1091.

But to take it out of the operation of the statute the trust must have arisen at the time the purchase was made, and the whole consideration must have been paid or secured at the time of or prior to such purchase. Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 587, 592, 34 L. Ed. 1091. See, also, Olcott v. Bynum, 17 Wall. 44, 59, 21 L. Ed. 570.

35. Agreement for the settlement of a boundary line.—Boyd v. Graves, 4 Wheat. 513, 517, 4 L. Ed. 628.

36. 29 Car. II, c. 3, § 4.

37. Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 580, 18 L. Ed. 550.

38. It has been embodied in the Texas statute of frauds. Texas Stat., January 18, 1840; 1 Paschal's Digest (4th Ed.), art. 3875; Rev. Stat., 1879, art. 2464. Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 420, 41 L. Ed. 495.

39. Construction of English decisions adopted in re-enactments.—Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 423, 41 L. Ed. 495.

40. Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 423, 41 L. Ed. 495. See ante, "Construction of Statute Considered as Incorporated into Act," I. And see the title STATUTES.

41. Contracts not to be performed within one year within statute.—Walker v. Johnson, 96 U. S. 424, 427, 24 L. Ed. 834; McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404, 416, 24 L. Ed. 746.

"The statute applies to contracts not wholly to be performed within the year." Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 580, 595, 18 L. Ed. 550.

42. Statute not applicable though contract may not be performed within one year.—Walker v. Johnson, 96 U. S. 424, 427, 24 L. Ed. 834; McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404, 416, 24 L. Ed. 746.

the time it was made.[43] This must appear affirmatively.[44] If performance by the promisor can be required by the promisee within a year, the contract is valid.[45]

F. Agreement for Sale and Assignment of Right to Obtain a Patent.—An oral agreement for the sale and assignment of the right to obtain a patent for an invention is not within the statute of frauds.[46]

V. Effect of Statute upon Courts of Equity.

Courts of equity are bound, as much as courts of law, by the provisions of the statute of frauds;[47] and therefore they are not at liberty to disregard them.[48] They do, however, interfere in some cases within the reach of the statute. But they do so, not upon any notion of any right to dispense with it, but for the purpose of administering equities subservient to its true objects, or collateral to it, and independent of it.[49] A case of such interference is when a court of equity enforces the specific performance of a contract within the statutes, where the 43. McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404, 416, 24 L. Ed. 746; Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 431, 41 L. Ed. 495.

"The question is not what the probable, or expected, or actual performance of the contract was; but whether the contract, according to the reasonable interpretation of its terms, required that it should not be performed within the year." Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 434, 41 L. Ed. 495.

An agreement which, according to the intention of the parties, as shown by the terms of the contract, may be fully performed within a year from the time it was made, is not within the statute, although the time of its performance is uncertain, and may probably extend, and be expected by the parties to extend, and does in fact extend, beyond the year. Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 422, 41 L. Ed. 495.

Contract for erection and maintenance of railroad switch.—An agreement between a railroad company and a mill owner that if the latter will furnish the ties and grade the ground for a switch at the place where he proposes to erect a sawmill, the railroad company will put down the iron rails and maintain the switch for his benefit for shipping purposes as long as he needs it, is not within the statute. Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 433, 41 L. Ed. 495.

Contract to pay attorney when land recovered shall be sold.—A contract to pay to an attorney at law for his services in suits concerning land, if it be recovered, a specific sum of money out of the proceeds, when it shall be sold by the client, is not void under the statute of frauds because not in writing, if it may be performed within a year. McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404, 24 L. Ed. 746.

Performance to run through a term of years.—In Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 580, 18 L. Ed. 550, it was held that a contract where performance is to run through a term of years, but which, by its tenor, may be defeated at any time before the expiration of the term is within the statute, and this only was applied to a contract to pay for a right to use an invention on a certain boat, so much a year during the term of a patent having twelve years yet to run, "if the said boat should so long last." But in the later case of Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 430, 41 L. Ed. 495, doubt was cast upon the holding in Packet Co. v. Sickles.

44. That performance was not to be within a year must appear affirmatively.—Walker v. Johnson, 96 U. S. 424, 427, 24 L. Ed. 834.

So held in regard to parol contract for the delivery of materials. Walker v. Johnson, 96 U. S. 424, 427, 24 L. Ed. 834.

45. Contract valid if performance can be required within a year.—Walker v. Johnson, 96 U. S. 424, 24 L. Ed. 834.

46. Agreement for sale of right to obtain patent not within statute.—Dalzell v. Dueber, etc., Mfg. Co., 149 U. S. 315, 321, 37 L. Ed. 749.

47. Statute binding upon courts of equity.—Purcell v. Miner, 4 Wall. 513, 517, 18 L. Ed. 435; Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 89, 45 L. Ed. 758.

48. Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 89, 45 L. Ed. 758.

Under the statute of frauds of Maryland specific performance of a contract for the sale of lands will not be decreed, unless there is a note or memorandum in writing of the agreement sufficient to maintain an action at law. Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 650, 7 L. Ed. 295.

As to the sufficiency of the writing, see post, "Sufficiency of the Writing," VII, B, 2.

49. Ground of equity's interference in cases within statute.—Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 89, 45 L. Ed. 758.

The statute of frauds was designed to prevent frauds, and courts of equity will not permit it to be used to accomplish that which it was designed to prevent. Smithsonian Institution v. Meech, 169 U. S. 398, 408, 42 L. Ed. 793.

Therefore, to prevent the statute from becoming an instrument of fraud, they have in many instances relaxed its provisions. Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 498, 29 L. Ed. 703; Purcell v. Miner, 4 Wall. 513, 517, 18 L. Ed. 435.

parol agreement has been partly carried into execution.[50]

VI. When the Statute Does Not Apply.

A. Effect of Full Performance.—It is well settled by the authorities that the defense of the statute of frauds cannot be set up against an executed contract.[51] Where an agreement within the purview of the statute is actually executed by both parties it is taken out of the operation of the statute.[52] Whether or not there has been such an execution is a question for the jury.[53] The statute cannot be set up as a defense to the performance of one formal item of an agreement, where the contract has been fully performed by the party asking such performance, and, except as to such remaining formal item, by the other party also.[54]

B. Effect of Part Performance—1. In General.—Part performance of a parol contract is often admitted in equity as an answer to the statute of frauds,[55] and as a basis for the enforcement of the specific performance of the contract.[56] The general principle to be extracted from the authorities is that if the plaintiff, with the knowledge and consent of the promisor, does acts pursuant to and in obvious reliance upon a verbal agreement, which so change the relations of the parties as to render a restoration of their former condition impracticable, it is a virtual fraud upon the part of the promisor to set up the statute in defense, and thus to receive to himself the benefit of the acts done by the plaintiff, while the latter is left to the chance of a suit at law for the reimbursement of his outlays, or to an action upon a quantum meruit for the value of his services.[57] But acts

50. Specific performance of parol agreement partly performed.—Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 89, 45 L. Ed. 758. See post, "Effect of Part Performance," VI, B.

51. Defense of statute cannot be set up against an executed contract.—Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 497, 37 L. Ed. 817.

"This rule proceeds and rests upon the principle that there is 'no rule of law which prevents a party from performing a promise which could not be legally enforced, or which will permit a party, morally but not legally bound to do a certain act or thing, upon the act or thing being done, to recall it to the prejudice of the promisee, on the plea that the promise, while still executory, could not by reason of some technical rule of law have been enforced by action.'" Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 497, 37 L. Ed. 817, quoting Newman v. Nellis, 97 N. Y. 285, 291.

Where in pursuance of a parol promise to convey land the land by the procurement of the promisee is conveyed to his wife for the avowed purpose of defeating his deed of the land to a third person, and this is done with the knowledge of the wife, neither the promisee nor his wife can set up the statute of frauds as a defense to an action by such third person to compel a conveyance to him. Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122, 32 L. Ed. 878. See the titles ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913; FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

52. Execution of both parties takes agreement out of operation of statute.—Weightman v. Caldwell, 4 Wheat. 85, 88, 4 L. Ed. 520.

53. Fact of execution a question for jury.—Weightman v. Caldwell, 4 Wheat. 85, 88, 4 L. Ed. 520.

E. B. C., having an interest in a cargo at sea, agreed with J. W. for the sale of it, and J. W. signed the following agreement in writing: "J. W. agrees to purchase the share of E. B. C. in the cargo of the ship Aristides, W. P. Z., supercargo, say at $2,522.85, at fifteen per cent. advance on said amount, payable at five months from this date, and to give a note or notes for the same, with an approved indorser." In compliance with this agreement, J. W. gave his notes for the sum mentioned, and in an action upon the notes, the want of a legal consideration, under the statute of frauds, being set up as a defense on the ground of the defect of mutuality in the written contract, the court below left it to the jury, to infer from the evidence, an actual performance of the agreement; the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, and the court below rendered judgment thereon, and that judgment was affirmed by the supreme court. Weightman v. Caldwell, 4 Wheat. 85, 4 L. Ed. 520.

54. Statute no defense to performance of one formal item of agreement.—Swain v. Seamens, 9 Wall. 254, 19 L. Ed. 554.

55. Part performance admitted in equity as answer to statute.—Swain v. Seamens, 9 Wall. 254, 273, 19 L. Ed. 554.

56. Part performance basis for specific performance.—Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 89, 45 L. Ed. 758. See the title SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

57. Prevention of fraud bases of doctrine of part performance.—Townsend v. Vanderwerker, 160 U. S. 171, 184, 40 L. Ed. 383; Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 90, 45 of part performance which will take a case out of the statute must be referable solely to the contract,[58] and must be consistent with it,[59] and done for the purpose of carrying it into execution, and with the consent or knowledge of the other party.[60] Nothing is part performance for the purpose of taking a contract out of the statute which is only ancillary or preparatory; it must be a direct act which is intended to be a substantial part performance of an obligation created by the contract as proved; and it must be an act which would not have been done but for the contract; and it must be directly in prejudice of the party doing the act, who must himself be the party calling for the completion of the contract.[61]

2. Part Performance of Contract Relating to Lands—a. In General.—Courts of equity have relaxed the rigidity of the rule which requires a contract concerning real estate to be in writing and hold that a part performance removes the bar of the statute,[62] on the ground that it is a fraud for the promisor to insist on the absence of a written instrument, when he had permitted the contract to be partly executed.[63] While acts done prior to the contract or preparatory thereto, such as delivering abstracts of titles, measuring the land, drawing up deeds, etc., are not regarded as sufficient part performance, it is otherwise with such acts as taking open possession of the land sold, or making permanent or valuable improvements thereon, or doing other acts in relation to the land manifestly inconsistent with any other theory than that of carrying out the parol undertaking.[64]

b. Particular Contracts—(1) Sales—(a) In General.—Specific performance of a parol contract for the sale of lands will not be decreed, unless a sufficient part performance is made out to show that fraud and injustice would be done if the contract was held to be inoperative.[65]

L. Ed. 758; Riggles v. Erney, 154 U. S. 244, 254, 38 L. Ed. 976; Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 457, 24 L. Ed. 360.

"The distinct ground upon which courts of equity interfere in cases of this sort is, that otherwise one party would be enabled to practice a fraud upon the other; and it could never be the intention of the statute to enable any party to commit such a fraud with impunity. Indeed, fraud in all cases constitutes an answer to the most solemn acts and conveyances, and the objects of the statute are promoted, instead of being obstructed, by such a jurisdiction for discovery and relief. And where one party has executed his part of the agreement, in the confidence that the other party would do the same, it is obvious, if the latter should refuse, it would be a fraud upon the former to suffer this refusal to work to his prejudice." 1 Story's Eq. Juris., §§ 754, 759, quoted in Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 89, 45 L. Ed. 758.

58. Character of acts that will take a case out of statute.—Winslow v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 188 U. S. 646, 658, 47 L. Ed. 635; Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 457, 24 L. Ed. 360; Riggles v. Erney, 154 U. S. 244, 254, 38 L. Ed. 976.

59. Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 451, 24 L. Ed. 360.

60. Riggles v. Erney, 154 U. S. 244, 254, 38 L. Ed. 976.

61. Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 457, 24 L. Ed. 360.

62. Part performance of contracts concerning real estate.—Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 9, 19 L. Ed. 590; Brown v. Sutton, 129 U. S. 238, 248, 32 L. Ed. 664.

63. Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 9, 19 L. Ed. 590.

"Although in a suit to enforce the specific performance of a parol agreement in reference to land the defendant cannot be directly charged upon the alleged contract itself, he may be held—the evidence clearly showing part performance, in substantial particulars, of such agreement—to do what justice requires to be done under the equities arising from acts done after the making of the agreement and in execution of its provisions. To refuse under some circumstances to compel the full execution of an agreement of that kind which has been partly performed would make the statute an instrument of fraud, and that a court of equity will not permit." Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 91, 45 L. Ed. 758.

"When the statute says that no action is to be brought to charge any person upon a contract concerning land, it has in view the simple case in which he is charged upon the contract only, and not that in which there are equities resulting from res gestæ subsequent to and arising out of the contract." Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 91, 45 L. Ed. 758.

64. Riggles v. Erney, 154 U. S. 244, 254, 38 L. Ed. 976. See post, "Payment of Consideration and Entry into Possession," VI, B, 2, b, (1), (c); "Possession and Improvements," VI, B, 2, b, (1), (d).

65. Sufficiency of part performance to warrant specific performance.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 457, 24 L. Ed. 360.

A party seeking to enforce a specific

(b) Payment of Consideration in Money.—A mere payment of the consideration in money is insufficient to remove the bar of the statute.[66]

(c) Payment of Consideration and Entry into Possession.—But payment of the consideration in money, accompanied by an entry into possession under the contract, is such a part performance as will remove the bar of the statute.[67]

(d) Possession and Improvements.—So the entry into possession of the land, and the making of valuable improvements thereon, constitutes such part performance as will take the case out of the operation of the statute.[68]

(2) Contracts of Exchange.—A party seeking to enforce a specific execution of a parol contract for the exchange of lands must bring himself within the same conditions as he would if the contract was for their sale, before he can invoke the aid of a court of equity.[69] Complete performance by one of the parties will prevent the operation of the statute.[70] So possession taken by the parties to the contract in pursuance of the contract, and improvements made upon the respective parcels, constitute a part performance sufficient to take the contract execution of a parol contract for the sale of lands must make full, satisfactory, and indubitable proof: First, of the contract, and of its terms; a proof which must show a contract leaving no jus deliberandi, or locus pœnitentiæ; and which cannot be made out by mere hearsay, or by evidence of the declarations of a party to mere strangers to the transactions, in chance conversation. Second, that the consideration has been paid or tendered. And even the payment of the price in part or in whole, will not, of itself, be sufficient for the interference of a court of equity, if the party have a sufficient remedy at law to recover back the money. Third, that there has been such a part performance of the contract that its rescission would be a fraud on the other party; and could not be fully compensated by recovery of damages in a court of law. Fourth, that delivery of possession has been made in pursuance of the contract, and acquiesced in by the other party; a requisition which is not satisfied by proof of a scrambling and litigious possession. Purcell v. Miner, 4 Wall. 513, 18 L. Ed. 435. See post, "Payment of Consideration in Money," VI, B, 2, b, (1), (b); "Payment of Consideration and Entry into Possession," VI, B, 2, b, (1), (c); "Possession and Improvements," VI, B, 2, b, (1), (d).

Facts held to constitute such part performance of an oral agreement to convey certain real estate to the promisee, in consideration of her taking care of the promisor during the remainder of his life, as to take the case out of the statute of frauds. Brown v. Sutton, 129 U. S. 238, 32 L. Ed. 664. See, also, Whitney v. Hay, 181 U. S. 77, 45 L. Ed. 758.

66. Bar of statute not removed by payment of consideration in money.—Townsend v. Vanderwerker, 160 U. S. 171, 183, 40 L. Ed. 383.

Under the Oklahoma statute, act of 1897, ch. 8, § 7, a part payment of the purchase price of real estate to one who has no authority to convey or to receive the purchase money, will not estop the vendor from setting up the statute of frauds as a defense to an action for the specific performance of the agreement to convey. Halsell v. Renfrow, 202 U. S. 287, 295, 50 L. Ed. 1032.

67. Payment of consideration and entry into possession.—Townsend v. Vanderwerker, 160 U. S. 171, 183, 40 L. Ed. 383.

68. Possession and improvements.—Townsend v. Vanderwerker, 160 U. S. 171, 184, 40 L. Ed. 383.

Improvements made with knowledge that title is in another.—"A court of equity will not relieve an individual from the operation of the statute * * * and impose an equitable lien upon land in favor of one who makes improvements thereon, knowing that the title is in another, especially where the money is expended under an express understanding with reference thereto had with the owner, but will leave the party to the remedies if any, which a court of law provides." Washington Market Co. v. District of Columbia, 172 U. S. 361, 371, 43 L. Ed. 478.

69. Sufficiency of part performance to warrant specific performance.—Purcell v. Miner, 4 Wall. 513, 18 L. Ed. 435. See ante, "Sales," VI, B, 2, b, (1).

70. Complete execution by one party.—C. agreed with W. for an exchange of lands which C. owned in Virginia for certain military lands in Kentucky. W. took possession of the lands in Virginia and sold a part of them. It was held that the complete execution of the contract by C. by conveying to W. the lands he had agreed to give him in exchange prevented the operation of the statute of frauds. Caldwell v. Carrington, 9 Pet. 86, 9 L. Ed. 60.

Full performance by one party and substantial part performance by other.—Where a verbal contract for the exchange of lands has been fully performed by one of the parties, and there has been substantial part performance by the other, it is taken out of the operation of the statute of frauds. Bigelow v. Armes, 108 U. S. 10, 12, 27 L. Ed. 631.

out of the operation of the statute and authorize a decree for its full performance.[71]

(3) Gift Accompanied by Possession and Improvements Made by Donee.—See the title GIFTS.

(4) Agreement of Heirs to Sell Estate and Divide Proceeds.—Where the heirs of an estate agree to sell it and divide the proceeds, a sale and division of the proceeds of part of the estate, will take the agreement out of the statute.[72]

(5) Agreement to Purchase Lands on Joint Account.—Surrender of possession of mining lands to one who agrees to purchase the lands on joint account, does not constitute a sufficient part of the performance of the contract to take it out of the statute of frauds, unless the surrender of possession be made in pursuance of the contract, and be referable to it, and not merely the continuance of a former possession claimed under a different right or title.[73]

c. Effect of Fraud.—The breach of a parol promise or trust as to an interest in land does not constitute such fraud as will take a case out of the statute of frauds.[74] But when the promise has been performed and a conveyance made, the grantee cannot set up the statute as a defense to an action by one in whose favor the land is charged with a trust.[75]

VII. Requirements of the Statute.

A. In General.—To render valid a contract within the operation of the statute of frauds, the acts or conditions which the statute makes essential to its validity must be performed.[76]

B. The Writing—1. WHAT THE TERM WRITING INCLUDES.—The great increase in the use of printing for all forms of instruments, such as deeds, bonds, tickets, tokens for the payment of goods, etc., have seemed to demand that where, either by the common law or by statute, such instruments are required to be in writing, the term "writing" should be held to include printing as well as script.[77]

2. SUFFICIENCY OF THE WRITING—a. In General.—Unless the essential terms of an agreement which is within the statute, can be ascertained from the writing itself, or by reference in it to something else, the writing is not a compliance with the statute;[78] and, if the agreement be thus defective, it cannot

71. Possession and improvements.—Union Pacific R. Co. v. McAlpine, 129 U. S. 305, 312, 32 L. Ed. 673.

72. Sale and division of proceeds of part of the estate.—Riggles v. Erney, 154 U. S. 244, 253, 38 L. Ed. 976.

73. Surrender of possession to one who agrees to purchase on joint account.—Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 587, 594, 34 L. Ed. 1091.

Plaintiffs and defendant located and claimed a load, and plaintiffs were preparing to contest defendant's application for a patent when a bargain was made between them orally, by which it was agreed that plaintiffs should relinquish such possession as they had to defendant in consideration of the latter agreeing to purchase the land upon their joint account. It was held that plaintiff's withdrawal in favor of the defendant and their refraining to prosecute an adverse claim which was never filed, was insufficient to take the case of the statute of frauds. Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 587, 594, 34 L. Ed. 1091.

74. Breach of parol promise or trust.—Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122, 130, 32 L. Ed. 878.

The mere breach of a verbal promise for the purchase of lands does not constitute fraud, and will not justify the interference of a court of equity. "The party who so refuses stands upon the law and has a right to refuse." Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 498, 29 L. Ed. 703.

75. After conveyance, grantee cannot set up statute against one in whose favor land is charged with a trust.—Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122, 130, 32 L. Ed 878. See ante, "Effect of Full Performance," VI, A. And see the titles FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

76. Essential conditions of statute must be performed.—Mahan v. United States 16 Wall. 143, 21 L. Ed. 307.

77. Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457 468, 32 L. Ed. 234.

78. Writing must contain essential terms of agreement.—Williams v. Morris 95 U. S. 444, 456, 24 L. Ed. 360. See post "Contracts Evidenced by Two or More Writings," VII, B, 2, b.

So held in regard to a sale of real estate. Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444 456, 24 L. Ed. 360.

An undertaking to answer for the debt or default of another must, to save it from the operation of the statute of frauds, be be supplied by parol proof.[79] Nor, according to the better opinion, can a written contract falling within the statute be varied by any subsequent agreement of the parties, unless such new agreement is also in writing,[80] and this rule prevails in equity as well as at law.[81] But the form of the writing is not regarded,[82] nor the place of signature, provided it be in the handwriting of the party, or his agent,[83] and furnish evidence of a complete and practicable agreement.[84] And parol evidence is admissible to explain latent ambiguities,[85] and to apply the instrument to the subject matter.[86]

b. Contracts Evidenced by Two or More Writings.—The principle is well established that a complete contract binding under the statute of frauds may be gathered from letters, writings and telegrams between the parties relating to the subject matter of the contract, and so connected with each other that they may be fairly said to constitute one paper relating to the contract.[87] If the return to a fieri facias, written on the writ, is so incomplete as not to constitute a sufficient memorandum of a marshal's sale within the statute of frauds, it cannot be made complete and sufficient by a reference to the private memorandum book in writing, and wholly so. Clarke v. Russell, 3 Dall. 415, 424, 1 L. Ed. 660.

79. Defective agreement cannot be supplied by parol proof.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 456, 24 L. Ed. 360.

To permit a defective agreement to be supplied by parol proof would at once introduce all the mischiefs which the statute was intended to prevent. Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 456, 24 L. Ed. 360.

80. Written contract cannot be varied by subsequent parol agreement.—Swain v. Seamens, 9 Wall. 254, 272, 19 L. Ed. 554; Emerson v. Slater, 22 How. 28, 42, 16 L. Ed. 360. See post, "Contracts Evidenced by Two or More Writings," VII, B, 2, b.

An undertaking to answer for the debt or default of another, cannot be added to or varied by parol testimony. Clarke v. Russell, 3 Dall. 415, 424, 1 L. Ed. 660; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 183, 11 L. Ed. 89.

Nor can it be so far explained by parol testimony as to affect its import, with regard to the supposed undertaking. Clarke v. Russell, 3 Dall. 415, 424, 1 L. Ed. 660.

Although a written agreement between persons not parties to the suit may, as a general rule, be contradicted or explained by oral testimony, this does not apply to an attempt to make good by parol evidence a contract which the statute requires to be made in writing. Stitt v. Huidekopers, 17 Wall. 384, 21 L. Ed. 644.

81. Rule prevails in equity.—Swain v. Seamens, 9 Wall. 254, 272, 19 L. Ed. 554. See ante, "Effect of Statute upon Courts of Equity," V.

82. Form of writing immaterial.—Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 650, 7 L. Ed. 295.

As the statute of frauds does not prescribe the form of a binding agreement, it is sufficient that the natural parts of it appear either expressed, or clearly to be implied. Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 183, 11 L. Ed. 89.

But no trust in relation to real property could be established under the statute of frauds of Iowa in force in 1875, except by an instrument in writing executed in the same manner as a deed of conveyance. Allen v. Withrow, 110 U. S. 119, 129, 28 L. Ed. 90.

83. Place of signature immaterial.—Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 650, 7 L. Ed. 295. See post, "The Signature," VII, B, 2, h.

84. Writing must furnish evidence of a complete and practicable agreement.—Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 650, 7 L. Ed. 295; Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 456, 24 L. Ed. 360.

85. Parol evidence admissible to explain latent ambiguities.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 456, 24 L. Ed. 360.

86. Parol evidence admissible to apply instrument to subject matter.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 456, 24 L. Ed. 360.

"Correspondence and other evidence may be used to ascertain the true import and application of the agreement; by the aid of which extrinsic evidence, the proper construction may be made." Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 183, 11 L. Ed. 89; Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 493, 9 L. Ed. 503; Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626. See post, "Contracts Evidenced by Two or More Writings," VII, B, 2, b.

87. Contracts evidenced by two or more writings.—Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 496, 37 L. Ed. 817; Ryan v. United States, 136 U. S. 68, 83, 34 L. Ed. 447; Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 456, 14 L. Ed. 493.

Thus bought and sold notes, when they correspond and state all the terms of the bargain, are complete and sufficient evidence to satisfy the statute; even though there be no entry in the broker's book, or, what is equivalent, only an unsigned entry. Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 496, 37 L. Ed. 817, quoting Benjamin on Sales (Am. Ed., § 296).

Such is the rule in New York. Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 496, 37 L. Ed. 817.

Ship contracts for the sale of cotton in the form prescribed by the rules and regulations of the New York Cotton Exchange, constitute bought and sold notes, and when taken together, as they should be, constitute a sufficient memorandum in kept by the marshal of his sales, as that is not the kind of written evidence that the statute requires.[88]

c. Designation of Parties.—The writing to be sufficient under the statute must designate the parties to the contract,[89] and it will not support an action by parties not mentioned in it.[90] But where the contract is made by an agent it is not necessary that the writing should disclose the principal.[91]

d. Subject Matter.—To take a contract for the sale of lands out of the statute the memorandum must contain something of an unambiguous character to enable the court to determine what real estate is the subject of the purchase.[92] It must describe or give some means of identifying the land.[93] The terms may be abstract and of a general nature, but they must be sufficient to fit and comprehend the property which is the subject of the transaction; so that with the assistance of external evidence,[94] the description, without being contradicted or writing of the contract between the brokers or their principal and the purchasers of the cotton, to meet the requirements of the statute of frauds. Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 495, 37 L. Ed. 817.

Writings constituting sufficient memorandum of agreement for sale of lands.—Subsequent to a parol agreement for the sale of lands the vendor executed to the vendee a deed which was not acknowledged so as to take effect as a conveyance, nor accepted as such by the vendee, but which contained a full description of the land by metes and bounds. The deed was sent to the vendee's agent by the vendor's agent in a letter demanding payment of part of the price in money, and of the rest in notes, in the terms of the original memorandum. The vendee's agent replied that he had received that letter; and subsequently wrote another letter, inclosing a form of deed substantially like the first one, but with a sufficient certificate of acknowledgment, requesting that this deed might be executed instead of the other, and promising, on receipt of it, to "forward money, notes and old deed." It was held that the letter of the vendee's agent, read in connection with the other writings which had passed between the parties, constituted a sufficient memorandum to take the case out of the statute of frauds. Bayne v. Wiggins, 139 U. S. 210, 214, 35 L. Ed. 144.

Printed bill of parcels subsequently recognized by letter.—"A printed bill or parcels, delivered by the seller, may be a sufficient memorandum within the statute to bind him, especially, if subsequently recognized by a letter to the buyer." Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 456, 14 L. Ed 493.

Ambiguity or abbreviations in memorandum of sale may be explained by printed bill of parcels.—A printed bill of parcels made out and delivered by a seller of goods in the course of the fulfillment of his contract, which is evidenced by a memorandum in writing, if acquiesced in by the buyer, and the goods ordered to be delivered after its receipt, may be referred to for the purpose of explaining any ambiguity or abbreviations in the memorandum. Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 456, 14 L. Ed. 493.

As to collateral papers adduced to supply the defect of signature, see post, "The Signature," VII, B, 2, h.

88. Insufficient memorandum of marshal's sale.—Remington v. Linthicum, 14 Pet. 84, 93, 10 L. Ed. 364.

89. The return to a fieri facias, written on the writ, to constitute a sufficient memorandum of a marshal's sale within the statute, must contain the name of the purchaser. Remington v. Linthicum, 14 Pet. 84, 93, 10 L. Ed. 364.

In order to satisfy the requirements of the statute of frauds of New Hampshire, the memorandum in writing of an agreement for the sale of lands which is signed by the party to be charged, must not only contain a sufficient description of them, together with a statement of the price to be paid therefor, but in that memorandum, or in some paper signed by that party, the other contracting party must be so designated that he can be identified without parol proof. Grafton v. Cummings, 99 U. S. 100, 25 L. Ed. 366.

90. A letter of credit addressed, by mistake, to John and Joseph, and delivered to John and Jeremiah, will not support an action by John and Jeremiah for goods furnished by them to the bearer, upon the faith of the letter of credit. It is not a written contract between the plaintiffs and the defendant, and parol proof cannot be admitted to make it such. It is not a case of ambiguity, or of fraud, or of mistake on the part of the plaintiffs. Grant v. Naylor, 4 Cranch 224, 2 L. Ed. 603.

91. Writing need not disclose principal.—Ford v. Williams, 21 How. 287, 289, 16 L. Ed. 36.

92. Designation of land in contract for sale of real estate.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 455, 24 L. Ed. 360.

93. Bayne v. Wiggins, 139 U. S. 210, 214, 35 L. Ed. 144.

94. In a contract or memorandum of the sale of real estate it is not essential that the description of the property have such particulars and tokens of identification as to render a resort to extrinsic aid entirely needless when the writing comes to be applied to the subject matter. Ryan added to, can be connected with and applied to the very property intended and to the exclusion of all other property.[95] The circumstance that in any case a conflict arises in the outside evidence cannot be allowed the force of proof that the written description is in itself insufficient to satisfy the statute.[96]

e. Consideration.—In an early English case[97] it was held that it is necessary, to escape from the statute of frauds, that the agreement shall contain the consideration for the promise, as well as the promise itself;[98] and it has since been determined that if it contains it, it is wholly immaterial, whether it be stated in express terms, or by necessary implication.[99] This English case has, from its origin, encountered many difficulties, and been matter of serious observation, both at the bar, and on the bench, in England and America. After many doubts, it seems, at last, in England, to have settled down into an approved authority.[1] It has not, however, received a uniform recognition in America; although in several of the states, and particularly in New York,[2] it has, to a limited extent, been adopted into its jurisprudence, as a sound construction of the statute.[3] On the other hand, in Massachusetts, its authority has been directly overruled.[4] The reasoning of the judges in construing the statute of frauds in the cases in which they have decided that the consideration ought to be in writing, turns upon the word "agreement," of which the consideration forms an integral part. This reasoning does not apply to the Virginia statute in which the word "promise" is introduced.[5] The Alabama statute expressly requires that the writing evidencing a special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another, shall express the consideration for such promise.[6] It is competent to show by parol proof that certain figures, in a memorandum of a

v. United States, 136 U. S. 68, 82, 34 L. Ed. 447, quoting Eggleston v. Wagner, 46 Mich. 610, 618.

95. Ryan v. United States, 136 U. S. 68, 83, 34 L. Ed. 447, quoting Eggleston v. Wagner, 46 Mich. 610, 618.

In an account stated by the parties, in the handwriting of the defendant, his name being written by him at the head of the account, a balance was acknowledged to be due by him to the complainant in a bill for a specific performance, and there was the following credit, "by my purchase of your 1-2 E. B. wharf and premises, this day as agreed upon between us, $7.578.63." It was held to be a sufficient memorandum in writing, under the statute of frauds of Maryland, upon which the court could decree a specific performance of the sale of the estate referred to; other matters appearing in evidence, and by the admission of the defendant in his answer, to show the particular property designated by "your 1-2 E. B. wharf and premises." Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 7 L. Ed. 295.

96. Ryan v. United States, 136 U. S. 68, 83, 34 L. Ed. 447, quoting Eggleston v. Wagner, 46 Mich. 610, 618.

97. Wain v. Warlters, 5 East. 10.

98. English doctrine as to expression of consideration.—De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

99. De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

1. De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

2. Adoption of English doctrine into American jurisprudence.—De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

But it is the rule in New York that in the case of a guarantee, or promise collateral to the principal contract, but made at the same time, and becoming an essential ground of the credit given to the principal or direct debtor if there is no consideration other than the original transaction, the plaintiff will be permitted to show that fact, if necessary, by parol proof. De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

3. De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

To take a contract for the sale of lands out of the statute of frauds, the memorandum must mention the price. Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 455, 24 L. Ed. 360.

The return to a fieri facias, written on the writ, to constitute a sufficient memorandum of a marshal's sale within the statute of frauds, must specify the price paid for the property. Remington v. Linthicum, 14 Pet. 84, 93, 10 L. Ed. 364.

4. Rule in Massachusetts.—De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

5. Rule under the Virginia statute.—Violett v. Patton, 5 Cranch 142, 151, 3 L. Ed. 61.

6. Under Alabama statute writing must express consideration.—Code, 1887, § 1732.

The words "value received," or acknowledging the receipt of one dollar, sufficiently express a consideration under this statute. Moses v. Lawrence County Bank, 149 U. S. 298, 303, 37 L. Ed. 743.

A guaranty of the payment of a negotiable promissory note, written by a third person upon the note before its delivery, requires no other consideration to sup-contract for the sale of goods set opposite certain specified numbers of bales and cases of goods, mean cents per yard.[7]

f. Representations or Assurances Concerning Another.—The Massachusetts statute which provides that no action shall be brought to charge any person, upon or by reason of any representation or assurance, made concerning another, unless such representation or assurance be made in writing,[8] has no other effect than to require the representation, on which the defendant is charged, to be in writing.[9]

g. Contracts for the Sale of Goods[10]—(1) What the Memorandum Imports.—A memorandum of a contract for the sale of goods, expressing that the goods have been sold, necessarily imports that they have been bought.[11]

(2) Terms of the Bargain.—The word "bargain," in the statute, means the terms upon which the respective parties contract; and in the sale of goods, the terms of the bargain must be specified in the note or memorandum, and stated with reasonable certainty, so that they can be understood from the writing itself, without having recourse to parol proof; for, unless the essential terms of the sale can be ascertained from the writing itself, or by a reference contained in it to something else, the memorandum is not a compliance with the statute.[12]

(3) Law Supplies Omission of Time or Place of Delivery.—When a memorandum of a contract for the sale of goods contains the names of the sellers, and of the buyer, the commodity and the price, the time of credit, and port it than that which the note upon its face implies to have passed between the original parties, and, therefore, under Alabama statute such a guaranty need not express a consideration. But a guaranty written upon a promissory note, after the note has been delivered and taken effect as a contract, requires a distinct consideration to support it; and if such a guaranty does not express any consideration it is void under the statute. Moses v. Lawrence County Bank, 149 U. S. 298, 302, 37 L. Ed. 743.

7. Parol proof admissible to show meaning of figures.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 456, 14 L. Ed. 493.

8. Rev. Stat., 1836, § 3.

9. Requirements of Massachusetts statute as to representations or assurance concerning another.—Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 194, 15 L. Ed. 205.

When there is a misstatement of facts in regard to the pecuniary ability of an individual or company, and, especially if this be done through interested motives or a fraudulent intent, by reason of which a credit is given and the debt is lost, the facts which conduce to establish the liability must be outside of the writing, and may be established by parol evidence. Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 194, 15 L. Ed. 205.

Thus, where an action was brought against a person for making false representations of the pecuniary condition of a certain party, whereby the plaintiff had been induced to sell goods upon credit, and had incurred loss, evidence conducing to show that the statements of the defendant were false, ought to have been allowed to go to the jury. Iasigi v. Brown, 17 How. 183, 15 L. Ed. 205.

10. As to contracts for the sale of goods evidenced by two or more writings, see ante, "Contracts Evidenced by Two or More Writings," VII, B, 2, b. As to the admission of parol evidence to explain the consideration expressed in a memorandum of a contract for the sale of goods, see ante, "Consideration," VII, B, 2, e.

11. Memorandum imports that goods have been bought.—Butler v. Thomson 92 U. S. 412, 417, 23 L. Ed. 684.

Thus the following memorandum of a contract of sale signed by the agents of the purchaser and the seller, to wit:

"New York, July 10, 1867.

"Sold for Messrs' Butler & Co., Boston, to Messrs. A. A. Thomson & Co., New York, seven hundred and five (705) packs first quality Russia sheet-iron, to arrive at New York, at twelve and three quarters (12 3-4) cents per pound, gold, cash, actual tare.

"Iron due about Sept. 1, '67.

"White & Hazard, Brokers."

is a sufficient memorandum under the statute of frauds to bind both parties. Butler v. Thomson, 92 U. S. 412, 23 L. Ed. 684.

12. Terms of the bargain.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 454, 14 L. Ed. 493.

"This brief note of the contract, however, like all other mercantile contracts, is subject to explanation by reference to the usage and custom of the trade, with a view to get at the true meaning of the parties, as each is presumed to have contracted in reference to them. And although specific and express provisions will control the usage, and exclude any such explanation, yet, if the terms are technical, or equivocal on the face of the instrument, or made so by reference to extraneous circumstances, parol evidence of the usage and practice in the trade is admissible to explain the meaning." Sal-conditions of the delivery, the law will supply the omission of any specified time or place of delivery.[13]

h. The Signature.—Provided the signature to a contract within the statute be in the handwriting of the party or his agent,[14] its place in the writing is immaterial.[15] The signature of one of two partners is a sufficient signing to charge the firm.[16] It is a general rule that collateral papers, adduced to supply the defect of signature of a written agreement under the statute, should on their face sufficiently demonstrate their reference to such agreement without the aid of parol proof.[17] But the rule is not absolute. If there is ground for any doubt in the matter, the general rule should be enforced. But not otherwise.[18] A letter embodying an agreement to pay the debt of another on his making default cannot be added to by written evidence, unless such evidence is signed by the guarantor, or is, by a reference in the letter, adopted as part of it.[19] Under the Louisiana statute which provides that "all sales of immovable property or slaves, shall be made by authentic act, or private signature," the ordinary mark of a person, incapable of writing his name, is a sufficient signature to a bill of sale, to make it admissible in evidence.[20]

3. Purpose for Which Writing Was Created Immaterial in Equity.—Courts of equity are not particular with regard to the direct and immediate purpose for which the written evidence of the contract was created.[21]

4. Verbal Promise Subsequently Reduced to Writing.—Where a promise, though originally verbal, is subsequently, with full knowledge of the facts, reduced to writing, it is not within the statute.[22]

C. Receipt and Acceptance of Goods Sold[23]—1. What Constitutes Receipt and Acceptance.—A purchaser's receipt and acceptance of goods sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds may be constructive.[24] In order to take mon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 454, 14 L. Ed. 493.

13. Law supplies omission of time or place of delivery.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 455, 14 L. Ed. 493.

14. Under the New York statute of frauds a contract for the sale of goods signed by the agent of both parties, the buyer and the seller, is a valid contract, obligatory upon both the parties thereto. Butler v. Thomson, 92 U. S. 412, 417, 23 L. Ed. 684.

Extraneous evidence admissible to show that signer acted only as an agent.—Extraneous evidence is admissible to show that a person whose name is affixed to a contract with the statute, acted only as an agent, thereby enabling the principal either to sue or be sued in his own name; and this, though it purports on its face to have been made by the agent himself, and the principal is not named. Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 454, 14 L. Ed. 493. But see Grafton v. Cummings, 99 U. S. 100, 111, 25 L. Ed. 366.

15. Place of signature immaterial.—Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 650, 7 L. Ed. 295.

16. Signature of one of two partners binds firm.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 454, 14 L. Ed. 493. See the title PARTNERSHIP.

It was and it is competent to show, by parol proof, that the partner so signing signed for the firm. Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 455, 14 L. Ed. 493.

17. Collateral papers adduced to supply defect of signature.—Beckwith v. Talbot, 95 U. S. 289, 292, 24 L. Ed. 496.

18. Beckwith v. Talbot, 95 U. S. 289, 292, 24 L. Ed. 496.

Where there is no ground for doubt, the enforcement of the rule would aid, instead of discouraging, fraud. Beckwith v. Talbot, 95 U. S. 289, 292, 24 L. Ed. 496.

19. Written evidence adding to letter embodying agreement.—Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 183, 11 L. Ed. 89.

20. Ordinary mark of person incapable of writing sufficient signature under Louisiana statute.—Zacharie v. Franklin, 12 Pet. 151, 162, 9 L. Ed. 1035.

21. Purpose for which writing was created immaterial in equity.—Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 651, 7 L. Ed. 295.

"It is written evidence which the statute requires, and a note or letter, and even in one case, a letter, the subject of which was to annul the contract, on a ground really not unreasonable (1 Atk. 12; 1 Sch. & Lef. 22), has been held to bring a case within the provisions of the statute." Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 651, 7 L. Ed. 295.

22. Verbal promise subsequently reduced to writing.—Fitzpatrick v. Flannagan, 106 U. S. 648, 659, 27 L. Ed. 211.

23. As to fraudulent and voluntary conveyances of personal property, see the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES.

24. Receipt and acceptance may be constructive.—Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. [illegible], 24 L. Ed. 821.

a contract out of the operation of the statute, there must be acts of such a character as to unequivocally place the property within the power and under the exclusive dominion of the buyer as absolute owner, discharged of all lien for the price.[25] Thus there must be a delivery by the vendor with an intention of vesting the right of possession in the vendee, and there must be an actual acceptance by the latter with the intent of taking possession as owner. This rule can only be satisfied by something done subsequent to the sale unequivocally indicating the mutual intentions of the parties. Mere words are not sufficient.[26] Where, by the terms of the contract, the sale is to be for cash or any other condition precedent to the buyer's acquiring title in the goods be imposed, or the goods be at the time of the alleged receipt not fitted for delivery according to the contract, or anything remain to be done by the seller to perfect the delivery, such fact will be generally conclusive that there was no receipt by the buyer.[27] The receipt and acceptance may be complete although the terms of the contract are in dispute.[28] But the act or acts relied on as constituting a receipt and acceptance, to satisfy the statute, must be such as definitely establish that the relation of vendor and vendee exists.[29] Receipt and acceptance of a substantial part of the goods will be as operative as a receipt and acceptance of the whole.[30] The foregoing 25. What acts constitute receipt and acceptance.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 49, 31 L. Ed. 337.

26. Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 49, 31 L. Ed. 337.

"In many of the cases the test for determining whether there has been an actual receipt by the purchaser has been to inquire whether the vendor has lost his lien. Receipt implies delivery, and it is plain that so long as vendor has not delivered there can be no actual receipt by vendee." Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 50, 31 L. Ed. 337, quoting with approval Benjamin on Sales, § 187.

"The subject was placed in a very clear light by Holroyd, J., in the decision in Baldey v. Parker, 2 B. & C. 37: 'Upon a sale of specific goods for a specific price, by parting with the possession, the seller parts with his lien. The statute contemplates such a parting with the possession, and therefore, as long as the seller preserves his control over the goods so as to retain his lien, he prevents the vendee from accepting and receiving them as his own within the meaning of the statute. No exception is known in the whole series of decisions to the proposition here enounced, and it is safe to assume as a general rule that whenever no fact has been proven showing an abandonment by the vendor of his lien, no actual receipt by the purchaser has taken place. This has been as strongly insisted upon in the latest as in the earliest cases." Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 51, 31 L. Ed. 337, quoting with approval Benjamin on Sales, § 187.

"Where the acts of the buyer are equivocal, and do not lead irresistibly to the conclusion that there has been a transfer and acceptance of the possession, the cases qualify the inferences to be drawn from them, and hold the contract to be within the statute." Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 49, 31 L. Ed. 337, quoting Wright, J., in Shindler v. Houston, 1 N. Y. (1 Comstock) 261, 4 Am. Dec. 316.

27. Facts generally conclusive that there was no receipt by buyer.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 51, 31 L. Ed. 337, quoting with approval Browne on the Statute of Frauds, § 317a.

28. Receipt and acceptance may be complete though terms of contract in dispute.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 54, 31 L. Ed. 337.

"Receipt and acceptance by some unequivocal act, sufficiently proven to have taken place under some contract of sale, is sufficient to take the case out of the prohibition of the statute, leaving the jury to ascertain and find from the testimony what terms of sale were actually agreed on." Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 54, 31 L. Ed. 337.

29. That relation of vendor and vendee exists must be definitely established.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 55, 31 L. Ed. 337.

"The statute does not mean that the thing which is to dispense with the writing is to take the place of all the terms of the contract, but that the acceptance is to establish the broad fact of the relation of vendor and vendee." Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 54, 31 L. Ed. 337, quoting Williams, J., in Tompkinson v. Straight, 17 C. B. 697.

30. Receipt and acceptance of part of the goods.—Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 566, 24 L. Ed. 821.

"Where goods are purchased in several parcels, to be paid for at a future day, the whole, within the meaning of the statute of frauds, constitutes but one contract, and the delivery of part to the purchaser is sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the statute." Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 565, 24 L. Ed. 821.

But the delivery in such a case, in order that it may have that effect, must be made in pursuance of the contract. Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 566, 24 L. Ed. 821.

principles have been applied by the supreme court to the facts of particular cases.[31]

2. Time of Acceptance.—Acceptance may either precede the reception of the articles or may accompany their reception.[32]

3. Evidence—a. Burden of Proof.—That there has been an acceptance, or that the buyer has conducted himself in regard to the goods as owner, is to be proved by the party setting up the contract.[33]

b. Admissibility.—Parol evidence is admissible to show what the circumstances were attending the contract, and to show the receipt and acceptance, in whole or in part, of the goods purchased.[34] To show such receipt and acceptance any acts of the parties indicative of ownership by the vendee may be given in evidence.[35]

4. Province of Court and Jury.—As a general rule it is a question for the jury whether, under all the circumstances, the acts which the buyer does or forbears to do amount to a receipt and acceptance within the terms of the statute.[36] So it is proper to leave to the jury the question whether the purchaser acquired possession under the sale.[37] But where the facts in relation to a contract of sale alleged to be within the statute are not in dispute, it belongs to the

31. Purchaser of interest in stage company put into possession.—C. bought an undivided one-third interest in a stage company, intending that S. should have one-half of the one-third, and, before the purchase, informed S. of such intention. At the time there was an unsettled account between C. and S., in respect of services rendered by S. to C., and of certain business in which they were both interested. After the purchase, C agreed verbally with S. that S. should have the one-sixth at the price C. had paid for it, any amount due by C. to S. to be applied towards payment for the one-sixth, the ownership of it by S. to commence at once. Afterwards, the four owners of the property, of whom S. and C. were two, executed a paper, under seal, in which the interests of the four were defined, S. and C. being stated to be the owners of one-third; and all, including C., thereafter recognized S. as owning one-sixth, subject, as between S. and C., to the liability of S. to reinburse C. what he had paid for such one-sixth. It was held that the contract was executed, and S. was put in possession, and therefore the statute of frauds, 29 Car. 2, ch. 3, § 17, did not apply. Huntley v. Huntley, 114 U. S. 394, 29 L. Ed. 130.

Facts not constituting receipt and acceptance of securities.—In an action to recover the price of certain securities alleged to have been sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, facts held not to constitute such a receipt and acceptance of the securities by the defendant as to take the alleged contract out of the statute of frauds. Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 56, 31 L. Ed. 337.

Parol agreement for sale of cotton not removed from operation of statute.—Under article 4 of chapter xliv of the Revised Code of Mississippi, which enacts, "That no contract for the sale of any personal property, etc., shall be allowed to be good and valid except the buyer shall receive part of the personal property or shall actually pay or secure the purchase money, or part thereof, or unless some note or memorandum in writing of the bargain be made and signed by the party to be charged by such contract or his agent thereunto lawfully authorized," a parol agreement for the sale of cotton in payment of a mortgage debt, cannot be sustained, where, though the price of the cotton per pound was fixed, the number of pounds was not definitely ascertained, nor any payment indorsed on the mortgage, nor any receipt given, nor any memorandum in writing made, nor any present consideration paid, nor any change of possession affected, nor any delivery, either actual or symbolic, made. Mahan v. United States, 16 Wall. 143, 21 L. Ed. 307.

32. Time of acceptance.—Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 566, 24 L. Ed. 821.

33. Burden of proof is on party setting up contract.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 50, 31 L. Ed. 337.

34. Parol evidence admissible to show receipt and acceptance.—Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 566, 24 L. Ed. 821.

35. Acts of parties indicative of ownership by vendee admissible.—Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 563, 24 L. Ed. 821.

Conduct, acts and declarations of the purchaser may be given in evidence to show receipt and acceptance. Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 563, 24 L. Ed. 821.

36. Whether buyer's acts amount to receipt and acceptance generally a question for jury.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 48, 31 L. Ed. 337; Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 563, 24 L. Ed. 821.

37. Question whether purchaser acquired possession under sale is for jury.—Porter v. Graves, 104 U. S. 171, 175, 26 L. Ed. 691.

Where goods were purchased in several parcels to be paid for at a future day the court to determine their legal effect.[38] And so it is for the court to withhold the facts from the jury when they are not such as can in law warrant finding an acceptance, and this includes cases where, though the court might admit that there was a scintilla of evidence tending to show an acceptance, they would still feel bound to set aside a verdict finding an acceptance on that evidence.[39]

VIII. Effect of Statute upon the Contract.

Contracts not in conformity with the statute of frauds are only voidable and not illegal.[40] But such a contract cannot be enforced directly or collaterally. It confers no right and creates no obligation as between the parties to it.[41]

IX. Pleading.

Proof Must Conform to Pleading.—Where the attempt is to take the case out of the statute upon the ground of part performance, the party making the attempt must show by clear and satisfactory proof the existence of the contract as laid in his pleading, and the act of part performance must be of the identical contract which he has in that manner set up and alleged.[42] question whether the delivery of part of the goods to the purchaser was made in pursuance of the contract is one for the jury; but if they find that question in the affirmative, then it follows that the case is taken out of the statute. Garfield v. Paris, 96 U. S. 557, 566, 24 L. Ed. 821.

38. Court determines legal effect of facts not in dispute.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 48, 31 L. Ed. 337.

39. When court will withhold facts from jury.—Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, 48, 31 L. Ed. 337.

In general, as to questions of law and fact, see the title QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.

40. Contracts not conforming to statute only voidable.—Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 497, 37 L. Ed. 817.

41. Contract not conforming to statute is unenforcible.—Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 496, 29 L. Ed. 703.

The Pennsylvania statute does not make a parol agreement for the sale of lands, void; though it restricts the operation of the agreement, as to the acquisition of an interest in the land, and no title in fee simple can be derived under it. But, an action will lie to recover damages for the nonperformance of such an agreement. Bell v. Andrews, 4 Dall. 152, 1 L. Ed. 779. See the title VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

Under the statute of frauds in Indiana, which enacts in "Section 10. That no assignment of goods by way of mortgage shall be valid against any other person than the parties thereto, when such goods are not delivered to the mortgagee, or assignee, and retained by him, unless such assignment or mortgage shall be duly recorded;" and in "Section 21. That the question of fraudulent intent in all cases shall be deemed a question of fact;" a mortgagor of chattels personal may, if the transaction be fair and the mortgage made by him be duly recorded, retain possession of personal chattels. But the effect of the statute is not to make every recorded mortgage, which prior to the statute would have been held fraudulent in law, prima facie valid. The recording of the mortgage contemplated by the statute was meant as a substitute for possession, but was not meant to protect a mortgage from all illegal stipulations contained in it. Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 22 L. Ed. 758.

Hence, where a trading firm in a city in Illinois owing money evidenced by a series of notes, coming due from time to time for some months in advance, made a mortgage of their stock of goods, the mortgage containing this clause: "And it is hereby expressly agreed that until default shall be made in the payment of some one of said notes, or some paper in renewal thereof, the parties of the first part may remain in possession of said goods, wares and merchandise, and may sell the same as heretofore, and supply their places with other goods, and the goods substituted by purchase for those sold shall, upon being put into said store, or any other store in said city where the same may be put for sale by said parties of the first part, be subjected to the lien of this mortgage;" the instrument then concluding with powers to the mortgagee, upon any default, to have the right to enter into said store of the firm and take possession of a sufficient amount of goods to satisfy, pay, and discharge all the paper due, and have full power and authority, upon ten days' public notice, to sell at public auction such amounts of said goods as should be necessary to pay said paper, it was held that the mortgage was void. Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 22 L. Ed. 758. See the title CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 699.

42. Proof must conform to pleading.—Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 456, 24 L. Ed. 360.

"It is not enough that the act of part performance is evidence of some agreement; but it must be unequivocal and satisfactory evidence of the particular

When Defense of Statute Is Available on Demurrer.—Where it appears on the face of a bill, that an agreement concerning an interest in lands set up by complainant is in parol, the defense of the statute of frauds may be taken advantage of on demurrer.[43]

Defense of Statute Available under Denial of Contract.—A denial in the answer,[44] or in the replication,[45] of the making of a contract within the statute, is as effective for letting in the defense of the statute as if the statute had been specifically pleaded.

When one person pays money or performs services for another upon a contract void under the statute of frauds, he may recover the money upon a count for money paid to the use of defendant at his request, or recover for the services upon the quantum meruit count. But in such cases the suit should be brought upon the implied promise.[46] agreement charged in the bill or answer." Williams v. Morris, 95 U. S. 444, 457, 24 L. Ed. 360.

43. When defense of statute available on demurrer.—Randall v. Howard, 2 Black 585, 17 L. Ed. 269.

44. Denial of agreement in answer will let in defense of statute.—Where an agreement for the sale of lands, alleged in a bill in equity praying for specific performance, is denied by the answer, the defendant, where there is no written evidence of such agreement, may, at the hearing, insist on the statute of frauds as effectually as if it had been pleaded. May v. Sloan, 101 U. S. 231, 25 L. Ed. 797.

45. The denial in the replication of the plaintiff of the making of a contract which is within the statute of frauds, and on which the defendant bases his cross action, is as effective for letting in the defense of the statute as if the statute had been specifically pleaded. Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 495, 29 L. Ed. 703.

46. Pleading in actions to recover money paid or for services performed under contract within statute.—Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 497, 29 L. Ed. 703.

FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES.

BY JAMES F. MINOR.

I. Conflict of Laws, 474.

II. Powers Exercisable by Debtor over His Property, 474.

III. Transfers or Alienations Made or Obtained with Intent to Hinder, Delay or Defraud Creditors, 475.

A. Statutory Provisions, 475.
1. Statute of 13th Elizabeth, 475.
2. Construction, 476.
3. Object of Statute, 476.

B. Character and Form of Transfer, 476.
1. Connected but Distinct Conveyances, 476.
2. Absolute Sale and Assignment Distinguished, 477.
3. Fraudulent Entry of Public Lands, 477.
4. Payment of Life Insurance Premium or Transfer of Policy, 477.
5. Fraudulent Confession of Judgment, 478.
6. Fraudulent Execution or Judicial Sale, 478.
7. Property Not Belonging to Debtor, or Exempt, 478.

C. Elements and Badges of Fraud, 479.
1. Intent in General, 479.
a. Of Grantor, 479.
b. Mutuality of Fraudulent Intent, or Notice, Essential, 480.
c. Intent to Defraud Future Creditors, 482.
2. Conveyances Fraudulent on Their Face, 482.
3. Concealment, 483.
4. Confidential Relations, 483.
a. In General, 483.
b. Brothers, 484.
c. Husband and Wife, 484.
(1) Conveyance to Wife, 484.
(a) Validity in General, 484.
(b) Presumption, 484.
(c) Consideration, 486.
(d) Intermediate Conveyance to Third Party, 487.
(e) Marriage Settlements, 487.
(2) Personal Liability of Wife, 487.
d. Parent and Child, 487.
5. Employment of Grantor as Grantee's Agent or Attorney, 488.
6. Giving Bond to Pay Value if Set Aside, 489.
7. Insolvency of Grantor, 489.
8. Preference to Creditors, 489.
a. Lawful in Absence of Statute, 489.
b. Prohibition by Statute, 491
c. What Constitutes a Preference, 494.
d. Promise to Give Preference, 495.
e. Promise Not to Give Preferences, 495.
f. Preference of Wife, 495.
g. Preference of Child, 495.
h. Preference of Surety on Official Bond, 496.
9. Retention of Possession or Reservation of Benefits by Grantor 496.
a. Retention of Possession, 496.

(1) In General, 496.
(2) Statutory Provisions, 499.
(3) As Security for Price, 500.
b. Reservation of Benefit, 501.
10. Want or Inadequacy of Consideration, 502.
a. Want of Consideration, 502.
b. Inadequacy of Consideration, 503.
c. Burden of Proof, 505.

IV. Voluntary Conveyances, 505.
A. Validity in General, 505.
B. Validity as to Creditors, 506.
1. In General, 506.
2. Voluntary Conveyance to Wife, 508.
3. Voluntary Conveyance to Child, 509.
C. Validity as to Purchasers, 510.

V. Operation and Effect, 510.
A. Effect of Fraud Generally, 510.
B. As to Parties, 511.
1. Validity, 511.
2. In Pari Delicto Rule, 511.
3. Personal Liability of Grantee, 513.
C. As to Creditors and Purchasers, 514.
D. Curing Invalidity, 516.
E. Fraudulent Deed as Color of Title, 517.

VI. Remedies, 517.
A. Law and Equity Remedies Compared, 517.
1. When Jurisdiction Concurrent, 517.
2. Creditors' Bill or Suit to Set Aside, 518.
3. Action for Damages, 520.
B. Garnishment, 520.
C. Injunction, 520.
D. Parties, 521.
1. Parties Plaintiff, 521.
2. Parties Defendant, 521.
E. Pleading, 522.
1. Allegation of Fraud, 522.
2. Denial of Fraud, 522.
F. Evidence, 522.
1. Presumptions and Burden of Proof, 522.
2. Admissibility, 523.
a. Showing Knowledge or Intent of Parties, 523.
b. Parol Evidence Generally, 524.
c. Declarations and Admissions, 525.
d. Res Gestæ, 526.
e. Negative and Circumstantial Evidence, 525.
3. Weight and Sufficiency, 526.
a. Amount of Evidence Necessary, 526.
b. Effect of Answer Denying Fraud, 527.
c. Questions for Jury, 528.
d. Grantor's Declarations, 530.
G. Instructions, 530.
H. Decree, and Measure of Relief Afforded, 530.
1. Decree Entered on Verdict as Conclusion of Law Thereon, 530.
2. Personal Decree, 530.
3. Sale and Distribution, 531.
I. Laches and Limitations, 532.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 333; ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 599; BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 792; BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 1; CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 699; COMPROMISE AND SETTLEMENT, vol. 3, p. 980; CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1099; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1; CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 621; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 861; CREDITORS' SUITS, vol. 5, p. 22; CURTESY, vol. 5, p. 155; DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 245; DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 335; DOWER, vol. 5, p. 487; EQUITY, vol. 5, 803; EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, ante, p. 119; FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394; FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, ante, p. 451; INSOLVENCY; LIENS; MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST; MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES; NOTICE; PARTNERSHIP; PLEADING; PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY; RAILROADS; SALES; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

By corporation, see the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 5, pp. 639, et seq.; 729, 741; OFFICERS AND AGENTS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS; RAILROADS; STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS. As act of bankruptcy, see the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 809. As preference in bankruptcy, see the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, pp. 933, 950. As color of title, see the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION. To defeat decree for alimony, see the title DIVORCE AND ALIMONY, vol. 5, p. 426. To defeat confiscation acts, see the title WAR. As to conveyances, etc., in violation of bankruptcy and insolvent laws, see the titles BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 933, et seq.; INSOLVENCY. As to effect of bankruptcy on proceedings to set aside conveyance, see the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 954. As to estoppel of fraudulent grantee to claim title to land conveyed, see the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913. As to fraudulent devise or bequest, see the title WILLS. As to fraudulent loans, see the title LOANS. As to marriage contracts and settlements, see the title MARRIAGE CONTRACTS AND SETTLEMENTS. As to rules of decision in federal courts, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1087. Frequent reference should be made to the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394, as many cases supporting general principles treated there have not been repeated here.

I. Conflict of Laws.

The subject of conflict of laws is treated elsewhere.[1]

II. Powers Exercisable by Debtor over His Property.

It would seem to be a consequence of that absolute power which a man possesses over his own property, that he may make any disposition of it which does not interfere with the existing rights of others, and such disposition, if it be fair and real, will be valid. The limitations on this power are those only which are prescribed by law.[2]

1. Conflict of laws.—See the title CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1061, et seq.

As to transfer of insurance policy, see post, "Payment of Life Insurance Premiums or Transfer of Policy," III, B, 4. As to preference, see post, "Prohibition by Statute," III, C, 8, b.

2. Powers exercisable by debtor over his property.—Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 242, 5 L. Ed. 603; Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496, 499, 30 L. Ed. 1126; Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 213, 6 L. Ed. 454.

A debtor, even when financially embarrassed, may in good faith compromise his liabilities, sell or transfer property in payment of debts, or mortgage or pledge it as security for debts, or create a lien upon it by means even of a judgment confessed in favor of his creditor. Such transactions often take place in the ordinary course of business, when the debtor has no purpose, in the near future, of discontinuing business or of going into bankruptcy and surrendering control of all his property. A debtor is not bound to succumb under temporary reverses in his affairs, and has the right, acting in good faith, to use his property in any mode he chooses, in order to avoid a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors, until he recognizes the fact that he can no longer go on in business, and determines to yield the dominion of his ntire estate. White v. Cotzhausen, 129 U. S. 329, 342, 32 L. Ed. 677. See post, "Preference to Creditors," III, C, 8; "Voluntary Conveyances," IV.

III. Transfers or Alienations Made or Obtained with Intent to Hinder, Delay or Defraud Creditors.

A. Statutory Provisions—1. STATUTE OF 13TH ELIZABETH.—The statute of 13th Elizabeth, c. 5, against fraudulent conveyances has been universally adopted in American law as the basis of our jurisprudence on that subject (Story Eq. Jur., § 353), and re-enacted in terms, or nearly so, or with some change of language, by the legislatures of the several states.[3] And this statute was merely declaratory of the common law.[4]

"Unquestionably, the claims of morality and justice, as well as the legitimate interests of creditors, require there should be protection against those acts of an insolvent or dishonest debtor that are contrary to the prescriptions of law, and are unfaithful and injurious. But the legislature must determine upon the remedies appropriate for this end; and the difficulty of the subject is evinced by the diversity in the systems of different states for adjusting the relations of creditor and debtor, consistently with equity and humanity. Bankrupt and insolvent laws, laws allowing of attachment and sequestration of the debtor's estate, and for the revocation of fraudulent conveyances, creditors' bills, and criminal prosecutions for fraud or conspiracy, are some of the modes that have been adopted for the purpose." Adler v. Fenton, 24 How. 407, 412, 16 L. Ed. 696. See post, "Construction," III, A, 2. See, generally, the titles BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 933, et seq.; INSOLVENCY.

Application of payments.—See the title PAYMENT.

The right of a debtor in the first instance to apply his payments wherever his funds are not specifically bound, is universally admitted, and the power of the debtor to apply his payments is coextensive with that of the creditor. This principle has, it is believed, never been denied. Leggett v. Humphreys, 21 How. 66, 77, 16 L. Ed. 50; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556, 5 L. Ed. 522; Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 10 L. Ed. 903. See post, "Preference to Creditors," III, C, 8.

Exchanges.—See the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 947.

Property subject to power of appointment.—See the title POWERS.

Equitable estates.—See the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

3. Statute of 13th Elizabeth.—Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 685, 33 L. Ed. 696; Parish v. Murphree, 13 How. 92, 14 L. Ed. 65; Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 280, 32 L. Ed. 429; Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552; United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 448, 45 L. Ed. 938. See Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 39 L. Ed. 289. For the terms of this statute, see Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 242, 5 L. Ed. 603.

Alabama.—See Parish v. Murphree, 13 How. 92, 14 L. Ed. 65.

District of Columbia.—The statute of 13 Eliz., ch. 5, is in force in the District of Columbia. Mattingly v. Nye, 8 Wall. 370, 19 L. Ed. 380; Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. 264, 280, 8 L. Ed. 120. See, also, Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 242, 5 L. Ed. 603, quoting the statute.

Indiana.—In Indiana the statute of 13th Elizabeth has been adopted, with two provisions engrafted on it: one as to recordation of chattel mortgages (see the title CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 729, et seq.), and the other "that the question of fraudulent intent in all cases shall be deemed a question of fact." Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 520, 22 L. Ed. 758.

Missouri.—See Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260, 263, 27 L. Ed. 147.

North Carolina.—See Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 280, 32 L. Ed. 429.

Oregon and Virginia.—Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 594, 36 L. Ed. 552; Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 685, 33 L. Ed. 696.

In Oregon it is further provided that the question of fraudulent intent in all cases arising under that section shall be "deemed a question of fact, and not of law," and that the section "shall not be construed in any manner to affect or impair the title of a purchaser for a valuable consideration, unless it shall appear that such purchaser had previous notice of the fraudulent intent of his immediate grantor, or of the fraud rendering void the title of such grantor." 2 Hill's Ann. Laws Oregon, 1887, pp. 1373, 1374, §§ 3059, 3062, 3063. Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552.

And similarly in Virginia.—Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 685, 33 L. Ed. 696, quoting Va. Code 1873, p. 896, c. 114, § 1. See, also, United States Bank v. Lee, 13 Pet. 107, 10 L. Ed. 81.

Texas.—See Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 312, 18 L. Ed. 786; Chandler v. Von Roeder, 24 How. 224, 227, 16 L. Ed. 633.

Wisconsin.—See Summer v. Hicks, 2 Black 532, 533, 17 L. Ed. 355.

4. Declaratory of the common law.—"The statute of Elizabeth was declaratory of the common law. In the absence of such legislation the common law

2. Construction.—A liberal construction should be given to the clause of the Virginia statute, for the suppression of fraud; this is the well-established rule in the construction of the statute of Elizabeth, which the first section of the Virginia statute substantially adopts.[5]

Rule of Decision in Federal Court as to Construction.—See the title Courts, vol. 4, pp. 1087, 1120. As to construction as affecting assignments for benefit of creditors, see the title Courts, vol. 4, p. 1062.

3. Object of Statute.—The object of the statute of Elizabeth was to prevent debtors from dealing with their property in any way to the prejudice of their creditors; but dealing with that which creditors, irrespective of such dealing, could not have touched, is within neither the letter nor the spirit of the statute.[6]

B. Character and Form of Transfer—1. Connected but Distinct Conveyances.—Where two conveyances to different grantees are assailed as fraudulent, undoubtedly the rule is that a transaction void in part for fraud in fact is entirely void, but here the transactions were so distinct that while the circumstances surrounding the one should be given due weight so far as they may bear upon the other, a result adverse to the validity of the one does not necessarily compel a like result as to the other.[7] would have accomplished the same results. Twyne's case (3 Coke, 80. S. C. 1); Smith's L. C. 1; Codagan v. Kennet (Cowp., 434); Wheaton v. Sexton, 1 Amer. L. C. 68." Summer v. Hicks, 2 Black 532, 534, 17 L. Ed. 355; Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 316, 2 L. Ed. 118; United States Bank v. Lee, 13 Pet. 107, 10 L. Ed. 81; Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 312, 18 L. Ed. 786; Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. 178, 198, 9 L. Ed. 1046; Baker v. Humphrey, 101 U. S. 494, 499, 25 L. Ed. 1065.

5. Construction.—United States Bank v. Lee, 13 Pet. 107, 10 L. Ed. 81.

"The various constructions which have been given to the statutes of frauds by the courts of England and of this country, would seem to have been influenced, to some extent, from an attempt to give a literal application of the words of the statute instead of its intent. No provision can be drawn so as to define minutely the circumstances under which fraud may be committed. If an individual, being in debt, shall make a voluntary conveyance of his entire property, it would be a clear case of fraud; but this rule would not apply if such a conveyance be made by a person free from all embarrassments and without reference to future responsibilities. But between these extremes numberless cases arise, under facts and circumstances which must be minutely examined, to ascertain their true character. To hold that a settlement of a small amount, by an individual in independent circumstances, and which, if known to the public, would not affect his credit, is fraudulent, would be a perversion of the statute. It did not intend thus to disturb the ordinary and safe transactions in society, made in good faith, and which, at the time, subjected creditors to no hazard. The statute designed to prohibit frauds, by protecting the rights of creditors. If the facts and circumstances show clearly a fraudulent intent, the conveyance is void against all creditors, past or future. Where a voluntary conveyance is made by an individual free from debt, with a purpose of committing a fraud on future creditors, it is void under the statute. And if a settlement be made, without any fraudulent intent, yet if the amount thus conveyed impaired the means of the grantor so as to hinder or delay his creditors, it is as to them void." Parish v. Murphree, 13 How. 92, 98, 14 L. Ed. 65. See ante, "Powers Exercisable by Debtor over His Property," II.

6. Object of statute.—Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 203, 32 L. Ed. 370.

"In the view of the law, credit is extended in reliance upon the evidence of the ability of the debtor to pay, and in confidence that his possessions will not be diminished to the prejudice of those who trust him. This reliance is disappointed, and this confidence abused, if he divests himself of his property by giving it away after he has obtained credit." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 204, 32 L. Ed. 370. See post, "Property Not Belonging to Debtor, or Exempt," III, B. 7.

7. Connected but distinct conveyances.—The instruments were several; the grantees, the property conveyed, the alleged consideration, were all different and disconnected; and although the grantee in one, which was otherwise valid, acted for his brother the grantee in the other in obtaining the deed, yet it is not held that error was committed in declining to treat the conveyances as constituting parts of a single transaction and rendering the former a cograntee with the latter. Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 598, 36 L. Ed. 552.

Previous illegal deed of trust.—The fact that a debtor in Mississippi had previously

2. Absolute Sale and Assignment Distinguished.—An absolute sale in full satisfaction of an existing debt is to be distinguished from an assignment to secure payment of same.[8]

3. Fraudulent Entry of Public Lands.—Where a bill in chancery alleges that certain lands were entered in the name of a third person, with a view to cover them from the creditors of the person who had entered them, and this allegation is denied in the answer and not sustained by proof, the bill pro tanto must be dismissed.[9]

4. Payment of Life Insurance Premiums or Transfer of Policy.—Policies of insurance effected without fraud, directly and on their face for the benefit of the wife, and payable to her, are not fraudulent as to creditors. The fraud which would invalidate is actual fraud participated in by all parties, and not fraud inferred from the mere fact of insolvency of insured at the time.[10] This is true whether the policy was originally taken out by the wife, and pre-executed a trust deed, with a provision probably making it constructively fraudulent, assuming that the conveyance in trust was of that character, according to the law of Mississippi, it does not follow that a subsequent sale and transfer, followed by delivery of possession, is tainted by the vice of the original transaction. Such objection assumes that the whole transaction, from the beginning, was free from actual and intended fraud, and was meant to be a mode of securing and paying an actual debt, in good faith, without any design injurious to other creditors, beyond that implied in obtaining a preference, which is not forbidden by law. In this view, the admission that the conveyance in trust was illegal does not affect the subsequent sale, which, on the contrary, being free from objection, on account of its own nature and form, served to remedy the defects in the original security. It was quite competent for the parties to rescind and cancel the first conveyance, and unite in the execution of another, free from objection. Stewart v. Dunham, 115 U. S. 61, 66, 29 L. Ed. 329.

Marriage settlement.—See the title MARRIAGE CONTRACTS AND SETTLEMENTS.

8. Sale and assignment distinguished.—It was held in Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 372, 33 L. Ed. 373, that the transfer in question was not an assignment to secure payment of the debt of the debtor to the creditor, but it purports upon its face to be, and was treated by the parties throughout as, an absolute sale of those notes and accounts in full satisfaction of the debts due by the insolvent firm, and was to be treated as such, in its subsequent consideration. See, generally, the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 599.

9. Fraudulent entry of public lands.—McCoy v. Rhodes, 11 How. 131, 13 L. Ed. 634.

But where the party entered the lands in his own name, and afterwards conveyed them to this third person, but the deed to the third person was not recorded until after a judgment had been obtained by a creditor, and recorded in the parish where the land lies, against the party who made the entry, it will not be sufficient merely to set up in the answer that this third person furnished the money with which to purchase the lands. The equity must be proved. McCoy v. Rhodes, 11 How. 131, 13 L. Ed. 634. See, also, the title PUBLIC LANDS.

10. Payment of life insurance premiums.—Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 208, 32 L. Ed. 370.

Where a married man paid insurance premiums out of his own money, when insolvent, and the contracts covered his wife and children's insurable interest, the creditors, or the administrators as representing them, cannot take away from these dependent ones that which was expressly secured to them in the event of the death of their natural supporter. The interest insured was neither the debtor's nor his creditors'. The contracts were not payable to the debtor, or his representatives, or his creditors. No fraud on the part of the wife, or the children, or the insurance company is pretended. In no sense was there any gift or transfer of the debtor's property, unless the amounts paid as premiums are to be held to constitute such gift or transfer, which is not the case. Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 208, 32 L. Ed. 370.

But, even though he paid this money out of his own funds when insolvent, and if such payment were within the statute of Elizabeth, this would not give the creditors any interest in the proceeds of the policies, which belonged to the beneficiaries for the reasons already stated. Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 209, 32 L. Ed. 370.

By the laws of Connecticut an insurance policy for the benefit of a married woman enures to her separate use or her children,' unless the annual premium exceed $300, in which case any excess based on a larger premium enures to the benefit of the creditors of the person paying the premiums. Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 207, 32 L. Ed. 370.

"The rights and benefits given by the laws of Connecticut in this regard are as miums paid by husband to keep it alive, or by him for her benefit.[11] And not even the premiums so paid can be recovered by the creditors, save in exceptional cases, where it is alleged and proved that the company participated in the fraud.[12]

Assignment of Policy for Benefit of Estate While Insolvent.—But where a policy has been taken out for the benefit of the estate of insured, it cannot be assigned by him, while insolvent, to any one, to the prejudice of creditors.[13]

5. Fraudulent Confession of Judgment.—See the title Judgments and Decrees.

6. Fraudulent Execution or Judicial Sale.—See the titles Judicial Sales; Sheriffs', Constables' and Marshals' Sales.

7. Property Not Belonging to Debtor, or Exempt.—It is only property be-much part of these contracts as if incorporated therein, not only because they are to be taken as if entered into there, but because there was the place of performance, and the stipulation of the parties was made with reference to the laws of that place." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 207, 32 L. Ed. 370.

11. By whom policy taken out immaterial.—The vested right of the beneficiary in the policy exists where the contract is directly with the beneficiary; in respect to policies running to the person insured, but payable to another having a direct pecuniary interest in the life insured; and where the proceeds are made to enure by positive statutory provisions. Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 206, 32 L. Ed. 370.

"There is no anomaly in this, nor any conflict with the letter or spirit of the statute of Elizabeth, because in such cases the policy would be at no time the property of the assured, and hence no question of fraud in its transfer could arise as to his creditors. It is only in case of the asssignment of a policy that once belonged to the assured that the question of fraud can arise under this act." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195; 208, 32 L. Ed. 370.

12. Recovery of premiums.—Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 32 L. Ed. 370.

Where the premiums were paid by the husband to the insurance companies, to recover from them would require proof that the latter participated in the alleged fraudulent intent, which is not claimed. Cases might be imagined of the payment of large premiums, out of all reasonable proportion to the known or reputed financial condition of the person paying, and under circumstances of grave suspicion, which might justify the inference of fraud on creditors in the withdrawal of such an amount from the debtor's resources; but no element of that sort exists here. The premiums form no part of the proceeds of the policies, and cannot be deducted therefrom on that ground. Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 209, 32 L. Ed. 370.

13. Assignment of policy while insolvent.—"And where a person has taken out policies of insurance upon his life for the benefit of his estate, it has been frequently held that, as against creditors, his assignment, when insolvent, of such policies, to or for the benefit of wife and children, or either, constitutes a fraudulent transfer of assets within the statute, and this, even though the debtor may have had no deliberate intention of depriving his creditors of a fund to which they were entitled, because his act has in point of fact withdrawn such a fund from them, and dealt with it by way of bounty. Freeman v. Pope, L. R. 9 Eq. 206, S. C. L. R. 5 Ch. 538. The rule stands upon precisely the same ground as any other disposition of his property by the debtor. The defect of the disposition is that it removes the property of the debtor out of the reach of his creditors." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 204, 32 L. Ed. 370.

"But the rule applies only to that which the debtor could have made available for payment of his debts. For instance, the exercise of a general power of appointment might be fraudulent and void under the statute, but not the exercise of a limited or exclusive power, because, in the latter case, the debtor never had any interest in the property himself which could have been available to a creditor, or by which he could have obtained credit." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 15, 204, 32 L. Ed. 370.

"It is true that creditors can obtain relief in respect to a fraudulent conveyance where the grantor cannot, but that relief only restores the subjection of the debtor's property to the payment of his indebtedness as it existed prior to the conveyance." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 204, 32 L. Ed. 370.

Conflict of laws.—"It may very well be that a transfer by an insolvent of a Connecticut policy, payable to himself or his personal representatives, would be held invalid in that district, even though valid under the laws of Connecticut, if the laws of the district were opposed to the latter, because the positive laws of the domicile and the forum must prevail; but there is no such conflict of laws in this case in longing to the debtor, and liable for his debts, that can be the subject of a fraudulent conveyance, or cannot be given away by him.[14]

Conveyance of Exempt Property.—That a member of a firm covered his homestead with a mortgage, which was used to raise money by the firm to pay its debts, is not a transaction that should be branded as a fraud by other creditors.[15]

C. Elements and Badges of Fraud.—See, generally, the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394.

1. INTENT IN GENERAL—a. Of Grantor.—While good faith is essential to support a conveyance against the claims of attacking creditors,[16] where there is clearly a bona fide grantor, the grant is not within the statutes against fraudulent conveyances.[17] Where good faith exists, and there is no proof of any intent on the part of the grantor to hinder, delay or defraud his existing creditors, a conveyance by him for a valuable consideration, whether an existing debt or other thing, is valid pro tanto, and cannot be set aside by other creditors.[18] respect to the power of disposition by a person procuring insurance payable to another." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 207, 32 L. Ed. 370.

14. Property not belonging to debtor.—Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 132 U. S. 565, 33 L. Ed. 438; Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. Ed. 816; Carite v. Trotot, 105 U. S. 751, 26 L. Ed. 1223; Van Riswick v. Spalding, 117 U. S. 370, 29 L. Ed. 913; Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 5 L. Ed. 603; Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618, 26 L. Ed. 849; Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 203, 32 L. Ed. 370.

15. Conveyance of exempt property.—Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 132 U. S. 565, 571, 33 L. Ed. 438.

Wife's settlement property.—And where property which had been settled upon a married woman, was afterwards appropriated by their joint act to the payment of one creditor, other creditors could not complain, for it was not their debtor's property. Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. Ed. 816.

By joint act of husband and wife.—Where property was a gift from the husband to the wife at a time when his right to make it cannot be disputed, being distinctly separated from the mass of his property, and the title made to her for her benefit, and there being no proof that the conveyance was with any intention to defraud his then existing or future creditors, and she chose, in order to aid her husband, or for other reasons satisfactory to herself, to unite with him in the conveyance to a creditor, thereby surrendering her estate for the benefit of the husband's creditor, this appropriation of the wife's property, by the joint act of herself and husband, to the payment of the debt of a particular creditor of the latter, is not a matter of which the assignee in bankruptcy, or any subsequent creditor of the husband, can rightfully complain. Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 741, 25 L. Ed. 816; Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618, 26 L. Ed. 849. See, generally, the titles HUSBAND AND WIFE; SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

As to expenditure of labor and business ability of husband on wife's separate estate, see the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

16. Good faith.—It is not enough, in order to support a conveyance or settlement against creditors, that it be made for a valuable consideration. It must be also bona fide. If it be made with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud them, it is void as against them, although there may be in the strictest sense a valuable or even an adequate consideration. Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 117, 26 L. Ed. 1080; United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 2 L. Ed. 370; Blanchard v. Brown, 3 Wall. 245, 250, 18 L. Ed. 69; Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. 78, 79, 18 L. Ed. 750; Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 19 L. Ed. 451; Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 485, 23 L. Ed. 363; Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 692, 33 L. Ed. 696; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 638, 39 L. Ed. 289; Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 38 L. Ed. 286.

"A sale may be void for bad faith though the buyer pays the full value of the property bought. This is the consequence, where his purpose is to aid the seller in perpetrating a fraud upon his creditors, and where he buys recklessly, with guilty knowledge. When the fact of fraud is established in a suit at law, the buyer losses the property without reference to the amount or application of what he has paid, and he can have no relief either at law or in equity." Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 312, 18 L. Ed. 786. See, also, United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 2 L. Ed. 370; Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 377, 33 L. Ed. 373.

Collusion between debtor and purchaser at judicial or sheriff's sale.—See the titles JUDICIAL SALES; SHERIFFS', CONSTABLES' AND MARSHALS' SALES.

17. Bona fide grantor.—Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. 178, 9 L. Ed. 1046.

18. Intent of grantor.—Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 523, 22 L. Ed. 758;

And the fraudulent intent must have existed in that particular transaction.[19]

Intent to Hinder and Delay.—An intent to hinder and delay is as fatal to the validity of such a conveyance as an intent to defraud creditors.[20]

b. Mutuality of Fraudulent Intent, or Notice, Essential.—And where the price paid is not shown to be inadequate, whatever may be suggested or surmised as to possible fraudulent intentions of a grantor, in the conveyance, its validity cannot be questioned in the absence of any evidence of participation in them by the grantee. The fraud which will vitiate a sale must be mutual, that is, must be intended by both parties, or by one with knowledge of the other's purpose, and thus acquiesced in and furthered.[21] Actual notice or knowledge, of Drury v. Cross, 7 Wall 299, 302, 19 L. Ed 40.

"But the creditor must take care in making his contract that it does not contain provisions of no advantage to him, but which benefit the debtor, and were designed to do so, and are injurious to other creditors. The law will not sanction a proceeding of this kind. It will not allow the creditor to make use of his debt for any other purpose than his own indemnity. If he goes beyond this, and puts into the contract stipulations which have the effect to shield the property of his debtor, so that creditors are delayed in the collection of their debts, a court of equity will not lend its aid to enforce the contract." Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 523, 22 L. Ed. 758. See, also, Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 284, 32 L. Ed. 429. See post, "Preference to Creditors," III, C, 8.

19. In transaction in question.—The inquiry is not whether the grantors had been previously guilty of fraud or embezzlement, but whether this particular conveyance was made with a fraudulent intent known to the trustees or beneficiaries. This is not shown here. Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 690, 33 L. Ed. 696. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 1.

Previous conduct of the grantors in a deed assailed as fraudulent, however censurable, does not render the deed in itself fraudulent, although all the circumstances should be taken into consideration in passing on that question. Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 692, 33 L. Ed. 696.

20. Intent to hinder and delay sufficient.—Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 288, 32 L. Ed. 429; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 523, 22 L. Ed. 758.

21. Mutuality of fraudulent intent, or notice, essential.—Horbach v. Hill, 112 U. S. 144, 148, 28 L. Ed. 670; Astor v. Wells, 4 Wheat. 466, 4 L. Ed. 616; Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 90, 6 L. Ed. 423; Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 393, 8 L. Ed. 709; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 614, 29 L. Ed. 742; Emerson v. Senter, 118 U. S. 1, 10, 30 L. Ed. 49; Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 280, 32 L. Ed. 429; Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552. See, also, Mattingly v. Nye, 8 Wall. 370, 372, 19 L. Ed. 380; Sexton v. Wheat, 8 Wheat. 229, 5 L. Ed. 603.

"The consideration being valuable, if the contract, whether executed or executory, is made in good faith, with one having no notice or knowledge of any fraud, covin or collusion to defraud creditors, performance may be enforced, or voluntarily made, and the contract carried into execution, at any time, either in the whole or in part, as is in the power of the party." Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 393, 8 L. Ed. 709.

"The words of the law (the statute of 13 Eliz., c. 5) require, that both parties must concur in the fraud, in order to bring the same within the provisions." Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 393, 8 L. Ed. 709.

Thus, when a deed is executed for a valuable and adequate consideration, without knowledge by the grantee of any fraudulent intent of the grantor, it will be upheld, however fraudulent his purpose. To vitiate the transfer in such case, the grantee also must be chargeable with knowledge of the intention of the grantor. Prewit v. Wilson, 103 U. S. 22, 24, 26 L. Ed. 360; Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 80, 18 L. Ed. 580.

And the purchaser of a stock of goods and business good will for an adequate consideration and without participation in or knowledge of any fraudulent purpose of the vendor in so disposing thereof, gets a good title to same in absence of statute invalidating such sales. North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 280, 34 L. Ed. 936.

Burden of proof as to payment of consideration.—"Upon its appearing that the vendor—possession having been delivered—made the sale with the fraudulent intent to hinder or delay his creditors, the utmost which the creditors could claim is that the burden of proof is upon the vendee, as between him and existing creditors, to show, by competent proof, that he paid a sufficient consideration for the property. But such payment being shown, the vendee is entitled to a verdict and judgment—however fraudulent may have been the intent of the vendor—unless it appears affirmatively, from all the circumstances, that he purchased in bad faith." Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 614, 29 L. Ed. 742.

such intent of grantor,[22] or reasonable cause to suspect the existence of such intent, is sufficient.[23] In some of the states notice to the trustee in a deed of "That deeds which are absolutely void cannot be the foundation of title, or that a cestui que trust can claim nothing under a deed which is fraudulently obtained by his trustee or agent, acting by his authority, need not be controverted; but that a principal and his agent, meditating, as the probable consequence of their act, an object forbidden by the policy of the law, cannot, because the one has conveyed to the other in furtherance of this design, sell to a fair creditor, or for the benefit of a fair creditor, not participating in their views, or cognizant thereof, is more than this court is prepared to say." Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 90, 6 L. Ed. 423.

Preferential mortgage.—In order to invalidate a preferential mortgage it must have been made with the intent, on the part of debtor, to hinder and delay his other creditors, and the mortgagees must have accepted it with the intent of assisting him to hinder and delay his other creditors. Huiskamp v. Moline Wagon Co., 121 U. S. 310, 319, 30 L. Ed. 971. See, also, the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

Fraudulent intent to prefer creditor.—See post, "Lawful in Absence of Statute," III, C, 8, a.

22. Actual notice.—Actual notice of intent to delay or defraud creditors, makes any sale voidable against creditors. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 621, 38 L. Ed. 286; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 614, 29 L. Ed. 742; Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 312, 18 L. Ed. 786.

It must not be taken that it requires active co-operation, preconcert and participation in the original design of fraud; and that notice of it is not sufficient to avoid the settlement, although all the parties, after such notice, proceed to execute it. Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 395, 8 L. Ed. 709.

23. Reasonable cause of suspicion.—Tiffany v. Lucas, 15 Wall. 410, 21 L. Ed. 198; Harrell v. Beall, 17 Wall. 590, 21 L. Ed. 692.

If the evidence showed either that the purchase was not in good faith, or was made with knowledge at the time of such facts and circumstances as reasonably put them upon inquiry as to the purpose of the vendors to hinder and delay their creditors, the conveyance will not stand, and if there was evidence tending to prove this, then the jury are to be allowed to pass upon it, in spite of the consideration paid. Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 612, 614, 29 L. Ed. 742.

"A statute that declares every transfer of property, made with intent to delay or defraud any creditor of his demands, void against all creditors of the debtor, would be wholly defeated in its operation if the rights of the transferee were not subject to the rule that 'whatever is notice enough to excite attention and put the party on his guard, and call for inquiry, is notice of everything to which such inquiry might have led.'" Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 622, 38 L. Ed. 286; Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135, 141, 25 L. Ed. 807.

The statute of Dakota, strictly interpreted, would seem to invalidate any transfer of property made with the intent, upon the part of the owner, to delay or defraud creditors, even when the transferee purchased in good faith. But even when liberally construed so as to protect bona fide purchasers for value, assuming, for the purpose of this case, that this interpretation was correct, while the plaintiff was not bound to act upon mere suspicion as to the intent with which his brother made the sale in question, if he had knowledge or actual notice of circumstances sufficient to put him, as a prudent man, upon inquiry as to whether his brother intended to delay or defraud his creditors, and he omitted to make such inquiry with reasonable diligence, he should have been deemed to have notice of such fact, and, therefore, such notice as would invalidate the sale to him, if such sale was in fact made with the intent upon the part of the vendor to delay or defraud other creditors. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 621, 38 L. Ed. 286.

"Referring to the statute of Dakota, declaring a conveyance of real property, other than a lease for a term not exceeding one year, void as against any subsequent purchaser or encumbrancer (including an assignee of a mortgage, lease, or other conditional estate, of the same property or any part thereof), in good faith and for a valuable consideration, whose conveyance is first duly recorded, the supreme court of Dakota, in Gress v. Evans, 1 Dakota 387, 399, said: 'Actual notice of a prior unrecorded conveyance, or of any title, legal or equitable, to the premises, or knowledge and notice of any facts which should put a prudent man upon inquiry, impeaches the good faith of the subsequent purchaser. There should be proof of actual notice of prior title or prior equities, or circumstances tending to prove such prior rights, which affect the conscience of the subsequent purchaser. Actual notice, of itself, impeaches the subsequent conveyance. Proof of circumstances, short of actual notice, which should put a prudent man upon inquiry, authorizes the court or jury to infer and find actual notice. Or, to express it exactly, good faith consists in an honest intention to abstain from taking any unconscientious advantage of another, even through the forms or technicalities of law, together with an absence of all informa-trust is notice to the beneficiary.[24] The question of good faith is one of fact.[25]

c. Intent to Defraud Future Creditors.—An intent to defraud future creditors by disposing of property, may be a fraud against them.[26]

2. Conveyances Fraudulent on Their Face.—A conveyance sometimes contains provisions which in themselves justify the inference of a fraudulent intent.[27]

tion or belief of facts which would render the transaction unconscientious. And notice is either actual or constructive." Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 621, 38 L. Ed. 286.

"A less stringent rule cannot be applied to the Dakota statute relating to transfers of property with intent to delay or defraud creditors. The plaintiff had the right, by a purchase of his brother's stock of merchandise, to obtain payment of his claims in preference to the claims of other creditors. But the statute of Dakota, however liberally construed in favor of purchasers from a fraudulent debtor, will not permit him to enjoy, to the exclusion of other creditors, the fruits of his purchase, when the sale was made with the intent to delay or defraud other creditors, if he had, at the time, actual notice of such intent or knowledge of such circumstances or facts as were sufficient to put a prudent person upon an inquiry that would have disclosed the existence of such intent upon the part of the vendor." Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 622, 38 L. Ed. 286.

Under the statute of fraudulent conveyances of Ohio, which provides, that "every gift, grant or conveyance of lands, tenements, hereditaments, etc., made or obtained, with intent to defraud creditors of their just and lawful debts or damages, or to defraud or deceive the person or persons who shall purchase such lands, etc., shall be deemed utterly void, and of no effect;" held, that a bona fide purchaser, without notice, could not be affected by the intent of the grantor to defraud creditors. Astor v. Wells, 4 Wheat. 466, 4 L. Ed. 616.

24. Notice to trustee in deed of trust.—It is well settled in the states of West Virginia and Virginia that notice to the trustees is notice to the beneficiaries. Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 696, 33 L. Ed. 696.

While it is well settled in Virginia that the trustees and beneficiaries in a deed of trust to secure bona fide debts occupy the position of purchasers for a valuable consideration, yet they cannot hold with notice of the fraudulent intent of their grantor, or of the fraud rendering his title void. Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 696, 33 L. Ed. 696.

25. While the fact that a mortgage is given for a larger amount than was due, is a suspicious circumstance, raising a presumption of fraud, and may, under certain circumstances, avoid the whole mortgage, in all such cases the question of good faith is one of fact, and a mere error of judgment will not be imputed as a fraud. The fact that the debt so included was a bona fide debt, and that the act of the mortgagee in so including it was subsequently affirmed by the creditors interested, will be strong evidence that no actual fraud was intended. There must be a willful design to impose upon and defraud the general creditors, to avoid it. Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 645, 39 L. Ed. 289; Shirras v. Caig, 7 Cranch 34, 3 L. Ed. 260. See, also, Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 520, 22 L. Ed. 758.

Weight of evidence.—See post, "Weight and Sufficiency," VI, F, 3.

26. Intent to defraud future creditors.—"It is true that if a debtor dispose of his property, with intent to defraud those to whom he expects to become immediately or soon indebted, this may be a fraud against them, which they may have a right to unravel. But that is a special case, to which the present bears no resemblance." Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 153, 26 L. Ed. 106. See, also, post, "Validity as to Creditors," IV, B; "As to Creditors and Purchasers," V, C.

27. Conveyances fraudulent on their face.—"The doctrine in Virginia, settled by a long and uninterrupted line of decisions, is that, while there may be provisions in a deed of trust of such a character as of themselves to furnish evidence sufficient to justify the inference of a fraudulent intent, yet this cannot be so except where the inference is so absolutely irresistible as to preclude indulgence in any other." Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 686, 33 L. Ed. 696.

"Hence provisions postponing the time of the sale and reserving the use of the property to the grantor meanwhile, though perishable and consumable in the use; permitting sales on credit; for the payment of surplus after satisfaction of creditors secured; the omission of a schedule or inventory; and the like, have been regarded as insufficient to justify the court in invalidating the deed for fraud in point of law. The fraudulent intent is held not to be presumed even under such circumstances, and in its absence the fact that creditors may be delayed or hindered is not of itself sufficient to vacate the instrument, while the right to prefer one creditor over another is thoroughly established." Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 686, 33 L. Ed. 696.

"The tendency of courts in modern times has been, not to hold instruments of this character to be fraudulent and void upon

3. Concealment.—A conveyance not fraudulent in its inception, may become so by concealment.[28] But it is only a circumstance connected with other facts from which fraud may be inferred.[29]

4. Confidential Relations—a. In General.—The fact that the assignee or the preferred creditor of an insolvent debtor is a relative or intimate friend is doubtless calculated to excite suspicion; yet in reality there is nothing unnatural in a dealer or trader who is in need of credit, or a loan of money to carry on his business, first applying to his relatives for such loans, and if the evidence be undisputed that the money was advanced, the fact that the persons making the loan are relatives ought not to debar them from receiving security. Their rights are neither increased nor diminished by the fact of relationship.[30] their face, unless they contain provisions plainly inconsistent with an honest purpose, or the instrument indicates with reasonable certainty that it was executed, not to secure bona fide creditors, but to enable the debtor to continue to carry on his business under cover of another's name. So early as 1805, it was held by this court in United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 2 L. Ed. 370, that the mortgage of a part of his property, made by a collector of revenue to the surety upon his official bond, to indemnify him for his responsibility, and to secure him for endorsements at the bank, was valid against the United States, though it turned out that the mortgagor was unable to pay all his debts at the time the mortgage was given, and the mortgagee also knew at that time that he was largely indebted to the United States. It was contended that the mortgage was fraudulent upon its face, but the case was distinguished from Twyne's case, 3 Rep. 81, in the fact that in Twyne's case the deed was of all the property; was secret; was of chattels, and purported to be absolute, yet the vendor remained in possession and exercised ownership over them; while in the case then under consideration the deed was of a part of the property; was of record; was of lands, and purported to be a conveyance which left the property conveyed in the possession of the grantor. The case was also distinguished from Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 2 L. Ed. 118, in which this court declared an absolute bill of sale of a personal chattel, of which the vendor retained possession, to be a fraud." Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 532, 38 L. Ed. 540. See the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

28. Concealment. — Blennershaett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 118, 26 L. Ed. 1080.

"As long ago as the case of Hungerford v. Earle (2 Vern. 261), it was held that 'a deed not at first fraudulent may afterwards become so by being concealed or not pursued, by which means creditors are drawn in to lend their money.' This doctrine has been repeatedly reaffirmed." Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 118, 26 L. Ed. 1080.

"But where a mortgagee, knowing that his mortgagor is insolvent, for the purpose of giving him a fictitious credit actively conceals the mortgage which covers his entire estate and withholds it from the record, and while so concealing it represents the mortgagor as having a large estate and unlimited credit, and by these means others are induced to give him credit, and he fails and is unable to pay the debts thus contracted, the mortgage will be declared fraudulent and void at common law, whether the motive of the mortgagee be gain to himself or advantage to his mortgagor." Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 117, 26 L. Ed. 1080. See, also, Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 639, 39 L. Ed. 289.

29. A circumstance of suspicion merely. —"Whilst in the old cases it was held that the possession of the vendor of goods sold was fraudulent against creditors, no case, it is believed, has been so held by the court on the sole ground of secrecy in making the contract. It is a circumstance connected with other facts from which fraud may be inferred. But if the secrecy supposed amounted to absolute fraud, yet the court could not have so pronounced in this case, as there was evidence controverting the supposition of secrecy, which the court could not properly take from the consideration of the jury." Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 460, 15 L. Ed. 950. See post, "Retention of Possession," III, C, 9, a.

30. Confidential relations in general.— Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 638, 39 L. Ed. 289; Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 8 L. Ed. 709; Prewit v. Wilson, 103 U. S. 22, 26 L. Ed. 360; Estes v. Gunter, 122 U. S. 450, 30 L. Ed. 1228; Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496, 30 L. Ed. 1126; Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 432, 38 L. Ed. 218.

The law presumes a sale, even between near relations (brothers), to have been made in good faith, if accompanied by immediate delivery and followed by actual, continued change of possession. Shaver v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 626, 38 L. Ed. 286.

A conveyance by a grantor, upon the eve of a decree being rendered against him for a large sum of money, which would go far to his ruin, of his whole property, real and personal, to his brother-in-law, for an asserted full consideration

b. Brothers.—The relationship of brothers does not, of and in itself, cast suspicion upon a transfer from one to the other of property, or create such a prima facie presumption against its validity as would require the court to hold it to be invalid without proof that there was fraud on the part of the grantor, participated in by the grantee. This proposition is so well settled that authorities need not be cited in its support.[31]

c. Husband and Wife—(1) Conveyance to Wife—(a) Validity in General.—In the absence of fraud, a wife may purchase property from her husband, such as his curtesy in her hands, without his creditors having any right to complain, in the absence of a specific lien.[32]

(b) Presumption.—But in a contest between the creditors of the husband and the wife, over property conveyed to her by him or by another, there is a presumption against her which she must overcome by affirmative proof.[33] And which did not appear from the evidence to have been actually paid, is fraudulent as to existing creditors. Venable v. United States Bank, 2 Pet. 107, 112, 7 L. Ed. 364.

31. Brothers.—Gottlieb v. Thatcher, 151 U. S. 271, 279, 38 L. Ed. 157.

It was not error for the jury to be told that the relations of the parties to the transaction, they being brothers, made it necessary to carefully scrutinize the facts, but that their determination must, at last, depend upon the inquiry whether the transaction was honest and bona fide. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 626, 38 L. Ed. 286.

32. Validity in general.—Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 726, 28 L. Ed. 577; Wheaton v. Sexton, 4 Wheat. 503, 4 L. Ed. 626.

Where the case is wholly free from fraud, a wife has the same right to buy her husband's curtesy in her real estate, to have it barred by a proper conveyance, as any one else had or could have had. Her equity was as good as that of any other creditor, and he could secure her as well as he could the bank. As the present complainant had no lien on the property, the joint right of husband and wife to sell it for value was undoubted, and the right to sell to her by the intervention of trustees is equally clear. The property she gave in exchange for his interest in her lots did not go to him to be secretly used in fraud of his creditors, but was conveyed directly to creditors in satisfaction of his debts. The conveyance was not without consideration and it was without fraud. Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 726, 28 L. Ed. 577.

In Clark v. Beecher, 154 U. S. 631, 24 L. Ed. 705, a conveyance by a debtor to his wife was held properly condemned as fraudulent.

Conveyances in 1871 which were meritorious, upon good consideration, made by one in debt in only a trifling sum, and retaining an abundance of property for the discharge of those debts and who in fact subsequently, and as they became due, paid them, made by one continuing and expecting to continue in the same profitable and not hazardous business in which he had been engaged for nearly a score of years, with no thought of entering upon any new or hazardous business, and more than three years before any liability to V. was incurred or even thought of, and where the placing of the notes, bonds and mortgages in 1874 in the wife's name was in pursuance of an arrangement entered into when the husband was not in debt, and when no obligation, fixed or contingent, to V. had been entered into or thought of, under these circumstances it is error to hold that the transactions were fraudulent and void as against V. Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 417, 33 L. Ed. 955.

Preference of wife as creditor.—See post, "Preference of Wife," III, C, 8, f.

Agreement for resale to wife of debtor by purchaser.—Where a lien creditor, C., by executory process under the Louisiana practice, obtained the seizure and sale of an insolvent debtor's property, and became the purchaser under an agreement with the debtor and his wife to resell the same to the latter; it was held that the purchaser obtained an absolute title, free from incumbrances subsequent thereto, and that there was nothing in the circumstances of the case as disclosed in this record to impeach the good faith, or affect the validity, of the sale to the wife. C. had the unquestionable right to subject to judicial sale the property held as security for his debt, and become its purchaser at two-thirds of its appraised value. No one was wronged by such a procedure, although it had the effect to disappoint every other creditor. C. could convey, or agree to convey, it to any one he chose. Carite v. Trotot, 105 U. S. 751, 758, 26 L. Ed. 1223.

The instruction that if the original sale was valid the purchasers had a legal right to dispose of the property to vendor's wife, is correct. Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 164, 40 L. Ed. 374.

Or to his children or any one else. Van Riswick v. Spalding, 117 U. S. 370, 29 L. Ed. 913. See, also, post, "Reservation of Benefit," III, C, 9, b.

33. Presumption against wife.—Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 38 L. Ed. 286;

if money, which a married woman might have had secured to her own use, is allowed to go into the business of her husband, be mixed with his property, and applied to the purchase of real estate for his advantage, or for the purpose of giving him credit in business, and is thus used for a series of years, such real estate, unless there is at the time of its purchase a specific agreement that it shall belong to the wife, becomes the property of the husband for the purpose of paying his debts. A conveyance thereof to his wife, upon the occurrence of his bankruptcy, is a fraud upon his creditors, and void.[34] But where husband and wife evidently saw no necessity of dealing with each other at arm's length, and the title to the property was placed in her name when there was no legal or equitable reason why it should not be done, the rents and other cash receipts were not unnaturally kept in one account and handled as one fund. The lack of substantial indebtedness and the record of the transfer being established, the carelessness of their dealings tends to prove honesty rather than to establish fraud.[35] And if such specific agreement is proved and no creditor was mis-

Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 582, 24 L. Ed. 179.

"Such is the community of interest between husband and wife; such purchases are so often made a cover for a debtor's property, are so frequently resorted to for the purpose of withdrawing his property from the reach of his creditors and preserving it for his own use, and they hold forth such temptations for fraud, that they require close scrutiny. In a contest between the creditors of the husband and the wife there is, and there should be, a presumption against her which she must overcome by affirmative proof. Such has always been the rule of the common law; and the rule continues, though statutes have modified the doctrine that gave to the husband absolutely the personal property of the wife in possession, and the right to reduce into his possession and ownership all her choses in action." Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 582, 24 L. Ed. 179.

Purchases of real or personal property, made during coverture, by the wife of an insolvent debtor, are justly regarded with suspicion. She cannot prevail in contests between his creditors and her, involving their right to subject property so acquired to the payment of his debts, unless the presumption that it was not paid for out of her separate estate be overcome by affirmative proof. Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 24 L. Ed. 179.

Where husband and wife lived together, and there is nothing to show that the wife had any opportunity of obtaining money except from her husband, and creditors of the husband attack by bill conveyances of property to the wife as in fraud of their rights, and the answer does not aver that she paid for either of the lots conveyed to her out of her separate property, or that she had any separate property, nor does the proof show that she had any, such presumption is not overcome. Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 585, 24 L. Ed. 179.

34. Husband's apparent ownership.—Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 24 L. Ed. 51; Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 6 L. Ed. 454; Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 435, 38 L. Ed. 218.

35. Conveyance prior to any indebtedness.—Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 416, 33 L. Ed. 955.

Although it is objected by the appellees that the husband's testimony is not to be depended upon, because contradictory, confused and uncertain; that there is no definiteness in it as to amounts and dates; and that wrong in the transactions is evident, because the moneys received for rent, after the conveyances, were deposited by him in his own name in bank, and were obviously managed and handled by him as his own, as no accounts were kept between husband and wife of their separate moneys, but all were mingled in one fund, in his hands, all this does not indicate fraud. If his testimony is worthless and to be rejected, then there is practically no testimony interpreting those transactions, and the court never presumes fraud. The very confusion and carelessness in the dealings between husband and wife make against rather than in favor of the claim of fraud. Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 416, 33 L. Ed. 955.

Where the conveyances claimed to be fraudulent and void were made and recorded more than three years prior to the building contract, out of which creditor's claim arose; and, while the mortgages to Mrs. S. were executed and recorded during the same year with the building contract, yet the obligation assumed by S. guaranteeing the mortgage and the bond it secured was a voluntary one, without consideration, and after a contract expressly providing for payment in another way; was conditional, and only became a fixed indebtedness two years thereafter, when by the foreclosure proceedings the worthlessness of the guaranteed bond and mortgage was developed, obviously, very clear and direct testimony is essential to support an adjudication that transfers were fraudulent and void as against this subsequent creditor. Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 409, 33 L. Ed. 955.

lead to his injury by her conduct, the conveyance will be valid.[36]

(c) Consideration.—While transactions by way of purchase or security between husband and wife should be carefully scrutinized, when they are shown to have been upon full consideration from one to the other, or, when voluntary, that the husband was at the time free from debt and possessed of ample means, the same protection should be afforded to them as to like transactions between third parties.[37]

Wife's Separate Property.—The transfer by a husband to his wife of the legal title to property of which she was prior thereto, the equitable owner, or in which she had at least a large equitable interest, is not voluntary.[38] And Conceding all that is claimed by counsel in reference to irregularity in bankrupt proceedings in 1878, it is difficult to deduce therefrom any evidence of wrong in the transactions in 1871 and 1874. It would be a very unjust conclusion from such facts, that in 1871, when he made the conveyances to his wife, and in 1874, when he made the arrangement for the execution of the bonds and mortgages to his wife, anterior to any known or expected liability to the attacking creditor, he was acting with a view of subsequently going through bankruptcy, or defrauding him or any other creditor. Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 417, 33 L. Ed. 955.

36. Conveyance in pursuance of explicit agreement.—Where a husband was without any means of his own and had in his possession, substantially, the entire estate of his wife, controlling and managing it for her, and the property in question was purchased and improved wholly with her money under an explicit assurance by him, before the purchase was made, that it would be put in her name; and she relied upon his compliance with that promise; and the husband, at the date of the deed to her owed her a larger sum than the amounts expended in purchasing and improving the property; and the conveyance to G., in order that he might convey to the wife, was made in good faith, for the purpose, and only for the purpose, of satisfying, to the extent of the value of the property conveyed, the debt due to the wife; and no one became a creditor of the husband in consequence of any representation made by her, or with her knowledge, that he owned the property, his creditors cannot subject such property as his, and equity will set aside conveyances thereof under execution sales as his property. Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 433, 38 L. Ed. 218.

"If, before any rights of attaching creditors intervened, he did voluntarily what the law made it his duty to do, the transaction is not subject to impeachment by his creditors, unless the wife has been guilty of such fraudulent conduct as ought, in conscience, to estop her from claiming the property as against such creditors. If the wife had herself been guilty of deception, or if she had contributed to its success by countenancing it, she might, with justice, be charged with the consequence of her conduct. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 240, 5 L. Ed. 603. But the evidence furnishes no ground for the imputation of fraud against her." Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 434, 38 L. Ed. 218.

"If the husband, in fact, had owned this property, and, in order to prefer a part of his creditors, had, in good faith, sold and conveyed it to them, with the intent to give a preference over other creditors, the right of such grantees to hold it, unless the case was brought within the insolvent laws of the state, could not be questioned. No different rule should be enforced in this case against a wife who has received a conveyance of property purchased with her money, and which should have been put in her name when so purchased." Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 434, 38 L. Ed. 218.

"In Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 27, 28, 24 L. Ed. 51, which was a suit by an assignee in bankruptcy to set aside a conveyance of real estate made by a bankrupt to his wife as being in fraud of the rights of creditors—the wife alleging in her answer that the land was purchased by the husband with her money, and that she believed for years that the title had been taken in her name—the court found that the proof showed a state of case the reverse of that claimed by his wife." Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 435, 38 L. Ed. 218.

37. Consideration.—Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496, 500, 30 L. Ed. 1126; Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 28, 24 L. Ed. 51.

"To the same general effect are numerous cases: Jewell v. Knight, 123 U. S. 426, 434, 31 L. Ed. 190, and authorities cited." Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 433, 38 L. Ed. 218; Stickney v. Stickney, 131 U. S. 227, 238, 240, 33 L. Ed. 136.

38. Wife's separate property.—Where all that the testimony fairly discloses is, that at the time of her marriage the wife was possessed of separate property, which was the foundation and largely the source of subsequent accumulations which were invested in real estate as well as the principal, the conveyance of such real estate to the wife by the husband, the title being in his name, was not purely voluntary, but meritorious and upon good consideration. The same may be said as to the bonds and mortgages placed in her name.

similarly where he is bona fide indebted to her in an equal amount,[39] and the real consideration may be shown by parol evidence.[40]

(d) Intermediate Conveyance to Third Party.—The conveyance first to a third party, who paid nothing, but took the title in trust for the wife, and from him to her, was to satisfy the common-law inability to make a strict conveyance from husband to wife, and is no evidence of fraud.[41]

(e) Marriage Settlements.—See the title MARRIAGE CONTRACTS AND SETTLEMENTS.

(2) Personal Liability of Wife.—Where property is conveyed to a wife in fraud of her husband's creditors, a judgment in personam for its value cannot be taken against her, nor, in case of her death, against her executors.[42]

d. Parent and Child.—A conveyance procured by a father to his son, alleged to be fraudulent because the consideration flowed from the father, and as a Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 415, 33 L. Ed. 955.

Where it was agreed between H. and his wife that if he would make the deed of trust by which all the estate in the lots mentioned in it, including his interest, whatever it might be, and hers also, should be secured to Mrs. H. and her children by the intervention of trustees, she would make good the title of a lot which he had pledged for a debt, and would join him also in the deed to the receiver, of what was asserted to be his property, in both of which she had a large and valuable interest, the trust deed was, therefore, made on a valuable consideration. When a court of equity sees a man trying to rectify the wrong done his wife, it is not required to scan closely the value of what she gave at the moment for his relinquishment of his marital rights in her remaining property. Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 726, 28 L. Ed. 577.

And where, in the findings of facts in a suit by a wife to obtain partition of property, against a creditor of her husband who claimed that the half standing in her name was held in fraud of his rights as an attaching creditor of her husband, it is expressly stated that she paid for the property in cash from her own separate funds, with this found, there is nothing whatever in the case to impeach or in any manner invalidate the conveyance to her. Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618, 620, 26 L. Ed. 849.

39. Bona fide indebtedness to wife.—Where a deed by an insolvent husband to a trustee for his wife to secure an indebtedness from him to her, is assailed as fraudulent and void as against creditors, if there had been no other consideration for the deed than a desire to secure for his wife provision against the necessities of the future, it could not be sustained. It must find its support in the fact alleged in the recital, that the amount secured was a sum realized from the sale of her individual property, and used by him. It is not material whether the recital be accurate in stating that the sum received from the sale of her property was used in payment of the real estate covered by the deed; it is sufficient if he was indebted to his wife in the amount mentioned. Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496, 509, 30 L. Ed. 1126.

A loan by the wife to the husband, of money which is her separate property, upon his promise to repay it, creates an equity in her favor, which a court of equity will enforce, and where the jury found that the money delivered by the wife to the husband was by way of loan, and not of gift, and that his subsequent conveyance of land through a third person to her in repayment of that loan, was not made with the purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding creditors, that conveyance, to satisfy his equitable obligation to his wife, was not a voluntary conveyance, and was valid against his creditors. Medsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66, 73, 27 L. Ed. 654.

But "If the husband in a state of absolute bankruptcy conveys to his wife property fairly worth $15,000 to $20,000, with no present consideration passing, but with a recital of past indebtedness to her to less than a fifth of its value, the transaction is fraudulent and void as to creditors." Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 28, 24 L. Ed. 51.

40. Parol evidence of true consideration.—Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 727, 28 L. Ed. 577.

It neither contradicts nor varies the recital of a nominal consideration to show that a valuable consideration passed from the wife to her husband for his conveyance of his life estate to the trustees for her benefit. Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 727, 28 L. Ed. 577. See, also, the title PAROL EVIDENCE.

41. Intermediate conveyance to third party.—Medsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66, 27 L. Ed. 654.

42. Personal liability.—Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 24 L. Ed. 591, reaffirmed in Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 24 L. Ed. 954.

Where a husband has transferred property or money to his wife in fraud of his creditors, it answers the demands of justice in such cases if the creditor, finding cover for the latter's property from his creditors, which was fair and honest, and in satisfaction of a bona fide indebtedness from father to son, is valid.[43]

5. Employment of Grantor as Grantee's Agent or Attorney.—See, also, post, "Retention of Possession or Reservation of Benefits by Grantor," III, C, 9.

The fact that the grantee in a conveyance attacked as fraudulent, subsequently to the execution of such conveyance, appointed the grantor, who was also his brother, his attorney in fact for the conveyance of all his property in that state, etc., it being shown that this power of attorney applied to other property of the grantee besides that in dispute, cannot be claimed as a badge of fraud. There was nothing in the fact of the execution of the power, or in its provisions, to raise any presumption of fraud in the original purchase.[44] Even if stipulated for in the conveyance.[45] This is the rule in Alabama and is the property itself in her hands or in the hands of one holding it with notice, appropriates it to pay his debt. But, if it is beyond his reach, the wife should no more be held liable for it than if the husband himself had spent it in support of his family, or even of his own extravagance. There cannot be a personal judgment against her therefor. Huntington v. Saunders, 120 U. S. 78, 81, 30 L. Ed. 580; Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 24 L. Ed. 591; Trust Co v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 24 L. Ed. 954.

New York.—"The statutes of the different states have gone very far in this country to modify the peculiar relations of husband and wife, as they existed at common law, in reference to their property. But they have not, except perhaps in Louisiana, gone so far as to recognize the civil-law rule of perfect independence in dealing with each other. While the statutes of New York have recognized certain rights of the wife to deal with and contract in reference to her separate property, they fall far short of establishing the principle that out of that separate property she can be made liable for money or property received at her husband's hands, which in equity ought to have gone to pay his debts. Equity has been ready, where such property remains in her hands, to restore it to its proper use, but not to hold her separate estate liable for what she has received, and probably spent at his dictation. Such a proposition would be a very unjust one to the wife still under the dominion, control, and personal influence of her husband." Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 9, 24 L. Ed. 591.

And see generally, the titles HUSBAND AND WIFE; SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

43. Parent and child.—Vattier v. Hinde, 7 Pet. 252, 268, 8 L. Ed. 675.

Where the son was a bona fide creditor of his father, for the sum of $400, the circumstances under which this debt was created, or the relationship between the parties, cannot render it less sacred. The connection between the parties may excite suspicion, may justify a more scrutinizing investigation of all the circumstances; but if the result of this investigation be that the conveyance was in payment of a debt of the most sacred obligation, a debt which a conscientious debtor ought to have paid, it is valid in law. The consideration mentioned in the deed, is $350, and it is not suggested that the lot was worth more than that sum. Vattier v. Hinde, 7 Pet. 252, 268, 8 L. Ed. 675.

In Woodfolk v. Seddon, 154 U. S. 658, 31 L. Ed. 598, it was held that the consideration of the note executed by W. to his son, on which alone the title of the son to the property in controversy depends, was fictitious, and that the confession of judgment by the father in favor of the son, and the purchase of the property in controversy by the son under execution, were but parts of a scheme devised by the father and son to hinder and delay creditors of W. in the collection of their debts. And so with the purchase by the son at tax sale.

And in McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 228, 12 L. Ed. 675, a conveyance by a father to his daughter was held fraudulent.

44. Employment of grantor as grantee's agent or attorney.—Gottlied v. Thatcher, 151 U. S. 271, 278, 38 L. Ed. 157. See, also, Bomberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 164, 40 L. Ed. 374.

And so where debtor and creditor were friends of many years standing, having grown old together, when grantor failed, and transferred a large part of his property to his principal creditor, including a mill, there was nothing unreasonable in the employment of the former by the latter to run the mill at seventy-five dollars a month and the use of the dwelling. This is what was done according to the testimony, and the explanation was properly held to be satisfactory. Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 598, 36 L. Ed. 552.

45. Stipulation therefor in conveyance.—"In Smith v. Craft, 123 U. S. 436, 31 L. Ed. 267, a bill of sale of a stock of goods, by way of preference of a bona fide creditor, was held not to be fraudulent as matter of law, by reason of a stipulation that the purchaser should employ the debtor at a reasonable salary to wind up the business." Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S.

also the general rule.[46]

6. Giving Bond to Pay Value if Set Aside.—Where the purchaser gave his bond to pay their value if he failed to sustain his title to the property, the conveyance of which was attacked, in this there was no fraud. It was a right the statute gave him as the claimant of the property, and he availed himself of it in a lawful way. He thus perfected his title to the goods by agreeing to pay their value if his original purchase should be held to be invalid. A debt thus incurred cannot be said to be created by fraud.[47]

7. Insolvency of Grantor.—A conveyance by a person deeply indebted, in anticipation of decrees and judgments, which, added to the existing encumbrances, amounted to the value of his property, was executed under circumstances which would lead a court to presume fraud upon creditors.[48]

8. Preference to Creditors—a. Lawful in Absence of Statute.—It is entirely well settled, both in England and America, that at common law a debtor, insolvent or in failing circumstances, has a right to prefer certain creditors to whom he is under special obligations, where done in good faith and without fraud, though by such preference the fund for the payment of the other creditors be lessened or even absorbed,[49] even though the grantor is also indebted to

527, 534, 38 L. Ed. 540. See, also, Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 35 L. Ed. 171.

Where a bill of sale contained a stipulation that the creditor should "employ said C. (debtor) in said business at the rate of $150 per month so long as" the bank should "carry on or continue said business," whether such a stipulation is valid or invalid depends upon its intention. If its object appeared on its face to have been to secure a benefit to the debtor or his family, it would be fraudulent in law. Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. 78, 18 L. Ed. 750. But if its sole purpose was to obtain services necessary to wind up the business and turn the goods into money as promptly and economically as possible, for the benefit of the other party, it is valid. Smith v. Craft, 123 U. S. 436, 441, 31 L. Ed. 267.

Where the only facts stated in the certificate (other than the bill of sale itself), directly bearing upon the validity of the stipulation, are that the creditor, with debtor as manager, carried on the business, reducing the stock as rapidly as possible, "with a view to closing it out," for about six months, when the stock remaining was sold by auction; that the creditors realized for the entire stock $20,000; and debtor received the sum of $150 a month, or about $900 in all, and, since the bill of sale, had no other interest, direct or indirect, in the stock of goods or its proceeds, it cannot be concluded as matter of law, either on the face of the bill of sale, or with the aid of this evidence of what was done under its provisions, that the compensation was unreasonable, or that the stipulation in question was fraudulent. Whether, taken in connection with all the previous transactions between the parties, it was fraudulent in fact, was a question to be decided by the circuit court. Smith v. Craft, 123 U. S. 436, 442, 31 L. Ed. 267.

46. Alabama.—Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 164, 40 L. Ed. 374.

"Indeed, under the rule as announced in Alabama, the court could have affirmatively instructed that the employment of the vendor in a clerical capacity could not affect the validity of the sale." Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 164, 40 L. Ed. 374. And see post, "Reservation of Benefit," III, C, 9, b.

47. Giving bond to pay value if set aside.—Wolf v. Stix, 99 U. S. 1, 7, 25 L. Ed. 309.

48. Insolvency of grantor.—Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 62, 33 L. Ed. 242.

The real contract was one between grantor and grantee to defraud the creditors out of the property conveyed, and to so conceal and cloud the title that they could be circumvented, hindered and delayed, and coerced into settlements and compromises. The evidence shows beyond doubt that grantor willingly participated for ten years in carrying out this plot. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 62, 33 L. Ed. 242.

A sale of personal property, made much below its cost, by a man indebted to near or quite the extent of all he had, was set aside as a fraud on creditors, it having been made within a month after the property was bought, and before it was yet paid for; made, moreover, on Saturday, while the account of stock was taken on Sunday (the parties being Jews), and the property carried off early on Monday. Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 19 L. Ed. 461. See, also, post, "Preference to Creditors," III, C, 8.

49. Lawful in absence of statute.—Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 532, 38 L. Ed. 540; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556, 577, 5 L. Ed. 522; Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 89, 6 L. Ed. 423; Magniac v. Thomson, 7 Pet. 348, 8 L. Ed. 709; Brashear v. West, 7 Pet. 608, 8 L. Ed. 801; Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. 178, 9 L. Ed. 1046; Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 10 L. Ed. 903; Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 150, 151, 14 L. Ed. 90; Drury v. Cross, 7 Wall. 299, 302, 19 L. Ed. 40; Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 686, 33 L. Ed. 696; Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 432, 38 L. Ed. 218; Emerson v. Senter, 118 U. S. 1, 10, 30 L. Ed. 49; Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 160, 40 L. Ed. 374; Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 378, 33 L. Ed. 373; Smith v. Craft, 123 U. S. 436, 441, 31 L. Ed. 267; Stevenson v. Pemberton, 1 Dall. 3, 1 L. Ed. 11.

A debtor may lawfully apply his property to the payment of the debts of such creditors as he may choose to prefer, when the transaction is bona fide; and he may elect the time when it is to be done, so as to make it effectual; such preference must necessarily operate to the prejudice of creditors not provided for, and cannot furnish any evidence of fraudulent intention. Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 10 L. Ed. 903; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556, 5 L. Ed. 522; Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 98, 6 L. Ed. 423; Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 625, 38 L. Ed. 286; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 639, 39 L. Ed. 289. See, also, ante, "Powers Exercisable by Debtor over His Property," II.

And an insolvent debtor has a right to prefer one creditor to another in payment, by an assignment bona fide made, and no subsequent attachment, or subsequently acquired lien, will avoid the assignment. Spring v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. 268, 5 L. Ed. 614.

Whether it be effected by the payment of money, or the consignment of goods to be converted into money by the preferred creditor, who is to pay himself first out of the proceeds, the balance to go to other creditors. Stevenson v. Pemberton, 1 Dall. 3, 1 L. Ed. 11.

"In the absence of any bankrupt or insolvent law, a debtor may lawfully give a preference to one of his creditors, if he does not thereby intend to defraud the others; and a sale and delivery of goods in satisfaction of an honest debt cannot be avoided by other creditors, unless made and received with intent in fact to defraud them. This is well settled by the decisions of this court, as well as by those of the highest court of the state of Indiana, where these transactions took place." Jewell v. Knight, 123 U. S. 426, 434, 31 L. Ed. 190, citing Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 150, 151, 14 L. Ed. 90; Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 15 L. Ed. 950; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 520, 22 L. Ed. 758; Medsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66, 27 L. Ed. 654; Stewart v. Dunham, 115 U. S. 61, 29 L. Ed. 329; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 29 L. Ed. 742; People's Sav. Bank v. Bates, 120 U. S. 556, 30 L. Ed. 754; Huiskamp v. Moline Wagon Co., 121 U. S. 310, 319, 30 L. Ed. 971. See, also, Smith v. Craft, 123 U. S. 436, 31 L. Ed. 267; Hardt v. Heidweyer, 152 U. S. 547 557, 38 L. Ed. 548; Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 117, 26 L. Ed. 1080; Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 98, 6 L. Ed. 423; Conard v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 297, 7 L. Ed. 862.

"A collusive transfer, placing the property of a debtor out of the reach of his creditors, while securing to him its beneficial enjoyment, is not to be tolerated; yet an insolvent debtor may prefer a creditor, even though the latter has knowledge of such insolvency. The effect of the preference may be to delay his other creditors, but if the transaction is in good faith and made with the intention of paying the preferred debt, and without any secret trust, the conveyance by which the preference is affected is not fraudulent." Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552; Brasher v. West, 7 Pet. 608, 8 L. Ed. 801.

"There can be no doubt, likewise, of the right of a debtor (and cases may be easily conceived, in which it would be a duty), independently of the bankrupt laws, to give a preference to some of his creditors, in exclusion of the rest; and from such a preference alone, the court would not be disposed, hastily, to infer collusion, secret trusts or meditated frauds." Burd v. Smith, 4 Dall. 76, 86, 1 L. Ed. 748.

The only remedy afforded by the common law against an abuse of the right of an insolvent debtor to prefer any of his creditors was in the principles of the statute of 13 Elizabeth, c. 5, which have been substantially reenacted in the various states of the Union. United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 448, 45 L. Ed. 938. See Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 36 L. Ed. 552; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 39 L. Ed. 289.

Note endorsed by preferred creditor.— Where, among the debts for which an alleged fraudulent sale was made, was included a note of the debtor on which the preferred creditor and vendee firm was endorser, and there was no proof of any kind even tending to show the simulation of the note, but it was certainly, under the undisputed proof, due by debtor, and was drawn to the order of the vendees, who were, as endorsers, necessary parties to its negotiation; that firm had an obvious right, with the consent of the company by whom the paper had been discounted, to use it as a debt due them, and thus protect their endorsement. And there was no error, in refusing instructions invalidating the sale as to said note. Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 167, 40 L. Ed. 374.

Preferential mortgage.—The act of making a preferential mortgage by a debtor, though he knew that he was insolvent, and knew that he was preferring one creditor at the expense of others, is not forbidden by the common law, and is not a violation of the statute laws of most of the United States at the time.[50]

Private Motive Immaterial.—And his private motives for giving the the states of the Union. Nor is it an act forbidden by any general rule of morals or of abstract justice. It was in fact a meritorious act, aside from the positive rule established by the bankrupt law. Barbour v. Priest, 103 U. S. 293, 295, 26 L. Ed. 478; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 639, 39 L. Ed. 289, citing Stewart v. Dunham, 115 U. S. 61, 29 L. Ed. 329; Estes v. Gunter, 122 U. S. 450, 30 L. Ed. 1228; Smith v. Craft, 123 U. S. 436, 31 L. Ed. 267; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 38 L. Ed. 540.

"A debtor in failing circumstances having the right to prefer a creditor, if the preferred creditor has a bona fide debt, and takes a mortgage with the intent of securing such debt, and not with the purpose of aiding the debtor to hinder and delay other creditors, the mortgage is valid, even though the mortgagee knows that the debtor is insolvent and that the debtor's intention is to hinder and delay other creditors." Huiskamp v. Moline Wagon Co., 121 U. S. 310, 319, 30 L. Ed. 971.

But a mortgage of his entire estate, executed by an insolvent mortgagor to a creditor, who knows of his insolvency, and who for the purpose of giving him a fictitious credit, actively conceals the mortgage, withholds it from record, and represents him as having a large estate and unlimited credit, by which means he is enabled to contract other debts which he cannot pay, is void at common law. Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 26 L. Ed. 1080.

And the mere failure to record the mortgage is not ground for setting it aside for the benefit of subsequent creditors who have acquired no specific lien on the property described in the mortgage. But when it is done with a fraudulent purpose, it is. Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 117, 121, 26 L. Ed. 1080. And see the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

Instruments operating as assignments and preferences thereby created.—See the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 612, et seq.

Preferences by corporations.—See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 741.

50. Over debt due United States.—United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 2 L. Ed. 370.

The United States have no lien on the property of their debtor, until suit brought, or a notorious insolvency or bankruptcy has taken place; or, being unable to pay all his debts, he has made a voluntary assignment of all his property; or, the debtor having absconded, concealed or absented himself, his property has been attached by process of law. United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 2 L. Ed. 370.

"The words of the act extend the meaning of the word insolvency to cases where 'a debtor, not having sufficient property to pay all his debts, shall have made a voluntary assignment thereof, for the benefit of his or her creditors.' The word 'property' is unquestionably all the property which the debtor possesses; and the word 'thereof' refers to the word 'property' as used, and can only be satisfied by an assignment of all the property of the debtor. Had the legislature contemplated a partial assignment, the words 'or part thereof,' or others of similar import, would have been added. If a trivial portion of an estate should be left out, for the purpose of evading the act, it would be considered as a fraud upon the law, and the parties would not be enabled to avail themselves of such a contrivance. But where a bona fide conveyance of part is made, not to avoid the law, but to secure a fair creditor, the case is not within the letter or the intention of the act." United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 91, 2 L. Ed. 370.

Priority of United States.—See the title UNITED STATES.

By chattel mortgage.—See the title CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 738.

Alabama.—Under the law of Alabama, a debtor has the right to prefer a creditor, and if the sale is real and made in good faith for a fair price—is honestly executed to extinguish the debt, and does extinguish it, and contains no reservation of any interest or benefit in favor of the vendor—it is valid and passes the property to the vendee; the sale, if it possesses these enumerated qualities, would be legal, although any of the following facts might be found by the jury to have existed: (a) That the vendor was insolvent to the knowledge of the vendee; (b) even although there was a fraudulent intent on the part of the vendor to defeat his other creditors, because, if the sale possessed the attributes necessary to make it valid, as the law permitted the preference under the conditions stated, the mere intention of the vendor to defraud his other creditors by giving a preference to one would not render the sale invalid; and (c) although its known effect and necessary consequence was that the remaining creditors of the vendor would be unable to obtain the payment of their debts. Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 158, 40 L. Ed. 374; Micou v. National Bank, 104 U. S. 530, 543, 26 L. Ed. 834.

"By recent legislation in Alabama the provisions of § 1737 of the Alabama code, upon which these rulings were made, have been amended, so that a conveyance substantially of all a debtor's property in payment of prior debts is put upon the same footing with conveyances for the preference cannot affect the exercise of the right, if the preferred creditor has done nothing improper to secure it.[51]

Fraudulent Intent Unknown to Grantee.—Even though the grantor had the purpose, when he made the deed, of hindering and delaying creditors not provided for by it, yet, if the preferred creditors were not parties or privies to his fraudulent purpose, but accepted the deed in good faith to secure the debts really due them, it would be valid as to them.[52] security of debts. Strickland v. Gay, 16 South. Rep. 77, 78. The questions, however, here are obviously to be determined by the law of Alabama existing at the time the transactions occurred." Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 162, 40 L. Ed. 374.

Dakota.—"By the statutes of Dakota it is provided that 'a debtor may pay one creditor in preference to another, or may give to one creditor security for the payment of his demand, in preference to another;' also, that 'every transfer of property or charge thereon made, every obligation incurred, and every judicial proceeding taken with intent to delay or defraud any creditor or other person of his demands, is void against all creditors of the debtor and their successors in interest, and against any persons upon whom the estate of the debtor devolves in trust for the benefit of other than the debtor.'" Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 618, 38 L. Ed. 286.

Iowa.—In Iowa, a mortgage or other conveyance of his property by an insolvent debtor to one or more of his creditors, with intent to give them preference, is valid, in the absence of fraud. Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 39 L. Ed. 289.

As to operation as general assignment, see the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 614, et seq.

Mississippi.—It is legal in Mississippi for an insolvent or failing debtor bona fide to convey all his property to pay an actual debt, although a preference is thereby created and other creditors must go unpaid, when there is no intent to secure a benefit to himself. Stewart v. Dunham, 115 U. S. 61, 66, 29 L. Ed. 329; Fitzpatrick v. Flannagan, 106 U. S. 648, 658, 27 L. Ed. 211; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 534, 38 L. Ed. 540.

Whatever else the prohibition against unfair preferences in the Mississippi statute might be supposed to include, it certainly did not make all preferences illegal. The supreme court of that state has decided that no preference could be held to be unfair which, tested by the rules of law, is legal; and that as to be illegal it must be fraudulent, and as all fraudulent dispositions of his property by a debtor are prohibited in other words, the clause relating to unfair preferences is mere surplusage. This construction is confirmed by the fact that the words in question have been omitted from the code of 1880 by the legislature of Mississippi. This interpretation of the statute is correct, and is accordingly adopted by this court. Fitzpatrick v. Flannagan, 106 U. S. 648, 659, 27 L. Ed. 211.

Missouri.—In Missouri a debtor in failing circumstances may give a preference to one or more of his creditors to the exclusion of others; and such disposition of his effects is not impeachable on the ground of fraud, because it embraces all his property; and accordingly assignments by insolvent debtors of all their property to pay particular creditors are upheld. Union Bank v. Kansas City Bank, 136 U. S. 223, 229, 34 L. Ed. 341.

The Missouri statutes only prevent any preference of creditors "by assignment," yet do not avoid deeds of trust, in the nature of mortgages, which were only securities for the payment of debts. Union Bank v. Kansas City Bank, 136 U. S. 223, 231, 34 L. Ed. 341.

Ohio.—In Ohio mortgages made by a trading corporation after it had become insolvent, and had ceased to do business, to prefer some of its creditors, are invalid and ineffectual against its creditors generally, without regard to the question whether the mortgages were or were not parts of the same transaction as an assignment under the statute. Smith, etc., Purifier Co. v. McGroarty, 136 U. S. 237, 241, 34 L. Ed. 346. See, also, the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 616.

Rhode Island.—"It is agreed that, according to the law of Rhode Island, the debtor in insolvent circumstances has a right to prefer creditors in the distribution of his estate, or in the application of it to the payment of his debts." Parker v. Phetteplace, 1 Wall. 684, 689, 17 L. Ed. 675.

Texas.—"The laws of Texas permitted a failing debtor to prefer creditors according to his election." Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 311, 18 L. Ed. 786.

51. Private motive immaterial.—Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556, 5 L. Ed. 522; Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 10 L. Ed. 903; Emerson v. Senter, 118 U. S. 1, 10, 30 L. Ed. 49.

The motives which may have induced the preference, although communicated to the agent, cannot, in reason, affect the transaction, provided nothing has occurred on the part of the creditors, which is in any degree exceptionable, either in law or justice. Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 89, 6 L. Ed. 423.

52. Fraudulent intent unknown to General Assignment on Same Day.—If the preferential sale was valid, the making of the general assignment on the same day did not render it illegal.[53]

Unlawful Consideration Invalidates.—But any unlawful consideration, moving from the preferred creditor, to induce the preference, will avoid the deed which gives it.[54]

Burden of Proof of Amount and Justness of Claim.—When the transaction is assailed by an antecedent creditor, the burden rests on a creditor who has been preferred to prove the existence, amount, and justness of his claim, and when paid in property he must also prove that the property was taken at a price not materially below its fair market value.[55]

Effect of Abortive Negotiation for Mutual Extension of Credit to Debtor.—It cannot be contended that, because the preferred creditor had written a letter to the contesting creditor, proposing a mutual extension of credit to the debtor, he could not afterwards receive payment of the debt by a sale from the debtor which created a preference, without operating a fraud upon grantee.—Emerson v. Senter, 118 U. S. 1, 10, 30 L. Ed. 49; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556, 577, 5 L. Ed. 522; Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 89, 6 L. Ed. 423; Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 118, 10 L. Ed. 903. See, also, ante, "Intent in General," III, C, 1.

As to knowledge of insolvency, see post, "What Constitutes a Preference," III, C, 8, c.

53. General assignment on same day.—Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 160, 40 L. Ed. 374.

"An insolvent debtor having, under repeated decisions of this court, the right to sell and convey property in absolute payment of an existing debt, provided the price is fair and reasonable, and no use or benefit is reserved to himself, such absolute sale and conveyance will not, at the instance of other creditors, be declared and treated as part of a general assignment executed soon afterwards (Code, 1737), though executed in anticipation of it, and with notice on the part of the creditor that the debtor intended to make a general assignment." Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 160, 40 L. Ed. 374. See the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 3, p. 614, et seq.

54. Unlawful consideration invalidates.—Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556, 5 L. Ed. 522.

55. Burden of proof of amount and justness of claim.—Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 162, 40 L. Ed. 374.

Such debtor cannot, under pretense of preferring certain creditors, pay to them sums largely in excess of their demands, and thus prevent his other creditors from receiving any payment. Hardt v. Heidweyer, 152 U. S. 547, 557, 38 L. Ed. 548.

If the law permits the debtor, in failing circumstances, to make choice of the persons he will pay, it denies him the right, in doing it, to contrive that the unpreferred creditor shall never be paid. In other words, the law condemns any plan in the disposition of property which necessarily accomplishes a fraudulent result. Drury v. Cross, 7 Wall. 299, 302, 19 L. Ed. 40.

While creditors had a right to take a conveyance of their debtor's property or choses in action to pay or secure their debt, if done fairly and honestly, even though a preference was thereby created, yet if such creditors took more than what appeared to be reasonably worth the amount of their debt, it was a fraud upon the other creditors; and the court, in giving the converse of this proposition, correctly said that "if the garnishees (the creditors) on that day received no more from the insolvent debtors than was reasonably sufficient to satisfy their claim, the jury were to find for the garnishees." Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 378, 33 L. Ed. 373.

So where, by the testimony of a member of the grantee firm himself it was made very clear that he was aware, at the time of the transaction by which he obtained the choses in action, that the debtors were insolvent, or at least were in failing circumstances and unable to pay their debts; and that he received from them all or nearly all of the notes and accounts due them, and professed to take them in payment of the debt of his firm, it was not unreasonable therefore, that the court should charge that, under these circumstances, he and his partners should establish the fairness of the proceeding by which they came into the possession of these notes and accounts. The burden of proof was upon them, although in the answer to interrogatories they positively denied having property or credits of the debtor in their hands, or that they were indebted to them. What they swore to as witnesses is of more force than such general denial. Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 377, 33 L. Ed. 373.

Still, the fact that the property thus conveyed was much in excess of the debts secured thereby, is not in itself necessarily indicative of fraud; but in all such cases the question of good faith is one of fact, and a mere error of judgment will not be imputed as a fraud. Davis v.

such other creditor, where the proposal of the letter was not acceded to, but such other creditor made terms of his own with the debtor without regard thereto.[56]

Preferences between Partnership and Individual Creditors.—Where it is claimed that a deed is fraudulent in law, "because it appropriates partnership assets to pay individual debts in preference to the debts of the partnership," and where, as here, the conveyance included all the property of the grantors as partners and individually, for the benefit of partnership and individual creditors, it should be construed distributively, and the partnership assets be applied to the payment of partnership debts and the individual assets to individual liabilities.[57]

b. Prohibition by Statute.—A failing debtor cannot be allowed to employ indirect means to accomplish that which the law prohibits to be done directly.[58]

Effect on Right to Distribution.—See post, "Sale and Distribution," VI, H, 3.

c. What Constitutes a Preference.—Transfer to One Creditor While Insolvent.—The transfer by a debtor who is insolvent, of his property, or a considerable portion of it, to one creditor as a security for a pre-existing debt, without making any provision for an equal distribution of its proceeds to all his creditors, operates as a preference to such transferee, and must be taken as prima facie evidence that a preference was intended, unless the debtor or transferee can show that the debtor was at the time ignorant of his insolvency, and that his affairs were such that he could reasonably expect to pay all his debts.[59]

Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 641, 645, 39 L. Ed. 289

As to reservation of benefit, see post, "Reservation of Benefit," III, C, 9, b.

53. Effect of abortive negotiation for mutual extension of credit to debtor.—Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 168, 40 L. Ed. 374.

57. Preferences between partnership and individual creditors.—Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 686, 33 L. Ed. 696. "The difficulty, at the time the assignment was made, attendant upon any attempt to separate the partnership and individual assets, and the partnership and individual debts, would be considered under the view of the state courts, in passing upon the question of intent to defraud in failing to specifically distinguish between them." See, also, the title PARTNERSHIP.

By joint act of husband and wife.—See ante, "Property Not Belonging to Debtor or Exempt," II, B, 7.

58. Prohibition by statute.—White v. Cotzhausen, 129 U. S. 329, 342, 32 L. Ed. 677

Where there is a state statute securing equality among the creditors of a debtor who, being insolvent, has determined to yield the dominion of his entire estate, and surrender it for the benefit of creditors, some of them cannot be preferred by the simple device of not making a formal assignment, and permitting them, under the cover or by means of conveyances, bills of sale or written transfers, to take his whole estate on account of their respective debts, to the exclusion of other creditors. White v. Cotzhausen, 129 U. S. 329, 341, 32 L. Ed. 677. See the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 616.

Conflict of laws.—Where a creditor received from his debtor in Massachusetts goods as security for or in satisfaction of his debt, in violation of the insolvent laws of that state, and is subsequently sued by trustee process in Massachusetts for the value of such goods by the assignee in insolvency, his liability therefor is not changed by a proceeding in attachment by him against such goods in New York as debtor's property under its laws, and a sale thereunder to him, as the preference was consummated in Massachusetts. Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 46 L. Ed. 573.

Where the supreme court of the state decided that "the action is not for recovery of a penalty, but to recover the value of goods conveyed in fraud of the laws relating to insolvency, and it properly might be commenced by trustee process," that the conveyance to plaintiffs in error was made to give a fraudulent preference must necessarily have been found as a fact by the jury, and such finding be accepted in this court. Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 341, 46 L. Ed. 573.

59. Transfer to one creditor while insolvent.—Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 21 L. Ed. 504. See, also, Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. Ed. 481, where it is said the burden of proof is upon him in such a case to prove the contrary.

Unless the debtor was in fact insolvent it cannot be held that such a grantee had reasonable cause to believe that he was, but if it appears that the debtor was in fact insolvent as alleged, and that the means of knowledge were at hand, and

d. Promise to Give Preference.—A precedent promise to give a preference in case of insolvency does not constitute a fraud on other creditors as a matter of law.[60]

e. Promise Not to Give Preferences.—A verbal promise not to make preferences constituted no lien upon grantor's property, and its disregard did not affect the validity of the deed.[61]

f. Preference of Wife.—The fact that one of the creditors preferred was the debtor's wife does not affect the question.[62]

g. Preference of Child.—And thus conferring upon an insolvent debtor the right of absolute choice among his creditors, the law does not require one who that such facts and circumstances were known to the grantee as were clearly sufficient to put a person of ordinary prudence and discretion upon inquiry, it is well settled that it would be his duty to make all such reasonable inquiries to ascertain the true state of the case. Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 601, 21 L. Ed. 504.

"Purchasers are required to exercise ordinary prudence in respect to the title of the seller, and if they fail to investigate when put upon inquiry, they are chargeable with all the knowledge which it is reasonable to suppose they would have acquired if they had performed their duty in that regard. Creditors have reasonable cause to believe that a debtor, who is a trader, is insolvent when such a state of facts is brought to their notice respecting the affairs and pecuniary condition of the debtor as would lead a prudent business man to the conclusion that he is unable to meet his obligations as they mature in the ordinary course of business." Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 601, 21 L. Ed. 504; Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. Ed. 481.

60. Promise to give preference.—Where it was claimed that an agreement by a debtor with a certain creditor, if such creditor would lend him money from time to time, that if anything should occur by which he was not able to pay his debts, he would secure him, constituted a fraud upon his other creditors, so as to invalidate the subsequent sale of his stock to such creditor, it was held that, as the debtor might lawfully prefer one of his creditors if there was no actual fraud, it cannot, in the absence of any finding upon that point, be said, as matter of law, either that the previous agreement to prefer was fraudulent, or that it was not; but the question of fraud or no fraud involved a question of fact, which, if this case had been on the common-law side of the court, and either party had desired it, must have been submitted to a jury. Smith v. Craft, 123 U. S. 436, 441, 31 L. Ed. 267; Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. Ed. 190.

61. Promise not to give preferences.—Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 693, 33 L. Ed. 696.

62. Preference of wife.—Jewell v. Knight, 123 U. S. 426, 435, 31 L. Ed. 190; Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 8 L. Ed. 709; Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496, 30 L. Ed. 1126.

"In Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 397, 8 L. Ed. 709, this court said that, among creditors equally meritorious, a debtor may conscientiously prefer one to another, and it can make no difference that the preferred creditor is his wife. So in Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496, 500, 30 L. Ed. 1126, which related to a conveyance of real estate by a husband for the benefit of his wife, and which conveyance was alleged to have been made in good faith to secure debts due to her for sums previously realized by him from sales of her individual property, the court said: 'If, therefore, there had been no other consideration for the deed than a desire to secure for his wife provision against the necessities for the future, it could not be sustained. * * * That the property in Pennsylvania, deeds of which are mentioned above, was used for his benefit, and to pay and secure his debts, is sufficiently established. The amount realized therefrom, as we read the evidence, was greater than the sum named in the trust deed as due to her. That deed for her security stands, therefore, upon a full consideration. Had it been given to a third party for a like debt it would not be open to question that it would have been unassailable. The result is not changed because the wife is the person to whom the debt is due and not another.'" Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 151 U. S. 420, 432, 38 L. Ed. 218.

Where a factor G. had in his possession goods consigned to him, of about the value of $45,000, and had advanced, as against those goods, by cash and acceptances, the sum of about $54,000, which acceptances were negotiable securities, which had passed in the market into the hands of bona fide holders, and on which he was primarily liable, he had a valid lien on the goods for the $54,000. His consignor, in transferring the goods to G., as absolute owner of them, on the 28th of February, 1881, recognized the lien and admitted that its liability to G. exceeded the value of the goods; and the transaction was in effect a foreclosure of the lien. The interest of the American Mills Company in the goods was only contingent, and no court of equity, in a case like the present, can declare that G.

is at the same time father and guardian to discriminate against his own flesh and blood, to whom he is indebted as their trustee. He may lawfully prefer them when he cannot pay all.[63]

h. Preference of Surety on Official Bond.—See the titles PRINCIPAL AND SURETY; PUBLIC OFFICERS.

9. RETENTION OF POSSESSION OR RESERVATION OF BENEFITS BY GRANTOR.—See ante, "Conveyances Fraudulent on Their Face," III, C, 2.

a. Retention of Possession—(1) In General.—A debtor in failing circumstances cannot sell and convey his land, even for a valuable consideration, by deed without reservations, and yet secretly reserve to himself the right to possess and occupy it, for even a limited time, for his own benefit. Nor will this rule of law be changed by the fact that the right thus to occupy the property for a limited time is a part of the consideration of the sale, the money part of the consideration being on this account proportionably abated.[64] The retention of the possession even where not stipulated for in the conveyance or a supplementary agreement thereto, is a circumstance of suspicion which requires to be explained.[65] And it has been held that where an absolute bill of could not transfer the goods to his wife, as against his other creditors and those of the company, in partial payment of a bona fide indebtedness to her. Fourth Nat. Bank v. American Mills Co., 137 U. S. 234, 237, 34 L. Ed. 655. See, also, ante, "Husband and Wife," III, C, 4, c.

63. Preference of child.—Micou v. National Bank, 104 U. S. 530, 543, 26 L. Ed. 834. See Mellen v. Buckner, 139 U. S. 388, 35 L. Ed. 199. See, also, ante, "Parent and Child," III, C, 4, d.

64. Retention of possession.—Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. 78, 18 L. Ed. 750; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 533, 38 L. Ed. 540.

"The fraud in this case is an inference of law, on which the court is as much bound to pronounce the conveyances in question void as to creditors, as if the fraudulent intent were directly proved." Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. 78, 79, 18 L. Ed. 750. See, also, Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 460, 15 L. Ed. 950; Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552; Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 626, 38 L. Ed. 286.

"Such a transfer may be upon a valuable consideration, but it lacks the element of good faith; for while it professes to be an absolute conveyance on its face, there is a concealed agreement between the parties to it, inconsistent with its terms, securing a benefit to the grantor, at the expense of those he owes. A trust, thus secretly created, whether so intended or not, is a fraud on creditors, because it places beyond their reach a valuable right —the right of possession—and gives to the debtor the beneficial enjoyment of what rightfully belongs to his creditors." Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. 78, 79, 18 L. Ed. 750; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 533, 38 L. Ed. 540.

An agreement between persons insolvent and a bank, whereby the insolvents, for the purpose of securing their existing indebtedness to the bank, as well as to obtain future advances, promise its president to deliver to the bank, whenever it may desire, the entire stock of goods which they may have at the time on hand in a store kept by them, the goods being in the meantime retained in their possession, is void as against their other creditors. Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. Ed. 190.

Such an agreement does not create any lien upon the property, or entitle the bank to any preference over other creditors in the event of the debtors being afterwards proceeded against under the bankrupt act. Any subsequent sale, made in pursuance of the agreement, does not take effect by relation at its date. Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. Ed. 190.

65. Circumstance of suspicion though not stipulated for.—Callan v. Statham, 23 How. 477, 481, 16 L. Ed. 532; Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 119, 10 L. Ed. 903. The continuance of the vendor in the possession and occupation and full enjoyment of the premises, the same after the deed as before, and absence of interest in the subject manifested by the vendee, are circumstances not satisfactorily explained; also, the heavy indebtedness of vendor, and suits pending and maturing to judgment—all well known to the vendee.

Deeds of large tracts of land made by a grantor when deeply in debt, and when suits were pending against him, and who shortly afterwards petitioned for the benefit of the bankrupt act, the possession and occupation of the land continuing the same after the sale as before, and the consideration money one-half only of the actual value, held to be fraudulent and void as against creditors. Hudgins v. Kemp, 20 How. 45, 15 L. Ed. 853.

"In Twyne's case, the facts that the sale was accompanied by a secret trust in favor of the debtor, and that the vendor remained in possession, showed that it was not intended as a bona fide preference to the creditor, but merely as a trick to keep the property away from the other sale of property is made, and the possession does not accompany the deed, but remains with the vendor, the transfer is not only voidable, but is absolutely void,[66] but later cases hold that the presumption of fraud is rebuttable,[67] but only where actual change of possession is in the power of the parties.[68] creditors." Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 639, 39 L. Ed. 289.

"In a recent case in the court of appeals of New York, Todd v. Nelson, 109 N. Y. 316, 327, that court thus stated the law: 'The theory upon which deeds conveying the property of an individual to some third party have been set aside as fraudulent in regard to subsequent creditors of the grantor has been that he has made a secret conveyance of his property while remaining in the possession and seeming ownership thereof, and has obtained credit thereby, while embarking in some hazardous business requiring such credit, or the debts which he has incurred were incurred soon after the conveyance, thus making the fraudulent intent a natural and almost a necessary inference, and in this way he has been enabled to obtain the property of others who were relying upon an appearance which was wholly delusive." Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 409, 33 L. Ed. 955. See, also, ante, "Insolvency of Grantor," III, C, 7.

But though, if the fund had remained in the possession of debtor, for his own benefit, it might have cast a suspicion upon the fairness of the transaction, here there is no proof of any such object or design, nor of any fact from which an inference of mala fides can be drawn; but on the contrary, the object of his continuing in the possession of the property is satisfactorily accounted for by the circumstances of the case. It consisted principally of unsettled accounts, and choses in action, which he was much more competent to settle than a stranger could have been. It was, therefore, for the benefit of the creditors, that he continued to settle up these accounts and pay over the money to his creditors, as the proofs show that he did. This was by the express consent of some of the creditors, and the presumed consent of all, as no dissent or complaint appears to have been made by any; and no one had any right to complain, but the parties who were to receive the benefit of the assignment. Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 119, 10 L. Ed. 903.

66. When sale absolute.—Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 2 L. Ed. 118; Bank v. Higginbottom, 9 Pet. 48, 60, 9 L. Ed. 46.

In the case of Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 310, 2 L. Ed. 118, the court held, under the statute of Virginia against frauds, that an absolute bill of sale, unless possession "accompanies and follows" the deed, is fraudulent; and the case of Edwards v. Harben, 2 Term Rep. 587, was cited. It is admitted that the statute is in affirmance of the common law. Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 459, 15 L. Ed. 950.

The act of the Virginia assembly against fraudulent sales, protected by being recorded, does not comprehend absolute bill of sale, among those where the title may be separated from the possession, and yet the conveyance be a valid one, if recorded within eight months. Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 315, 2 L. Ed. 118.

67. Presumption rebuttable.—"For many years past the tendency has been, in England and in the United States, to consider the question of fraud as a fact for the jury under the instruction of the court. And the weight of authority seems to be now, in this country, favorable to this position. Where possession of goods does not accompany the deed, it is prima facie fraudulent, but open to the circumstances of the transaction, which may prove an innocent purpose. But if such explanation may be given, it is a departure from the stringent rule in the case of Edwards v. Harben." Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 460, 15 L. Ed. 950.

"It would seem to be difficult, on principle, to maintain that the possession of goods sold is, per se, fraud, to be so pronounced by the court, as that cuts off all explanation of the transaction, which may have been entirely unexceptionable. If circumstances, at law, may be proved to rebut the presumption of fraud, the case must be submitted to the jury." Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 460, 15 L. Ed. 950.

And so in the case of transfer of real property. Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 598, 36 L. Ed. 552.

And the fact that a debtor, after a judicial sale of his property, was allowed to remain in possession for a while by the purchasers, is no ground of complaint to creditors who could not otherwise attack the sale. Micou v. National Bank, 104 U. S. 530, 543, 26 L. Ed. 834.

68. Must be within power of parties.—Without undertaking to suggest whether, in any case, the want of possession of the thing sold constitutes, per se, a badge of fraud, or is only prima facie a presumption of fraud, it is sufficient to say that in case even of an absolute sale of personal property, the want of such possession is not presumption of fraud, if possession cannot, from the circumstances of the property, be within the power of the parties. Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. 386, 7 L. Ed. 189, followed in Conard v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 310, 7 L. Ed.

Whether there was a colorable delivery or not, is a matter of fact for the jury.[69]

Where Sale Not Absolute.—In cases where the sale is not absolute, but conditional, the want of possession, if consistent with the stipulations of the parties, and a fortiori, if flowing directly from them, has never been held to be, per se, a badge of fraud.[70]

862; Harris v. De Wolf, 4 Pet. 147, 150, 7 L. Ed. 811.

Thus, where the goods at the time of the transfer were at sea, on a voyage, in which they were to be sold, or exchanged by the consignee, and the proceeds sent back in the same ships, it was, therefore, properly in the contemplation of the parties, and indeed, a necessary result of their stipulation, that the goods should not be intercepted, or taken possession of, by the company, until the close of the voyage; and that the return shipments should conform to this arrangement. There is no pretense to say that the plaintiffs did not seek possession of the goods, within a reasonable time after the arrival of the goods home. Their power to accomplish it was dislodged by the execution of the United States, and they obtained, as early as practicable, possession of the bills of lading, and vouchers of their rights. But so far as the want of possession was matter of evidence presumptive of fraud, it was left open to the consideration of the jury; and the grievance now is not that it was so left, but that the court ought to have instructed the jury, as matter of law, that the want of possession, under the circumstances of the case, was, per se, a badge of fraud, which it was not. Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. 386, 449, 7 L. Ed. 189, followed in Conard v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 310, 7 L. Ed. 862; Harris v. De Wolf, 4 Pet 147, 150, 7 L. Ed. 811.

69. Whether there was a colorable delivery or not, was a matter of fact for the jury, and not a matter of law for the court. It is clearly not within the case of Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 2 L. Ed. 118. Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 460, 15 L. Ed. 950.

"The fifth and sixth charges were, that the jury were to determine the facts as to the possession after the sale; and that, if a sale is made by a party, and the vendor remain in possession, it is ordinarily a badge of fraud, and requires explanation; and under the sixth they left the case to the jury, to determine whether the sale was in good faith and for an honest purpose; which instructions were, as we think, correct, and in accordance with the general doctrine on the subject." Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 461, 15 L. Ed. 950.

70 When sale not absolute.—Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. 386, 7 L. Ed. 189, followed in Conard v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 310, 7 L. Ed. 862; Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 317, 2 L. Ed. 118.

Mortgage to secure against prospective liability.—Where an insolvent debtor's deed in Mississippi was in fact a mortgage of the property to secure against a prospective liability, in such cases it is usual for the grantor or mortgagor to remain in possession of the property until the maturity of the obligation and a sale of the premises, and standing by itself, the deed was not open to any serious objection on that account. And even that reservation was defeated by the assignment, which included the property in question with other property of the assignor, and provided that the assignee should take possession of the same and sell and dispose of it with all convenient diligence. The creditors were not, therefore, in any way hindered or defrauded by the alleged reservation. Estes v. Gunter, 122 U. S. 450, 455, 30 L. Ed. 1228.

"And in Estes v. Gunter, 122 U. S. 450, 30 L. Ed. 1128, a deed by an insolvent debtor in Mississippi to secure sureties upon his note, though made in advance of, and in contemplation of, a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, was held to be valid under the laws of that state, though containing a provision that the creditor should remain in possession until the maturity of the note. In this case, also, the common law did not seem to have been affected by any local statute." Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 534, 38 L. Ed. 540.

In United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 88, 2 L. Ed. 370, the court sustained the validity of a deed made to save grantee harmless on account of his having become the security of grantor to the United States, and on account of notes to be indorsed by grantee for the accommodation of grantor, it being alleged that these are purposes for which it is supposed this deed of trust could not lawfully have been executed. The deed had been pronounced fraudulent under the statute of 13th of Elizabeth, by the lower court.

"That statute contains a proviso that it shall not extend to conveyances made upon good consideration, and bona fide. The goodness of the consideration, in the case at bar, has been admitted; but it is alleged that the conveyance is not bona fide; and for this, Twyne's Case has been principally relied on. But in that case, the intent was believed by the court to be fraudulent, and in this case, it is admitted not to have been fraudulent. It is contended that all the circumstances from which fraud was inferred in that case, are to be found in this; but the court can find between them no trait of similitude. In that case, the deed was of all the property; was secret; was of chattels, and purported to be absolute, yet the vendor remained in possession of them, and exercised marks of ownership over them. In this case, the deed is of part of the property; is of record; is of lands, and purports to be a conveyance which, according to its legal operation, leaves the property conveyed in possession of the grantor." United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 89, 2 L. Ed. 370.

(2) Statutory Provisions.—A statute may require the change of possession to be open and visible, or the transfer will be fraudulent in law regardless of valuable consideration, good faith and any actual intent to defraud.[71] "Immediate" delivery under such a statute means as soon as practicable.[72]

"In the case of Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch 309, 2 L. Ed. 118, this court declared an absolute bill of sale of a personal chattel, of which the vendor retained the possession, to be a fraud. But the difference is a marked one between a conveyance which purports to be absolute, and a conveyance which, from its terms, is to leave the possession in the vendor. If, in the latter case, the retaining of possession was evidence of fraud, no mortgage could be valid. The possession universally remains with the grantor, until the creditor becomes entitled to his money, and either choses or is compelled to exert his right. That the grantor is to receive the rents and profits until the grantee shall become entitled to demand the money which the deed is intended to secure, is a usual covenant." United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 89, 2 L. Ed. 370.

"All the covenants in this deed appear to the court to be fair, legitimate and consistent with common usage. It will barely be observed that the validity of this conveyance is to be tested by the statutes of Virginia, which embraces this subject. But this is not mentioned as having any influence in this case." United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 89, 2 L. Ed. 370.

Chattel mortgage.—The fact that the execution of chattel mortgages was immediately followed by a delivery of possession of the property mortgaged, so far from being a badge of fraud, has rather a contrary tendency, and was evidently resorted to to avoid an implication of fraud from the retention of possession by the mortgagor. A prompt and vigorous enforcement of an honest debt is by no means indicative of fraud, and it does not lie in the mouth of the plaintiffs, who were themselves taking steps in the same direction as the mortgagees, to cavil at their success. Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 640, 39 L. Ed. 289. See the title CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, pp. 728, 734.

71. Statutory provisions construed.—It has been held, under a statute, declaring the transfer of personal property—the vendor having at the time possession or control thereof—to be conclusively fraudulent and void, as against creditors, unless such transfer is accompanied by an immediate delivery, and followed by an actual and continued change of possession, that the change must be of that character that customers and those accustomed to frequent the premises may be at once advised of the change of possession by the changed appearance of the property or its change of custody. And this is true, whatever may be the good intention or bona fides of the transaction; even the law will not tolerate such transfers as against creditors. The change of possession must be made open and visible, and if not, as against creditors without knowledge of the transfer, it will be void, though made for a valuable consideration in good faith and without any actual intent to defraud. In such case the law conclusively presumes a fraudulent intent, and the party to such sale will not be heard to prove the contrary. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 623, 38 L. Ed. 286.

The court said to the jury that the statute means that the sale shall be open and public, that the world may be apprised of the change of ownership; and that the change of possession must be actual and continued, and not subject to some secret trust between the buyer and seller. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 623, 38 L. Ed. 286.

"While the court was at liberty to recall to the minds of jurors all the facts and circumstances bearing upon this issue, we cannot say that it erred in not doing so, or that it erred in leaving to the jury to determine whether, under all the evidence, there was such immediate delivery and such actual change of possession of the property in controversy as was necessary, under the statute as explained, to make the transfer valid against creditors." Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 624, 38 L. Ed. 286.

72. "Immediate" delivery construed.—Where a bill of sale of a stock of goods was executed Saturday night at 9 o'clock, and the goods, which were at a place 23 miles away, were taken possession by vendee the next morning, Sunday, at four o'clock, and remained in his possession until the goods were seized under the levy of an attachment made the next morning, it appears that there was not a single hour in which business could be, or was usually, transacted, that intervened between the execution and delivery of the bill of sale and the transfer of the possession of the property. This was certainly an immediate delivery of possession under the statute (which made a sale where there was not "immediate" delivery conclusively fraudulent), and that possession continued until interrupted by the seizure by the defendants. Kleinschmidt v. McAndrews, 117 U. S. 282, 288, 29 L. Ed. 905.

(3) As Security for Price.—The retention of possession by the sellers until, and as security for, the payment of the price, is not inconsistent with an actual sale by which title passed to the buyer.[73]

Dakota.—So in Dakota, Civil Code, §§ 2021, 2023, 2024; Complied Laws of Territory of Dakota, §§ 4654, 4656, 4657. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 618, 38 L. Ed. 286.

Illinois.—The policy of the law in Illinois will not permit the owner of personal property to sell it, either absolutely or conditionally, and still continue in possession of it, so as to exempt it from seizure or attachment at the suit of creditors of the vendor. If between the parties, without delivery, the sale is valid, it has no effect on third persons who, in good faith, purchase it, and an attaching creditor stands in the light of a purchaser, and as such will be protected. Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 128, 45 L. Ed. 457; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664, 23 L. Ed. 1003. See, also, Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 250, 25 L. Ed. 339; Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 663, 678, 30 L. Ed. 285.

"Secret liens which treat the vendor of personal property, who has delivered possession of it to the purchaser, as the owner until the payment of the purchase money, cannot be maintained in Illinois. They are held to be constructively fraudulent as to creditors, and the property, so far as their rights are concerned, is considered as belonging to the purchaser holding the possession." Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 129, 45 L. Ed. 457.

In Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 45 L. Ed. 457, a sale of personalty, by a debtor to his creditor in payment of the debt or a security therefor, was attacked as fraudulent as to other creditors of the vendor, under the following circumstances: The president of the debtor corporation executed and delivered the bill of sale to one of its creditors of goods in a store conducted by S. as its agent. S. was employed by the creditor to sell said goods, but no change in the possession of the goods was made, except that S. insured same in the name of the creditor, opened a new set of books to keep his accounts in, and delivered an inventory of the goods to the creditor's attorney, and also billed portions of the goods to purchasers in the name of the creditor, depositing the proceeds of such sales to the latter's credit. The signs on the outside of the store remained the same, the employees the same, and the goods apparently in the possession of the debtor, so far as appeared to the public. No advertisement of the transfer was made, or notice thereof given, but the salesmen were instructed not to inform the public nor customers of such transfer. It was held that this did not constitute as matter of law, a visible, open and notorious change of possession required by the law of Illinois to protect such goods from levy or attachment by other creditors.

"The facts stated in the findings were evidentiary only, and instead of being conclusive of publicity, tended rather to show intentional concealment." Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 132, 45 L. Ed. 457.

Missouri.—Under the statute of frauds of Missouri every sale by a vendor of goods and chattels unless accompanied by delivery within a reasonable time (regard being had to the situation of the property), and followed by an actual and continued change of possession is fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the vendor or subsequent purchasers in good faith. Revised Statutes of 1865, p. 440, ch. 107; Allen v. Massey, 17 Wall. 351, 352, 21 L. Ed. 542.

The possession which the purchaser is required to take of the property sold, in order to render the sale valid under this statute, must be open, notorious, and unequivocal, such as would inform the public, or those who were accustomed to deal with the party, that the property had changed hands, and that the title had passed from the vendor to the purchaser. Allen v. Massey, 17 Wall. 351, 354, 21 L. Ed. 542.

Under this statute a sale of household furniture in a house occupied jointly by vendor and vendee, both using the furniture alike, and there being no other change of possession than that the vendor, after going around with the vendee and looking at the furniture and agreeing on the price, turned it over to the vendee and executed a bill of sale before a notary, both parties then, after the sale, occupying the house and using the furniture exactly as before, is void as against the vendor's creditors. Allen v. Massey, 17 Wall. 351, 21 L. Ed. 542.

Pennsylvania.—"In the case of a voluntary sale of goods, the law, both in Pennsylvania and England, regards the continuance of the debtor's possession as a badge of fraud. In England, the law is the same, where the sale is made by the sheriff; (a) but in Pennsylvania, a different rule, in that case, has prevailed; and where a relation or friend, after a fair purchase, at public sale, leaves the goods in the occupancy and use of the debtor, it never has been deemed a fraud upon creditors." Waters v. McClellan, 4 Dall. 208, 1 L. Ed. 803.

73. As security for price.—Arkansas

b. Reservation of Benefit.—There is a class of cases undoubtedly in which transfers of property are adjudged to be fraudulent, although there be no actual fraud meditated by the parties. Such are the cases of an assignment by an insolvent debtor reserving portions of the assigned property for his own benefit, requiring releases from creditors as a condition of participating in the fund, and the like.[74] Whatever transfer of the title to property, by a failing or insolvent debtor, may be valid, any instrument which secures to the assignor an interest in or an unlimited control over the property conveyed, and which has the effect of hindering or delaying creditors, is void as being a fraud upon those creditors.[75] The question is not one of law, so much as it is one of fact and

Cattle Co. v. Mann, 130 U. S. 69, 78, 32 L. Ed. 854.

74. Reservation of benefit.—Stephen v. Beall, 22 Wall. 329, 340, 22 L. Ed. 786; Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. 78, 80, 18 L. Ed. 750; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 537, 38 L. Ed. 540.

"If a man were to convey his whole estate, and afterwards to contract debts, there would be much reason to suspect a secret trust for his own benefit; the transaction would be closely inspected, and a sweeping conveyance of his whole property would, undoubtedly, form an important item in the testimony to establish fraud. So, in many other cases which might be adduced." Brashear v. West, 7 Pet. 608, 614, 8 L. Ed. 801. And see the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 602.

75. Same.—Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 282, 32 L. Ed. 429; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 535, 38 L. Ed. 540; Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 619, 38 L. Ed. 286.

An arrangement by which a grantor placed his property in grantee's hands to be used in liquidating his debts, and, when this was done, the property, or so much of it as had not been consumed in the payment of debts, was to be restored to him, and that in the meanwhile he was to have enough of the rents to live on, is so entirely inconsistent with the absolute conveyance of the property as executed between the parties, that it has all the features of a fraud upon creditors. It reserves to the grantor the enjoyment of the rents and profits of the property conveyed, to which the creditors have a right of immediate appropriation to their debts, and involves a secret trust for the return to himself of property of which such creditors have the immediate right of sale. The law does not countenance any such transaction, but leaves both parties in the position where they have placed themselves. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 67, 33 L. Ed. 242; Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. 78, 18 L. Ed. 750.

Agreement for reconveyance after payment of debt.—Upon a bill filed by the assignee in bankruptcy of a debtor, H., it was alleged that a confession of judgment by H., the issuing of executions and sale under such executions of debtor's land to the judgment creditor, F., and a subsequent conveyance by such creditor to H., of such real estate, by way of mortgage to secure the amount still due such creditor, were fraudulent simulations for the purpose of enabling H. to put his property beyond the reach of his creditors and of enabling this creditor, by means of an unlawful preference to obtain payment of his claim in full, H., having become a voluntary bankrupt in the meanwhile and having obtained his discharge in bankruptcy before the date of the last mentioned deed, and being alleged to have been insolvent during the whole period involved. It was held, the allegations of fraud and collusion being denied in the answer filed by the creditor thus preferred, that the case made by the bill was not established, but on the contrary the answer of the creditor was supported by the proofs, and his acts and doings throughout appeared to have been fair and honest, and the debt due him, so secured, an honest debt. Norton v. Hood, 124 U. S. 20, 31 L. Ed. 364.

An agreement made between them by which the creditor contracted to reconvey the property if his debt should be punctually paid in installments specified, was held not to contain or suggest anything fraudulent. It assigns fair and natural motives for the favor he was doing to H. Although the agreement was executed by H. as well as the creditor, it contains no covenants or stipulations on the part of H., and no agreement by H. to pay the amounts mentioned in it, making up the balance due on the judgment. The only stipulations in it are those made by the creditor. He does not, by the agreement, sell and transfer the property to H., but only stipulates that he will sell and transfer it on condition that H. shall punctually make the payments specified in it; H. wholly failed to take the benefit of this agreement, but, instead thereof, immediately after the first day of payment mentioned in it, he filed a petition in bankruptcy. By the terms of the agreement, all rights existing under it in favor of H. had ceased prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and there was no right growing out of the agreement which passed, or could pass, to the assignee in bankruptcy, as representing H., because, in that respect the rights of the plaintiff attached only to rights which good faith.[76]

10. Want or Inadequacy of Consideration—a. Want of Consideration.—The want of a valuable consideration may be a badge of fraud, but it is only presumptive, and not conclusive, evidence of it, and may be met and rebutted by evidence on the other side.[77]

Bona Fide Debt.—A bona fide debt is pro tanto a valuable consideration to existed in favor of Hood at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Norton v. Hood, 124 U. S. 20, 31, 31 L. Ed. 364.

The only other right which the plaintiff could have, in his capacity as assignee in bankruptcy, was the right to reach property transferred by H. in fraud of his creditors. As to that, the proof is that no property was transferred by H. in fraud of his creditors, or taken by defendant in fraud of such creditors. Norton v. Hood, 124 U. S. 20, 32, 31 L. Ed. 364.

Employment of grantor and resale to wife.—See ante, "Employment of Grantor as Grantee's Agent or Attorney," III, C, 5. See, also, ante, "Conveyance to Wife," III, C, 4, c, (1).

Assuming the bona fides of the sale and its validity, except in so far as its legality may have been affected by the employment of vendor in a clerical capacity, and the subsequent sale by the vendee to vendor's wife, the fact of the employment and resale, no question being made as to the reality of the transfer, could at best have been only competent evidence to be considered by the jury in determining whether or not a secret benefit was reserved to the debtor in the original transaction, which was the issue on this branch of the case. Certainly, if nothing else appeared but the mere employment of vendor subsequent to the sale, to assist in the disposition of the goods and the getting in of the book accounts, such fact would not be a circumstance in itself sufficient to prove within the meaning of the Alabama law that the transaction was fraudulent. Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 164, 40 L. Ed. 374.

Provision for purchase by creditors with claims at face value.—A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, with preferences, contained a peculiar provision for bidding by the creditors of the second class at any public sale that might be made of the assigned property, with the right in such creditors to pay therefor "at its full face value the amount found due such purchaser secured by this deed, or so much thereof as may be necessary to enable such creditor to complete the payment of his purchase money," the proceeds to be distributed to the creditors secured in the order named, and in the distribution between those creditors purchasing property and paying therefor under this provision, and those who made no purchase, such rule of equality to be observed as will be just and proper. It was held that fraudulent intent was not a necessary deduction from this clause permitting these creditors to avail themselves of their claims in bidding, as creditors of the first class were to be paid before this clause could take effect, thus precluding its operation to their prejudice. And such intention was supported by the facts. The second-class creditors are all treated alike, and if it could be said that the clause might operate to create a preference as between them, the grantors had a right to prefer; but inasmuch as each can bid, and the trustees have power to divide the property into parcels to enable as many creditors as possible to become bidders, and are charged with the duty to observe such rule of equality between those who purchase and those who do not, as will be just, it is not easy to see how a preference could be obtained. The question is not whether the trustees might prove unfaithful—a contingency of which there is no intimation here—but whether the provisions of the deed, if carried out according to their apparent intent, would be fraudulent in their operation. Such is not the reasonable inference, and the manifest object was to stimulate bidding, prevent a sacrifice of the property, and benefit the creditors, and this without any advantage to the assignors other than that involved in having their assets go as far as possible in payment of their debts. The deed is not void in law because of the insertion of the provision in question. Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 687, 689, 33 L. Ed. 696.

76. Question of fact and good faith.—Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 278, 35 L. Ed. 171; Jewell v. Knight, 123 U. S 426, 31 L. Ed. 190; Smith v. Craft, 123 U S. 436, 31 L. Ed. 267.

Reservations and stipulations in assignments.—See the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol 2, pp. 621-623.

Power of disposal in mortgagor of chattels.—See the title CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 731, et seq.

Reservation of surplus in chattel mortgage.—See the titles CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, pp. 339, 340.

Instructions.—See post, "Instructions," VI, G.

77. Want of consideration.—Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 213, 6 L. Ed 454. It will be noted that only the want or inadequacy of consideration as a badge of fraud is treated here. The subject of voluntary conveyances, as such, is treated post, "Voluntary Conveyances," IV.

Between persons in confidential relations.—See ante, "Confidential Relations," III, C, 4.

support a transfer of property by the debtor to such creditor,[78] or even future advances,[79] or a moral, though unenforcible obligation to pay for services rendered.[80]

b. Inadequacy of Consideration.—A deed made upon a valuable and adequate consideration which is actually paid, and where the change of property is bona fide, or such as it purports to be, cannot be considered as a conveyance to defraud creditors.[81] And if adequate when made, it does not become inadequate through subsequent developments.[82] To constitute a valuable consideration, it is not necessary that money should be paid; but if, as in this case, it be expended on the faith of the contract, it constitutes a valuable consider-

78. Bona fide debt.—Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 277, 35 L. Ed. 171; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 520, 22 L. Ed. 758; Mellen v. Buckner, 139 U. S. 388, 35 L. Ed. 199, where it is held, following Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 28 L. Ed. 547, that an act of sale, and donation by a father to his daughter of community property under the Louisiana law, while void as a donation, was good as a sale to the amount due the daughter from her mother's estate, together with the amount she was directed to pay to a creditor. In other words to the amount of what was due her from him as a debt.

Existing debt.—A creditor secured by deed of trust on property concededly of less value than the debt, with the right to direct the sale of the property publicly or privately, may accept the property in satisfaction of his debt and direct its conveyance by the trustee to himself, to the debtor's children or any other person, without affording other creditors any just grounds of complaint. Van Riswick v. Spalding, 117 U. S. 370, 29 L. Ed. 913.

The extinguishment of an existing indebtedness is a valuable consideration for a purchase made in good faith. Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552.

The consideration here was not in any view so inadequate as to raise an inference of bad faith, and it probably exceeded the value of the property conveyed. Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 597, 36 L. Ed. 552.

It was also held in Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 601, 36 L. Ed. 552, that the holding of the lower court that the decided weight of the evidence supported the conclusion that the notes, the surrender of which unpaid was claimed as the consideration for another of the deeds in question, were paid before the conveyance to grantee was made, and that therefore that conveyance was without consideration and fraudulent against the creditors of grantor, was correct. The court said: "We have patiently examined the evidence contained in the record, and it is impossible for us to reverse the decree for error or mistake in the conclusions of the master and the court, depending, as they do, upon the weighing of conflicting testimony, and entitled, as they are, to every reasonable presumption in their favor." And see ante, "Preference to Creditors," III, C, 8.

79. Future advances.—"That the property stood bound for future advances is, in itself, unexceptionable. It may, indeed, be converted to improper purposes, but it is not positively inadmissible. It is frequent, for a person who expects to become more considerably indebted, to mortgage property to his creditor, as a security for debts to be contracted, as well as for that which is already due." United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch 73, 89, 2 L. Ed. 370.

80. Voluntary payment for services rendered.—Where a contract was wholly contingent upon the success of the obligee in the performance of his part, as to his right to compensation, and it was never performed either by him personally or by his assignees, so that there was no legal obligation upon the other party to pay anything for such services as he had rendered, yet, where he had rendered valuable services, as was conceded by the other party, there was nothing to prevent compensation therefor taking the form of a donation or personal gift to his widow, without same being subject to the claims of his creditors. Gilfillan v. McKee, 159 U. S. 303, 315, 40 L. Ed. 161.

81. Adequate valuable consideration.—Wheaton v. Sexton, 4 Wheat. 503, 4 L. Ed. 626.

"Of such a contract, it cannot be predicated that it is with intent to defeat or defraud creditors, since, although the property itself no longer remains subject to the judgment, a substitute is furnished by which that judgment may be satisfied. Nor is it any impeachment of such a deed, that it is made to the use of the family of the maker. The trustee, in that case, becomes the benefactor, and not the husband. It is not a provision made by him for his family, but by another." Wheaton v. Sexton, 4 Wheat. 503, 507, 4 L. Ed. 626.

82. Not affected by subsequent developments.—Trust Co. v. Sedwick, 97 U. S. 304, 307, 24 L. Ed. 954; Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 60, 33 L. Ed. 242; King v. Thompson, 9 Pet. 204, 9 L. Ed. 102; Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 487, 23 L. Ed. 363.

Thus, if a promise to cancel the debts of the grantor, which was the consideration for the conveyance, was a fair and valid transaction when it was made, it did not become less so because subse-ation.[83] And a grossly inadequate price is, under some circumstances, evidence of fraud, and a fit subject of inquiry by a jury, in determining the validity of a sale made under legal process,[84] or in pais.[85] Wherever there is an appearance of fraud, the inadequacy of price, though not conclusive, in itself, to avoid a sale, affords an argument of great weight against a purchaser to whom the fraud is imputed.[86] The true consideration may be shown by parol evidence, where a nominal one is recited.[87] quent occurrences enabled grantee to effect a settlement with the creditors upon the payment of a small percentage of their respective claims; and if the means he employed to effect such compromises were not proper, it might give the overreached creditors cause of complaint, but certainly not the grantor. Had he been able to persuade the creditors to give a release of their claims without any consideration whatever, that could not retroact and make inadequate what was an adequate consideration when the contract was made. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 60, 33 L. Ed. 242.

The price agreed to on the face of the instrument itself was not so grossly inadequate as to create the presumption of fraud and undue influence, aside from, and independent of, any proof other than the single fact that the parties thereto bore the relation to each other of principal and agent. Assuming for the present, and for present purposes only, that the agreement was bona fide as respects third persons, creditors of the parties, and considering it with exclusive reference to the reciprocal rights of the two parties to it, the evidence is not such as to raise the presumption of fraud and therefore to call for or justify the interposition of a court of equity for the cancellation of the contract. The fairness of the transaction, on this point, should be determined by the condition of things at the time the contract was made and executed, and not by what occurred afterwards, except so far as subsequent developments may reflect light upon it. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 58, 33 L. Ed. 242.

83. Payment of money unnecessary.—King v. Thompson, 9 Pet. 204, 9 L. Ed. 102.

84. Inadequate consideration as evidence of fraud.—Blanchard v. Brown, 3 Wall. 245, 250, 18 L. Ed. 69.

85. Same.—Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 597, 36 L. Ed. 552; Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 369, 19 L. Ed. 461.

It is true that mere inadequacy of consideration, unless extremely gross, does not per se prove fraud. But the direct testimony here confirms the fact that vendee urged the acceptance of his offer to purchase with arguments such as this: "There is some pretty rough talk in town about you. You had better not delay this matter. You had better let me have the goods and put the money in your pocket and let the creditors go to the devil." The circumstantial evidence amply confirms this direct evidence of fraud. 1st. The false receipts given for full value on Saturday. 2d. The account of stock made out on Sunday. 3d. The removal of the goods into a cellar on Monday. The defendant's endeavor to prove by experts, that the price given was sufficient, tends only to confirm the fraud. Kempner v. Churchill, 8 Wall. 362, 369, 19 L. Ed. 461.

The fact that the property conveyed was nominally more than double in value to the amount of debts secured thereby is not in itself indicative of fraud, since the property conveyed was a stock of goods of somewhat uncertain value, and when sold realized but little more than was necessary to pay off the mortgages. Indeed, the federal supreme court held directly in Downs v. Kissam, 10 How. 102, 108, 13 L. Ed. 346, that it was not even a badge of fraud that a mortgage was made to cover more property than would secure the debt due. Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 641, 39 L. Ed. 289.

86. Same.—Weitzell v. Fry, 4 Dall. 218, 221, 1 L. Ed. 807.

Where a person took the benefit of the bankrupt law of the United States; omitted, in first schedule of property, to take any notice of a claim which he had against the Mexican Republic, for the unlawful seizure of the cargo of a vessel; filed an amended schedule, in which he mentioned the claim so indistinctly as to give no information of its value, although he was then prosecuting it before the board of commissioners; concealed the evidence of the property, so that the assignee in bankruptcy reported that it was of no value, and sold the whole, for a nominal consideration, to the sister of the bankrupt, who afterwards transferred it to him; the purchase was fraudulent, under the 4th section of the bankrupt law, and also by the general principles of equity. Clark v. Clark, 17 How. 315, 15 L. Ed. 77.

87. True consideration shown by parol.—Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 727, 28 L. Ed. 577.

Although the sum of one dollar is mentioned in this trust deed as the consideration, the true consideration can be shown by parol evidence. It is always understood that the one dollar in such connection is merely nominal and is never actually paid. In this case it means no more than that nothing was paid by the trustees, who took no beneficial interest

c. Burden of Proof.—Where a bill in chancery was filed to set aside a deed as being fraudulent against creditors, and it is charged in the bill that the consideration mentioned in the deed was not paid, it is not satisfactory that the defendant relies upon the answer that it was paid, considering the answer, which is responsive to the bill, as evidence of the payment, when the execution of the deed is surrounded by circumstances of suspicion.[88] And as against creditors of an insolvent debtor, the one claiming as a purchaser must prove that he paid a valuable and adequate consideration, but is not bound to negative the reservation of a benefit to a debtor.[89]

IV. Voluntary Conveyances.

A. Validity in General.—A voluntary deed is good as between the parties, and can be avoided only by creditors who were such at the date of the conveyance.[90] In all purely voluntary conveyances it is the fraudulent intent of the donor which vitiates. If actually insolvent, he is held to knowledge of his condition; and if the necessary consequence of his act is to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, within the statute, the presumption of the fraudulent intent is irrebuttable and conclusive, and inquiry into his motives is inadmissible.[91]

Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 727, 28 L. Ed. 577.

Where the answer under oath called for, shows a valuable and meritorious consideration, which answer is uncontradicted by any evidence whatever, and is well supported on cross-examination of defendants in their depositions, it cannot be disregarded as inadmissible because unfavorable to the party who demanded it. This would be to permit the party to trifle with the powers of the court at its pleasure. Hitz v. National, etc., Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 727, 28 L. Ed. 577.

Transactions between husband and wife.—See ante, "Conveyance to Wife," II, C, 4, c, (1).

88. Burden of proof.—Callan v. Statham, 23 How. 477, 16 L. Ed. 532.

In the present case, the payment of the purchase money was alleged to be a secret transaction between the vendor and vendee, and there were other circumstances attending the deed which surrounded it with suspicion. The evidence of payment must have been in the possession of the defendants, and they ought to have produced it. Callan v. Statham, 23 How. 477, 16 L. Ed. 532.

The title of the defendant, although encumbered, could have been made clear; the price alleged to have been paid was inadequate; the vendor remained in possession and collected all the rents without accounting to the vendee; the circumstance that the vendor was heavily in debt, and suits pending and maturing to judgment when he made the deed—all these things induce the supreme appellate court not to disturb the decree of the court below, which directed the property to be sold for the satisfaction of creditors. Callan v. Statham, 23 How. 477, 16 L. Ed. 532. See post, "Voluntary Conveyances," IV.

89. Same.—Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 163, 40 L. Ed. 374.

90. Validity in general.—Adams v. Collier, 122 U. S. 382, 391, 30 L. Ed. 1207; Warren v. Moody, 122 U. S. 132, 30 L. Ed. 1108.

The making of a conveyance by a grantor in business, without intending or making any change in the character of his business, who had then ample property to pay his debts, is not fraudulent. Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 412, 33 L. Ed. 955; Parish v. Murphree, 13 How. 92, 98, 14 L. Ed. 65.

The subsequent unexpected depreciation in the value of other real estate owned by grantor, so that it failed to pay more than the first mortgage thereon, leaving a second mortgage unpaid, coupled with unexpected business reverses, creates no presumption of any fraudulent intent in a previous conveyance to grantor's wife. Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 414, 33 L. Ed. 955.

If it were proved that the voluntary deed conveyed the bulk of the grantor's estate, it does not follow that the conveyance must be fraudulent. If a man, entirely unincumbered, has a right to make a voluntary settlement of a part of his estate, it is difficult to say how much of it he may settle. In the case of Stephens v. Olive, the whole real estate appears to have been settled, subject to a mortgage for a debt of £500, yet that settlement was sustained. The proportional magnitude of the estate conveyed may awaken suspicion, and strengthen other circumstances; but, taken alone, it cannot be considered as proof of fraud. A man who makes such a conveyance, necessarily impairs his credit, and, if openly done, warns those with whom he deals not to trust him too far; but this is not fraud. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 250, 5 L. Ed. 603.

91. Same.—Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 211, 32 L. Ed. 370.

"But the circumstances of each particu-

And when one engaged or about to engage in any business has the means to meet its usual exigencies, and devotes such means in good faith to the business, and has besides other means which he chooses to settle upon any object of his bounty, unlooked-for disasters on his part, subsequently occurring, will not affect the validity of the settlement, because they afford no ground for the imputation of unfairness.[92]

B. Validity as to Creditors—1. In General.—The ordinary rule of common law is, that a voluntary deed by a person heavily indebted is fraudulent and void as to prior creditors merely upon the ground that he was so indebted, but as to subsequent creditors is only void upon evidence that the deed was lar case should be considered, as in Partridge v. Gopp, 1 Eden, 163, 168; S. C. Ambler, 596, 599, where the Lord Keeper, while holding that debts must be paid before gifts are made, and debtors must be just before they are generous, admitted that 'the fraudulent intent is to be collected from the magnitude and value of the gift.'" Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 211, 32 L. Ed. 370. See Parish v. Murphree, 13 How. 92, 98, 14 L. Ed. 65.

"Where fraud is to be imputed, or the imputation of fraud repelled, by an examination into the circumstances under which a gift is made to those towards whom the donor is under natural obligation, the test is said, in Kiff v. Hanna, 2 Bland 33, to be the pecuniary ability of the donor at that time to withdraw the amount of the donation from his estate without the least hazard to his creditors, or in any material degree lessening their then prospects of payment; and in considering the sufficiency of the debtor's property for the payment of debts, the probable, immediate, unavoidable, and reasonable demands for the support of the family of the donor should be taken into the account and deducted, having in mind also the nature of his business and his necessary expenses." Washington Cent. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 211, 32 L. Ed. 370. See, also, ante, "Constitution," III, A, 2; post, "Validity as to Creditors," IV, B.

92. Unaffected by subsequent developments.—Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 307, 24 L. Ed. 954; Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 251, 5 L. Ed. 603; Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 414, 33 L. Ed. 955.

In testing the validity of a transaction, the subsequent fall of property, or the failure of grantor, cannot be taken into view, but the inquiry must be limited to his circumstances at that time. It is not shown that the persons for whom he was bound, as indorser, were then unable to pay the respective sums for which he was responsible; and it would be improper to consider these sums as debts due by grantor; he was responsible for their payment, on certain contingencies; but the fact that his credit remained unimpaired, for several years after the contract, shows, that neither his credit, nor the credit of those for whom he was indorser, was considered doubtful. In this state of facts, grantor was in a condition to dispose of the house and lot, not worth more than $2,500, on the terms stated. King v. Thompson, 9 Pet. 204, 9 L. Ed. 102.

The short period which intervened between the execution of this conveyance and the failure of grantor, ought to be taken into view together; but they do not, as this case stands, establish a fraud. There is no allegation in the bill, nor is there any reason to believe that any of the debts which pressed upon grantor at the time of his failure were contracted before he entered into commerce in 1809, which was more than two years after the execution of the deed. It appears that, at the date of its execution, he had no view to trade. Although his failure was not very remote from the date of the deed, yet the debts and the deed can in no manner be connected with each other; they are as distinct as if they had been a century apart. In the case of Stephens v. Olive, the debt was contracted in less than twelve months after the settlement was made; yet it could not overreach the settlement. These circumstances, then, both occurred in the case of Stephens v. Olive, and were not considered as affecting the validity of that deed. The reasons why they should not be considered in this case as indicating fraud are stronger than in England. In this district, every deed must be recorded in a place prescribed by law. All titles to land are placed upon the record. The person who trusts another on the faith of his real property, knows where he may apply to ascertain the nature of the title held by the person to whom he is about to give credit. In this case, the title never was in grantor. His creditors, therefore, never had a right to trust him, on the faith of this house and lot. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 251, 5 L. Ed. 603.

"But where there are heavy subsisting liabilities, doubtful solvency, a large settlement made upon the wife at the outset of the business, and failure and insolvency to a large amount shortly follow, it is impossible to avoid the conviction that there was a deliberate plan to provide for the settler and his family in any event, and to throw the burden of the losses that might occur upon his creditors. The intention animating such conduct is condemned alike by ethics and the law." The case at made in contemplation of future indebtedness.[93] But the rule as now established is, that prior indebtedness is only presumptive and not conclusive proof of fraud, and this presumption may be explained and rebutted. Fraud is always a question of fact with reference to the intention of the grantor. Where there is no fraud, there is no infirmity in the deed. Every case depends upon its circumstances, and is to be carefully scrutinized. But the vital question is always the good faith of the transaction. There is no other test.[94] And same is bar falls within this category. Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 307, 24 L. Ed. 954.

93. Validity as to creditors generally.—McDonald v. Dewey, 202 U. S. 510, 529, 50 L. Ed. 1128; Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 5 L. Ed. 603; Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 6 L. Ed. 454; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 36, 22 L. Ed. 313; Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 153, 26 L. Ed. 106; Moore v. Page, 111 U. S. 117, 28 L. Ed. 373; Horback v. Hill, 112 U. S. 144, 149, 28 L. Ed. 670; Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 410, 33 L. Ed. 955; Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260, 27 L. Ed. 147; Adams v. Collier, 122 U. S. 382, 391, 30 L. Ed. 1207; Warren v. Moody, 122 U. S. 132, 30 L. Ed. 1108; McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 12 L. Ed. 675.

"It is a well-settled rule of law that if an individual, being solvent at the time, without any actual intent to defraud creditors, disposes of property, for an inadequate consideration, or even makes a voluntary conveyance of it, subsequent creditors cannot question the transaction. They are not injured. They gave credit to the debtor in the status which he had after the voluntary conveyance was made." Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 153, 26 L. Ed. 106; Mattingly v. Nye, 3 Wall. 370, 19 L. Ed. 380; Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 5 L. Ed. 603; Parish v. Murphree, 13 How. 92, 98, 14 L. Ed. 65; Clark v. Killian, 103 U. S. 766, 26 L. Ed. 607; Horbach v. Hill, 112 U. S. 144, 149, 28 L. Ed. 670; Gray v. National Steamship Co., 115 U. S. 116, 121, 29 L. Ed. 309. See, also, ante, "Construction," III, A, 2.

The statute of 13 Eliz., c. 5, avoids all conveyances not made on a consideration deemed valuable in law, as against previous creditors. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 5 L. Ed. 603.

Unadjusted and unascertained claim not an existing "debt."—It was held in Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 252, 5 L. Ed. 603, that the existence of an unadjusted and unascertained claim against the grantor at the time of the conveyance, which afterwards turned out to be unfounded, was not an existing "debt," but here, on its adjustment, grantor was proved to be the creditor instead of debtor. It would be going too far to say that this conveyance was fraudulent, where there is nothing on which to found the suspicion, but the single fact that such a claim was understood to exist.

94. Modern rule.—Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 485, 23 L. Ed. 363.

And it is said in Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 213, 6 L. Ed. 454, that a voluntary deed is not absolutely void as against creditors, although it may be so under certain circumstances; but the mere fact of being in debt to a small amount would not make the deed fraudulent, if it could be shown that the grantor was in prosperous circumstances, and unembarrassed, and that the gift was a reasonable one, leaving enough for the payment of his debts.

Formerly, according to the rule of English jurisprudence, voluntary deeds, as against existing creditors, were void. Townsend v. Windham, 2 Ves. 10. The same principle was applied in such cases in this country. It has been overruled in the English courts. It has been also overruled by the federal supreme court (Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 213, 6 L. Ed. 454; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 35, 22 L. Ed. 313) and in most of the states of our Union. The state adjudications to this effect are too numerous to be cited. Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 485, 23 L. Ed. 363.

Where there is no actual fraud, and the debtor reserved property worth more than twice and a half the amount of his debts, expecting and intending to pay all he owed, and he continued able to do so until he lost his means by the hazards of business, and the creditor rested supine for a long time, and did not take his judgment until more than eight years after his notes matured, and more than six years after the execution of the trust deed, more than seven years having elapsed when the levy was made, and the validity of the deed was then challenged for the first time, the creditor cannot successfully attack the conveyance. Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 487, 23 L. Ed. 363. And see ante, "Powers Exercisable by Debtor over His Property," II; "Want or Inadequacy of Consideration," III, C, 10.

Missouri.—In Missouri the "doctrine is well settled that a voluntary conveyance by a person in debt is not, as to subsequent creditors, fraudulent per se. To make it fraudulent, as to subsequent creditors, there must be proof of actual or intentional fraud. As to creditors existing at the time, if the effect and operation of the conveyance are to hinder or defraud them, it may, as to them, be justly regarded as invalid; but no such reason can be urged in behalf of those who become creditors afterwards." Whether it is fraudulent or not is to be determined from all the circumstances, although the fact true of such conveyances by a corporation.[95]

2. Voluntary Conveyance to Wife.—A voluntary conveyance by an insolvent man to his wife is voidable at the instance of existing creditors.[96] But where a conveyance from a husband to his wife is voluntary, but the former was at the time free from debt and possessed of ample means, the same protection should be afforded as to a like transaction between third parties.[97] of the indebtedness is of weight upon the question. Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260, 264, 27 L. Ed. 147.

Georgia.—"Such is also the law of the state (of Georgia) whence this case came to this court. Weed v. Davis, 25 Ga. 686. It is a rule of property there; and this court is therefore bound to apply it, in the case in hand, as if we were sitting as a local court in that state." Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 485, 23 L. Ed. 363.

95. By corporation.—In case of a corporation, as of a natural person, any conveyance of its property while indebted, without authority of law and in fraud of existing creditors, is void as against them. Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Ham, 114 U. S. 587, 595, 29 L. Ed. 235; Richardson v. Green, 133 U. S. 30, 44, 33 L. Ed. 516; McDonald v. Williams, 174 U. S. 397, 403, 43 L. Ed. 1022.

96. Voluntary conveyance to wife.—Wheaton v. Sexton, 4 Wheat. 503, 506, 4 L. Ed. 626; Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 24 L. Ed. 591.

In ordinary cases, a voluntary conveyance of a man, to the use of his wife, when circumstanced as the grantor here was, would unquestionably be void. But it is contended that, in this instance, a court of equity would have decreed him to make the conveyance he did execute, and, therefore, it was not a voluntary conveyance. That there are cases in which the court would lend its aid to protect the acquisitions of a wife from the creditors of a husband, may well be admitted; but on this case, it is enough to observe, that if the husband may, upon his own recital, make out such a case, there would no longer exist any difficulty in evading the rights of creditors. Wheaton v. Sexton, 4 Wheat. 503, 506, 4 L. Ed. 626.

The court, upon consideration of the facts in Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 24 L. Ed. 591, held that certain real estate settled upon a woman by her husband was purchased with the assets of the firm whereof he was a member and that the assignee in bankruptcy of the firm was, after the payment of the mortgage thereon, entitled to the proceeds thereof.

Upon the supposition that one partner was, on the first day of December, fairly entitled to consider his interest in the business as worth $227,000, it was not good faith to his creditors to withdraw about one-third of that capital and invest it in his wife's name, so that it was placed beyond the reach of his creditors, and made to constitute a luxurious home for himself? If the business which the partnership was doing was a small and a safe business, and the shape in which this sum of $227,000 stood was such as made it unquestionable as representing so much money, while the withdrawal of $90,000, if otherwise fair, might be sustained, it would still be of doubtful validity as against creditors. Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 6, 24 L. Ed. 591.

There is no proof that she took any part in bringing about the settlement, or that there was any guilty knowledge on her part in the transaction. It is fairly to be presumed that she confided in the good faith of her husband, and simply yielded obedience to his wishes. The provision of her will attests her devotion to him. The fund did not exist in her lifetime, and her estate has been in no wise benefited by it. The transfer of the property was his act, not hers. She was only a passive recipient. Her will—doubtless influenced, if not controlled by him—gave him her entire estate for life, and, after his death, gave it to his family. No provision was made for her family. Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 308, 24 L. Ed. 954.

97. Where solvent when made.—Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496, 500, 30 L. Ed. 1126; Moore v. Page, 111 U. S. 117, 28 L. Ed. 373; Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. Ed. 816; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 25 L. Ed. 908.

Where neither the conveyance to the wife nor the withdrawal of the husband's means from his business for the purpose of improving the land settled upon her, had the effect and operation to hinder or defraud his then existing creditors, nor does the evidence justify the conclusion that the conveyance was executed, or the improvements made, with an intent to hinder or defraud either existing or subsequent creditors, giving full weight to all the circumstances, there is no reason to impute fraud to the husband, it appearing that when it was conveyed to her, as well as during all the period when he improved it by the erection of a dwelling and other houses thereon, he had, according to the weight of the evidence, property which his creditors could reach, exceeding, in value, all his existing indebtedness by several thousand dollars. Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260, 262, 264, 27 L. Ed. 147.

Assuming, in the first instance, that both transfers were purely voluntary, the deeds to Mrs. S. were made and recorded three years before the building contract was signed, or the work done.

Failure to Sustain Burden of Proof of Payment of Wife's Funds.—Where the allegation that the purchase money was derived from the wife's private individual funds, is supported by circumstances which may disclose fair motives for the conveyance, but which are not sufficient to prove that the consideration, in point of law, moved from her, it must, therefore, be considered as a voluntary conveyance; and, if sustained, must be sustained on the principle that it was made under circumstances which do not impeach its validity, when so considered.[98]

Participation in Fraudulent Purpose.—A wife, the grantee in a deed voluntary and alleged to be fraudulent, who is herself the instrument of deception, or who contributes to its success, by countenancing it, may, with justice, be charged with the consequences of her conduct. But this is not such a case, and the rights of the wife are unimpaired by anything she is shown to have done.[99]

3. Voluntary Conveyance to Child.—A deed from a parent to a child, for the consideration of love and affection, is not absolutely void as against creditors. It may be so, under certain circumstances; but the mere fact of being in debt to a small amount would not make the deed fraudulent, if it could be shown that the grantor was in prosperous circumstances, and unembarrassed, and that the gift to the child was a reasonable provision, according to his state and condition in life, and leaving enough for the payment of the debts of the grantor.[1] out of which Vanderbilt's claim arose. There was thus that constructive notice referred to in Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260, 262, 27 L. Ed. 147, as sufficient and the evidence showed that he had actual as well as constructive notice. Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 411, 33 L. Ed. 955.

98. Failure to sustain burden of proof of payment of wife's funds.—Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 241, 5 L. Ed. 603.

99. Participation in fraudulent purpose.—Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 240, 5 L. Ed. 603.

Where it was alleged that the grantor's wife aided in practicing a fraud on the plaintiff, or in creating or giving countenance to the opinion, that the grantor was more wealthy than in truth he was, and same was denied, nor is there any evidence in support of it, other than the admission in her answer, that she had seen a letter written by him to the plaintiff, in which he gave, she thought, too flattering a picture of his circumstances, this admission is, however, to be taken with the accompanying explanation, in which she says, that she had dissuaded him, she had hoped successfully, from sending the letter in its then form. This fact does not fix upon the wife such a fraud as ought to impair her rights, whatever they may be. The plaintiff could not know that this letter was seen by the wife, or in any manner sanctioned by, or known to her. He had, therefore, no right to suppose that there was any waiver of her interest, whatever it might be, nor had he a right to assume anything against her, or her claims, in consequence of his receiving this letter. The case is very different from one in which the wife herself makes a misrepresentation, or hears and countenances the misrepresentation of her husband. The person who acts under such a misrepresentation, acts under the confidence in the good faith of the wife herself. He has a right to consider that faith as pledged; and if he is deceived, he may complain that she has herself deceived him. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 238, 5 L. Ed. 603. See also, ante, "Husband and Wife," III, C, 4, c.

1. Voluntary conveyance to child.—Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 213, 6 L. Ed. 454.

The holding of this court in Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 28 L. Ed. 547, that the act of sale and donation of community property made by M. to his daughter Julia in March, 1858, was void as a donation under the law of Louisiana; and that if it could be held good as a sale it could only be for the part which went to pay her the amount due from her mother's estate, together with the amount she was directed to pay to a creditor of M., reaffirmed. It was good as a sale to the amount due the daughter and a donation as to the residue. Mellen v. Buckner, 139 U. S. 388, 397, 35 L. Ed. 199.

"A review of all the decisions of Lord Hardwicke, will show his opinion to have been, that a voluntary conveyance to a child, by a man, not indebted at the time, if a real and bona fide conveyance, not made with a fraudulent intent, is good against subsequent creditors. The decisions made since the time of Lord Hardwicke maintain the same principle." Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 247, 5 L. Ed. 603.

Validity unaffected by subsequent events.—A few days after the marriage

C. Validity as to Purchasers.—A voluntary conveyance, is, at this day, held by the courts of England to be absolutely void, under the statute of 27 Eliz., against a subsequent purchaser, even although he purchased with notice.[2] But the American rule is not so drastic. By it, a subsequent sale, without notice, by a person who had made a settlement, not on valuable consideration, is presumptive evidence of fraud, which throws on those claiming under such settlement the burden of proving that it was made bona fide, but it is not conclusive.[3]

V. Operation and Effect.

A. Effect of Fraud Generally.—Fraud in Law.—As respects fraud in law as contradistinguished from fraud in fact, where that which is valid can be separated from that which is invalid, without defeating the general intent, the maxim, "void in part, void in toto," does not necessarily apply, and the instrument may be sustained notwithstanding the invalidity of a particular provision.[4] of J. T. with the daughter of G. K., in 1812, the latter, residing in Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, and having a large active capital, and a large real estate there, proposed to grant J. T. a house and lot in Georgetown, then much out of repair, and untenantable, provided he would repair the same, so as to make it a comfortable residence; and saying, that he intended the property for his daughter; this proposition was accepted by J. T., who repaired the property, expending upwards of $4,000 on the same; and he, with his wife, resided on it about four years. Before his removal from it, a correspondence on the subject of the conveyance of the property to J. T. and his wife, took place, which ended in propositions to convey the property, on certain terms, beneficial to J. T. and wife, in pursuance of, and intended to be in execution of, the original offer of G. K. to J. T., made immediately after the marriage; no conveyance was made. J. T. and wife removed from Georgetown, and G. K. collected and paid to J. T. the rents of the property, for sometime after their removal; G. K. died in 1820, insolvent; his debts amounted to $36,000, and his whole estate, both real and personal, when sold, did not pay thirty-nine per cent. of his debts; the property claimed by J. T. and wife, in this case, was sold for $1,600, by a trustee, under a decree in chancery, obtained by the creditors of G. K., but the sale had not been ratified. J. T. and wife filed a bill against the heirs of G. K., and the trustee of the creditors of G. K., claiming a conveyance of the property, and for general relief. In no point of view, could such a contract as that in this case be considered voluntary; there was not only a good consideration, that of natural affection, but a valuable one; to constitute a valuable consideration, it is not necessary that money should be paid; but if, as in this case, it be expended on the faith of the contract, it constitutes a valuable consideration. King v. Thompson, 9 Pet. 204, 9 L. Ed. 102.

"There appears to have been no fraudulent intent in the case; no disposition to defeat the claims of present creditors, or to cover the property from future demands. It seems to have been a bona fide transaction; and one which neither a court of law nor of equity could refuse to sanction." King v. Thompson, 9 Pet. 204, 220, 9 L. Ed. 102. See, also, ante, "Parent and Child," III, C, 4, d.

2. Validity as to purchasers—English rule.—Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. 264, 279, 8 L. Ed. 120. Their decisions do not maintain that a transaction, valid at the time, is rendered invalid by the subsequent act of the party. They do not maintain, that the character of the transaction is changed, but that testimony afterwards furnished may prove its real character. The subsequent sale of the property is carried back to the deed of settlement, and considered as proving that deed to have been executed with a fraudulent intent to deceive a subsequent purchaser.

At the commencement of the American revolution, the construction of the statute of Elizabeth seems not to have been settled; the leaning of the courts towards the opinion that every voluntary settlement would be deemed void as to subsequent purchasers, was very strong; and few cases are to be found, in which such convevance had been sustained; but those decisions seem to have been made, on the principle, that such subsequent sale furnishes a strong presumption of a fraudulent intent, which threw on the person claiming under the settlement, the burden of proving it, from the settlement itself, or from extrinsic circumstances, to be made in good faith; rather than as furnishing conclusive evidence, not to be repelled by any circumstances whatever. Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. 264, 8 L. Ed. 120.

3. American doctrine.—Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. 264, 8 L. Ed. 120, following the principle of the minority of the English cases above referred to.

4. Effect of fraud in law.—Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 688, 33 L. Ed. 696; Cunningham v. Norton, 125 U. S. 77, 31

B. As to Parties—1. VALIDITY.—A conveyance fraudulent as to creditors is yet valid as between the parties.[5] And a fraudulent purchaser of property, when deprived of its possession by attacking creditors, cannot recover of them for repairs or improvements, or for incumbrances lifted by him whilst in possession. What he does, he does in his own wrong. And besides, the property was his, subject only to be declared void as to these creditors, so that he was paying off an incumbrance on his own property when he so paid what he now seeks to recover, or be subrogated to the lien of.[6]

2. IN PARI DELICTO RULE.—Courts of equity refuse to annul and also to enforce contracts in fraud of the rights of others, when called to act as between the parties.[7] Nor will the character of such agreement be changed by

L. Ed. 624; Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 496, 32 L. Ed. 491; Muller v. Norton, 132 U. S. 501, 33 L. Ed. 397.

5. Valid as between parties.—Wolf v. Stix, 99 U. S. 1, 7, 25 L. Ed. 309; Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 573, 45 L. Ed. 1005; Railroad Co. v. Soutter, 13 Wall. 517, 523, 20 L. Ed. 543. See Pearsall v. Smith, 149 U. S. 231, 233, 37 L. Ed. 713.

It is clear that a fraudulent deed, between the parties, would be binding and available; however, as to the persons whom it was intended to defraud, it might be voidable. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 76, 9 L. Ed. 345.

Conveyances of property in fraud of creditors are good as between the parties, and only void as to creditors. Ballard v. Searls, 130 U. S. 50, 54, 32 L. Ed. 846.

Conveyances fraudulent as to creditors may not only be valid on their face, but they are really valid as between the parties; though they are void as against creditors, and the property, both at law and in equity, is subject to the payment of the debts of the deceased grantor. Hagan v. Walker, 14 How. 29, 34, 14 L. Ed. 312.

Debtor's assignee.—A transfer made to defraud creditors is valid between the parties to it; the debtor has no right of action to set it aside; and, therefore, no such right passes to the assignee as part of the debtor's estate. (Obiter.) Pearsall v. Smith, 149 U. S. 231, 233, 37 L. Ed. 713.

Conditional sale.—"The owner of a stock of goods may make an absolute sale of them to his creditor, in payment of a debt. If an absolute, why not a conditional, sale, with such conditions as he and his creditor may agree upon? As between the parties no court would question this right, or refuse to enforce the conditions. The interests of the general public are not prejudiced by any such transaction between debtor and creditor." Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 277, 35 L. Ed. 171.

6. Outlays and incumbrances discharged.—Railroad Co. v. Soutter, 13 Wall. 517, 523, 20 L. Ed. 543.

The court said: "But the complainants are wrong in asserting that the property was not theirs. It was theirs. Their purchase was declared void only as against the creditors of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company (the original debtor). In other words, it was only voidable, not absolutely void. By satisfying these creditors they could have kept the property, and their title would have been good, as against all the world. The property was theirs; but, by reason of the fraudulent sale, was subject to the incumbrance of the debts of the La Crosse company. This was the legal effect of the decree declaring their title void. Therefore, they were, in fact, paying off an incumbrance on their own property when they paid into court the money which they are now seeking to recover back." Three justices dissented on the ground that the recovery should have been allowed as a payment made under mistake of fact. Railroad Co. v. Soutter, 13 Wall. 517, 524, 20 L. Ed. 543.

Liability for rent—Set-off of amount paid receiver for creditors.—In Grant v. Buckner, 172 U. S. 232, 43 L. Ed. 430, where a party claiming under a conveyance alleged to be fraudulent as to the creditors of grantor, and which was held fraudulent and voidable as to an undivided one-half interest of the property in question, took a lease from the receiver for the creditors rather than be dispossessed, and who paid rent to the receiver for the whole property up to the time when it was held fraudulent only as to a one-half interest, when he was subsequently sued for rent due for such undivided half after that time, he could set off against this demand one-half of the amount paid by him as rent for the whole property before such decision was made. This was a final adjudication of his rights, and he was not precluded from obtaining the benefit of this decision in the state courts by the fact that the receiver was an officer of the federal court, or by any proceedings had in that court. See Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 28 L. Ed. 547; Mellen v. Buckner, 139 U. S. 388, 35 L. Ed. 199. See, also, the title SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT AND COUNTER-CLAIM.

7. In pari delicto rule.—Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 66, 33 L. Ed. 242; Railroad Co. v. Soutter, 13 Wall. 517, 525, 20 L. Ed. 543. See Hunt v. Oliver, 118 U. S. 211, 218, 30 L. Ed. 128; Selz v. Unna, 6 Wall. 327, 336, 18 L. Ed. 799, when it is said: "A court of equity will not en-showing that the claim of the third party, whose rights were to be affected by force an agreement made with the intent that it shall operate as a fraud upon the private rights and interests of third persons."

If a person conveys his property for the purpose of hindering, delaying or defrauding his creditors, and for eleven years acquiesces and concurs in the devices, collusive suits and impositions upon the court in furtherance of this purpose, without taking a single legal step to annul said conveyance or to stop such proceedings, a court of equity will not aid him or his heirs to recover the property from the grantee or his heirs after the fraud is accomplished. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 64, 33 L. Ed. 242; Randall v. Howard, 2 Black 585, 17 L. Ed. 269.

The object of this suit, as clearly and explicitly stated in the bill, is to secure to the complainants the entire benefit of the confessed fraud by having all the property, with all the intermediate rents and profits added, free from all liens and liabilities, returned to them. The real complaint is that the fraudulent vendee refused to perform his part of the fraudulent understanding with the fraudulent vendor; and the avowed purpose of the suit is to compel the defendants to perform it. The prayer cannot be granted without overturning established principles of equity. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 68, 33 L. Ed. 242.

It is not the province of a court of equity to make a fraudulent debtor the special object of its favor because he has not received a large enough consideration for his "confessed fraud." That court is not a divider of the inheritance of iniquity between the respective heirs of two confederates in fraud. Mr. Justice Baldwin, delivering the opinion of the court, in Bartle v. Coleman, 4 Pet. 184, 189, 7 L. Ed. 825, uses the following language: "The law leaves the parties to such a contract as it found them. If either has sustained a loss by the bad faith of a particeps criminis, it is but a just infliction for premeditated and deeply practised fraud; which, when detected, deprives him of anticipated profits, or subjects him to unexpected losses. He must not expect that a judicial tribunal will degrade itself by an exertion of its powers, by shifting the loss from the one to the other; or to equalize the benefits or burthens which may have resulted by the violation of every principle of morals and of laws." Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 66, 33 L. Ed. 242.

In Randall v. Howard, 2 Black 585, 17 L. Ed. 269, the complainants and defendant had made an agreement to defeat the claims of third persons to certain lands which the complainants had mortgaged to the defendant to secure a debt, so as to cloak the ownership by means of a foreclosure sale at which the defendant should purchase and hold the nominal title. After obtaining the title, he fraudulently dispossessed the complainants and asserted the right of ownership in himself. The prayer of the bill was to restrain the defendant from disposing of the land, and to restore it, or so much of it as remained after paying the debt, to complainants. The court, Mr. Justice Davis delivering the opinion, held that the agreement was a fraudulent one, to defeat a claim set up by other parties for a portion of the mortgaged lands by the covering up, through the aid of the court, the real ownership of the property, and said (p. 588): "A fraudulent agreement was entered into to defeat, as is charged, 'a fraud attempted against the complainants.' * * * A court of equity will not intervene to give relief to either party from the consequences of such an agreement. The maxim, in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis, must prevail. It is against the policy of the law to enable either party, in controversies between themselves, to enforce an agreement in fraud of the law, or which was made to injure another;" citing 1 Story's Equity, § 298. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 64, 33 L. Ed. 242.

"The same principle was applied in Wheeler v. Sage, 1 Wall. 518, 17 L. Ed. 646. In that case an agreement was entered into between complainants and defendant to secure the title to valuable real estate of an insolvent debtor, at the expense and sacrifice of his creditors, which the defendant violated, and, in conjunction with another person, secured an interest in the property to himself. The bill prayed that he be declared a trustee for the complainants, and required to convey to them that portion of the land to which, under the agreement, they were entitled. The court, Mr. Justice Davis delivering the opinion, said (p. 529): 'Generally, when a party obtains an advantage by fraud, he is to be regarded as the trustee of the party defrauded, and compelled to account. But, if a party seeks relief in equity, he must be able to show that on his part there has been honesty and fair dealing. If he has been engaged in an illegal business and been cheated, equity will not help him.' And then, after a review of the evidence in that case, the opinion concluded in these words: 'A proceeding like this is against good conscience and good morals, and cannot receive the sanction of a court of equity. The principle is too plain to need a citation of authorities to confirm it. It is against the policy of the law to help either party in such controversies. The maxim, "in pari delicto," etc., must prevail' (p. 530)." Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 64, 33 L. Ed. 242. See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394.

it, was also fraudulent.[8] But money deposited by a debtor with another, with the intent to cheat and defraud his creditors, may be recovered back by him.[9] And there is a distinct class of decisions affecting subsequent and collateral contracts not partaking of the fraud which affects the main transaction.[10]

3. Personal Liability of Grantee.—Although the law implies fraud from the purchase of property from a debtor with the intent thereby to hinder and delay his creditors in the collection of their debts, such a purchase does not create a debt from the purchaser to the creditors.[11]

Liability for Choses Received by Way of Preference.—When an insolvent debtor assigns to a creditor with full knowledge of the insolvency, certain notes and accounts due said debtor in full payment and satisfaction of such creditor's debt, which transfer was afterwards attacked as collusive and fraudulent as to other creditors by garnishee proceedings against such transferee, the transferee was liable if at all, not only for the money collected on such notes and accounts, but for the value of those which remained in his hands to at least, as the court correctly instructed, an amount sufficient to pay the debt of the attacking creditors, as the plaintiff's case goes upon the idea of a fraudulent

8. Fraud of third party immaterial.—Randall v. Howard, 2 Black 585, 17 L. Ed. 269.

9. Recovery of deposit made with fraudulent intent.—In an action brought to recover a deposit alleged to have been made by plaintiff with defendant, to be paid to plaintiff on his order, and not so paid, there was no error in excluding evidence offered by the defendants conducing to show that the money claimed by the plaintiff to have been deposited with them to be paid to him on his order was so deposited with the intent to cheat and defraud his creditors. The evidence, if admitted, would not have relieved the defendants from responsibility to account for it. Block v. Darling, 140 U. S. 234, 239, 35 L. Ed. 476.

"The plaintiff's suit to compel the return of the money may be regarded as one in disaffirmance of the arrangement under which the defendants claimed to have received it; and, if successful, would tend to defeat the alleged purpose of defrauding his creditors by having it kept upon secret deposit with the defendants. It is not a suit to recover money received and paid out under an illegal or immoral contract which has been fully executed. The suit is necessarily a disavowal upon the part of the plaintiff of any purpose to hide this money from his creditors. To allow the defendants to retain it upon the ground that he had originally the purpose to conceal it from his creditors would be inconsistent with the spirit and policy of the law. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 58, 26 L. Ed. 347, and authorities there cited." Block v. Darling, 140 U. S. 234, 239, 35 L. Ed. 476.

10. Subsequent and collateral contracts.—Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 66, 33 L. Ed. 242.

But "a new contract, founded on a new and independent consideration, although in relation to property respecting which there had been unlawful or fraudulent transactions between the parties, will be dealt with by the courts on its own merits. If the new contract be fair and lawful, and the new consideration be valid and adequate, it will be enforced. If, however, it be unfair or fraudulent, or the new consideration so inadequate as to import fraud, imposition or undue influence, it will be rescinded and justice done to the parties. Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468; McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 15 L. Ed. 132; Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. 70, 17 L. Ed. 732; Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 21 L. Ed. 473; Railroad Co. v. Durant, 95 U. S. 576, 24 L. Ed. 391. But in all of those cases the court was careful to distinguish and sever the new contract from the original illegal contract." Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 66, 33 L. Ed. 242.

11. Personal liability of grantee.—Wolf v. Stix, 99 U. S. 1, 7, 25 L. Ed. 309. As between the debtor and the purchaser the sale is good, but as between a creditor and the purchaser it is void. The purchaser does not subject himself to a liability to pay to creditors the value of what he buys. All the risk he runs is that the sale may be avoided, and the property reclaimed for their benefit.

A purchaser of a stock of goods from a debtor confessedly insolvent, where the purchaser knows that the debtor's purpose is to hinder and delay a particular creditor, and also that if the debtor intended a fraud on his creditors generally, the purchase would necessarily be giving him facilities in that direction, is not responsible in equity (the sale being an open one, for a fair price, and followed by change of possession) for any part of the consideration money which the debtor had applied to payment of his debts; but is responsible for any part which he has diverted from such payment. Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 18 L. Ed. 786. And see post, "Personal Decree," VI, H, 2.

conversion by the transferee of the assets by which the control thereof passed to them, not a mere assignment out of which the debt was to be paid.[12]

C. As to Creditors and Purchasers.—See ante, "Voluntary Conveyances," IV. While a conveyance with intent to defraud existing creditors is voidable as to them, and in some states said to be void,[13] and the property remains liable to attachment as that of the grantor,[14] in reality, it is voidable only, not void, 12. Liability for choses received by way of preference.—Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 379, 33 L. Ed. 373.

13. Existing creditors.—Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 573, 45 L. Ed. 1005; Grant v. Buckner, 172 U. S. 232, 43 L. Ed. 430; Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 18 L. Ed. 786; Harrell v. Beall, 17 Wall. 590, 21 L. Ed. 692; Woodfolk v. Seddon, 154 U. S. 658, 31 L. Ed. 598; Chandler v. Von Roeder, 24 How. 224, 227, 16 L. Ed. 633.

Where the plaintiffs in an action of trespass to try title to land, were creditors of the grantor under whom defendant claimed, at the time of the conveyance to him, it was error to exclude testimony to show that the deed was fraudulent under which the defendant claimed. The supreme court of Texas have decided that conveyances made with an intent to defraud creditors are void. Chandler v. Von Roeder, 24 How. 224, 16 L. Ed. 633.

It is made so by the common law, and no statute is necessary to this result. Baker v. Humphrey, 101 U. S. 494, 499, 25 L. Ed. 1065; Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 18 L. Ed. 786.

The supreme court of Texas have decided that when a deed is a mere pretense, collusively devised, and the parties do not intend other than an ostensible change of the property, the property does not pass as to creditors; and even when the parties intend an irrevocable disposition of the property, but the conveyance has been made with the intent to defraud creditors, that the conveyance is void, and this decision conforms to the current doctrine relative to the just construction of this statute. Chandler v. Von Roeder, 24 How. 224, 227, 16 L. Ed. 633.

Michigan.—The statute of Michigan against fraudulent conveyances (2 Comp. Laws of Mich. 146) declares such conveyances void. Baker v. Humphrey, 101 U. S. 494, 499, 25 L. Ed. 1065; Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 18 L. Ed. 786.

14. Liability to attachment.—A fraudulent sale of goods does not pass title against creditors of the grantor, and if the sale was a fraud upon the creditors of grantor, the goods were liable to an attachment at the suit of those creditors. It was an error, therefore, to exclude the evidence thereof in a trespass action against such creditors. The attachment should also have been received in connection with the proof of the unauthorized and fraudulent sale. It is no sufficient objection to it that it did not itself prove all the facts necessary to constitute a complete defense. Deitsch v. Wiggins, 15 Wall. 539, 547, 21 L. Ed. 228.

And a deed made with the intent to defraud the creditors of the grantor, particularly S., was void, under the statute of Texas, as to such creditors. It did not, therefore, as between S., and the parties to the deed, stand in the way of S.'s causing, as he did, an attachment to be levied upon the land as the property of his fraudulent debtor. Thompson v. Baker, 141 U. S. 648, 654, 35 L. Ed. 889.

Equally ineffectual, as against such creditor, was the conveyance by grantee, and the quitclaim deed of grantor to I. No consideration of any kind passed from I. to either of the fraudulent grantors, and those deeds were void as to prior creditors. Thompson v. Baker, 141 U. S. 648, 654, 35 L. Ed. 889.

Priority.—Where land has been fraudulently conveyed and the grantee in such conveyance has conveyed the land to a third person, an attachment in an action against the original grantor will create a lien superior to the title held by either of the grantees. Thompson v. Baker, 141 U. S. 648, 35 L. Ed. 889, citing Warren County v. Marcer, 97 U. S. 96, 105, 24 L. Ed. 977; Union Trust Co. v. Southern Nav. Co., 130 U. S. 565, 570, 32 L. Ed. 1043.

The rights of a mortgagee under a mortgage from I. and under the decree, sale and purchase in the suit brought by him, having been acquired while the land was under a valid levy by S.'s attachment, as the property of the debtor, were subject to whatever rights were acquired by S., as purchaser, under the decree in his suit. The debtor being a party to that suit, his interest in the land, levied upon by S.'s attachment could not be conveyed by him so as to defeat the final decree in that suit. And no greater rights could be acquired by a purchaser from the debtor after the attachment, than he himself had. Thompson v. Baker, 141 U. S. 648, 655, 35 L. Ed. 889.

"In Hancock v. Henderson, 45 Texas 479, 484, where the contest was between the holder of an attachment lien upon land, and a person who purchased from the grantees of the defendant in the attachment, who, it was alleged, had conveyed the land to such grantees with the fraudulent intent to hinder his creditors, such purchaser having no actual notice of issuing of the attachment or of the levy, the court said: 'That a valid levy created a lien on the land attached, and, when properly returned on the writ into the

and a bona fide purchaser from the fraudulent grantee gets a good and indefeasible title.[15] And holding a note for a debt constitutes such a creditor.[16]

Subsequent Creditors and Purchasers.—A debtor has a right to dispose of his property in the ordinary course of business for a valuable consideration, and a creditor has a right to purchase it. The complainant, not showing that he was at the time a creditor, cannot complain.[17] And the same is true as to court from which it issued, is notice to third parties, are propositions which it is not deemed necessary to discuss.'" Thompson v. Baker, 141 U. S. 648, 655, 35 L. Ed. 889. See, also, Warren County v. Marcer, 97 U. S. 96, 105, 24 L. Ed. 977; Union Trust Co. v. Southern Nav. Co., 130 U. S. 565, 570, 32 L. Ed. 1043.

15. Voidable only, not void.—If a conveyance was fraudulent as to creditors, it was not absolutely void, and only voidable by them. United States v. 422 Casks of Wine, 1 Pet. 547, 550, 7 L. Ed. 257; Railroad Co. v. Soutter, 13 Wall. 517, 524, 20 L. Ed. 543.

"A conveyance in fraud of creditors, although declared by the statute to be void as to them, is nevertheless valid as between the parties and their representatives, and passes all of the estate of the grantor to the grantee; and a bona fide purchaser from such grantee takes such estate, even against the creditors of the fraudulent grantor, purged of the anterior fraud that affected the title. Such a conveyance is not, as has been sometimes supposed, 'utterly void,' but it is only so in a qualified sense. Practically it is only voidable, and that at the instance of creditors proceeding in the mode prescribed by law, and even then not as against a bona fide purchaser. The operation of a lien of a judgment, being limited by statute to the property then belonging to the judgment debtor, is not a mode prescribed by which a creditor may attack a conveyance fraudulent as to himself, or assert any right as such against the grantor therein. This lien is constructive in its character, and is not the result of a levy or any other act directed against this specific property. It is the creature of the statute, and cannot have effect beyond it." Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 573, 45 L. Ed. 1005.

Where a married woman became a trustee of land for the benefit of her son-in-law, and executed a deed (without joining her husband) to a bona fide purchaser, who had paid the purchase money to the cestui que use, it was not necessary, under the circumstances of the case, for her husband to join in the deed, and her children, who were her heirs at law, having brought a suit at law to recover the land from the bona fide purchaser, a court of equity will interpose to restrain their proceedings. The alleged illegality of the consideration of the deed of trust —viz, that it was intended to protect the property of her son-in-law, who was insolvent—was not sufficient to destroy the independent equity of the bona fide purchaser, nor was it necessary to make the son-in-law a party when the bona fide purchaser sought relief in a court of equity against the title of the heirs. Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 16 L. Ed. 411.

The purchaser is not a mere volunteer seeking to enforce its terms, nor does his equity depend upon the validity of the trust for its support. He has an independent equity, arising from his purchase from persons professing to hold a legal relation to each other and to the subject of the contract, and to enforce his right there is no need for any inquiry into the consideration or motives that operated upon these parties to assume their relation of trustee and cestui que trust. In such a case, equity does not refuse to lend its assistance. Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 503, 16 L. Ed. 411; McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 15 L. Ed. 132.

The general doctrines of courts of law, on the subject of frauds imputable where the possession remains in one, and the right in another, never has been supposed to extend to a purchaser with notice, much less to a purchaser, whom the local law affects with notice of the highest order. Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. 361, 373, 6 L. Ed. 495.

Prejudice to creditors is necessary to make a deed fraudulent as to them. Gregg v. Sayre, 8 Pet. 244, 252, 8 L. Ed. 932.

16. Same.—A note held by a bank for a debt due to it, and renewed from time to time with the same maker and indorser, is sufficient to constitute the bank a creditor in claiming to have conveyances set aside as fraudulent, although the note was not due when the conveyances were made, and the present note was renewed afterwards. McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 12 L. Ed. 675.

A contingent debt, likely to become absolute, and which afterwards does become absolute, is, both on principle and precedent, enough to furnish a motive to make a fraudulent conveyance to hinder or avoid its eventual payment. And this may be presumed to have been done here, provided circumstances exist indicative of fraud. King v. Thompson, 9 Pet. 204, 220, 9 L. Ed. 102. Such circumstances must exist; and when the liability is contingent, like that of a warrantor or indorser, the conveyance cannot be considered as per se fraudulent. McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 229, 12 L. Ed. 675.

17. Subsequent creditors.—Horbach v.

subsequent purchasers as well as creditors,[18] in the absence of an established fraudulent intent to withhold it from future creditors.[19]

Immediate Grantee—Knowledge or Notice of Fraudulent Intent.—See ante, "Intent in General," III, C, 1.

D. Curing Invalidity.—It is a settled principle that a deed voluntary or even fraudulent in its creation, and voidable by a purchaser, may become good by matter ex post facto.[20]

Hill, 112 U. S. 144, 149, 28 L. Ed. 670; Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 26 L. Ed. 106; Porter v. Pittsburg, etc., Steel Co., 120 U. S. 649, 673, 30 L. Ed. 830; Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 410, 33 L. Ed. 955; Chandler v. Von Roeder, 24 How. 224, 227, 16 L. Ed. 633.

"It is a well-settled principle, that subsequent creditors cannot be heard to impeach an executed contract, where their dealings with the company, of which they claim the benefit, occurred after the contract became an executed contract." Porter v. Pittsburg, etc., Steel Co., 120 U. S. 649, 673, 30 L. Ed. 830; Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 26 L. Ed. 106.

"The principle that subsequent creditors cannot question a voluntary or fraudulent disposition of property by their debtor, not intended as a fraud against them, is especially applicable in cases of constructive fraud, like that charged in the present bill. Suppose it be true that the purchase of the lands in question by or for the benefit of officers of the company actively concerned in the transaction could be set aside at the instance of the company as a constructive fraud, yet if there was no actual fraud, if the company received full consideration for the property sold, how can it be said that subsequent creditors of the company are injured?" Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 160, 26 L. Ed. 106.

"In the present case we are satisfied from the evidence that the property was sold for its fair value at the time, and that no actual loss accrued to the railroad company's estate. It would be unjust and a great hardship, therefore, on the mere ground of the constructive fraud, to allow creditors who had no interest at the time to seize and dispose of the property sold." Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 160, 26 L. Ed. 106.

Of corporation.—There is no reason why the disposal by a corporation of any of its property should be questioned by subsequent creditors of the corporation, any more than a like disposal by an individual of his property should be so. The same principles of law apply to each. Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 161, 26 L. Ed. 106.

Subsequent judgment liens.—A judgment against a debtor, who has fraudulently conveyed away land, does not become a lien thereon. Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 237, 17 L. Ed. 827; Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 573, 45 L. Ed. 1005. And see the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

Liability of preferred creditor.—See ante, "Preference to Creditors," III, C, 8.

18. Subsequent purchasers.—"In Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 154, 26 L. Ed. 106, it was said: 'It seems clear that subsequent creditors have no better right than subsequent purchasers, to question a previous transaction in which the debtor's property was obtained from him by fraud, which he has acquiesced in, and which he has manifested no desire to disturb. Yet, in such a case, subsequent purchasers have no such right.'" Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 410, 33 L. Ed. 955.

"It is stated to have been a principle of the common law that a fraud could only be avoided by him who had a prior interest in the estate affected by the fraud, and not by him who subsequently to the fraud acquired an interest in the estate. Upton v. Basset, Cro. Eliz. 445, and recognized in 3 Co. 83 a." Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 154, 26 L. Ed. 106.

Conveyance to secure antecedent debt not a purchase for value.—In 2 American Leading Cases, 5th Amer. Ed., p. 233, it is stated, and properly, as the doctrine established by a preponderance of authority, that "whatever the rule may be in the case of negotiable instruments, it is well settled that the conveyance of lands or chattels as security for an antecedent debt will not operate as a purchase for value, or defeat existing equities." People's Sav. Bank v. Bates, 120 U. S. 556, 567, 30 L. Ed. 754.

19. Same.—Where the answers denied the allegations of fraud, and there was no evidence to overcome the denials, and the pleadings in the case did not authorize the conclusion, as matter of law, that grantor had conveyed or caused to be conveyed the property with the fraudulent intention of thereafter engaging in business, or having business transactions, and, in the event of financial embarrassment arising therefrom, to withhold it from his creditors, a subsequent creditor has no ground of complaint. Clark v. Killian, 103 U. S. 766, 769, 26 L. Ed. 607; Graham v. Railroad Co., 102 U. S. 148, 153, 26 L. Ed. 106.

20. Curing invalidity.—Sumner v. Hicks, 2 Black 532, 535, 17 L. Ed. 355. See the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 602.

E. Fraudulent Deed as Color of Title.—See the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

VI. Remedies.

A. Law and Equity Remedies Compared—1. WHEN JURISDICTION CONCURRENT.—To relieve against fraud, and to set aside and cancel fraudulent conveyances, are among the ordinary duties of courts of chancery. Courts of law, however, have concurrent jurisdiction of questions of fraud, when properly raised; and, although they cannot cancel or set aside fraudulent instruments of writing, yet when they are produced in evidence by a party claiming any right under them, their fraudulent character may, under proper circumstances, be shown, and their validity in the particular case contested.[21] Especially where the title to real property is concerned.[22]

21. When jurisdiction concurrent.—Miles v. Caldwell, 2 Wall. 35, 39, 17 L. Ed. 755.

"When the fact of fraud is established in a suit at law, the buyer loses the property without reference to the amount or application of what he has paid, and he can have no relief either at law or in equity." Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 312, 18 L. Ed. 786.

"When the proceeding is in chancery, the jurisdiction exercised is more flexible and tolerant. The equity appealed to—while it scans the transaction with the severest scrutiny—looks at all the facts, and giving to each one its due weight, deals with the subject before it according to its own ideas of right and justice. In some instances it visits the buyer with the same consequences which would have followed in an action at law. In others, it allows a security to stand for the amount advanced upon it. In others, it compels the buyer to account only for the difference between the under price which he paid and the value of the property. In others, although he may have paid the full value, and the property may have passed beyond the reach of the process of the court, it regards him as a trustee, and charges him accordingly. Where he has honestly applied the property to the liabilities of the seller it may hold him excused from further responsibility. The cardinal principle in all such cases is, that the property of the debtor shall not be diverted from the payment of his debts to the injury of his creditors, by means of the fraud." Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 312, 18 L. Ed. 786.

In this case the court states the different modes in which law and equity respectively deal with fraudulent conveyances. Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 18 L. Ed. 786.

Trespass to try title.—Creditors, who have purchased property of their debtor at an execution sale thereof, who were creditors at the time of a conveyance thereof by debtor, are within the protection of the statute of fraudulent conveyances, and may attack the deed in an action of trespass to try title thereto brought against the grantees thereunder. Chandler v. Von Roeder, 24 How. 224, 227, 16 L. Ed. 633.

22. Title to real property involved.—"While, in view of our decisions in Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501, and Buzard v. Houston, 119 U. S. 347, 30 L. Ed. 451, there may be a doubt whether this remedy is available in personal actions, the law is well settled that where the title to real property is concerned, equity has a concurrent jurisdiction, because it may not only enjoin an action at law, but may order a cancellation of the fraudulent conveyance, and prohibit the bringing of further suits at law upon the fraudulent title, and thus afford a more complete relief than is possible in a court of law." Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 328, 39 L. Ed. 167.

"The leading case in the federal courts upon this point is Bean v. Smith, 2 Mason 252, in which Mr. Justice Story held that, notwithstanding the restrictive clause of the judiciary act, Rev. Stat., § 723, a judgment creditor might file a bill in equity against his debtor to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, since there is not, in the proper sense of the term, a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law." Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 328, 39 L. Ed. 167.

"There is a class of cases which hold that where there is actual fraud no remedy at law is complete and adequate, except that which removes the fraudulent title. As early as 1750, it was held by Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, in Bennet v. Musgrove, 2 Ves. Sen. 51, that a bill would lie by an execution creditor to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, whether he could recover at law or not. Objection having been made to the bill upon the ground that the remedy at law was complete, the Lord Chancellor observed: 'But be it as it may, whether he could recover or not, he is entitled to come into this court; the distinction in this court being, where a subsequent purchaser for valuable consideration would recover the estate, and set aside or get the better of a precedent voluntary conveyance, if that conveyance was fairly made without actual fraud, the court will say, take your remedy at law; but wherever the conveyance is attended with actual fraud, though they might go to law by ejectment, and recover the possession, they may come into this court to set aside that conveyance; which is a distinction between actual and presumed fraud from its being merely a conveyance.' This is still the law in England. Blenkinsopp v. Blenkinsopp, 1 De G., M. & G. 495." Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 328, 39 L. Ed. 167.

2. Creditors' Bill or Suit to Set Aside.—A creditors' bill, to subject property of the defendant fraudulently standing in the name of a third party to the payment of a judgment, and to remove a fraudulent judgment which might stand as a cloud upon the title of the debtor, is within the jurisdiction of equity.[23] A court of equity of one state has no inherent power, by the mere force of its decree, to annul an alleged fraudulent deed for property in another state, but it can merely act by coercion of a party defendant subject to its jurisdiction.[24] But where the remedy at law is full, adequate and complete, a bill in equity will not lie.[25]

Against Administrator of Deceased Debtor.—A court of equity has jurisdiction of a bill against the administrator of a deceased debtor and a person to whom real and personal property was conveyed by the deceased debtor, for the purpose of defrauding creditors.[26]

23. Creditors' bill or suit to set aside.—Mississippi Mills v. Cohn, 150 U. S. 202, 207, 37 L. Ed. 1052.

In 2 Beach on Modern Equity Jurisprudence, § 883, it is said: "A court of equity will aid a judgment creditor to reach the property of his debtor by removing fraudulent judgments or conveyances or transfers which defeat his legal remedy at law." See, also, 3 Pomeroy's Eq. Juris., § 1415.

A complaint which is in form and substance such a complaint as is made in "a creditor's bill," to set aside a conveyance of their debtor's property as a fraudulent contrivance to hinder and delay them in the recovery of their debts, is a case of equitable jurisdiction, and one requiring equitable relief as distinguished from legal. In a territory of the United States where the systems of common law and chancery are found as separate systems, chancery can alone give relief on such a bill. Dunphy v. Kleinsmith, 11 Wall. 610, 20 L. Ed. 223.

24. Property beyond jurisdiction.—Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 106, 35 L. Ed. 640.

Hence, although in case of fraud, the jurisdiction of a court of chancery may be sustained over the person, notwithstanding lands not within the jurisdiction may be affected by the decree (Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch 148, 3 L. Ed. 181), yet it does not follow that such a decree is in itself necessarily binding upon the courts of the state where the land is situated. Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 106, 35 L. Ed. 640.

25. Adequate remedy at law.—Kramer v. Cohn, 119 U. S. 355, 356, 30 L. Ed. 439; Dowell v. Mitchell, 105 U. S. 430, 26 L. Ed. 1142; Buzard v. Houston, 119 U. S. 347, 30 L. Ed. 451.

Thus, where a bill in equity was filed by the assignee in bankruptcy of C., against him and D., alleging that C., before the adjudication of bankruptcy, and with intent to defraud his creditors, concealed his property and sold it for a large sum of money, and, after obtaining his discharge in bankruptcy, invested that money in a stock of goods, with which he had since carried on business in the name of D., so far as the plaintiff's claim was against C. personally, an action at law to recover the value of the property fraudulently concealed and sold by him would afford a full, adequate and complete remedy. The only pretence for resorting to equity was the allegation that the proceeds of that property had been invested in the stock in goods of a business carried on by him in the name of D., whereby it was sought to affect the latter and the goods with a trust in favor of the creditors of C., and of the plaintiff as representing them. But the proof wholly failed to support that allegation, and showed that the plaintiff had no right of action, except to recover pecuniary damages against C. alone. It thus appeared that the plaintiff never had any claim within the cognizance of a court of equity; and the bill was rightly dismissed generally as to the second defendant, and without prejudice to an action at law against the first defendant. Kramer v. Cohn, 119 U. S. 355, 356, 30 L. Ed. 439. See the titles BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 908; EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 815.

26. Against administrator of deceased debtor.—Hagan v. Walker, 14 How. 29, 14 L. Ed. 312; McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 12 L. Ed. 675.

In such a case, the court does not exercise an auxiliary jurisdiction to aid legal process, and consequently it is not necessary that the creditor should be in a condition to levy an execution, if the fraudulent obstacle should be removed. Hagan v. Walker, 14 How. 29, 14 L. Ed. 312.

Although the bill does not show that there are not other assets in the hands of the administrator sufficient to pay this

Necessity for Judgment or Other Lien.—The principle that a general creditor cannot assail as fraudulent against creditors, an assignment or transfer of property made by his debtor until he has first established his debt by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, and has either acquired a lien upon the property, or is in a situation to perfect a lien thereon and subject it to the payment of his judgment, upon the removal of the obstacle presented by the fraudulent assignment or transfer, is elementary.[27] And a state statute declaring that the state courts should have jurisdiction of such bills by simple contract creditors, or judgment creditors who have not had executions returned unsatisfied, does not change the rule for the federal courts.[28] The bill cannot be sustained under the prayer for general relief, as brought for the administration of the assets under the assignment, as such relief would not be agreeable to the case made by the bill, which was directed to the setting aside of that instrument. The circuit court was, therefore, in error in proceeding in the case.[29] And it debt, and contains no allegation that the administrator was ever requested to pay it, this bill does expressly aver, that, aside from the property fraudulently conveyed, there is not, any where, any property of decedent out of which the debt could be collected; and although it states that the fraudulent grantor and grantee both remained in possession, and took the crops jointly, and that these crops were of great value, yet, inasmuch as between themselves the crops belonged to the grantee, and as it was the object of the conveyances to prevent them from being applied to the benefit of creditors, there is no presumption that any thing arising from this joint possession ever came to the hands of the administrator, and, therefore, that a demand on him would have been a vain act, which the creditor was not compelled to do. Hagan v. Walker, 14 How. 29, 35, 14 L. Ed. 312.

Where a creditor's suit was brought against one who was endorser on notes held by complainant, to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance by such debtor to his daughter, it was held, that, a judgment having been obtained against the administrator of the endorser, which fixed his liability, this judgment against the administrator in which a devastavit had been suggested, and a return of nulla bona to an execution, was good evidence against the surety of the administrator, and also against the fraudulent grantee of the intestate. McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 12 L. Ed. 675.

Although the creditor has a remedy against the surety of the administrator by a suit at law upon the bond, yet he may also file a bill in chancery against all the parties who are concerned in the alleged fraud, and such other persons as are interested in the estate. McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 12 L. Ed. 675.

Although by the laws which prevail in the District of Columbia, the personal estate of a deceased person should be resorted to for the payment of debts before applying to the realty; yet, where the administrator was found guilty of a devastavit, and the personal property was chiefly left in the hands of the surety, who was also the person charged with being a fraudulent grantee of the intestate, the general rule is not applicable. McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 12 L. Ed. 675.

In a bill against the fraudulent grantee, it is not necessary to aver a deficiency of the personal estate of the deceased; it is sufficient to aver the fraud and the waste of the personal assets by such grantee, who was also the personal representative. McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 12 L. Ed. 675.

27. Necessity for judgment or other lien.—Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 457, 37 L. Ed. 804; Case v. Beauregard, 101 U. S. 688, 690, 25 L. Ed. 1004; Adler v. Fenton, 24 How. 407, 16 L. Ed. 696. And see the title CREDITORS' SUITS, vol. 5, p. 27, et seq.

The mere fact that a party is a creditor is not enough. He must be a creditor with a specific right or equity in the property; and this is the foundation of the jurisdiction in chancery because jurisdiction on account of the alleged fraud of the debtor does not attach as against the immediate parties to the impugned transfer, except in aid of the legal right. Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 458, 37 L. Ed. 804.

Simple contract creditors, who have not reduced their claims to judgment, have therefore no standing in the United States circuit court, sitting as a court of equity, upon a bill to set aside and vacate a fraudulent conveyance. Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 456, 37 L. Ed. 804.

28. State statute does not change rule.—Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 456, 37 L. Ed. 804; Scott v. Neely, 140 U. S. 106, 35 L. Ed. 358. See the title CREDITORS' SUITS, vol. 5, pp. 32, 33.

29. Same.—Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 459, 37 L. Ed. 804.

By the code of West Virginia, c. 133, § 2: "A creditor, before obtaining a judgment or decree for his claim, may institute any suit to avoid a gift, conveyance, assignment, or transfer of or charge upon the estate of his debtor, which he might institute after obtaining such judg-has been held that it must be a domestic judgment.[30]

3. Action for Damages.—In the absence of special legislation, we may safely affirm, that a general creditor cannot bring an action on the case against his debtor, or against those combining and colluding with him to make dispositions of his property, although the object of those dispositions be to hinder, delay, and defraud creditors.[31]

B. Garnishment.—In some states money or effects in the hands of the garnishee, which are fraudulently withdrawn from the creditors of a defendant, may be reached, in an attachment or judgment, by garnishee process.[32]

C. Injunction.—It has been held that injunction will not lie to prevent the debtor from fraudulently disposing of his property at the instance of a creditor at large or before judgment.[33] ment or decree, and he may, in such suit, have all the relief in respect to said estate which he would be entitled to after obtaining a judgment or decree for the claim which he may be entitled to recover." Dewey v. West Fairmont Gas Coal Co., 123 U. S. 329, 332, 31 L. Ed. 179.

30. Domestic judgment essential.—"In Chaflin v. McDermott, 20 Blatchford 522, 12 Fed. Rep. 375, it was held, that a creditor's bill, founded on a judgment recovered against a debtor in a state court in California, would not lie in a circuit court of the United States in New York, to set aside a fraudulent transfer of personal property made by the debtor in California, by means of collusive judgments and sales under executions issued thereon, no judgment having been obtained or execution issued in such circuit court or in any state court of New York." National Tube Works Co. v. Ballou, 146 U. S. 517, 522, 36 L. Ed. 1070.

31. Action for conspiracy.—Where a creditor, whose debt was not yet due at the time of bringing the action, brought a suit against his debtors and two other persons, for a conspiracy to enable the debtors to dispose of their property fraudulently so as to hinder and defeat the creditors in the collection of their lawful demands, the action will not lie. The debtors were the lawful owners of the property at the time the suit was commenced. They had the legal right to use and enjoy it to the exclusion of others, and no one had any right to interfere with their use or disposition; and there is no right conferred by the law upon a creditor to prevent the accomplishment of fraud by his debtor, and to pursue him, and others assisting him, for a revocation of acts done to hinder, delay, or defraud him, in the collection of his demands. Adler v. Fenton, 24 How. 407, 16 L. Ed. 696. See the title CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1108.

32. Garnishment.—Williams v. Hill, 19 How. 246, 252, 15 L. Ed. 570. See, generally, the title ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, p. 660.

33. Injunction.—"In Wiggins v. Armstrong (2 Johns. Ch. 144), Chancellor Kent held that a creditor at large, or before judgment, was not entitled to the interference of a court of equity by injunction to prevent the debtor from disposing of his property in fraud of the creditor; citing * * * authorities, and stating that the reason of the rule seemed to be that until the creditor had established his title he had no right to interfere, and it would lead to unnecessary and perhaps a fruitless and oppressive interruption of the debtor's rights; adding, 'unless he has a certain claim upon the property of the debtor he has no concern with his frauds.'" Scott v. Neely, 140 U. S. 106, 113, 35 L. Ed. 358. See the title CREDITORS' SUITS, vol. 5, p. 27, et seq.

"The authorities are clear, that chancery will not interfere to prevent an insolvent debtor from alienating his property to avoid an existing or prospective debt, even when there is a suit pending to establish it. In Moran v. Dawes, Hopkin's Ch. R. 365, the court says: 'Our laws determine with accuracy the time and manner in which the property of a debtor ceases to be subject to his disposition, and becomes subject to the rights of his creditor. A creditor acquires a lien upon the lands of his debtor by a judgment; and upon the personal goods of the debtor, by the delivery of an execution to the sheriff. It is only by these liens that a creditor has any vested or specific right in the property of his debtor. Before these liens are acquired, the debtor has full dominion over his property; he may convert one species of property into another, and he may alienate to a purchaser. The rights of the debtor, and those of a creditor, are thus defined by positive rules; and the points at which the power of the debtor ceases, and the right of the creditor commences, are clearly established. These regulations cannot be contravened or varied by any interposition of equity. There are cases in which the violation of the rights of a creditor within these limits has formed the subject of an action at law against third persons. Smith v. Tonstall, Carth., 3; Penrose v. Mitchell, 8 S. and R., 522; Kelsy v. Murphy, 26 Pen. R., 78; Yates v. Joyce, 11 John., 136. But the analogies of the law, and the doctrine of adjudged cases, will not allow of an extension by the courts of the remedy

D. Parties—1. PARTIES PLAINTIFF.—Conveyances by insolvent debtors in fraud of their creditors may be attacked by their statutory assignees, though equity would not aid the debtors themselves to recover the property.[34]

2. PARTIES DEFENDANT.—Fraudulent Grantor, Heirs and Devisees.—The alleged fraudulent grantor is a necessary party defendant to the bill.[35] And so with the heirs and devisees of a deceased grantor.[36]

Encumbrancers.—And a prior encumbrancer.[37] But if the prior encumbrancer is out of the jurisdiction or cannot be joined without defeating it, it is a fit cause to dispense with his presence, and order a sale subject to his encumbrance, which will not be affected by the decree.[38]

Grantee or Alienee.—And where a grantee claims under the deed in more than one capacity, e. g., as executrix and as individual, she should be impleaded in both capacities.[39] employed in those cases in favor of a general creditor. This subject was discussed much at large in Lamb v. Stone, 11 Pick. 527." Adler v. Fenton, 24 How. 407, 411, 16 L. Ed. 696.

Alienee.—And a person who holds assets of the debtor, or his administrator, is a proper party defendant.[40]

See ante, "Powers Exercisable by Debtor over His Property," II.

34. Statutory assignees may sue.—For the property transferred would, in the eye of the law, remain the debtors' and pass to the assignees, who would not be subject to the rule that those who commit iniquity have no standing in equity to reap the fruits thereof. But equities or rights belonging to particular creditors are not, by operation of law, transferred to such assignees. Hubbard v. Tod, 171 U. S. 474, 498, 43 L. Ed. 246.

35. Grantor as necessary party.—"In Gaylords v. Kelshaw, 1 Wall. 81, 82, 17 L. Ed. 612, it was held by this court that in a bill to set aside a conveyance as made without consideration and in fraud of creditors, the alleged fraudulent grantor is a necessary defendant, because it was his debts that were sought to be collected and his fraudulent conduct that required investigation." Swan Land, etc., Co. v. Frank, 148 U. S. 603, 610, 37 L. Ed. 577.

And if, being made defendant, his citizenship is not set forth on the record, the bill must be remanded or dismissed. Gaylords v. Kelshaw, 1 Wall. 81, 17 L. Ed. 612.

36. Heirs and devisees.—Where a suit is brought by creditors to set aside as fraudulent and void conveyances by their deceased debtor, made prior to his death, s mble that his only heirs and the devisees in his unprobated will, should be parties to the bill. The mere allowance of the debt of a creditor by the probate court is not conclusive evidence against them in a suit to reach the real estate of their ancestor and devisor. Walker v. Powers, 104 U. S. 245, 251, 26 L. Ed. 729.

37. Prior encumbrancer.—It is proper to make a prior encumbrancer, who holds the legal title, a party to the bill, in order that the whole title may be sold under the decree; for the purpose of such a decree, the prior encumbrancer is a necessary party; but the court may order a sale subject to the encumbrance, without having the prior encumbrancer before it, and in fit cases it will do so. Hagan v. Walker, 14 How. 29, 14 L. Ed. 312.

Mortgagee.—In proceedings to set aside a conveyance of real estate, made in fraud of the rights of creditors, it is not necessary to make a mortgagee of the estate a party, his rights under the mortgage not being brought into question. Venable v. United States Bank, 2 Pet. 107, 7 L. Ed. 364.

Trustee and cestui que trust under trust deed.—Where money was borrowed from a bank upon a promissory note, signed by the principal and two sureties, and the principal debtor, by way of counter security, conveyed certain property to a trustee, for the purpose of indemnifying his sureties, while it was necessary to make the trustee and the cestuis que trust parties to a bill filed by the bank, asserting a special lien upon the property thus conveyed, yet where the principal debtor had made a fraudulent conveyance of the property, which had continued in his possession, after the execution of the first deed, and then died, a bill was good, which was filed by the bank against the administrators, for the purpose of setting aside the fraudulent conveyance, and bringing the property into the assets of the deceased, for the benefit of all creditors who might apply. McRea v. Branch Bank, 19 How. 376, 15 L. Ed. 688.

38. Where joinder would defeat jurisdiction.—Hagan v. Walker, 14 How. 29, 14 L. Ed. 312.

39. Grantee in dual capacity.—Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 105, 35 L. Ed. 640.

40. Person in possession of assets of deceased debtor.—That a single creditor may maintain a bill against an administrator of a deceased debtor, for a discovery of assets and the payment of his debt, there can be no doubt. That, in some cases, he may join with the administrator

E. Pleading—1. ALLEGATION OF FRAUD.—When it is sought to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent, the fraud, with the facts connected with it, should be alleged in the bill.[41]

2. DENIAL OF FRAUD.—The general denial of fraud in the answer of the defendants is equivalent to nothing more than a denial of a conclusion of law.[42]

F. Evidence—1. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.—Fraud Never Presumed.—The law presumes that the sale was made in good faith and with honest intentions; in absence of proof to the contrary, the validity of the sale could not be questioned.[43]

Burden of Proof on Attacking Creditor.—The burden of proving the fraud alleged rests upon the attacking creditor.[44] Although the burden may be a third person, who is in possession of property which is amenable to the payment of the debt, is also clear. The instances in which it has been actually held that such third person might be joined, are chiefly cases of collusion between the administrator and the third person possessed of assets, insolvency of the administrator, and where the third person was the surviving partner of the deceased. But it will be found that the equitable right of the creditor to join a third person, and have a discovery and an appropriation of assets held by him, has never been limited to these particular cases. For, while it is generally agreed that some special case must be made, it is also declared in all the cases, that what is to constitute it has not been limited by any precise and rigid rule. Hagan v. Walker, 14 How. 29, 33, 14 L. Ed. 312.

41. Allegation of fraud.—Knox v. Smith, 4 How. 298, 11 L. Ed. 983. A bill in chancery which recites that the complainants had recovered a judgment at law in a court of the United States, upon which an execution had issued and been levied upon certain property by the marshal; that another person, claiming to hold the property levied upon by virtue of some fraudulent deed of trust, had obtained a process from a state court, by which the sheriff had taken the property out of the hands of the marshal; and praying that the property might be sold, cannot be sustained. If the object had been to set aside the deed of trust as fraudulent, the fraud, with the facts connected with it, should have been alleged in the bill. See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 424 et seq.

In suit against estate of deceased debtor.—See ante, "Creditors' Bill or Suit to Set Aside," VI, A, 2.

42. Denial in answer.—Lathrop v. Drake, 91 U. S. 516, 520, 23 L. Ed. 414.

Effect of denial in answer.—See post, "Weight and Sufficiency," VI, F, 3.

43. Fraud never presumed.—Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 625, 38 L. Ed. 286.

"Fraud is not presumed, either as a matter of law or fact, unless under circumstances not fairly susceptible of any other interpretation." Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 78, 9 L. Ed. 345; Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 416, 33 L. Ed. 955.

"Existing creditors may of course challenge the good faith of the transaction, but if they cannot disturb an absolute sale when made in good faith, why should they be permitted to challenge a conditional sale if made in like good faith? The fact that fraudulent relations are possible is hardly a sufficient reason for denouncing transactions which are not fraudulent." Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 278, 35 L. Ed. 171. See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 439.

Presumption from retention of possession or benefit by grantor.—See ante, "Retention of Possession or Reservation of Benefits by Grantor," III, C, 9.

44. Burden of proof on attacking creditor.—Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552; Allen v. Smith, 129 U. S. 465, 32 L. Ed. 732; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 132 U. S. 565, 33 L. Ed. 438; Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 625, 38 L. Ed. 286.

And if the evidence was equally balanced upon the point of good faith and honesty, the charge must fail, and mere knowledge on the part of the creditor that his purchase would deprive other creditors of their debts would not make the sale fraudulent. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 625, 38 L. Ed. 286.

Allegations of fraud which are positively denied, and neither proved by testimony, nor circumstances, may be put out of the case. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 238, 5 L. Ed. 603.

Where the bill alleges, as a principal ground of relief, fraud in fact, in the inception of the conveyance sought to be set aside, this being denied by the answers, it is incumbent that fraud in fact should be proved by the complainants. United States Bank v. Lee, 13 Pet. 107, 110, 10 L. Ed. 81.

Where the whole question of fraud was submitted to the jury, it is incumbent on the plaintiff in error, if he would support this exception, to show some defect in the deed itself, which makes it absolutely void as to creditors, whatever may be the fairness of intent with which it was executed. Harris v. DeWolf, 4 Pet. 147, 150, 7 L. Ed. 811. See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 440.

See, also, ante, "Mutuality of Fraudushifted by showing a fraudulent intent on grantor's part, coupled with circumstances of suspicion.[45]

Of Payment of Consideration Stated.—Proof of the payment of the consideration stated in the deed, was vital, in order to uphold a deed in other respects surrounded with suspicion.[46]

Of Notice of Fraudulent Intent.—See ante, "Intent in General," III, C, 1.

2. ADMISSIBILITY—a. Showing Knowledge or Intent of Parties.—Where it was charged that a sale by a bankrupt was made in contemplation of insolvency and was fraudulent as to creditors, and that grantee had reasonable cause to believe such to be the fact, it was perfectly competent to show what had been the business dealings between the parties before the sale in question, and therefore to show a prior valid sale from the bankrupt grantor to the same party, connected with evidence tending to show a secret agreement by which the vendor was reinvested with an interest in the goods sold. It clearly tended to show that grantor was trying to cover up his property from his creditors and that grantee was aiding him to do it.[47]

Evidence of Indebtedness When Voluntary Deed Was Given.—Where lent Intent, or Notice, Essential," III, C, 1, b.

When possession changed under Kansas statute.—Under the Kansas statutes, where the sale is followed by an actual and continued change of possession the vendee is not obliged, in order to maintain his right of possession, to prove both the payment of a sufficient consideration and the exercise of good faith upon his part. His title, where such possession is shown, will be protected, unless it is successfully impeached by some one who has the right to question its validity. The party who asserts that the title did not pass as against him must make such proof as will establish that proposition. If he does not, the presumption which the law indulges that the vendee has rightfully acquired possession will control the determination of the issue. Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 614, 29 L. Ed. 742.

Reservation of trust or benefit.—"If the facts of indebtedness and that the goods were sold in payment of such indebtedness at their reasonable fair value are established to the satisfaction of the jury, and if it be contended, in avoidance thereof, that the trade was simulated, that there was a secret trust or benefit reserved to the debtors, the burden was then on the contesting creditor to establish it." Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 163, 40 L. Ed. 374.

45. Shifting the burden.—"The burden is upon the attacking creditor, but where the fraudulent intent on the grantor's part is made out and the circumstances are suspicious, the purchaser must show that he has paid value, and if he does, it must then appear that the purchaser had notice of the fraud." Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552.

"These are the principles applied by the supreme court of Oregon in passing upon the statute of that state. And this court accepts the construction given to such a state statute as controlling." Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552; Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 33 L. Ed. 696.

Where a creditor shows facts that raise a strong presumption of fraud in a conveyance made by his debtor, the history of which is necessarily known to the debtor only, the burden of proof lies on him to explain it, his estate being insolvent. Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 18 L. Ed. 786.

As to validity of preference.—See ante, "Lawful in Absence of Statute," III, C, 8, a.

Effect of denial in answer.—See post, "Effect of Answer Denying Fraud," VI, F, 3, b.

Claim to property derived after origin of creditor's demand.—The adverse claimant of the property must prove the bona fides of his claim, if it is derived from the debtor after the origin of the creditor's demand, and where the garnishee produced notes signed by the judgment debtor, bearing date prior to the judgment, but did not prove their existence before the judgment in consideration, it was properly left to the jury to say whether there was fraud or collusion between the garnishee and the judgment debtor. Williams v. Hill, 19 How. 246, 247, 15 L. Ed. 570.

46. Of payment of consideration stated.—Callan v. Statham, 23 How. 477, 480, 16 L. Ed. 532; Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 595, 36 L. Ed. 552; McCoy v. Rhodes, 11 How. 131, 13 L. Ed. 634; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 614, 29 L. Ed. 742.

Consideration for conveyance of right to public land entry.—See ante, "Fraudulent Entry of Public Lands," III, B, 3.

47. Evidence tending to show intent.—Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185, 192, 28 L. Ed. 395.

Where the evidence tended to show an intent on a debtor's part, at the time of the suing out of an attachment, to defraud his creditors by putting his property into the shape of notes and placing them beyond their reach, proof of his

a voluntary deed is impeached as fraudulent, evidence of judgments against the grantor is admissible, as proof (among other facts) that he was indebted at the time of making the deed, although the grantee was not a party to the suits on which the judgments were obtained.[48] And for a similar reason evidence of ability to pay all claims at such time, is admissible.[49]

b. Parol Evidence Generally.—See the title PAROL EVIDENCE. Parol evidence is inadmissible to enlarge the estate of the grantee against the plain words of acts of a similar nature, occurring immediately after the attachment writ issued, would have been admissible if in causal relation with what the whole evidence showed was one transaction. Eames v. Kaiser, 142 U. S. 488, 492, 35 L. Ed. 1090.

As to evidence of other frauds generally, see the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1019.

If the particular indebtedness to the debtor was turned into notes, and the notes were converted into money before the attachment issued, or simultaneously, that fact sustained the charge of the conversion of the property into money, and with the other evidence justified the inference that this was for the purpose of placing it beyond the reach of his creditors. Eames v. Kaiser, 142 U. S. 488, 491, 35 L. Ed. 1090. See the title ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, p. 672.

"Of course, this would not be so as to independent and isolated action after the issue of the writ, but when happening in immediate connection with what preceded, and as part of one whole, the evidence would be admissible." Eames v. Kaiser, 142 U. S. 488, 492, 35 L. Ed. 1090.

Statement made to commercial agency.—In an action for damages brought in one of the courts of the Territory of Dakota to recover damages for the alleged unlawful taking by the defendant A. of a certain stock of merchandise, where the defendant justified the taking under attachments in favor of creditors of the former owner S., who had sold to the plaintiff by an alleged fraudulent conveyance, which came to his hands as sheriff of he county, the court did not err in allowing the defendant to read, in evidence, the confidential business statement made by S. to a commercial agency. That statement, the bill of exceptions recites, concealed the alleged liability of S. to his brother, the plaintiff then existing, although not shown to have been brought to the knowledge of the plaintiff or of any of the creditors of S. The answer to the question why should such concealment have been made has some, though perhaps very slight, bearing upon the inquiry whether S. was in fact, indebted to his brother to the full extent claimed by the latter. Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 608, 617, 38 L. Ed. 286.

48. Evidence of indebtedness when voluntary deed was given.—Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 6 L. Ed. 454.

"The consideration expressed in the deed from Doyle, the elder, to his son, is natural love and affection, and the judgments were introduced to show that the grantor was in debt, at the time of giving the deed, which, as was contended, would render it void as against creditors. This was, therefore, necessarily an inquiry into matters to which the grantee in the deed was not a party. It was certainly competent for the defendant to show that the grantor was indebted, at the time he made the conveyance; this was a necessary step towards establishing the fraud; and if these judgments conduced to prove that fact, they could not be shut out as incompetent evidence. The extent and effect of the evidence was matter for the jury. If the evidence ought to have been excluded, because Doyle, the younger, was not a party to the judgments, the same objection would have lain against the proof of his being in debt to others in any manner whatever; that would have been equally an inquiry into matters to which the grantee in the deed was not a party. There was, therefore, no objection to the evidence on this ground." Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 210, 6 L. Ed. 454.

"But copies of the accounts upon which the judgments were founded are spread upon the record, by which it appears, that the cause of action arose before the date of the deed. If these accounts did not properly form a part of the record, according to the course and practice of the court where the judgments were entered, a specific objection should have been made to their being received in evidence, which would have led to the inquiry, whether they properly formed a part of the record; but as the question is now presented to this court, we cannot say, that these accounts are to be stricken out of the record. They may be looked to, for the purpose of showing that Doyle, the elder, was in debt at the date of the deed; but whether to an extent which would avoid the deed, must depend on circumstances which are not to be inquired into by this court." Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 211, 6 L. Ed. 454.

49. Evidence tending to show solvency.—Evidence offered for the double purpose of showing that the grantee was a creditor of his father, and that by reason thereof, although the consideration in the deed purported to be natural love and affection, it could not be considered as given with intention to defraud creditors; and also to rebut the evidence of fraud in the deed, and to show that the beneficial interest was in him, and that the deed was so framed to shield the property from his creditors.[50]

c. Declarations and Admissions.—See the title DECLARATIONS AND ADMISSIONS, vol. 5, pp. 219, et seq.; 222, et seq.; 227, 228.

Of Grantor.—The admissions of the grantor in a deed while he held the legal title, being contrary to his interest, are competent evidence against him and those claiming under him, where he said the object of the conveyance to him was to protect the property against a creditor,[51] or declarations or admissions of grantor after the conveyance, made in the presence of grantee or his agent and acquiesced in by him.[52] And though made after the conveyance, in grantee's fact, and to show the character and situation of grantor, in point of property, at the time he executed the deed in question, if admissible for either of the purposes above stated, was erroneously rejected. That the evidence was proper for the latter purpose, cannot be questioned. The charge against the grantor was, that he was guilty of fraud in fact, in making the deed to his son; that it was done for the express purposes of defrauding his creditors; and it was proper evidence, therefore, to rebut this allegation, to show that the grantor had the means of paying his debts, independent of the property conveyed to his son. Whether the evidence would have made out that fact to the satisfaction of the jury, is not for this court to inquire. If it conduced to make out that fact, it should have been submitted to the consideration of the jury. Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 212, 6 L. Ed. 454.

The evidence offered to show that grantor was indebted to his son to an amount equal to the value of the property conveyed to him, was declared also to be for the purpose of repelling the presumption of fraud in fact, and to show that there could have been no such intention to defraud his creditors, by putting his property out of their reach, without receiving any real and adequate consideration for it, and was admissible for that purpose, but not to vary or alter the terms of the deed, even by showing the existence of a valuable consideration instead of the expressed consideration of love and affection. That was not its purpose. It was to meet and repel the presumption of fraud which was attempted to be raised against the deed, by reason of such extrinsic circumstances. The evidence which had been admitted to show the fraud, and that which was offered to rebut it, related to collateral and independent facts unconnected with the deed, and could not, therefore, in any manner, vary or alter its terms. Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 213, 6 L. Ed. 454.

50. Parol evidence.—Where there was a deed of land to a debtor in trust which conveyed to him a naked legal title, he took under it no interest that could be seized and sold by the marshal upon a fi. fa.; and the purchaser at such sale could not maintain an action of ejectment under the marshal's deed. And where he offered evidence to prove that the trusts in the deed were fraudulent, and that the debtor purchased the land and procured the deed in this form in order to hinder and defraud his creditors, and this proof was offered to show that the debtor had a beneficial interest in the property, liable to be seized and sold for the payment of his debts, it was held that this parol evidence could not be introduced to enlarge or change the legal estate of the grantee against the plain words of the instrument. Smith v. McCann, 24 How. 398, 16 L. Ed. 714.

If the evidence were admissible, the fraudulent character of the trusts, as against his creditors, could not enlarge his legal interest beyond the terms of the deed. Although the debtor may have paid the purchase money, that circumstance did not establish a resulting trust in his favor. The lessors of the plaintiff had a plain and ample remedy in chancery, where all the parties interested could be brought before the court. Smith v. McCann, 24 How. 398, 16 L. Ed. 714.

In the case of Remington v. Linthicum, 14 Pet. 84, 10 L. Ed. 364, relied on by the plaintiff, the evidence was offered, not to change the estate limited in the grant, but to show that the grant was fraudulent, and utterly void, and conveyed no interest whatever to the grantee named in it. The party offering the evidence did not claim under that deed, but against it. And if, in this case, the evidence was offered for a like purpose, and the deed proved to be fraudulent and void, it would defeat the plaintiff's action instead of supporting it. Smith v. McCann, 24 How. 398, 406, 16 L. Ed. 714.

Parol proof of former issue on plea of former adjudication.—See the title RES ADJUDICATA.

51. Admissions against interest of grantor.—Baker v. Humphrey, 101 U. S. 494, 499, 25 L. Ed. 1065.

52. Acquiescence of grantee.—The objection that grantors after they had parted with their interests in the property, could not, by their own confessions, or statements of the nature of the transaction, defeat the title they had transferred, is inapplicable to a conversation in the presence of one of the grantee firm, where the bill of exceptions states that he concurred in all that was said. It was therefore admissible against him and his absence, they may still be admissible to disprove the answer of the grantor, he being a party to the bill.[53]

Of Grantee.—And testimony relating to what a grantee himself, one of the defendants, said, and tending to show his own recognition of the fact that he had been a controlling spirit in the attachment proceedings, is admissible.[54]

d. Res Gestæ.—The grantee's acts and doings may be admissible evidence as part of the res gestæ.[55]

e. Negative and Circumstantial Evidence.—See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, pp. 441, 442.

3. WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY—a. Amount of Evidence Necessary.—A bare suspicion of fraud or unfairness is insufficient.[56] partners as a statement which he agreed to at the time of the conversion, and which he should have contradicted if it were untrue. Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 374, 33 L. Ed. 373.

But mere statements by the grantor, in the absence of the grantee, tending to show that he entertained a strong dislike for the attaching creditor and was disposed to obstruct the collection of his judgment, are not sufficient to show fraud, even on the part of the grantor, but having been made in the absence of grantee, and long after the date of the conveyance, they were clearly incompetent as against the latter. Gottlieb v. Thatcher, 151 U. S. 271, 279, 38 L. Ed. 157.

The declarations or acknowledgments of the debtor will not be received to support the title of a garnishee who claims against the attaching creditor, nor the recitals in a deed or mortgage executed by debtor nor admissions made by him at the time of its execution. Nor is the consideration of a note in favor of the claimant shown by the production of the note itself. "The objection to such evidence is said to be, that it can be manufactured by one indebted, and by that means a creditor might be defeated; for, in most cases, it would not be practicable for him to prove a negative, or disprove the statement made by his debtor." Williams v. Hill, 19 How. 246, 251, 15 L. Ed. 570.

53. To disprove grantor's answer.—Venable v. United States Bank, 2 Pet. 107, 119, 7 L. Ed. 364.

There is also testimony in the case, from several witnesses, of the confessions of the grantor, as to the object of the deeds, and of subsequent acts of control over the estate, to some extent, from which unfavorable inferences have been deduced at the argument against the validity of the deeds. It has been said at the bar, that these confessions and acts, being subsequent to the execution of the deeds, ought not to be permitted to prejudice the title of grantee, and are not evidence to bind him. It is true that neither the acts nor confessions of a grantor, under such circumstances, are admissible to defeat the title of the grantee. But they are certainly admissible, to disprove the answer of the grantor, when he is a party to the bill. If they discredit his answer, they withdraw from the case all the influence, which his concurrence in the statement of the grantee would otherwise have; and to this extent, they have a bearing upon the whole merits of the case; but not beyond it. Upon examination of these confessions, they certainly exhibit some misgivings on the part of the grantor, and some proof that the sale of the estate was to defeat the debt due by him to the attacking creditor. The acts of control by grantor over the estate are more equivocal; and but for his subsequent liberal participation in all the produce of the estate, would perhaps, of themselves, not be very significant. As the case is, they cannot but have some weight. Venable v. United States Bank, 2 Pet. 107, 119, 7 L. Ed. 364.

54. Of grantee.—Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 375, 33 L. Ed. 373.

55. Grantee's acts as part of res gestæ.—It was held in Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 372, 33 L. Ed. 373, that a transfer or assignment of notes and accounts by an insolvent firm to a creditor was a part of the transaction by which the whole property of the insolvent firm was appropriated during the twelve or fifteen hours within which the matter was completed. The short time consumed in the whole transaction, the active interference of the grantee in all its stages and in securing priority for certain friends of his, and of the debtor in the attachments, levied after the execution of the transfer, and the fact that the whole property of the insolvent debtors was intended to go to certain individuals to the exclusion of others, by consent of the parties engaged, constituted one transaction, in which grantee's acts and doings were part of the res gestæ, and as such admissible evidence.

56. Amount of evidence necessary.—Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 132 U. S. 565, 33 L. Ed. 438. See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 442.

Conveyances held not fraudulent.—The fact that a member of an indebted firm covered his homestead with a mortgage, which was used to raise money by the firm of which he was a member to pay its debts, is surely not a transaction that should be branded as a fraud upon creditors of the firm. Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 132 U. S. 565, 571, 33 L. Ed. 438

It was held in Adams v. Collier, 122 U.

b. Effect of Answer Denying Fraud.—On a bill to set aside as fraudulent a conveyance of lands, where the answers of the defendants have denied all fraud, those answers are entitled to stand, unless they are overcome by the testimony of two witnesses, or of one witness and circumstances.[57] And where the several answers of the grantor and the other defendants contain a full and explicit denial of all the charges contained in the bill, tending in the least manner

S. 382, 390, 30 L. Ed. 1207, that upon the merits of the case the evidence was satisfactory that the conveyance of 1863 was not made with any intent to hinder or defraud the creditors of the grantor. The latter was, at that time, in such condition, as to property, that he could, without injustice to creditors, make a gift of these lands to his children. The transaction was in good faith, and was not a mere device to hinder and defraud creditors. The deed was promptly delivered by the grantor to one for all of the grantees. The possession of the lands by the father, at times, subsequent to the execution and delivery of the deed, and his control of them apparently for his own benefit, is satisfactorily explained by witnesses. See Warren v. Moody, 122 U. S. 132, 30 L. Ed. 1108.

It was held in Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 692, 33 L. Ed. 696, that the circuit court was right in finding "no evidence whatever of any actual fraudulent intent on the part of the firm, or either of the partners, to hinder and delay their creditors."

It was held in White v. Cotzhausen, 129 U. S. 329, 344, 32 L. Ed. 677, that the finding of the circuit court that the conveyances, bill of sale, confession of judgment and transfers in question were made without adequate consideration, and with intent to hinder, delay and defraud the appellee, and upon these grounds giving the attacking creditor a prior right in the distribution of the property, was erroneous.

Conveyances held fraudulent.—In a suit by an assignee in bankruptcy to set aside an assignment by a partner of partnership property in the trust for his wife and children, it was held that such transfer—which was within six months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy—was made in contemplation of the insolvency; and according to the weight of evidence the transferees, at that time, not only had reasonable cause to believe that transferrer was acting in contemplation of insolvency, but that such transfer was made with a view to prevent the moneys due on the policies from coming into the hands of an assignee in bankruptcy. Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169, 171, 31 L. Ed. 400.

It was held in Harrell v. Beall, 17 Wall. 590, 591, 21 L. Ed. 692, a suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent sale by an insolvent bankrupt brought by the assignee, that the sale to E. was a barefaced fraud, and that if the appellee did not know it when he purchased of E. it was because he intentionally shut his eyes to the truth, and that he had such notice and information as made it his duty to inquire further, and that the slightest effort by him in that direction would have discovered the whole fraud.

It was held in McRea v. Branch Bank, 19 How. 376, 377, 15 L. Ed. 688, that the sale was in fraud of creditors, and especially of the bank. Without detailing the evidence, is enough to say, that the removal of the property from Alabama by debtor, leaving the judgment of the bank unsatisfied, his insolvency, the relation between the parties, their subsequent residence together, the manner in which the property was held and managed, are causes of every grave suspicion. The bill charges, that if this property was conveyed to her, "it was so conveyed with intent and for the purpose of hindering, delaying, and defrauding the creditors of the said John D. Bracy." The answer of vendee does not deny this allegation. The charge in the bill, that the sale was fraudulent as to creditors, is made out in proof.

In Venable v. United States Bank, 2 Pet. 107, 112, 7 L. Ed. 364, which was the case of a person, upon the eve of a decree being rendered against him for a large sum of money, which it is admitted would go far to his ruin, making conveyances of his whole property, real and personal, to his brother in law, for an asserted consideration equal to its full value, which did not appear from the evidence to have been actually paid, the conveyance was set aside for fraud. The court said: "Upon the whole, without going more at large into the case, the circumstances are such, that it appears to us these deeds were not bona fide and for a valuable consideration, and therefore they were properly set aside by the circuit court. Looking to the nature of the transaction, the assumed considerations, the relation and circumstances of the parties, the impending decree, the sweeping extent of the deeds, the nondisclosure, on the face of them, of the real considerations, the objects of the collateral and secret contract, the very great doubt as to what was due to the children, and the ambiguous explanations of the parties; we think the presumptions are so strong against the validity of the deeds, that they ought not to be supported." Venable v. United States Bank, 2 Pet. 107, 120, 7 L. Ed. 364.

57. Effect of answer denying fraud.—Venable v. United States Bank, 2 Pet. 107, 112, 7 L. Ed. 364.

Where an allegation of fraud is denied to sustain the allegations of fraud or collusion, or any secret or unfair transactions between them, or either of them, and grantor, and there is no proof offered to sustain these allegations, they may, therefore, be dismissed, as wholly unsupported.[58] But the answer must be specific in its denial, not general, and must meet the charges of the bill with a positive negation,[59] and must not be discrepant with one another, if more than one, or with the deeds.[60]

c. Questions for Jury.—Fraud or no fraud is generally a question of fact to in the answer and not sustained by proof, the bill pro tanto must be dismissed. McCoy v. Rhodes, 11 How. 131, 13 L. Ed. 634. See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 444.

On a question of fact arising upon a bill to set aside conveyances as made in fraud of creditors, though there was ground of suspicion, weight was properly given to an answer positively denying the facts and fraud charged; this answer being supported by the positive testimony of a witness, who, though not a defendant in the case, was a principal actor in the transactions charged to be fraudulent, the court saying (Miller, J. dissenting): "His testimony upon this point, and which constitutes the main issue in the case, is full and explicit in the denial of any participation, directly or indirectly, in the transaction. The evidence relied on on the other side to overcome the answers of the defendants, and the testimony of this witness, is circumstantial and argumentative." Parker v. Phetteplace, 1 Wall. 684, 689, 17 L. Ed. 675.

In a suit to set aside a conveyance as being made for the purpose of hindering, delaying, and defrauding creditors of an alleged insolvent grantor, and without consideration, the answer denied all the allegations of fraud, stated that the purchase was without any knowledge or notice on the part of the grantee that any fraud was intended, and that a fair consideration was paid. This was borne out by the testimony of the grantee, as a witness for the complainant, and there was no testimony of any inadequacy of the consideration. The grantee took possession, through his agents, soon afterwards, and continuously paid taxes thereafter. The allegation of insolvency was not supported by the testimony, but it was shown that every debt that grantor owed at the time of the conveyance was well secured. It was held that, the testimony of the grantee not having been contradicted in any substantial or material respect, it established that the purchase of the property in question was free from fraud, and that the testimony as a whole fell far short of establishing the allegation of a fraudulent purpose in the conveyance. Gottlieb v. Thatcher, 151 U. S. 271, 38 L. Ed. 157.

58. Same.—Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 115, 10 L. Ed. 903, where the court said: "That this assignment was a bona fide transaction between Wheeler and his preferred creditors, is clearly established by the proofs. Every allegation in the bill, suggesting fraud or collusion, is fully met and denied by the several answers, and is wholly unsupported by any proofs." Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. 106, 118, 10 L. Ed. 903. See, also, Norton v. Hood, 124 U. S. 20, 31 L. Ed. 364.

And it is proper to dismiss a bill filed to set aside as fraudulent an assignment for creditors, where the respondents deny the fraud charged upon their oaths, as responsively to the charge made by the complainants as that can be done, and the latter have not sustained their charge by any proof whatever. Livermore v. Jenckes, 21 How. 126, 146, 16 L. Ed. 55.

59. Must be specific and positive, not general.—Doss v. Tyack, 14 How. 287, 14 L. Ed. 428. Where it is true that the answers of the respondents denied fraud in the abstract, but they admitted all the facts and circumstances necessary to constitute it in the concrete, the general denial of the answer, only showed that the definition of fraud was much narrower, in the estimation of the respondents, than in that of courts of law and equity. In this case, a verdict was wholly unnecessary, to inform the conscience of the chancellor; and, the verdict being perfectly correct, the court very properly refused to set it aside, on any representation from jurors thus obtained.

A chancellor does not need a verdict to inform his conscience, when the answer denies fraud in the abstract, whilst it admits all the facts and circumstances necessary to constitute it, in the concrete. Doss v. Tyack, 14 How. 297, 14 L. Ed. 428.

Though the failure of the answer to meet this charge in the bill, that the purpose of the sale was to conceal the property from creditors, does not operate as a technical confession of its truth, it does lay a foundation for the belief that if the defendant could have truly denied it, she would not have foregone the decided advantage of such denial in an answer which puts the complainant on proof of the contested fact by more than one witness. McRea v. Branch Bank, 19 How. 376, 378, 15 L. Ed. 688.

60. Discrepancies may be fatal.—Clements v. Moore, 6 Wall. 299, 18 L. Ed. 786. In this case, three answers in chancery denying allegations made in a bill, of fraud on creditors by an admitted conveyance of real property on the part of an insolvent debtor to his wife through a third person, held not to disprove the allega-be determined by all the circumstances of the case,[61] or at least a mixed question of law and fact.[62] And so with the question of the existence of a fraudulent intent,[63] or knowledge or notice of fraud.[64]

tions; the answers being discrepant in striking particulars from each other, and, as respected the consideration, with the deeds themselves; no proof being given of the mode of payment by the third person (who, it was set up, had purchased the property from the husband for himself, and afterwards sold it to the wife on payment from her separate property) nor any proof beyond the answers of her husband and herself and a previous statement of the husband, then arranging the transaction, that the wife ever had any separate property.

61. In general.—Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 28, 24 L. Ed. 51; Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 15 L. Ed. 950.

"Fraud is always a question of fact to be determined by the court or jury upon a careful scrutiny of the evidence before it." Smith v. Vodges, 92 U. S. 183, 184, 23 L. Ed. 481.

62. Mixed law and fact.—Whether a sale of goods was fraudulent as against the plaintiffs seeking to set it aside, is not a pure question of law, but a question either of fact or of mixed law and fact. Jewell v. Knight, 123 U. S. 426, 434, 31 L. Ed. 190.

A question, whether or not certain conveyances were fraudulent, was properly submitted to the jury. Fraud is often a mixed question of law and fact, and the jury can be instructed upon matters of law. McLaughlin v. Bank, 7 How. 220, 228, 12 L. Ed. 675. And see the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394.

63. Fraudulent intent.—Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 612, 614, 29 L. Ed. 742.

Where an insolvent debtor assigns to a creditor with full knowledge of the insolvency, certain notes and accounts due said debtor, in full payment and satisfaction of such creditor's debt, which transfer was afterwards attacked as collusive and fraudulent as to other creditors by garnishee proceedings against such transferee, it was for the jury to say, on the issue so made, upon the evidence and under proper instructions, whether such fraudulent intent to hinder, delay and defeat other creditors existed. Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 372, 33 L. Ed. 373.

So, also, if the transferee was liable at all, the question as to the value of the uncollected bills so transferred, and whether such value, with what had been actually received thereon, was sufficient to pay the attacking creditors debts, was one for the jury likewise. Klein v. Hoffheimer, 132 U. S. 367, 379, 33 L. Ed. 373.

64. Knowledge or notice of fraud.—Where chattel mortgages are attacked by creditors on the ground that the mortgagees were affected with notice that the property had been obtained by fraudulent representation from these creditors by the mortgagor, it was held that the facts that V., the agent of the mortgagees, was a lawyer of long standing and considerable practice, and, as already stated, was the son-in-law of one of the mortgagors; that one of the deeds was to his wife, and was withheld from record for several months, and until a day or two after the chattel mortgage was made; that he could scarcely have failed to know that other deeds had been made to the wives of the mortgagors, which were also withheld from record; that these men were merchants who were constantly buying and replenishing their stock and stood in need of credit; and that he was himself one of the creditors secured by the mortgage—for a debt, too, which had been already partially paid—were sufficent evidence to open to the the jury the question of his connection with the scheme to execute this mortgage for the purpose of defrauding their unsecured creditors. The very fact that one of these deeds was withheld from record for three years and a half, another for eight months and another for about six months was, unexplained, sufficient to indicate that they were withheld for no good purpose. Browning v. De Ford, 178 U. S. 196, 199, 44 L. Ed. 1033.

While evidence was lacking of a direct participation by V. in these plans to defraud the creditors, his intimate connection with the family and the fact that the mortgage was given, partially at least, to secure him for his liability as surety for the firm, was not too remote to justify the court in laying the whole matter of his connection with the fraudulent scheme before the jury, and as he was acting as agent and attorney for the other secured creditors, they were equally chargeable with himself. Browning v. De Ford, 178 U. S. 196, 200, 44 L. Ed. 1033. See the title CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 736, et seq.

It was held in Sonnentheil v. Moerlein Brewing Co., 172 U. S. 401, 413, 43 L. Ed. 492, that while there was nothing in the evidence which proved either direct knowledge of the fraud in the preferred creditors, or positive knowledge of facts which put them upon inquiry, there was a strong probability of such knowledge, and under the peculiar cicumstances of the case it was not error to submit this question to the jury and the charge of the court was correct in this particular.

As to effect of retention of possession or benefit by grantor.—See ante, "Retention of Possession or Reservation of Benefits by Grantor," III, C, 9.

d. Grantor's Declarations.—As to grantor's declarations, expressions of hope of recovery indulged in by a person reduced to poverty by large losses must be taken with many grains of allowance, and those testified to here as indicative of the retention of an actual interest in the property fall short of overcoming the explicit evidence to the contrary.[65]

G. Instructions.—Intent, Validity and Question of Fact.—Where a sheriff was sued for taking goods under an attachment, which goods had been previously assigned under circumstances which were alleged to be fraudulent, it was proper for the court to charge the jury, "that if they believed, from the evidence, that the sale was made for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding creditors, it was invalid as against the defendant; and that whether the sale was or was not fraudulent was a question of fact, to be determined by the jury under all the circumstances of the case; that if the sale were secret, and no means taken to apprise the public of it, these were facts which threw suspicion upon the transaction, but did not make the sale fraudulent in law as against the defendant.[66]

H. Decree, and Measure of Relief Afforded—1. DECREE ENTERED ON VERDICT AS CONCLUSION OF LAW THEREON.—If a case presented by a creditor's bill is tried like a common-law case, that is to say, by a jury, and a decree is entered on the verdict as a mere conclusion of law upon the facts found, and not as the result of the chancellor's own judgment, though of his judgment aided by the finding, it is error.[67]

2. PERSONAL DECREE.—For Rents and Profits against Wife.—Although a conveyance by a debtor (a bankrupt) to his wife is set aside as fraudulent, a personal decree against her for the rents, issues and profits, and the use and occupation of the premises, is erroneous.[68]

For Damages.—There cannot be a decree for damages in equity.[69]

65. Grantor's declarations.—Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 598, 36 L. Ed. 552.

66. Intent, validity and question of fact.—Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 15 L. Ed. 950.

Intent to delay, preference, secret benefit to grantor and fictitious debt.—An instruction that: "An intent upon the part of the debtor to delay his creditors in the collection of their debts was as much within the statute as if the intent had been to cheat or defraud; that while a debtor, in failing circumstances, was at liberty, acting in good faith and openly, to prefer some creditors over others, he could not, as against those not paid, reserve to himself a secret trust in any transfer; that a creditor, thus favored by the debtor, will not be permitted to enjoy the preference given him if he seeks, by the transaction, to cover or protect the remainder of the debtor's property so that it could not be applied to the payment of his honest debts; and that if a creditor seeks to appropriate the debtor's property for a debt, any material part of which was knowingly fictitious, the whole transaction would be held as tainted with fraud and void as to other creditors," was held in Shauer v. Alterton, 151 U. S. 607, 619, 38 L. Ed. 286, to be as favorable to the grantee as he could ask.

As it nowhere appears that the court instructed the jury that they might not, in reaching a determination upon the bona fides of the sale, and the question whether a secret benefit was reserved in his favor, consider such facts as the subsequent employment of vendor and the sale thereafter to his wife, but as a matter of fact, the portions of the general charge of the court set forth in the record make it clear that the question of reservation of a secret benefit to vendor in the sale was paticularly called to the attention of the jury, as necessary to be considered by them in arriving at a conclusion as to the validity of the transfer, it cannot be said that the charges in question had a tendency to cause the jury to regard the fact of such employment and the sale to the wife as not important to be weighed by them in passing upon the bona fides of the sale. Bamberger v. Schoolfield, 160 U. S. 149, 165, 40 L. Ed. 374.

Relationship.—See ante, "Brothers," III, C, 4, a.

67. Decree entered on verdict as conclusion of law thereon.—Dunphy v. Kleinsmith, 11 Wall 610, 20 L. Ed. 223. See, also, ante, "As to Parties," V, B.

68. For rents and profits against wife.—Clark v. Beecher, 154 U. S. 631, 24 L. Ed. 705, citing Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 24 L. Ed. 391; Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 24 L. Ed. 954. See ante "Personal Liability of Grantee," V, B, 3.

69. For damages.—"In an equitable proceeding of this kind, a decree in the nature of a judgment for damages cannot be rendered against the defendant who is alleged to have taken a fraudulent assignment of the property. The decree against him must be a decree for an account. He

3. Sale and Distribution.- Power to Decree Sale and Force of Decree.—When chancery has full jurisdiction as to both persons and property, and decrees that a master of the court sell and convey real estate, the subject of a bill before it, a sale and conveyance in conformity to such decree, is as effectual to convey the title as the deed of a sheriff, made pursuant to execution on a judgment at law. The defendant whose property is sold need not join in the deed.[70]

Claim of Homestead.—A party entitled to a homestead reservation under the laws of Illinois—whose property, in which it is, a court of chancery has ordered in general terms to be sold, to satisfy a creditor whom he had attempted to defraud by a secret conveyance of it—must set up his right, if at all, before the property is thus sold. He cannot set it up collaterally after the sale, and so defeat an ejectment brought by a purchaser to put him out of possession.[71]

Distribution.—It is well settled, where a deed is set aside as void as to existing creditors, that all the creditors, prior and subsequent, share in the fund pro rata. In this case it was set aside as voluntary.[72] And it has been held that complaining creditors who first file a bill to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent have no preference thereby over the other creditors.[73]

Effect of Seeking a Preference.—And where a creditor seeks to secure an illegal preference for a bona fide debt, but unsuccessfully, it will not be forfeited or postponed to the last, but will share pro rata, where there is no actual fraud shown, in the distribution of the proceeds of such property among the creditors.[74] But it is strongly intimated by the court here, in reversing the de-must be called to account for just what property has come into his hands, and no more; and he will be entitled, under ordinary circumstances, to a rebate for the amount that was justly and honestly his due. The mode of taking such an account is well known in equity proceedings. The defendant is to exhibit an account either in his answer or in the master's office, and if it is not satisfactory to the complainant, it may be surcharged or falsified; and, as the account is finally found to stand, so will the responsibility of the defendant be. But if the complainant wishes to make him answerable in damages, either for the waste of the property or for its disposal by the original proprietor by aid of the wrongful complicity of the defendant, he must sue for damages in an action at law." Dunphy v. Kleinsmith, 11 Wall. 610, 615, 20 L. Ed. 223.

Conclusiveness of judgment.—As to conclusiveness of judgment, see the title RES ADJUDICATA.

70. Power to decree sale and force of decree.—Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 237, 17 L. Ed. 827.

71. Claim of homestead.—Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 237, 17 L. Ed. 827. See the title HOMESTEAD EXEMPTIONS.

72. Pro rata distribution.—Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 36, 22 L. Ed. 313.

73. Same.—Where creditors, who were so upon simple contract debts, filed a bill in chancery to set aside a deed made by the debtor as being fraudulent against creditors, and other creditors came in as parties complainants, the court below was right in ordering a pro rata distribution amongst all the creditors, none of them having a judgment or other lien at law. Day v. Washburn, 24 How. 352, 16 L. Ed. 712.

"The court of chancery does not give any specific lien to a creditor at large, against his debtor, further than he has acquired at law; for, as he did not trust the debtor on the faith of such lien, it would be unjust to give him a preference over other creditors, and thus defeat a pro rata distribution, which equity favors, unless prevented by the rules of law. It is only when he has obtained a judgment and execution in seeking to subject the property of his debtor in the hands of third persons, or to reach property not accessible to an execution, that a legal preference is acquired, which a court of chancery will enforce." Day v. Washburn, 24 How. 352, 355, 16 L. Ed. 712.

74. Preference unsuccessfully sought.—United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 45 L. Ed. 938, where the court said: "There is a wide difference between the case of a fraud ab initio, such, for instance, as a scheme to enforce a false or pretended indebtedness, so as to remove the assets of an alleged debtor from the reach of his bona fide creditors, and the case of an attempt by bona fide creditors to secure preferences for themselves but using methods forbidden by statute or by the policy of law. In the former case, undoubtedly, a court of equity will refuse to permit the guilty parties to derive any profit or advantage from the fraudulent arrangement. In the latter case a court of equity will not declare a forfeiture of cision of the circuit court of appeals, which had denied the illegally preferred creditors the right to participate until the other creditors had been paid in full, that if there had been fraud in fact shown, instead of mere constructive fraud, the decision would have been different, and the right to so participate pro rata would have been denied.[75]

Equitable Lien.—But an equitable lien upon a specific fund by assignment or pledge will be enforced.[76]

I. Laches and Limitations.—See the titles LACHES; LIMITATIONS OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

just debts, or, by postponing them till all other creditors are satisfied, practically confiscate them, but will, while defeating the attempt to obtain a forbidden preference, leave such creditors to use and enjoy the same rights and remedies possessed by other creditors."

The case of White v. Cotzhausen, 129 U. S. 329, 32 L. Ed. 677, arose under the voluntary assignment act of the state of Illinois, and it was held that creditors who had attempted to secure an illegal preference of their debts by means of a conveyance to them of the property of their debtor when insolvent, to the exclusion of other creditors, were not thereby debarred, under the operation of the statute, from participating in a distribution, under that act, of all the debtor's property, including that illegally conveyed to them. The circuit court held that such illegally preferred creditors should be postponed in the distribution. United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 452, 45 L. Ed. 938. See, also, Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 32 L. Ed. 429, to the same effect; Demsey v. Kleinsmith, 11 Wall. 610, 615, 20 L. Ed. 223, set out ante, under "Personal Decree," VI, H, 2.

75. When actual fraud is shown.—United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 448, et seq. 45 L. Ed. 938.

The court said that the allegations of the bill, if satisfactorily sustained by evidence, would have justified the conclusion that the transactions between debtor and the preferred defendants constituted, not an agreement for the purpose of securing bona fide creditors, but a conspiracy to hinder, delay and defraud the unsecured creditors of the debtor. But, as already stated, and as found by the master and the circuit court, these incriminating allegations were not sustained, and the conclusion of the master, of the circuit court and of the dissenting justice of the circuit court of appeals, was that no fraud upon the general creditors was intended or actually carried into effect. United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 450, 45 L. Ed. 938.

Quoting Mr. Justice Brown, in his dissenting opinion in the circuit court of appeals, the court said: "Upon the whole it does not seem to me that such a case of fraud is made out as authorizes the court to postpone the claims of the preferred creditors to those of the general creditors, and thereby practically to confiscate them; and there is no sound reason for departing from the general rule laid down in the supreme court in White v. Cotzhausen, 129 U. S. 329, 32 L. Ed. 677, and in Streeter v. Jefferson County Bank, 147 U. S. 36, 37 L. Ed. 68, wherein the preferred creditors were permitted, after their security had been set aside, to stand upon an equality with the general creditors." United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 451, 45 L. Ed. 938.

In Streeter v. Jefferson County Bank, 147 U. S. 36, 37 L. Ed. 68, it was held that where a creditor of a bankrupt caused execution to be levied, before the bankruptcy, on goods of the bankrupt to satisfy the debt, and the levy was afterwards set aside as an illegal preference within the purview of the bankrupt act, in consequence of knowledge of the debtor's condition by the plaintiff's attorney, that the creditor was not thereby precluded from proving his debt against the bankrupt. Here there was an express finding that there was no actual fraud. United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 452, 45 L. Ed. 938.

It is not actual fraud to seek to obtain a preference, which is adjudged to be an illegal one. United States Rubber Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 181 U. S. 434, 452, 45 L. Ed. 938; White v. Cotzhausen, 129 U. S. 329, 32 L. Ed. 677; Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 32 L. Ed. 429; Streeter v. Jefferson County Bank, 147 U. S. 36, 46, 37 L. Ed. 68. Nor is it actual fraud to pursue a legal remedy which may be efficacious, especially where no action of the debtor gives the creditor the obnoxious preference. Streeter v. Jefferson County Bank, 147 U. S. 36, 47, 37 L. Ed. 68.

76. Equitable lien by assignment or pledge.—Day v. Washburn, 24 How. 352, 356, 16 L. Ed. 712. "It is true, where a specific fund has been assigned or pledged for the benefit of creditors, and it is necessary to go into a court of chancery to make a distribution among them, the equitable lien of each creditor upon the fund lays a sufficient foundation for the interposition of the court. It will enforce this equitable lien thus arising out of the FRAUDULENTLY.—See KNOWINGLY.

FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATIONS.—See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT.

FREEDMEN.—See note 1.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 466.

FREE FROM PARTICULAR AVERAGE.—See the title MARINE INSURANCE.

FREEHOLD ESTATES.—See the title ESTATES, vol. 5, p. 905.

FREE INHABITANT.—See note 2.

FREELY.—See note 3.

FREEMEN.—See note 4.

FREE NAVIGATION.—See the title NAVIGABLE WATERS, and references there given. See note 5.

FREE ON BOARD.—See note 6.

FREE PASS.—See the title CARRIERS, vol. 3, p. 567.

FREIGHT.—See the titles CARRIERS, vol. 3, p. 614; SHIPS AND SHIPPING. And see TOLL. See note 7.

assignment or pledge for the benefit of the creditors, in the exercise of its own appropriate jurisdiction. But in all these cases, chancery, upon its own principles, distributes the fund pro rata among all the creditors, unless preference is given in the pledge or assignment of the fund."

"The objection that the demands of the appellants had not been reduced to judgment and execution before filing the bill, would have been fatal to the relief sought, if taken in time by the defendants. It was waived, however, both as respected the appellants and the other cocomplainants; and, as the court was left unembarrassed by the objection, it was right in proceeding to dispose of the property and effects of the debtor, and to make the proper application of them; and, as we have seen neither of the creditors had acquired a preference at law, the application in chancery, upon its own principles, was a ratable distribution among all the creditors as decreed by the court below." Day v. Washburn, 24 How. 352, 356, 16 L. Ed. 712.

Liability for consideration paid.—See ante, "Personal Liability of Grantee," V, B, 3.

1. Freedmen.—According to the civil law, freedmen are those who have been manumitted from just servitude. Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 479, 15 L. Ed. 691.

2. Free inhabitant.—See Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 418, 15 L. Ed. 691.

3. Freely.—"The fair deduction is, that the words, 'freely to be possessed,' etc., are too uncertain, of themselves, to raise a fee, but they may be aided by other circumstances. * * * Upon the whole, upon the most careful examination, we cannot find a sufficient warrant in the words of this will to pass a fee to the wife." Wright v. Page, 10 Wheat. 204, 241, 6 L. Ed. 303. See the title WILLS.

Mr. Justice Le Blanc added, that the words used were not inconsistent with a life estate only; and he distinguished between them and the words, "freely to be disposed of," admitting that the latter would pass a fee. Wright v. Page, 10 Wheat. 204, 243, 6 L. Ed. 303.

Acknowledgment.—See the title ACKNOWLEDGMENT, vol. 1, pp. 83, 89.

4. Freemen.—"It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their Magna Charta and is incorporated into our institutions." Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 483b, 9 L. Ed. 773. See, also, Respublica v. Betsey, 1 Dall. 469, 470, 1 L. Ed. 227.

5. Free navigation.—"By free navigation is not meant a navigation entirely clear of obstructions. In the sense in which these terms are used by European jurists, the navigation of a river is free, when it is not entirely interrupted, and not embarrassed by oppressive duties exacted by riparian states. In this country, the navigation of a river is deemed to be free, when it is kept open for vessels cleared of such physical obstructions as would retard their passage beyond what is required for the necessary transit over the stream, and is exempt from exactions and delays other than for the enforcement of quarantine and health laws; and such occasional tolls as may be levied to meet the expenses of improving its navigation." Bridge Co. v. United States, 105 U. S. 470, 496, 26 L. Ed. 1143.

6. Free on board.—The term "free on board the steamer at Neenah" in a contract was held to mean that the vendor should deliver the flour on board the steamer without charge to the vendee. Nash v. Towne, 5 Wall. 689, 699, 18 L. Ed. 527.

7. Freight.—"By the law maritime the word freight is used to denote not the FRENCH SPOLIATION CLAIM.—See the title UNITED STATES.

FRIENDLY SUITS.—As to what constitutes an amicable action, see AMICABLE ACTION, vol. 1, p. 311. As to bringing fictitious suits, see the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, pp. 293, 300; CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 537.

FRIEND OF THE COURT.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 273.

FRIVOLOUS APPEAL.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 289.

thing carried, but the compensation for the carriage of it." The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122, 129, 38 L. Ed. 381.

"There is no reason, however, for giving to the word freight a narrow or technical definition. The fares of the passengers are as much within the reason of the rule as the freight upon the cargo." The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122, 131, 38 L. Ed. 381.

"In this country, as early as 1801, it was said by Judge Peters in the case of the Brig Cynthia, 1 Pet. Adm. 203, 206: 'I think the force and true meaning of freight has been misconceived. It is a technical expression. It does not always imply that it is the naulum, merces, or fare, for the transportation of goods. It is applied to all rewards, hire, or compensation, paid for the use of ships; either for an entire voyage, one divided into sections, or engaged by the month, or any period. It is also called freight (and it is to be determined on the like legal principles) in the case of passengers, transported in vessels, for compensation. In Saxon, from which much of the English language is derived, it is called fracht, whether it be a compensation for transportation in ships by sea, or carriage by land, either of goods or persons, in gross, or detail.'" The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122, 129, 38 L. Ed. 381.

"While many of the lexicographers, such as Webster, Worcester, and the Imperial Dictionary, still define freight as the sum paid by a party hiring a ship or part of a ship, or for the carriage of goods, in the Century Dictionary it is said to be, in a more general sense, the price paid for the use of a ship, including the transportation of passengers. Similar definitions are given in the law dictionaries of Burrill, Bouvier, and Anderson." The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122, 130, 38 L. Ed. 381.

In The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122, 130, 38 L. Ed. 381, the court says: "Thus in Flint v. Flemyng, 1 B. & Ad. 45, which was an action upon an insurance policy upon freight, it was held that plaintiff could recover freight upon his own goods, Lord Tenterden holding that the word 'freight,' as used in policies of insurance, imported the benefit derived from the employment of a ship. So, in Brown v. Harris, 2 Gray 359, the supreme court of Massachusetts, holding that passage money, paid in advance, might be recovered back, upon the breaking up of the voyage, observed that the rule was well settled as to freight for the carriage of goods; that if freight be paid in advance, and the goods not carried for any event, not imputable to the shipper, it is to be repaid, unless there be a special agreement to the contrary. The court further observed: 'Passage money and freight are governed by the same rules. Indeed, freight, in its more extensive sense, is applied to all compensation for the use of ships, including transportation of passengers.'"

Freight advanced.—In Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908, an action on a policy of insurance declared to be "on freight advanced," the court says: "The plaintiff advanced a sum of money to the owners of the ship, in consideration of which they gave him a right to fill up three-eights of the tonnage of the ship, for that voyage, with goods, either his own or the property of others. It is called in the policy "freight advanced," an expression well calculated to show its meaning."

Freight pending—Freight for the voyage.—Section 4283 of the United States Revised Statutes provides that the liability of the owner of any vessel, for loss of property shipped on a vessel, shall not exceed the amount or value of the interest of such owner in such vessel, and her freight then pending. And § 4284 provides that loss is suffered by the several owners on the same voyage, and the whole value of the vessel and her freight for the voyage is not sufficient to make compensation to each of them, they shall receive compensation from the owner of the vessel in proportion to their respective losses. In the case of The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122, 131, 38 L. Ed. 381, the court, in construing the meaning of the above sections, said: "The words 'freight pending,' in § 4283, or 'freight for the voyage,' § 4284; were copied from the English statute, George II, which, in turn, had taken them from the Marine Ordinance of 1681, in prior continental acts; but in both cases they were evidently intended to represent the earnings of the voyage, whether from the carriage of passengers or merchandise. If these words were used instead of the words 'freight for the voyage' it would probably more accurately express the intent of the legislature." See the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

FROG.—See note 1.
FROM.—See note 2.

1. Frog.—A frog, in railroad parlance, is a section of a rail, or of several rails combined, at a point where two railways cross, or at the point of a switch from a line to a siding or to another line, and its function is to enable a car or train to be turned from one track to another. In a blocked frog the point of space between the rails, at the point where the car is switched from one track to another, is filled with wood or other material, so that the foot will not be held. There is a form of cast iron frog, in which the space between the rails at the apex of the frog is filled with cast iron. Southern Pacific Co. v. Seley, 152 U. S. 145, 150, 38 L. Ed. 391. See, generally, the titles NEGLIGENCE; RAILROADS.

2. Exclusive or inclusive.—See, generally, the title TIME.

In Taylor v. Brown, 147 U. S. 640, 643, 37 L. Ed. 313, the court said: "In Matthews v. Zane, 7 Wheat. 164, 211, 5 L. Ed. 425, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall remarked that it was the known rule 'that a statute for the commencement of which no time is fixed, commences from its date;' and in Arnold v. United States, 9 Cranch 104, 120, 3 L. Ed. 671, in which it was held that a statute providing that it should take effect 'from and after the passing of this act' took effect immediately, Mr. Justice Story said that 'it is a general rule that when the computation is to be made from an act done, the day on which the act is done is to be included.' But this cannot be said to be a universal rule either in England or this country. * * * While it is desirable that there should be a fixed and certain rule upon this subject, it must be conceded that the rule which excludes the terminus a quo is not absolute, but that it may be included when necessary to give effect to the obvious intention. This was the view entertained by Lord Mansfield who ruled in Pugh v. Duke of Leeds, 2 Cowp. 714, that 'the sense of the word from must always depend upon the context and subject matter, whether it shall be construed inclusive or exclusive of the terminus a quo.' * * * It may also be observed that, as to the general doctrine that the law does not allow of fractions of a day, it is settled that when substantial justice requires it courts may ascertain the precise time when a statute is approved or an act done." See, also, Griffith v. Bogart, 18 How. 158, 163, 15 L. Ed. 307. And see the title STATUTES.

In Lapeyre v. United States, 17 Wall. 191, 198, 21 L. Ed. 606, the court says: "Where the language employed is 'from and after the passing of this act,' the same result follows. The act becomes effectual upon the day of its date. In such cases it is operative from the first moment of that day. Fractions of the day are not recognized. An inquiry involving that subject is inadmissible."

In Best v. Polk, 18 Wall. 112, 119, 21 L. Ed. 805, it was held that an officer commissioned to hold office during the term of four years from the 2d of March, 1845, is in office on the 2d of March, 1849. That the word from always excludes the day of date.

"Authority to construct a railroad or turnpike from A. to B., or beginning at A. and running to B., is held to confer authority to commence the road at some point within A., and to end it at some point within B. The words from, 'to,' and 'at,' are taken inclusively, according to the subject matter." Union Pacific R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343, 348, 23 L. Ed. 428.

Remainder.—Adverbs of time—as where, there, after, from, etc.—in a devise of a remainder, are construed to relate merely to the time of the enjoyment of the state, and not the time of the vesting in interest. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 475, 18 L. Ed. 869. See, generally, the title REMAINDERS, REVERSIONS AND EXECUTORY INTERESTS.

Sale.—An agreement to take from two to six hundred tons of certain articles, is an agreement to accept any amount between those limits. Wheeler v. New Brunswick, etc., R. Co., 115 U. S. 29, 37, 29 L. Ed. 341.

From and after.—A statute as to certain transactions "from and after" a subsequent named date does not affect a transaction after the passage of the act, but prior to such subsequent date. Wood v. Owings, 1 Cranch 239, 251, 2 L. Ed. 94.

From any port.—Section 1 of the Harter Act renders void, contracts made for release of ship owners of vessels, "transporting merchandise or property from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports," from liability for loss or damage to merchandise occasioned by negligence; § 3 provides that if the owner of "any vessel transporting merchandise or property to or from any port in the United States" shall exercise due diligence as to the equipment and safety of the vessel, he shall not be responsible for loss resulting from errors or faults in the navigation or management of the vessel. In the case of Knott v. Botany Mills, 179 U. S. 69, 72, 75, 45 L. Ed. 90, the court, in referring to the 3rd section, said: "It is true that the words of that section are not exactly the same in this respect, being 'any vessel transporting merchandise or property to or from any port in the United States,' whereas the corresponding words in the first section are 'any vessel transporting merchandise or prop-

FRUIT.—The dictionaries define the word "fruit" as the seed of plants, or that part of plants which contains the seed, and especially the juicy, pulpy products of certain plants, covering and containing the seed.[1]

FUERO.—A fuero (forum), under the Spanish law, is a use and custom combined, and has the force of law.[2]

FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE.—See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—See the title SLAVERY AND INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE.

FULL CARGO.—See note 3.

FULL COMPENSATION.—See note 4.

FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1 p. 650; FOREIGN JUDGMENTS, RECORDS AND JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

erty from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports.' But the two phrases, as applied to the subject matter, are precisely equivalent, and are both equally applicable to a foreign voyage that ends, and to one that begins, in this country. In their usual and natural meaning, the words 'from any port in the United States' include all voyages, whether domestic or foreign, which begin in this country; the words 'to any port in the United States' includes all voyages, whether domestic or foreign, which end in this country; and the words 'between ports of the United States and foreign ports' include all foreign voyages which either begin or end here. The words of the third section, 'to or from any port in the United States' express in the simplest and most direct form the intention to include voyages hither as well as voyages hence. And we find insuperable difficulty in the way of giving a different meaning to the words of the first section, 'from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports.' The words 'from ports of the United States' would of themselves be sufficient to cover all voyages which begin here, whether they end in a domestic or in a foreign port." See the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

From such date.—See the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 494. And see United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 24 L. Ed. 588.

From the parent.—See the title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 342.

From time to time.—See Railroad Co. v. Trimble, 10 Wall. 367, 378, 19 L. Ed. 948.

1. Fruit.—Nix v. Hedden, 149 U. S. 304, 306, 37 L. Ed. 745.

The definitions given by dictionaries have no tendency to show that tomatoes are fruit, as distinguished from "vegetables," in common speech, or within the meaning of the Tariff Act of 1883, which provides for certain duties on vegetables. Nix v. Hedden, 149 U. S. 304, 306, 37 L. Ed. 745.

2. Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 446, 9 L. Ed. 1137.

3. Full cargo.—A charter party stipulated that a vessel should receive a full cargo of general merchandise, and not exceeding a certain number of passengers and there was covenant for a specific amount to be received. It was held what was a full cargo under all the circumstances, and how deeply she could be loaded with safety to the passengers, was a question which could be solved only by experienced shipmasters. That what was a full cargo for the ship to carry with safety was not a fact which could be settled by any rule of law or mathematical computation, and the court must necessarily rely upon the opinions of those who have experience, skill, and judgment, in such matters. Ogden v. Parsons, 23 How. 167, 170, 16 L. Ed. 410. See, generally, the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

4. Full compensation.—A sum appropriated by congress, "in full compensation" for services of a federal officer, bars recovery in the court of claims of an additional amount; though by a prior statute his salary be fixed at a larger amount than the sum so appropriated. In construing the act, the court said: "We cannot adopt the view of appellee unless we eliminate from the statute the words 'in full compensation,' which congress, abandoning the long-used form of the appropriation acts has, ex industria, inserted. Our duty is to give them effect. When congress has said that the sum appropriated shall be in full compensation of the services of the appellee, we cannot say that it shall not be in full compensation, and allow him a greater sum." United States v. Fisher, 109 U. S. 143, 146, 27 L. Ed. 885. See, also, United States v. Mitchell, 109 U. S. 146, 27 L. Ed. 887.

But a statute fixing the annual salary of a public officer at a named sum, without limitation as to time, should not be deemed abrogated or suspended by subsequent enactments which merely appropriated a less amount for the services of that officer for particular fiscal years, and which contained no words that expressly or by clear implication modified or repealed the previous law. United States v. Langston, 118 U. S. 389, 394, 30 L. Ed. 164. See, generally, the title PUBLIC OFFICERS.

FULLY.—See As, vol. 2, p. 545. See, also, Seybert v. Pittsburg, 1 Wall. 272, 273, 17 L. Ed. 553.

FULLY ADMINISTERED.—See the title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, ante, p. 119.

FUNDING ACTS.—See the titles IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS; MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

FUNDS AND DEPOSITS IN COURT.—See the title PAYMENT INTO COURT.

FUNDS IN HANDS.—See BALANCE, vol. 2, p. 791.

FUR.—See note 1.

FURLOUGH.—See the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 494.

FURTHER PROOF.—See the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 193.

FURTHER TAX.—See ANY, vol. 1, p. 330.

FUTURE ADVANCES.—See the titles CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, pp. 706, 755; MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

FUTURE OR EXPECTANT INTERESTS.—See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 932.

FUTURES.—See the title GAMBLING CONTRACTS, and references given.

GAINS.—See note 2.

GAMBLING CONTRACTS.

BY CLAUDE R. YARDLEY.

I. Definitions, 538.

II. Validity, 538.

A. In General, 538.
B. Unaffected by Form, 538.
C. Contracts for Future Delivery, 538.
D. Validity of Obligation Given for Losses, 540.

III. Rights of Parties, 540.

A. Principals, 540.
B. Agents, 541.

IV. Recovery of Losses, 542.

V. Evidence, 542.

A. Presumption and Burden of Proof, 542.
B. Competency, 542.
C. Weight and Sufficiency, 542.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ILLEGAL CONTRACTS; LOTTERIES; RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

As to the constitutionality of statutes forbidding dealing in futures, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 378. As to the recovery by the original payee on a note the consideration of which was given in furtherance of a gambling transaction, see the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 272. As to the construction of state statutes relating to gambling contracts by federal courts,

1. Fur.—As to whether goat skins fall within the description of "dressed furs on the skin" in the Tariff Act of March 3, 1883, see Seeberger v. Schlesinger, 152 U. S. 581, 584, 38 L. Ed. 560. See, also, the title REVENUE LAWS.

2. Gains.—The advance in the value of personal property during a series of years does not constitute the gains, profits, or income of any one particular year of the series, within the meaning of the revenue laws, although the entire amount of the advance be at one time turned into money by a sale of the property. Gray v. Darlington, 15 Wall. 63, 21 L. Ed. 45. And see the title REVENUE LAWS. And see, generally, PROFITS.

see the titles COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1072; STATUTES. As to all questions relating to gambling as a crime, see the title GAMING.

I. Definitions.

Gambling Contract.—A gambling contract or wager is a contract by which two parties or more agree that a certain sum of money or other thing shall be paid or delivered to one of them on the happening or not happening of an uncertain event.[1]

Bucket Shop.—A "bucket shop," has been defined as "an establishment, nominally for the transaction of a stock exchange business, or business of a similar character, but really for the registration of bets, or wagers, usually for small amounts, on the rise or fall of the prices of stocks, grain, oil, etc., there being no transfer or delivery of the stock or commodities nominally dealt in."[2]

Option Contracts.—Option contracts have been defined as contracts in which there was no obligation upon the part of the persons concerned, either to buy or sell.[3]

II. Validity.

A. In General.—At common law all gambling contracts were void.[4] And generally, in this country, all wagering contracts are held to be illegal and void as against public policy.[5]

B. Unaffected by Form.—The form in which a contract is made will not give validity to it, if it is a gambling contract.[6]

C. Contracts for Future Delivery.—It is well settled that contracts for the future delivery of merchandise or tangible property are not void, whether such property is in existence in the hands of the seller, or to be subsequently acquired.[7] And the fact that it is the practice of persons making sales for future

1. Gambling contract.—Bouv. Law Dict.

2. Bucket shop.—Gatewood v. North Carolina, 203 U. S. 531, 51 L. Ed. 305. See the title GAMING.

3. Options.—Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 495, 45 L. Ed. 1183.

4. Validity at common law.—Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 427, 46 L. Ed. 623.

5. Against public policy.—Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 510, 28 L. Ed. 225.

"To take cases where opinion has moved in the opposite direction, wagers may be declared illegal without the aid of statute, or lotteries forbidden by express enactment, although at an earlier day they were thought pardonable at least." Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 609, 47 L. Ed. 323.

6. Unaffected by form.—Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 345, 33 L. Ed. 172; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 510, 28 L. Ed. 225.

"It makes no difference that a debt or wager is made to assume the form of a contract. Gambling is none the less such because it is carried on in the form or guise of legitimate trade." Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 345, 33 L. Ed. 172. See, also, Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 510, 28 L. Ed. 225.

7. May be valid.—Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 493, 37 L. Ed. 817.

Property which seller anticipates purchasing.—"A trader has a right to sell, to deliver at some future time, that which he then has not, but which he expects to go into the market and buy; and the parties may agree mutually that there need not be a present delivery, but that such delivery may take place at some other time. Such future delivery contracts, however, must be in good faith; there must be an intention to make an actual sale and delivery of the article dealt in." Hansen v. Boyd, 161 U. S. 397, 406, 40 L. Ed. 746.

Dependent upon intentions of parties.—"The validity of an option contract depends upon the mutual intention of the parties thereto, and if a sale or purchase of actual wheat for future delivery is intended, it is valid. If the contract is lawful, the putting up of margins to cover losses which might accrue from fluctuations in prices in final settlement of the transactions, according to the rules and usages of the board of trade of the city of Chicago, is entirely proper and legitimate." Hansen v. Boyd, 161 U. S. 397, 406, 40 L. Ed. 746.

Sales in modern markets.—"Of course, in a modern market contracts are not confined to sales for immediate delivery. People will endeavor to forecast the future and to make agreements according to their prophecy. Speculation of this kind by competent men is the self-adjustment of society to the probable. Its value is well known as a means of avoiding or mitigating catastrophes, equalizing prices and providing for periods of want. It is true that the success of the strong induces imitation by the weak, and that incompetent persons bring themselves to ruin by undertaking to speculate in their delivery to settle the same by setting off one sale against another, will not render it invalid.[8] If, however, at the time of entering into a contract for a sale of personal property for future delivery it be contemplated by both parties that at the time fixed for delivery the purchaser shall merely receive or pay the difference between the contract and the market price, the transaction is a wager, and nothing more.[9] And a state may by statute provide that all contracts for the turn. But legislatures and courts generally have recognized that the natural evolutions of a complex society are to be touched only with a very cautious hand, and that such coarse attempts at a remedy for the waste incident to every social function as a simple prohibition and laws to stop its being are harmful and vain. This court has upheld sales of stock for future delivery and the substitution of parties provided for by the rules of the Chicago Stock Exchange. Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 45 L. Ed. 1183." Board of Trade v. Christie Grain, etc., Co., 198 U. S. 236, 247, 49 L. Ed. 1031.

Sales on account.—Where there was direction by one person to another to sell a certain named stock for "the account," it was held that such a direction presumed that the intention was to actually deliver the stock on the next delivery day which was the last day of the month, and such a contract would be legal, although, at the time of the sale the seller did not own any of the stock, especially in view of the fact that the laws of the state in which the transaction was made, as well as the rules of the exchange under which it was conducted, made any contracts entered into, without any intention of future delivery, illegal. Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 43, 45 L. Ed. 1183.

8. Setting off sales against each other.—Board of Trade v. Christie Grain, etc., Co., 198 U. S. 236, 247, 49 L. Ed. 1031; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. Ed. 225.

The practice called ring settlement reached by a comparison of books among the clerks of the members buying and selling in the pit, and picking out a series of transactions which begins and ends with dealings which can be set against each other by eliminating those between—as, if A has sold B five thousand bushels of May wheat, and B has sold the same amount to C, and C to D and D to A, and by substituting D for B by novation, A's sale can be set against his purchase, on simply paying the difference in price, is not illegal and does not render contracts for future delivery void. Board of Trade v. Christie Grain, etc., Co., 198 U. S. 236, 247, 49 L. Ed. 1031.

9. Speculation on rise and fall of market.—Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 492, 37 L. Ed. 817; Pearce v. Rice, 142 U. S. 28, 40, 35 L. Ed. 925; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. Ed. 225.

No intention to deliver goods.—"Where an optional contract for the sale of property is made, and there is no intention on the one side to sell or deliver the property, or on the other to buy or take it, but merely that the difference should be paid according to the fluctuation in market values, the contract would be a wager within the statute." Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 345, 33 L. Ed. 172.

Purchases on margin may be gambling.—There is no doubt that purchases on margin may be and frequently are used as a means of gambling for a great gain or a loss of all one has. Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 610, 47 L. Ed. 323.

Dealing in cotton futures.—Money was advanced by the plaintiff's firm solely for the purpose of carrying "cotton futures," for which he or they contracted. Neither party contemplated the purchase or delivery in fact of cotton, and it was understood that any settlement, in respect to such purchases, should be exclusively upon the basis of one party paying to the other only "the difference between the contract price and the market price of said cotton futures, according to the fluctuations in the market." It was held, that this was a wagering contract, under the guise of a contract of sale. Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 343, 33 L. Ed. 172.

Option contracts.—"Agreements for the future delivery of grain, or any other commodity, are not prohibited by the common law, nor by any statute of the state, nor by any policy adopted for the protection of the public. What the law does prohibit, and what is deemed detrimental to the general welfare, is speculating in differences in market values. The alleged contracts for August and September come within this definition. No grain was ever bought and paid for, nor do we think it was ever expected any would be called for, nor that any would have been delivered had demand been made. What were these but 'optional contracts,' in the most objectionable sense; that is, the seller had the privilege of delivering or not delivering, and the buyer the privilege of calling or not calling for the grain, just as they chose. On the maturity of the contracts, they were to be filled by adjusting the differences in the market values. Being in the nature of gambling transactions, the law will tolerate no such contracts." Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 490, 45 L. Ed. 1183.

Enforcible and unenforcible contracts.—Where there were dealings between two parties in regard to grain, it was held that if it was the intention of both parties that sale of grain or other commodities or shares of the capital stock of any corporation, on margin, or to be delivered at a future date, shall be void.[10]

D. Validity of Obligation Given for Losses.—An obligation will be enforced, though indirectly connected with a gambling transaction, if it is supported by an independent consideration, so that the plaintiff does not require the aid of the illegal transaction to make out his case.[11] And a state may provide that an obligation given for money lost at gambling shall be valid.[12] But it may also provide, that any obligation entered into the consideration for which is money or property to be used in the furtherance of gambling transactions, shall be void and of no effect.[13]

III. Rights of Parties.

A. Principals.—The rights of the parties as to the enforcement of gambling contracts, depends to some extent upon their intention at the time the contract was made. Where both parties understood that the contract was to be a mere wager, as for example, a speculation on the rise and fall of the market, neither party can enforce it.[14] But where the transaction is legitimate on its face, one party cannot avoid it by claiming that it was a gambling contract where the proof the transactions were to be merely options to buy or sell at a future day, they were gambling contracts and without effect, but if such dealings were contracts by which grain was to be absolutely delivered, the only option being the time when delivery should be made, the contract would be one which could be enforced either at law or in equity. White v. Barber, 123 U. S. 392, 420, 31 L. Ed. 243.

10. Statutory prohibition.—Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. Ed. 323; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. Ed. 623; Pearce v. Rice, 142 U. S. 28, 35, 35 L. Ed. 925.

A provision in the constitution of the state of California declared, "that all contracts for the sale of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association, on margin, or to be delivered in the future, shall be void and any money paid on such contracts may be recovered by parties paying it, by suit in any court of competent jurisdiction." It was held, that the prohibition in this clause of sales on margin did not violate the 14th amendment to the constitution of the United States. Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. Ed. 323.

The statute of the state of Illinois made it illegal for one to contract to have or give to himself or another the option to buy or sell at a future time any grain or other commodities or stock of any railroad or other company, and made all such contracts void, and prescribed a penalty against any person engaged in the transaction of this character. It was held, that the state had a right to declare such contracts illegal. Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. Ed. 623.

"The supreme court of Illinois, in that case, observed that at common law all gambling contracts were void, and that an agreement for the sale of property was a mere wager or gambling contract and void, if made with the understanding of the parties that no property was to be delivered or accepted but could be satisfied by an adjustment simply on the basis of the difference between the contract and the market price. It said: 'It must be presumed that the object of the legislature was to declare that unlawful which theretofore had been lawful. Prior to this act it was lawful to have or give an option to sell or buy, at a future time, grain or other commodity. Such contracts were neither void nor voidable at the common law. The statute makes them unlawful or void in Illinois.'" Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 427, 46 L. Ed. 623.

11. When enforcible.—Armstrong v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 433, 469, 33 L. Ed. 747.

Where losses have been made in a gambling transaction a person who lends money to the loser with which to pay the debt can recover the loan, notwithstanding his knowledge of the fact that the money was to be so used. Armstrong v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 433, 468, 33 L. Ed. 747.

12. May be declared valid.—Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 459, 7 L. Ed. 903.

13. May be declared void.—Pearce v. Rice, 142 U. S. 28, 35, 35 L. Ed. 925; Lloyd v. Preston, 146 U. S. 630, 643, 36 L. Ed. 1111; Armstrong v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 433, 470, 33 L. Ed. 747.

14. Guilty knowledge of both parties.—Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 276, 27 L. Ed. 722; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 508, 28 L. Ed. 225; Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 492, 37 L. Ed. 817; Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 675, 29 L. Ed. 764.

In order to invalidate a contract as a wagering one, both parties must intend that instead of the delivery of the article there shall be a mere payment of the difshows that the other party did not so understand it, but believed it to be a valid agreement.[15] Where a party is sued upon a contract which one party alleges to be a gambling transaction, the party alleging the illegality of the contract cannot recover upon a counterclaim from the other party who had no intention to enter into a gambling transaction.[16]

B. Agents.—The rights and liabilities of brokers or other agents in regard to gambling transactions depends, to a certain extent, upon their knowledge as to the illegality of the transaction, and to the extent in which they participate in the illegal part of it.[17] If they have no knowledge that it was the intention of their principals to enter into a wagering or gambling contract, they are entitled to recover, not only their commission, but any sums of money which they have advanced to carry out purposes for their principals.[18] And while brokers or ference between the contract and the market price. Pearce v. Rice, 142 U. S. 28, 35 L. Ed. 925; Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 489, 45 L. Ed. 1183; Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 276, 27 L. Ed. 722; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 508, 28 L. Ed. 225.

15. Intention of one party will not invalidate.—Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 508, 28 L. Ed. 225; Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 675, 29 L. Ed. 764; Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 276, 27 L. Ed. 722; Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 492, 37 L. Ed. 817.

"The evidence of the defendant on this point was that he gave the instructions to buy. He says: 'I could not say that I had any understanding on the subject of the nature and character of the board of trade deals, whether the property was to be actually delivered or whether it was to be settled for.' It is obvious, therefore, that so far as plaintiff, one of the parties to all these contracts, which he now impeaches, is concerned, they were not gambling contracts, and that he had no understanding or agreement, expressed or implied, that they were bets upon the future price of the article." Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 275, 27 L. Ed. 722.

16. Guilty party cannot recover on counterclaim.—Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 678, 29 L. Ed. 764. See, generally, the title SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT AND COUNTERCLAIM.

An action was brought to recover an amount of money expended for the purchase of certain commodities as agent for another party and the Chicago exchange. The person against whom the action was brought set up a defense that the contract was a gambling transaction and therefore void, and they also filed a counterclaim asking for the recovery of certain moneys which they had paid to the plaintiff. The proof did not show it was the intention of the plaintiff when entering into the contract that it should be a gambling transaction, and it was held by the court that the defendant who alleged the contract to be illegal could not recover on the counterclaim against the innocent plaintiff. The court in this case said: "Upon the case made by his counterclaim, the defendant was not entitled to recover, and the fact that the plaintiffs were innocent of any unlawful purpose did not enure to the benefit of the defendant, who confessed that the money which he sought to recover had been paid by him to promote an illegal and criminal venture." Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 686, 29 L. Ed. 764.

17. Dependent upon intention of parties.—White v. Barber, 123 U. S. 392, 31 L. Ed. 243; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 510, 28 L. Ed. 225; Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 499, 37 L. Ed. 817; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 273, 6 L. Ed. 468; Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 346, 33 L. Ed. 172; Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 686, 29 L. Ed. 764; Gatewood v. North Carolina, 203 U. S. 531, 542, 51 L. Ed. 305.

18. Innocent agent may recover commission and advances.—Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 499, 37 L. Ed. 817; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 510, 28 L. Ed. 225; Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 346, 33 L. Ed. 172.

"It is certainly true that a broker might negotiate such a contract without being privy to the illegal intent of the principal parties to it which renders it void, and in such a case, being innocent of any violation of law, and not suing to enforce an unlawful contract, has a meritorious ground for the recovery of compensation for services and advances." Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 345, 33 L. Ed. 172.

A suit in equity was brought to recover a sum of money which the plaintiff alleged he had put into defendant's hands to be used by him in what were in effect gambling contracts, being sales of wheat which neither party intended should ever be delivered. The court held that the evidence indicated that such was not the defendant's intention and that as he did nothing to indicate he understood the transactions were to be illegal, and as the sales were unlawful, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the money. White v. Barber, 123 U. S. 392, 31 L. Ed. 243.

A person who alleges that transactions between himself and another person were gambling contracts cannot recover money paid to such person as his agent where the person to whom it was paid did not understand that the contracts were of this agents may be so connected with the illegality of a gambling transaction as to be affected by it, yet, where they are suing only for services performed or money advanced to their principals, they are not in the same position as a party who seeks to enforce the original illegal agreement.[19] But where a broker is privy to a gambling transaction and brings the parties together for the very purpose of entering into the illegal agreement, he is particeps criminis, and cannot recover for services rendered, or losses incurred by himself on behalf of either in forwarding the transaction.[20]

IV. Recovery of Losses.

A state may provide by statute that a person who has lost money in a gambling transaction may have a right of action to recover the amount.[21] While a state may always give a right of action to a loser to recover money lost in a gambling transaction, it need not limit the right of action to him alone, but may proceed further and allow an action to be brought by a common informer who may recover the money.[22] It is competent for a state in furtherance of a plan to suppress gambling to provide that, not only an action may be brought for the recovery of losses from the winner, but also to make the owner of the building, in which the loss was sustained, liable when he has knowledge that gambling is being carried on on his premises.[23]

V. Evidence.

A. Presumption and Burden of Proof.—The presumption is that all contracts are legal and valid, and where it is sought to set aside the contract valid upon its face upon the ground that it is a gambling transaction, the burden of proof is upon the party who seeks to establish the invalidity of the transaction.[24]

B. Competency.—Liability to Gamble When Intoxicated.—Evidence that a party when intoxicated was liable to indulge in gaming, is not admissible in an action upon promissory notes, the defense to which is that their consideration was money lost at play.[25]

C. Weight and Sufficiency.—Evidence of Similar Transactions.—Evidence that other transactions similar to the one entered into between two parties were gambling contracts, will not be sufficient to prove that parties to a contract which was regular upon its face intended to violate the law.[26] character but supposed them to be legal and bona fide transactions. White v. Barber, 123 U. S. 392, 31 L. Ed. 243.

Judgment against Winner.—In some states a judgment against the winner

19. Not in same position as principal.—Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 276, 27 L. Ed. 722; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 509, 28 L. Ed. 225.

20. Where agent has knowledge of illegality of transaction.—Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 500, 28 L. Ed. 225.

21. Power of state to provide for recovery of losses.—Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 667, 36 L. Ed. 1123; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 224, 50 L. Ed. 151.

22. Common informer.—Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 224, 50 L. Ed. 151. See the title PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.

A statute giving the right to recover back money lost at gaming, and, if the loser does not sue within a certain time, authorizing a qui tam action to be brought by any other person for threefold the amount, has been held to be remedial as to the loser, though penal as regards the suit by a common informer. Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 667, 36 L. Ed. 1123.

23. From owner of building.—Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 224, 50 L. Ed. 151.

A statute of the state of Ohio provided that a recovery could be had of money lost at gambling, and it made a judgment for the recovery of money thus lost, a lien upon the property of the owner of the building in which the gambling was conducted, if it was conducted with his knowledge and consent. It was held, that this was a valid exercise of the police power of the state and did not deprive the owner of his property without due process of law. Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 224, 50 L. Ed. 151.

24. Burden of proving invalidity.—Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 492, 37 L. Ed. 817; Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 490, 45 L. Ed. 1183; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 500, 28 L. Ed. 225; Bank v. Dunn, 6 Pet. 51, 8 L. Ed. 316.

25. Liability to gamble.—Thompson v. Bowie, 4 Wall. 463, 18 L. Ed. 423.

26. Similar transactions.—Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 276, 27 L. Ed. 722.

for the recovery of money lost at gaming, is conclusive evidence against the owner of the building in which the gambling took place.[27]

Knowledge of One Party Insufficient to Establish Invalidity.—The invalidity of a transaction regular upon its face is not established by proof that one of the parties to the transaction intended it to be a gambling or wager contract, but the evidence must establish the fact that both parties so intended it.[28]

GAME AND GAME LAWS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 316; FISH AND FISHERIES, ante, p. 291; INDIANS; OYSTERS; POLICE POWER; PUBLIC LANDS; STATES; TREATIES; UNITED STATES.

As to contracts made by the United States regulating the taking of seals, see the title UNITED STATES. As to all questions relating to taking or preservation of fish, see the title FISH AND FISHERIES, ante, p. 291. As to property in wild animals, see the title ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 317.

Control and Regulation of Taking of Game.—A state has the unquestioned power to control and regulate the taking of game.[1]

Hunting by Indians within State's Limits.—See the title INDIANS.

Transportation beyond Limits of State Where Killed.—A state has the power to make it an offense to have in possession, for the purpose of transportation beyond the state, game birds which have been lawfully killed within the state during the open season, and a statute creating this offense does not violate the interstate commerce clause of the constitution of the United States.[2]

27. Judgment against winner.—Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 50 L. Ed. 151.

28. Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 276, 27 L. Ed. 722; Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 492, 37 L. Ed. 817.

1. Control and regulation.—Greer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. Ed. 793; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 507, 41 L. Ed. 244.

Preservation of game.—The preservation of game has always been treated as within the proper domain of the police power, and laws limiting the season within which birds and wild animals may be killed or exposed for sale, have been repeatedly upheld by the courts. Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 138, 38 L. Ed. 385.

"The preservation of such animals as are adapted to consumption as food or to any other useful purpose, is a matter of public interest; and it is within the police power of the state, as the representative of the people in their united sovereignty, to make such laws as will best preserve such game, and secure its beneficial use in the future to the citizens, and to that end it may adopt any reasonable regulations, not only as to time and manner in which such game may be taken and killed, but also imposing limitations upon the right of property in such game after it has been reduced to possession. Such limitations deprive no person of his property, because he who takes or kills game had no previous right of property in it, and when he acquires such right by reducing it to possession he does so subject to such conditions and limitations as the legislature has seen fit to impose." Greer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 533, 40 L. Ed. 793.

2. May forbid transportation from state.—Greer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 523, 40 L. Ed. 793.

GAMING.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004; GAMBLING CONTRACTS, ante, p. 537; GRAND JURY; HABEAS CORPUS; INFORMERS; PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.

As to the right to attack the constitutionality of a statute prohibiting gaming upon the ground that it is unfairly construed or administered, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 367.

Validity of Statutes Prohibiting Gaming.—The suppression of gambling is concededly within the police powers of a state, and legislation prohibiting it, or acts which may tend to or facilitate it, will not be interfered with by the court unless such legislation be a "clear, unmistakable infringement of rights secured by the fundamental law."[1] And it is competent for a state to prohibit gambling by a severe penalty.[2] And a state may declare that all contracts for options to sell or buy at a future time, or any attempt to influence the price of commodities by spreading false rumors, or to corner the market, shall be illegal and punishable as a criminal offense.[3]

Construction of Statutes Allowing Gaming.—Statutes which allow gaming are to be construed strictly.[4] And it has been held, that a special statute which allowed associations to be formed for the purpose of receiving subscriptions, and to sell and dispose of certificates of subscriptions which shall entitle the holders thereof to such prizes as may be awarded to them, did not authorize the keeping of tables for gaming contrary to the general laws of such state.[5]

GARDEN SEEDS.—See note 6.

GARNISHMENT.—See the title ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, p. 591.

1. Right of state to prohibit.—Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 429, 46 L. Ed. 623; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. Ed. 323; Ah Sin v. Wittman, 198 U. S. 500, 505, 49 L. Ed. 1142.

2. May be prohibited by severe penalty.—Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 459, 7 L. Ed. 903.

3. May punish buying and selling of options.—Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 426, 46 L. Ed. 623.

By § 130 of the criminal code of Illinois it is provided that "whoever contracts to have or give to himself or another the option to sell or buy, at a future time, any grain, or other commodity, stock of any railroad or other company; or gold, or forestalls the market by spreading false rumors to influence the price of commodities therein, or corners the market, or attempts to do so in relation to any of such commodities, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or confined in the county jail not exceeding one year, or both." Rev. Stat., Ill. Crim. Code (by Hurd, 1901), § 130. This provision was held constitutional. Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 426, 46 L. Ed. 623.

4. Construed strictly.—Aicardi v. State, 19 Wall. 636, 22 L. Ed. 215.

5. Cannot be extended by implication.—Aicardi v. State, 19 Wall. 635, 639, 22 L. Ed. 215.

6. Garden seeds.—See Ferry v. Livingston, 115 U. S. 542, 549, 29 L. Ed. 489. See, also, the title REVENUE LAWS.

GAS.

BY ERNEST P. STEINHAUER.

I. Natural Gas, 545.

A. Definition, 545.
B. Nature, 545.
1. As a Mineral, 545.
2. Analogy between Animals Feræ Naturæ and Natural Gas, 546.
C. Ownership, 546.
D. Legislation to Prevent Waste of Natural Gas—Fourteenth Amendment, 546.

II. Gas Companies, 547.

A. Grant of Exclusive Privilege, 547.
B. Consideration of Gas Companies, 548.
C. Paying for Removal of Pipes by City, 548.
D. Power to Fix Price at Which Companies to Sell Gas, 548.
E. Duty of Gas Company to Repair Gas Boxes, 548.

CROSS REFERENCES.

As to imposing unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon a gas company, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 366, 372. As to power of municipal corporations to grant special or exclusive privileges, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 410. As to special and exclusive franchises being inviolable, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 424. As to vested rights and retrospective legislation, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 424, 425. As to exclusive franchise as a contract, see the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 681. As to legality of agreements disabling gas company from performance of duties, see the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 737. As to taking the property of a gas company without due process of law, see the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499. As to scope of guarantee given by a gas company to the bonds of a municipal corporation, see the title GUARANTY. As to impairment of obligation of contract made with gas companies, see the title IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS. As to judicial notice of the way in which natural gas is conducted from gas well, see the title JUDICIAL NOTICE. As to construction of lease for purpose of boring for oil and gas, see the title MINES AND MINERALS. As to admittance of natural gas under the tariff, see the title REVENUE LAWS. As to taxation of gas under the internal revenue laws, see the title REVENUE LAWS. As to exemption from taxation because of legislative grant of privilege to construct and maintain a gas company in a municipality, see the title TAXATION.

I. Natural Gas.

A. Definition.—"The substance that is taken from the bosom of the earth and which burns brightly without any further labor put upon it, is properly designated as natural gas."[1]

B. Nature—1. AS A MINERAL.—Though gas is included by some authorities in the definition of a mineral,[2] there are many respects in which it differs from

1. Definition.—United States v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co., 172 U. S. 339, 340, 43 L. Ed. 469.

2. Gas considered as a mineral.—The word "minerals" in the mineralogical sense of the word almost invariably refers to solids and in the mineralogical definition gases would not be included, but there is a wider definition, which according to some authorities includes all the constitutents of the earth's crust, and which would include gases. If a scientific man wants to be precise he confines his use of the term "mineral" to a certain homogeneous substance, a chemical entity, having a definite composition, just as the mineralogist does. But nevertheless minerals are both solids and liquid, ac-

other minerals.[3]

2. Analogy between Animals Feræ Naturæ and Natural Gas.—While there is an analogy between animals feræ naturæ and the moving deposits of natural gas, there is no identity between them.[4]

C. Ownership.—Surface Proprietors.—The surface proprietors within the gas field all have the right to reduce to possession the gas beneath. They could not be absolutely deprived of this right which belongs to them without a taking of private property.[5]

D. Legislation to Prevent Waste of Natural Gas—Fourteenth Amendment.—Statutory provisions may be made for the prevention of waste of natural gas without conflicting with the fourteenth amendment.[6] cording to most definitions, and some authorities include gases among minerals and others exclude them. United States v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co., 172 U. S. 339, 342, 43 L. Ed. 469.

3. "True it is that oil and gas, like other minerals, are situated beneath the surface of the earth, but except for this one point of similarity, in many other respects they greatly differ. They have no fixed situs under a particular portion of the earth's surface within the area where they obtain. They have the power, as it were, of self-transmission. No one owner of the surface of the earth, within the area beneath which the gas and oil move, can exercise his right to extract from the common reservoir, in which the supply is held, without, to an extent, diminishing the source of supply as to which all other owners of the surface must exercise their rights. The waste by one owner; caused by a reckless enjoyment of his right of striking the reservoir, at once, therefore, operates upon the other surface owners. Besides, whilst oil and gas are different in character, they are yet one, because they are unitedly held in the place of deposit." Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana (No. 1.), 177 U. S. 190, 202, 44 L. Ed. 729.

4. Analogy between animals feræ naturæ and natural gas.—"Whilst there is an analogy between animals feræ naturæ and the moving deposits of oil and natural gas, there is not identity between them. Thus, the owner of land has the exclusive right on his property to reduce the game there found to possession, just as the owner of the soil has the exclusive right to reduce to possession the deposits of natural gas and oil found beneath the surface of his land. The owner of the soil cannot follow game when it passes from his property; so, also, the owner may not follow the natural gas when it shifts from beneath his own to the property of some one else within the gas field. It being true as to both animals feræ naturæ and gas and oil, therefore, that whilst the right to appropriate and become the owner exists, proprietorship does not take being until the particular subjects of the right become property by being reduced to actual possession. The identity, however, is for many reasons wanting. In things feræ naturæ all are endowed with the power of seeking to reduce a portion of the public property to the domain of private ownership by reducing them to possession. In the case of natural gas and oil no such right exists in the public. It is vested only in the owners in fee of the surface of the earth within the area of the gas field. This difference points at once to the distinction between the power which the lawmaker may exercise as to the two. In the one, as the public are the owners, every one may be absolutely prevented from seeking to reduce to possession. No divesting of private property, under such a condition, can be conceived because the public are the owners, and the enacting by the state of a law as to the public ownership is but the discharge of the governmental trust resting in the state as to property of that character." Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana (No. 1), 177 U. S. 190, 209, 44 L. Ed. 729.

5. Ownership.—Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana (No. 1), 177 U. S. 190, 209, 44 L. Ed. 729.

The rule of general law in the state of Indiana, is that although in virtue of his proprietorship the owner of the surface may bore wells for the purpose of extracting natural gas and oil, until these substances are actually reduced by him to possession, he has no title whatever to them as owner. That is, he has the exclusive right on his own land to seek to acquire them, but they do not become his property until the effort has resulted in dominion and control by actual possession. Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana (No. 1), 177 U. S. 190, 208, 44 L. Ed. 729.

Petroleum gas is a substance of a peculiar character, and decisions in ordinary cases of mining, for coal and other minerals which have a fixed situs, cannot be applied to contracts concerning it without some qualifications. It belongs to the owner of the land, and is part of it, so long as the gas is on it or in it, or subject to his control, but when it escapes and goes into other land, or come under another's control, the title of the former owner is gone. If an adjoining owner drills his own land and taps a deposit of gas extending under his neighbor's field, so that it comes into his well, it becomes his property. Brown v. Spilman, 155 U. S. 665, 670, 39 L. Ed. 304.

6. Legislation to prevent waste of

II. Gas Companies.

A. Grant of Exclusive Privilege.—Municipal corporations constitute a part of the civil government of the state, and their streets are highways, which it is the province of government by appropriate means to render safe.[7] To that end the lighting of streets is a matter of which the public may assume control.[8] For these reasons, and the necessity of uniform regulations for the manufacture and distribution of gas for use by the community, a state may grant to a gas company the exclusive privilege of supplying gas.[9] Such legislation is not open to the objection that it is a monopoly;[10] and although the exclusive privilege may tend to injure the public if not properly regulated, it is none the less a contract,[11] and should not be impaired.[12] A grant of exclusive privilege does not obstruct the states in the exercise of the police power;[13] nor does it prevent a municipal corporation from buying stock in another gas company.[14] natural gas—Fourteenth amendment.—The Indiana statute of March 4, 1893 (acts of 1893, ch. 36, p. 300), providing "that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation having possession or control of any natural gas or oil well, whether as a contractor, owner, lessee, agent or manager, to allow or permit the flow of gas or oil from any such well to escape into the open air, without being confined within such well or proper pipes or other safe receptacle, for a longer period than two (2) days next after gas or oil shall have been struck in such well; and thereafter all such gas or oil shall be safely and securely confined in such well, pipes or other safe and proper receptacles," does not take the private property of an owner without due process of law. Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana (No. 1), 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. Ed. 729.

7. Protection of public.—New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 658, 29 L. Ed. 516. See the title STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

8. Public nature of supplying gas.—New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 658, 29 L. Ed. 516.

"The manufacture and distribution of illuminating gas, by means of pipes or conduits placed, under legislative authority, in the street of a town or city, is a business of a public character. Under proper management, the business contributes very materially to the public convenience, while, in the absence of efficient supervision, it may disturb the comfort and endanger the health and property of the community. It also holds important relations to the public through the facilities furnished, by the lighting of streets with gas, for the detection and prevention of crime." New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 658, 29 L. Ed. 516. See, also, Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396, 408, 32 L. Ed. 979.

Public purpose.—"Authority for the position that the supplying of gas to a city and its people may become a public purpose is found in New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644, 24 L. Ed. 521." New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 659, 29 L. Ed. 516.

9. Grant of exclusive privilege.—New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 653, 29 L. Ed. 516. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 410.

10. Is not a monopoly.—"Legislation of that character is not liable to the objection that it is a mere monopoly, preventing citizens from engaging in an ordinary pursuit or business, open as of common right to all, upon terms of equality; for the right to dig up the streets and other public ways of New Orleans, and place therein pipes and mains for the distribution of gas for public and private use, is a franchise, the privilege of exercising which could only be granted by the state, or by the municipal government of that city acting under legislative authority. Dillon's Municipal Corp., 3d. Ed., § 691." New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 659, 29 L. Ed. 516. See, generally, the title MONOPOLIES AND CORPORATE TRUSTS.

11. Is a contract.—New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 671, 29 L. Ed. 516.

12. Contract should not be impaired.—Before the adoption of the present constitution of Louisiana the legislature had authority to grant to a private corporation an exclusive privilege of supplying gas to the city and people of New Orleans, and such grant constitutes a contract, the obligation of which cannot be impaired by a state law. New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516. See, generally, the title IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS. And see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 424.

13. Does not obstruct police power.—Because a state grants the exclusive privilege of furnishing gas to a city it cannot be said that such grant obstructs the state in the exercise of her power to provide for the public protection, health, and safety. New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 672, 29 L. Ed. 516. See, generally, the titles IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS; POLICE POWER.

14. Does not prevent taking stock in

B. Consolidation of Gas Companies.—Under a provision for the consolidation of two "now existing" corporations, two gas companies may consolidate although one of them may not be a full-pledged corporation.[15]

C. Paying for Removal of Pipes by City.—Where, in order to accommodate a system of drainage, it is necessary to move gas pipes, the gas company may be compelled to pay the expenses of such moving.[16]

D. Power to Fix Price at Which Companies to Sell Gas.—Unless prohibited by the constitution or by contract, the legislatures have the power to regulate the price at which gas is to be sold, by a gas company to a municipal corporation;[17] but the gas company may invoke the aid of the courts when the regulations amount to the taking of property without compensation.[18]

E. Duty of Gas Company to Repair Gas Boxes.—It is the duty of a gas company to repair the gas boxes, when they are parts of its necessary appliances and are placed in the sidewalk and used for the purpose of connecting the gas mains with the houses, and this duty is not affected by the circumstances that the cost of the labor and materials used in the construction of the boxes is paid by the owners of the houses.[19] another company.—Memphis City v. Dean, 8 Wall. 64, 19 L. Ed. 326.

15. Consolidation of gas companies.—New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 656, 29 L. Ed. 516. See, generally, the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 770.

Under the act of the general assembly of Louisiana, providing "that any two business and manufacturing corporations or companies now existing under general or special law, whose object and business are in general of the same nature may amalgamate, unite, and consolidate," a gas company given the exclusive privilege of supplying gas to the city of New Orleans, until April 1, 1875, may consolidate with another corporation that has been given the exclusive right from such date. New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 656, 29 L. Ed. 516.

16. Paying for removal of pipes by city.—New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 49 L. Ed. 831.

In the case of New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 49 L. Ed. 831, a gas company had acquired an exclusive right to supply gas to the city of New Orleans and its inhabitants through pipes and mains laid in the streets. In the exercise of that right it had laid its pipes in the streets. Subsequently a drainage commission, proceeding under statutory authority, devised a system of drainage for the city, and in the execution of its plans it became necessary to change the location in some places of the mains and pipes laid by the gas company. The contention of that company was that it could not be required, at its own cost, to shift its pipes and mains so as to accommodate the drainage system; that to require it to do so would be a taking of its property for public use without compensation, in violation of the constitution of the United States. This court said: "The gas company did not acquire any specific location in the streets; it was content with the general right to use them, and when it located its pipes it was at the risk that they might be, at some future time, disturbed, when the state might require, for a necessary public use, that changes in location be made. * * * There is nothing in the grant to the gas company, even if it could legally be done, undertaking to limit the right of the state to establish a system of drainage in the streets. We think whatever right the gas company acquired was subject, in so far as the location of its pipes was concerned, to such further regulations as might be required in the interest of the public health and welfare." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 590, 50 L. Ed. 596.

17. Power to fix price at which companies to sell gas.—Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. Ed. 173.

18. When regulations amount to taking property without compensation.—Where a gas company, at a former period, had violated the antitrust law of Illinois, but afterwards ceased such violation, it is not precluded from invoking the aid of the court to restrain the enforcement of an ordinance fixing the price of gas, when such rates amount to the taking of property without compensation. Peoria Gas, etc., Co. v. Peoria, 200 U. S. 48, 50 L. Ed. 365.

19. Duty of gas company to repair gas boxes.—Washington Gas Light Co. v. District of Columbia, 161 U. S. 316, 40 L. Ed. 712.

A municipal corporation has a cause of action against a gas company where it has been condemned to pay damages occasioned by a defective gas box, which it was the duty of the gas company to supervise and repair. Washington Gas Light Co. v. District of Columbia, 161 U. S. 316, 327, 40 L. Ed. 712.

GATES AT CROSSINGS.—See the title CROSSINGS, vol. 1, p. 152.
GENERAL AGENT.—See the title PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.
GENERAL APPEARANCE.—See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 172; APPEARANCES, vol. 2, p. 443.
GENERAL ASSIGNMENT.—See the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 601.
GENERAL ASSUMPSIT.—See the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 639.

GENERAL AVERAGE.

BY J. N. CLAYBROOK.

I. Definitions, 550.

II. Origin and Nature, 551.

III. Losses Giving Rise to General Average, 551.

A. Classification of Losses, 551.
B. Sacrifice of Part of Adventure for Benefit of Whole, 551.
1. In General, 551.
2. Necessity for Impending Peril, 552.
3. Necessity for Sacrifice to Be Voluntary, 552.
4. Absence of Negligence, 552.
a. In General, 552.
b. Liability for Negligent Sacrifice, 552.
5. Necessity for Intention to Destroy Property Cast Away, 553.
6. Necessity of Saving Part of Adventure, 553.
7. Property for Benefit of Which Sacrifice May Be Made, 553.
8. Who May Make Sacrifice, 553.
9. Separation of Ship and Cargo before Sacrifice, 554.
10. Particular Sacrifices Giving Rise to General Average, 555.
a. Loss or Damage to Ship, 555.
(1) In General, 555.
(2) Stranding, 555.
(a) Voluntary Stranding, 555.
aa. In General, 555.
bb. What Constitutes Voluntary Stranding, 556.
(b) Involuntary Stranding, 557.
aa. In General, 557.
bb. Under Harter Act, 557.
(3) Cutting Away Masts and Spars, 557.
(4) Scuttling Ship to Extinguish Fire, 558.
(5) Money or Salvage Paid to Redeem Captured Ship, 558.
b. Loss or Damage to Cargo, 558.
(1) In General, 558.
(2) Jettison, 558.
(3) Damage by Scuttling Ship to Extinguish Fire, 559.
C. Extraordinary Expenses Due to Disaster, 559.
1. In General, 559.
2. Repairs, 559.
3. Wages and Provisions of Master and Crew, 559.
4. Port of Refuge Expenses, 560.

IV. Interests Liable to Contribute, 560.

V. Interests or Persons Entitled to Contribution, 561.

VI. Lien for General Average, 561.

VII. Adjustment and Collection, 562.

A. Adjustment, 562.
1. Place of Adjustment, 562.
2. Valuation of Ship, 562.
3. Valuation of Cargo, 562.
4. Expenses of Adjustment, 562.

B. Commissions for Collecting Average, 562.

VIII. General Average Bonds, 562.

IX. Jurisdiction of Suits for General Average, 562.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 119; BOTTOMRY AND RESPONDENTIA, vol. 3, p. 448; CARRIERS, vol. 3, p. 556; COLLISION, vol. 3, p. 870; MARINE INSURANCE; MARITIME LIENS; MASTERS OF VESSELS; SALVAGE; SHIPS AND SHIPPING; TOWAGE, TUGS AND TOWS.

As to admiralty jurisdiction over general average, see the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 147. As to intervention in salvage case by shipowners claiming general average, see the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 169, note 64. As to discharge of bottomry bond by adjusters of average who have paid it and taken an assignment to themselves, see the title BOTTOMRY AND RESPONDENTIA, vol. 3, p. 458. As to exemptions of particular average in policies of marine insurance, see the title MARINE INSURANCE.

I. Definitions.

General average denotes that contribution which is made by all who are parties to the same adventure towards a loss arising out of extraordinary sacrifices made, or extraordinary expenses incurred, by some of them, for the common benefit of ship and cargo.[1] The principle of the rule is that whatever is sacrificed voluntarily, for the common good, is to be recompensed by the common contribution of the property benefited thereby.[2]

1. General average defined.—McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 370, 18 L. Ed. 155; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. Ed. 638; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 399, 23 L. Ed. 613; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 114, 20 L. Ed. 281.

"General average contribution is defined to be a contribution by all the parties in a sea adventure to make good the loss sustained by one of their number on account of sacrifices voluntarily made of part of the ship or cargo to save the residue and the lives of those on board from an impending peril, or for extraordinary expenses necessarily incurred by one or more of the parties for the general benefit of all the interests embarked in the enterprise." Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. Ed. 638.

General average arises when a sacrifice of part has been made for the residue, or when money is expended, to preserve the whole. Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908.

"Where two or more parties are engaged in the same sea risk, and one of them, in a moment of imminent peril, makes a sacrifice to avoid the impending danger, or incurs extraordinary expenses to promote the safety of all the associated interests, common justice requires that the sacrifice so made, or the extraordinary expenses so incurred, shall be assessed upon all the interests which were so exposed to the impending peril, and which were saved, by those means, from the threatened danger, in proportion to the share of each in the joint adventure." Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 114, 20 L. Ed. 281; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 366, 18 L. Ed. 155; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. Ed. 638; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 395, 39 L. Ed. 742; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 404, 23 L. Ed. 613.

It is the safety of the property and not the voyage which constitutes the foundation of general average. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

Liability for average neither a contract or tort.—A claim for general average contribution neither arises out of contract or tort. The Eagle, 8 Wall. 15, 23, 19 L. Ed. 365; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 403, 39 L. Ed. 742.

2. Principle of rule.—Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 343, 10 L. Ed. 186; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 367, 18 L. Ed. 155; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 409, 23 L. Ed. 613; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 395, 39 L. Ed. 742; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 231, 19 L. Ed. 638;

II. Origin and Nature.

The law of general average, coming down to us from remote antiquity, is derived from the law of Rhodes, through the law of Rome,[3] and is part of the maritime law, or law of the sea, as distinguished from the municipal law, or law of the land.[4] General average has its foundation in equity, and rests upon the doctrine, that whatever is sacrificed for the common benefit of the associated interests shall be made good by all the interests which were exposed to the common peril, and which were saved from the common danger by the sacrifice.[5]

III. Losses Giving Rise to General Average.

A. Classification of Losses.—Losses in a sea risk which give a claim to general average are usually divided into two great classes: (1) Those which arise from a sacrifice of part of the ship, or part of the cargo, purposely made to save the whole adventure from perishing. (2) Such as arise out of extraordinary expenses incurred, by one of the parties, in the course of the voyage, for the joint benefit of the ship and cargo.[6]

B. Sacrifice of Part of Adventure for Benefit of Whole—1. In General.—To constitute a general average loss the ship and cargo must have been placed in a common imminent peril; there must have been a voluntary sacrifice of property to avert that peril; and the attempt to avoid the imminent common peril must have been successful.[7]

Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 302, 13 L. Ed. 417.

3. Derived from Rhodian law.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 39 L. Ed. 742; The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 189, 43 L. Ed. 130; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 366, 18 L. Ed. 155; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 337, 10 L. Ed. 186.

Although the Rhodian law, in terms, made no provision for any case of general average, except for that of jettison of goods as the means of lightening the vessel, the rule, as there laid down, has never been understood as being confined to that particular case, but has always been regarded as a general regulation, applicable in all cases falling within the principle on which it is founded. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 366, 18 L. Ed. 155.

4. General average part of maritime law.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 393, 39 L. Ed. 742.

5. Equitable nature of general average.—Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 403, 23 L. Ed. 613; Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 229, 19 L. Ed. 638; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 372, 18 L. Ed. 155; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 302, 13 L. Ed. 417.

General average or general contribution is founded on principles of justice and sound policy. Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908.

The principle that "what is given for the general benefit of all shall be made good by the contribution of all," is recommended, not only by its equity, but also by its policy, because it encourages the owner to throw away his property without hesitation in time of need. Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 302, 13 L. Ed. 417; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 230, 19 L. Ed. 638; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 405, 23 L. Ed. 613.

6. Classification of general average losses.—McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 365, 18 L. Ed. 155; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. Ed. 638; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 114, 20 L. Ed. 281.

7. Elements of general average loss.—Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 302, 13 L. Ed. 417; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 338, 10 L. Ed. 186; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 394, 39 L. Ed. 742; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 370, 18 L. Ed. 155; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

"In order to constitute a case for general average, three things must concur: 1st. A common danger; a danger in which ship, cargo, and crew all participate; a danger imminent and apparently 'inevitable,' except by voluntarily incurring the loss of a portion of the whole to save the remainder. 2d. There must be a voluntary jettison, jactus, or casting away, of some portion of the joint concern for the purpose of avoiding this imminent peril, pericula imminent is evitandi causa, or, in other words, a transfer of the peril from the whole to a particular portion of the whole. 3d. This attempt to avoid the imminent common peril must be successful." Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 302, 13 L. Ed. 417; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 394, 39 L. Ed. 742.

To constitute a general average loss, there must be a voluntary sacrifice of part of a maritime adventure, for the purpose, and with the effect, of saving the other parts of the adventure from an imminent

2. Necessity for Impending Peril.—In order to constitute a general average loss, the ship and cargo must have been in peril, and the sacrifice must have been made to save a part of the adventure, or extraordinary expenses, which became necessary in consequence of a common peril, must have been incurred for the joint benefit of the ship and cargo.[8]

3. Necessity for Sacrifice to Be Voluntary.—Undoubtedly the sacrifice must be voluntary and must have been intended as a means of saving the remaining property of the adventure, and the lives of those on board, and unless such was the purpose of the act it gives no claim for contribution.[9]

4. Absence of Negligence—a. In General.—In order to constitute a general average loss, it must appear that the loss was not due to the negligence of those in charge of the vessel,[10] and this is true even under the Harter Act.[11] Thus if a jettison of a cargo is rendered necessary by the negligence of those in charge of the ship, the cargo owners are not restricted to a claim for general average contribution,[12] and, on the other hand, if a ship is stranded by negligence, it cannot claim a general average contribution from the cargo.[13]

b. Liability for Negligent Sacrifice.—If the master does not exercise reason-peril impending over the whole. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 419, 39 L. Ed. 742.

8. Necessity for impending peril.—Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638; Fowler v. Rathbornes, 12 Wall. 102, 114, 20 L. Ed. 281; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 370, 18 L. Ed. 155; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 303, 13 L. Ed. 417; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 338, 10 L. Ed. 186; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 394, 39 L. Ed. 742.

Sacrifices, where there is no peril, present no claim for contribution, but the greater and more imminent the peril the more meritorious the claim for such contribution, if the sacrifice was voluntary and contributed to save the associated interests from the impending danger to which the same were exposed. Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 400, 23 L. Ed. 613; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 229, 19 L. Ed. 638; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 114, 20 L. Ed. 281; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 370, 18 L. Ed. 155.

No interest is liable to contribute for any general average or expenses incurred subsequently to its ceasing to be at risk, as no interest is compelled to contribute to the loss or expense unless it was benefited by the sacrifice. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155.

9. Necessity for sacrifice to be voluntary.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 232, 19 L. Ed. 638; Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908; The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 606, 42 L. Ed. 292; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 403, 39 L. Ed. 742.

As a general rule the agency and consent of man must intervene to produce a general average. Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908.

Where salvage was decreed to recaptors it was held that the loss was one giving rise to general average. Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908.

"The distinction between voluntary and compulsory sacrifice is well illustrated by another case stated in the Pandects, recognized in the earliest English case on general average, and approved in all the books, in which money voluntarily paid by the master to ransom the ship and cargo from pirates is to be contributed for; but not so, as to goods or money forcibly taken by pirates. Dig. 14, 2, 1, 5; Hicks v. Palington (32 Eliz.) Moore, 297." Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 39 L. Ed. 742.

Injury to cargo by water leaking in.—Where no water enters the ship which reaches and damages the cargo, except what comes through holes cut in the bows by the ice previously to such a case of stranding, then the owners of the cargo are not entitled to be allowed anything for the damages to their cargo by water, by way of general average, or by way of reduction of the shipowner's claim. Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281.

10. Absence of negligence.—The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 189, 43 L. Ed. 130; The Portsmouth, 9 Wall. 682, 19 L. Ed. 754.

11. Under Harter Act.—The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 189, 43 L. Ed. 130 (where the ship was stranded by the negligence of those in charge of her, and it was held that the owner could not claim general average contribution from the cargo, for sacrifices subsequent to the stranding).

12. Jettison rendered necessary by negligence.—The Portsmouth, 9 Wall. 682, 19 L. Ed. 754.

Generally, as to the liability of a ship for loss due to a negligent jettison of the cargo, see the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

13. Ship stranded by negligence.—The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 189, 43 L. Ed. 130.

Not only is the shipowner excluded from contribution by way of general average when the loss arises from the ship's fault, but he is legally responsible to the owner of the cargo for loss and able skill and judgment and courage in sacrificing goods for the benefit of the adventure, the master and the owner of the ship are each liable to the owner of the goods sacrificed.[14]

5. Necessity for Intention to Destroy Property Cast Away.—It is not necessary that there should have been any intention to destroy the thing or things cast away, as no such intention is ever supposed to exist. On the contrary, it is sufficient that the property was selected to suffer the common peril in the place of the whole of the associated interests, that the remainder might be saved.[15]

6. Necessity of Saving Part of Adventure.—The sacrifice of part of a maritime adventure made for the safety of the whole must be successful in order to entitle the interests sacrificed to general average.[16]

7. Property for Benefit of Which Sacrifice May Be Made.—The law of general average is confined to those cases wherein a voluntary sacrifice is made of some portion of the ship or cargo for the benefit of the residue. The safety of any property, on land or water, not included in that adventure, can neither be an object of the sacrifice, nor a subject of the contribution.[17] The sacrifice of one ship for the safety of another does not give rise to any claim of general average.[18]

8. Who May Make Sacrifice.—The sacrifice must be made by someone specially charged with the control and safety of the adventure.[19] It cannot be made by a stranger,[20] nor by the public authorities.[21] The relations of the master of the vessel and its owners, as well as to the shippers of the cargo, are such that he is invested with the power to make a sacrifice of a part of the adventure for the benefit of the whole.[22] In cases admitting of delay sufficient for that purpose the master should, it seems, consult with the officers as to the damages so occasioned. The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 189, 43 L. Ed. 130.

14. Liability in case of improper sacrifice.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 400, 39 L. Ed. 742; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417; Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58.

15. Necessity for intention to destroy property cast away.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 232, 19 L. Ed. 638.

"The intention to destroy the jactus, or thing exposed to loss or damage for the benefit of the whole, makes no part of the hypothesis upon which the right of contribution is founded." Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 305, 13 L. Ed. 417.

16. Necessity of saving of property.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 419, 39 L. Ed. 742; The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 602, 42 L. Ed. 292; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 302, 13 L. Ed. 417; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 338, 10 L. Ed. 186.

17. Property for benefit of which sacrifice may be made.—The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 606, 42 L. Ed. 292; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 403, 39 L. Ed. 742.

18. Sacrifice of one ship to save another.—The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 602, 42 L. Ed. 292; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 406, 39 L. Ed. 742.

Sacrifice of tow by tug.—A contribution in general average cannot be had against a steam tug for the casting off and abandonment, by her master, of her tow of barges, with the intention, and with the effect, of saving the tug. The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 601, 42 L. Ed. 292.

19. Who may make sacrifice.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 419, 39 L. Ed. 742.

The sacrifice, whether of ship or of cargo, must be by the will and act of its owner, or of the master of the ship, or other person charged with the control and protection of the common adventure, and representing and acting for all the interests included in that adventure, and those interests only. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 419, 39 L. Ed. 742.

20. Sacrifice by stranger.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 419, 39 L. Ed. 742.

A sacrifice of vessel or cargo by the act of a stranger to the adventure, although authorized by the municipal law to make the sacrifice for the protection of his own interests, or of those of the public, gives no right of contribution, either for or against those outside interests, or even as between the parties to the common adventure. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 419, 39 L. Ed. 742.

21. Sacrifice by public authorities.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 419, 39 L. Ed. 742.

A loss of a vessel due to scuttling by the port authorities, in order to extinguish a fire, is not a general average loss. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 420, 39 L. Ed. 742.

22. Power of master to make sacrifice.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 401, 39 L. Ed. 742; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L.

propriety of the sacrifice.[23] In case of the master's death, disability or absence, the mate, or other chief officer of the vessel may, no doubt, succeed to the authority of the master in this as in other respects.[24]

9. Separation of Ship and Cargo before Sacrifice.—The liability of a cargo to contribute, in general average, in favor of the ship, does not continue after the cargo has been completely separated from the vessel, so as to leave no community of interest remaining.[25]

Ed. 584; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638; The Valencia, 165 U. S. 264, 269, 41 L. Ed. 710; The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 601, 42 L. Ed. 292.

Whether the master is considered as acting under an implied contract between the owners of the vessel and the shippers of the cargo, or as the agent of all from the necessity of the case, or as exercising a power and duty imposed upon him by the law as incident to his office—whatever may be considered the source of his authority—the power and the duty of determining what part of the common adventure shall be sacrificed for the safety of the rest, and when and how the sacrifice shall be made, appertain to the master of the vessel, magister navis, as the person intrusted with the command and the safety of the common adventure, and of all the interests comprised therein, for the benefit of all concerned, or to some one who, by the maritime law, acts under him, or succeeds to his authority. The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 601, 42 L. Ed. 292; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 400, 39 L. Ed. 742; The Valencia, 165 U. S. 264, 269, 41 L. Ed. 710.

"From the necessity of the case, the law imposes upon the master the duty, and clothes him with the power, to judge and determine at the time whether the circumstances of danger in such a case are or are not so great and pressing as to render a sacrifice of a portion of the associated interests indispensable for the common safety of the remainder. Standing upon the deck of the vessel, with a full knowledge of her strength and condition, and of the state of the elements which threaten a common destruction, he can best decide in the emergency what the necessities of the moment require to save the lives of those on board and the property intrusted to his care." Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 400, 39 L. Ed. 742; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

Consent of owner.—In former times when merchants voyaged with their wares, their consent was held necessary to a jettison; and the captain was also required to consult with his officers, or with some of his crew, then, perhaps, more nearly his equals than in later times. But, even then, the final decision rested with the captain; for, as Emerigon said: "The captain is master. He is obliged to take advice; but the law does not oblige him to submit himself blindly to that advice, if it is bad, or if, under the circumstances, it appears to be bad." Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 399, 39 L. Ed. 742.

At the present day, since voyages are longer, and merchants seldom go with their goods, there is the greater reason that upon the captain, selected for his skill and courage, and for his fitness to command the whole adventure, and to decide promptly and justly in cases of emergency, and better acquainted than any one else with the qualities and condition of the ship, and with the nature and stowage of her cargo, should rest the authority and the duty, in case of imminent peril, first taking such advice as he sees fit, to determine finally, so far as concerns the mutual relations of those interested in the maritime adventure, the time and the manner of sacrificing part of the adventure to secure the safety of the rest. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 399, 39 L. Ed. 742.

23. Consultation with officers.—Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 343, 10 L. Ed. 186; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 399, 39 L. Ed. 742.

"In the leading case of Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 343, 10 L. Ed. 186, this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Story, said: 'A consultation with the officers may be highly proper, in cases which admit of delay and deliberation, to repel the imputation of rashness and unnecessary standing by the master. But if the propriety and necessity of the act are otherwise sufficiently made out, there is an end of the substance of the objection. Indeed, in many, if not most, of the acts done on these melancholy occasions, there is little time for deliberation or consultation. What is to be done must often, in order to be successful, be done promptly and instantly by the master, upon his own judgment and responsibility.'" Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 399, 39 L. Ed. 742.

24. Death, disability or absence of master.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 401, 39 L. Ed. 742.

25. Where cargo and ship are separated. —McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155.

A ship was stranded near her port of destination, and the underwriters upon her cargo sent an agent to assist the master in getting her off. The master and agent made all proper efforts to do this, for two days; when not succeeding at all, and the water increasing in the vessel, they began to discharge the cargo in lighters, still making efforts to save the ship. This discharge of the cargo occupied four days; by which time the whole of it was

10. Particular Sacrifices Giving Rise to General Average—a. Loss or Damage to Ship—(1) In General.—Loss or damage to a ship voluntarily made in the course of a voyage to save the residue of the adventure from an impending peril, is a proper subject of general average.[26]

(2) Stranding—(a) Voluntary Stranding—aa. In General.—The voluntary stranding of a ship in case of imminent peril, made in order to preserve the ship, cargo and crew, is a general average loss, entitling the shipowner to general average contribution from the cargo.[27] The fact that the ship is totally taken off, and, with the exception of a very small fraction in the lower hold and not discovered, taken to the ship's agents, who subsequently delivered it to its consignees, they giving the usual average bond. By the time that the cargo was thus all got off, the vessel, not assisted by being lightened, was settling in the sand, with the tide ebbing and flowing through her as she lay. The agent considering her case hopeless, and the consignees of the ship having refused to authorize him to incur any further expense, now went away. On the next morning, and while the master was yet aboard, the underwriters on the vessel sent their agent, who got to work to float the vessel. Soon after the new agent came, the crew refused to do duty. The agent got new hands, and the crew went away. They were soon followed by the master, he leaving the vessel after the new agent had been in charge of her for four days. After six weeks' labor, and an expenditure of money somewhat exceeding her value when saved, the new agent succeeded in floating and rescuing the ship. The remnants of the cargo, in a damaged state, were delivered to its consignees. On a suit by the owners of the ship against the consignees of the cargo, for contribution in general average for the expenses incurred after the master went away; held, that the case was not one for contribution; there having been, as the court considered, no community of interest remaining between the ship and cargo, after the master, in the circumstances of the case, had left the ship. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155.

But the mere fact that the cargo is unladen, although it is done in part for the purpose of saving the goods, if it is also done for the purpose of lightening the vessel, and as a means of causing her to float, and of saving her from the common peril, will not necessarily divest the transaction of its character as an act performed for the joint benefit of the ship and cargo. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 370, 18 L. Ed. 155.

Where the whole adventure is saved by the master, as the agent of all concerned, the consignments of the cargo first unladed and stored in safety are not relieved from contributing towards the expenses of saving the residue, nor is the cargo, in that state of the case, relieved from contributing to the expenses of saving the ship, provided the ship and cargo were exposed to a common peril, and the whole adventure was saved by the master in his capacity as agent of all the interests, and by one continuous series of measures. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 371, 18 L. Ed. 155.

26. Loss or damage to ship in general.—McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281.

The doctrine applies where the ship is a total loss. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

27. Voluntary stranding.—Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 232, 19 L. Ed. 638; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 368, 18 L. Ed. 155; Allen v. Newberry, 21 How. 244, 247, 16 L. Ed. 110; Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 12 L. Ed. 890.

Where the ship is voluntarily run ashore to avoid capture, foundering, or shipwreck, and she is afterwards recovered so as to be able to perform her voyage, the loss resulting from the stranding is to be made good by general average contribution, as such a claim is clearly within the rule that whatever is sacrificed for the common benefit of the associated interests shall be made good by all the interests exposed to the common peril which were saved from the common danger by the sacrifice. Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 117, 20 L. Ed. 281; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 232, 19 L. Ed. 638; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

It was a proper case for contribution in general average for the loss of a vessel where there was an imminent peril of being driven on a rocky and dangerous part of the coast, when the vessel would have been inevitably wrecked, with loss of ship, cargo, and crew, and this immediate peril was avoided by voluntarily stranding the vessel on a less rocky and dangerous part of the coast, whereby the cargo and crew were saved uninjured. Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417.

The brig Hope, with a cargo, bound, from Alexandria, in the District of Columbia, for Barbadoes, insured in Alexandria, was assailed, while standing down the Chesapeake Bay, by a storm, which lost,[28] or that she is in a better condition after stranding than she would have been had she been wrecked or sunk,[29] does not affect the right of the owner to general average.

bb. What Constitutes Voluntary Stranding.—To constitute a voluntary stranding of a vessel it is not necessary that there should have been a previous intention to destroy or injure the vessel, nor is such intention supposed to exist; it is sufficient that the vessel was selected to suffer the common peril in the place of the whole of the associated interests, in order that the remainder might be saved.[30] soon after blew almost to a hurricane; the vessel was steered towards a point in the shore, for safety, and was anchored in three fathoms water; the sails were furled, and all efforts were made, by using the cables and anchors, to prevent her going on shore; the gale increased, the brig broke adrift, and dragged three miles; the windlass was ripped up, the chain-cable parted, and the vessel commenced drifting again, the whole scope of both cables being paid out; the brig then brought up, below Craney Island, in two and a half fathoms water; where she thumped or struck on the shoals on a bank, and her head swinging round, brought her broadside to the sea. The master, finding no possible means of saving the vessel and cargo, and preserving the lives of the crew, slipped her cables, and ran her on shore, for the safety of the crew, and preservation of the vessel and cargo; the vessel was run far up on a bank, where, after the storm, she was left high and dry, and it was found impossible to get her off. The lives of all the persons were saved; the whole cargo, of the value of $5,335, insured for $4,920, was taken out safely, and the vessel, her tackle, etc., were sold for $256. Held, that the insurers of the cargo were liable for general average. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

In a case of stranding the shipowners are entitled to recover in general average only those expenses which were caused by stranding the ship, not including any occasioned by damage to the ship through the swelling of the cargo (linseed, which water swells) caused by water which entered through the holes in the bows; but if the ship was also injured by such stranding and by lying on an uneven bottom, her owners are entitled to recover the expenses for repairing such injuries, by way of general average, and it is for the jury to determine from the evidence what such repairs amount to. Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281.

28. Ship a total loss.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 232, 19 L. Ed. 638; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

"It is settled law in this court that the case is one for general average, although the ship was totally lost, if the stranding was voluntary and was designed for the common safety, and it appears that the act of stranding resulted in saving the cargo." Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 232, 19 L. Ed. 638; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

29. Where stranding benefits ship.—Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 306, 13 L. Ed. 417.

30. What constitutes voluntary stranding.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

Where a ship and cargo are exposed at a particular place to a common peril of sinking, and becoming submerged in deep water, and the expense of raising and saving them from that place would be greater than if stranded in shoal water, and the master, to save them from such increased expenses, runs the ship on flats near by and strands her in shoal water, and thereby increases the peril to the ship and diminishes the damages and expenses of saving her and the cargo, then there is a "voluntary stranding" within the meaning of the law, and a case entitling the owners of the vessel to recover, as general average, their just proportion of such damages and expenses. Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281.

The stranding is voluntary whenever the will of man does in some degree contribute thereto, though the existence of the particular reef or bank on which the vessel grounds was not before known to the master, and though he did not intend to strand the vessel thereon; provided it sufficiently appear that in making the exposure of the vessel he was aware that stranding was the chief risk incurred by him, and that it was not wholly unexpected by him. Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

Where the reef where the vessel grounded was not visible at the time and was unknown to the master, but in undertaking to run into the bay the master knew that the chief risk he had to encounter was the stranding of the ship, and the precautions which he took to guard against that danger showed to the entire satisfaction of the court that the disaster was not altogether unexpected as it appeared that as the ship advanced the lead was constantly employed, showing eight fathoms at first, then seven, then six only, and so on, the depth continuing to diminish at each throw of the lead until the ship ground and remained fast, it was held that the stranding was a voluntary act. Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 232, 19 L. Ed. 638.

(b) Involuntary Stranding—aa. In General.—In case of involuntary stranding where the ship and cargo are jointly exposed to a common peril, and are in imminent danger of being wholly lost, the expenses of saving the ship and cargo are a proper subject of joint and ratable contribution in general average by vessel, freight, and cargo, provided the vessel and cargo are saved by the same series of measures during the continuance of the common peril which created the joint necessity for the expenses.[31]

bb. Under the Harter Act.—The Harter Act does not entitle the owner of a vessel which has been stranded by the negligence of those in charge of her to general average, where, subsequently to the stranding, sacrifices are made in order to save the vessel and cargo.[32]

(3) Cutting Away Masts and Spars.—The cutting away of masts and spars to save the ship and cargo presents a case of general average.[33]

(4) Scuttling Ship to Extinguish Fire.—Whatever may be the rule as to the right of a shipowner to general average where the ship is voluntarily scuttled by the master and crew in order to extinguish a fire, it is settled that he is not entitled to general average contribution from the cargo, where the ship is scuttled by the port authorities.[34]

31. Involuntary stranding.—McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 365, 18 L. Ed. 155.

If the ship is got off without discharging the cargo, or by discharging only a part of it, then the whole expense is general average, unless the vessel needs repairs; but if she needs repairs, those are particular average. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 367, 18 L. Ed. 155.

Although the stranded vessel may not float, as a consequence of the unloading of the goods, still she may be so lightened by the operation, that the usual appliances at hand may be amply sufficient to enable the master to rescue the vessel without much expense or delay, and put her in a condition to receive back the cargo and transport it to the port of destination; and, in the case supposed, it cannot be doubted that the expense of saving the vessel, as well as the expense of preserving and reloading the cargo, would be the proper subject of general contribution. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 368, 18 L. Ed. 155.

So, where the cargo consists of various consignments, and the vessel is stranded in the harbor of the port of destination, it will seldom or never happen that all the consignments will be delivered at the same time. On the contrary, some of necessity will be delivered before others; and yet, if the unlading of the cargo has the effect to make the vessel float, and the whole adventure is saved by one continued, unremitted operation, under the directions of the master, as the agent of all concerned, it would seem that the case was one falling directly within the equitable principle of general average, which requires that all the interests shall contribute for the expenses incurred to save the whole adventure from common peril. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 368, 18 L. Ed. 155.

32. Under the Harter Act.—The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. Ed. 130.

Where the owner of the vessel has complied with all of the provisions of the Harter Act, and the vessel is stranded by the negligence of those in charge of her, and subsequently sacrifices are made in order to save the vessel and cargo, the owner of the ship is not entitled to general average contribution. The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. Ed. 130.

It was not the intention of the Harter Act to allow a shipowner to share in the benefits of the general average contribution to meet loss occasioned by faults in the navigation and management of the ship. The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. Ed. 130.

33. Cutting away masts and spars.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 393, 39 L. Ed. 742; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

34. Scuttling ship to extinguish fire.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 420, 39 L. Ed. 742.

The part of the cargo removed before scuttling by port authorities, in order to extinguish fire, need not contribute to the loss sustained by the ship. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 39 L. Ed. 742.

The destruction of a ship by the act of the municipal authorities of a port is not a voluntary sacrifice of part of a maritime adventure for the safety of the rest of that adventure, made, according to the maritime law, by the owners of vessel or cargo, or by the master as the agent and representative of both. It is a compulsory sacrifice, made by the paramount authority of public officers deriving their powers from the municipal law, and the municipal law only; and therefore neither gives any right of action, or of contribution, against the owners of property benefited by the sacrifice, but not included in the maritime adventure, nor yet any right of contribution as between the owners of the different interests included in that adventure. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 420, 39 L. Ed. 742.

(5) Money or Salvage Paid to Redeem Captured Ship.—Money paid to redeem a captured ship and cargo,[35] or decreed to recaptors by way of salvage,[36] are subjects of general average.

b. Loss or Damage to Cargo—(1) In General.—Loss or damage to cargo voluntarily sustained in the course of the voyage to save the residue of the adventure from impending peril is a proper subject of general average.[37]

(2) Jettison.—Where a lawful jettison of cargo is made in order to lighten a ship, and the ship ultimately arrives at her destination in safety, the owner of the cargo jettisoned is entitled to general average contribution against the ship and the residue of the cargo,[38] for which he has a maritime lien.[39] The cargo owner's right to general average, in such case, is not affected by the fact that the cargo jettisoned had a better chance of being saved than if it had not been cast away.[40]

35. Redemption of captured ship and cargo.—Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908.

36. Salvage paid to recaptors.—Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908.

37. Loss or damage to cargo in general.—McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

38. Jettison.—Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584; Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. 459, 1 L. Ed. 908; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 39 L. Ed. 742; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 229, 19 L. Ed. 638; Bags of Linseed, 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 12 L. Ed. 890; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417; Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58.

The authority to make a jettison of cargo is derived from the instant necessity, incapable of being provided for save by a sacrifice of part of what is committed to the master's care, and the presumed consent of the owners of all the subjects at risk, that the loss shall become a charge upon what is benefited by the sacrifice. Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 170, 15 L. Ed. 584.

"Though the sacrifice of part of the cargo at sea cannot be considered a loan, it is a forced appropriation of it to the general benefit of those engaged in a common adventure, under a contract of affreightment; and such use of the property of one, for the benefit of others, creates a charge on what was thus saved, for what may fairly be termed the price of that safety. (Abbott on Shipping, part 4, ch 10, § 6.)" Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 170, 15 L. Ed. 584.

Goods jettisoned from the deck are not paid for in general average, but contribute if not thrown over. The reason for this is that as such goods cannot but embarrass the working of the ship, the presumption is that they have been jettisoned before a full necessity for jettison of cargo arose, and only because they hindered and confused the manœuvres of the vessel. Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. 100, 113, 15 L. Ed. 58.

Liability of ship for negligence in making jettison.—See the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

Jettison as "peril of sea" in bill of lading.—See the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

39. Owner of cargo has lien for average.—Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

As to admiralty jurisdiction of suits to enforce liens, see the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 147.

"When a lawful jettison of cargo is made, and the vessel and its remaining cargo are thereby relieved from the impending peril, and ultimately arrive in the port of destination, though the shipper has not a lien on the vessel for the value of his merchandise jettisoned, he has a lien for that part of its value which the vessel and its freight are bound to contribute towards his indemnity for the sacrifice which has been made for the common benefit. And this lien on the vessel is a maritime lien, operating by the maritime law as a hypothecation of the vessel, and capable of being enforced by proceedings in rem." Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 168, 15 L. Ed. 584.

40. Where cargo jettisoned is safer than without jettison.—Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 306, 13 L. Ed. 417.

If a cargo of cotton, about to be captured or sunk, be thrown overboard in part or in whole, and the ship thus saved, the fact that the cotton floated to the shore and was saved, and therefore was in a better condition by being cast away than if it had remained to be captured or sunk, cannot affect its right to contribution, though it may diminish its amount. The loss or damage arising from its assuming the peril, that the ship may escape, may be truly said to be the real "sacrifice," in the popular use of the phrase. Its value is not measured by its hopes of safety, for by the hypothesis it had none; but its right to contribution is founded on its voluntary assumption to run all the risk, or bear the brunt, that the remainder may be saved from the common peril.

(3) Damage by Scuttling Ship to Extinguish Fire.—When a ship is on fire, damage caused to goods in the hold by water, either poured down from above, or let in by scuttling the ship, by the master, or under his order and direction, for the purpose of saving ship and cargo, is a subject of general average.[41]

C. Extraordinary Expenses Due to Disaster—1. In General.—Extraordinary expenses incurred for the joint benefit of both ship and cargo, which became necessary in consequence of a common peril, are usually regarded as a proper subject of general average.[42]

2. Repairs.—Repairs necessary to remove the inability of a ship to proceed on her voyage are a proper subject of general average;[43] but expenses for repairs, beyond what is reasonably necessary for that purpose, are not to be contributed for, since it is the duty of the owners, except in case of disaster, to keep the ship in a seaworthy condition.[44]

3. Wages and Provisions of Master and Crew.—The wages and provisions of the master and crew of a vessel, which has sustained a general average loss, during the time the vessel is undergoing repairs, unless it appears that proper diligence was not used in making the repairs, are the proper subjects of general average.[45]

Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 306, 13 L. Ed. 417.

41. Damage by water let in to extinguish fire.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 411, 39 L. Ed. 742, citing Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 340, 10 L. Ed. 186.

42. Extraordinary expenses.—McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. Ed. 638; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281.

It is the duty of the master to continue the voyage, after stranding, if possible. Hence, he may employ other ships or vessels to assist him in getting off, and the expense of such employment is a proper subject of general average. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 18 L. Ed. 155.

"Temporary repairs of damages arising from extraordinary perils of the sea, made at some intermediate port, for the purpose of prosecuting the voyage, if the damage to the ship was of a character to disable her and to interrupt the voyage, are the proper object of general average. Phillips on Ins., 5th Ed., § 1300." Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 407, 23 L. Ed. 613.

43. Repairs necessary to enable ship to continue voyage.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 117, 20 L. Ed. 281; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

Repairs cannot be made by the master unless he has means or credit; and if he has neither, and his situation is such that he cannot communicate with the owners, he may sell a part of the cargo for that purpose if it is necessary for him to do so in order to raise the means to make the repairs. Sacrifices made to raise such means are the subject of general average, and the rule is the same whether the sacrifice was made by a sale of a part of the cargo or by the payment of marine interest. Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

"Where the disaster occurs in the course of the voyage, and the ship is disabled, the necessary expenses to refit her to go forward create an equity to support such a claim, just as strong as a sacrifice made to escape such a peril, if it appears that the cargo was saved, and that the expenses incurred enabled the master to prosecute the voyage to a successful termination. * * * McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 367, 18 L. Ed. 155; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417." Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 405, 23 L. Ed. 613.

44. Repairs not made necessary by disaster.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 117, 20 L. Ed. 281; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

Necessary repairs for the ship, except to the extent that such repairs are required to replace such parts of the ship as were sacrificed to save the associated interests, or to refit the ship to enable her safely to resume the voyage, are not to be included as general average by the adjuster. Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281.

Repairs rendered necessary to the vessel by the ordinary perils of navigation, to enable her to prosecute her voyage to her port of destination, it is admitted, must be borne by the owners of the vessel. Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 117, 20 L. Ed. 281.

If the ship was in need of repairs before the disaster, such repairs are particular average. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 367, 18 L. Ed. 155.

45. Wages and provisions of master and crew.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 236, 19 L. Ed. 638; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397,

4. Port of Refuge Expenses.—Where a disaster occurs at sea, and the vessel bears away to a port of refuge, the extraordinary expenses subsequently incurred, including those of getting to the port of refuge as well as those incurred after arrival, are the proper subjects of general average.[46]

IV. Interests Liable to Contribute.

It is only those interests which are engaged in the common adventure, and which are saved by the sacrifice of a part for the benefit of the whole that are liable to make a general contribution.[47] If the ship is injured or lost, and the cargo saved, the cargo contributes to the ship,[48] and if the cargo is lost, and 23 L. Ed. 613; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417.

In such case the wages and provisions of the officers and crew are general average, from the time the disaster occurs until the ship resumes her voyage. Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 407, 23 L. Ed. 613; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 236, 19 L. Ed. 638.

The wages and provisions of the officers and crew during the consequent and necessary interruption of the voyage, occasioned by the disaster, are a proper charge for such proportionate contribution, wholly irrespective of the question, whether the ship bore away for repairs to a port of refuge outside of the regular course of the port where the disaster occurred. Masters may well consult convenience and economy in selecting the port for making repairs; and if, in the particular case, the master exercises good judgment in making the selection, no interested party will have any right to complain. Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 407, 23 L. Ed. 613.

The crew are entitled to wages after the ship is stranded, while they are employed in the saving of the cargo. Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417.

A vessel bound to the United States, having loaded at one of the guano islands where clearances were not granted, was on her way to Callao for one, when she was badly injured by a collision with another vessel. Proceeding in distress to that, the nearest port, she came to anchor at the anchorage of vessels calling at that port for clearances. A survey revealed the fact that her damaged condition was such as to require her to be unladen and extensively repaired before prosecuting her voyage. She was, therefore, removed to a hulk nearer the pier, where most of her cargo was discharged, and thence to a dock for repairs. After they were finished, she was, with reasonable despatch, reloaded, and completed her voyage. Before the delivery of her cargo, the consignees gave an average bond, whereby they agreed to pay the owner of the ship their respective proportions of the expenses and charges incurred by him in consequence of such collision, as soon as the average should be adjusted conformably to law and the usages of the port of New York. Held, that as the services of her crew were necessary for her preservation and safety in hauling her to and from the hulk for unloading and reloading, and in moving her while in dock undergoing repairs, their wages and provisions, during the time they were so employed, were properly allowed in general average. Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613.

46. Port of refuge expenses.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 236, 19 L. Ed. 638; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613.

It seems that the bearing away of the ship marks the time from which to compute the extraordinary expenses incurred in refitting the ship to prosecute the voyage. Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 408, 23 L. Ed. 613; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 236, 19 L. Ed. 638.

Surveys, port charges, the hire of anchors, cables, boats, and other necessary apparatus, for temporary purposes in making the repairs, are all to be taken into the account as well as the expenses of unloading, warehousing, and reloading the cargo after the repairs are completed. Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 236, 19 L. Ed. 638.

Towage and pumping expenses.—"Towing the ship into port, and extra expenses necessarily incurred in pumping to keep her afloat until the leaks can be stopped, are to be included in the adjustment." Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 236, 19 L. Ed. 638.

Expenses of agent sent by owner to port of refuge to assist.—An adjustment of the amount paid for the services, board, traveling and incidental expenses of an agent sent by the owner of the ship, in good faith, to the port of refuge to advise and assist the master, for the benefit of the ship and cargo, is properly allowed as general average. Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613.

47. Interests liable to contribute.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 411, 39 L. Ed. 742; The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 602, 42 L. Ed. 292.

48. Contribution by cargo.—Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 23 L. Ed. 613; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 307, 13 L. Ed. 417; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

the ship,[49] and freight[50] saved, both contribute to the cargo. The interest of strangers is not liable to contribute.[51] No interest is liable to contribute for any general average or expenses incurred subsequently to its ceasing to be at risk.[52] Property belonging to the government is liable for general average contribution in all respects as private property.[53]

V. Interests or Persons Entitled to Contribution.

The interests of strangers to the adventure are not to be contributed for by general average.[54] If the ship is lost or damaged and the cargo saved, the ship is entitled to contribution from the cargo,[55] and the freight also is entitled to have contribution from the cargo.[56] And if the cargo is lost or damaged and the ship saved, the cargo is entitled to contribution from the ship and freight.[57]

VI. Lien for General Average.

Upon a voluntary sacrifice of a part of the adventure, and a consequent escape of the rest from imminent peril, the owner of the interests sacrificed has a maritime lien on those which are saved.[58] The lien of the shipowner upon the 49. Contribution by ship.—Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 411, 23 L. Ed. 613; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 307, 13 L. Ed. 417; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

50. Contribution by freight.—Freight, equally with the ship and cargo, contributes to the payment of a general average loss. Jones v. Insurance Co., 4 Dall. 246, 248, 1 L. Ed. 819.

51. Interest of strangers does not contribute.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 411, 39 L. Ed. 742.

52. Interest not subject to peril or risk.—McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 368, 18 L. Ed. 155.

53. Government property.—The Davis, 10 Wall. 15, 19, 19 L. Ed. 875.

54. Interests of stranger.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 411, 39 L. Ed. 742; The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 602, 42 L. Ed. 292.

There can be no general average, unless there has been a voluntary and successful sacrifice of part of the maritime adventure made for the benefit of the whole adventure, and for no other purpose, and by order of the owners of all the interests included in the common adventure, or the authorized representative of all of them. The safety of any property, on land or water, not included in that adventure, can neither be an object of the sacrifice, nor a subject of the contribution. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 403, 39 L. Ed. 742; The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 602, 42 L. Ed. 292.

The sacrifice must be made solely for the benefit of the common adventure, and the interests of strangers to that adventure neither contribute nor are contributed for. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 411, 39 L. Ed. 742.

55. Right of ship to contribution from cargo.—Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417.

56. Right of freight to contribution.—Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

The freight of a vessel, totally lost, by being run on shore for her preservation and that of the crew and cargo, ought to be allowed to the owner of the vessel, as a subject of general average, the cargo of the vessel having been saved by the stranding. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. Ed. 186.

57. Right of cargo to contribution.—Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584; Jones v. Insurance Co., 4 Dall. 246, 248, 1 L. Ed. 819; Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417.

58. Lien.—Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 12 L. Ed. 890; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 400, 39 L. Ed. 742; Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 405, 23 L. Ed. 613; Bags of Linseed, 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35.

"Whatever may be the doctrine in the courts on the continent of Europe, where the civil law is established, it has been decided in this court that the maritime lien for a general average in a case of jettison, and the lien for freight, depend upon the possession of the goods, and arise from the right to retain them until the amount of the lien is paid. Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 12 L. Ed. 890; Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 171, 15 L. Ed. 584." Bags of Linseed, 1 Black 108, 113, 17 L. Ed. 35.

The lien is reciprocal existing in favor of the vessel when a sacrifice is made of a part or the whole of its value, for preservation of the cargo, and in favor of the cargo when sacrifice is made of the cargo or a part thereof for the preservation of the vessel. Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 169, 15 L. Ed. 584.

The owner of cargo jettisoned has a maritime lien on the vessel for the contributory share due from the vessel on an adjustment of the general average, which lien may be enforced by a proceeding in cargo for general average contribution is, however, dependent upon possession of the goods and is lost when they are delivered to the owner or consignee.[59]

VII. Adjustment and Collection.

A. Adjustment—1. PLACE OF ADJUSTMENT.—The port of destination, or delivery of the cargo, is the port where the average is to be adjusted.[60]

2. VALUATION OF SHIP.—Strictly speaking, the rule, in valuing a ship for purposes of general average, is that her value incident to the injuries received controls, but as this requirement can seldom be met, her value at the port of departure with deductions for wear and tear, or her value at the port of her destination, is to be taken into consideration.[61] The valuation of the ship in a policy of insurance at the port of departure is competent evidence.[62]

3. VALUATION OF CARGO.—Where the cargo was taken out of the stranded vessel, placed in another one, and the voyage thus continued to the home port, the contribution should be assessed on the value of the cargo at the home port.[63]

4. EXPENSES OF ADJUSTMENT.—The expenses of an ex parte adjustment made by the charterers of a ship at the port of delivery are not chargeable in admiralty on the ship or freight, unless the results were adopted and used in the court below by the commissioner who stated the adjustment made under order of the court.[64]

B. Commissions for Collecting Average.—According to the usage and custom of merchants and average brokers, a commission of two and a half per cent is property allowed for the collection of general average.[65]

VIII. General Average Bonds.

Where the owners of the property saved by a general average sacrifice give bond for the release of their property, they are liable thereon for the amount allowed by the adjusters, with interest from the date of the adjustment.[66]

IX. Jurisdiction of Suits for General Average.

See the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 147.

rem in the admiralty. Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

59. Shipowner's lien dependent on possession.—Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 12 L. Ed. 890; Bags of Linseed, 1 Black 108, 113, 17 L. Ed. 35. See, also, Dupont De Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

Although the consignee is liable on an implied promise, there is no lien on the goods in his hands in favor of the shipowner. Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 731, 12 L. Ed. 890.

60. Place of adjustment.—Hobson v. Lord, 92 U. S. 397, 411, 23 L. Ed. 613.

61. Valuation of ship.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

As a general rule, the value of the ship for contribution, where she has received no extraordinary injuries during the voyage, and has not been repaired on that account, is her value at the time of her arrival at the termination of the voyage, but if she met with damage before she arrived, by perils of the sea, and had been repaired, then the value to be assumed in the adjustment is her worth before such repairs were made. Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 235, 19 L. Ed. 638.

62. Valuation in insurance policy.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

63. Valuation of cargo.—Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417.

64. Expenses of adjustment.—Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638.

65. Commission for collecting average.—Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 270, 13 L. Ed. 417.

66. General average bond.—Where the owners of the cargo enter, after a case of stranding, into "an average bond" whereby they agree to pay as consignees of cargo, what should be found to be due from them on their share of the cargo, for general average losses and expenses arising out of the transaction, provided such losses and expenses should be stated and apportioned in accordance with the established usage and laws of New York in similar cases, by certain average adjusters named, then if in respect to the contributory value of freight, the adjustment, as made up by the average adjusters, is according to the usage and custom of New York, and no more has been allowed for damages to the ship than was attributable to the stranding, in that case the shipowners are entitled to the amount stated in the average adjustment to be due from the owners of the cargo as their general average contribution, with interest from the date of the adjustment. Fowler v. Rathbones, 12 Wall. 102, 20 L. Ed. 281.

GENERAL COURT.—The legislative body of Massachusetts is called the general court.[1]

GENERAL CUSTOM.—See the title USAGES AND CUSTOMS.

GENERAL DEPOSIT.—See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 9.

GENERAL ISSUE.—See, generally, the title PLEADING. See, also, the various particular titles.

GENERAL MANAGER.—See the title OFFICERS AND AGENTS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

GENERAL PURPOSES.—See note 2.

GENERAL TAXES.—See note 3.

GENERAL WARRANTY.—See the titles COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 12; WARRANTY.

GENUINE.—See note 4.

GEOGRAPHICAL FACTS.—See the title JUDICIAL NOTICE.

GEORGIA.—See the titles ALIENS, vol. 2, p. 228; BOUNDARIES, vol. 3, p. 495; COMMON LAW, vol. 3, p. 963.

GIFT IN PAYMENT.—See note 5.

1. Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 666, 22 L. Ed. 455.

2. General purposes.—In the charter of a municipal corporation, the limiting of the power to borrow money on the credit of the city to general purposes limits it to the power to borrow money for ordinary governmental purposes, such as are generally carried out with revenues derived from taxation; and the presumption is that the grant of the power was intended to confer the right to borrow money in anticipation of the receipt of revenue taxes, and not to plunge the municipal corporation into a debt on which interest must be paid at the rate of ten per centum per annum, semiannually, for at least ten years. Brenham v. German American Bank, 144 U. S. 173, 182, 36 L. Ed. 390. See, generally, the titles MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

3. General taxes or taxes distinguished from special assessments. See Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Decatur, 147 U. S. 190, 197, 37 L. Ed. 132. See, also, the titles SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS; TAXATION.

4. Genuine.—Where a citizen of one state sells to the citizen of another warrants issued on a country treasurer, a guaranty that they were "genuine and regularly issued" was held to import that the warrants were not, in a suit brought against the county, subject to any defense founded upon a want of legal form in the signatures or seals; and not merely that they were not forgeries, that they were not issued without consideration and that they were ordered by the proper officers. Smeltzer v. White, 92 U. S. 390, 23 L. Ed. 508. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

5. Gift in payment.—"Giving in payment, as defined in the jurisprudence of Louisiana, is an act by which a debtor gives a thing to the creditor who is willing to receive it in payment of a sum which is due; and the decision is that it differs from the ordinary contract of sale in this, that the latter is perfect by the mere consent of the parties, even before the delivery, while the giving in payment is made only by delivery. Code 1824, arts. 2625, 2626. And the Code of 1870 employs the same exact words." Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291, 308, 24 L. Ed. 731.

GIFTS.

BY ERNEST P. STEINHAUER.

I. Inter Vivos, 564.

A. Motive for Gift, 564.
B. Between Parent and Child, 564.
C. Between Husband and Wife, 564.
D. Louisiana Statutes, 564.
E. Delivery, 565.
F. Equitable Jurisdiction, 565.

II. Mortis Causa, 565.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles HUSBAND AND WIFE; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT; SLAVERY AND INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; WILLS.

I. Inter Vivos.

A. Motive for Gift.—The motive with which a gift is made, whether good or bad, does not affect its validity or the question of jurisdiction.[1]

B. Between Parent and Child.—In the case of a child's gift of its property to a parent, the circumstances attending the transaction should be vigilantly and carefully scrutinized by the court, in order to ascertain whether there has been undue influence in procuring it; but it cannot be deemed prima facie void; the presumption is in favor of its validity; and, in order to set it aside, the court must be satisfied that it was not the voluntary act of the donor.[2] The same rule as to the burden of proof applies with equal, if not greater force to the case of a gift from a parent to a child, even if the effect of the gift is to confer upon a child, with whom the parent makes his home and is in peculiarly close relations, a larger share of the parent's estate than will be received by other children or grandchildren.[3]

C. Between Husband and Wife.—The statute law of Arkansas has not changed the common-law rule, that a husband cannot legally make a gift to his wife during coverture.[4]

D. Louisiana Statutes.—By the Louisiana statutes a donation inter vivos is void if the donor reserves the usufruct of the land to himself, during his life.[5]

1. Motive for gift.—South Dakota v. North Carolina, 192 U. S. 286, 310, 48 L. Ed. 448.

2. Between parent and child.—Towson v. Moore, 173 U. S. 17, 24, 43 L. Ed. 593. See, generally, the titles PARENT AND CHILD; UNDUE INFLUENCE.

3. Towson v. Moore, 173 U. S. 17, 24, 43 L. Ed. 593.

The procuring of a paper, containing the unusual and suspicious declaration that the gift of certain bonds to a daughter was made "voluntarily, without suggestion from any one," together with long concealment of the paper from the relatives of the donor, is not evidence of an intent to back up a fraudulent transaction, where the reason for the execution of the paper was that, three or four years before, the mother of the plaintiff had made an unfounded charge that the daughter had by undue influence procured the insertion of certain legacies to herself and her sister in their father's will. Towson v. Moore, 173 U. S. 17, 25, 43 L. Ed. 593.

It is to be expected that a parent will favor the child who stands by him, and give to him, rather than to the other, his property; to defeat a conveyance under those circumstances, something more than the natural influence springing from such relationship must be shown. Mackall v. Mackall, 135 U. S. 167, 172, 34 L. Ed. 84.

4. Between husband and wife.—Kitchen v. Bedford, 13 Wall. 413, 20 L. Ed. 637. See, generally, the title HUSBAND AND WIFE.

5. Louisiana statutes.—Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 646, 28 L. Ed. 547.

"The Civil Code, article 1510, divides donations inter vivos into three kinds—the purely gratuitous; the onerous, which is burthened with charges; and the remunerative, of which the object is to recompense services rendered. By article

E. Delivery.—Certificate of Deposit.—"A certificate of deposit is a subsisting chose in action and represents the fund it describes, as in cases of notes, bonds, and other securities, so that a delivery of it, as a gift, constitutes an equitable assignment of the money for which it calls."[6]

Under Mississippi Statute.—Under the Mississippi statute of frauds, a parol contract of sale, void for nondelivery, cannot be valid as a gift, because nondelivery is as fatal to such a gift as to the agreement of sale.[7]

F. Equitable Jurisdiction.—In Case of Fraud.—A court of equity will interfere in a case of fraud.[8]

When Improvements Have Been Made—Statute of Frauds.—Equity protects a parol gift of land equally with a parol agreement to sell it, if accompanied by possession, and the donee, induced by the promise to give it, has made valuable improvements on the property.[9] And this is particularly true where the donor stipulates that the expenditures shall be made, and by doing this makes it the consideration or condition of the gift.[10]

II. Mortis Causa.

"A donatio mortis causa must be completely executed,[11] precisely as required in the case of gifts inter vivos, subject to be divested by the happening of any of the conditions subsequent,[12] that is, upon actual revocation by the donor, or 1513 it is declared that 'the rules peculiar to donations inter vivos do not apply to onerous and remunerative donations, except when the value of the object given exceeds by one-half that of the charges, or of the services.'" Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 648, 28 L. Ed. 547.

6. Certificate of deposit.—Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 614, 27 L. Ed. 500. See, generally, the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 11.

7. Under Mississippi statute.—Mahan v. United States, 16 Wall. 143, 147, 21 L. Ed. 307. See, generally, the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472.

8. In case of fraud.—"While a man in the full possession of his faculties and under no duress may give away his property, and equity will not recall the gift, yet it looks with careful scrutiny upon all transactions between trustee and beneficiary, and if it appears that the trustee has taken any advantage of the situation of the beneficiary, and has obtained from him, even for only the benefit of other beneficiaries, large property without a consideration, it will refuse to uphold the transaction thus accomplished." Adams v. Cowen, 177 U. S. 471, 484, 44 L. Ed. 851.

But a court of equity will not interfere between a donee of land, by deed, and a devisee under a will of the donor, in a case where there is no fraud. Viers v. Montgomery, 4 Cranch 177, 2 L. Ed. 587.

9. When improvements have been made.—Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 19 L. Ed. 590.

A party who receives a parol gift of real estate, enters into possession and expends money in improvements thereon, presents equitable considerations which will uphold a decree establishing a subsequent conveyance as a confirmation of his equitable title. Mackall v. Mackall, 135 U. S. 167, 175, 34 L. Ed. 84.

10. Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 19 L. Ed. 590.

The above principle applied in the case of an antenuptial parol promise, by a father, to give to a lady about to marry his son (an improvident person), a lot of ground, she promising at the time to lay out her own money in building a house upon it, for the benefit of herself and family; and where possession was delivered and the house was to be built, but the father refused to convey the lot. Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 19 L. Ed. 590.

In case of an alleged contract, of this kind, by a father, reasonable certainty as to the fact and terms of it is all that equity requires. Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 19 L. Ed. 590.

The breach of such a contract is not to be compensated by damages, nor is the purpose of the contract so answered. It is a case for specific performance. Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1, 19 L. Ed. 590.

11. Mortis causa.—Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 610, 27 L. Ed. 500.

"If the gift does not take effect as an executed and complete transfer to the donee of possession and title, either legal or equitable, during the life of the donor, it is a testamentary disposition, good only if made and proved as a will." Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 610, 27 L. Ed. 500.

12. Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 610, 27 L. Ed. 500.

Certificate of deposit.—The delivery of a certificate of deposit, upon which there is an endorsement ordering the bank to pay the donee the money called for by the certificate, upon the death of the donor, cannot be valid as a donatio mortis causa. Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 615, 27 L. Ed. 500.

"It cannot be said that the condition in the indorsement, which forbade payment until the donor's death, was merely the by the donor's surviving the apprehended peril,[13] or outliving the donee, or by the occurrence of a deficiency of assets necessary to pay the debts of the deceased donor. These conditions are the only qualifications that distinguish gifts mortis causa and inter vivos."[14]

GIFTS MORTIS CAUSA.—See the title GIFTS, ante, p. 564.

GIVING AWAY.—See, generally, the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

GLASS.—See note 1.

GLEBE LANDS.—See the title RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

GOOD.—As to certification of a check that it is good, see the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 35.

GOOD CONSIDERATION.—Good consideration is equivalent to "valuable consideration." See Hodgson v. Butts, 3 Cranch 140, 2 L. Ed. 391. And see, generally, the title FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, ante, p. 451.

GOOD FAITH.—As to the holder of a negotiable instrument in good faith, see the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 297. As to a claim of title to lands made in good faith, see the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION. As to improvements, see the titles EJECTMENT, vol. 5, p. 718; IMPROVEMENTS.

GOOD HEALTH.—See Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Union Trust Co., 112 U. S. 250, 28 L. Ed. 708. See, also, the title LIFE INSURANCE.

GOOD RIGHT TO CONVEY.—See the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 13.

GOODS.—See ARTICLES, vol. 2, p. 545. See note 2.

GOODS SOLD AND DELIVERED.—See the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 650.

condition attached by the law to every such gift. Because the condition, which inheres in the gift mortis causa, is a subsequent condition, that the subject of the gift shall be returned if the gift fails by revocation; in the meantime the gift is executed, the title has vested, the dominion and control of the donor has passed to the donee. While here, the condition annexed by the donor to his gift is a condition precedent, which must happen before it becomes a gift, and, as the contingency contemplated is the donor's death, the gift cannot be executed in his lifetime, and, consequently, can never take effect." Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 616, 27 L. Ed. 500.

13. Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 610, 27 L. Ed. 500.

Civil code of Louisiana.—"Article 1455 of the civil code of Louisiana defines a donation mortis causa to be an act to take effect when the donor shall no longer exist." Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 646, 28 L. Ed. 547.

A donation to take effect at the death of the donor, so far as it is gratuitous, is a donation mortis causa, which by the civil code of Louisiana, article 1563, cannot be made otherwise than by will and testament. Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 646, 28 L. Ed. 547.

14. Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 610, 27 L. Ed. 500.

1. Glass cut.—See Binns v. Lawrence, 12 How. 9, 18, 13 L. Ed. 871.

2. Goods.—In Dobbins v. Erie County, 16 Pet. 435, 446, 10 L. Ed. 1022, the court says: "Taxes are never assessed, unless it be a capitation tax, upon persons, as persons, but upon them on account of their goods, and the profits made upon professions, trades and occupations. They are so imposed, because public revenue can only be supplied by assessments upon the goods of individuals—'comprehending under the word goods, all the estate and effects which every one hath, of whatsoever sort they be; taxes regard the persons of men, only because of their goods.'"

Money.—In Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 613, 46 L. Ed. 713, the court said: "The term 'goods' is broad enough to include money." See the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 23.

The words "goods, wares, and merchandise of whatever character," used in the act of 1862, undoubtedly have the same meaning as the words "goods and chattels, wares and merchandise," in the act of 1861, which provided that goods, wares and merchandise coming from a Confederate state should be forfeited. The word chattel, in its ordinary signification, includes every species of property which is not real estate or freehold, and the words goods, wares, and merchandise are undoubtedly used in this statute to express the same meaning. But if there could under ordinary circumstances be any doubt on this subject, it is a well-known fact, of which the federal supreme court can surely take cognizance, that in 1864 gold coin was an article of merchandise, and as such was bought and sold at fluctuating prices, and was the object of a large and active traffic. Gay's Gold, 13 Wall. 358, 362, 20 L. Ed. 606.

Choses in action.—In Planters' Bank v.

GOOD WILL.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 621; PARTNERSHIP; PATENTS; TRADEMARKS, TRADENAMES AND UNFAIR COMPETITION.

Definitions.—Good will has been defined to be "the advantage or benefit, which is acquired by an establishment, beyond the mere value of the capital, stock, funds, or property employed therein, in consequence of the general public patronage and encouragement which it receives from constant or habitual customers, on account of its local position, or common celebrity, or reputation for skill or affluence, or punctuality, or from other accidental circumstances or necessity, or even from ancient partialities or prejudices."[1]

Good Will as Property.—The good will of a business may have a value and in such cases it becomes property.[2]

Sale.—And may be bought and sold in connection with the business and as an incident to it.[3]

Where of Unsubstantial Nature.—But where the good will is of an unsubstantial or shadowy nature and there is no way of ascertaining its value, no compensation need be made for it where it is transferred from a partnership to a corporation.[4]

Sharp, 6 How. 301, 320, 12 L. Ed. 447, a case involving powers under a bank charter, the court said: "That promissory notes are to be regarded as either goods, chattels, or effects, within the sixth section of the charter, can hardly be questioned, when it includes these 'of what kind soever, nature, and quality.' This addition evidently meant to remove any doubt or restriction as to the meaning of those terms, as sometimes employed in connection with peculiar subjects, and to extend the description by them to every kind of personal property belonging to the bank. This construction would go no further than sometimes has been done in England, holding the words goods and chattels to include choses in action, as well as other personal property (12 Co. 1; 1 Atk. 1182), and by the word goods alone, in a bequest, it has been held that a bond will pass."

Goat hair goods.—See Arthur v. Butterfield, 125 U. S. 70, 72, 31 L. Ed. 643.

Goods of similar description.—See SIMILAR.

1. Defined.—Metropolitan Bank v. St. Louis Dispatch Co., 149 U. S. 436, 446, 37 L. Ed. 799.

"Good will was defined by Lord Eldon, in Cruttwell v. Lye, 17 Ves. 335, 346, to be 'nothing more than the probability that the old customers will resort to the old place;' but Vice Chancellor Wood, in Churton v. Douglas, Johnson, V. C. 174, 188, says it would be taking too narrow a view of what is there laid down by Lord Eldon, to confine it to that, but that it must mean every positive advantage that has been acquired by the old firm in the progress of its business, whether connected with the premises in which the business was previously carried on, or with the names of the late firm, or with any other matter carrying with it the benefit of the business." Menendez v. Holt, 128 U. S. 514, 521, 32 L. Ed. 526.

2. May become property.—Metropolitan Bank v. St. Louis Dispatch Co., 149 U. S. 436, 446, 37 L. Ed. 799; Camden v. Stuart, 144 U. S. 104, 115, 36 L. Ed. 363.

Undoubtedly, good will is in many cases a valuable thing, although there is difficulty in deciding accurately what is included under the term. It is tangible only as an incident, as connected with a going concern or business having locality or name, and is not susceptible of being disposed of independently. Metropolitan Bank v. St. Louis Dispatch Co., 149 U. S. 436, 446, 37 L. Ed. 799.

3. May be bought and sold.—Metropolitan Bank v. St. Louis Dispatch Co., 149 U. S. 436, 446, 37 L. Ed. 799; Camden v. Stuart, 144 U. S. 104, 115, 36 L. Ed. 363.

Good will of newspaper.—As applied to a newspaper, the good will usually attaches to its name rather than to the place of publication. The probability of the title continuing to attract custom in the way of circulation and advertising patronage, gives a value which may be protected and disposed of, and constitutes property. Metropolitan Bank v. St. Louis Dispatch Co., 149 U. S. 436, 446, 37 L. Ed. 799.

4. When of no value.—Camden v. Stuart, 144 U. S. 104, 115, 36 L. Ed. 363.

Right to Good Will.—While under some circumstances where a partnership is dissolved, each of the partners may be entitled to his portion of the good will, yet, where a partner retires from the firm and allows the other members to continue the business, the good will remains with the partners who continue the business.[5]

Use of Trademarks in Connection with Good Will.—And where the good will of a partnership passes to the partners continuing the business, the right to use the trademark of the firm may also pass as an incident to it.[6]

GOOD WORK.—See note 1.

GOODYEAR RUBBER.—See note 2.

GOVERN.—See note 3.

GOVERNMENT.—As to the dual nature of government, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 91. See note 4.

5. Rights of partners.—Menendez v. Holt, 128 U. S. 514, 521, 32 L. Ed. 526; Brown Chemical Co. v. Meyer, 139 U. S. 540, 548, 35 L. Ed. 247.

6. Use of trademark.—Brown Chemical Co. v. Meyer, 139 U. S. 540, 548, 35 L. Ed. 247. See, generally, the title TRADEMARKS, TRADENAMES AND UNFAIR COMPETITION.

1. Good work.—Where under a contract of sale of machinery for a mill, the vendor was to set it up and put it in complete operation in the vendee's mill, notice given by the vendee to the vendor "to put the mill in repair so as to do good work," or he would do so himself, was sufficient to cover all alterations necessary to accomplish that end. Stillwell Mfg. Co. v. Phelps, 130 U. S. 520, 527, 32 L. Ed. 1035. See the title SALES.

2. Goodyear rubber.—Goodyear rubber is a term descriptive of well-known classes of goods produced by the process known as Goodyear's invention, and being thus descriptive of a class of goods, cannot be exclusively appropriated by any one. Goodyear India Rubber, etc., Co. v. Goodyear Rubber Co., 128 U. S. 598, 602, 32 L. Ed. 535. See, generally, the title TRADEMARKS, TRADENAMES AND UNFAIR COMPETITION.

3. Govern.—The power to govern implies the power to ordain and establish suitable police regulations; and that, it has often been decided, authorizes municipal corporations to prohibit the use of locomotives in the public streets, when such action does not interfere with vested rights. Railroad Co. v. Richmond, 96 U. S. 521, 528, 24 L. Ed. 734. See the title POLICE POWER.

4. Government.—A statute authorizing the consolidation of one railroad company with another provided that the new corporation should, "for its government be entitled to all the rights and privileges, and subject to all the restrictions and liabilities conferred and imposed" upon the other company. In construing the statute the court said: "We cannot believe that the phrase 'for its government' in the consolidating act was intended as a new limitation on the power and privileges of the new corporation. The natural meaning of the word government in such a connection is regulation and control, and we think it was used in that sense here." Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 139, 149, 29 L. Ed. 833.

Government de facto.—See DE FACTO GOVERNMENT, vol. 5, p. 283. And see the title STATES.

Government of the state.—The distinction between the government of a state and the state itself is important, and should be observed. In common speech and common apprehension they are usually regarded as identical; and as ordinarily the acts of the government are the acts of the state, because within the limits of its delegation of power, the government of the state is generally confounded with the state itself, and often the former is meant when the latter is mentioned. The state itself is an ideal person, intangible, invisible, immutable. The government is an agent, and, within the sphere of the agency, a perfect representative; but outside of that, it is a lawless usurpation. The constitution of the state is the limit of the authority of its government, and both government and state are subject to the supremacy of the constitution of the United States, and of the laws made in pursuance thereof. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 270, 290, 29 L. Ed. 185.

Government office.—See OFFICE.

GOVERNOR.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles INTERNATIONAL LAW; MANDAMUS; PARTIES; PUBLIC LANDS; STATES; SUMMONS AND PROCESS.

As to appeal from state court questioning the eligibility of governor under the naturalization law, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 664. As to power of governor to authorize the prosecution of a suit, see the title ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 2, p. 710. As to power of governor to appoint clerk of mayor's court, see the title CLERKS OF COURT, vol. 3, p. 850. As to considering a state a party to the record, where the governor of the state is sued, see the titles COURTS, vol. 4, p. 906; STATES. As to suspension of railroad commissioner by governor being due process of law, see the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499. As to duty of governor in extradition proceedings, see the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215. As to presumption of regularity of act of governor in establishing a quarantine regulation, see the title HEALTH. As to impairment of obligation of contract made by governor, see the title IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS. As to duty, by statute in some states, of the governor with reference to allowing municipal aid, see the title MUNICIPAL, STATE, COUNTY AND FEDERAL AID. As to power of governor to stay an execution of a sentence of death, see the title PARDON. As to time of execution of a death sentence depending on warrant of governor, see the title SENTENCE AND PUNISHMENT. As to signing bills by governor, see the title STATUTES. As to pardon by governor restoring competency of witness, see the title WITNESSES.

Definition.—A governor of a state is a mere executive officer.[1]

A governor's authority is very narrowly limited by the constitution of his state.[2]

Liability.—The assumption, with or without the sanction of the board of public works of the District of Columbia, by the governor of the district of any liability in regard to the improvements of the market grounds, which were within the province of the legislature, was ultra vires, and no liability incurs.[3]

GRACE, DAYS OF.—See DAYS OF GRACE, vol. 5, p. 198.

GRADE.—See note 4.

GRADE CROSSINGS.—See the titles CROSSINGS, vol. 5, p. 148; DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 583; POLICE POWER.

GRADUATES.—As to graduates of the naval academy, see the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 527.

GRAIN OF WHEAT.—See note 5.

1. Governor is a mere executive officer.—Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 446, 1 L. Ed. 440.

2. Authority limited by constitution.—Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 446, 1 L. Ed. 440.

His general authority is very narrowly limited by the constitution of the state; with no undefined or disputable prerogatives; without power to effect any of the public money, but as he is authorized under the constitution, or by a particular law; having no color to represent the sovereignty of the state, so as to bind it in any manner, to its prejudice, unless specially authorized thereto. And therefore all who contract with him, do it at their own peril, and are bound to see that he has strict authority for any contract he makes. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 446, 1 L. Ed. 440.

3. Liability of governor.—Washington Market Co. v. District of Columbia, 172 U. S. 361, 370, 43 L. Ed. 478.

4. Graded.—In Smith v. Washington, 20 How. 135, 138, 15 L. Ed. 858, an action for reducing the level of a street, the court said: "Hills must be cut down and hollows filled up, or in other words, the road must be graded or 'reduced to a certain degree of ascent or descent;' which is the proper definition of the word 'to grade.'" See the title STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

5. See Downton v. Yeager Milling Co., 108 U. S. 466, 469, 27 L. Ed. 789.

GRAND JURY.

BY T. B. BENSON.

I. Definition, 571.

II. Origin and History, 571.

III. Qualifications, 571.

- A. Effect of State Law in Federal Courts, 571.
- B. When to Exist, 572.
- C. Religious or Conscientious Beliefs, 572.
  - 1. Against Taking Oath, 572.
  - 2. Belief in Mormonism, 572.
- D. Qualifications of Electors, 572.
- E. Alienage, 572.
- F. Race, Color, etc., 572.
- G. Loyalty, 572.
- H. Interest in Prosecution, 572.
- I. In Porto Rico, 572.
- J. Presumption of Qualification, 573.
- K. Effect of Presence of Disqualified Jurors on Panel, 573.
- L. Objections Because of Disqualification of Jurors, 573.
  - 1. How Made, 573.
    - a. Challenge, 573.
    - b. Plea in Abatement of Indictment, 573.
    - c. Motion to Quash Indictment, 573.
    - d. Motion in Arrest of Judgment, 573.
    - e. Suggestion of Amicus Curiæ, 574.
  - 2. Time of Making, 574.
  - 3. Waiver of, 574.

IV. Exemptions, 575.

V. Summoning and Impaneling, 575.

- A. Proceedings Are Part of Prosecution, 575.
- B. Statutory Provision, 575.
- C. By Whom Summoned and Impaneled, 575.
- D. Swearing or Affirming, 575.
- E. Exclusion of Certain Qualified Persons, 575.
- F. Excusing Grand Jurors, 575.
- G. Supplying Deficiency in Number of Grand Jurors, 576.
- H. Presumption of Regularity, 576.
- I. Objection to Manner of Summoning and Impaneling, 576.

VI. Oath of Grand Jurors, 577.

VII. Powers and Duties, 577.

- A. Territorial Extent of, 577.
- B. To Examine Witnesses, 577.
- C. To Initiate Prosecution, 578.

VIII. Number of Grand Jurors, 578.

IX. Finding Indictment, 578.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 861; CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43; DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499; INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS; INQUESTS AND INQUIRIES; JURY; TERRITORIES.

I. Definition.

A grand jury is a body known to the common law, to which is committed the duty of inquiring whether there be probable cause to believe the defendant guilty of the offense charged.[1] A grand juror is a "juryman" and a "juror," and is drawn and summoned.[2] The words, "juryman" and "jurors," include a grand juror as well as a petit juror, under § 5 of the act of March 22, 1882, forbidding Mormons to act as "jurymen or talesmen."[3]

II. Origin and History.

The institution of the grand jury is of very ancient origin in the history of England, and was an important barrier against persecution by the king.[4] It was, at the time of the settlement of this country, an informing and accusing tribunal only, without whose previous action no person charged with a felony could, except in certain special cases, be put upon his trial.[5]

III. Qualifications.

A. Effect of State Law in Federal Courts.—Grand jurors to serve in the federal courts must have the same qualifications as are required by the highest court of the state in which such court is sitting, subject to the provisions made by acts of congress.[6] The same rule applies to grand jurors in a federal court

1. Definition.—Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 84, 48 L. Ed. 882.

2. Grand juror is juryman.—The use of the words "drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman," in the act of March 22, 1882, and of the words "appearing or offered as a juror or talesman," does not have the effect of confining the meaning of "juror" to "petit juror," on the view that the ordinary meaning of "talesman" refers to a petit juror. Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 483, 29 L. Ed. 179. See post, "Summoning and Impaneling," V. And see the title JURY.

3. Within act excluding Mormons.—Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 483, 29 L. Ed. 179.

4. England.—Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 11, 30 L. Ed. 849.

For a long period a grand jury's powers were not clearly defined; and it would seem from the account of commentators on the laws of that country that it was at first a body which not only accused, but which also tried, public offenders. Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 11, 30 L. Ed. 849; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652.

Under the ancient English system the most valuable function of the grand jury was not only to examine into the commission of crimes, but to stand between the prosecutor and the accused, and to determine whether the charge was founded upon credible testimony or was dictated by malice or personal ill-will. Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652.

5. In America—Protection against unfounded prosecutions.—Justice Field in 2 Sawyer, 667 said: "In this country, from the popular character of our institutions, there has seldom been any contest between the government and the citizen which required the existence of the grand jury as a protection against oppressive action of the government. Yet the institution was adopted in this country, and is continued from considerations similar to those which give to it its chief value in England, and is designed as a means, not only of bringing to trial persons accused of public offenses upon just grounds, but also as a means of protecting the citizen against unfounded accusation, whether it comes from the government, or be prompted by partisan passion or private enmity. No person shall be required, according to the fundamental law of the country, except in the cases mentioned, to answer for any of the higher crimes unless this body, consisting of not less than sixteen nor more than twenty-three good and lawful men, selected from the body of the district, shall declare, upon careful deliberation, under the solemnity of an oath, that there is good reason for his accusation and trial." Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 11, 30 L. Ed. 849.

In Hawaiian Islands.—Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. Ed. 1016.

6. Qualifications of jurors of state.—Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, sitting in Porto Rico.[7]

B. When to Exist.—It is not decided whether a grand juror who was disqualified by the act of Porto Rico of April 1, 1901, but summoned before such act took effect, is competent to sit.[8]

C. Religious or Conscientious Beliefs—1. AGAINST TAKING OATH.—A person who has conscientious scruples against taking an oath is not disqualified. Such person will be affirmed.[9]

2. BELIEF IN MORMONISM.—By an act of congress, adherents to a belief in Mormonism are disqualified to sit as grand jurors.[10]

D. Qualifications of Electors.—The qualifications of the grand jurors under the civil code of Alabama are not in law dependent upon the presence of the requisite qualifications of electors, and no want or invalidity of the conditions attached to the qualification to vote in a grand juror can, of itself, affect the validity of their finding.[11]

E. Alienage.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[12]

F. Race, Color, etc.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[13]

G. Loyalty.—By an English statute, persons outlawed or who had fled to a sanctuary for treason or felony, were disqualified as grand jurors.[14] An act of Congress disqualified persons who had voluntarily taken part against the Union in the Civil War.[15]

H. Interest in Prosecution.—The fact that the grand jurors were citizens of the town, for defrauding which the defendant was indicted, cannot be set up as a disqualification in motion in arrest of judgment.[16]

I. In Porto Rico.—The qualifications of grand jurors are regulated in Porto Rico by local statute.[17]

162, 49 L. Ed. 994. See Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 1075; Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 26 L. Ed. 481. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, pp. 1091, 1142.

7. In federal court in Porto Rico.—As the Porto Rican statutes contain no provisions relating to the selection, drawing or impaneling of grand jurors, it was the duty of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico in criminal prosecutions for crimes against the United States, to keep in view § 800 of the Revised Statutes, which provides: "Jurors to serve in the courts of the United States, in each state respectively, shall have the same qualifications, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, * * * as jurors of the highest court of law in such state may have," etc. Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 162, 49 L. Ed. 994. See post, "In Porto Rico," III, I. And see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 807.

8. When to exist.—Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 1075. See post, "Effect of Disqualification," III, E.

9. Scruples against taking oath.—Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 567, 42 L. Ed. 568. See Rev. Stat., § 1025.

10. Mormon adherents.—Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 310, 26 L. Ed. 481.

Section 5 of the act of Congress of March 22, 1882, 22 Stat. 30, provides: "That in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation, under any statute of the United States, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge, to any person drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman, * * * that he believes it right for a man to have more than one living and undivorced wife at the same time." As the person challenged and excluded answered, when questioned on oath, that he believed it right for a man to have more than one undivorced wife living at the same time, he was properly excluded under § 5 of the act of March 22, 1882. Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 482, 29 L. Ed. 179. See ante, "Definition," I.

11. Qualifications of electors.—Rogers v. Alabama, 192 U. S. 226, 230, 48 L. Ed. 417.

12. Aliens.—See the title ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 219.

13. Race, color, etc.—See the title CIVIL RIGHTS, vol. 3, p. 831.

14. Loyalty—In England.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. Ed. 857. See Statute of 11th Henry IV. See post, "Motion in Arrest of Judgment," III, L, 1, d.

15. In United States.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 67, 27 L. Ed. 857. See Rev. Stat., § 820.

16. Brown v. Massachusetts, 144 U. S. 573, 579, 36 L. Ed. 546; Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 52, 32 L. Ed. 640.

17. In Porto Rico.—Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 1075. See ante, "Effect of State Law in Federal Courts," III, A.

J. Presumption of Qualification.—If an indictment is valid on its face, it will be presumed to have been found by qualified grand jurors.[18]

K. Effect of Presence of Disqualified Jurors on Panel.—A disqualified juror placed upon the panel may be supposed injuriously to affect the whole panel.[19]

L. Objections Because of Disqualification of Jurors—1. How Made—a. Challenge.—A disqualified juror may be removed by challenge.[20]

b. Plea in Abatement of Indictment.—The proper mode of making objection to the personnel of the grand jury when the matter does not appear of record, is by plea in abatement.[21] Such a plea must be pleaded with strict exactness,[22] and at an early stage of the prosecution.[23]

c. Motion to Quash Indictment.—"In this country a motion to quash the indictment may be made instead of pleading specially in abatement.[24]

d. Motion in Arrest of Judgment.—The disqualification of a grand juror, not

18. Presumption of qualification.—Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 261, 46 L. Ed. 177. See the title INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS.

19. Effect of presence of disqualified juror.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 70, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Under act of Porto Rico of April 1, 1901.—The disqualifications prescribed by this act are matters of substance and not of mere form, not tending to the prejudice of the accused. Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

20. Objections—Challenge.—Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839.

The action of a trial court in indorsing upon a challenge to the grand jury the words "filed subject to argument on face of papers," and upon a motion for subpœna duces tecum the words "filed subject to orders," cannot be objected to as having denied the accused due process of law where it further appears that such action on the part of the court merely signified that the court withheld immediate action on the motions and that the hearing of the challenge was subsequently proceeded in, and that evidence was adduced by both the state and the accused. Murray v. Louisiana, 163 U. S. 101, 106, 41 L. Ed. 87.

21. Plea in abatement.—Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624. See the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 34.

In Virginia.—"One of the earliest cases in this country in which the question arose was that of Commonwealth v. Cherry, 2 Va. Cas. 20, decided in 1815. It was there held that if a grand juror was disqualified, the indictment or presentment, after being found could be avoided by plea in abatement. With rare exceptions this rule is recognized and followed in the different states." Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 470, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

It has always been the practice in Florida to make all objections to the competency of grand jurors not appearing of record by plea in abatement of, and not by motion to quash, the indictment. Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 523, 47 L. Ed. 572.

Under § 820, Rev. Stat.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Outlawry under English statute.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 68, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Plea and supplemental plea in abatement.—Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 566, 42 L. Ed. 568.

Pleading over.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 67, 27 L. Ed. 857.

22. Pleaded with strictness.—Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624. See the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 34.

23. Time allowed to plead.—See post, "Time of Making," III, L, 2. And see the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 34.

Before pleading in bar.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857; Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839.

Before arraignment.—Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

Before trial.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857.

After return of indictment.—Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 469, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

24. Motion to quash indictment.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 67, 27 L. Ed. 857; Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. Ed. 505.

Under Florida practice.—Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 523, 47 L. Ed. 572.

Outlawry under English statute.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 68, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Before pleading in bar.—Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 67, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Evidence on motion.—Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839.

appearing on the face of the record, cannot be raised on motion in arrest of judgment.[25] And, even where appearing of record, it seems that the objection cannot be made in this manner,[26] in the absence of a statute rendering the indictment void.[27] Such a statute was that of 11 Henry IV.[28]

e. Suggestion of Amicus Curiæ.—Under an English statute, making an indictment void if found by grand jurors who had been outlawed, it was held that objection thereto may be made by the suggestion of amicus curiæ, if the matter appeared of record.[29]

2. Time of Making.—An objection to the qualification of a grand juror must be made at the early stages of the prosecution.[30]

3. Waiver of.—If the objection to the qualification of a grand juror is not made in the proper way,[31] and at the proper time,[32] it is waived, whether the disqualification appears of record or by averments.[33]

25. Motion in arrest of judgment.—Brown v. Massachusetts, 144 U. S. 573, 579, 36 L. Ed. 546; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 68, 27 L. Ed. 857.

In Massachusetts, as elsewhere, the errors suggested could not be availed of by motion in arrest of judgment, unless appearing on the face of the record. Brown v. Massachusetts, 144 U. S. 573, 579, 36 L. Ed. 546.

26. Disqualification appearing of record.—"But even if it should appear upon the record as a proper part thereof, the fact of pleading to the merits and going to trial without taking the objection would also appear, and would amount in law to a waiver of the irregularity." United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857.

27. In absence of statute.—Where no statute makes the proceedings void, the objection should be taken in limine. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857.

28. "By an English statute passed in the 11th year of Henry IV, it was declared that indictments made by persons not returned by the sheriff, or by persons nominated to him, or who were outlawed or had fled to sanctuary for treason or felony, should be void, revoked and annulled. On this statute it was held that if any such persons were on a grand jury which found an indictment, it made the whole void, and if the matter appeared on the record, or in the proceedings of the same court, advantage might be taken of it on motion in arrest of judgment, * * * but if it did not appear on the record of the cause, or in the records of the same court, the better opinion was that it could only be pleaded in abatement, or raised by motion to quash." United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 68, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Not such federal statute.—"We have no inexorable statute making the whole proceeding void for any such irregularities." United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 67, 27 L. Ed. 857.

29. Suggestion of amicus curiæ.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 68, 27 L. Ed. 857.

30. Time of making.—See the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 34. And see, ante, "Plea in Abatement of Indictment," III, L, 1, b.

Before trial.—In Bacon's Abridgement it is said that no exception against an indictor is allowable, unless the party takes it before trial. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 68, 27 L. Ed. 857.

After return of indictment.—"Can such an objection be made, as was done here by plea in abatement after the return of the indictment? Upon this point the authorities are not in harmony." Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 469, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

After return but before arraignment.—An objection to the qualifications of the grand jurors made three days after the indictment was returned and before arraignment and as soon as the accused learned of the facts upon which the objection was based, was made and in due time, where the accused was not in court when the grand jurors were selected and the grand jury impaneled, and, so far as appears from the record, was not aware that his case would be taken up by the grand jury. Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 474, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

Before arraignment.—Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

Before pleading in bar.—This objection must be made before pleading in bar. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 72, 27 L. Ed. 857; Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839.

After verdict too late.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Under Porto Rican practice.—Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 1075.

31. Waiver of objections.—See ante, "How Made," III, L, 1.

32. See ante, "Time of Making," III, L, 2.

33. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 74, 27 L. Ed. 857. See the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 41.

IV. Exemptions.

The right to be exempted from grand jury service in the federal courts is controlled by the local state law.[34]

V. Summoning and Impaneling.

A. Proceedings Are Part of Prosecution.—Proceedings to impanel a grand jury are a part of the prosecution.[35]

B. Statutory Provision.—The act of congress of June 30, 1879, 21 Stat. 43, c. 52, provides that grand jurors, to serve in the courts of the United States, "shall be publicly drawn from a box containing, at the time of each drawing, the names of not less than three hundred persons, possessing the qualifications prescribed in § 800 of the Revised Statutes, which names shall have been placed therein by the clerk of such court and a commissioner, to be appointed by the judge thereof, which commissioner shall be a citizen of good standing, residing in the district in which such court is held, and a well-known member of the principal political party in the district in which the court is held opposing that to which the clerk may belong, the clerk and said commissioner each to place one name in said box alternatively, without reference to party affiliations, until the whole number required shall be placed therein, * * * and all juries to serve in courts after the passage of this act shall be drawn in conformity herewith."[36]

C. By Whom Summoned and Impaneled.—No grand jury shall be summoned to attend any circuit or district court, unless one of the judges of such circuit court, or the judge of such district, in his own discretion, or upon a notification by the district attorney that such jury will be needed, orders a venire to issue therefor.[37] After it has been summoned, the clerk may impanel the grand jury.[38]

D. Swearing or Affirming.—It is left to the discretion of the officer administering the oath or affirmation to determine whether or not the juror has conscientious scruples against taking an oath and to permit him to affirm instead of making oath.[39] The officer administering oath or affirmation on the voir dire of a grand juror is not entitled to compensation therefor.[40]

E. Exclusion of Certain Qualified Persons.—The accused cannot complain merely because certain good and qualified persons were not summoned and impaneled on the grand jury.[41]

F. Excusing Grand Jurors.—In excusing grand jurors, the federal courts

34. Exemptions.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 407, 38 L. Ed. 208. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1142.

35. Proceedings part of prosecution.—Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 29 L. Ed. 179.

36. Statutory provisions.—Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 162, 49 L. Ed. 994.

Applies to circuit and district courts only.—Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. Ed. 244; Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 310, 26 L. Ed. 481; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 298, 36 L. Ed. 429; Thiede v. Utah, 159 U. S. 510, 515, 40 L. Ed. 237.

In Porto Rico.—As the Porto Rico statutes contain no provisions relating to the selection, drawing or impaneling of grand jurors, it was the duty of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico in criminal prosecutions for crimes against the United States, to conform to this act of congress. Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 162, 49 L. Ed. 994.

In the territory of Utah.—Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 478, 29 L. Ed. 179; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. Ed. 244.

37. Venire issues at order of judge.—McDowell v. United States, 159 U. S. 596, 40 L. Ed. 271. See Rev. Stat., § 810.

38. Clerk may impanel.—Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 165, 49 L. Ed. 994.

39. Swearing or affirming.—Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 568, 42 L. Ed. 568. See Rev. Stat., § 1025. See post, "Oath of Grand Jurors," VI.

40. Officer not entitled to compensation for.—United States v. Jones, 193 U. S. 528, 531, 48 L. Ed. 776. See clause 4, § 828, Rev. Stat.

41. Exclusion of certain qualified persons.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 70, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Where the court excludes particular persons who might properly have served on the jury, its action does not vitiate all subsequent proceedings so as to render them absolutely null and void. It might have sufficed to quash the indictment if follow the practice in the highest court of the state in which they are sitting.[42]

G. Supplying Deficiency in Number of Grand Jurors.—In the territory of Utah, if the names of the two hundred persons in the jury box have been exhausted, a venire may be issued to the marshal to summons persons from the body of the district to supply the deficiency in the number of grand jurors.[43]

H. Presumption of Regularity.—If the indictment is regular on its face, it will be presumed to have been found by a grand jury properly summoned and impaneled.[44]

I. Objections to Manner of Summoning and Impaneling.—All ordinary objections based upon the informalities in summoning or impaneling the grand jury, where no statute makes such informal proceedings utterly void, should be taken in limine,[45] either by challenge,[46] by motion to quash,[47] or by plea in abatement.[48] Neglecting to do this, the defendant should be deemed to have waived the irregularity.[49] But there are cases which admit of a different con-the objection had been timely and properly made. Nothing more. We think that this conclusion is the result not only of the English, but of the better American authorities. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 71, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Exclusion of Mormons.—Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 29 L. Ed. 179.

Exclusion of negroes.—See the title CIVIL RIGHTS, vol. 3, p. 831.

42. Excusing grand jurors.—Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 162, 49 L. Ed. 994.

43. Supplying deficiency.—Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 29 L. Ed. 179, decided under the act of congress of June 23, 1874, 18 Stat. 254.

44. Presumption of regularity.—Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 261, 46 L. Ed. 177; Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 520, 47 L. Ed. 572. See the title INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS.

45. Objections to summoning and impaneling.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857; Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 165, 49 L. Ed. 994; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. Ed. 505; Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624.

Where the original venire was issued November 18, the second venire issued December 2, 1895, the court opened December 3, 1895, and the indictment was returned December 12, the defendant did not file his plea in abatement until December 17, and the plea does not allege want of knowledge of threatened prosecution on the part of defendant, nor want of opportunity to present his objection earlier nor assign any ground why exception was not taken or objection made before, it was held to be too late. Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624. See the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 34.

After verdict.—It would be trifling with justice, and would render criminal proceedings a farce, if such objections could be taken after verdict, even though the irregularity should appear in the record of the proceedings. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 69, 27 L. Ed. 857.

46. By challenge.—Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624. See ante, "Challenge," III, L, 1, a.

47. Motion to quash.—Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624. But the objection cannot be so made under the practice in Florida. Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 523, 47 L. Ed. 572. See ante, "Motion to Quash Indictment," III, L, 1, c.

In the case at bar, as may be inferred from the dates appearing in the record, and as is distinctly stated in the opinion delivered by the court below on denying a rehearing, where the grand jury had been impaneled before the commission of the offense for which the defendant was indicted, and he therefore never had any opportunity to challenge the array of the grand jury, he was entitled to present the objection on which he relied by motion to quash. Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839.

48. Plea in abatement.—Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 566, 42 L. Ed. 568; Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. Ed. 857. See ante, "Plea in Abatement of Indictment," III, L, 1, b.

When the defendant has had no opportunity to challenge the grand jury which found the indictment against him, the objection to the constitution of the grand jury upon the ground that persons of the colored race are excluded therefrom may be taken, either by plea in abatement, or by motion to quash the indictment, before pleading in bar. Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 67, 27 L. Ed. 857.

Under Florida practice.—"It has for many years been the practice in this state, sanctioned by repeated rulings of this court, that all objections to the competency of, and to irregularities in selecting, drawing and impaneling grand jurors, not appearing of record, must be taken advantage of by plea in abatement of the indictment, and not by motion to quash it." Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 523, 47 L. Ed. 572.

49. Waiver of objection.—Rodriguez v.

sideration, and in which the objection to the grand jury may be taken at any time; as where the whole proceeding of forming the panel is void; or the jury is not a jury of the court or term in which the indictment is found; has been selected by persons having no authority whatever to select them; have not been sworn; or where some other fundamental requisite has not been complied with.[50] "Another general rule is that for such irregularities as do not prejudice the defendant, he has no cause of complaint, and can take no exception."[51]

VI. Oath of Grand Jurors.

The oath administered to the foreman in Rex v. Shaftsbury, 8 Howell's State Trials 759, was that "you shall diligently inquire and true presentments make of all such matters, articles, and things as shall be given to you in charge, as of all other matters, and things as shall come to your own knowledge touching this present service," etc. This oath has remained substantially unchanged to the present day.[52]

VII. Powers and Duties.

A. Territorial Extent of.—The territorial extent of the jurisdiction of a grand jury is usually coextensive with that of the court by which it is organized and for which it is to exercise its inquisitorial functions.[53] The jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States is, as a general rule, bounded by the local limits of the districts within and for which it sits.[54] These courts may be required to be held at different places in a judicial district, and prosecutions for offenses committed in certain counties may be required to be tried, and writs and recognizances to be returned at each place, but this does not affect the power of the grand jury sitting at either place to present indictments for offenses committed anywhere within the district.[55]

B. To Examine Witnesses.—The examination of witnesses need not be preceded by a presentment or indictment formally drawn up.[56] In summoning wit-

United States, 198 U. S. 156, 165, 49 L. Ed. 994.

"We think that the doctrine of waiver applies as well to cases where the objection appears of record as where it appears by averments; and that it applies to all cases of objection to the qualifications of jurors, and to the mode of impaneling the jury; but does not apply to cases where the proceeding is wholly void by reason of some fundamental defect or vice therein." United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 72, 27 L. Ed. 857.

50. Cases in which objection may be otherwise made.—United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 71, 27 L. Ed. 857; Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 164, 49 L. Ed. 994.

51. Irregularities not prejudicial.—Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624.

A plea in abatement is fatally defective where it is stated that the drawing "tended to his injury and prejudice," but no grounds whatever are assigned for such a conclusion, and the record exhibits none. Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624.

52. Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 60, 50 L. Ed. 652.

Additional oath.—Atwood v. Weems, 99 U. S. 183, 25 L. Ed. 471; Burt v. Penjaud, 99 U. S. 180, 25 L. Ed. 451.

Oath or affirmation.—Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 567, 42 L. Ed. 568. See ante, "Swearing or Affirming," V, D.

53. Territorial extent of—Coextensive with that of court.—Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 297, 36 L. Ed. 429.

54. Toland v. Sprague, 12 Pet. 300, 328, 9 L. Ed. 1093; Devoe Mfg. Co., 108 U. S. 401, 27 L. Ed. 764. See the title JURISDICTION.

55. It was said in Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 297, 36 L. Ed. 429, that the act of congress of 1894, c. 132, 28 Revised Statutes, "does not affect the authority of the grand jury for the district, sitting at any place at which the court is appointed to be held, to present indictments for offenses committed anywhere within the district. It only requires the trial to be had, and writs and recognizances to be returned, in the division in which the offense is committed. The finding of the indictment is no part of the trial." Post v. United States, 161 U. S. 583, 586, 40 L. Ed. 816; Barrett v. United States (No. 1), 169 U. S. 218, 221, 42 L. Ed. 723.

56. Examination of witnesses.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 63, 50 L. Ed. 652. See the title WITNESSES.

Compelling attendance.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 61, 50 L. Ed. 652.

Determining credibility of testimony.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652.

nesses before a grand jury it is quite sufficient to apprise them of the names of the parties with respect to whom they will be called to testify, without indicating the nature of the charge.[57]

C. To Initiate Prosecution.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[58]

VIII. Number of Grand Jurors.

The act of congress, prescribing the number of grand jurors to be impaneled, applies only to the circuit and district courts of the United States.[59] A defect in the number of grand jurors does not vitiate the entire proceedings; so that they can be challenged collaterally on habeas corpus, but it is only a matter of error to be corrected by proceedings in error.[60]

IX. Finding Indictment.

This subject is treated elsewhere.[61]

GRANT.—See the titles DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 245; LANDLORDS AND TENANTS; PUBLIC LANDS. A grant, in its own nature, amounts to an extinguishment of the right of the grantor; it is a contract executed; and a party is always estopped by his own grant.[1]

GRANTEE.—See the titles DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 245; PATENTS; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

GRAVEYARD.—See the title CEMETERIES, vol. 3, p. 647.

Refreshing memory of witness.—Putnam v. United States, 162 U. S. 687, 40 L. Ed. 1118.

Self-incrimination. — Counselmann v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. Ed. 1110; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 61, 50 L. Ed. 652. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 504.

57. Summoning witnesses.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 63, 50 L. Ed. 652.

58. To initiate prosecution, see the titles CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 961; INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS. And see ante, "Origin and History," II.

59. Number of grand jurors.—Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. Ed. 244. See Rev. Stat., § 808. See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499.

For crime in jurisdiction of Cherokee Indian nation.—Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 41 L. Ed. 196.

60. Deficiency—Not ground for habeas corpus.—A deficiency in the number of grand jurors prescribed by law, there being present and acting a greater number than that requisite for the finding of an indictment, is not such a defect as, though unnoticed by the prisoner until after trial and sentence, vitiates the entire proceedings and compels his discharge on habeas corpus. In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 582, 35 L. Ed. 513. See the title HABEAS CORPUS.

61. See the title INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS.

1. Grant.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 137, 3 L. Ed. 162; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 681, 4 L. Ed. 629.

A gift by the crown of incorporeal hereditaments, such as corporate franchises, when executed, is, in the strictest sense of the terms, a grant; and a grant of franchises is not, in point of principle, distinguishable from a grant of any other property. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 683, 4 L. Ed. 629.

"There is a clear distinction between the effect of a license to enter lands, uncoupled with an interest, and a grant. A grant passes some estate of greater or less degree, must be in writing, and is irrevocable, unless it contains words of revocation; whereas a license is a personal privilege, can be conferred by parol or in writing, conveys no estate or interest, and is revocable at the pleasure of the party making it." De Haro v. United States, 5 Wall. 599, 627, 18 L. Ed. 681.

"Grant" as used in treaty.—The term grant in a treaty, "comprehends not only those which are made in form, but also any concession, warrant, order, or permission to survey, possess, or settle, whether evidenced by writing or parol, or presumed from possession." Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 436, 9 L. Ed. 1137. See, generally, the title PUBLIC LANDS.

Granted lands.—In the construction of land grant acts in aid of railroads, "granted lands" "are those falling within the limits specially designated, the title to which attaches when the lands are located by an approved and accepted survey of the line, filed in the land department, as of the date of the act of congress," "indemnity lands" "are those selected in lieu of parcels previously disposed of or reserved, the title to which accrues only from their selection." Barney v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 117 U. S. 228, 232, 29 L. Ed. 858. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

GROSS NEGLIGENCE.—See the title NEGLIGENCE.
GROUND OF ACTION.—See note 1.

GROUND RENTS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the title ANNUITY, vol. 1, p. 329.

As to transfer of a fee farm rent, see the title ASSIGNMENT, vol. 2, p. 564. As to limitation of right to make claim for ground rent, see the titles IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION. As to assignment by husband of quit rents due the wife, see the titles ASSIGNMENTS, vol. 2, p. 563; HUSBAND AND WIFE. As to liability on covenant to pay rent, see the title LANDLORD AND TENANT. As to liability of a tenant, holding possession of premises after termination of term, for ground rent, see the title LANDLORD AND TENANT. As to liability of a mortgagee for ground rent, see the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST. As to a grant of a rent charge for a loan being usurious because amounting to more than legal rate of interest, see the title USURY. As to necessity of vendor to proceed judicially to recover a lot conveyed by him, because of the vendee's failure to pay ground rent, before he can reconvey the lot, see the titles LANDLORD AND TENANT; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

Irredeemable Ground Rent.—An irredeemable ground rent under the laws of Pennsylvania is defined to be a rent reserved to himself and his heirs by the grantor of land, out of the land itself. It is not granted like an annuity or rent charge, but is reserved out of a conveyance of the land in fee. It is a separate estate from the ownership of the ground, and is held to be real estate, with the usual characteristics of an estate in fee simple, descendible, devisable, alienable.[2]

GUANO ISLANDS.—As to the acquisition by the United States of islands containing guano deposits, see the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 96, 97; UNITED STATES. As to the jurisdiction of federal courts over offenses committed on Guano Islands, see the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 76. As to the determination of the sovereignty over the Guano Islands, see the title INTERNATIONAL LAW. As to the general jurisdiction of the United States over the Guano Islands, see the titles INTERNATIONAL LAW; UNITED STATES. As to the manner in which the sovereignty of the United States shall be declared over the Guano Islands, see the title UNITED STATES. As to the judicial notice of courts of the United States of the jurisdiction of the United States over the Guano Islands, see the title JUDICIAL NOTICE. As to whether a breach of the bond given by the discovery of the Guano Islands affects the dominion of the United States over such islands, see the title UNITED STATES. As to whether or not a wife is entitled to dower, in the interest which her husband has in the Guano Islands which he had discovered, after his death, see the title DOWER, vol. 5, p. 487.

1. Ground of action.—A state statute provided that amendments to declarations might be made to correct any mistake, defect or informality in the same, not changing the form or ground of action. It was held that the phrase, ground of action, was not used in the statute in any technical or narrow sense, but was intended to refer rather to the real object of the plaintiff in bringing the suit than to the technical meaning of the word and that such a construction had always been given to the phrase as would further that object. West v. Smith, 101 U. S. 263, 266, 25 L. Ed. 809. See the title AMENDMENTS, vol. 1, pp. 299, 300.

2. Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 59, 46 L. Ed. 804.

GUARANTY.

BY FRANK MOORE.

I. Definitions, 581.
- A. Of Word "Guaranty," 581.
- B. Of a Continuing Guaranty, 581.

II. Form and Essential Elements, 582.
- A. Form, 582.
- B. Essential Elements, 582.
  - 1. Definiteness and Certainty, 582.
  - 2. Consideration, 583.
    - a. Sufficiency of Consideration, 583.
    - b. From Whom and to Whom Consideration Must Move, 583.
    - c. Estoppel to Deny Consideration, 583.
  - 3. Mutual Assent, 583.

III. Validity, 583.

IV. Interpretation and Construction of Contract, 583.
- A. The Intention of the Parties Governs, 583.
- B. Words Construed Most Strongly against Guarantor, 583.
- C. The Surrounding Circumstances to Be Considered, 584.
- D. The Rule Where General Words Precede Particular Words, 584.
- E. The Interpretation Should Be Fair and Reasonable, 584.
- F. Rule as to Construction of Bonds Not Applicable, 585.
- G. Rule of Construction in Equity Courts, 585.
- H. Questions of Law and Fact, 585.

V. Steps Necessary to Bind Guarantor, 586.
- A. Notice of Acceptance, 586.
  - 1. When Notice Necessary, 586.
    - a. In General, 586.
    - b. Reason of Rule, 587.
    - c. Rule in Pennsylvania, 588.
  - 2. When Notice Unnecessary, 588.
    - a. In General, 588.
    - b. When Principal Debtor Is Insolvent, 589.
  - 3. Distinguished from Rule Respecting Negotiable Instruments, 589.
  - 4. Time of Giving Notice, 589.
    - a. In General, 589.
    - b. Necessity for Intermediate Notice, 589.
  - 5. Form and Sufficiency of Notice, 589.
    - a. In General, 589.
    - b. Notice to Guarantor's Agent, 590.
  - 6. Proof of Notice, 590.
  - 7. Waiver of Notice, 590.
  - 8. Questions of Law and Fact, 590.
- B. Demand on Principal Debtor and Notice of Default, 590.
  - 1. In General, 590.
  - 2. Necessity for Demand, 590.
    - a. In General, 590.
    - b. Rule Where Principal Debtor Is Insolvent, 591.
  - 3. Sufficiency of Notice, 591.
  - 4. Questions of Law and Fact, 591.

VI. Rights and Liabilities of Guarantor, 592.
A. Rights, 592.
1. What Obligations Are Covered by the Guaranty, 592.
2. Right of Guarantor to the Indemnity, 592.
B. Liabilities, 592.
1. In General, 592.
2. Measure and Extent of Liability of Guarantor, 592.
a. In General, 592.
b. Extent of Liability with Respect to Amount, 592.
c. Extent of Liability with Respect to Time, 593.
3. Waiver or Release from Liability, 593.
4. Effect of Election to Proceed First against Principal Debtor, 593.

VII. Rights of Guarantee, 594.

VIII. Discharge of the Guarantor, 594.
A. By Alteration in the Contract, 594.
B. By Extension of Time of Payment, 594.
C. By Extension of Time for Performance, 595.
D. By Extinguishment of the Principal Obligation, 595.
E. By Fraud and False Representations, 595.
F. By Failure to Give Notice of Default and Failure to Proceed against Principal, 596.

IX. Revocation of Guaranties, 596.

X. Pleading and Practice, 596.
A. Jurisdiction, 596.
B. Pleading, 597.
1. Form of Action, 597.
2. Parties, 597.

XI. Evidence, 597.
A. Proof of Notice, 597.
B. Parol Evidence, 597.
C. Collateral Evidence, 598.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 257; CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1054; FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, ante, p. 451; LETTERS OF CREDIT; PAROL EVIDENCE; PRINCIPAL AND SURETY; STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

As to whether letter of recommendation was given to defraud and deceive, see the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394. As to necessity for consideration in guaranty of payment of note, see the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 277. As to power of national banks to make contracts of guaranty, see the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 77.

I. Definitions.

A. Of Word "Guaranty."—In a case of an instrument under seal, the term "covenant" is the technical synonym for the word "guaranty."[1]

B. Of a Continuing Guaranty.—When by the terms of the guaranty it appears that the parties looked to a future course of dealing for an indefinite time, or a succession of credits to be given, the guaranty is a continuing one.[2]

1. "Covenant" and "guaranty" synonymous terms.—Hill v. Smith, 21 How. 283, 16 L. Ed. 113.

2. Example of a continuing guaranty.—The following guarantee, viz: "In consideration of Messrs. J. and A. Lawrence having a credit with your house, and in further consideration of $1 paid me by yourselves, receipt of which I hereby acknowledge, I engage to you that they shall fulfill the engagements they have made and shall make with you, for meeting and reimbursing the payments which you may assume under such credit at

As, for example, where words of continuing credit, such as "from time to time," or "at any time,"[3] or "having,"[4] are used.

II. Form and Essential Elements.

A. Form.—As the statute of frauds does not prescribe the form of a binding letter of guarantee, it is sufficient that the natural parts of it appear either expressed, or clearly to be implied; and correspondence and other evidence may be used to ascertain the true import and application of the agreement; by the aid of which extrinsic evidence, the proper construction may be made.[5]

B. Essential Elements—1. DEFINITENESS AND CERTAINTY.—The law will subject a man, having no interest in the transaction, to pay the debt of another, only when his undertaking manifests a clear intention to bind himself for that debt. Words of doubtful import ought not to receive that construction.[6] It is the duty of the individual, who contracts with one man on the credit of another, not to trust to ambiguous phrases and strained constructions, but to require an explicit and plain declaration of the obligation he is about to assume.[7] their request, together with your charges; and I guaranty you from all payments and damages by reason of their default. You are to consider this as a standing and continuing guarantee, without the necessity of your apprizing me, from time to time, of your engagements and advances for their house; and in case of a change of partners in your firm or theirs, the guarantee is to apply and continue to transactions afterwards, between the firms as changed, until notified by me to the contrary: "—held, a continuing guarantee, and to include not only tranactions under a letter of credit existing at the date of the guarantee, but also transactions which arose under a second letter granted at the expiration of the first; although the second credit contained a proviso "that the bills be drawn by, or in favor of parties permanently resident in Europe; and if made from the continent, they be made at the customary date, say three months." Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 11 L. Ed. 326.

3. Words held to import a continuing guaranty.—Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

Action upon the following letter of guaranty, written by the defendants and delivered to the plaintiffs: "Port Gibson, December 1827. Messrs. Reynolds, Byrne & Co. Gentlemen:—Our friend, Mr. Chester Haring, to assist him in business, may require your aid, from time to time, either by acceptance or indorsement of his paper, or advances in cash; in order to save you from harm by so doing, we do hereby bind ourselves, severally and jointly, to be responsible to you, at any time, for a sum, not exceeding eight thousand dollars, should the said Chester Haring fail to do so. Your obedient servants, James S. Douglass, John G. Singleton, Thomas Going." One count in the declaration was for money lent, and money had and received. Held, the guarantee given by the defendants covered successive advances, acceptances and indorsements made by the plaintiffs, to the amount of $8,000, at any subsequent times, toties quoties, whenever the antecedent transactions were discharged; it was a continuing guarantee. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

4. "Having" denotes continuing credit.—"In the next place, the guarantee itself uses language susceptible of being treated as a present continuing consideration in fieri. It is 'in consideration of Messrs. J. and A. Lawrence having a credit with your house;' now, the word 'having' imports a present or future advance, just as much as a past. The word 'having' is in the present tense; and if the parties then understood the letter of credit to be in fieri, and to be absolute only upon a condition subsequent, viz; the giving of the guarantee, the word is the most appropriate which could be used." Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 452, 11 L. Ed. 326.

5. Form of guaranty.—Drummond v. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 515, 6 L. Ed. 712; Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626; Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 9 L. Ed. 503; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 170, 183, 11 L. Ed. 89.

6. Requisites of a valid guaranty.—Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271, approved in Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

Contracts held not to be guarantees.—A letter of introduction in the following words, "You may be assured of their complying with any contracts or engagements they may enter into with you," was admitted by a majority of the court not to import an undertaking or guaranty. Clarke v. Russell, 3 Dall. 415, 1 L. Ed. 660.

The following words in a letter of guaranty, "Mr. Russell may be assured that Robert Murray & Co. will comply fully with their engagements," indicate no intention on the part of the person writing the letter to take any responsibility on himself. Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271.

7. Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 92, 3 L. Ed. 271.

2. Consideration—a. Sufficiency of Consideration.—A valuable consideration, however small or nominal, if given or stipulated for in good faith, is, in the absence of fraud, sufficient to support an action on any parol contract, and this is equally true as to contracts of guarantee as to others.[8] A contract of guaranty may be supported by a merely nominal consideration. In other words, a stipulation in consideration of one dollar is just as effectual and valuable a consideration as a larger sum stipulated for or paid.[9] Nor is it absolutely necessary that a benefit should accrue to the person making the promise to constitute a sufficient consideration. Thus, in the common case of a letter of credit given by A to B, the person who, on the faith of that letter, trusts B, is admitted to have his remedy against A, although no benefit accrued to A as a consideration of his promise.[9a]

b. From Whom and to Whom Consideration Must Move.—Where the guaranty is merely collateral to the principal contract, but made at the same time, and becomes an essential ground of the credit given to the principal or direct debtor, if there is no consideration other than that moving from the original debtor to the creditor under the principal contract, the plaintiff may be permitted to show that fact, if necessary, by parol proof.[10]

c. Estoppel to Deny Consideration.—Where the guarantor acknowledges the receipt of a consideration in the contract of guaranty, he is estopped afterwards to deny it.[11]

3. Mutual Assent.—A contract of guaranty, like every other contract, can only be made by the mutual assent of the parties.[12] But if the guaranty is signed by the guarantor at the request of the other party, or if the latter's agreement to accept is contemporaneous with the guaranty, or if the receipt from him of a valuable consideration, however small, is acknowledged in the guaranty, the mutual assent is proved, and the delivery of the guaranty to him or for his use completes the contract.[13]

III. Validity.

A standing guaranty by a mercantile house, to receive in payment of its debts all notes drawn by a certain other house, is valid, on the ground that the notes were taken on the credit of such guaranty. It may be terminated by a notice; but when so terminated all the notes are good against the guarantors, which were executed and circulated prior to the notice.[14]

IV. Interpretation and Construction of Contract.[15]

A. The Intention of the Parties Governs.—In the construction of all written instruments, to ascertain the intention of the parties is the great object of the court, and this is especially the case in acting upon guaranties.[16]

B. Words Construed Most Strongly against Guarantor.—It is a rule

8. The consideration for the guaranty.—Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 11 L. Ed. 326; Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

9. A consideration of one dollar is sufficient.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686, following Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 11 L. Ed. 326.

9a. Consideration sufficient though no benefit accure to promisor.—Violett v. Patton, 5 Cranch 142, 3 L. Ed. 61.

10. From whom and to whom consideration must move.—De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 501, 7 L. Ed. 227.

11. Estoppel to deny consideration.—Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 432, 11 L. Ed. 326; Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

12. Mutual assent necessary to contract of guaranty.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686; Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524, 527, 29 L. Ed. 480; National Bank v. Hall, 101 U. S. 43, 49, 25 L. Ed. 822.

13. How mutual assent proved.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686; Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524, 527, 29 L. Ed. 480.

14. Validity of guaranty.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 206, 13 L. Ed. 383.

As to constitutionality of retrospective laws, see the title STATUTES.

15. See the titles CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 570; INTERPRETATION AND CONSTRUCTION.

16. Intention of parties governs.—Marran v. Lallus, 16 Pet. 528, 10 L. Ed. 1053.

in expounding instruments such as letters of guaranty, that the words of the guarantee are to be taken as strongly against him as the sense will admit.[17] Such, also, is the English rule.[18]

C. The Surrounding Circumstances to Be Considered.—So it has been held, that, in construing a guaranty, it is proper to look at the surrounding circumstances in order to discover the subject matter the parties had in view, and thus to ascertain the scope and object of the guaranty.[19]

D. The Rule Where General Words Precede Particular Words.—Where a mercantile guarantee is preceded by a recital, definite in its terms, and to which the general words obviously refer, the same rule applies, of limiting the liability within the terms of the recital, in restraint of the general words.[20]

E. The Interpretation Should Be Fair and Reasonable.—Letters of guarantee ought to receive a fair and reasonable interpretation according to the true import of its terms. It being an engagement for the debt of another, there is certainly no reason for giving it an expanded signification, or liberal construction beyond the fair import of the terms.[21] Like all other contracts, a letter of guarantee must receive the construction which is most probable and natural under the circumstances, so as to attain the object which the parties to it had 17. Guaranty construed strongly against guarantor.—Drummond v. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 515, 516, 6 L. Ed. 712, cited and approved in Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 121, 8 L. Ed. 626.

It is true, even of a technical guaranty, that its words are to be construed as strongly against the guarantor as the sense will admit. Drummond v. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 515, 6 L. Ed. 712; Smeltzer v. White, 92 U. S. 390, 392, 23 L. Ed. 508.

A guaranty that county warrants are "genuine and regularly issued," does not mean simply that they are not forgeries, that they are not issued without consideration, and that they were ordered by the proper officers. But such guaranty undertakes also to say that they are not subject to any defense founded upon a want of legal form in the signatures or seals. Smeltzer v. White, 92 U. S. 390, 23 L. Ed. 508. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

Guaranty of municipal bonds.—Where an ordinance of a city, authorizing a contract with a gas company, and the issue to it of bonds of the city, provided that the company should "guarantee the said bonds and assume the payment of the principal thereof at maturity:" Held: 1. That the guaranty embraced both the principal and interest of the bonds. 2. That the ordinance contemplated two undertakings by the company—one, to the bondholder, to answer for the city's liability; and the other, to the city, to provide for the payment of the principal of the bonds on their maturity. The indorsement on the bonds by the president of the company, guaranteeing "the payment of the principal and interest" of them, was a compliance with the ordinance and contract as to the guaranty. New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644, 24 L. Ed. 521.

18. In England guaranty is strictly construed against guarantor.—Smeltzer v. White, 92 U. S. 390, 392, 23 L. Ed. 508.

19. Guaranty construed in light of surrounding circumstances.—Smeltzer v. White, 92 U. S. 390, 392, 23 L. Ed. 508; Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271; Drummond v. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 515, 6 L. Ed. 712; Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 9 L. Ed. 503; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 11 L. Ed. 89.

20. Particular words govern and limit general words.—Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 170, 184, 11 L. Ed. 89.

21. Interpretation should be fair and reasonable.—Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 170, 186, 11 L. Ed. 89, reaffirmed in Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 11 L. Ed. 326; Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 122, 8 L. Ed. 626; Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

It has always been held in the federal supreme court that, notwithstanding the contract of guaranty is the obligation of a surety, it is to be construed as a mercantile instrument in furtherance of its spirit and liberally, to promote the use and convenience of commerical intercourse. Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 169, 26 L. Ed. 686.

"Letters of guarantee ought to receive a liberal interpretation. By a liberal interpretation, we do not mean, that the words should be forced out of their natural meaning; but simply that the words should receive a fair and reasonable interpretation, so as to attain the objects for which the instrument is designed and the purpose to which it is applied. We should never forget that letters of guarantee are commercial instruments—generally drawn up by merchants in brief language—sometimes inartificial, and often loose in their structure and form; and to construe the words of such instruments with a nice and technical care would not only defeat the intentions of the parties, but render them too unsafe a basis to rely on for extensive credits, so often sought in the present active business of commerce in contemplation in making it.[22] Or, it is to be construed according to what is fairly to be presumed to have been the understanding of the parties, without any strict technical nicety.[23] The presumption is of course to be ascertained from the facts and circumstances accompanying the entire transaction.[24]

F. Rule as to Construction of Bonds Not Applicable.—Commercial letters are not to be construed upon the same principles as bonds.[25]

G. Rule of Construction in Equity Courts.—The construction of a letter of credit, or of guaranty, must be the same in a court of equity, as in a court of law; and any facts which might be introduced into one court to explain the transaction, may be introduced into the other.[26]

H. Questions of Law and Fact.—In accordance with the general rule ap-throughout the world." Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 449, 11 L. Ed. 326.

22. Construction should be a natural and probable one.—Decatur Bank v. St. Louis Bank, 21 Wall. 294, 298, 22 L. Ed. 560.

Hogs included in term cattle.—A bank at Decatur, Illinois, accredited B. with a bank at St. Louis, Missouri, saying that "his drafts against shipments of cattle to the extent of $10,000 are hereby guaranteed." Held, that hogs were included within the term cattle, and that B.'s drafts against shipments of hogs not having been paid, the Bank of Decatur was responsible on its letter of credit. Decatur Bank v. St. Louis Bank, 21 Wall. 294, 22 L. Ed. 560.

23. Dick v. Lee, 10 Pet. 482, 493, 9 L. Ed. 503; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 170, 187, 11 L. Ed. 89, reaffirmed in Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 11 L. Ed. 326.

A guarantee is a mercantile instrument, and to be construed according to what is fairly to be presumed to have been the understanding of the parties, without any strict technical nicety. Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 9 L. Ed. 503.

L., at Memphis, Tennessee, addressed a letter to D. & Co., at New Orleans, stating that N. & D. wished to draw on them for $2,000, saying, "Please accept their draft, and I hereby guaranty the punctual payment of it." In a letter of the same date, to one of the firm of N. & D., he said, "I send a guarantee for $2,000; the balance, I have no doubt, your friend W. will do for you." N. & D. drew a bill on D. & Co. for $4,250, which they accepted; and after having paid the draft, they gave notice to L. that they looked to him for the money; no notice was given by D. & Co. to L., that they intended to accept, or had accepted, and acted upon the guarantee, before they paid the draft; the drawers of the bill did not reimburse D. & Co. for any part of it. Action was instituted to recover $2,000 from L., being part of the bill for $4,250. Held, if the guarantee stood alone, unexplained by the letter which accompanied it, it would undoubtedly be limited to a specific draft for $2,000, and would not cover that amount in a bill for a larger sum; but the letter which accompanied it fully justified the conclusion, that the defendant undertook to guaranty $2,000, in a draft for a larger amount. The letter and guarantee were both written by the defendant, on the same sheet of paper, bear the same date, and may be construed together, as constituting the guarantee. Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 9 L. Ed. 503.

24. Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 170, 187, 11 L. Ed. 89.

25. Rules as to construction of bonds, etc., not applicable.—Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 11 L. Ed. 89, reaffirmed in Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 11 L. Ed. 326.

The adjudged cases, giving a construction to bonds with conditions, and contracts made directly between debtor and creditor, afford little aid in arriving at the true understanding of a commercial guarantee. Bonds, etc., are entered into with caution, and often after taking legal advice; they contain the entire contract, beyond which the courts rarely look for circumstances to aid in their construction. And if there be sureties bound by them, and the meaning is doubtful, the construction is restricted, and made most favorable to the sureties. Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 170, 186, 11 L. Ed. 89.

Letters of guarantee are (usually) written by merchants; rarely with caution, and scarcely ever with precision; they refer in most cases to various circumstances, and extensive commercial dealings, in the briefest, and most casual manner, without any regard to form; leaving much to inference, and their meaning open to ascertainment from extrinsic circumstances, and facts accompanying the transaction; without referring to which, they could rarely be properly understood by merchants, or by courts of justice. The attempt, therefore, to bring them to a standard of construction, founded on principles neither known or regarded by the writers, could not do otherwise than produce confusion. Such has been the consequence of the attempt to subject this description of commercial engagement to the same rules of interpretation applicable to bonds and similar precise contracts. Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 170, 186, 11 L. Ed. 89.

26. Rule of construction in equity courts.—Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271.

plicable to all written instruments, the construction of a letter of guaranty is a matter of law for the court.[27]

V. Steps Necessary to Bind Guarantor.

A. Notice of Acceptance—1. When Notice Necessary—a. In General.—Where the guaranty is of a debt which is to be subsequently created, and the guarantor cannot know beforehand whether he will be liable or not, or to what extent, notice of acceptance of the guaranty must be given to the guarantor within a reasonable time. This rule applies only where the instrument creating the guaranty is merely an offer or proposal, and an acceptance is necessary to that mutual assent without which there can be no contract.[28] And if the guaranty is signed by the guarantor without any previous request of the other party, and in his absence, for no consideration moving between them except future advances to be made to the principal debtor, the guaranty is in legal effect an offer or proposal on the part of the guarantor, needing an acceptance by the 27. Construction of guaranty a question for the jury.—Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 11 L. Ed. 89.

28. Notice is necessary to bind the guarantor.—Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271; Edmondston v. Drake, 5 Pet. 624, 8 L. Ed. 251; Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626; Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 495, 9 L. Ed. 503; Adams v. Jones, 12 Pet. 207, 213, 9 L. Ed 1058; Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171, cited and approved in Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 164, 26 L. Ed. 686; National Bank v. Hall, 101 U. S. 43, 48, 25 L. Ed. 822.

Upon a letter of guaranty, addressed to a particular person, or to persons generally, for a future credit to be given to a party in whose favor the guarantee is drawn, to charge the guarantor, notice is necessarily to be given to him, that the person giving the credit has accepted or acted upon the guarantee, and has given credit on the faith of it. Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271; Edmondston v. Drake, 5 Pet. 624, 8 L. Ed. 251; Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626; and Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 9 L. Ed. 503; Adams v. Jones, 12 Pet. 207, 9 L. Ed. 1058; Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 163, 26 L. Ed. 686.

Illustrative cases.—Under the following guaranty, viz: "I hereby guaranty the payment of any purchases of bagging and rope which Thomas Barett may have occasion to make between this and the 1st of December next," it was held that the vendor was not bound to give immediate notice to the guarantor of the amount furnished, or the sum of money for which the guarantor was held responsible. It was sufficient to give this notice within a reasonable time after the transactions were closed, and the question what was a reasonable time was a question of fact for the jury. Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

Where there is no evidence of any request from the other party to the guarantors to sign the guaranty, but it is signed in the absence of the other party, and without any consideration moving from him and received or acknowledged by him at the time of the signing, such guaranty is in legal effect an offer or proposal on the part of the guarantor, needing an acceptance by the other party to complete the contract. And the general words at the beginning of a guaranty "value received," without stating from whom, are quite as consistent with a consideration received by the guarantors from the principal debtor only. Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524, 29 L. Ed. 480.

A letter of credit was written by Edmondston, of Charleston, South Carolina, to a commercial house at Havana, in favor of J. & T. Robson, for $50,000, "which sum they may invest, through you, in the produce of your island;" on the arrival of Thomas Robson in Havana, the house to whom the letter of Edmondston was addressed, was unable to undertake the business, and introduced Thomas Robson to Drake & Mitchel, merchants of that place; exhibiting to them the letter of credit from Edmondston; Drake & Mitchel, on the faith of the letter of credit, and at the request of Thomas Robson, made large shipments of coffee to Charleston, for which they were, by agreement with Thomas Robson, to draw upon Goodhue & Co. of New York, at sixty days, where insurance was to be made; of this agreement, Edmondston was informed, and he confirmed it in writing. For a part of the cost of the coffee so shipped, Drake & Mitchel drew bills on New York, which were paid; and afterwards in consequence of a change in the rate of exchange, they drew for the balance of the shipments, on London; this was approved of by J. & T. Robson, but was not communicated to Edmondston; to provide for the payment of the bills drawn on London by Drake & Mitchel, the agents of J. & T. Robson remitted bills on London, which were protested for nonpayment; and Drake & Mitchel claimed from Edmondston, under the letter of credit, payment of their bills on London. Held, that Edmondston was not other party to complete the contract.[29] When a party intends to avail himself of the guaranty by making sales on the faith of it to the person to whom it is given, such party must give notice, within a reasonable time, to the guarantor, of his acceptance and intention to act on it.[30]

b. Reason of Rule.—It is, in itself, a reasonable rule, enabling the guarantor to know the nature and extent of his liability; to exercise due vigilance in guarding himself against losses, which might otherwise be unknown to him; and to avail himself of the appropriate means, in law and equity, to compel the other parties to discharge him from future responsibility.[31] Transactions between the other parties, to a great extent, might, from time to time, exist, in which credits might be given, and payments might be made, the existence and due appropriation of which might materially affect his own rights and security.[32] liable for the same. It would be an extraordinary departure from that exactness and precision which is an important principle in the law and usage of merchants, if a merchant should act on a letter of credit, such as that in this case, and hold the writer responsible, without giving notice to him that he had acted on it. Edmondston v. Drake, 5 Pet. 624, 8 L. Ed. 251.

The rule is absolute and imperative.—The rule requiring this notice of acceptance of the guaranty and of the intention of the party to act under it within a reasonable time after the acceptance is absolute and imperative in this court, according to all the cases; it is deemed essential to an inception of the contract; he is, therefore, advised of his accruing liabilities upon the guaranty, and may very well anticipate, or be charged with notice of, an amount of indebtedness to the extent of the credit pledged. Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 475, 13 L. Ed. 497.

But the same strictness of proof of notice is not necessary, to charge a party upon his guarantee, as would be to support an action upon the bill itself, when, by the law merchant, a demand upon, and refusal by, the acceptors, must be proved, in order to charge any other party upon the bill. There are many cases where the guarantee is of a specific existing demand, by a promissory note or other evidence of a debt, and such guarantee is given upon the note itself, or with reference to it, and recognition of it, when no notice would be necessary; the guarantor, in such cases, knows precisely what he guarantees, and the extent of his responsibility; and any further notice to him would be useless. But when the guarantee is prospective, and to attach upon future transactions, and the guarantor uninformed whether his guarantee has been accepted and acted upon, or not, the fitness and justice of the rule requiring notice, is supported by considerations that are unanswerable. Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 9 L. Ed. 503.

29. Where guaranty is signed without request.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686; Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524, 527, 29 L. Ed. 480.

When is a guaranty an offer and proposal.—Where there is in the guaranty no evidence of any request from the plaintiff to the guarantor, or of any consideration moving from it and received or acknowledged by them at the time of their signing the guaranty, such guaranty is in legal effect an offer or proposal on the part of the guarantor, needing an acceptance by the other party to complete the contract. And the general words at the beginning of the guaranty, "value received," without stating from whom, are quite as consistent with a consideration received by the guarantors from the principal debtor only. Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524, 29 L. Ed. 480, following Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

30. Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

Where the guarantor took defense upon the ground that he had before notice given up securities belonging to the receiver of the guaranty which would have made him whole, the time of his doing this should have been given to the jury as an essential ingredient for their judgment upon the question whether or not he had received reasonable notice of his liability. Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

31. Reason of rule.—Adams v. Jones, 12 Pet. 207, 213, 9 L. Ed. 1058.

A party giving a letter of guaranty has a right to know whether it is accepted, and whether the person to whom it is addressed means to give credit on the footing of it, or not; it may be most material, not only as to his responsibility, but as to future rights and proceedings; it may regulate, in a great measure, his course of conduct, and his exercise of vigilance in regard to the party in whose favor it is given. Especially, it is important, in the case of a continuing guarantee, since it may guide his judgment in recalling or suspending it. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

32. Adams v. Jones, 12 Pet. 207, 212, 9 L. Ed. 1058.

The reason of the rule applies more forcibly to a continuing guaranty,[33] or a general letter of guaranty; for it might otherwise be impracticable for the guarantor to know to whom, and under what circumstances, the guaranty attached, and to what period it might be protracted.[34]

c. Rule in Pennsylvania.—But in a case decided by the supreme court of Pennsylvania it was held unnecessary to answer a letter of guaranty, acquiescence and acceptance being implied.[35]

2. When Notice Unnecessary—a. In General.—Where, however, the guaranty is made at the request of the guarantee, it then becomes the answer of the guarantor to a proposal made to him, and its delivery to or for the use of the guarantee completes the communication between them and constitutes a contract. The same result follows where the agreement to accept is contemporaneous with the guaranty, and constitutes its consideration and basis. It must be so wherever there is a valuable consideration, other than the expected advances to be made to the principal debtor, which, at the time the undertaking is given, passes from the guarantee to the guarantor, and equally so where the instrument is in the form of a bilateral contract, in which the guarantee binds himself to make the contemplated advances, or which otherwise creates, by its recitals, a privity between the guarantee and the guarantor; for in each of these cases the mutual assent of the parties to the obligation is either expressed or necessarily implied.[36] Likewise where there is an express consideration stated in the in-

33. Continuing guaranties.—A party giving a letter of guaranty has a right to know whether it is accepted; and whether the person to whom it is addressed means to give credit on the footing of it, or not; it may be most material, not only as to his responsibility, but as to future rights and proceedings; it may regulate, in a great measure, his course of conduct, and his exercise of vigilance in regard to the party in whose favor it is given; especially is it important, in case of a continuing guarantee, since it may guide his judgment in recalling or suspending it. This last remark by no means warrants the conclusion, that notice is not necessary in a guarantee of a single transaction; but only, that the reason of the rule applies more forcibly to a continuing guarantee. Lee v. Dick, 10 Pet. 482, 9 L. Ed. 503, reaffirming Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 125, 8 L. Ed. 626.

34. General letters of guaranty.—Adams v. Jones, 12 Pet. 207, 213, 9 L. Ed. 1058.

35. Notice of acceptance unnecessary in Pennsylvania.—Eddowes v. Niell, 4 Dall. 133, 1 L. Ed. 772.

"Letters of credit are a common and useful instrument in the course of commerce. They are, however, of a very serious nature; and the writer is bound to comply with the contents, according to their genuine and honest import. In order to render them obligatory as a contract, it is not necessary that they should be answered, if credit is given upon them. Like the case of transmitting a bond, in a letter, acquiescence and acceptance are implied, in the silent receipt of the instrument." Eddowes v. Niell, 4 Dall. 133, 134, 1 L. Ed. 772.

36. When notice of acceptance unnecessary.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 166, 26 L. Ed. 686; Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524, 29 L. Ed. 480.

The rule requiring notice of acceptance of a guaranty by the guarantee and of his intention to act under it proceeds upon the ground that the case in which it applies is an offer or proposal on the part of the guarantor, which does not become effective and binding as an obligation until accepted by the party to whom it is made; that until then it is inchoate and incomplete, and may be withdrawn by the proposer. But a guaranty may be as well for an existing debt, or it may be supported by some consideration distinct from the advance to the principal debtor, passing directly from the guarantee to the guarantor. In the case of the guaranty of an existing debt, such a consideration is necessary to support the undertaking as a binding obligation. In both cases, no notice of assent other than the performance of the consideration, is necessary to perfect the agreement. Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

What is an accepted guaranty.—A guaranty in the following words: "We hereby guarantee unto them, the said Wells, Fargo & Co., unconditionally at all times, any indebtedness of Gordon & Co.," etc., is not a mere unaccepted proposal. It carries upon its face conclusive evidence that it has been accepted by Wells, Fargo & Co., and that it was understood and intended to be, on delivery to them, as it took place, a complete and perfect obligation of guaranty. And the words "unconditionally at all times," have the effect of waiving the notice of acceptance, because they can have no effect at all except as the words of a contract, and there can be no contract without notice of acceptance. Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

strument as paid by the guarantee to the guarantor, the guaranty is binding on delivery without notice of acceptance.[37]

b. When Principal Debtor Is Insolvent.—If the principal debtor be insolvent at the time when the payment becomes due, even this notice is not necessary, unless some damage or loss can be shown to have accrued to the guarantor in consequence of his not receiving such a notice. And in no instance, in case of a guaranty, will the guarantor be exempt from liability for want of notice, unless loss or damage is shown to have accrued as a consequence.[38]

3. Distinguished from Rule Respecting Negotiable Instruments.—The doctrine governing the question of notice at the close of the dealings on the faith of the guaranty, and also at a subsequent period when the indebtedness under it becomes due, is to be distinguished from the liability assumed in this respect by the drawer or indorser of commercial paper.[39]

4. Time of Giving Notice—a. In General.—Notice of acceptance need not be given to the guarantor immediately;[40] it is sufficient if it is given within a reasonable time,[41] and what is a reasonable time depends upon the circumstances of each particular case, and is generally a question of fact for the jury to determine.[42]

b. Necessity for Intermediate Notice.—Intermediate notice is not a necessary step to charge the guarantor, as notice of acceptance and intention to act upon the guaranty is regarded as sufficient until the debt becomes due and payable.[43] In other words, in the case of a continuing guaranty, it is not necessary to give notice of each successive transaction.[44]

5. Form and Sufficiency of Notice—a. In General.—This notice need not be proved to have been given in writing, or in any particular form; but may

37. Rule where consideration is expressed in guaranty.—In Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686, it was held that a guaranty, if expressed to be in consideration of one dollar paid to the guarantor by the guarantee, the receipt of which is therein acknowledged, is not an unaccepted proposal, but is without notice of acceptance binding on delivery. Followed in Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524, 29 L. Ed. 480.

38. Insolvency of principal debtor dispenses with notice.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497, following Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171.

39. Distinguished from notice to be given by indorsers.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497. See the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 257.

40. Immediate notice of acceptance unnecessary.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch. 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

41. Notice in a reasonable time sufficient.—The rule as laid down by the federal supreme court in Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 126, 8 L. Ed. 626, is, that, in a letter of credit, where the contract is a continuing one, all that is required is that, when all the transactions between the parties under the guaranty are closed, notice of the amount for which the guarantor is held responsible should, within a reasonable time afterwards, be communicated to him. Cited in Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 474, 13 L. Ed. 497.

42. Reasonableness of time a question for the jury.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

43. Intermediate notice not necessary.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497, cited and approved in Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

44. Notice of each successive advance unnecessary in continuing guaranty.—Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

If this had been the case of a guarantee limited to a single transaction, it would have been the duty of the plaintiffs to have given notice of the advances, acceptances or indorsements made under it, within a reasonable time after they were made. But this being a continuing guarantee, in which the parties contemplate a series of transactions, and as soon as the defendants had received notice of the acceptance, they must necessarily have understood that there would be successive advances, acceptances and indorsements, which would be renewed and discharged, from time to time, there is no general principle upon which to rest, that notice of each successive transaction, as it arose, should be given; all that could be required would be, that when all the transactions under the guarantee were closed, notice for the amount for which the guarantors were responsible, should, within a reasonable time afterward, be communicated to them. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

be inferred by the jury, from facts and circumstances which shall warrant such inference.[45]

b. Notice to Guarantor's Agent.—The well-settled rule governing the relations between principal and agent, that notice to the agent is notice to the principal, applies also in the case of a guaranty. Therefore notice to the guarantor of the agent that the guarantee has accepted and acted upon the letter of credit, will dispense with any further notice to the guarantor.[46]

6. Proof of Notice.—The admissions of the guarantor in a letter of guaranty for the payment of purchases of certain goods, when called upon for payment, that he had given up certain papers to the person whose credit is guaranteed which would have indemnified him, on his assurance that the debt had been settled, is not an acknowledgment of due notice that the plaintiffs had sold the goods on the faith of the letter of credit, because such admission may not have been made with full knowledge of all the facts in the case. At most it is only a question for the jury, accompanied with proper directions of the court as to the law.[47]

7. Waiver of Notice.—This notice may be waived expressly or impliedly.[48] But a recognition by the parties to a letter of credit, of their obligation to pay as guarantors, under a supposed liability, which did not arise from the facts of the case, and of which facts they were ignorant, would not be a waiver of the notice they were entitled to have of the acceptance of their guaranty.[49] Nor is a promise to pay a debt, by the guarantors, qualified with a condition which was rejected, a waiver by the guarantor of his right to notice of the acceptance of the guaranty.[50]

8. Questions of Law and Fact.—The sufficiency of notice of acceptance to bind the guarantor is a question of fact for the consideration of the jury at the trial.[51]

B. Demand on Principal Debtor and Notice of Default—1. In General.—There is no analogy between letters of guaranty on the one hand, and bills of exchange and other negotiable instruments on the other, with regard to the giving of notice of a default in payment by the principal, for the engagement of the letter of credit extends, in its very nature, to various transactions, without reference to time or amount.[52]

2. Necessity for Demand—a. In General.—By the very terms of this guaranty, as well as by the general principles of law, the guarantors are only collaterally liable, upon the failure of the principal debtor to pay the debt;[53] therefore, a demand of payment of the sum advanced under the guaranty, should be made of the person to whom the same was made, and in case of nonpayment

45. No particular form of notice required.—Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171, cited and approved in Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 164, 26 L. Ed. 686.

46. Notice to agent as constituting notice to guarantor.—The question whether knowledge of the guarantor of the agent of credits given to the principal debtor upon the faith of the guarantee is not full notice to the guarantor and dispenses with any further and other notice to him, is a question of fact for the jury; and if satisfactorily established will dispense with any further notice. Adams v. Jones, 12 Pet. 207, 9 L. Ed. 1058.

47. Admissions of guarantor as acknowledgment of notice.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

48. Notice of acceptance may be waived.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

Where the guaranty is in the following words: "For and in consideration of one dollar to us in hand paid we hereby guarantee unconditionally at all times, any indebtedness, etc.," it was held that the words "unconditionally at all times" have the effect of waiving the notice of acceptance. Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

49. What is not a waiver of notice.—Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171.

50. Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171.

51. Sufficiency of notice of acceptance a question of fact.—Adams v. Jones, 12 Pet. 207, 9 L. Ed. 1058.

52. Notice of default in case of guaranties.—Eddowes v. Niell, 4 Dall. 133, 1 L. Ed. 772.

53. Demand on principal debtor and notice of default necessary.—Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

by him, notice of such demand and nonpayment should be given, in a reasonable time, to the guarantors, otherwise, they would be discharged from the guaranty,[54] and if any loss happens in consequence of the omission to give the notice within a reasonable time, the fault is attributable to the laches of the creditor, and must fall on him.[55] But while it is undoubtedly true, that if the guarantee fails to give reasonable notice to the guarantor of the default of the principal debtor, and loss or damage thereby ensues to the guarantor, to that extent the latter is discharged, yet both the laches of the plaintiff and the loss of the defendant must concur to constitute a defense;[56] an unreasonable delay in giving notice, or a failure to give it altogether, is not of itself a bar.[57] If the guarantor can prove he has suffered damage by the neglect to make the demand on the maker, and to give notice, he can be discharged only to the extent of the damage sustained.[58] Moreover, the burden of proving injury flowing from want of notice rests upon the guarantor.[59]

b. Rule Where Principal Debtor Is Insolvent.—When the party in whose favor a letter of credit is given, afterwards becomes insolvent, and his insolvency is known to the guarantors, it is not necessary, in an action on the letter of credit, to prove that a demand of payment was made on the insolvent,[60] unless it can be shown that some damage or loss has accrued to the guarantor in consequence of his not receiving such notice.[61]

3. Sufficiency of Notice.—The authorities concur in making a distinction between actions upon a bill or note, and actions against a party who has guarantied such bill or note by a separate contract. In the former instances notice in order to charge the drawer or indorser is with very few established exceptions uniformly required; in the latter the obligation to give notice is much more relaxed, and its omission does not imply injury as a matter of course.[62] The guarantor must prove that he has suffered damage by the neglect to make the demand on the maker and to give notice, and then he is discharged only to the extent of the damage sustained.[63] The creditors are not bound to institute legal proceedings against the debtor, but they are bound to use reasonable diligence to make demand and to give notice of nonpayment.[64]

4. Questions of Law and Fact.—What is a reasonable time must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case, and is generally a question of fact for the jury to determine.[65]

54. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626; Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 26 L. Ed. 686.

When the debt falls due against the principal debtor, a demand of payment should be made, and in cases of nonpayment by him, notice of such demand should be given in a reasonable time to the guarantor; otherwise he would be discharged from his liability. Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 474, 13 L. Ed. 497, citing Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 126, 8 L. Ed. 626.

55. Guarantor discharged where injury results.—Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 475, 13 L. Ed. 497.

56. Both laches and damages must concur to discharge guarantor.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 170, 26 L. Ed. 686.

57. Mere delay in giving notice no bar.—Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159, 170, 26 L. Ed. 686.

58. Extent to which guarantor is discharged.—Rhett v. Poe, 2 How. 457, 485, 11 L. Ed. 338, following Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171.

59. Burden of proving injury.—Rhett v. Poe, 2 How. 457, 11 L. Ed. 338.

60. Insolvency of principal debtor will excuse demand.—Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171, reaffirmed in Rhett v. Poe, 2 How. 457, 485, 11 L. Ed. 338.

The guarantor of a promissory note, whose name does not appear upon the note, is bound without notice, where the maker of the note was insolvent at its maturity, unless he can show that he has sustained some prejudice by want of notice of a demand on the maker, and of notice of nonpayment. Rhett v. Poe, 2 How. 457, 485, 11 L. Ed. 338, following Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. 497, 9 L. Ed. 1171.

61. Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

62. Sufficiency of notice of demand.—Rhett v. Poe, 2 How. 457, 484, 11 L. Ed. 338.

63. Strictness of rule in case of negotiable instruments much relaxed.—Rhett v. Poe, 2 How. 457, 458, 11 L. Ed. 338.

64. Institution of a suit unnecessary.—Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

65. Reasonableness of time for giving notice a question of fact.—Lawrence v.

VI. Rights and Liabilities of Guarantor.

A. Rights—1. What Obligations Are Covered by the Guaranty.—Nothing can be clearer, upon principle, than that if a letter of credit be given, but in fact no advances are made upon the faith of it, the party is not entitled to recover for any debts due by him from the debtor in whose favor it was given, which have been incurred subsequently to the guaranty, and without any reference to it.[66]

2. Right of Guarantor to the Indemnity.—When a guarantor is insolvent, a court of equity will not decree the money (raised for his indemnity), to be paid to him, without security that the debt to the principal creditor should be satisfied.[67]

B. Liabilities—1. In General.—Although the liability of the guarantor is dependent upon the liability of the principal,[68] yet, upon general principles of law, in the case of a guaranty of payment, and not of collection merely, a suit may be commenced against the guarantor without any previous suit against the principal.[69]

2. Measure and Extent of Liability of Guarantor—a. In General.—As these instruments are of extensive use in the commercial world, upon the faith of which large credits and advances are made, care should be taken to hold the party bound to the full extent of what appears to be his engagement.[70] But in law and in the understanding of commercial men, credit given by a letter of credit is confined to a particular portion and to a particular time.[71]

b. Extent of Liability with Respect to Amount.—The general rule is, to attribute to the obligation of a guarantor, the same extent as that of the principal. Unless from the terms of the contract an intention appears to reduce his liability within more narrow bounds, a restriction will not be imposed by construction contrary to the nature of the engagement. If the terms of his engagement are general and unrestricted, and embrace the entire subject (omnem causam), his liability will be measured by that of the principal, and embrace the same accessories and consequences (connexorum et dependentium). It will be presumed that he had in view the guaranty of the obligations his principal had assumed.[72] A surety, however, cannot be held beyond the terms or legal effect of his engagement; and when that has respect to the conduct or fidelity of the principal, or to any other matter usually contemplated as arising in the future, it is to be interpreted prospectively, and not retrospectively. But if, from the nature of the case, the subject of guaranty is a past transaction in whole or in part, and the language of the engagement, taken in its natural sense or legal effect, is broad enough to cover it, such language may properly be construed to McCalmont, 2 How. 426, 11 L. Ed. 326; Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 474, 13 L. Ed. 497.

66. Right of guarantor to recover for debts subsequently incurred.—Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

67. Right of guarantor to indemnity.—Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271.

68. Liability of guarantor depends on liability of principal.—Drummond v. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 515, 516, 6 L. Ed. 712.

69. Right to proceed first against guarantor.—Memphis v. Brown, 20 Wall. 289, 22 L. Ed. 264, citing Railroad Co. v. Howard, 7 Wall. 392, 407, 19 L. Ed. 117; Zabriskie v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 23 How. 381, 16 L. Ed. 488.

70. Measure and extent of guarantor's liability.—Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 122, 8 L. Ed. 626.

71. Credit is confined to a particular time.—Edmondston v. Drake, 5 Pet. 624, 8 L. Ed. 251.

72. General rule as to measure of guarantor's liability.—Benjamin v. Hillard, 23 How. 149, 164, 16 L. Ed. 518.

There being a contract for furnishing a steam engine, the following guaranty was made: "For value received, I hereby guaranty the performance of the within contract, on the part of Hopkins & Leach; and in case of nonperformance thereof, to refund to Messrs. Hillard & Mordecai all sums of money they may pay or advance thereon, with interest from the time the same is paid." Held, this contract is not in the alternative, but consists of two terms: one, that the principals shall perform their engagement, not merely by the delivery of some machinery, but of such machinery as the contract includes; the other, that if there be a nonperformance, whether excusable do so.[73] It is one of the canons of the law of guaranty that no party shall be bound beyond the extent of the engagement which shall appear from the expression of the guaranty, and the nature of the transaction.[74]

Liability of Guarantor for Commissions and Disbursements.—The guarantor may be held liable to the guarantee for the commissions, disbursements, and other charges of the transaction.[75]

c. Extent of Liability with Respect to Time.—Where the time for which credit is to be given is left indefinite in the letter of guaranty, it must receive a reasonable interpretation. Accordingly where the period of credit was given between the date of the letter of guaranty and the first of December, it was held that the limitation was as to the time within which the purchases guaranteed in the letter of credit were to be made; not as to the time of the credit to be given the purchaser.[76]

3. Waiver or Release from Liability.—The mere use of and payment for articles furnished under a contract of guaranty, does not constitute a waiver, release or extinguishment of the liability of the guarantor.[77]

4. Effect of Election to Proceed First against Principal Debtor.—An or not, the money advanced on the contract shall be secured to the plaintiffs, to the extent to which the principals are liable. Benjamin v. Hillard, 23 How. 149, 16 L. Ed. 518.

73. Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 213, 30 L. Ed. 642.

74. Drummond v. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 515, 516, 6 L. Ed. 712.

The following letter of guaranty: "Baltimore, 17th Nov. 1803, Capt. Charles Drummond, Dear Sir—My son William having mentioned to me, that in consequence of your esteem and friendship for him, you had caused and placed property of yours and your brother's in his hands for sale, and that it is probable, from time to time, you may have considerable transactions together on my part, I think proper to guaranty to you the conduct of my son, and shall hold myself liable, and do hold myself liable for the faithful discharge of all his engagements to you, both now and in future. (Signed) Geo. Prestman," will extend to a partnership debt incurred by William P. to Charles Drummond, and Richard his brother, it being proved that the transactions to which the letter related were with them as partners, and that no other brother of the said Charles was interested therein. Drummond v. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 515, 516, 6 L. Ed. 712.

75. Liability for commissions, disbursements, etc.—B., a merchant in New York, wrote to L., a merchant in New Orleans, on the 9th of January, 1806, mentioning that a ship belonging to T. & Son, of Portland, was ordered to New Orleans for freight, and requesting L. to procure a freight for her, and purchase and put on board of her five hundred bales of cotton, on the owner's account; "for the payment of all shipments on owners' account, thy bill on T. & Son, of Portland, or me, 60 days sight, shall meet due honor." On the 13th of February, B. again wrote to L., reiterating the former request, and inclosing a letter from T. & Son, to L., containing their instructions to L., with whom they afterwards continued to correspond, adding, "thy bills on me, for their account, for cotton they order shipped by the Mac, shall meet with due honor." On the 24th of July, 1806, B. again wrote to L., on the same subject, saying, "the owners wish her loaded on their own account, for the payment of which, thy bills on me shall meet with due honor, at 60 days sight." L. proceeded to purchase and ship the cotton, and drew several bills on B., which were paid; he, afterwards, drew two bills on T. & Son, payable in New York, which were protested for nonpayment, they having, in the meantime, failed; and about two years afterwards, drew bills on B., for the balance due, including the two protested bills, damages and interest. Held, that L. had a right to recover from B. the commissions, disbursements and other charges of the transaction. Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. 101, 102, 4 L. Ed. 343.

76. Extent of guarantor's liability with respect to time.—The following guaranty, viz: "I hereby guaranty the payment of any purchases of bagging and rope which Thomas Barrett may have occasion to make between this and the 1st of December next," extends the liability of the guarantor to purchases upon a reasonable credit, made anterior to the 1st of December, although the time of payment was not to arrive until after that day. Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 10 How. 461, 13 L. Ed. 497.

77. Waiver or release of guarantor's liability.—Where there was a contract to furnish a steam engine with a guaranty of the performance of the contract on the part of the seller of the machine, it was held that the vendee's use of and payment for a machine with latent defects does not relieve the seller or his guarantor from liability. Benjamin v. Hillard, 23 How. 149, 16 L. Ed. 518.

election on the part of the guarantee to proceed in the first instance against the principal debtor, does not preclude him from afterwards resorting to the guarantor.[78]

VII. Rights of Guarantee.

A merchant who indorses the bills of another, upon the faith of the guarantee of a third, cannot (upon the insolvency of the principal debtor and of the guarantor) resort to a trust fund created by the principal debtor, for the indemnity of the guarantor, for the amount which the guarantor should pay.[79] But the person for whose benefit a trust is created, who is to be the ultimate receiver of money, may sustain a suit in equity, to have it paid directly to himself.[80]

VIII. Discharge of the Guarantor.

A. By Alteration in the Contract.—A material alteration of the contract of guaranty without the consent of the guarantor and not communicated to him, will discharge him from liability. As, for example, any alteration as to the place or form of payment.[81] But a waiver of punctual delivery does not constitute such a change in the contract as to discharge the guarantor.[82]

B. By Extension of Time of Payment.—By the general law of suretyship, any change whatever in the contract for the performance of which the guarantor is liable, made without his consent, such, for instance, as an extension of time for payment, if made upon sufficient consideration, discharges the guarantor from liability.[83] But the mere prolongation of the term of payment of the principal debtor, or of the time for the performance of his duty, will not discharge a surety or guarantor. "There must be another contract substituted

78. Effect of election to proceed first against principal debtor.—B., a merchant in New York, wrote to L., a merchant in New Orleans, on the 9th of January, 1806, mentioning that a ship belonging to T. & Son, of Portland, was ordered to New Orleans for freight, and requesting L. to procure a freight for her, and purchase and put on board of her five hundred bales of cotton, on the owner's account; "for the payment of all shipments on owners' account, thy bill on T. & Son, of Portland, or me, 60 days sight, shall meet due honor." On the 13th of February, B. again wrote to L., reiterating the former request, and inclosing a letter from T. & Son, to L., containing their instructions to L., with whom they afterwards continued to correspond, adding, "thy bills on me, for their account, for cotton they order shipped by the Mac, shall meet with due honor." On the 24th of July, 1806, B. again wrote to L., on the same subject, saying, "the owners wish her loaded on their own account, for the payment of which, thy bills on me shall meet with due honor, at 60 days sight." L. proceeded to purchase and ship the cotton, and drew several bills on B., which were paid; he, afterwards, drew two bills on T. & Son, payable in New York, which were protested for nonpayment, they having, in the meantime, failed; and about two years afterwards, drew bills on B., for the balance due, including the two protested bills, damages and interest. Held, that L., by making his election to draw upon T. & Son, in the first instance, did not, thereby, preclude himself from resorting to B., whose undertaking was, in effect, a promise to furnish the funds necessary to carry into execution the adventure. Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. 101, 102, 4 L. Ed. 343.

79. Right of guarantee to indemnity fund provided for guarantor.—Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271.

80. Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch 69, 3 L. Ed. 271.

81. Discharge of guarantor by alteration of contract.—Edmondston v. Drake, 5 Pet. 624, 8 L. Ed. 251.

82. Waiver of punctual delivery does not discharge guarantor.—In a contract to sell and deliver machinery, the performance of which has been guaranteed, a waiver of the punctual delivery of the machinery does not constitute such a change in the contract as to discharge the guarantor. A mutual alteration of the contract by the principal parties would operate to discharge the defendant as a guarantor; but an acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs in a longer time than was specified in the contract for fulfillment, especially as the time of fulfillment was somewhat indefinite, would not, as a matter of law, operate to discharge the defendant. Benjamin v. Hillard, 23 How. 149, 16 L. Ed. 518.

83. Extension of time for payment discharges guarantor.—Miller v. Stewart, 9 Wheat. 680, 6 L. Ed. 189; Smith v. United States, 2 Wall. 219, 17 L. Ed. 788; Reese v. United States, 9 Wall. 13, 19 L. Ed. 541; Guaranty Co. v. Pressed Brick Co., 191 U. S. 416, 423, 48 L. Ed. 242.

for the original contract, or some alteration in a point so material as in effect to make a new contract, without the surety's consent to produce that result. But when the essential features of the contract and its objects are preserved, and the parties, without objection from the surety, and without any legal constraint on themselves, mutually accommodate each other, so as better to arrive at their end, we can find no ground for the surety to complain."[84]

C. By Extension of Time for Performance.—The guarantor will be discharged by an extension of time for performance, made without the consent of the guarantor.[85]

D. By Extinguishment of the Principal Obligation.—Although the payment of the principal obligation will operate as a discharge of the guarantor, yet according to well-settled principles this cannot be brought about through the medium of a promissory note unless it appears that it was received as an absolute payment, a fact which the court has no right to assume. But if the notes were received as conditional payment, the guarantor may be discharged if it appears that due diligence has not been used to recover the amount of them from the individuals responsible thereon. Because he who receives any note upon which third persons are responsible, as a conditional payment of a debt due to him, is bound to use due diligence to collect it of the parties thereto, at maturity, otherwise, by his laches, the debt will be discharged.[86]

E. By Fraud and False Representations.—False representations not coming from the guarantee will not release the guarantor from liability on his guaranty.[87]

84. Mere prolongation of time for payment does not discharge guarantor.—Benjamin v. Hillard, 23 How. 149, 165, 16 L. Ed. 518.

85. Extension of time for performance exonerates guarantor.—The ordinary rule that exonerates the guarantor, in case the time fixed for the performance of the contract by the principal be extended, does not apply to a bond given in pursuance of the act of 1894, 28 Stat. 278, c. 280, "for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works," executed by a guaranty company, not only for a faithful performance of the original contract, but for the payment of the debts of the principal obligor to third parties, especially where there is no evidence of loss thereby occasioned. Guaranty Co. v. Pressed Brick Co., 191 U. S. 416, 423, 48 L. Ed. 242.

86. Guarantor discharged by payment of principal obligation.—Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

Action upon the following letter of guaranty, written by the defendants and delivered to the plaintiffs: "Port Gibson, December 1827. Messrs. Reynolds Byrne & Co. Gentlemen:—Our friend, Mr. Chester Haring, to assist him in business, may require your aid, from time to time, either by acceptance or indorsement of his paper, or advances in cash; in order to save you from harm by so doing, we do hereby bind ourselves, severally and jointly, to be responsible to you, at any time, for a sum, not exceeding eight thousand dollars, should the said Chester Haring, fail to do so. Your obedient servants, James S. Douglass, John G. Singleton, Thomas Going." An account was stated between the plaintiffs and Chester Haring, showing an apparent balance against Haring of $22,573; and at the foot of the account, the plaintiffs gave a receipt for several promissory notes, payable at distant periods, dated on the same day with the account; the notes were made by C. Haring, and indorsed by Daniel Greenleaf. The receipt stated, that "the notes, when discounted, the proceeds to go to the credit of this account." The notes were discounted, and the proceeds received by the plaintiffs, but, being unpaid, they were protested; notice of their nonpayment was given to the indorsers, and they were afterwards taken up by the plaintiffs, as indorsers thereof. Held, if the plaintiffs below, by their indorsements, were compellable to pay, and did afterwards pay, the notes, upon their dishonor by the maker, and these notes fell within the scope of the guarantee, they might, without question, recover the amount from the guarantors. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

87. Discharge of guarantor by false representations.—Lumber Co. v. Buchtel, 101 U. S. 633, 25 L. Ed. 1072.

A. contracted to sell B. a tract of pine land at a stipulated sum, payable in future installments, a conveyance to be made only upon payment of the several sums as they became due, the cutting or removal of the timber being in the meantime prohibited without the written permission of A. Two days afterwards B. assigned the contract to C. A. assented to the assignment, and gave C. permission to enter the lands and cut and remove the timber, in consideration whereof the latter guaranteed the payments stipu-

F. By Failure to Give Notice of Default and Failure to Proceed against Principal.—The gross negligence of the guarantee in failing to give notice of a default in payment by the principal, or to proceed against the principal when requested to do so, in order to save the debt, may operate to exonerate the guarantor both in law and equity.[88] But the lapse of nineteen years, without notice of a default in payment by the principal, will not operate to discharge the guarantor, where it appears that during most of this time war and various other excuses prevented the guarantee from calling upon the guarantor.[89]

IX. Revocation of Guaranties.

Uncertain and equivocal language will not work the revocation of an explicit letter of guaranty.[90] The guaranty can only be revoked by clear and explicit language. Implied revocations are not favored. Nothing could be more inconsistent with that candor and good faith which ought to mark the transactions of mercantile men, than to favor the revocation of an explicit contract, on the construction of a correspondence nowhere avowing that object.[91]

X. Pleading and Practice.

A. Jurisdiction.—The fact that a creditor has a remedy at law against a principal debtor does not prevent him, after the issue in vain of execution against such principal, from proceeding in equity against a guarantor.[92]

lated in the contract The first installment due not having been paid, A. brought suit against C. upon the guaranty. The latter set up the defense that he was induced to enter into the undertaking by the false and fraudulent representation of A. as to the quantity of good merchantable timber contained in the tract. The case was, by stipulation of the parties, tried before a referee, who reported that the representations were made by an agent of B., and that he did "not find" that A. participated therein. Held: 1. That A.'s grant of permission to C. to cut and remove the timber was the release of an important security to him against possible loss if payment were not made on the contract, and that the guaranty was a reasonable exaction from C. therefor. 2. That said representations not coming from A., nor relating to the permission to cut and remove the timber, did not release C. from liability on the guaranty. Lumber Co. v. Buchtel, 101 U. S. 633, 25 L. Ed. 1072.

88. Discharge by failing to give notice of default.—Eddowes v. Niell, 4 Dall. 133, 1 L. Ed. 772.

89. Excuses for failure to give notice of default.—Eddowes v. Niell, 4 Dall. 133, 1 L. Ed. 772.

90. Guaranty not revoked by equivocal language.—Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. 101, 4 L. Ed. 343.

Illustrative case.—B., a merchant in New York, wrote to L., a merchant in New Orleans, on the 9th of January, 1806, mentioning that a ship belonging to T. & Son, of Portland, was ordered to New Orleans for freight, and requesting L. to procure a freight for her, and purchase and put on board of her five hundred bales of cotton, on the owner's account; "for the payment of all shipments on owners' account, thy bill on T. & Son, of Portland, or me, 60 days sight, shall meet due honor." On the 13th of February, B. again wrote to L., reiterating the former request, and inclosing a letter from T. & Son, to L., containing their instructions to L., with whom they afterwards continued to correspond, adding, "thy bills on me, for their account, for cotton they order shipped by the Mac, shall meet with due honor." On the 24th of July, 1806, B. again wrote to L., on the same subject, saying, "the owners wish her loaded on their own account, for the payment of which, thy bills on me shall meet with due honor, at 60 days sight." L. proceeded to purchase and ship the cotton, and drew several bills on B., which were paid; he, afterwards, drew two bills on T. & Son, payable in New York, which were protested for nonpayment, they having, in the meantime, failed; and about two years afterwards, drew bills on B., for the balance due, including the two protested bills, damages and interest. Held, that the letters of the 13th of February, and 24th of July, contained no revocation of the undertaking in the letter of the 9th of January; that although the bills on T. & Son were not drawn, according to B.'s assumption, this could not affect the right of L. to recover the damages paid by him, on the return of the bills, but that L. had still a right to recover on the original guarantee of the debt. Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. 101, 4 L. Ed. 343.

91. Implied revocations are not favored.—Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. 101, 4 L. Ed. 343.

92. Equity jurisdiction.—Railroad Co. v. Howard, 7 Wall. 392, 19 L. Ed. 117. See the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

B. Pleading—1. Form of Action.—No recovery can be had under the common counts in assumpsit, on a collateral guaranty.[93]

2. Parties.—Assumpsit will lie upon a letter of credit, by him who trusts a third person upon the faith of that letter.[94] But in a later case it is laid down that only the person or firm to which a letter of credit or guaranty is addressed can maintain an action on the letter.[95] Upon a written guaranty given to a person about to form a partnership with the son of the guarantor, indemnifying him against any loss or liability he may sustain from the former business of the guarantor's son, the firm cannot maintain an action. The indemnity is personal and limited to the guarantee.[96]

XI. Evidence.

A. Proof of Notice.—In an action on a guaranty of the performance of a contract, evidence of a notice to the defendant of defects in the work contracted to be performed is admissible, where it is not introduced as testimony of the defects.[97]

B. Parol Evidence.[98]—That salutary rule of evidence, that a written contract cannot be explained by parol evidence except where there is an ambiguity, applies equally to contracts of guaranty.[99] Accordingly, where a contract of guaranty is complete within itself, any additional agreement as to the time and character of the credit to be given cannot be imported into it by parol.[1] But extrinsic evidence may be used to ascertain the true import of a letter of guaranty.[2] Where extrinsic evidence is not offered to explain or establish the construction of the letter of credit, as whether it constitutes a limited or continuing guaranty, but is admitted simply to establish that credit has been given

93. Assumpsit will not lie on collateral guaranty.—Action upon the following letter of guaranty, written by the defendants and delivered to the plaintiffs: "Port Gibson, December 1827. Messrs. Reynolds, Byrne & Co. Gentlemen:—Our friend, Mr. Chester Haring, to assist him in business, may require your aid, from time to time, either by acceptance or indorsement of his paper, or advances in cash; in order to save you from harm by so doing, we do hereby bind ourselves, severally and jointly, to be responsible to you, at any time, for a sum, not exceeding eight thousand dollars, should the said Chester Haring fail to do so. Your obedient servants, James S. Douglass, John G. Singleton, Thomas Going." One count in the declaration was for money lent, and money had and received. Held, that upon a collateral undertaking of this sort, no such suit was maintainable. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626. Compare Lawrason v. Mason, 3 Cranch 492, 2 L. Ed. 509.

94. Proper parties plaintiff.—Lawrason v. Mason, 3 Cranch 492, 2 L. Ed. 509.

A letter from the defendants to J. M., saying, that they would be his security for 130 barrels of corn, payable in twelve months, will sustain an action of assumpsit against the defendants, by any person who, upon the faith of the letter, shall have given credit to J. M. for the corn. "Thus, if money be delivered by A. to B., to be paid over to C., although no promise is made by B. to C., yet C. may recover the money from B. by an action of assumpsit. If it be said, that in such a case, the law raises the assumpsit from the facts, and if the facts do not imply an assumpsit, no action will lie; it may be answered, that in the present case, there is an actual assumpsit to all the world, and any person who trusts, in consequence of that promise has a right of action." Lawrason v. Mason, 3 Cranch 492, 495, 2 L. Ed. 509.

95. Privity necessary to maintenance of action.—Grant v. Naylor, 4 Cranch 224, 2 L. Ed. 603.

96. Indemnity personal to guarantee.—Mauran v. Bullus, 16 Pet. 528, 10 L. Ed. 1056.

97. Notice of defects in machinery sold under guaranty.—Benjamin v. Hillard, 23 How. 149, 167, 16 L. Ed. 518.

98. See the title PAROL EVIDENCE.

99. Mistake in address of letter of credit.—A letter of credit addressed, by mistake, to John and Joseph, and delivered to John and Jeremiah, will not support an action by John and Jeremiah for goods furnished by them to the bearer, upon the faith of the letter of credit. It is not a written contract between the plaintiffs and the defendant, and parol proof cannot be admitted to make it such It is not a case of ambiguity, or of fraud, or of mistake on the part of the plaintiffs. Grant v. Naylor, 4 Cranch 224, 2 L. Ed. 603.

1. Gilbert v. Moline Plough Co., 119 U. S. 491, 30 L. Ed. 476.

2. Import of guaranty may be proven by parol.—Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169, 11 L. Ed. 89; Moran v. Prather, 23 Wall. 492, 23 L. Ed. 121.

upon the faith of it, from time to time, and that it is treated by the plaintiffs as a continuing guaranty, such evidence is unobjectionable.[3]

C. Collateral Evidence.—In a case of guaranty and indemnity, a judgment against the person to be indemnified, if fairly obtained, especially if obtained on notice to the guarantor, is admissible evidence, in a suit against him, on his contract of indemnity.[4]

GUARDIAN AD LITEM.—See the title INFANTS.

3. Admissibility of parol evidence to show guaranty a continuing one.—The depositions of several witnesses, clerks in the counting house of the plaintiffs, were admitted, on the trial of the cause, in which the witnesses stated, that they knew that the letter of credit was considered by the plaintiffs as covering any balance due by C. H. to them, for advances from time to time, to the amount of $8,000; that advances were made, and moneys paid by them, on account of C. H., from the time of receiving the said letter, predicated on the letter always protecting the plaintiffs to the amount of $8,000, and that it was considered in the counting house, as a continuing letter of credit, and so acted upon by the plaintiffs. Held, that this evidence was rightly admitted, to establish that credit had been given to C. H. on the faith of it, from time to time, and that it was treated by the plaintiffs as a continuing guarantee; so that if, in point of law, it was entitled to that character, the plaintiff's claim might not be open to the suggestion that no such advances, acceptances or endorsements had been made upon the credit of it. This evidence was not open to the objection that it was an attempt by parol evidence to explain a written contract. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Pet. 113, 8 L. Ed. 626.

4. The rule as to collateral facts in evidence.—Clarke v. Carrington, 7 Cranch 308, 3 L. Ed. 354.

GUARDIAN AND WARD.

BY R. E. MAXWELL.

I. Appointment and Qualification, 600.

A. Appointment, 600.
1. At Common Law, 600.
2. Authority to Appoint, 600.
3. When and for What Guardian May Be Appointed, 600.
4. Who May Be Appointed, 601.
5. Place of Appointment, 601.

B. Bond, 601.
1. Necessity for, 601.
2. Sufficiency of Security, 601.
3. Execution of Bond on Condition Other Security Be Obtained, 601.

II. Compensation, 602.

III. Powers, Duties and Liabilities of Guardian, 602.

A. Powers and Duties, 602.
1. Powers Strictly Local, 602.
2. Degree of Care in Management of Ward's Estate, 602.
3. Duties as to Management of Estate Regulated by What Law, 602.
4. Power to Change Ward's Domicile, 602.
5. Power to Collect, Compromise and Release Debts, 602.
6. Power to Bind Ward by Contract within Authority, 603.
7. Power to Encroach on Capital of Ward's Estate, 603.
8. Power to Convert Personalty into Realty, 603.
9. Sale of Ward's Personal Property, 603.
10. Sale of Ward's Real Estate, 603.
    a. Guardian Must Act in Good Faith, 603.
    b. Necessity for Order of Sale by Court, 603.
    c. Conditions Rendering Sale Permissible, 603.
        (1) Ward's Maintenance and Education, 603.
        (2) For Purpose of Reinvestment, 604.
    d. Fraudulent Sale, 604.
    e. Who May Question Validity of Sale, 604.
11. Power to Purchase Property for Ward with Guardian's Funds, 604.
12. Lease of Ward's Real Estate, 604.
13. Mortgage of Ward's Real Estate, 604.
14. Investment of Ward's Money, 605.
    a. In General, 605.
    b. Investment in Capital Stock of Corporation, 605.
    c. Investment in Confederate State Bonds, 606.
15. Power to Discharge Insurance Policy, 606.
16. Power to Release Claim to an Inheritance, 606.
17. Power to Bind Ward Out as a Servant, 606.
18. Duty to Educate Ward, 606.
19. Bringing Suits, 606.
    a. Guardian May Sue in Own Name, 606.
    b. Duty to Sue, 607.
    c. Where Guardian May Sue, 607.
    d. Jurisdiction, 607.
20. Effect of War on Guardian's Duties, 607.

21. Estoppel of Ward by Negligence of Guardian, 607.
22. Contracts between Guardian and Ward, 607.
23. Ratification of Guardian's Unlawful Acts, 607.
24. Gift by Ward to Guardian after Attaining Majority, 607.
a. General Rule, 607.
b. Limitation to Rule, 608.
B. Liabilities, 608.

IV. Accounting, 608.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 333; EJECTMENT, vol. 5, p. 695; EMBEZZLEMENT, vol. 5, p. 742; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, ante, p. 119; INFANTS; INSANITY; JUDGMENTS AND DECREES; PARENT AND CHILD; PARTNERSHIP; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; USURY; WITNESSES.

As to acknowledgment of deed by guardian, see the title ACKNOWLEDGMENTS, vol. 1, p. 84. As to right to custody of child being of a pecuniary estimation, as governing right of appeal, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, pp. 854, 855. As to disqualification of a person from acting as guardian for purpose of punishment, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 521. As to citizenship of guardian determining the jurisdiction of action brought by ward, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 958. As to guardian for an insane minor, see the title INSANITY. As to validity of sale of property of ward by an agent of the guardian, see the title PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

I. Appointment and Qualification.

A. Appointment—1. AT COMMON LAW.—Guardians at common law became such by their relation to the minor, without any judicial appointment. Guardians were also appointed by testament by the father of any minor from time immemorial in the province of York, and on failure to thus appoint, the ordinary had the power of appointment.[1]

2. AUTHORITY TO APPOINT.—The appointment of guardians is not, and never has been, peculiarly a chancery power. In this country the power to appoint guardians has generally by statute been conferred upon the probate courts.[2]

The courts of a state where the ward's real estate is situated have the exclusive right to appoint a guardian of a nonresident minor, and vest in such guardian the exclusive control and management of land belonging to the minor situate within the state.[3]

3. WHEN AND FOR WHAT GUARDIAN MAY BE APPOINTED.—When Guardian May Be Appointed.—Where in a contest for the custody of children they are given to the father, but he is required to give security for the management of

1. No judicial appointment at common law.—Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 632, 26 L. Ed. 585.

2. Appointment by probate court.—Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 632, 26 L. Ed. 585. But see the case of Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. 495, 555, 12 L. Ed. 1170.

The court of chancery possesses an inherent jurisdiction, which extends to the care of the persons of infants so far as is necessary for their protection and education; and also to the care of their property, real and personal, for its due management, and preservation, and proper application for their maintenance. The court is the general guardian, and, on the institution of proceedings therein involving rights of persons or property concerning them, they are regarded as wards of the court, and as under its special cognizance and protection; and no act can be done affecting either person or property, or the condition of infants, except under the express or implied direction of the court itself. Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. 495, 555, 12 L. Ed. 1170.

But it has been held under a Maryland statute, that where an infant entitled to property by descent, or under will, has no natural guardian, or a guardian appointed by will, the orphan's court of the county where the land lies has power to appoint a guardian to such infant. Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 538, 34 L. Ed. 531.

3. Courts of state where real estate is situated.—Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 193, 44 L. Ed. 1028; Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 26 L. Ed. 585. See post, "Place of Appointment," I, A, 5.

their estate, if he fails to give such security a special guardian will be appointed to take possession of the property.[4]

To Convey Infant's Land.—A guardian may be appointed to execute a deed to convey infant's land. Should he die, or refuse to make the conveyance, on application, another guardian will be appointed to execute the deed.[5]

4. Who May Be Appointed.—In England, the next of kin, to whom the inheritance cannot descend, must be appointed guardian;[6] but, in this country, as a general rule the appointment of a guardian is in the discretion of the court.[7]

5. Place of Appointment.—The domicile of an infant is universally held to be the fittest place for the appointment of a guardian of his person and estate,[8] although, for the protection of either, a guardian may be appointed in any state where the person or any property of the infant may be found.[9]

B. Bond—1. Necessity for.—In most of the states of the Union the guardian of the property of a minor gives bond, with personal securities, for his faithful conduct.[10] But in some states in case the father is guardian; no security is required, for his entire real estate is bound for the proper discharge of his trust.[11]

2. Sufficiency of Security.—It has been held that one surety is enough on a guardian's bond for the discharge of his duties, if he owns property sufficient in amount to make good the bond as required by law.[12]

3. Execution of Bond on Condition Other Security Be Obtained.—A surety executed a guardian's bond upon a condition that a second security be obtained; though the second surety is not obtained the bond is good against third parties.[13]

4. When guardian may be appointed.—De Krafft v. Barney, 2 Black 704, 708, 17 L. Ed. 350. See, generally, the title PARENT AND CHILD.

5. Appointment to convey infant's land.—Van Ness v. United States Bank, 13 Pet. 17, 10 L. Ed. 38.

6. Who appointed at common law.—Graham's Appeal, 1 Dall. 136, 1 L. Ed. 70.

7. Appointment in discretion of court.—Graham's Appeal, 1 Dall. 136, 1 L. Ed. 70.

8. Domicile of ward as place for appointment.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 470, 28 L. Ed. 751.

While the English and American law require a guardianship where the property is situated, it is conceded that, in the due exercise of comity, preference would ordinarily be given to the person already clothed with the authority of guardian in the minor's own country. Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 631, 26 L. Ed. 585. See ante, "Authority to Appoint," I, A, 2.

9. May be appointed in any state where ward or property is located.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 470, 28 L. Ed. 751; Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 632, 26 L. Ed. 585; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 193, 44 L. Ed. 1028.

There can be no doubt that the legislature of Rhode Island, where the property was situate, had power, first, to pass for the appointment of guardians of the property of nonresident infants, situated in the state of New York; and, secondly, it had power to prescribe the manner in which such guardians shall perform their duties as regards the care, management, investment, and disposal of such property; and that this power is as full and complete as where the minors are domiciled in the state. Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 632, 26 L. Ed. 585.

10. Security generally necessary.—Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 296, 19 L. Ed. 694.

11. Security not necessary where father of minor is guardian.—Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 296, 19 L. Ed. 694.

In Louisiana, in case the father occupies that relation, a different security has been provided, for his entire real estate is bound for the proper discharge of his trust. The security is called a tacit mortgage, which is nothing more than a regulation by law, to assure the property of the minor in the custody of the parent against loss. Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 296, 19 L. Ed. 694.

Although by the general law of Louisiana a father's guardianship of his minor children imports a mortgage on his immovable property in their favor, yet this mortgage does not make such a contract between the guardian to the minor as that the legislature may not, by special statute, authorize the father to sell his property divested of the tacit mortgage, especially where the proceeds are still preserved to the minors by an investment which the statute prescribes. Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 19 L. Ed. 694.

12. Sufficiency of security.—So held in Ohio. Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 86, 32 L. Ed. 630.

13. Bond executed on condition other security be obtained is valid.—Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 86, 32 L. Ed. 630. See the title PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

II. Compensation.

It has been provided in some instances that if a guardian embezzles money from the funds of his ward, he forfeits his right to all commissions.[14]

III. Powers, Duties and Liabilities of Guardian.

A. Powers and Duties—1. Powers Strictly Local.—The rights and powers of guardians are considered as strictly local; and not as entitling them to exercise any authority over the person or personal property of their wards in other states. But one of the ordinary rules of comity exercised by some European states is to acknowledge the authority and power of foreign guardians, that is, guardians of minors and others appointed under the laws of their domicile in other states. But this rule of comity does not prevail to the same extent in England and the United States.[15]

2. Degree of Care in Management of Ward's Estate.—A guardian must manage the funds of his ward as prudent men manage their own business.[16]

3. Duties as to Management of Estate Regulated by What Law.—As a general rule, the management and investment of a ward's property should be governed by the law of the state of his domicile, especially when he actually resides there, rather than by the law of any state in which a guardian may have been appointed or may have received some property of the ward.[17]

4. Power to Change Ward's Domicile.—See the title Domicile, vol. 5, p. 479.

5. Power to Collect, Compromise and Release Debts.—A guardian, unless restricted by statute, may collect or compromise and release debts due to the ward, subject to the liability to be called to account if he has acted without due regard to the ward's interest.[18]

14. Compensation.—A conviction of the crime of embezzlement is not essential to the forfeiture. Fields v. United States, 205 U. S. 292, 51 L. Ed. 807; § 841, Code, District of Columbia. See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 851; EMBEZZLEMENT, vol. 5, p. 742.

15. Power strictly local.—Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 Va. 613, 26 L. Ed. 585; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 194, 44 L. Ed. 1028.

"The authority of a guardian, appointed by a court of one state, is limited to that state, and he cannot sue in a court, even of the United States, held within any state, except so far as authorized to do so by its laws. Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 631, 26 L. Ed. 585; Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 470, 28 L. Ed. 751." Morgan v. Potter, 157 U. S. 195, 197, 39 L. Ed. 670.

By the law of England and of this country, a guardian appointed by the courts of one state has no authority over the ward's person or property in another state, except so far as allowed by the comity of that state, as expressed through its legislature or its courts; but the tendency of modern statutes and decisions is to defer to the law of the domicile, and to support the authority of the guardian appointed there. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 470, 28 L. Ed. 751.

"It cannot be doubted that the courts of a state where real estate is situated have the exclusive right to vest in a guardian of a nonresident minor the exclusive control and management of land belonging to said minor, situated within the state. This court had occasion to consider and pass upon this doctrine in the case of Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 26 L. Ed. 585." Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 193, 44 L. Ed. 1028.

In Europe, the guardian appointed in the state of the domicile of the ward is generally recognized as entitled to the control and dominion of the ward and his movable property everywhere, and guardians specially appointed in other states are responsible to the principal guardian. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 470, 28 L. Ed. 751.

16. Must manage wards funds as prudent men would manage their own businesses.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 469, 28 L. Ed. 751.

Under statute of Maryland.—See the case of Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 539, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Under statute of Texas.—See the case of Mexican Central R. Co. v. Eckman, 187 U. S. 429, 434, 435, 47 L. Ed. 245.

In South Carolina, before the war, no more definite rule appears to have been laid down than that guardians must manage the funds in their hands as prudent men manage their own affairs. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 469, 28 L. Ed. 751.

17. Duties as to management regulated by law of ward's domicile.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 471, 28 L. Ed. 751.

18. May collect, compromise and release debts if in interest of ward.—Lamar

6. Power to Bind Ward by Contract within Authority.—A contract made by a guardian within his authority, will be binding upon his ward upon his attaining full age. Thus, a contract to pay a certain rate of interest upon borrowed money, will bind the ward after his majority to pay the same rate of interest, though upon attaining majority the ward may pay the debt, or agree with the lendor for a less rate of interest.[19]

7. Power to Encroach on Capital of Ward's Estate.—An order of court is necessary before a guardian may encroach on the corpus of his ward's estate.[20]

8. Power to Convert Personalty into Realty.—A guardian has no power to convert the personal property of his ward into realty.[21]

9. Sale of Ward's Personal Property.—A guardian, unless his powers in this respect are restricted by statute, is authorized, by virtue of his office, to sell his ward's personal property for the purpose of reinvestment, subject to the liability to be called to account in the proper court if he has acted without due regard to the ward's interest.[22] And an order of court is not necessary to the validity of such sale.[23]

10. Sale of Ward's Real Estate—a. Guardian Must Act in Good Faith.—Though a guardian must act in good faith in a sale of his ward's real estate, a sale by order of court will be valid, if an adequate price is received therefor, though he acquires an interest in the property before the purchase price is paid.[24]

b. Necessity for Order of Sale by Court.—A guardian cannot dispose of the real property of his ward without permission of court.[25]

c. Conditions Rendering Sale Permissible—(1) Ward's Maintenance and Education.—A guardian may be ordered to sell his infant ward's real estate for his maintenance and education.[26]

v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 475, 28 L. Ed. 751; Maclay v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 152 U. S. 499, 503, 38 L. Ed. 528.

Under statute of Texas.—See the case of Mexican Central R. Co. v. Eckman, 187 U. S. 429, 434, 47 L. Ed. 245.

19. May bind ward by contract within authority.—United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 34 L. Ed. 969.

20. Cannot encroach on capital of ward.—Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 544, 34 L. Ed. 531.

21. Cannot convert personalty into realty.—Yerger v. Jones, 16 How. 30, 37, 14 L. Ed. 832.

22. Guardian may sell personalty.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 475, 28 L. Ed. 751; Maclay v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 152 U. S. 499, 503, 38 L. Ed. 528.

The Maryland statute of 1798, c. 101, § 12.—See Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 540, 34 L. Ed. 531.

23. Order of court not necessary.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 475, 28 L. Ed. 751; Maclay v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 152 U. S. 499, 503, 38 L. Ed. 528.

24. Guardian must act in good faith.—Kearney v. Taylor, 15 How. 494, 14 L. Ed. 787; Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 465, 28 L. Ed. 751.

Where a company, organized for the purpose of improving land, purchased from a duly appointed guardian the lands of his infant wards at a price greater than any previous estimate of the value of the property; there was no constructive fraud on the part of said guardian and the commissioners who decided that the property ought to be sold, even though, subsequent to the sale and before the first half of the purchase money was due, said guardian and said commissioners became interested in the company aforesaid; and no actual fraud being shown, there is no sufficient reason for setting aside the sale. Kearney v. Taylor, 15 How. 494, 14 L. Ed. 787.

Where land was sold in New Jersey by a guardian by order of the orphan's court of one of the counties, the conveyance was made not to the actual bidders, but to a person whom they appointed to represent them. Afterwards, the supreme court of the state having decided that such a practice was irregular, the legislature passed a law enacting that, upon proof of the absence of fraud, such deeds might be given in evidence. This cured the defect in the title. Kearney v. Taylor, 15 How. 494, 14 L. Ed. 787.

25. Order of sale by court necessary.—Hoyt v. Hammekin, 14 How. 346, 350, 14 L. Ed. 449; Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 544, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Real estate cannot be diminished but by the approbation of the court of chancery. Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 544, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Of the application to sell real estate, notice must be given § 31, ch. 64, Illinois Rev. Stat., 1874, by publication to all persons concerned, and tried "as in other cases in chancery." United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 327, 34 L. Ed. 969.

26. May sell real estate to maintain and

(2) For Purpose of Reinvestment.—A guardian may sell, by order of court, the real estate of his ward, for the purpose of reinvestment.[27]

d. Fraudulent Sale.—Jurisdiction to Set Aside.—A circuit court of the United States may, if other conditions of jurisdiction are satisfied, set aside a fraudulent sale of infant's land, made by his guardian.[28]

e. Who May Question Validity of Sale.—The validity of a sale, by a guardian, of an infant's real estate cannot be questioned, so far as her rights are involved, by the widow of the infant's deceased father.[29]

11. Power to Purchase Property for Ward with Guardian's Funds.—A guardian cannot purchase, with his own money, property for his ward. If such purchase be made the ward may have the purchase set aside as to the guardian, and have the estate decreed the individual property of the guardian. After a final decree to that effect, the ward cannot claim title to the property.[30]

12. Lease of Ward's Real Estate.—Generally, by statute, a guardian is allowed to lease the real estate of the ward upon such terms, not extending beyond the minority of the ward, as the court shall approve.[31]

13. Mortgage of Ward's Real Estate.—A guardian will generally be allowed, upon application to court, setting out sufficient cause, to mortgage the real estate of his ward.[32]

educate ward.—Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 34 L. Ed. 531.

The real estate of an infant may be sold by his guardian for his maintenance and education, if such sale be approved by the circuit court of the United States sitting in chancery. An order of sale may be authorized by the orphan's court of the District of Columbia, to be approved by the circuit court of the United States. Such sale is authorized by the statute of Maryland of 1798, c. 101, subch. 12, § 10. Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 34 L. Ed. 531.

The act of congress of March 3, 1843, ch. 87, did not repeal the statute of Maryland of 1798, ch. 101, subch. 12, § 10. Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 544, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Property was devised by a testator to his widow and infant children and the fee over to the one that survived. Upon application by the widow and the infant's guardian, for a sale of the real estate for their maintenance, it was held that an order for sale was valid under the Maryland act of 1798, ch. 101, subch. 12, § 10. Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 34 L. Ed. 531.

And a sale under this statute cannot be collaterally impeached. Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Sale not restricted to legal estates.—Other than legal estates, or estates in possession, may be authorized to be sold under the statute of Maryland of 1798, ch. 101, subch. 12, § 10. Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 545, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Under Illinois statutes.—See United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S 313, 327, 34 L. Ed. 969.

27. May sell real estate for purpose of reinvestment.—Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 545, 34 L. Ed. 531; United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 327, 34 L. Ed. 969.

The power to sell real estate for the purpose of investing the proceeds in other real estate, improved or unimproved, is not, looking at its nature or the consequences to result from its exercise, less important than the power to borrow money, secured by mortgage, to improve the ward's real property. United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 331, 34 L. Ed. 969.

28. Jurisdiction to set aside fraudulent sale.—Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 86, 32 L. Ed. 630.

29. Widow of ward's deceased father cannot question validity of sale.—Knotts v. Stearns, 91 U. S. 638, 23 L. Ed. 252.

30. Cannot purchase property for ward with guardian's money.—Corker v. Jones, 110 U. S. 317, 28 L. Ed. 161.

Where a person who was acting as guardian to a minor, but without any legal authority, being indebted to the minor, contracted to purchase real estate for the benefit of his ward, and transferred his own property in part payment therefor, the ward cannot claim to receive from the vendor the amount of property so transferred. He can either complete the purchase by paying the balance of the purchase money, or set aside the contract and look to his guardian for reimbursement; but in the absence of fraud, he cannot compel the vendor to return such part of the purchase money as had been paid by the guardian. Yerger v. Jones, 16 How. 30, 14 L. Ed. 832.

31. May lease estate of ward.—United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 326, 34 L. Ed. 969.

Statute of Illinois.—See United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 326, 34 L. Ed. 969.

The Maryland statute.—See Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 539, 34 L. Ed. 531.

32. Guardian allowed to mortgage ward's real estate.—United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 329, 34 L. Ed. 969.

The express restrictions under Illinois Rev. Stats., 1874, ch. 64, §§ 24, 25, are:

14. Investment of Ward's Money—a. In General.—A guardian may invest money of his ward, but he is bound to act honestly and faithfully, as do men of ordinary prudence in their own business.[33] But he should not, in accounting for investment, unless expressly so by statute, be held to a diverse rule of accounting from the one in the state of the ward's domicile.[34]

Sale of Personalty for Purpose of Reinvestment.—See ante, "Sale of Ward's Personal Property," III, A, 9.

Sale of Real Estate for Purpose of Reinvestment.—See ante, "For Purpose of Reinvestment," III, A, 10, c, (2).

b. Investment in Capital Stock of Corporation.—The legislature certainly might, if it saw fit, pass a general law authorizing a guardian to invest the property of his ward in capital stock of a corporation engaged in manufacturing, trading, or financial operations, or in a particular class of operations, as banking, insurance, or any other that might be specified. Usually, such authority, if given, would be required to be exercised under the allowance and supervision of a court; but that would be a matter of legislative discretion. That such an author-

First, that he obtains the leave of the county court, based upon petition setting out the condition of the estate, the facts and circumstances on which the petition is founded, and a description of the premises to be mortgaged; second, that the mortgage, if not in fee, must be for a term of years not extending beyond the minority of the ward; third, that the time of the maturity of the indebtedness secured by it should not extend beyond the minority of the ward. United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 329, 34 L. Ed. 969.

The implied restrictions, controlling the discretion and power both of the guardian and the county court is that the indebtedness secured by the mortgage must arise out of, and have some necessary or appropriate connection with, the management of the ward's estate. United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 329, 34 L. Ed. 969.

Where the ward's buildings were destroyed by fire it was held that under the Illinois statute the guardian might, with leave of court, mortgage the ward's lands to replace the burnt buildings and pay off existing encumbrances. United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 34 L. Ed. 969. It was also held in this case that it is not necessary to the validity of the mortgage that it should expressly reserve the right of redemption. See, generally, the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

33. May invest money of ward.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 751; Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 633, 26 L. Ed. 585; Baldy v. Hunter, 171 U. S. 388, 403, 43 L. Ed. 208; United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 326, 34 L. Ed. 969.

The guardian is bound to act honestly and faithfully, and to exercise a sound discretion, such as men of ordinary prudence and intelligence use in their own affairs. In some jurisdictions, no attempt has been made to establish a more definite rule; in others, the discretion has been confined, by the legislature or the courts, within strict limits. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 465, 28 L. Ed. 751.

Investment in city or railroad bonds.—An investment before the Civil War in bonds of the cities of Mobile, New Orleans and Memphis, and in bonds of a railroad corporation, indorsed by a state at the time they were issued, and deposited in a bank in Canada, was not such an investment as will make the guardian liable to the ward for loss by depreciation of the bonds, if at the time he exercised due care and prudence. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 751.

By the law of Georgia before 1863 and by the law of Alabama, investments in such bonds were valid. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 751.

Illinois.—See United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 326, 34 L. Ed. 969.

As to what law governs the duties as to investment, see ante, "Duties as to Management of Estate Regulated by What Law," III, A, 3.

34. Accounting for investing.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 751; Lamar v. Micou, 114 U. S. 218, 29 L. Ed. 94.

A guardian, who had in good faith conformed to the law of the state in which he was appointed, might perhaps be excused for not having complied with stricter rules prevailing at the domicile of the ward. But in a case in which the domicile of the ward has always been in a state whose law leaves much to the discretion of the guardian in the matter of investments, and he has faithfully and prudently exercised that discretion with a view to the pecuniary interests of the ward, it would be inconsistent with the principles of equity to charge him with the amount of the moneys invested, merely because he has not complied with the more rigid rules adopted by the courts of the state in which he was appointed. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 473, 28 L. Ed. 751.

ity could be conferred by law there can be no doubt.[35]

c. Investment in Confederate State Bonds.—"A guardian who, during the war between the states, in good faith invested the funds of his ward in bonds of the Confederate States, under an order of the judge of the superior court of a state properly obtained under then existing laws, was protected thereby, and is not liable to the ward for the value of the money invested."[36]

15. Power to Discharge Insurance Policy.—A statute authorizing an order of court for the sale of a ward's personal property by his guardian, has no application and does not require an order of court before a guardian can discharge a policy of life insurance, on the tontine dividend plan, after completion of the dividend period, and receipt of the actual surrendered value.[37]

16. Power to Release Claim to an Inheritance.—A natural guardian has no power to release the claim of a ward to an inheritance without the sanction of some tribunal.[38]

17. Power to Bind Ward Out as a Servant.—There have been instances of infants being apprenticed to some art, trade, occupation or labor, but this has not been general and the court of justice would hardly allow a guardian to bind out his ward as a servant.[39]

18. Duty to Educate Ward.—Guardians are often authorized by statute to apply his ward's funds, or the income and profits thereof, to the support and education of his ward.[40]

19. Bringing Suits—a. Guardian May Sue in Own Name.—A guardian in Texas may sue in his own name to enforce obligation in favor of his ward.[41]

35. Investment in capital stock of corporation.—Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 633, 26 L. Ed. 585.

36. Investment in Confederate state bonds.—Baldy v. Hunter, 171 U. S. 388, 392, 43 L. Ed. 208.

A guardian becoming such under the law of New York, and without authority invested money of his ward in bonds of the Confederate States. It was held that the guardian was responsible for the money invested. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 751.

It appears that Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 476, 28 L. Ed. 751, "was a case in which the guardian, becoming such under the laws of New York, in violation of his duty to the country, and after the war became flagrant, voluntarily went into the Confederate lines, and there gave aid and comfort to the rebellion; and yet he asked that the investment of his ward's money in Confederate States bonds receive the sanction of the courts sitting in the state under the authority of whose laws he became and acted as guardian. Besides, it is distinctly stated in the opinion in that case that the sums which Lamar used in the purchase of bonds of the Confederate States were moneys of the wards in his hands 'arising either from dividends which he had received in their behalf, or from interest with which he charged himself upon sums not invested,' which is a very different thing from reinvesting (as in the present case) in Confederate currency moneys previously received in the like kind of currency. The present case is governed by considerations that do not apply to that case. We do not doubt the correctness of the decision in Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 476, 28 L. Ed. 751, upon its facts as set out in the report of that case." Baldy v. Hunter, 171 U. S. 388, 403, 43 L. Ed. 208.

See the case of Horn v. Lockhart, 17 Wall. 570, 21 L. Ed. 657, where an executor was held liable for investing funds in Confederate government bonds.

37. So held under Mississippi statute.—Maclay v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 152 U. S. 499, 38 L. Ed. 528.

The guardian was certainly authorized to collect for the benefit of his ward any amount due under the policy, and had the right and the duty to elect, either to keep it in force by paying the premiums, or to surrender it in consideration of being paid at once its surrender value, whichever appeared to be most beneficial to the ward. Maclay v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 152 U. S. 499, 504, 38 L. Ed. 528.

38. Cannot release claim to an inheritance.—Neaglin v. De Cordoba, 171 U. S. 638, 641, 43 L. Ed. 315.

39. Power to bind ward out as servant.—Respublica v. Keppele, 2 Dall. 197, 198, 1 L. Ed. 347.

40. Duty to apply funds to support and educate ward.—Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 539, 34 L. Ed. 531; United States Mortgage Co. v. Sperry, 138 U. S. 313, 326, 34 L. Ed. 969.

Sale of real estate to educate ward.—See ante, "Ward's Maintenance and Education," III. A, 10, c, (1).

41. Guardian may sue in own name.—Mexican Central R. Co. v. Eckman, 187 U. S. 429, 47 L. Ed. 245.

b. Duty to Sue.—Where, upon the death of the father, a guardian is appointed for his children, it is the duty of the guardian to take legal steps to recover money due the children, and the guardian is bound to prosecute the suit with diligence; and a contract with an attorney to prosecute the claim for a contingent fee is not void, where a division of the proceeds recovered is not extortionate.[42]

c. Where Guardian May Sue.—A guardian, appointed by a court of one state, cannot sue in a court held within another state, except so far as authorized by statute.[43]

d. Jurisdiction.—Determined by Citizenship of Guardian.—See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 958.

20. EFFECT OF WAR ON GUARDIAN'S DUTIES.—A state of war does not release a guardian from the duty to keep the ward's property safely.[44]

21. ESTOPPEL OF WARD BY NEGLIGENCE OF GUARDIAN.—Ordinarily, negligence of a guardian will not estop the ward from asserting his rights upon attaining full age.[45]

22. CONTRACTS BETWEEN GUARDIAN AND WARD.—A ward has no capacity, by contract with his guardian, to affect his own rights.[46]

23. RATIFICATION OF GUARDIAN'S UNLAWFUL ACTS.—A ward, during his minority, cannot assent to his guardians unlawful acts to affect his own rights.[47]

24. GIFT BY WARD TO GUARDIAN AFTER ATTAINING MAJORITY—a. General Rule.—If after the ward comes of age, and after actually put into possession of his estate, he thinks fit, when sui juris, and at liberty, he may make any reasonable grant by way of award for care and trouble. When done with eyes open, the court will never set it aside.[48]

42. Duty to bring suit.—Taylor v. Bemiss, 110 U. S. 42, 28 L. Ed. 64.

A widow of a citizen of Louisiana, who, in his lifetime, had a claim against the United States, was appointed tutrix of his minor children. It was her duty to prosecute a suit with diligence to recover the claims. Taylor v. Bemiss, 110 U. S. 42, 28 L. Ed. 64.

Contract for contingent fee looked upon with suspicion.—See the title ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 2, pp. 724, 725.

43. Where guardian may sue.—Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 631, 26 L. Ed. 585; Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 470, 28 L. Ed. 751; Morgan v. Potter, 157 U. S. 195, 197, 39 L. Ed. 670.

The statutes of Kansas confer no general power to sue upon guardians appointed in other states but do provide that when a minor, for whom a guardian has been appointed in this state, removes to another state, and a guardian of the minor is there appointed, he may bring suit against the guardian appointed in this state. Morgan v. Potter, 157 U. S. 195, 197, 39 L. Ed. 670.

44. War does not affect guardian's duties.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 464, 28 L. Ed. 751.

A state of war does not put an end to pre-existing obligations, or transfer the property of wards to their guardians. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 464, 28 L. Ed. 751.

45. Ward not estopped by negligence of guardian.—Telegraph Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369, 24 L. Ed. 1047.

The negligence of their guardian cannot preclude minors from asserting, by suit, their right to stock belonging to them, which was so sold and transferred. If competent to transfer it, or to approve of the transfer made, they must, to create an estoppel against them, have, by some act or declaration by which the corporation was misled, authorized the use of their names, or subsequently approved such use by accepting the purchase money with knowledge of the transfer; but under the statute of Ohio, where the minors who are the complainants herein resided, they were not, nor, without the authority of the probate court, was their guardian, competent to authorize a sale of their property. Telegraph Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369, 24 L. Ed. 1047.

46. Contract between guardian and ward does not affect ward's rights.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 476, 28 L. Ed. 751; Baldy v. Hunter, 171 U. S. 388, 402, 43 L. Ed. 208.

47. Ward cannot ratify guardian's unlawful acts.—Baldy v. Hunter, 171 U. S. 388, 402, 43 L. Ed. 208.

48. May make gift to guardian.—Ralston v. Turpin, 129 U. S. 663, 672, 32 L. Ed. 747.

Deeds made by a ward, upon arriving at full age, to his guardian, will be sustained if it appears that they were freely and voluntarily made, upon full knowledge of the facts, without misrepresentation or suppression of material facts, by the guardian. Ralston v. Turpin, 129 U. S. 663, 673, 32 L. Ed. 747.

b. Limitation to Rule.—The courts guard against gifts by a ward to his guardian if made at the very time of accounting and delivering up the estate.[49] But this rule relating to gifts by a ward, just arriving at majority, does not apply to gifts made some years after attaining majority.[50]

B. Liabilities.—Where a payment is made to a guardian, or his authorized attorney, for infants, the guardian is responsible for the receipt of the money. And this is a matter of accounting to the infants in his fiduciary character as guardian.[51]

Of a Guardian after Transfer of Property to Another Guardian.—A guardian in one state transferred personal property of a ward to a guardian in another state and took a receipt therefor. It was held that the receipt did not discharge the former guardian from liability for losses incurred from his mismanagement of the property before the transfer and the fact that the guardian, to whom the property was transferred, aided in the mismanagement before his appointment did not affect the liability.[52]

Liability Not Affected by War.—"The war of rebellion, and the residence of both ward and guardian within the territory controlled by the insurgents did not discharge the guardian from his responsibility to account, after the war, for property of the ward's which had at any time come into his hands, or which he might by the exercise of due care have obtained possession of."[53]

IV. Accounting.

A guardian, upon the ward's arrival at age, must make a final accounting to the court having jurisdiction of the cause.[54]

49. Limitation to rule.—So held under code of Georgia. Ralston v. Turpin, 129 U. S. 663, 673, 32 L. Ed. 747.

50. Deeds made to a guardian more than eleven years after the ward attained full age, and after the guardian finally settled his accounts as guardian, were valid. Ralston v. Turpin, 129 U. S. 663, 673, 32 L. Ed. 747.

51. Liability for money collected.—Taylor v. Bemiss, 110 U. S. 42, 28 L. Ed. 64.

"The subject of such payments by the United States to administrators appointed in the states is very fully discussed in the case of Wyman v. Halstead, decided simultaneously with the present case, 109 U. S. 654, 27 L. Ed. 1068, and, upon the principles there laid down, we are of opinion that payment to Mrs. Bemiss as tutrix under the Louisiana appointment is a valid payment, and that she is responsible under that appointment, and the receipt of the money by herself and by her authorized attorney, to these minors if they have been wronged. And this is a matter of accounting with them in her fiduciary character of tutrix." Taylor v. Bemiss, 110 U. S. 42, 45, 28 L. Ed. 64.

52. After transfer of property to another guardian.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 751.

53. Liability not affected by war.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 464, 28 L. Ed. 751.

54. Must make an accounting upon ward becoming of age.—Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 540, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Rules of accounting.—There were two trustees of real and personal estate for the benefit of a minor. One of the trustees was also administrator de bonis non upon the estate of the father of the minor, and the other trustee was appointed guardian to the minor. When the minor arrived at the proper age, and the accounts came to be settled, the following rules ought to have been applied: 1. The trustees ought not to have been charged with an amount of money, which the administrator trustee had paid himself as a commission. That item was allowed by the orphans' court, and its correctness cannot be reviewed collaterally, by another court. 2. Nor ought the trustees to have been charged with allowances made to the guardian trustee. The guardian's accounts also were cognizable by the orphans' court. Having power under the will to receive a portion of the income, the guardian's receipts were valid to the trustees. 3. The trustees were properly allowed and credited by five per cent. on the principal of the personal estate, and ten per cent. on the income. 4. Under the circumstances of this case, the trustees ought not to have been charged upon the principle of six months' rests and compound interest. 5. The trustees ought to have been charged with all gains, as with those arising from usurious loans, unknown friends, or otherwise. 6. The trustees ought not to have been credited with the amount of a sum of money, deposited with a private banking house, and lost by its failure, so far as related to the capital of the estate, but ought to have been credited for so much of the loss as arose from the deposit of current collections of income. Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. 535, 14 L. Ed. 1047.

The Maryland statute.—See Thaw v. Ritchie, 136 U. S. 519, 540, 34 L. Ed. 531.

Form of Accounting.—The form of accounting will generally be governed by the law of the court in which the accounting is sought.[55]

For What Guardian Must Account.—If a ward acquiesced in benefits, resulting from investment made by his guardian, for several years after becoming of age, he cannot require the guardian to make an accounting of the estate.[56]

Accounting for Investments.—See ante, "In General," III, A, 14, a.

Accounting for Payments Made to Guardian.—See ante, "Liabilities," III, B.

Jurisdiction of Probate Court to Pass upon Accounts of Guardian.—The power to pass upon the accounts of guardians has generally by statutes been conferred upon the probate court.[57]

GUILTY, PLEA OF NOT.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 107.

55. Form of accounting governed by what law.—Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 471, 28 L. Ed. 751.

The form of accounting, so far as concerns the remedy only, must indeed be according to the law of the court in which relief is sought. Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 471, 28 L. Ed. 751.

"It may be suggested that this would enable the guardian, by changing the domicile of his ward, to choose for himself the law by which he should account. Not so. The father, and after his death the widowed mother, being the natural guardian, and the person from whom the ward derives his domicile, may change that domicile. But the ward does not derive a domicile from any other than a natural guardian. A testamentary guardian nominated by the father may have the same control of the ward's domicile that the father had." Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 471, 28 L. Ed. 751.

56. For what guardian must account.—Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 26 L. Ed. 585.

57. Probate courts have jurisdiction to pass upon accounts of guardians.—Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 632, 26 L. Ed. 585.

HABEAS CORPUS.

BY T. B. BENSON.

I. Definition, Nature and Object, 615.
- A. Definition, 615.
- B. Nature, 615.
- C. Object, 617.

II. Origin and History, 617.
- A. In General, 617.
- B. In England, 617.
- C. In United States, 617.

III. The Different Writs of Habeas Corpus, 618.

IV. Jurisdiction, 619.
- A. Nature of, 619.
- B. Of English Courts, 619.
- C. Of United States Courts, 619.
  - 1. Source of, 619.
    - a. Express Statutory Enactment, 619.
    - b. Incidental to Other Jurisdiction, 620.
  - 2. Enlargement of, 620.
  - 3. Extent of, 620.
    - a. In General, 620.
    - b. Where Prisoner Is in Jail, 620.
      - (1) Statutory Provision, 620.
      - (2) By Color of Authority of United States, 621.
        - (a) In General, 621.
        - (b) What Amounts to, 621.
      - (3) For Act Done or Omitted in Pursuance of Law, etc., 621.
      - (4) In Violation of Constitution, Law or Treaty, 622.
        - (a) Statutory Provision, 622.
          - aa. In General.
          - bb. Former Acts Not Repealed by, 622.
          - cc. Object and Purpose, 622.
        - (b) Extent of Jurisdiction, 622.
          - aa. In General, 622.
          - bb. Custody of State, 622.
            - (aa) Under Law in Violation of United States Constitution, 622.
            - (bb) Under Law in Violation of State Constitution, 623.
      - (5) Where Prisoner Is Citizen of Foreign State, 623.
      - (6) To Bring Prisoner into Court to Testify, 623.
    - c. Where Prisoner Is in State Custody, 624.
      - (1) Under Original Judiciary Act, 624.
      - (2) Under Subsequent Acts, 624.
        - (a) Where State Has Jurisdiction, 624.
        - (b) Where State Has No Jurisdiction, 624.
    - d. Under Chinese Exclusion Acts, 624.
    - e. In Extradition Cases, 625.
    - f. In Other Cases, 625.

4. Of the Different United States Courts, 625.
a. Supreme Court, 625.
(1) In General, 625.
(2) Original Jurisdiction, 626.
(a) In General, 626.
(b) Power of Congress to Alter, 626.
(c) In Particular Cases, 626.
(3) Appellate Jurisdiction, 626.
(4) On Reference from Justices in Chambers or Vacation, 626.
b. Circuit Court of Appeals, 627.
c. Circuit and District Courts, 627.
5. Judges and Justices of the United States Courts, 627.
D. Of State Courts, 628.
1. In General, 628.
2. In Extradition Cases, 628.
E. Of Territorial Courts, 628.
F. Concurrent and Conflicting Jurisdiction, 628.
1. In General, 628.
2. Where Writ Issues from State Court, 629.
a. In General, 629.
b. Prisoner Confined within Territory of State, 629.
(1) In General, 629.
(2) Under Federal Authority, 629.
(a) In General, 629.
(b) What Constitutes Federal Authority, 630.
3. Where Writ Issues from United States Court, 630.
a. Power to Issue Writ, 630.
(1) Dependent upon Statutes, 630.
(2) Scope of Statutes, 631.
(3) Custody under Erroneous Ruling of State Court, 631.
(4) Where Prisoner Is Not Guilty, 632.
(5) Admitted to Bail by Federal Court, 632.
b. Discretion to Issue Writ, 632.
(1) Before Exhaustion of Remedies in State Court, 632.
(a) In General, 632.
(b) When Writ Will Be Denied, 634.
aa. Rule Stated, 634.
bb. Basis of Rule, 634.
(c) When Writ Will Be Granted, 635.
aa. In General, 635.
bb. In Particular Instances, 636.
(2) After Exhaustion of Remedies in State Courts, 638.
G. Determination of Existence of Jurisdiction, 636.

V. Grounds for Relief, 638.
A. In General, 638.
B. As Determined by Common-Law Principles, 638.
C. As Determined by Materiality, 639.
D. As Determined by Conduct of Prosecution, 639.
1. Delay of Trial, 639.
2. Entrance of Nolle Prosequi, 639.
3. Denial of New Trial, 639.
4. Denial of Process to Compel Attendance of Witnesses, 639.
E. As Determined by Validity of Proceedings, 639.
F. As Determined by Existence of Other Remedies, 640.
G. As Determined by Nature of Custody or Restraint, 641.

1. In General, 641.
2. Actual Restraint, 641.
3. Moral Restraint, 641.
4. Voluntary Custody, 641.
5. Illegal Restraint or Custody, 642.
a. In General, 642.
b. Without Probable Cause, 642.
c. In Violation of Constitution, 642.
(1) In General, 642.
(2) Denial of Due Process of Law, 642.
(3) Denial of Jury Trial, 643.
(4) Denial of Equal Protection of Law, 643.
(5) Denial of Appeal, 643.
(6) Compelling Accused to Testify against Himself, 643
(7) Infliction of Cruel and Unusual Punishment, 643.
(8) Constitutional Defenses, 643.
(a) In General, 643.
(b) Former Jeopardy, 644.
H. As Determined by Original Caption, 644.
1. Original Arrest, 644.
2. On Surrender by Bail, 644.
I. As Determined by Duration of Custody, 644.
J. As Determined by Nature of Authority, 644.
1. Without Jurisdiction, 644.
2. Acquisition of Jurisdiction by Unlawful Means, 645.
3. Private Authority, 645.
4. Warrant or Commitment, 645.
5. Indictment of Grand Jury, 646.
a. In General, 646.
b. Form and Sufficiency, 646.
c. Sufficiency of Charge, 647.
d. Misjoinder of Offenses, 647.
e. Constitution of Grand Jury, 647.
f. Finding of Indictment, 647.
g. For Act Not Criminal, 647.
h. Evidence before Grand Jury, 647.
i. Amendment of Indictment, 647.
j. When No Objection Made in Trial Court, 648.
6. Judgment or Order of Court, 648.
a. In General, 648.
b. At Common Law, 648.
c. Erroneous Judgment or Order, 649.
(1) In General, 649.
(2) On Defective Indictment, 649.
d. Void Judgment or Order, 649.
(1) In General, 649.
(2) For Want of General Jurisdiction, 650.
(3) For Want of Jurisdiction to Render Particular Judgment or Order, 650.
(4) On Unconstitutional Statute, 650.
(5) Without Indictment, 650.
(6) Upon Verdict of Guilty, 651.
(7) Becoming Void after Rendition, 651.
e. Excessive Judgment or Sentence, 651.
(1) Excessive Severable from Authorized Portion, 651
(2) Excessive and Authorized Portions Entire, 652.
f. Sentence after Date Set for Execution, 652.

g. Commuted Sentence, 652.
h. In Contempt Cases, 652.
i. Of De Facto Judge, 654.
7. Authority of Particular Persons and Courts, 654.
a. Executive and Legislative Branches of Government, 654.
b. Military Authorities, 654.
c. Courts-Martial, 654.
d. Inspectors of Immigration, 655.
K. As Determined by Nature of Proceedings, 655.
1. Criminal Proceedings, 655.
a. In General, 655.
b. Treason or Felony Cases, 655.
2. Civil Proceedings, 655.
a. In General, 655.
b. Mandamus, 655.
3. In Extradition Cases, 655.
L. As Determined by Character of Person in Custody, 655.
1. Aliens, 655.
a. In General, 655.
b. Alien Immigrants, 655.
(1) In General, 565.
(2) Under Chinese Exclusion Acts, 656.
2. Members of Congress, 657.
3. Persons Acting under Federal Authority, 657.
4. Infants, 657.
5. Husband or Wife, 657.
6. Wards, 657.
M. As Determined by Nature of Offense, 658.
1. Offense Not Criminal, 658.
2. Determination of Criminality, 658.
N. As Determined by Object of Writ, 658.
1. To Admit to Bail, 658.
2. To Bring into Court to Testify, 658.
3. To Serve Purpose of Writ of Error, 658.
4. As Ancillary Proceeding, 658.
O. As Determined by Offenses to Prosecution, 658.
P. As Determined by Effect of Writ, 659.

VI. Application for Writ, 659.

A. Statutory Provision, 659.
B. To Whom Made, 659.
C. By Whom Made, 659.
D. At What Time Made, 659.
E. Form and Requisites, 659.
1. Writing, 659.
2. Signature and Verification, 659.
3. Prayer, 660.
4. Statement of Facts, 660.
a. In General, 660.
b. To Show Jurisdiction, 660.
c. To Show Prima Facie Case for Discharge, 660.
d. Nature of Custody, 660.
(1) Illegality, 660.
(2) Want of Probable Cause, 660.
e. Nature of Authority, 660.
f. Name of Custodian, 660.
g. In Extradition Cases, 661.
F. Annexing Copy of Process, etc., 661.

G. Amendment of Application, 661.
H. Operation and Effect of Application, 661.
1. As Evidence, 661.
2. As Institution of Suit, 661.

VII. Issuance, 661.
A. Statutory Provision, 661.
B. Necessity for, 661.
C. Time of Issuance, 661.
1. In Vacation, 661.
2. At Discretion of Court, 661.
3. As Determining Priority, 661.
D. To Whom Issued, 661.
E. To What Place Issued, 662.
F. Discretion to Issue, 662.
G. Mandamus to Compel Issuance, 662.
H. Rule to Show Cause, 662.
I. Issuance with Certiorari, 662.
J. In Extradition Cases, 662.
K. Waiver of Issuance, 662.

VIII. Return of Writ, 662.
A. In General, 662.
B. Time Allowed for Return, 662.
C. Recitals of Facts, 662.
D. Presumption of Verity, 663.
E. Contradicting Return, 663.
F. Amending Return, 663.

IX. Hearing and Determination, 663.
A. Nature of Proceeding, 663.
B. Rule of Decision, 663.
C. Presence of Petitioner, 663.
D. Extent of Inquiry, 663.
1. In General, 663.
2. Statutory Provision, 664.
3. Guilt or Innocence, 664.
4. Motive of Prosecution, 665.
5. Criminality of Offense, 665.
6. Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence, 665.
7. Custody in Violation of Constitution, 665.
8. Custody under Judgments or Orders of Court, 665.
a. In General, 665.
b. Jurisdiction, 666.
c. Mere Errors, 667.
(1) In General, 667.
(2) Habeas Corpus and Certiorari, 667.
d. Commitments for Contempt, 667.
E. Evidence and Presumptions on Hearing, 668.
F. Decision on Hearing, 669.
1. In General, 669.
2. Providing for Delivery of Infant to Parent, 669.
3. Providing for Rearrest on Discharge, 669.
4. Effect of Decision of Discharge, 669.

X. Custody Pending Hearing, 670.

XI. Suspension of Writ, 671.
A. Power of Suspension, 671.
B. Effect of Suspension, 672.

XII. Compelling Obedience to Writ, 673.

XIII. Costs and Fees, 673.

XIV. Appeal, 673.

XV. Removal of Cause, 673.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 333; EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215; REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

I. Definition, Nature and Object.

A. Definition.—The writ of habeas corpus is the remedy which the law gives for the enforcement of the civil right of personal liberty.[1] In pursuance to its command, the body of the petitioner is brought before the court, that it may inquire into the legality of his detention.[2] The term "habeas corpus," as used in the judiciary act, is to be given the common-law definition.[3]

B. Nature.—The writ of habeas corpus is a high prerogative writ,[4] known to the common law, similar in nature to the writs of quo warranto, mandamus, certiorari and prohibition,[5] and the proceedings thereunder are regarded as appellate in character,[6] but it cannot be made to perform the office of a writ of error or appeal,[7] though it has been held that it can be used to serve such pur-

1. Definition.—Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 559, 27 L. Ed. 826; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 272, 49 L. Ed. 1040.

The writ of habeas corpus is a high prerogative writ, known to the common law, the great object of which is the liberation of persons imprisoned without sufficient cause. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650.

2. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 199, 7 L. Ed. 650.

3. Common-law definition of statutory term.—Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 93, 94, 2 L. Ed. 554.

Name and incidents derived from common law.—Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717.

The term is generic and includes every species of the writ known to the common law. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 95, 2 L. Ed. 554. See post, "Different Writs of Habeas Corpus," III.

4. Nature—Prerogative writ.—Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 627, 629, 9 L. Ed. 1181; Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 135, 50 L. Ed. 963.

This is "a high mandate, by means of which courts or judges, in protection of the liberty of individuals, exercise functions appertaining to the sovereign power, and which in intendment of law rest only in the sovereign and are coextensive with his dominion." In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 603, 34 L. Ed. 500.

5. Similar to quo warranto, mandamus, etc.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650. Mandamus, however, in this country, has ceased to be regarded as a prerogative writ. See the title MANDAMUS.

6. Appellate in nature.—The decision that the individual shall be imprisoned must always precede the application for a writ of habeas corpus, and this writ must always be for the purpose of revising that decision, and therefore, appellate in its nature. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 101, 2 L. Ed. 554.

The writ of habeas corpus is a mode provided for the exercise of the appellate jurisdiction of the federal supreme court whenever, by any unauthorized action of an inferior tribunal, whether it be by its order, decree, or process, a citizen is restrained of his personal liberty. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 350, 25 L. Ed. 676, dissenting opinion of Field, J. See, also, Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 21, 23 L. Ed. 787.

This writ is in the nature of a writ of error, which brings up the body of the prisoner, with the cause of commitment. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 202, 7 L. Ed. 650; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586i, 10 L. Ed. 579.

7. Not equivalent of writ of error.—"The writ of habeas corpus is not the equivalent of an appeal or writ of error. It is not a proceeding to correct errors which may have occurred in the trial of the case below. It is an attack directly upon the validity of the judgment, and, as has been frequently said, it cannot be transformed into a writ of error." Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 136, 50 L. Ed. 963; Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 93, 29 L. Ed. 544; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277.

This is true even in an appellate court. Bessette v. Conkey Co., 194 U. S. 324, 335, 48 L. Ed. 997. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 399. And see post, "As Determined by Validity of Proceedings," V, E; "Erroneous Judgment or pose in conjunction with the writ of certiorari in some cases.[8] The proceeding under a writ of habeas corpus is a "suit,"[9] within the meaning of § 25 of the judiciary act of 1789, giving the supreme court jurisdiction of suits appealed from the highest court of a state in certain cases,[10] and a "cause" from which questions may be certified from a lower court to this,[11] but not in the sense of a suit or controversy between private parties.[12] It is a new suit instituted by the petitioner to enforce the civil right to his personal liberty, and is separate and distinct from the criminal prosecution under which he is held in custody.[13] The Order," V, J, 6, c; "Mere Errors," IX, D, 8, c.

8. In conjunction with certiorari.—"The writ of habeas corpus is not a writ of error, though in some cases, in which the court issuing it has appellate power over the court by whose order the petitioner is held in custody, it may be used with the writ of certiorari for that purpose." Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277; Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 93, 29 L. Ed. 544. See the title CERTIORARI, vol. 3, p. 659. And see post, "Habeas Corpus and Certiorari," IX, D, 8, c, (2).

9. Proceeding is a suit.—Writs of habeas corpus prosecuted for the attainment of the parties' rights, are suits within the meaning of the law. Upshur County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 467, 474, 34 L. Ed. 196; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 464, 7 L. Ed. 481; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 9 L. Ed. 1181; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 564, 566, 567, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 112, 18 L. Ed. 281; Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 375, 23 L. Ed. 449. But see In re Barry (Note), 136 U. S. 597, 34 L. Ed. 504. See post, "As Institution of Suit," VI, H, 2.

It is the petitioner's suit in court, to recover his liberty. Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 564, 10 L. Ed. 579.

"When the petition is filed and the writ prayed for, it is a suit—the suit of the party making the application." Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 113, 18 L. Ed. 281.

A suit is commenced when the petitioner has demanded his release by the proceeding relating to habeas corpus. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 113, 18 L. Ed. 281.

Distinction between habeas corpus and ordinary action.—Gusman v. Marrero, 180 U. S. 81, 45 L. Ed. 436. See the title ACTIONS, vol. 1, p. 99.

But there is no amount in controversy.—Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 135, 50 L. Ed. 963; In re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 397, 37 L. Ed. 1120. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 852.

Not action for damages.—The proceeding under a writ of habeas corpus is different from an action for damages. Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 662, 35 L. Ed. 1146.

10. Appeal from state court.—One of the questions in Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 597, 10 L. Ed. 579, was whether under the 25th section of the judiciary act a proceeding for a writ of habeas corpus was a "suit." Chief Justice Taney held, that, "if a party is unlawfully imprisoned, the writ of habeas corpus is his appropriate legal remedy. It is his suit in court to recover his liberty." There was much diversity of opinion on another ground of jurisdiction; but that, in the sense of the 25th section of the judiciary act, the proceeding by habeas corpus was a suit, was not controverted by any except Baldwin, Justice, and he thought that "suit" and "cause" as used in the section, meant the same thing. Ex parte McCardle, 6 Wall. 318, 18 L. Ed. 816; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Wheelright, 7 Wheat. 534, 5 L. Ed. 516; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 113, 18 L. Ed. 281. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 549.

11. Is a "cause."—It is maintained with earnestness and ability that a certificate of division of opinion can occur only in a cause; and that the proceeding by a party, moving for a writ of habeas corpus, does not become a cause until after the writ has been issued and a return made. It is true that it is usual for a court, on application for a writ of habeas corpus, to issue the writ, and, on the return, to dispose of the case; but the court can elect to waive the issuing of the writ and consider whether, upon the facts presented in the petition, the prisoner, if brought before it, could be discharged. If, in the sense of the law, the proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus was the "cause" of the party applying for it, then it is evident that the "cause" was pending before the court, and that the questions certified arose out of it, belonged to it, and were matters of right and not of discretion. The court said: "This we deny. It was the cause of Milligan when the petition was presented to the circuit court. It would have been the cause of both parties, if the court had issued the writ and brought those who held Milligan in custody before it." Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 110, 112, 18 L. Ed. 281. See the titles ACTIONS, vol. 1, p. 100; APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 33.

12. Not controversy between private parties.—"It is an inquisition by the government, at the suggestion and instance of an individual, most probably, but still in the name and capacity of the sovereign." In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 615, 34 L. Ed. 500.

13. Proceeding separate from prosecution.—Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, proceeding is, in its nature, civil rather than criminal,[14] legal rather than equitable,[15] appellate rather than original,[16] collateral rather than direct,[17] and summary rather than cumbersome.[18] It is sometimes used as an ancillary proceeding.[19]

C. Object.—The object of the proceeding by a writ of habeas corpus is to inquire into the legality of the detention of the petitioner.[20]

II. Origin and History.

A. In General.—The great writ of habeas corpus has been for centuries esteemed the best and only sufficient defense of personal freedom.[21]

B. In England.—The English judges, being originally under the influence of the crown, neglected to issue this writ, where the government entertained suspicions which could not be sustained by evidence; and the writ, when issued, was sometimes disregarded or evaded, and great individual oppression was suffered, in consequence of delays in bringing prisoners to trial. To remedy this evil, the celebrated habeas corpus act of the 31 Car. II, was enacted, for the purpose of securing the benefits for which the writ was given. This statute may be referred to, as describing the cases in which relief is, in England, afforded by this writ to a person detained in custody. It enforces the common law. This statute excepts from those who are entitled to its benefit, persons committed for felony or treason, plainly expressed in the warrant, as well as persons convicted or in execution.[22]

C. In United States.—The people of this country brought with them to its 559, 27 L. Ed. 826. See post, "Guilt or Innocence," IX, D, 3.

14. Civil proceeding.—Farnsworth v. Montana, 129 U. S. 104, 113, 32 L. Ed. 616; Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 826; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 494, 29 L. Ed. 458; Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 82, 88, 36 L. Ed. 896; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 59, 38 L. Ed. 631; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 75, 37 L. Ed. 653; Fisher v. Baker, 203 U. S. 174, 181, 51 L. Ed. 142; In re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 397, 37 L. Ed. 1120; Gonzales v. Cunningham, 164 U. S. 612, 618, 41 L. Ed. 572; United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 310, 320, 36 L. Ed. 445; Washington, etc., R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 146 U. S. 227, 36 L. Ed. 951; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 215, 39 L. Ed. 401; In re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 100, 40 L. Ed. 88; Chapman v. United States, 164 U. S. 436, 41 L. Ed. 504; Perrine v. Slack, 164 U. S. 452, 41 L. Ed. 510.

15. Legal.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650.

16. Appellate.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650. See post, "Nature of," IV. A.

17. Collateral.—United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 59, 38 L. Ed. 631; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 76, 37 L. Ed. 653; Savin, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 267, 280, 33 L. Ed. 150.

18. Summary.—"In order to be effectual for the purposes for which it is intended, the proceedings must be summary; and the law has accordingly made them so." Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 564, 10 L. Ed. 579; Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 409, 20 L. Ed. 597; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 330, 15 L. Ed. 421; Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 93, 29 L. Ed. 544; In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 113, 14 L. Ed. 345.

19. Ancillary.—Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 123, 37 L. Ed. 386. See post, "As Ancillary Proceeding," V, N, 4.

20. Object—Inquiry into legality of detention.—Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 564, 566, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 560, 27 L. Ed. 826; In re Boardman, 169 U. S. 39, 43, 42 L. Ed. 653; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277; Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 391, 395, 41 L. Ed. 1045; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 114, 125, 2 L. Ed. 554; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 519, 24 L. Ed. 1118; United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 624, 26 L. Ed. 869.

The proceeding under a writ of habeas corpus is not like an action to recover damages for an unlawful arrest or commitment, but its object is to ascertain whether a prisoner can be legally detained in custody. Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 662, 35 L. Ed. 1146. See post, "In General," IX, D, 1.

21. Origin and history.—Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 95, 19 L. Ed. 332.

22. In England.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 202, 7 L. Ed. 650.

In England, after a long struggle, the right of personal liberty was firmly guaranteed by the famous Habeas Corpus Act of May 27, 1679, "for the better securing of the liberty of the subject," which, as Blackstone says, "is frequently considered as another Magna Charta." Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 95, 19 L. Ed. 332.

shores the rights of Englishmen; the rights which had been wrested from English sovereigns at various periods of the nation's history. One of these fundamental rights was that of habeas corpus, or the right of having any invasion of personal liberty judicially examined into, at once, by a competent judicial magistrate.[23] Naturally, therefore, when the confederated colonies became united states, and the formation of a common government engaged their deliberations in convention, this great writ found prominent sanction in the constitution.[24] The enactments now found in the Revised Statutes of the United States on the subject of the writ of habeas corpus are the result of a long course of legislation forced upon congress by the attempt of the states of the Union to exercise the power of imprisonment over officers and other persons asserting rights under the federal government or foreign governments, which the states denied.[25]

III. The Different Writs of Habeas Corpus.

There are a number of different writs of habeas corpus known to the law.[26]

23. In United States.—Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 114, 115, 21 L. Ed. 394, dissenting opinion of Bradley, J.

24. Constitutional and statutory recognition.—That sanction is in these words: "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it." The terms of this provision necessarily imply judicial action. In England, all the higher courts were open to applicants for the writ, and it is hardly supposable that, under the new government, founded on more liberal ideas and principles, any court would be, intentionally, closed to them. Accordingly, the first congress under the constitution, after defining, by various sections of the act of September 24, 1789, the jurisdiction of the district courts, the circuit courts, and the supreme court in other cases, proceeded, in the 14th section, to enact, "that all the before-mentioned courts of the United States shall have power to issue writs of scire facias, habeas corpus, and all other writs, not specially provided by statute, which may be necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and agreeable to the principles and usages of law." Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 95, 19 L. Ed. 332. See post, "Source of," IV, C, 1.

25. History of extention of federal jurisdiction.—In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 70, 34 L. Ed. 55; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 590, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406. See post, "For Act Done or Omitted in Pursuance of Law, etc," IV, C, 3, b, (3); "Where Prisoner Is Citizen of Foreign State," IV, C, 3, b, (5).

26. Habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum.—This writ is proper "when a prisoner hath had judgment against him in an action, and the plaintiff is desirous to bring him up to some superior court to charge him with process of execution." 3 Blk. Com. 129. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 97, 2 L. Ed. 554.

"This case can never occur in the courts of the United States. One court never awards execution on the judgment of another. Our whole judicial system forbids it." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 98, 2 L. Ed. 554.

Habeas corpus ad prosequendum, etc.—The writ of ad prosequendum, testificandum, deliberandum, etc., may issue "when it is necessary to remove a prisoner, in order to prosecute, or bear testimony, in any court, or to be tried in the proper jurisdiction wherein the fact was committed." 3 Blk. Com. 129. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 98, 2 L. Ed. 554.

Habeas corpus ad faciendum et recipiendum—Cum causa.—The common writ ad faciendum et recipiendum, "issues out of any of the courts of Westminster Hall, when a person is sued in some inferior jurisdiction, and is desirous to remove the action into the superior court, commanding the inferior judges to produce the body of the defendant, together with the day and cause of his caption and detainer (whence the writ is frequently denominated a habeas corpus cum causa), to do and receive whatever the king's court shall consider in that behalf. This writ is grantable of common right, without any motion in court, and it instantly supersedes all proceedings in the court below." 3 Blk. Com. 129. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 98, 2 L. Ed. 554. See Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. Ed. 667.

It would not be difficult to demonstrate that the writ of habeas corpus cum causa cannot be the particular writ contemplated by congress in the 14th section of the judiciary act; but it will be sufficient to observe, generally, that the same act prescribes a different mode for bringing into the courts of the United States suits brought in a state court against a person having a right to claim the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 98, 2 L. Ed. 554.

This writ may be issued by the United States courts in aid of their jurisdiction. Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 180, 28

IV. Jurisdiction.

A. Nature of.—The jurisdiction of the different courts to issue writs of habeas corpus is, in its nature, appellate rather than original.[27]

B. Of English Courts.—The issuance of writs of habeas corpus for the discharge of persons unlawfully imprisoned is one of the few grounds of jurisdiction over criminal matters possessed by the English court of chancery.[28]

C. Of United States Courts—1. Source of—a. Express Statutory Enactment.—The power of the courts of the United States to award the writ of habeas corpus must be given by written law compatible with the constitution of the United States.[29] The intent of the constitution, in respect to the writ of habeas corpus, is manifest. It is that every citizen may be protected by judicial action from unlawful imprisonment. To this end the act of 1789 provided that every court of the United States should have power to issue the writ.[30] The fourteenth section of the judiciary act and subsequent acts supplemental thereto and amendatory thereof, and not the sections conferring general jurisdiction, have been considered as containing a substantive grant of this power.[31]

L. Ed. 690. See post, "As Ancillary Proceeding," V, N, 4.

As to the issuance of this writ on removal of causes, see the title REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

Habeas corpus ad respondendum.—As stated and accurately defined by Judge Blackstone (3 Bl. Com. 129), the writ of habeas corpus ad respondendum lies: "When a man hath a cause of action against one who is confined by the process of some inferior court, in order to remove the prisoner and charge him with this new action in the court above." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 97, 2 L. Ed. 554.

"This case may occur, when a party, having a right to sue in this court * * * wishes to institute a suit against a person who is already confined by the process of an inferior court. This confinement may be either by the process of a court of the United States, or of a state court." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 97, 2 L. Ed. 554.

Habeas corpus ad subjiciendum.—The writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum is not by the common law the proper mode of instituting a proceeding to try the legal right of a party to the guardianship of an infant. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 594, 34 L. Ed. 500. See post, "In Other Cases," IV, C, 3, f.

27. Appellate in nature.—Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586h, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 402, 25 L. Ed. 715; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 341, 25 L. Ed. 676; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 190, 191, 12 L. Ed. 104; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 374, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 100, 101, 2 L. Ed. 554; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 98, 19 L. Ed. 332; Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 104, 11 L. Ed. 514; Ex parte Hung Hang, 108 U. S. 552, 553, 27 L. Ed. 811. See ante, "Nature," I, B.

But it may be admitted that there is some refinement in denominating that an appellate power which is exercised through the instrumentality of a writ of habeas corpus. In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 191, 12 L. Ed. 104.

28. Of English courts.—In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 210, 31 L. Ed. 402.

29. Source of—Statutory enactment.—Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 94, 2 L. Ed. 554; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 78, 34 L. Ed. 55, dissenting opinion; Lamar, J., Fuller, C. J.; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787.

"This * * * is not to be considered as abridging the power of courts over their own officers, or to protect themselves, and their members, from being disturbed in the exercise of their functions. It extends only to the power of taking cognizance of any question between individuals, or between the government and individuals." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 94, 2 L. Ed. 554. See In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 55.

The United States courts have no jurisdiction in cases in which it is "not given by the constitution or laws of the United States." In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 190, 12 L. Ed. 104.

30. Intent of constitutional provision.—Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332.

31. Fourteenth section of judiciary act.—Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 94, 2 L. Ed. 554; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650.

"The fourteenth section of the judiciary act granted to all the courts power to issue writs of scire facias, habeas corpus, and all other writs necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and agreeable to the principles and usages of law; and to the justices and judges, power to grant writs of habeas corpus for the purpose of inquiry into the cause of commitment; but it added a proviso, that the writ should not extend to prisoners in jail, unless in custody under or by color of authority of the United States, or com-

b. Incidental to Other Jurisdiction.—The power to award a writ of habeas corpus may arise as incidental and necessary to other powers conferred.[32]

2. ENLARGEMENT OF.—The general spirit and genius of our institutions has tended to the widening and enlarging of the habeas corpus jurisdiction of the courts and judges of the United States.[33] This extension may possibly become a source of danger to such institutions.[34]

3. EXTENT OF—a. In General.—The question of the extent of the authority of the courts of the United States to use the writ of habeas corpus as a means of releasing persons held in unlawful custody has always been clouded with more or less doubt and uncertainty.[35]

b. Where Prisoner Is in Jail—(1) Statutory Provision.—The fourteenth section of the judiciary act of 1789 provides, "that the courts of the United States shall have power to issue writs of scire facias, habeas corpus, and all other writs not specially provided for by statute, which may be necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and agreeable to the principles and usages of law. And that either of the justices of the supreme court, as well as judges of the district courts, shall have power to grant writs of habeas corpus."[36] And acts supplemental thereto and amendatory thereof provide that "the writ of habeas corpus shall in no case extend to a prisoner in jail, unless where he is in custody under or by color of the authority of the United States, or is committed for trial before some court thereof; or is in custody for an act done or omitted in pursuance of a law of the United States, or of an order, process, or decree of a court or judge thereof; or is in custody in violation of the Constitution or of a law or treaty of the United States; or, being a subject or citizen of a foreign state, and domiciled therein, is in custody for an act done or omitted under any alleged right, title, authority, privilege, protection, or exemption claimed under the commission, or order, or sanction of any foreign state, or under color thereof, the validity and effect whereof depend upon the law of nations; or unless it is necessary to bring the prisoner into court to testify."[37] The words of the proviso are unambiguous, and that they qualify and restrict the preceding provisions of the section is indisputable.[38] mitted for trial before some court of the same, or necessary to be brought into court to testify. It was found necessary to relax the limitation contained in this proviso; and this was done in several subsequent laws. See act of 1833 (4 Stat. 634), passed in consequence of nullification proceedings in South Carolina; act of 1842 (5 Stat. 539), passed in consequence of the McLeod Case; and act of 1867 (14 Stat. 44), passed in consequence of the state of things that followed the late rebellion." Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 323, 25 L. Ed. 667.

For fuller statement, see post, "Extent of," IV, C, 3.

32. Incidental to other jurisdiction.—The United States courts have not jurisdiction in all cases to issue the writ of habeas corpus, but they have such jurisdiction when, by reason of some other matter or thing in the case, the court has jurisdiction which it can enforce by means of this writ. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 597, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 102, 2 L. Ed. 554.

The power of the courts to issue the writ must be necessary to the exercise of the jurisdiction of the respective courts and agreeable to the principles and usages of law. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 590, 34 L. Ed. 500. See post, "Circuit Court of Appeals," IV, C, 4, b.

33. Jurisdiction has been continually extended.—Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 102, 19 L. Ed. 332.

34. Danger of too extensive federal jurisdiction.—Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 330, 15 L. Ed. 421, Curtis, J., dissenting. See, also, Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868.

35. Not definitely settled.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 589, 34 L. Ed. 500.

36. Grant of jurisdiction.—Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 105, 11 L. Ed. 514; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283. See post, "Express Statutory Enactment," IV, C, 1, a.

37. Restrictions upon jurisdiction.—Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406; Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 379, 41 L. Ed. 196; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 166, 199, 18 L. Ed. 768. See Rev. Stat., § 753.

38. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 593, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 11 L. Ed. 514; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 190, 12 L. Ed. 104.

(2) By Color of Authority of United States—(a) In General.—The jurisdiction of the different federal courts extends to cases, among others, of prisoners in jail under or by color of the authority of the United States, or committed for trial before some court thereof.[39] This extension of the power of the federal courts was provided for in the original judiciary act.[40]

(b) What Amounts to.—The federal courts and judicial officers are clothed with the power to issue the writ of habeas corpus in all cases, where a party is illegally restrained of his liberty by an officer of the United States, whether such illegality consists in character of the process, the authority of the officer, or the invalidity of the law under which he is held.[41] Detention by the military authority of the United States is included in this provision.[42]

(3) For Act Done or Omitted in Pursuance of Law, etc.—The original act of 1789 did not provide for the releasing by this writ of parties held in custody under the laws of the states. But when, during the controversy growing out of the nullification laws of South Carolina, officers of the United States were arrested and imprisoned for the performance of their duties in collecting the revenue of the United States in that state, and held by the state authorities, it became necessary for the congress of the United States to take some action for their relief. Accordingly the act of congress of March 2, 1833, among other remedies for such condition of affairs, provided, by its seventh section, that the federal judges should grant writs of habeas corpus in all cases of a prisoner in jail or confinement, where he should be committed or confined on or by any authority or law, for any act done, or omitted to be done, in pursuance of a law of the United States, or any order, process or decree of any judge or court thereof.[43] Under this enactment, the federal courts have jurisdiction to release, by habeas corpus, United States officers and other persons held in custody by any authority, whether state or national, for doing acts which they are authorized or required to do by the constitution and laws of the United States, and the writ of habeas corpus is the appropriate remedy for that purpose.[44] Any obligation fairly and properly inferable from the Constitution of the United States, or any duty of an officer to be derived from the general scope of his duties under the laws of the United States, is a "law" within the meaning of this phrase.[45] A marshal acting as a bodyguard who kills a person making an assault upon a justice of the supreme court is acting in pursuance of law and may be released from state cus-

39. By color of authority of United States.—Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. Ed. 676; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406; In re Burrus, 138 U. S. 586, 613, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 449, 2 L. Ed. 495.

40. In original judiciary act.—Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406.

41. What amounts to.—Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 411, 20 L. Ed. 597. See post, "Under Chinese Exclusion Acts," IV, C, 3, d.

42. Detention by military authority.—Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 20 L. Ed. 597. See post, "In Particular Instances," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (c), bb.

43. Act done or omitted in pursuance of law, etc.—In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 70, 34 L. Ed. 55. See, also, Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406. See ante, "In United States," II, C; post, "In Particular Instances," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (c), bb.

44. United States v. Lewis, 200 U. S. 1, 50 L. Ed. 343, citing In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 41, 34 L. Ed. 55; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 120, 37 L. Ed. 386. See Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 141, 50 L. Ed. 963.

Where a soldier of the United States kills a person supposed to be guilty of larceny and fleeing arrest, he does not act in pursuance of the laws of the United States. United States v. Lewis, 200 U. S. 1, 8, 50 L. Ed. 343.

45. What is "law" in this connection.—In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 59, 34 L. Ed. 55.

tody by a federal court on habeas corpus, although there is no special act of congress in express terms authorizing the marshal to accompany such justice.[46]

(4) In Violation of Constitution, Law or Treaty—(a) Statutory Provision—aa. In General.—The last extension of the power of the federal courts under the writ of habeas corpus is the act of February 5, 1867,[47] by which the jurisdiction of such courts to issue writs of habeas corpus is extended to prisoners in jail when they are in "custody in violation of the constitution or a law or treaty of the United States."[48]

bb. Former Acts Not Repealed by.—This act did not repeal any previous act conferring jurisdiction by habeas corpus, unless by implication.[49]

cc. Object and Purpose.—The object of this provision is to protect the citizens of the United States in the enjoyment of the rights, privileges and immunities given by the constitution and laws of the United States, and to secure the paramount authority of the United States.[50]

(b) Extent of Jurisdiction—aa. In General.—The habeas corpus jurisdiction of every court, and of every judge, extends to every possible case of privation of liberty contrary to the national constitution, treaties or laws.[51]

bb. Custody of State—(aa) Under Law in Violation of United States Constitution.—The federal jurisdiction extends to the discharge of a person from the custody of state authorities, if their exercise of jurisdiction over his person would be in violation of any rights secured to him by the constitution or laws of the United States.[52]

46. It is the duty of the United States to protect its officers from violence, even to death, in discharge of the duties which its laws impose upon them, and congress has made the writ of habeas corpus one of the means by which this protection is made efficient, and the facts of this case show that the prisoner was acting both under the authority of law, and the directions of his superior officers of the department of justice, therefore the court could see no reason why this writ should not be made to serve its purpose in the present case. In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 72, 34 L. Ed. 55. There was a strong dissent from the prevailing opinion in this case by Fuller, C. J., and Lamar, J. See page 89.

47. In violation of constitution, etc.—In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 72, 34 L. Ed. 55; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 104, 19 L. Ed. 332; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406.

48. Wildenhus's Case, 120 U. S. 1, 11, 30 L. Ed. 565; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 519, 24 L. Ed. 1118; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. Ed. 505; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 297, 35 L. Ed. 510; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 142, 46 L. Ed. 120; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. Ed. 455; Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 516, 29 L. Ed. 994; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 653; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 195, 36 L. Ed. 934; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 247, 29 L. Ed. 868; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 240, 40 L. Ed. 406; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 431, 30 L. Ed. 425; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405; Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 127, 42 L. Ed. 407; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 104, 106, 43 L. Ed. 91; Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 433, 50 L. Ed. 256; Cosgrove v. Winney, 174 U. S. 64, 43 L. Ed. 897; Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 467, 44 L. Ed. 846.

Federal jurisdiction upon writ of habeas corpus extends to the inquiry into the cause of appellant's commitment, and to the discharge of him, if he be held in custody in violation of the constitution. Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 250, 29 L. Ed. 868. See post, "In General," V, G, 5, a.

49. Former acts not repealed by.—Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 104, 19 L. Ed. 332.

50. Object and purpose.—In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 653; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500.

51. Extent of jurisdiction.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 592, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte McCardle, 6 Wall. 318, 18 L. Ed. 810.

But while the power to issue writs of habeas corpus nominally extends to every case where a party "is in custody in violation of the constitution or of a law or treaty of the United States," it is not every such case where the interference of the federal court is expedient, particularly where the state court is executing its own criminal laws, and is asserting a jurisdiction which does not reside elsewhere, to try an accused person for a violation of such laws. Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 402, 45 L. Ed. 249.

52. Custody of state—Under law in violation of United States constitution.—Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 201, 51 L. Ed. 148; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U.

(bb) Under Law in Violation of State Constitution.—Whether certain state statutes have or have not binding force, it is for the state to determine, and that determination in itself involves no infraction of the constitution of the United States and raises no federal question, giving the courts of the United States jurisdiction.[53]

(5) Where Prisoner Is Citizen of Foreign State.—The act of August 29, 1842, extends the federal jurisdiction to cases where the prisoner "being a subject or citizen of a foreign state, and domiciled therein, is in custody for an act done or omitted under any alleged right, title, authority, privilege, protection, or exemption claimed under the commission, or order, or sanction of any foreign state, or under color thereof, the validity and effect whereof depend upon the law of nations."[54]

(6) To Bring Prisoner into Court to Testify.—The original judiciary act empowered the federal courts to issue the writ of habeas corpus to bring a prisoner into court to testify.[55] And under that act this was the only instance in which

S. 231, 240, 40 L. Ed. 406; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 595, 15 L. Ed. 1028; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 182, 28 L. Ed. 390; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 92, 39 L. Ed. 80; In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 376, 33 L. Ed. 949; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 534, 24 L. Ed. 1118, dissenting opinion of Clifford, J.

In Wildenhus's Case, 120 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 565, the question was decided on habeas corpus whether an arrest, under authority of a state, of one of the crew of a foreign merchant vessel, charged with the commission of a crime on board of her while in a port within the state, was contrary to the provisions of a treaty between the United States and the country to which the vessel belonged. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 242, 40 L. Ed. 406.

The federal jurisdiction extends to the release of a prisoner held by a state under a void ordinance. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 365, 30 L. Ed. 220.

53. Same—Under law in violation of state constitution.—In re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 454, 35 L. Ed. 219; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 275, 39 L. Ed. 422; Carfer v. Caldwell, 200 U. S. 293, 297, 50 L. Ed. 488; Matter of Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 104, 51 L. Ed. 105; Gut v. State, 9 Wall. 35, 19 L. Ed. 573; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 142, 46 L. Ed. 120; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 302, 40 L. Ed. 432; In re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 449, 34 L. Ed. 519.

54. Where prisoner is citizen of foreign state.—New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 94, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 252, 29 L. Ed. 868; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 241, 40 L. Ed. 406; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283; Carfer v. Caldwell, 200 U. S. 293, 296, 50 L. Ed. 488; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 275, 39 L. Ed. 422; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 142, 46 L. Ed. 120. See post, "Aliens," V, L, 1; "In Particular Instances," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (c), bb.

The next extension of the circumstances on which a writ of habeas corpus might issue by the federal judges arose out of the celebrated McLeod case, in which McLeod, charged with murder, in a state court of New York, had pleaded that he was a British subject, and that what he had done was under and by the authority of his government, and should be a matter of international adjustment, and that he was not subject to be tried by a court of New York under the laws of that state. The federal government acknowledged the force of this reasoning, and undertook to obtain from the government of the state of New York the release of the prisoner, but failed. He was, however, tried and acquitted, and afterwards released by the state of New York. This led to an extension of the powers of the federal judges under the writ of habeas corpus, by the act of August 29, 1842, entitled: "An act to provide further remedial justice in the courts of the United States." It conferred upon them the power to issue a writ of habeas corpus in all cases where the prisoner claimed that the act for which he was held in custody was done under the sanction of any foreign power, and where the validity and effect of this plea depended upon the law of nations. In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 71, 34 L. Ed. 55; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332.

55. To bring prisoner into court to testify.—Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 11 L. Ed. 514; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 593, 34 L. Ed. 500; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406.

"And it is immaterial whether the imprisonment be under civil or criminal process." Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 11 L. Ed. 514. See ante, "The Different Writs of Habeas Corpus," III.

From custody of state officer.—When necessary, though a person is in the custody of a state officer, the federal courts such courts could issue the writ to bring up a prisoner under commitment of a state magistrate.[56]

c. Where Prisoner Is in State Custody—(1) Under Original Judiciary Act.—As limited by the original judiciary act of 1789, the federal jurisdiction did not extend to cases of imprisonment after conviction, under sentence of a state court of competent jurisdiction;[57] but the law has since been changed by the acts of 1833, 1842 and 1867.[58]

(2) Under Subsequent Acts—(a) Where State Has Jurisdiction.—If a state court has jurisdiction to try the case, and jurisdiction over the person of the accused, a federal court should deny the application for a writ of habeas corpus,[59] although the proceedings in the state court may be erroneous.[60]

(b) Where State Has No Jurisdiction.—Where the proceeding in the state court is void for want of jurisdiction, the federal jurisdiction may be invoked by habeas corpus.[61] There must be an entire want of jurisdiction in the state courts.[62]

d. Under Chinese Exclusion Acts.—There is nothing in the Chinese Restriction Acts of 1882 and 1884 which in any manner affects the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to issue writs of habeas corpus.[63] A Chinaman held have power by use of the writ, to bring him into a court of the United States to testify as a witness. New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 94, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 252, 29 L. Ed. 868. See post, "In Particular Instances," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (c), bb.

56. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406.

57. Under act of 1789.—Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332.

58. Extension of jurisdiction.—See post, "Under Subsequent Acts," IV, C, 3, c, (2).

59. Act of 1867—Where state has jurisdiction.—Valentina v. Mercer, 201 U. S. 131, 138, 50 L. Ed. 693; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 297, 35 L. Ed. 510; United State v. Lewis, 200 U. S. 1, 8, 50 L. Ed. 343.

The state court, having jurisdiction of the offense and of the accused, and having proceeded under a statute not repugnant to the constitution of the United States, the circuit courts of the United States have no authority to interfere, by means of a writ of habeas corpus, with the execution of its sentence. Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. Ed. 422; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 98, 39 L. Ed. 80; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 659, 39 L. Ed. 845.

60. Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 253, 29 L. Ed. 868; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872.

"When a state court has entered upon the trial of a criminal case, under a statute not repugnant to the constitution of the United States, and has jurisdiction of the offense and of the accused, no mere error in the conduct of the trial should be made the basis of jurisdiction in a court of the United States to review the proceedings upon writ of habeas corpus." Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 276, 39 L. Ed. 422; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. Ed. 845; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 163, 43 L. Ed. 399.

To determine former jeopardy.—Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 331, 28 L. Ed. 1005.

Erroneous exclusion of persons of African race from jury.—In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 287, 35 L. Ed. 505.

Of election offenses—Presidential election.—The courts of a state have jurisdiction of an indictment for illegal voting for electors of president and vice president of the United States; and a person sentenced by a state court to imprisonment for such offense cannot be discharged by writ of habeas corpus, although the indictment and sentence include illegal voting for a representative in congress. In re Green, 134 U. S. 377, 33 L. Ed. 951, citing Ex part Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. Ed. 690; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 756, 759, 32 L. Ed. 274.

61. Where state has no jurisdiction.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 253, 29 L. Ed. 868; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872; Valentina v. Mercer, 201 U. S. 131, 140, 50 L. Ed. 693; In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. Ed. 949; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 241, 40 L. Ed. 406.

Election offenses—Congressional elections.—A state has no jurisdiction of offenses committed at an election of a member of the house of representatives of the United States; and, if an officer of such state arrests a person, the federal courts have jurisdiction by writ of habeas corpus for his discharge. In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. Ed. 949.

62. In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 296, 35 L. Ed. 510.

63. The fact that the collector allowed a Chinaman to land, and that a treaty provides for diplomatic action in cases of hardship, does not affect jurisdiction. United States v. Jung Ah Lung, 124 U. S. 621, 628, 31 L. Ed. 591.

on board a vessel by the customs authorities is in custody by color of authority of the United States.[64]

e. In Extradition Cases.—The federal and state courts have concurrent jurisdiction to inquire into the legality of detention under a governor's warrant in interstate extradition cases.[65]

f. In Other Cases.—A court of the United States has no jurisdiction to issue the writ to release a person from imprisonment merely because the imprisonment is wrongful.[66] A district court has no jurisdiction to restore an infant to the custody of its father from the unlawful detention of its grandfather, by habeas corpus.[67]

4. Of the Different United States Courts—a. Supreme Court—(1) In General.—The federal supreme court cannot issue any writ of habeas corpus, except when it is necessary for the exercise of the jurisdiction, original or appellate, given to it by the constitution or laws of the United States.[68] The power to award writs of habeas corpus is conferred expressly upon the supreme court by the fourteenth section of the judiciary act, and has been repeatedly exercised. No doubt exists respecting the power.[69]

64. United States v. Jung Ah Lung, 124 U. S. 621, 626, 31 L. Ed. 591. See the title CHINESE EXCLUSION ACTS, vol. 3, p. 780; ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 255. And see post, "Under Chinese Exclusion Acts," V, L, 1, b, (2).

65. In extradition cases.—Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. Ed. 250. See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

66. In other cases.—Carfer v. Caldwell, 200 U. S. 293, 297, 50 L. Ed. 488.

67. To restore infant to parents.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 596, 34 L. Ed. 500; New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 438, 51 L. Ed. 254; Barry v. Mercein, 5 How. 103, 12 L. Ed. 70; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 495, 29 L. Ed. 458; In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 14 L. Ed. 345; Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787.

Nor does the original jurisdiction of the supreme court extend to such a case. Ex parte Barry, 2 How. 65, 11 L. Ed. 181.

"Although the statutes of the United States * * * enlarged the jurisdiction of the circuit courts by declaring that they shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several states, of all civil suits arising under the constitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority, the difficulty is not removed by this provision, for, as we have already said, the custody and guardianship by the parent of his child does not arise under the constitution, laws or treaties of the United States and is not dependent on them." In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 595, 34 L. Ed. 500.

"Whether the diverse citizenship of parties contesting this right to the custody of the child, could, in the courts of the United States, give jurisdiction to those courts to determine that question, has never been decided by this court that we are aware of. Nor is it necessary to decide it in this case." In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 596, 34 L. Ed. 500. See post, "In Particular Cases," IV, C, 4, a, (2), (c).

68. Supreme court.—Ex parte Barry, 2 How. 65, 11 L. Ed. 181. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1006, et seq.

69. Under fourteenth section of judiciary act.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 96, 19 L. Ed. 332; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 182, 21 L. Ed. 872; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586, 10 L. Ed. 579.

"It would have been, indeed, a remarkable anomaly if this court, ordained by the constitution for the exercise, in the United States, of the most important powers in civil cases of all the highest courts of England, had been denied, under a constitution which absolutely prohibits the suspension of the writ, except under extraordinary exigencies, that power in cases of alleged unlawful restraint, which the Habeas Corpus Act of Charles II expressly declares those courts to possess." Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 96, 19 L. Ed. 332.

The federal supreme court has authority to issue a habeas corpus, where a person is imprisoned under the warrant or order of any other court of the United States. Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554.

Co-extensive with that of other federal courts.—"The power to issue this writ being concurrent in this court, the circuit and district courts, and every judge of either, the action upon the writ, when the party is before a court or judge, is directed to the same object, 'for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of commitment,' in order to ascertain whether he shall be remanded to prison, discharged on bail, or without bail; in doing which, this court has no more power than any district judge; the nature of the power and the rules by which it must be ex-

(2) Original Jurisdiction—(a) In General.—The original jurisdiction of the federal supreme court is limited by the constitution to cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls,[70] and where a state is a party;[71] and even in these cases, only when the inferior court has acted without jurisdiction, or has exceeded its powers to the prejudice of the party seeking relief.[72]

(b) Power of Congress to Alter.—This original jurisdiction cannot be either extended or curtailed by any act of congress.[73]

(c) In Particular Cases.—There is no original jurisdiction in the supreme court to issue a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum to review or reverse the proceedings of a military commission.[74] Nor does it extend to the case of a petition by a private individual, for a habeas corpus to bring up the body of his infant daughter, alleged to be unlawfully detained from him.[75]

(3) Appellate Jurisdiction.—The supreme court may issue the writ of habeas corpus in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction where it has such jurisdiction, which is in all cases not prohibited by law, except those in which it has original jurisdiction only.[76]

(4) On Reference from Justices in Chambers or Vacation.—If the justice who issues the writ finds the questions involved to be of great moment and difficulty, and can postpone the case to the supreme court for consideration of the whole court without injury to the petitioner, there is no good reason why he should not do so. It has merely the effect of making the application for a discharge one addressed to the court, instead of one addressed to a single justice.[77] ercised are the same." Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586i, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 96, 102, 2 L. Ed. 554.

70. Original jurisdiction.—Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 104, 11 L. Ed. 514; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 820, 6 L. Ed. 204; Matter of Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 101, 51 L. Ed. 105; Ex parte Vallandigham, 1 Wall. 243, 253, 17 L. Ed. 589; Ex parte Barry, 2 How. 65, 11 L. Ed. 181; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 374, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. Ed. 332; Ex parte Hung Hang, 108 U. S. 552, 27 L. Ed. 811; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 25 L. Ed. 715; In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 119, 120, 14 L. Ed. 345; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Watkins, 7 Pet. 568, 8 L. Ed. 786; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 189, 12 L. Ed. 104, Nelson, J.

71. Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 104, 11 L. Ed. 514; Ex parte Barry, 2 How. 65, 11 L. Ed. 181. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1006.

If granting the writ would be an exercise of original jurisdiction, it would seem that it could not be granted, unless the fact that one of the petitioners for the writ in a state makes the cases to differ. This is established by the rulings in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch 137, 2 L. Ed. 60. "And it is not readily perceived how the fact that a state applies for the writ to be directed to one of her own citizens can make a case for our original jurisdiction." Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 341, 25 L. Ed. 676.

72. In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 446, 34 L. Ed. 219.

73. Power of congress to alter.—In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 191, 12 L. Ed. 104.

74. Over proceedings of military commission.—Ex parte Vallandigham, 1 Wall. 243, 253, 17 L. Ed. 589. But see Ex parte Mason, 105 U. S. 696, 697, 26 L. Ed. 1213.

75. To delivery of child to parent.—In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 14 L. Ed. 345; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Barry, 2 How. 65, 11 L. Ed. 181. See ante, "In Other Cases," IV, C, 3, f.

76. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 374, 25 L. Ed. 717. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 422, for treatment in full.

77. On reference from justice in chambers or vacation.—Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 403, 25 L. Ed. 715.

"Of course, under our system, no justice will needlessly refer a case to the court when he can decide it satisfactorily to himself, and will not do so in any case in which injury will be thereby incurred by the petitioner. No injury can be complained of in this case, since the petitioner was allowed to go at large on reasonable bail." Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 403, 25 L. Ed. 715.

An officer of election, at an election for a representative to congress in the city of Cincinnati, was convicted of a misdemeanor in the circuit court of the United States, under § 5515 of the Revised Statutes, for a violation of the law of Ohio, in not conveying the ballot box, after it had been sealed up and delivered to him for that purpose, to the county

b. Circuit Court of Appeals.—In the court of appeals act there is no mention of habeas corpus, no language which can be tortured into a grant of power to issue the writ, except in cases where it may be necessary for the exercise of a jurisdiction already existing; accordingly these courts are not authorized to issue original and independent writs of habeas corpus; but cases may arise in which the writ of habeas corpus is necessary to the complete exercise of their appellate jurisdiction.[78] There is no constraining presumption that congress intended to give these courts jurisdiction of habeas corpus.[79]

c. Circuit and District Courts.—The circuit and district courts of the United States are authorized by the fourteenth section of the judiciary act to issue writs of habeas corpus, except in cases where the privilege of the writ is suspended, to hear and determine the question, whether the party is entitled to be discharged.[80]

5. Judges and Justices of United States Courts.—The several justices and judges of supreme, circuit and district courts of the United States, within their respective jurisdictions shall have power to grant writs of habeas corpus for the purpose of an inquiry into the cause of restraint of liberty.[81] But it has been held that a single justice of the supreme court cannot issue the writ when the issuance involves an exercise of appellate jurisdiction.[82] A justice of the federal supreme court can exercise the power of issuing the writ of habeas clerk, and for allowing it to be broken open. Held, in such a case, a habeas corpus for discharge from imprisonment under the conviction was rightfully issued by a justice of the federal supreme court, returnable before himself; and he had the right, if it could be done without injury to the prisoner, to refer the matter to the supreme court for its determination, it being a case which involved the exercise of appellate jurisdiction. Had the case involved original jurisdiction only, the court could not have taken jurisdiction of it. Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 25 L. Ed. 715.

A judge of the court in vacation, at his chambers, has no power to grant a writ of habeas corpus out of the federal supreme court, or to make such a writ returnable before himself, and then adjourn it into term. In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 118, 14 L. Ed. 345, Mr. Justice Curtis. But see Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 402, 25 L. Ed. 715, distinguishing this case. See post, "Of the Different United States Courts," IV, C, 4.

78. Circuit court of appeals.—Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 136, 50 L. Ed. 963; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 58, 36 L. Ed. 340. See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 810; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1006.

These courts have power to issue writs not specifically provided for by statute, which may be necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction and agreeably to the usages and principles of law. In re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536, 549, 45 L. Ed. 657. See ante, "Incidental to Other Jurisdiction," IV, C, 1, b.

These courts have issued the writ in at least two cases.—Matter of Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 103, 51 L. Ed. 105; Bradford v. Southern R. Co., 195 U. S. 243, 250, 49 L. Ed. 178.

79. Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 135, 50 L. Ed. 963.

But if the language of the court of appeals act was fairly susceptible of two constructions, one granting and the other omitting to grant power to issue a writ of habeas corpus, the great importance of the writ might justify a construction upholding the grant. This is indicated by the ruling in Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554. Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 136, 50 L. Ed. 963.

80. Circuit and district courts.—Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281; In re Grimley, 137 U. S. 147, 150, 34 L. Ed. 636; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 95, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332; Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 42 L. Ed. 748.

81. Judges and Justices of United States courts.—Rev. Stat., § 752; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 182, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 590, 34 L. Ed. 500.

The writ may be issued by a justice of the supreme court during vacation. Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 27 L. Ed. 232.

82. "It is not to be doubted, that whatever jurisdiction belongs to the supreme court, under any writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, is appellate. It is equally clear that no part of the appellate jurisdiction of this court can be exercised by a single judge, at his chambers. It is also well settled, that the question, whether such a writ of habeas corpus shall issue from this court, is one upon which the court ought to pass, before the writ issues; the allowance of the writ being an exercise of its limited appellate jurisdiction, which only the court itself has the power to exert." Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704, 9 L. Ed. 280, Curtis, J.; corpus in any part of the United States where he happens to be.[83]

D. Of State Courts—1. In General.—The states have the right, by their own courts, or by the judges thereof, to inquire into the grounds upon which any person, within their respective territorial limits, is restrained of his liberty, and to discharge him, if it be ascertained that such restraint is illegal; and this, notwithstanding such illegality may arise from a violation of the constitution or the laws of the United States,[84] provided it does not appear, when the application is made, that the person imprisoned is in custody under the authority of the United States.[85]

2. In Extradition Cases.—So far as the constitution and laws of the United States are concerned, it is competent for the courts of a state or any judges thereof having power, under state laws, to issue writs of habeas corpus, to determine, upon writ of habeas corpus, whether the warrant of arrest and the delivery of the fugitive to the agent of another state were in conformity with the statutes of the United States; if not, to remand him to the custody of the agent.[86]

E. Of Territorial Courts.—The territorial legislatures may confer upon the supreme courts of the territories original and appellate jurisdiction to issue writs of habeas corpus when necessary. Such a law is constitutional.[87]

F. Concurrent and Conflicting Jurisdiction—1. In General.—It is a settled doctrine, that a court of competent jurisdiction having possession of a person cannot be deprived of the right to deal with such person by habeas corpus, until its jurisdiction is exhausted, and that no court of another and independent sovereignty has the right to interfere with such custody.[88] On habeas corpus, the state courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the federal courts of all cases of imprisonment within their territorial jurisdiction, except in the case where the petitioner is in custody under the authority, or claim or color of authority, of the United States.[89]

In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 118, 14 L. Ed. 345.

83. Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 403, 25 L. Ed. 715; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586i, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 519, 24 L. Ed. 1118; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332. See ante, "On Reference from Justices in Chambers or Vacation," IV, C, 4, a, (4).

84. Of state courts.—Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 639, 28 L. Ed. 542.

85. Prisoner in custody under federal authority.—Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 523, 16 L. Ed. 169; Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 409, 20 L. Ed. 597.

The judicial authorities of the state cannot claim and exercise the right, upon habeas corpus, to release persons held in custody in pursuance of the judgment of a court of the United States, Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169, or by order of a circuit court commissioner, Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 20 L. Ed. 597, or by officers of the United States in execution of their laws. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 635, 28 L. Ed. 542. See post, "Where Writ Issues from State Court," IV, F, 2.

86. In extradition cases.—Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 638, 28 L. Ed. 542.

The state and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction in such cases. Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. Ed. 250. See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

87. Of territorial courts.—Clough v. Curtis, 134 U. S. 361, 33 L. Ed. 945. See Gonzales v. Cunningham, 164 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 572; New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 437, 51 L. Ed. 254. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1159.

88. Concurrent and conflicting jurisdiction.—In re Johnson, 167 U. S. 120, 125, 42 L. Ed. 103; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169; Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 20 L. Ed. 597; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 28 L. Ed. 542; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 276, 39 L. Ed. 422; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 290, 35 L. Ed. 505; Pepke v. Cronan, 155 U. S. 100, 39 L. Ed. 84. See post, "Admission to Bail by Federal Court," IV, F, 3, a, (5).

89. Concurrent jurisdiction of state and federal courts.—Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 633, 28 L. Ed. 542; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169; Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 402, 20 L. Ed. 597.

The sovereignty of the United States and of a state are distinct and independent of each other within their respective spheres of action, although both exist and exercise their powers within the same territorial limits. And a habeas corpus,

2. Where Writ Issues from State Court—a. In General.—No state can authorize one of its judges or courts to exercise judicial power, by habeas corpus, within the jurisdiction of another and independent government.[90]

b. Prisoner Confined within Territory of State—(1) In General.—The state court may issue the writ in any case of imprisonment within the territorial limits of such state to inquire for what cause and by what authority it is exercised,[91] directed to the person exercising such authority, although such person is a federal officer and acting under federal authority.[92] When the writ is served upon him it becomes the duty of the marshal, or other person having the custody of the prisoner, to make known to the judge or court, by a proper return, the authority by which he holds him, in custody.[93] While such federal officer has imposed upon him this duty to make known his authority to the state court, yet he is at the same time to obey and execute the process of the federal courts.[94]

(2) Under Federal Authority—(a) In General.—But, if it appears either upon the application for the writ or upon the return thereto that the custody is by virtue "of the authority of the United States," the state court can proceed no further.[95] issued by a state judge or court, has no authority within the limits of the sovereignty assigned by the constitution to the United States. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169.

When the prisoner is within the dominion and jurisdiction of the United States government, the writ of habeas corpus, issued under state authority, cannot pass over the line of division between the two sovereignties. He is then within the dominion and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. If he is wrongfully imprisoned, their judicial tribunals can release him and afford him redress. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 523, 16 L. Ed. 169.

That the courts and judges of the several states cannot, under any authority conferred by the states, discharge from custody persons held by authority of the courts of the United States, or of commissioners of such courts, or by officers of the general government acting under its laws, results from the supremacy of the constitution and laws of the United States. Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 249, 29 L. Ed. 868.

Efficient protection in federal courts.—"This limitation upon the power of state tribunals and state officers furnishes no just ground to apprehend that the liberty of the citizen will thereby be endangered. The United States are as much interested in protecting the citizen from illegal restraint under their authority, as the several states are to protect him from the like restraint under their authority, and are no more likely to tolerate any oppression. * * * Certainly there can be no ground for supposing that their action will be less prompt and efficient in such cases than would be that of state tribunals and state officers." Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 411, 20 L. Ed. 597. See, also, Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 523, 16 L. Ed. 169.

In extradition cases.—See ante, "In Extradition Cases," IV, C, 3, e.

90. Where writ issues from state court.—Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 405, 20 L. Ed. 597; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 516, 16 L. Ed. 169. See ante, "Of State Courts," IV, D.

91. Prisoner confined within territory of state.—Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 514, 523, 16 L. Ed. 169; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 631, 28 L. Ed. 542.

92. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 523, 16 L. Ed. 169.

If the prisoner is held in custody only under color of authority derived from the constitution and laws of the United States, and is entitled to invoke the judgment of the judicial tribunals, whether of the state or of the United States, by the writ of habeas corpus, upon the lawfulness of his arrest and imprisonment, the jurisdiction of the courts of the states is not excluded, as was adjudged by the federal supreme court in the case of Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 28 L. Ed. 542, for, although the party is restrained of his liberty under color of authority derived from the laws of the United States, he is not in the custody of, or under restraint by, an officer of the United States. Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 94, 29 L. Ed. 544.

93. Duty of federal officer upon whom served.—Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 514, 523, 16 L. Ed. 169; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 631, 28 L. Ed. 542.

94. "It is at the same time imperatively his duty to obey the process of the United States, to hold the prisoner in custody under it, and to refuse obedience to the mandate or process of any other government." Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 523, 16 L. Ed. 169; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 632, 28 L. Ed. 542; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 255, 23 L. Ed. 563.

95. Under federal authority.—"No state judge or court, after they are judicially informed that the party is imprisoned under the authority of the United States, has any right to interfere with him, or to

(b) What Constitutes Federal Authority.—By federal authority is not meant undisputed lawful authority of the United States, as distinguished from claim or color of such authority.[96] A person is in custody under federal authority, and beyond the scope of state jurisdiction, when he is in the custody of a United States court,[97] of a commissioner of such court,[98] or of an officer of the United States government acting under its laws.[99]

3. WHERE WRIT ISSUES FROM UNITED STATES COURT—a. Power to Issue Writ—(1) Dependent upon Statute.—The writ can be issued by a United States require him to be brought before them." Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 632, 28 L. Ed. 542; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 514, 16 L. Ed. 169.

"If such fact appear upon the application, the writ should be refused. If it do not appear, the judge or court issuing the writ has a right to inquire into the cause of imprisonment, and ascertain by what authority the person is held within the limits of the state; and it is the duty of the marshal, or other officer having the custody of the prisoner, to give, by a proper return, information in this respect. His return should be sufficient, in its detail of facts, to show distinctly that the imprisonment is under the authority, or claim and color of the authority, of the United States, and to exclude the suspicion of imposition or oppression on his part. And the process or orders, under which the prisoner is held, should be produced with the return and submitted to inspection, in order that the court or the judge issuing the writ may see that the prisoner is held by the officer, in good faith, under the authority, or claim and color of the authority, of the United States, and not under the mere pretense of having such authority." Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 409, 20 L. Ed. 597, approved in Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 183, 28 L. Ed. 390.

96. What constitutes federal authority.—"Some attempt has been made in adjudications, to which our attention has been called, to limit the decision of this court in Ableman v. Booth, and the United States v. Booth (21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169), to cases where a prisoner is held in custody under undisputed lawful authority of the United States, as distinguished from his imprisonment under claim and color of such authority. But it is evident that the decision does not admit of any such limitation." Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 410, 20 L. Ed. 597.

"All that is meant by the language used is, that the state judge or state court should proceed no further when it appears, from the application of the party, or the return made, that the prisoner is held by an officer of the United States under what, in truth, purports to be the authority of the United States; that is, an authority, the validity of which is to be determined by the constitution and laws of the United States. If a party thus held be illegally imprisoned it is for the courts or judicial officers of the United States, and those courts or officers alone, to grant him release." Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 411, 20 L. Ed. 597.

"Questions of this kind must always depend upon the constitution and laws of the United States, and not of a state." Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 516, 16 L. Ed. 169.

97. Custody of federal court.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 249, 29 L. Ed. 868.

98. Court commissioner.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 249, 29 L. Ed. 868.

99. Federal officer.—No judicial officer of a state has jurisdiction to issue a writ of habeas corpus, or to continue proceedings under the writ when issued, for the discharge of a person held under the authority, or claim and color of the authority, of the United States, by an officer of that government. Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 402, 20 L. Ed. 597; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 249, 29 L. Ed. 868; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 634, 28 L. Ed. 542.

In this regard there is no distinction between a federal officer and a federal tribunal. Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 404, 20 L. Ed. 597.

Military officer.—These principles applied to a case where a habeas corpus was issued by a court commissioner of one of the counties of Wisconsin to a recruiting officer of the United States, to bring before him a person who had enlisted as a soldier in the army of the United States, and whose discharge was sought on the alleged ground that he was a minor under the age of eighteen years at the time of his enlistment, and that he enlisted without the consent of his father. The petition for the writ alleging that the prisoner had enlisted as a soldier and been mustered into the military service of the national government, and was detained by the officer as such soldier, the federal supreme court held that the court commissioner had no jurisdiction to issue the writ for the discharge of the prisoner, as it thus appeared upon the petition that the prisoner was detained under claim and color of the authority of the United States by an officer of that government; and that if he was illegally detained, it was for the courts or judicial officers of the United States and for those courts or officers court to release prisoner from the custody of a state court, only in cases provided for by statute.[1]

(2) Scope of Statute.—Under the original judiciary act, the only case in which the writ could so issue was to bring the prisoner before the United States court to be used as a witness;[2] but, by subsequent legislation, the federal jurisdiction has been extended,[3] so that the writ may issue to discharge a person who is in state custody, in violation of the constitution or a law or a treaty of the United States;[4] for an act done or omitted in pursuance of any law of the United States, or any order, process or decrees of any judge or court thereof;[5] and where the person in custody is the subject of a foreign state, and domiciled therein, and is in custody for an act done or omitted under the order, etc., of a foreign state, the validity and effect whereof depend upon the law of nations.[6]

(3) Custody under Erroneous Ruling of State Court.—The federal courts alone to grant him release. Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 20 L. Ed. 597.

"In Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, 20 L. Ed. 597, the person whose discharge was sought was held as an enlisted soldier of the army, by an officer of that army acting directly under the constitution and laws of the United States." Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 634, 28 L. Ed. 542.

1. Where writ issues from United States court.—"The extent of the right of the federal courts to interfere by writ of habeas corpus with the proceedings of courts and other authorities of a state is carefully defined by statute." Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 433, 50 L. Ed. 256.

"The prosecution and punishment of crimes and offenses committed against one of the states of the Union appropriately belong to the courts and authorities of the state, and can be interfered with by the circuit court of the United States so far only as congress, in order to maintain the supremacy of the constitution and laws of the United States, has expressly authorized either a removal of the prosecution into the circuit court of the United States for trial, or a dischage of the prisoner by writ of habeas corpus issued by that court or by a judge thereof." Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 114, 37 L. Ed. 386; Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 257, 25 L. Ed. 648; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. Ed. 667; Davis v. South Carolina, 107 U. S. 597, 27 L. Ed. 574; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 55; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 672, 673, 36 L. Ed. 1123.

2. Scope of original judiciary act.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 34 L. Ed. 500; In re Dorr, 3 How. 103, 11 L. Ed. 514; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 239, 40 L. Ed. 406.

3. Scope of subsequent statutes.—See ante, "In United States," II, C; "Enlargement of," IV, C, 2.

4. Custody in violation of constitution.—"While it might appear unseemly that a prisoner, after conviction in a state court, should be set at liberty by a single judge on habeas corpus, there was no escape from the act of 1867, which invested such judge with power to discharge when the prisoner was restrained of his liberty in violation of a law of the United States." Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 253, 29 L. Ed. 868.

"Undoubtedly, the courts of the United States have the power, under existing legislation, by writ of habeas corpus to discharge from custody any person held by state authorities under criminal proceedings instituted under state enactments, if such enactments are void for repugnancy to the constitution, laws or treaties of the United States." Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 532, 43 L. Ed. 535; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 431, 30 L. Ed. 425; Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 36 L. Ed. 986; In re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. Ed. 519; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 34 L. Ed. 816; In re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. Ed. 796; McNulty v. California, 149 U. S. 645, 37 L. Ed. 882; Lambert v. Barrett, 157 U. S. 697, 699, 39 L. Ed. 865.

The courts of Virginia having no jurisdiction of a complaint for perjury in testifying before a notary of the state upon a contested election of a member of congress on which the prisoner was arrested, and he being in custody, in violation of the constitution and laws of the United States, for an act done in pursuance of those laws by testifying in the case of a contested election of a member of congress, law and justice required that he should be discharged from such custody, and he was rightly so discharged by the circuit court on writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. Ed. 868; In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 376, 33 L. Ed. 949; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 297, 35 L. Ed. 510; Valentina v. Mercer, 201 U. S. 131, 50 L. Ed. 693. See ante, "In Violation of Constitution, Law or Treaty," IV, C, 3, b, (4); post, "Discretion to Issue Writ," IV, F, 3, b.

5. Act done or omitted in pursuance of law.—See ante, "For Act Done or Omitted in Pursuance of Law, etc.," IV, C, 3, b, (3).

6. Subject of foreign state.—See ante, "Where Prisoner Is Citizen of Foreign State," IV, C, 3, b, (5).

have no power to discharge a person in custody of a state court of competent jurisdiction, simply because such court has committed an error.[7]

(4) Where Prisoner Is Not Guilty.—It is elementary learning that, if a prisoner is in the custody of a state court of competent jurisdiction, not illegally asserted, he cannot be taken from that jurisdiction and discharged on habeas corpus issued by a court of the United States, simply because he is not guilty of the offense for which he is held.[8]

(5) Admitted to Bail by Federal Court.—Where a prisoner in state custody had previously been admitted to bail in a federal court, the federal court has power to take him from state authority by habeas corpus.[9]

b. Discretion to Issue Writ—(1) Before Exhaustion of Remedies in State Court—(a) In General.—Although the different courts of the United States, and the several justices and judges thereof, have authority, under existing statutes, to discharge, upon habeas corpus, one held in custody by state authority in violation of the constitution or of any treaty or law of the United States,[10] they are not imperatively required to do so in every case;[11] but may exercise a discretion whether they will discharge the prisoner in advance of his trial and conviction in the state court, or compel the prisoner to proceed by the usual method of error or appeal, after exhausting such remedies as the state gives to test the constitutionality of his detention.[12] This discretion should be exercised in the light

7. Error of state court.—If the state court had jurisdiction of the offense and person, a mere error committed in rendering sentence does not justify federal interference. Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. Ed. 422; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 98, 39 L. Ed. 80; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 659, 39 L. Ed. 845. See post, "As Determined by Validity of Proceedings," V, E: "Mere Errors," IX, D. 8, c.

8. Where prisoner not guilty.—Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 180, 28 L. Ed. 690. See post, "As Determined by Defenses to Prosecution," V, O: "Guilt or Innocence," IX, D. 3.

9. Where prisoner had been bailed by federal court.—Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. 366, 21 L. Ed. 287.

10. Discretion to issue writ.—Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 181, 51 L. Ed. 760.

11. Discharge not imperative.—United States v. Lewis, 200 U. S. 1, 8, 50 L. Ed. 343; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. Ed. 80; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. Ed. 303; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 501, 45 L. Ed. 639; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 302, 32 L. Ed. 405.

In New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. Ed. 80, it was held that the statute did not imperatively require the circuit court by that writ to wrest the petitioner from the custody of the state officers in advance of his trial in the state court; and that while the circuit court had the power to do so, and could discharge the accused in advance of his trial, if restrained in violation of the constitution, it was not bound in every case to exercise such power immediately upon application being made for the writ. Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. Ed. 303.

Congress did not intend obstruction to state administration of law.—"While the courts of the United States have power, upon habeas corpus, to inquire into the cause of the detention of any one claiming to be restrained of his liberty in violation of the constitution, or laws, or treaties of the United States, it was not intended by congress that they should by writs of habeas corpus obstruct the ordinary administration of the criminal laws of the states, through their own tribunals." In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 289, 35 L. Ed. 505; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 160, 35 L. Ed. 971.

Not issued as of course.—"While the writ of habeas corpus is one of the remedies for the enforcement of the right to personal freedom, it will not issue, as a matter of course, and it should be cautiously used by the federal courts in reference to state prisoners." In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 75, 37 L. Ed. 653.

In the exercise of the authority given the federal courts to discharge a prisoner in state custody in violation of the constitution, they are not bound to discharge every such prisoner. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 240, 40 L. Ed. 406.

It is not now the law and never was, that every person held in unlawful imprisonment has a right to invoke the aid of the courts of the United States for his release by the writ of habeas corpus. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500.

Due process does not require issuance.—Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. Ed. 422. And see the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499.

Issuance may be delayed.—The court may in its discretion delay issuance. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650.

12. Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S.

of the relation existing, under our system of government, between the judicial tribunals of the Union and of the states, and in recognition of the fact that the public good requires that those relations be not disturbed by unnecessary conflict

241, 251, 254, 29 L. Ed. 868; Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 181, 51 L. Ed. 760; Stevens v. Ohio, 179 U. S. 680, 45 L. Ed. 384; Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 201, 51 L. Ed. 148; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 285, 43 L. Ed. 699; Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 516, 518, 29 L. Ed. 994; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 96, 39 L. Ed. 80; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 289, 35 L. Ed. 505; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 75, 76, 37 L. Ed. 653; Pepke v. Cronan, 155 U. S. 100, 101, 39 L. Ed. 84; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 216, 217, 39 L. Ed. 401; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 242, 40 L. Ed. 406; Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 290, 42 L. Ed. 748; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 104, 105, 43 L. Ed. 91; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 186, 44 L. Ed. 124; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 45 L. Ed. 639; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. Ed. 303; In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 180, 181, 50 L. Ed. 984; In re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 454, 35 L. Ed. 219; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 160, 35 L. Ed. 971; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 194, 36 L. Ed. 934; Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 391, 395, 41 L. Ed. 1045; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 532, 533, 43 L. Ed. 535; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 656, 39 L. Ed. 845; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 302, 32 L. Ed. 405; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. Ed. 422; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 40 L. Ed. 432; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 41 L. Ed. 1085; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 45 L. Ed. 249; Gusman v. Marrero, 180 U. S. 81, 45 L. Ed. 436; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 46 L. Ed. 120; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. Ed. 816; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 35 L. Ed. 510; In re Boardman, 169 U. S. 39, 44, 42 L. Ed. 653; Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 433, 50 L. Ed. 256; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. Ed. 119; Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. Ed. 250; In re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. Ed. 796; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. Ed. 949; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 42 L. Ed. 461; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586o, 10 L. Ed. 579.

Rule in Ex parte Royall.—"Where a person is in custody, under process from a state court of original jurisdiction, for an alleged offense against the laws of such state, and it is claimed that he is restrained of his liberty in violation of the constitution of the United States, the circuit court has a discretion, whether it will discharge him, upon habeas corpus, in advance of his trial in the court in which he is indicted; that discretion, however, to be subordinated to any special circumstances requiring immediate action. When the state court shall have finally acted upon the case, the circuit court has still a discretion whether, under all the circumstances then existing, the accused, if convicted, shall be put to his writ of error from the highest court of the state, or whether it will proceed by writ of habeas corpus, summarily to determine whether the petitioner is restrained of his liberty in violation of the constitution of the United States." Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 253, 29 L. Ed. 868. See restatement in Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 181, 51 L. Ed. 760.

Should ordinarily be put to writ of error.—The ordinary procedure for the correction of errors in criminal cases is by writ of error, and that method should be pursued unless there be special circumstances calling for a departure therefrom. In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 182, 50 L. Ed. 984; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 50 L. Ed. 303; Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 140, 50 L. Ed. 963; Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 154, 47 L. Ed. 116; In re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. Ed. 219.

Interference with state courts not encouraged.—"Unless this case be of such an exceptional nature, we ought not to encourage the interference of the federal court below with the regular course of justice in the state court." Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 291, 42 L. Ed. 748; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 195, 36 L. Ed. 934; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 141, 46 L. Ed. 120.

"It is recognized, however, that the power to arrest the due and orderly proceedings of the state courts, or to discharge a prisoner after conviction, before an application has been made to the supreme court of the state for relief, is one which should be sparingly exercised, and should be confined to cases where the facts imperatively demand it." Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 402, 45 L. Ed. 249.

Only when fundamental rights violated.—"The reluctance with which this court will sanction federal interference with a state in the administration of its domestic law for the prosecution of crime has been frequently stated in the deliverances of the court upon the subject. It is only where fundamental rights, specially secured by the federal constitution, are invaded, that such interference is warranted." Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 434, 50 L. Ed. 256. See, also, Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 44 L. Ed. 846.

Original application to supreme court.—The same rule applies where in addition to the petitions presented to the circuit court of the United States, an original application is made to the federal supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus based upon the same facts as those set forth in the other petitions. New York v. Eno.

between courts equally bound to guard and protect rights secured by the constitution.[13]

(b) When Writ Will Be Denied—aa. Rule Stated.—The general rule, in the absence of circumstances requiring immediate action,[14] is, that the courts and judges or justices of the United States will not interfere by habeas corpus with the custody by state authorities of one claimed to be held in violation of the constitution or laws of the United States until after final action by the state courts in the case in which such custody exists,[15] but that they will deny such applications without prejudice to a renewal of the same after the accused had availed himself of such remedies as the laws of the state afforded for a review of the judgment in the state court of which he complains.[16]

bb. Basis of Rule.—This rule grows out of the relations existing under our system of government, between the judicial trubunals of the United States and of the several states,[17] under which it is incumbent upon the state courts, equally 155 U. S. 89, 95, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 254, 29 L. Ed. 868.

And federal courts may exercise discretion.—Royall, who was held under state process for trial on an indictment charging an offense against the laws of the state, filed his petition in habeas corpus in the circuit court of the United States praying release from that custody. The circuit court refused to order his discharge, and from its ruling he appealed, and at the same time filed an original petition in this court. The question was fully considered and it was held that while the federal courts, circuit and supreme, had jurisdiction in the premises, there was a discretion whether the writ should be issued. Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 254, 29 L. Ed. 868; In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 180, 50 L. Ed. 984.

13. Controlled by dual system of government.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868.

14. When writ will be denied.—See post, "When Writ Will Be Granted," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (b).

Controlled by circumstances of particular case.—This discretion to interfere, on habeas corpus, for the protection of one alleged to be restrained of his liberty in violation of the constitution or laws of the United States, must often be controlled by the special circumstances of the case. Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637, 28 L. Ed. 542; Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 201, 51 L. Ed. 148.

Granted only in cases of urgency.—"A prisoner in custody under the authority of a state should not, except in a case of peculiar urgency, be discharged by a court or judge of the United States upon a writ of habeas corpus, in advance of any proceedings in the courts of the state to test the validity of his arrest and detention." Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 247, 40 L. Ed. 406.

15. The rule stated.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868; Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 466, 44 L. Ed. 846; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. Ed. 80; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 242, 40 L. Ed. 406; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 44 L. Ed. 124; Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 183, 51 L. Ed. 760. See Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 154, 47 L. Ed. 116; United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 168, 48 L. Ed. 917; Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 290, 42 L. Ed. 748; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 502, 45 L. Ed. 639; Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 434, 50 L. Ed. 256; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 35 L. Ed. 510; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. Ed. 505; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. Ed. 422; In re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 454, 35 L. Ed. 219; Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 516, 29 L. Ed. 994.

"The circuit court should not discharge the petitioner until the state court had finally acted upon the case, when it could be determined whether the accused, if convicted, should be put to his writ of error or the question determined on habeas corpus whether he was restrained of his liberty in violation of the constitution of the United States." Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. Ed. 303.

On application to single judge.—"The jurisdiction is more delicate, the reason against its exercise stronger, when a single judge is invoked to reverse the decision of the highest court of a state in which the constitutional rights of a prisoner could have been claimed and maybe were rightly decided, or if not rightly decided, could be reviewed and redressed by a writ of error from this court." Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 187, 44 L. Ed. 124.

16. With privilege of renewal.—Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 500, 45 L. Ed. 639. See post, "After Exhaustion of Remedies in State Courts," IV, F, 3, b, (2).

17. Rule grows out of judicial systems.—As a general rule because of the relations existing, under our system of government, between the judicial tribunals of the Union and of the several states, a federal court or a federal judge will not ordinarily interfere by habeas corpus with the regular course of procedure under with the courts of the Union, to enforce and protect every right granted or secured by the constitution of the United States, and the laws made in pursuance thereof, whenever those rights are involved in any suit or proceeding before them.[18] This duty, it is presumed, the state courts will perform.[19] Another reason for the denial of the writ in the federal courts in the first instance is, that, if the question is determined adversely to the defendants in the highest court of the state in which the decision could be had, the judgment may be re-examined by the federal supreme court upon writ of error.[20]

(c) When Writ Will Be Granted—aa. In General.—There are recognized

state authority, but will leave the applicant for the writ of habeas corpus to exhaust the remedies afforded by the state of determining whether he is illegally restrained of his liberty. Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 181, 51 L. Ed. 760.

"To adopt a different rule would unduly interfere with the exercise of the criminal jurisdiction of the several states, and with the performance by this court of its appropriate duties." Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 247, 40 L. Ed. 406.

Single judge should not discharge.—"The reason for this course is apparent. It is an exceedingly delicate jurisdiction given to the federal courts by which a person under an indictment in a state court and subject to its laws may, by the decision of a single judge of the federal court, upon a writ of habeas corpus, be taken out of the custody of the officers of the state and finally discharged therefrom, and thus a trial by the state courts of an indictment found under the laws of a state be finally prevented." Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 291, 42 L. Ed. 748, quoted in Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 186, 44 L. Ed. 124, and Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 183, 51 L. Ed. 760.

18. Duty of state court to uphold constitution.—Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637, 28 L. Ed. 542; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 195, 36 L. Ed. 934; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 98, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 248, 29 L. Ed. 868; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 503, 45 L. Ed. 639.

The state courts are as much bound as the federal courts to see that no man is punished in violation of the constitution or laws of the United States; and ordinarily an error in this particular can better be corrected by the supreme court upon a writ of error to the highest court of the state than by an interference, which is never less than unpleasant, with the procedure of the state courts before the petitioner has exhausted his remedy there. Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 402, 45 L. Ed. 249.

State can decide constitutional questions.—The state courts are competent to determine constitutional questions and are under a duty to enforce the mandates of the supreme law of the land. Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637, 28 L. Ed. 542; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 94, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 248, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 195, 36 L. Ed. 934.

"Whether the offenses described in the indictments against Eno are offenses against the state of New York and punishable under its laws, or are made by existing statutes offenses also against the United States and are exclusively cognizable by courts of the United States; and whether the same acts, upon the part of the accused, may be offenses against both the national and state governments and punishable in the judicial tribunals of each government, without infringing upon the constitutional guaranty against being twice put in jeopardy of limb for the same offense; these are questions which the state court of original jurisdiction is competent to decide in the first instance; and its obligation to render such decision as will give full effect to the supreme law of the land and protect any right secured by it to the accused is the same that rests upon the courts of the United States." New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 98, 39 L. Ed. 80.

19. Presumption that state court will render correct decision.—The federal courts are not at liberty to presume that the decision of the state court will be otherwise than as is required by the fundamental law of the land, or that the state court will disregard the settled principles of constitutional law announced by the supreme court, upon which is clearly conferred the power to decide ultimately and finally all cases arising under the constitution and laws of the United States. New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 94, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637, 28 L. Ed. 542; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U S. 499, 503, 45 L. Ed. 639.

It cannot be assumed that the state court will hesitate to enforce any rights secured by that instrument. Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 503, 45 L. Ed. 639.

20. Existence of remedy by writ of error.—Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 532, 43 L. Ed. 535; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 503, 45 L. Ed. 639. See post, "After Exhaustion of Remedies in State Courts," IV, F, 3, b, (2).

The supreme court has the ultimate power to determine constitutional questions. New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 94, 39 L. Ed. 80.

exceptions to the rule, as stated above, in which this discretion should be subordinated to special circumstances requiring immediate action.[21]

bb. In Particular Instances.—The exceptional cases, in which a federal court or judge may sometimes appropriately interfere by habeas corpus in advance of final action by the authorities of the state, are those of great urgency that require to be promptly disposed of;[22] such, for instance, as where the prisoner is in custody, by authority of a state, for an act done or omitted to be done in pursuance of a law of the United States, or of an order or process of a court of the United States, or otherwise involving the authority and operations of the general government;[23] or where such person is a citizen or subject of a foreign state and is in

21. When writ will be granted.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 254, 29 L. Ed. 868; Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 182, 51 L. Ed. 760, and cases cited to the general rule; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 96, 39 L. Ed. 80; Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 466, 44 L. Ed. 846; Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 154, 47 L. Ed. 116; Appleyard v. Massachusetts, 203 U. S. 222, 225, 51 L. Ed. 161; United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 168, 48 L. Ed. 917; Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 140, 50 L. Ed. 963; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 105, 43 L. Ed. 91; Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 516, 29 L. Ed. 994; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 194, 36 L. Ed. 934; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. Ed. 406; Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 42 L. Ed. 748; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 284, 43 L. Ed. 699; In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 181, 50 L. Ed. 984.

"In In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. Ed. 949; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 55; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 43 L. Ed. 699, and Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 44 L. Ed. 846, writs of habeas corpus were sustained, but in each of these cases the act charged against the petitioner was one for which he was amendable alone to the laws of the United States, or he was exercising some auauthority under those laws, and so they all come within the exceptions noted in Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 254, 29 L. Ed. 868." In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 182, 50 L. Ed. 984; Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 291, 42 L. Ed. 748.

In some instances, as in Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. Ed. 835, the proceeding by habeas corpus has been entertained, although a writ of error could be prosecuted because of special facts and circumstances. In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 78, 37 L. Ed. 653.

22. Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 182, 51 L. Ed. 760; Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 44 L. Ed. 846.

23. For act done or omitted under federal authority.—Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 241, 40 L. Ed. 406; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 55; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 253, 29 L. Ed. 868; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 93, 95, 39 L. Ed. 80; Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 42 L. Ed. 748; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 394, 395, 25 L. Ed. 717; In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. Ed. 949; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 43 L. Ed. 699.

Loney case.—It appeared from the record that one Loney was duly summoned to give his deposition in a contested election case pending in the house of representatives of the congress of the United States—a summons he was obliged to obey, unless prevented by sickness or unavoidable accident, under the penalty of forfeiting a named sum to the party at whose instance he was summoned, and of becoming subject to fine and imprisonment, Rev. Stat., § 116; that he appeared before a notary public in obedience to such summons and proceeded to give his deposition; and that while in the office of an attorney for the purpose of completing his testimony, he was arrested under a warrant issued by a justice of the peace and based upon the affidavit of one of the parties to the contested election case charging him with willful perjury committed in his deposition. Having been arrested under that warrant, he sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the circuit court of the United States upon the ground that he was restrained of his liberty in violation of the constitution of the United States. That court, in advance of any trial in the state court for the offense charged against Loney, adjudged that the offense was punishable only under § 5392 of the Revised Statutes and was exclusively cognizable by the courts of the United States. He was discharged, and the judgment was affirmed by the federal supreme court. It is clear from this statement that the case was one of urgency, involving in a substantial sense the authority and operations of the general government. In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 375, 33 L. Ed. 949. See New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 98, 39 L. Ed. 80; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 501, 45 L. Ed. 639; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 43 L. Ed. 699.

Custody of United States officer.—"The present case was one of urgency, in that the appellee was an officer in the revenue service of the United States whose presence at his post of duty was important to the public interests, and whose detention in prison by the state authorities might have interfered with the regular and orderly course of the business of the department to which he belonged. The district court, therefore, did not err in determining the question of constitutional law raised by the application for a writ of habeas corpus, and rendering final judgment." Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 466, 44 L. Ed. 846; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 402, 45 L. Ed. 249.

custody for an act done under the authority of his own government;[24] or to bring a person in state custody into a federal court to give testimony;[25] but not, as a rule, where the prisoner claims to be in custody without due process of law,[26] where such custody is voluntary;[27] under erroneous sentence;[28] or that a statute, under which prisoner is in custody, affects the general public interest.[29] It is often an embarrassing question to determine in a particular case whether or not circumstances require immediate action.[30] And in such cases of doubt it is certainly the better practice to put the prisoner to his remedy by writ of error

A governor of a soldiers' home providing for and feeding the inmates pursuant to an act of congress, Revised Statutes, §§ 4832 and 4835, is engaged in the performance of a federal duty, and not subject to the jurisdiction of state courts. This is one of the exceptional cases in which it is proper for a federal court to issue the writ of habeas corpus to relieve such person from the custody of a state court, which had imprisoned him for violating a state law in regard to the sale of oleomargarine. Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 284, 43 L. Ed. 699, following Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 257, 25 L. Ed. 648.

24. Where prisoner is citizen of foreign state.—When the petitioner in custody by state authority is a subject or citizen of a foreign state, and domiciled therein, for an act done or omitted under any alleged right, title, authority, privilege, protection, or exemption claimed under the commission, or order, or sanction of any foreign state, or under color thereof, the validity and effect whereof depend upon the law of nations; in such and like cases of urgency, involving the obligations of this country to, or its relations with, foreign nations, the courts of the United States have frequently interposed by writs of habeas corpus and discharged prisoners who were held in custody under state authority. New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 94, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 252, 29 L. Ed. 868; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 241, 40 L. Ed. 406; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 402, 45 L. Ed. 249; Wildenhus's Case, 120 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 565; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 501, 45 L. Ed. 639; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 55.

25. To bring prisoner in court to testify.—It may sometimes be necessary and proper for a federal court to issue the writ to bring a witness before it to testify out of the custody of a state court. Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 500, 45 L. Ed. 639.

26. Without due process of law.—"The rule is well settled in this court, while there may be a power on the part of the federal courts to issue a writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner insists that he has been deprived of his liberty without due process of law, that power will not ordinarily be exercised until after an appeal made to the state courts has been denied." Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 401, 45 L. Ed. 249; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 653.

27. Surrender of bail by surety.—"The surrender of the petitioner by his bail at his request and his consequent imprisonment furnishes in itself no ground of urgency for the interference of a federal court. The imprisonment is entirely voluntary, and while the surrender by his bondsmen may be good for the purpose of avoiding any technical objection to the issuing of the writ founded upon the fact that the petitioner was on bail, yet the fact of imprisonment under such circumstances adds nothing to the strength of his case as calling for the interposition of the federal court." Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 293, 42 L. Ed. 748.

28. Errors by state court.—An erroneous decision of a state court, out on a motion to quash an indictment, on the ground that negroes were excluded therefrom, does not justify federal interference. In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 287, 35 L. Ed. 505.

29. Affecting general business interests.—"It is undoubtedly true that the state enactment in question may in its operation affect the business of many, and in some degree, but indirectly, the rights of the public; but that consideration is not sufficient to justify such interference by the federal court as will interrupt the orderly course of proceedings in the state court. We do not think that the exercise by a federal court of its power upon habeas corpus to discharge one held in custody by the state authorities and charged with a violation of a state enactment should be materially controlled by any consideration of the extent of particular business interests that may be affected by a prosecution instituted in a state tribunal against him, or of the indirect effect of his detention in custody upon the rights of the general public." Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 504, 45 L. Ed. 639.

30. Often embarrassing question.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 250, 29 L. Ed. 868.

from this court, under § 709 of the Revised Statutes, than to award him a writ of habeas corpus.[31]

(2) After Exhaustion of Remedies in State Courts.—When the state courts have finally acted upon the case, the federal courts have still a discretion whether, under all the circumstances then existing, the accused, if convicted, shall be put to his writ of error from the highest court of the state, or whether it will proceed, by writ of habeas corpus, summarily to determine whether the petitioner is restrained of his liberty in violation of the constitution of the United States;[32] for, if the applicant felt that the decision, whether upon writ of error or upon habeas corpus, in the supreme court of the state, was in violation of his rights under the constitution or laws of the United States, he could have brought the case by writ of error directly from that court to the federal supreme court.[33] The federal courts will generally leave the petitioner to his remedy by writ of error from the federal supreme court, except in peculiar and urgent cases.[34] Of course, the discretion here referred to is a legal discretion to be controlled in its exercise by such principles as are applicable to the particular case in hand.[35]

G. Determination of Existence of Jurisdiction.—A court has the power to determine whether or not it has jurisdiction of a writ of habeas corpus.[36]

V. Grounds for Relief.

A. In General.—A summary interruption of the regular order of proceedings, by means of this writ, is not always a matter of right.[37] But the court or judge who is asked to issue such a writ need not be over critical in looking into the petition or application for very clear grounds of the exercise of this right; because, when the prisoner is brought before the court or judge, his power to make full inquiry into the cause of commitment or detention will enable him to correct any errors or defects in the petition under which the writ issued.[38]

B. As Determined by Common-Law Principles.—No law of the United

31. Writ should be denied in doubtful cases.—"For, under proceedings by writ of error, the validity of the judgment against him can be called in question, and the federal court left in a position to correct the wrong, if any, done the petitioner, and at the same time leave the state authorities in a position to deal with him thereafter within the limits of proper authority, instead of discharging him by habeas corpus proceedings, and thereby depriving the state of the opportunity of asserting further jurisdiction over his person in respect to the crime with which he is charged." In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 77, 37 L. Ed. 653.

32. After exhaustion of remedies in state court.—New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 95, 39 L. Ed. 80; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 252, 29 L. Ed. 868. See, also, Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 595, 15 L. Ed. 1028; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 182, 28 L. Ed. 390; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 105, 43 L. Ed. 91; In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 181, 50 L. Ed. 984; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 192, 194, 36 L. Ed. 934; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 501, 45 L. Ed. 639; Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 47 L. Ed. 116; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. Ed. 303; Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 201, 51 L. Ed. 148; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 77, 37 L. Ed. 653; Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 516, 92 L. Ed. 994.

"After the final disposition of the case by the highest court of the state, the circuit court, in its discretion, may put the party who has been denied a right, privilege or immunity claimed under the constitution or laws of the United States to his writ of error from this court, rather than interfere by writ of habeas corpus." In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 290, 35 L. Ed. 505.

33. Reason for rule.—Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 182, 51 L. Ed. 760.

34. Urgent cases.—Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 290, 42 L. Ed. 748; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 242, 40 L. Ed. 406; United States v. Lewis, 200 U. S. 1, 50 L. Ed. 343; Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 183, 51 L. Ed. 760.

35. Controlled by circumstances of particular case.—New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 95, 39 L. Ed. 80. See ante, "Basis of Rule," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (b), bb; "Rule Stated," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (b), aa.

36. Determination of existence of jurisdiction.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 202, 7 L. Ed. 650; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 757, 32 L. Ed. 274.

37. Grounds for relief.—United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 168, 48 L. Ed. 917. But see Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586o, 10 L. Ed. 579. See ante, "Discretion to Issue Writ," IV, F, 3, b.

38. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500.

States prescribes the cases in which this great writ shall be issued. The term is used in the constitution and the judiciary act as one well understood. The general reference there made, without any precise definition of that term, leaves the courts to proceed to issue the writ in such instances as were recognized as grounds for its issuance at common law.[39]

C. As Determined by Materiality.—A petition for habeas corpus ought not to be entertained, unless the court is satisfied that the petitioner can make out at least a prima facie case.[40]

D. As Determined by Conduct of Prosecution—1. DELAY OF TRIAL.—Mere delay in bringing a defendant on for trial does not always constitute sufficient ground for his release on habeas corpus,[41] but a failure of the grand jury to indict at the first subsequent term of court does, under the act of March 3, 1863.[42]

2. ENTRANCE OF NOLLE PROSEQUI.—A prisoner is entitled to his freedom on dismissal of the indictment against him on the entrance of a nolle prosequi.[43]

3. DENIAL OF NEW TRIAL.—The refusal to consider and sustain a motion to set aside the verdict, stay the judgment and grant a new trial does not affect the court's jurisdiction, and, therefore, cannot be reviewed upon habeas corpus.[44]

4. DENIAL OF PROCESS TO COMPEL ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES.—The denial of compulsory process to compel attendance of witnesses in favor of the prisoner, is not ground for discharge.[45]

E. As Determined by Validity of Proceedings.—Mere error in the judgment or proceedings, under and by virtue of which a party is imprisoned, constitutes no ground for the issuance of the writ,[46] unless, perhaps, where the court

39. As determined by common law principles.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650.

"The general principles upon which the writ of habeas corpus is issued in England were well settled by usage and statutes long before the period of our national independence, and must have been in the mind of congress when the power to issue the writ was given to the courts and judges of the United States." Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 21, 23 L. Ed. 787. See ante, "Definition, Nature and Object," I.

Under act of 31 Car. II.—The habeas corpus act of 31 Car. II, prescribing the cases in which the writ may issue, merely enforces the then existing common-law grounds. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 202, 7 L. Ed. 650.

40. As determined by materiality.—United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 170, 48 L. Ed. 917; Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 42 L. Ed. 407; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 141, 46 L. Ed. 120; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 261, 49 L. Ed. 1040.

41. Delay of trial.—A mere omission to move the case for trial is all that is set up, coupled with the assertion that defendant was eager and anxious for trial, but showing no action whatever on his part which might render such anxiety and eagerness known to the state authorities. Held, not sufficient ground for discharge on habeas corpus. Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 293, 42 L. Ed. 748. See, also, United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 168, 48 L. Ed. 917.

42. Failure to indict.—A person arrested after the passage of the act of March 3d, 1863, "relating to habeas corpus and regulating judicial proceedings in certain cases," and under the authority of the said act, was entitled to his discharge if not indicted or presented by the grand jury convened at the first subsequent term of the circuit or district court of the United States for the district. The omission to furnish a list of the persons arrested, to the judges of the circuit or district court as provided in the said act, did not impair the right of such person, if not indicted or presented, to his discharge. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 500.

43. Entrance of nolle prosequi.—Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 13, 30 L. Ed. 849. See the title DISMISSAL, DISCONTINUANCE AND NONSUIT, vol. 5, p. 393.

44. Denial of new trial.—In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 290, 35 L. Ed. 505; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 46 L. Ed. 120. See the title NEW TRIALS.

45. Denial of process to compel attendance of witnesses.—Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 30 L. Ed. 824. See, generally, the title WITNESSES.

46. As determined by validity of proceedings.—Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 304, 32 L. Ed. 405; In re Wight, 134 U. S. 136, 33 L. Ed. 865; In re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536, 546, 45 L. Ed. 657; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 28 L. Ed. 1005; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 421, 29 L. Ed. 89; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118; In has cognizance by writ of error or appeal to review the judgment. In such a case, if the error be apparent and the imprisonment unjust, the appellate court may, perhaps, in its discretion, give immediate relief on habeas corpus, and thus save the party the delay and expense of a writ of error.[47] No distinction is made between state and federal courts in this regard.[48]

F. As Determined by Existence of Other Remedies.—The writ will be refused where the prisoner can be otherwise discharged.[49] Ordinarily, the writ will not lie where there is a remedy by writ of error or appeal; but in rare and re Schneider (No. 2), 148 U. S. 162, 166, 37 L. Ed. 406; Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 129, 50 L. Ed. 689; In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 552, 41 L. Ed. 1110; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 41 L. Ed. 1085; Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 47 L. Ed. 116; In re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 97, 40 L. Ed. 88; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 46 L. Ed. 120; In re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 167, 37 L. Ed. 689; Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. Ed. 154; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 297, 35 L. Ed. 510; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 756, 757, 32 L. Ed. 274; In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 600, 39 L. Ed. 1092; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 648, 37 L. Ed. 1207; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. Ed. 216; Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. Ed. 1117; Ex parte Carll, 106 U. S. 521, 522, 27 L. Ed. 288; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 62, 63, 38 L. Ed. 631; Ornelas v. Ruiz, 161 U. S. 502, 508, 40 L. Ed. 787; Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 46 L. Ed. 534; Wright v. Henkel, 190 U. S. 40, 57, 47 L. Ed. 948; Bradford v. Southern R. Co., 195 U. S. 243, 250, 49 L. Ed. 178; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 75, 37 L. Ed. 653; In re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 400, 37 L. Ed. 1120; Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 23, 25 L. Ed. 538; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; Matter of Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 105, 51 L. Ed. 105; Valentina v. Mercer, 201 U. S. 131, 138, 50 L. Ed. 693; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. Ed. 303; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 197, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. Ed. 274; Savin, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 267, 280, 33 L. Ed. 150; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 43, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 205, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. Ed. 868; In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 30 L. Ed. 658; Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 468, 477, 478, 34 L. Ed. 461; Crossley v. California, 168 U. S. 640, 641, 42 L. Ed. 610; Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 L. Ed. 963; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 39 L. Ed. 401; Ex parte Mirzan, 119 U. S. 584, 30 L. Ed. 513; In re Huntington, 137 U. S. 63, 34 L. Ed. 567; In re Lancaster, 137 U. S. 393, 34 L. Ed. 713; Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 552, 48 L. Ed. 1110; In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 446, 34 L. Ed. 219; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 286, 35 L. Ed. 505; In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 579, 35 L. Ed. 513; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 849; Chapman v. United States, 164 U. S. 436, 448, 41 L. Ed. 504; Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 82, 36 L. Ed. 896; Johnson v. United States, 3 McLean, 89; Ex parte Aernam, 3 Blatchford, 160; Barry v. Mercein, 5 How. 103, 12 L. Ed. 70; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Davis v. Beason, 133 U. S. 333, 341, 33 L. Ed. 637; Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 375, 27 L. Ed. 232; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 104, 43 L. Ed. 91; Maxwell v. Stewart, 21 Wall. 71, 22 L. Ed. 564; Humphries v. District of Columbia, 174 U. S. 190, 195, 43 L. Ed. 944; Anderson v. Treat, 172 U. S. 24, 29, 43 L. Ed. 351; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 164, 43 L. Ed. 399.

The uncontradicted facts in this case are that the unfortunate defendant has been convicted of the crime of murder and sentenced to imprisonment for life, although he did not hear a word of the evidence that was given upon his trial, because of his almost total deafness, his inability to hear being such that it required a person to speak through his ear trumpet, close to his ear, in order that such person should be heard by him. If there were any irregularities in the trial of the appellant, because of the failure of the state court to see to it that the testimony in the case was repeated to him through the ear trumpet which he had with him, it was at most an error which did not take away from the court its jurisdiction over the subject matter and over the person of the accused. It is to be regretted that the testimony was not read or repeated to him. But that omission did not affect the jurisdiction of the trial court and does not constitute ground for habeas corpus. Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 128, 129, 130, 50 L. Ed. 689.

Erroneous instructions.—Crossley v. California, 168 U. S. 640, 642, 42 L. Ed. 610.

47. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717.

48. No distinction between state and federal courts.—Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. Ed. 303.

49. As determined by the existence of other remedies.—Ex parte Alabama (Note), 104 U. S. 618, 26 L. Ed. 866; In re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 100, 40 L. Ed. 88; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 548, 50 L. Ed. 303; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 215, 39 L. Ed. 401; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. Ed. 868; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. Ed. 80; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 653; In re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 180, 37 L. Ed. 689; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 648, 37 L. Ed. 1207.

exceptional cases it may be issued although such remedy exists.[50] And when no writ of error or appeal will lie, though the writ of habeas corpus cannot be used to perform the office of a writ of error or appeal if a petition is imprisoned under a judgment of the circuit court which had no jurisdiction of the person or of the subject matter, or authority to render the judgment complained of, then relief may be accorded.[51]

G. As Determined by Nature of Custody or Restraint—1. In General.—There is no very satisfactory definition to be found in the adjudged cases of the character of the restraint or imprisonment suffered by a party applying for the writ of habeas corpus which will entitle him thereto. This can hardly be expected from the variety of restraints against which it is used to give relief.[52] Obviously, the extent and character of the restraint which justifies the writ must vary according to the nature of the control which is asserted over the party in whose behalf the writ is prayed.[53]

2. Actual Restraint.—There must be actual confinement, or the present means of enforcing it, in order to justify the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus and granting a release thereon.[54] A person released on bail is not in actual custody.[54a]

3. Moral Restraint.—Something more than moral restraint, which does not concern the prisoner's convenience and exercise of free will, is necessary to make a case for habeas corpus.[55]

4. Voluntary Custody.—If the prisoner is in custody by his own voluntary act, the writ will not issue for his release.[56]

50. Where there is remedy by writ of error.—In re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 100, 40 L. Ed. 88, and cases cited above.

51. Where writ of error does not lie.—In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 653; In re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. Ed. 689; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 648, 37 L. Ed. 1207; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283.

If a writ of error does not lie to the federal supreme court, and the supreme court of the District of Columbia was absolutely without jurisdiction, the petitioner may then seek his remedy through application for a writ of habeas corpus. Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 550, 50 L. Ed. 303; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 39 L. Ed. 401. See ante, "Basis of Rule," IV, F, 3, b, (1), (b), bb.

52. Nature of custody.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277.

53. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277.

54. Actual restraint.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 572, 29 L. Ed. 277; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 613, 34 L. Ed. 500; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; United States v. Johns, 4 Dall. 412, 1 L. Ed. 888; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704, 9 L. Ed. 280.

The different acts of congress in regard to habeas corpus are to be construed as referring to actual restraint of personal liberty. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 574, 29 L. Ed. 277.

"The class of cases in which a sheriff or other officer, with a writ in his hands for the arrest of a person whom he is required to take into custody, to whom the person to be arrested submits without force being applied, comes under this definition. The officer has the authority to arrest and the power to enforce it. If the party named in the writ resists or attempts to resist, the officer can summon bystanders to his assistance, and may himself use personal violence. Here the force is imminent and the party is in presence of it. It is physical power which controls him, though not called into demonstrative action." Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 572, 29 L. Ed. 277.

The secretary of the navy gave the following order to a medical officer under charges for conduct as surgeon general after he had ceased to be in office: "You are placed under arrest and you will confine yourself to the limits of the city of Washington." Held, that there was not such actual restraint of liberty shown as to justify the use of the writ of habeas corpus. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 29 L. Ed. 277.

54a. Release on bail.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 573, 29 L. Ed. 277.

55. Moral restraint.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277. See ante, "Actual Restraint," V, G, 2.

56. Voluntary restraint.—"In McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 35 L. Ed. 971, McElvaine had been sentenced to death, and the judgment was reversed and a new trial granted. He was again convicted and sentenced, and the judgment affirmed on appeal. 125 N. Y. 596. Mc-

5. Illegal Restraint or Custody—a. In General.—The writ is usually granted only in cases of illegal imprisonment or wrongful detention of one alleging himself to be unlawfully restrained of his liberty.[57]

b. Without Probable Cause.—A prisoner, who has been committed without there being a sufficient cause for his commitment, may be discharged.[58]

c. In Violation of Constitution—(1) In General.—Where the prisoner has been denied a constitutional right, or an unconstitutional punishment has been inflicted upon him, he may be released on habeas corpus.[59] The absolute right to a discharge from custody in violation of the constitution is not to be confused with the right to insist upon a federal court's acting where it possesses a discretion to grant or refuse the writ.[60]

(2) Denial of Due Process of Law.—A person convicted without due process of law, may be discharged on habeas corpus.[61] But the denial of due process of Elvaine presented his petition for habeas corpus to the circuit court, which was denied, and the case brought to this court. The order was affirmed, and we said, among other things, that 'so far as the confinement had taken place under the first sentence and warrant, that resulted from the voluntary act of the petitioner in prosecuting an appeal.'" Murphy v. Massachusetts, 177 U. S. 155, 163, 44 L. Ed. 711.

Surrender of principal by bail.—The surrender of a prisoner by his bail at his request places him in voluntary custody and the writ will not be issued for his discharge. Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 293, 42 L. Ed. 748.

57. Illegal restraint.—New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 437, 51 L. Ed. 254; Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 404, 25 L. Ed. 715; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 737, 24 L. Ed. 877; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 661, 37 L. Ed. 599.

Opressive and unjust.—In re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. Ed. 519; Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 136, 48 L. Ed. 121.

The right of a person to a writ of habeas corpus depends upon the illegality of his detention, not upon original caption. Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 391, 41 L. Ed. 1045. See post, "As Determined by Original Caption," V, H.

58. Without probable cause.—In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 189, 12 L. Ed. 104. See In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 126, 14 L. Ed. 345; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490.

59. In violation of constitution.—Nielson, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118; In re Mills, 135 U. S. 263, 271, 34 L. Ed. 107; Ex parte Mirzan, 119 U. S. 584, 585, 30 L. Ed. 513; In re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 376, 33 L. Ed. 949; Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 32 L. Ed. 223; Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 433, 50 L. Ed. 256; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 41, 34 L. Ed. 55; Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. Ed. 690. See Pearce v. Texas, 155 U. S. 311, 39 L. Ed. 164; In re Cross, 146 U. S. 271, 278, 36 L. Ed. 969; Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 127, 42 L. Ed. 407; Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 546, 48 L. Ed. 1110; Ex parte Royall, 112 U. S. 181, 28 L. Ed. 690; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. Ed. 868; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 712, 32 L. Ed. 283; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 379, 25 L. Ed. 717; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637, 28 L. Ed. 542.

If the detention in a penitentiary is in violation of the laws of the United States, the prisoner is entitled to be discharged from the custody of the warden of that institution. In re Mills, 135 U. S. 263, 269, 34 L. Ed. 107; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 248, 29 L. Ed. 868.

Under election laws.—The question of the constitutionality of §§ 5515 and 5522, Rev. Stat., providing punishment for crimes committed at elections of members of congress, under § 2016 et seq. Rev. Stat., furnishes good ground for the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus to inquire into the detention of the petitioner under such laws. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. Ed. 717.

Under ex post facto law.—The writ will issue where a person is in custody under a law, void because ex post facto. Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 174, 33 L. Ed. 835, distinguished in Holden v. Minnesota, 137 U. S. 483, 34 L. Ed. 734. See In re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. Ed. 519. And see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 524.

Without representation by counsel.—Anderson v. Treat, 172 U. S. 24, 43 L. Ed. 351. See the titles CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43; TRIAL.

Denial of equal protection of law.—See the title CIVIL RIGHTS, vol. 3, p. 831.

60. See ante, "Discretion to Issue Writ," IV, F, 3, b.

61. Denial of due process of law.—In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 653; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 299, 40 L. Ed. 432; Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 50 L. Ed. 256; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 106, 43 L. Ed. 91; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 658, 39 L. Ed. 845; Carfer v. Caldwell, 200 U. S. 293, 50 L. Ed. 488; Lambert v. Barrett, 159 U. S.

law must not only amount to mere error but be such as to deprive the court of jurisdiction.[62]

(3) Denial of Jury Trial.—A person convicted before a judge without a jury, where he has waived such mode of trial, cannot be released on habeas corpus;[63] nor can a person convicted by a jury composed in part of aliens,[64] or where the jury has not been poled, if it is clear that the verdict received the assent of all the jurors.[65]

(4) Denial of Equal Protection of Law.—If the laws of a state were so administered by the state court as to discriminate against the prisoner because of his race, the remedy for the wrong done to him is not by a writ of habeas corpus from a court of the United States.[66]

(5) Denial of Appeal.—A denial by a state of the right of appellate review constitutes no violation of the constitution of the United States, and the writ of habeas corpus will not issue on that account.[67]

(6) Compelling Accused to Testify against Himself.—The fact that the petitioner was compelled to be a witness against himself, contrary to the fifth amendment to the constitution, in that he was compelled to stand up and walk before the jury, and during a recess, the jury was stationed so as to observe his size and walk, does not go to the jurisdiction of the court so as to be available upon a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.[68]

(7) Infliction of Cruel and Unusual Punishment.—A sentence to death by electricity is not cruel and unusual and therefore void, and the condemned cannot be released.[69]

(8) Constitutional Defenses—(a) In General.—A valid defense to the charge, which grows out of a provision in the constitution of the United States, is no

660, 663, 40 L. Ed. 296; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 46 L. Ed. 120.

62. In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. Ed. 505; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 35 L. Ed. 510.

A prisoner who is too deaf to hear the testimony at the trial, is not deprived of due process of law by a conviction at such trial. Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 129, 50 L. Ed. 689. See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499.

63. Denial of jury trial.—The supreme court of the District of Columbia has jurisdiction and authority to determine the validity of the act which authorizes the waiver of a jury and to dispose of the question as to whether the record of a conviction before a judge without a jury, where the prisoner waived trial by jury according to statute, was legitimate proof of a first offense, and this being so, the federal supreme court cannot review the action of that court and the court of appeals in this particular on habeas corpus. In re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 99, 40 L. Ed. 88; Carter v. McClaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 388, 46 L. Ed. 236; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 485, 41 L. Ed. 1085; Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 32 L. Ed. 223.

64. It is contended that petitioner was denied due process of law and the equal protection of the laws in that one of the jurors by whom he was tried was an alien. The court said: "We cannot hold, on this petition that petitioner has been denied due process of law or that protection of the laws accorded to all others similarly situated." Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 299, 303, 40 L. Ed. 432.

65. "If a trial without a jury, when a jury is a matter of right and no waiver appears of record, is not fatal to the judgment, a fortiori the minor matter of failing to poll the jury when it is clear that the verdict has received the assent of all the jurors, cannot be adjudged a nullity, but must be regarded as simply an error, to be corrected solely by direct proceedings in review." Humphries v. District of Columbia, 174 U. S. 190, 195, 43 L. Ed. 944. See the title JURY.

66. Denial of equal protection of law.—In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 298, 35 L. Ed. 510.

67. Denial of appeal.—Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 299, 40 L. Ed. 432.

"The refusal of the courts of New Jersey to grant the accused a writ of error or to stay the execution of the sentence passed upon him constituted no reason for interference in his behalf by a writ of habeas corpus issued by a court of the United States." Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 658, 39 L. Ed. 845; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 297, 40 L. Ed. 432; McKane v. Durston, 153 U. S. 684, 38 L. Ed. 867. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 375.

68. Compelling accused to testify against himself.—Matter of Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 105, 51 L. Ed. 104; Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 L. Ed. 689. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 508.

69. Cruel and unusual punishment.—In re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. Ed. 519.

ground for a discharge. Whether such defense is sufficient or not, is for the trial court to determine. If, in this determination, errors are committed, they can only be corrected in an appropriate form of proceeding for that purpose.[70]

(b) Former Jeopardy.—Former jeopardy is a defense and should be set up at the trial, and is not usually ground for discharge on habeas corpus.[71] But, it has been intimated, that, where such a case appears on the record, the party is entitled to be discharged from imprisonment.[72]

H. As Determined by Original Caption—1. ORIGINAL ARREST.—If sufficient ground for his detention by the government is shown, the petitioner is not to be discharged for defects in the original arrest or commitment.[73] He is not entitled to discharge merely because the person executing the warrant was not authorized so to do.[74]

2. ON SURRENDER BY BAIL.—The surrender of a prisoner by his bail furnishes no ground for the issuance of the writ.[75]

I. As Determined by Duration of Custody.—The restraint must be of such duration that the court can act before its termination. On an application for a writ of habeas corpus, if it appears that before a return to the writ can be made, or other action taken, the restraint of which the petitioner complained will terminate, the application therefor will be denied.[76]

J. As Determined by Nature of Authority—1. WITHOUT JURISDICTION.—The writ of habeas corpus is the appropriate remedy where a person is in custody under an order or judgment of any court,[77] or of any legislative or executive 70. Constitutional defenses.—Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 180, 28 L. Ed. 690.

71. Former jeopardy.—Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 330, 28 L. Ed. 1005; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 41 L. Ed. 1085; Carter v. McClaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 390, 46 L. Ed. 236; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 669, 41 L. Ed. 300; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 243, 40 L. Ed. 406; Ex parte Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 40 L. Ed. 88.

And the action of a trial court in overruling a plea of former jeopardy, cannot be reviewed on this writ. Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 28 L. Ed. 1005; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 484, 41 L. Ed. 1085.

72. Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 184, 33 L. Ed. 118; In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 30 L. Ed. 658.

"In the case of Snow, we laid emphasis on the fact that the double conviction for the same offense appeared on the face of the judgment; but if it appears in the indictment, or anywhere else in the record (of which the judgment is only a part), it is sufficient." Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 183, 33 L. Ed. 118; See the title AUTREFOIS, ACQUIT AND CONVICT, vol. 2, p. 762.

73. As determined by original caption.—Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. Ed. 1146; Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 391, 395, 41 L. Ed. 1045.

74. It is no ground for discharge that the arrest under a treaty provision between the United States and France was made by a state officer. Dallemagne v. Moisan, 197 U. S. 169, 177, 49 L. Ed. 709.

75. On surrender by bail.—Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 293, 42 L. Ed. 748; Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704, 709, 9 L. Ed. 280.

76. As determined by duration of custody.—Ex parte Baez, 177 U. S. 378, 44 L. Ed. 813; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. Ed. 293; New Orleans Flour Inspectors v. Glover, 160 U. S. 170, 40 L. Ed. 382; Kimball v. Kimball, 174 U. S. 158, 50 L. Ed. 932; Jones v. Montague, 194 U. S. 147, 48 L. Ed. 913; Cheong Ah Moy v. United States, 113 U. S. 216, 28 L. Ed. 983.

In this case, if the writ of habeas corpus had been issued April 9, the next courtday after the petition for the writ was presented to the federal supreme court, the imprisonment of petitioner would have expired six days after the issue of the writ, and fourteen days before the person having him in custody would be required to make his return, and, before the case could be heard upon the writ and return, the prisoner would no longer be in custody. Held, it is well settled that the federal supreme court will not proceed to adjudication where there is no subject matter on which the judgment of the court can operate. And although this application has not as yet reached that stage, still as it is obvious that before a return to the writ can be made, or any other action can be taken, the restraint of which petitioner complains would have terminated, we are constrained to decline to grant leave to file the petition. Ex parte Baez, 177 U. S. 378, 389, 390, 44 L. Ed. 813.

The federal supreme court will not spend its time in deciding a moot case. In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 179, 50 L. Ed. 984.

77. Want of jurisdiction.—Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 304, 32 L. Ed. 405; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed.

officer,[78] not having jurisdiction of both the subject matter and the person in custody.[79]

2. Acquisition of Jurisdiction by Unlawful Means.—When a criminal is brought or is in fact within the jurisdiction and custody of a state, charged with a crime against its laws, he cannot, so far as the constitution and laws of the United States are concerned, have the particular methods employed to bring him into the state inquired into on a writ of habeas corpus,[80] although he may have been abducted and brought into the state by persons acting without authority of law,[81] or the same result may have been accompanied under the forms of law.[82] A circuit court of the United States when asked, upon habeas corpus, to discharge a person held in actual custody by a state for trial in one of its courts under an indictment charging a crime against its laws, cannot properly take into account the methods whereby the state obtained such custody.[83]

3. Private Authority.—Originally the common-law writ was granted solely in cases of arrest and forcible imprisonment under color or claim of warrant of law. As late as 2 James II, the court expressly denied its allowance in a case of detention or restraint by a private person, and the Habeas Corpus Act of Charles II, which is proclaimed as the Magna Charta of British liberty, has relation only to imprisonment on criminal charges.[84] Almost all of the cases in which the writ of habeas corpus has been granted, are those in which life or liberty was invaded by persons assuming to act under the authority of the government.[85]

4. Warrant or Commitment.—The writ of habeas corpus may issue to re-

872; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 21, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. Ed. 861; Ex part Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 27 L. Ed. 232; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 485, 31 L. Ed. 216; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 221, 31 L. Ed. 402; Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. 328, 345, 17 L. Ed. 871; Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 713, 718, 28 L. Ed. 1117; McClaughry v. Deming, 186 U. S. 49, 69, 46 L. Ed. 1049; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. Ed. 845; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 76, 37 L. Ed. 653; In re Mills, 135 U. S. 263, 270, 34 L. Ed. 107; In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 584, 35 L. Ed. 513; Geyger v. Stoy, 1 Dall. 135, 1 L. Ed. 70; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 757, 32 L. Ed. 274; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 290, 35 L. Ed. 505; In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 35 L. Ed. 510; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 116, 35 L. Ed. 635; In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 30 L. Ed. 658.

78. United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 168, 48 L. Ed. 917.

79. McClaughry v. Deming, 186 U. S. 49, 46 L. Ed. 1049; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 304, 32 L. Ed. 405; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 648, 37 L. Ed. 1207. See post, "For Want of General Jurisdiction," V, J, 6, d, (2); "For Want of Jurisdiction to Render Particular Judgment or Order," V, J, 6, d, (3); "On Unconstitutional Statute," V, J, 6, d, (4); "Courts-Martial," V, J, 7, c; "Jurisdiction," IX, D, 8, b.

80. Acquisition of jurisdiction by unlawful means.—Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 203, 214, 51 L. Ed. 148; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 706, 712, 32 L. Ed. 283; Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 436, 437, 30 L. Ed. 421; Moyer v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 221, 51 L. Ed. 160; Appleyard v. Massachusetts, 203 U. S. 222, 232, 51 L. Ed. 161.

The fact that a person was brought within the jurisdiction of the court by means of abduction, fraud, or mistake or other improper means, will not authorize his discharge on habeas corpus. Hyatt v. Corkran, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. Ed. 657.

And if the act complained of was done against the law of the foreign state, it was for that state to vindicate its own law. Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 708, 32 L. Ed. 283.

81. Thus a person indicted for a crime in one state, forcibly abducted from another state and brought to the state where he was indicted by parties acting without warrant or authority of law, is not entitled under the constitution or laws of the United States to release from detention under the indictment by reason of such forcible and unlawful abduction, by the writ of habeas corpus. Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 706, 32 L. Ed. 283.

82. Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 214, 51 L. Ed. 148.

83. Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 212, 215, 51 L. Ed. 148; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 192, 36 L. Ed. 934. See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 669.

84. Private authority.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 602, 34 L. Ed. 500; New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 438, 51 L. Ed. 254.

85. United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 218, 27 L. Ed. 171; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 204, 215, 42 L. Ed. 137; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

view a commitment under a warrant of a judicial officer;[86] but, to justify a discharge, it must appear upon the face of the record that the order of commitment was void.[87] A prisoner in custody of a state will not be discharged by a writ of habeas corpus from a federal court, where the mittimus under which he is held was issued by a justice of the peace under a state statute, upon the ground that it does not conform to that statute.[88]

5. INDICTMENT OF GRAND JURY—a. In General.—If the court has jurisdiction of the person and of the offense and the indictment is not void upon its face, it is not open to collateral attack by habeas corpus.[89]

b. Form and Sufficiency.—Any defect of form in the indictment is at most an error, which cannot be reviewed on habeas corpus;[90] and, if an indictment charges enough to show the general character of the crime, and that it is within the jurisdiction of the court to try and to punish for the offense sought to be set forth in the indictment, although the court erroneously held the indictment sufficient to charge the offense, the decision was within its jurisdiction, and cannot be re-examined on habeas corpus.[91] The want of conformity of an indictment to the provisions of a statute cannot be looked into on a writ of habeas corpus.[92] Every question concerning the sufficiency and validity of an indictment and the evidence necessary to support it, is not matter of jurisdiction, authorizing an interference, if error takes place, by a writ of habeas corpus for its correction.[93]

86. Warrant or commitment.—Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 114, 2 L. Ed. 554.

A commitment under a warrant of a justice of the peace, not supported by oath, is ground for discharge. Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 449, 2 L. Ed. 495.

In case above, there was no judgment of a court of general jurisdiction. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 208, 7 L. Ed. 650.

87. Ex parte Karstendick, 93 U. S. 396, 402, 23 L. Ed. 889. See Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704, 709, 9 L. Ed. 280; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 548, 50 L. Ed. 303.

Where the warrant is illegal, because it does not show sufficient cause for detention, the prisoner will be discharged. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 208, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495.

88. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. Ed. 406.

89. Indictment of grand jury.—United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 60, 38 L. Ed. 631; In re Lancaster, 137 U. S. 393, 34 L. Ed. 713; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 550, 50 L. Ed. 303; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 203, 7 L. Ed. 650; Southworth v. United States, 151 U. S. 179, 185, 38 L. Ed. 119; Matter of Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 103, 51 L. Ed. 105. See the title INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS. See post, "Without Indictment," V, J, 6, d, (5).

90. Form and sufficiency.—Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 403, 25 L. Ed. 715.

The fact that the indictment was not indorsed "a true bill" does not furnish ground for the writ of habeas corpus. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 243, 40 L. Ed. 406.

91. Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 552, 48 L. Ed. 1110; Munsey v. Clough, 196 U. S. 364, 373, 49 L. Ed. 515; Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. Ed. 250; Pearce v. Texas, 155 U. S. 311, 313, 39 L. Ed. 164; Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 135, 48 L. Ed. 121; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. Ed. 274; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 41 L. Ed. 1085; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. Ed. 816; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. Ed. 845; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 296, 40 L. Ed. 432; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U S. 231, 243, 40 L. Ed. 406.

"A trial court possessing general jurisdiction of the class of offenses within which is embraced the crime sought to be set forth in the indictment is possessed of authority to determine the sufficiency of an indictment, and * * * in adjudging it to be valid and sufficient, acts within its jurisdiction, and a conviction and judgment thereunder cannot be questioned on habeas corpus, because of a lack of certainty or other defect in the statement in the indictment of the facts averred to constitute a crime." In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 485, 41 L. Ed. 1085; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 756, 758, 32 L. Ed. 274.

92. Nonconformity to statute.—Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. Ed. 274; In re Delgado, 140 U. S. 586, 588, 35 L. Ed. 578; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 203, 7 L. Ed. 650.

93. Mere error does not deprive of jurisdiction.—In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 756,

c. Sufficiency of Charge.—An insufficiency in the charge of the offense in an indictment does not furnish ground for habeas corpus.[94]

d. Misjoinder of Offenses.—Habeas corpus is the proper remedy for the petitioner, if the crime of adultery with which he was charged is included in the crime of unlawful cohabitation for which he was convicted and punished.[95]

e. Constitution of Grand Jury.—The legality or illegality of the grand jury which returned the indictment goes only to the regularity of the proceedings had and not to the jurisdiction of the court, and cannot be taken advantage of on habeas corpus.[96]

f. Finding of Indictment.—The fact that the indictment was found by the grand jury by mistake and misconception, is a matter of proper inquiry in the courts of the state, but affords no ground for interposition by the courts of the United States by writ of habeas corpus.[97]

g. For Act Not Criminal.—See elsewhere in this title.[98]

h. Evidence before Grand Jury.—Neither the quality nor quantity of the evidence before the grand jury will furnish ground for the writ,[99] unless there is an entire lack of evidence to support the accusation.[1] An indictment constitutes prima facie evidence of probable cause, but it is not conclusive.[2]

i. Amendment of Indictment.—A prisoner who has been tried, convicted and

32 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 203, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 654, 28 L. Ed. 274.

94. Sufficiency of charge.—Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 135, 48 L. Ed. 121; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. Ed. 816; Davis v. Texas, 139 U. S. 651, 653, 35 L. Ed. 300; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. Ed. 845; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 206, 7 L. Ed. 650; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 59, 38 L. Ed. 631.

Whether an indictment sufficiently charges the crime of murder in the first degree is for the trial court to determine. Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. Ed. 816; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 656, 39 L. Ed. 845.

95. Misjoinder of offenses.—Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 185, 33 L. Ed. 118.

96. Constitution of grand jury.—Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 30 L. Ed. 824; In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. Ed. 513.

Defect in number of grand jurors.—"A deficiency in the number of grand jurors prescribed by law, there being present and acting a greater number than that requisite for the finding of an indictment, is not such a defect as, though unnoticed by the prisoner until after trial and sentence, vitiates the entire proceedings and compels his discharge on habeas corpus." In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 582, 35 L. Ed. 513. See the title GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570.

Panel not of same race as accused.—The fact that the grand jury was constituted of persons of a different race from the accused is not ground for issuance of the writ. Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 276, 39 L. Ed. 422; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 285, 35 L. Ed. 505. See the title CIVIL RIGHTS, vol. 3, p. 831.

Alien allowed to serve.—The fact that a law of the territory allowed an alien who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States to sit on a grand jury, and that an alien did in fact sit on the jury that found the indictment against this petitioner, did not deprive the court of its jurisdiction for his trial under the indictment. The objection, if it be one, goes only to the regularity of the proceedings, not to the jurisdiction of the court and could not be availed of on habeas corpus. Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 784, 30 L. Ed. 824. See the title CIVIL RIGHTS, vol. 3, p. 831.

97. Finding of indictment.—Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 243, 40 L. Ed. 406; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. Ed. 505; In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. Ed. 513.

98. For act not criminal.—See post, "As Determined by Nature of Offense," V, M.

99. Evidence before grand jury.—Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 169, 43 L. Ed. 399.

1. Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 84, 50 L. Ed. 90; Dimond v. Shine, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99.

2. Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 31, 51 L. Ed. 689; Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 48 L. Ed. 882; Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. Ed. 919; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. Ed. 90; Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 46 L. Ed. 177.

The production of the indictment makes at least a prima facie case against the accused, and if evidence was received on his behalf it was for the lower court to say whether upon the whole testimony there was proof of probable cause. In re Cortes, 136 U. S. 330, 34 L. Ed. 464; Bryant v. United States, 167 U. S. 104, 42 L. Ed. 94; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 84, 50 L. Ed. 90; Dimond v. Shine, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99.

sentenced to imprisonment by a circuit court of the United States, under an indictment amended by the district attorney, by leave of the court, after it had been returned by the grand jury, is entitled to his discharge under a writ of habeas corpus issued by the federal supreme court on the ground that the proceeding was void.[3]

j. When No Objection Made in Trial Court.—If it be a doubtful question, whether the defendant can, after trial and verdict, take advantage of a defect in the indictment by direct challenge, it would clearly seem that it is one not going to the matter of jurisdiction, and one which cannot be taken advantage of by a collateral attack by habeas corpus.[4]

6. Judgment or Order of Court—a. In General.—The general rule is, that when the court has jurisdiction by law of the offense charged, and of the party who is so charged, its judgments, sentences, orders or decrees are not nullities and subject to collateral attack by habeas corpus.[5] The judgment of a court is evidence of its own legality,[6] and a person in custody thereunder cannot be released on habeas corpus,[7] unless such judgment is void for want of jurisdiction or other cause.[8] But personal liberty is of so great moment in the eye of the law that the judgment of an inferior court is not deemed so conclusive as to prevent a review of the question of the court's authority to try and imprison the party on habeas corpus by a superior court or judge having authority to award the writ.[9]

b. At Common Law.—Before the Habeas Corpus Act was passed, the privilege of the writ was denied to persons imprisoned upon conviction for a crime, or in

3. Amendment of indictment.—Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 13, 30 L. Ed. 849; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 486, 31 L. Ed. 216.

Where there has been a charge in the body of an indictment for a capital or otherwise infamous crime without a resubmission to the grand jury, the prisoner is entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus. Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 12, 30 L. Ed. 849.

4. When no objection made in trial court.—In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 582, 585, 35 L. Ed. 513; In re Lancaster, 137 U. S. 393, 395, 34 L. Ed. 713; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 849; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650.

5. Judgment or order of court.—Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 330, 28 L. Ed. 1005; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 485, 41 L. Ed. 1085; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 182, 33 L. Ed. 118; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 43 L. Ed. 699.

6. The judgment of the circuit court, in a criminal case, is, of itself, evidence of its own legality, and requires for its support no inspection of the indictment on which it is founded. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 207, 7 L. Ed. 650; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586i, 10 L. Ed. 579.

7. "The general rule is, that a conviction and sentence by a court of competent jurisdiction is lawful cause of imprisonment, and no relief can be given by habeas corpus." Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 208, 209, 7 L. Ed. 650; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 190, 12 L. Ed. 104; Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 23, 25 L. Ed. 538; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; Anderson v. Treat, 172 U. S. 24, 31, 43 L. Ed. 351.

Persons convicted or in execution could not avail themselves of the writ under 31 Car. II. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 202, 7 L. Ed. 650.

8. Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787.

"To warrant the discharge of the petitioner, the sentence under which he is held must be not merely erroneous and voidable, but absolutely void." Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 23, 25 L. Ed. 538; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

A regular judgment of conviction cannot be questioned collaterally on habeas corpus. But there are exceptions to this rule which have more than once been acted upon by the court. It is firmly established that if the court which renders a judgment has not jurisdiction to render it, either because the proceedings, or the law under which they are taken, are unconstitutional, or for any other reason, the judgment is void and may be questioned collaterally, and a defendant who is imprisoned under and by virtue of it may be discharged from custody on habeas corpus. This was so decided in the cases of Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872, and Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. Ed. 717. Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 182, 33 L. Ed. 118.

9. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 377, 25 L. Ed. 717. See post, "Excessive Judgment or Sentence," V, J, 6, e.

execution.[10]

c. Erroneous Judgment or Order—(1) In General.—Imprisonment under an erroneous judgment or sentence is not unlawful and furnishes no ground for habeas corpus.[11] An error in the sentence does not vitiate the verdict, and the federal supreme court sitting in habeas corpus, might remand for resentence one whose conviction was lawful but against whom a judgment, erroneous in part, had been rendered.[12] An error committed by a trial judge in ruling upon the sufficiency of a verdict is no ground for interposition by habeas corpus.[13]

(2) On Defective Indictment.—Although the indictment on which founded was fatally defective, yet, if the court had jurisdiction of the cause and of the party, its judgment is not void, but only voidable by writ of error, and until so avoided, cannot be collaterally impeached.[14]

d. Void Judgment or Order—(1) In General.—The only ground on which the federal supreme court, or any court, without some special statute authorizing it, will give relief on habeas corpus to a prisoner under conviction and sentence of another court, is the want of jurisdiction in such court over the person or the cause, or some other matter rendering its proceedings void.[15]

10. At common law.—Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 21, 23 L. Ed. 787.

11. Erroneous judgment or order.—Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 203, 7 L. Ed. 650; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 191, 12 L. Ed. 104.

"Judgments of court, whether federal or state, cannot be treated as void and attacked collaterally on habeas corpus, even if error has actually supervened." In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 651, 37 L. Ed. 1207; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650.

"It has always been held that a mere error in point of law, committed by a court in a case properly subject to its cognizance, can only be reviewed by the ordinary methods of appeal or writ of error." Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 21, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 23, 25 L. Ed. 538; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650.

The distinction between an erroneous judgment and one that is illegal or void is well illustrated by the two cases of Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872, and Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787. And the following cases: Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 28 L. Ed. 1005; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. Ed. 274; In re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 40 L. Ed. 88; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 41 L. Ed. 1085; Humphries v. District of Columbia, 174 U. S. 190, 195, 43 L. Ed. 944.

An omission of a sentence for imprisonment in another state to state the want of a prison in the state of the court, is not ground for discharge. Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. Ed. 89.

12. Ballew v. United States, 160 U. S. 187, 202, 40 L. Ed. 388; In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 262, 38 L. Ed. 149.

13. Ruling upon sufficiency of verdict.—The statutes of the state of Wisconsin justify a conviction of murder in either the first, second or third degree, and it has also been there held that the jury must find the degree in their verdict, in order that the court may impose the proper punishment. The verdict clearly did not acquit him of the crime with which he was charged, but found that he had committed an offense embraced within the accusation upon which he was tried. It was within the jurisdiction of the trial judge to pass upon the sufficiency of the verdict and to construe its legal meaning, and if in so doing he erred, and held the verdict to be sufficiently certain to authorize the imposition of punishment for the highest grade of the offense charged, it was an error committed in the exercise of jurisdiction, and one which does not present a jurisdictional defect, remediable by the writ of habeas corpus. In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 482, 41 L. Ed. 1085.

14. Murphy v. Massachusetts, 177 U. S. 155, 159, 44 L. Ed. 711. See post, "Without Indictment," V, J, 6, d, (5).

15. Void judgment or order.—Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 21, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 618, 26 L. Ed. 861; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 24 L. Ed. 877; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 276, 43 L. Ed. 699.

"A habeas corpus proceeding is a collateral attack of a civil nature to impeach the validity of a judgment or sentence of another court in a criminal proceeding, and it should, therefore, be limited to cases in which the judgment or sentence attacked is clearly void by reason of its having been rendered without jurisdiction, or by reason of the court's having exceeded its jurisdiction in the premises." In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 70, 76, 37 L. Ed. 653.

Not authorized by law.—Custody under a judgment of a federal court given with-

(2) For Want of General Jurisdiction.—If the court has no general jurisdiction,[16] or exceeds its jurisdiction,[17] custody under its judgment or order will be relieved by habeas corpus.[18]

(3) For Want of Jurisdiction to Render Particular Judgment or Order.—A party is entitled to a habeas corpus, not merely where the court is without jurisdiction of the cause, but where it has no constitutional authority or power to condemn the prisoner,[19] or to render the particular judgment or order.[20]

(4) On Unconstitutional Statute.—An unconstitutional law is void, and is as no law. An offense created by it is not a crime. A conviction under it is not merely erroneous, but is illegal and void, and cannot be a legal cause of imprisonment. The court has no jurisdiction and relief will be granted by habeas corpus.[21] The same rule is applicable to a conviction under a void ordinance.[22]

(5) Without Indictment.—A sentence of a circuit court without an indictment, in case of an infamous crime, is void, and the prisoner will be released on habeas corpus.[23] out authority of law may be relieved against. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676.

16. For want of general jurisdiction.—Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 59, 38 L. Ed. 631; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118; Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 130, 50 L. Ed. 689; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 37 L. Ed. 1207.

A person in custody by virtue of an order or judgment of a court not having general jurisdiction of a person and subject matter, may be discharged under habeas corpus. In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. Ed. 149.

17. Where the court transcends its power in rendering sentence, custody thereunder is ground for habeas corpus. In re Mills, 135 U. S. 263, 270, 34 L. Ed. 107; In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. Ed. 149; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 15 L. Ed. 421; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787. See post, "Excessive Judgment or Sentence," V, J, 6, e.

18. Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 22, 23 L. Ed. 787. See ante, "Without Jurisdiction," V, J, 1; post, "Courts-Martial," V, J, 7, c.

19. For want of jurisdiction to render particular judgment or order.—Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 184, 33 L. Ed. 118.

20. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 182, 33 L. Ed. 118; In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. Ed. 149; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 176, 178, 21 L. Ed. 872; Lange v. Benedict, 99 U. S. 68, 71, 25 L. Ed. 469; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 612, 26 L. Ed. 861; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 738, 32 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 28 L. Ed. 1005; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 131, 18 L. Ed. 281; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. Ed. 89; In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 286, 30 L. Ed. 658.

"There must be jurisdiction to give the judgment rendered, as well as to hear and determine the cause." Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 23, 25 L. Ed. 538.

The court may have authority over the case, but no authority to give the particular judgment. Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 184, 33 L. Ed. 118; In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 30 L. Ed. 658.

To particular punishment.—Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 136, 48 L. Ed. 121.

"The prisoner is ordered to be confined in the penitentiary, where the law does not allow the court to send him for a single hour. To deny the writ of habeas corpus in such a case is a virtual suspension of it; and it should be constantly borne in mind that the writ was intended as a protection of the citizen from encroachment upon his liberty from any source—equally as well from the unauthorized acts of courts and judges as the unauthorized acts of individuals." In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 256, 258, 38 L. Ed. 149; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 176, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 612, 26 L. Ed. 861; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 738, 32 L. Ed. 274; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 182, 33 L. Ed. 118.

21. Unconstitutionality of statute.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 248, 29 L. Ed. 868; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 376, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 654, 28 L. Ed. 274; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 758, 32 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650.

22. Unconstitutional ordinance.—A prisoner in custody of a state under a void ordinance may be released on habeas corpus. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 365, 30 L. Ed. 220.

23. Without indictment.—In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 221, 31 L. Ed. 402; Ex parte

(6) Upon Verdict of Guilty.—A judgment upon a verdict of guilty, unreversed, stands good and warrants the punishment of the defendant, and he will not be discharged by a writ of habeas corpus.[24]

(7) Becoming Void after Rendition.—If a person is in custody under a judgment, which by virtue of any matter arising ex post facto has become void, may apply for habeas corpus.[25]

e. Excessive Judgment or Sentence—(1) Excessive Severable from Authorized Portion.—Where a court has jurisdiction of the person and of the offense,[26] the imposition of a judgment or sentence in excess of what the law permits, is an irregularity merely,[27] and does not render the legal or authorized portion of the judgment or sentence void,[28] but leaves that portion only which is excessive open to question and attack on habeas corpus, after the prisoner has fulfilled the authorized portion thereof.[29] The prisoner will not be discharged on habeas corpus until he has performed or offered to perform so much of the order, as it was within the power of the district court to impose,[30] where the excessive portion of such judgment or sentence is separable and may be relieved against

Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 429, 29 L. Ed. 89. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 492.

24. Upon verdict of guilty.—United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 670, 41 L. Ed. 300; Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 130, 49 L. Ed. 114; Murphy v. Massachusetts, 177 U. S. 155, 159, 44 L. Ed. 711; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787; In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, 482, 41 L. Ed. 1085; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 285, 35 L. Ed. 505.

But a prisoner under sentence on more than one conviction for one continuous crime may be discharged. In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 281, 30 L. Ed. 658.

25. Becoming void after rendition.—Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 15 L. Ed. 421.

26. Excessive judgment—Excessive portion severable from authorized.—United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 62, 38 L. Ed. 631.

27. Excess is mere irregularity.—And is only voidable in proceeding upon a writ of error. United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 62, 38 L. Ed. 631; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872; In re Graham, 138 U. S. 461, 462, 34 L. Ed. 1051.

"It seems that under the law of Wisconsin a judgment in a criminal case which merely exceeds in the time of punishment prescribed by the sentence that which is authorized by law, is not absolutely void, but only erroneous, and that the error must be corrected on appeal and cannot be corrected by a writ of habeas corpus." In re Graham, 138 U. S. 461, 462, 34 L. Ed. 1051.

28. Legal portion not void.—In re Graham, 138 U. S. 461, 464, 34 L. Ed. 1051.

"When the highest court of a state holds that a judgment of one of its inferior courts imposing punishment in a criminal case is valid and binding to the extent in which the law of the state authorized the punishment, and only void for the excess, we cannot treat it as wholly void (and release the prisoner), there being no principle of federal law invaded in such ruling." In re Graham, 138 U. S. 461, 464, 34 L. Ed. 1051.

29. Authorized portion to be performed before relief granted.—In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 653, 37 L. Ed. 1207; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 63, 38 L. Ed. 631; In re Mills, 135 U. S. 263, 270, 34 L. Ed. 107; In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 255, 38 L. Ed. 149; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ballew v. United States, 160 U. S. 187, 202, 40 L. Ed. 388; Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 174, 33 L. Ed. 835; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 159, 35 L. Ed. 971; In re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. Ed. 519.

30. Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 107, 43 L. Ed. 91.

Excessive in duration of time.—Where a judgment exceeds in its extent the duration of time prescribed by law, it is considered valid to the extent to which the law allowed it to be entered, and only void for the excess. Therefore, the writ of habeas corpus cannot be invoked for the relief of a party until the time has expired to which the judgment should have been limited. In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 258, 38 L. Ed. 149.

Although the prisoner should not have been sentenced for any time in excess of ten years, yet until that time has expired he has no right to ask the annulment of the entire judgment. Such being the ruling of the state court of Wisconsin and there being nothing in it repugnant to any principle of natural justice, the writ of habeas corpus should be refused. At the end of that time, it is probable the state court will discharge him. In re Graham, 138 U. S. 461, 462, 34 L. Ed. 1051. See, also, Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 166, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 331, 28 L. Ed. 1005.

Computation of time served.—See Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 48 L. Ed. 1110.

without disturbing the valid portion. The excessive portion of a judgment or sentence is separable where it exceeds in its extent the duration of time prescribed by law;[31] where the judgment is lawful but unauthorized costs are imposed;[32] or where the sentence imposes a fine and imprisonment, under a statute authorizing fine or imprisonment.[33] There is no law or justice in giving to a prisoner relief under habeas corpus that is equivalent to an acquittal, when, upon writ of error, he could only have secured relief from that portion of the sentence which was void.[34]

(2) Excessive and Authorized Portions Entire.—Where the excessive and the authorized portions of the judgment or sentence are incapable of being separated so that the latter may be performed despite a discharge from the former, the whole must be treated as a nullity subject to be released from on habeas corpus.[35] There is a distinction between those cases in which the judgment is irregular, as being in excess of the time prescribed, and those in which it is void as changing the nature of the punishment from that authorized by the law.[36]

f. Sentence after Date Set for Execution.—Confinement in prison after the original day set for execution is not in violation of due process of law.[37] The sentence of death remains in force, and is sufficient authority for holding the convict in confinement after the day fixed has passed. It then becomes the duty of the court to assign, if there had been no other disposition of the case, a new time for execution.[38]

g. Commuted Sentence.—The president can constitutionally grant a conditional pardon to a convicted murderer, sentenced to be hanged, offering to change that punishment to imprisonment for life; and, if it is done, and it be accepted by the convict, it is binding upon him, and will justify a court to refuse him a writ of habeas corpus, applied for upon the ground that the pardon is absolute, and the condition of it void.[39]

h. In Contempt Cases.—The court will not grant a habeas corpus, where a party has been committed for a contempt adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction.[40] The finding of a court having full jurisdiction in the premises, of the 31. When judgment severable—Excessive in regard to time.—In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 253, 38 L. Ed. 149.

32. Unauthorized costs on valid judgment.—Even if it was not within the power of the court to require payment of costs, and its judgment to that extent exceeded its authority, yet a prisoner in custody under such judgment cannot be discharged on habeas corpus until he has performed so much of the judgment, or served out so much of the sentence, as it was within the power of the court to impose. United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 63, 38 L. Ed. 631; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 653, 37 L. Ed. 1207.

33. Fine and imprisonment.—Where the sentence is void, in part, as where a court has imposed a fine and imprisonment, where the statute only confers power to punish by fine or imprisonment, and the fine has been paid, the defendant may be discharged from the latter part of the sentence, by habeas corpus. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872.

34. Foundation of rule.—United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 63, 38 L. Ed. 631. See post, "Courts-Martial," V, J, 7, c.

35. Excessive and authorized portions entire.—The general rule is that if the judgment is at variance with the statute in which rendered, either in the character or extent of the punishment, it is void, and the prisoner should be discharged. In re Graham, 138 U. S. 461, 462, 34 L. Ed. 1051.

Where it appears upon the face of the record that a justice has exceeded his jurisdiction, by giving judgment, and issuing an execution, for a greater sum than ten pounds, the whole is a nullity; and, for that reason alone, to discharge the defendant on habeas corpus is proper. Geyger v. Stoy, 1 Dall. 135, 1 L. Ed. 70.

36. Nature of punishment changed.—In re Graham, 138 U. S. 461, 462, 34 L. Ed. 1051. See ante, "For Want of Jurisdiction to Render Particular Judgment or Order," V, J, 6, d, (3).

37. Sentence after date set for execution.—Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 433, 50 L. Ed. 256; Rooney v. North Dakota, 196 U. S. 319, 49 L. Ed. 494; In re Medley, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. Ed. 835.

38. In re Cross, 146 U. S. 271, 277, 278, 36 L. Ed. 969; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 159, 35 L. Ed. 971.

39. Commuted sentence.—Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 309, 15 L. Ed. 421.

40. In contempt cases.—Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 44, 5 L. Ed. 391; fact of disobedience, is not open to review on habeas corpus in this or any other court.[41] Where, however, the court exceeds its jurisdiction, persons in custody in contempt of its orders, judgments or decrees may be released by habeas corpus.[42] A person in custody for contempt for refusing to answer incriminating questions as a witness may be released on habeas corpus.[43]

Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 305, 32 L. Ed. 405; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 37 L. Ed. 1207; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 38 L. Ed. 631; Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 713, 718, 28 L. Ed. 1117; In re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. Ed. 689; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 215, 39 L. Ed. 401; In re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536, 45 L. Ed. 657; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. Ed. 861; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 485, 31 L. Ed. 216; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. Ed. 717; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. Ed. 676; In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 34 L. Ed. 219; In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. Ed. 149; In re Watts, 190 U. S. 1, 16, 47 L. Ed. 933; Bessette v. Conkey Co., 194 U. S. 324, 334, 48 L. Ed. 997; In re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 100, 40 L. Ed. 88. See post, "Commitments for Contempt," IX, D, 8, d. And see the title CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 540.

A writ of habeas corpus is not deemed a proper remedy, where a party was committed for a contempt by a court of competent jurisdiction; and that, if granted, the court could not inquire into the sufficiency of the cause of commitment. Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 44, 5 L. Ed. 391.

"When a court commits a party for a contempt, their adjudication is a conviction, and their commitment, in consequence, is execution." Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 43, 5 L. Ed. 391.

In such case the writ of habeas corpus should be denied, and, if granted, discharged and the petitioner remanded. Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 106, 43 L. Ed. 91.

Commitment by legislation.—Carfer v. Caldwell, 200 U. S. 293, 50 L. Ed. 488.

41. In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 600, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

42. Void order.—If a court of the United States undertakes, by its process of contempt, to punish a man for refusing to comply with an order which that court had no authority to make, the order itself, being without jurisdiction, is void, and the order punishing for the contempt is equally void, and the federal supreme court will grant the writ of habeas corpus. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 485, 31 L. Ed. 216.

Injunction against bringing writ in name of state.—A circuit court has not jurisdiction to enjoin the attorneys of a state from bringing a suit in its name and the attorney will be discharged from a commitment under contempt of such injunction. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 485, 31 L. Ed. 216.

The attorneys who prosecute a suit for a state will be discharged from custody under punishment for contempt of an injunction against such prosecution, issued by a circuit court which has not jurisdiction under the eleventh amendment to the constitution. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 485, 31 L. Ed. 216.

Injunction restraining removal of city officials.—The mayor and council of a city in Nebraska cannot be restrained, by a circuit court of the United States, by injunction from removing a city official for malfeasance in office and an order committing the defendants for contempt in disregarding the injunction, is absolutely void, and the writ of habeas corpus will lie for the release of such defendants. In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. Ed. 402.

The adjudication that the defendants were guilty of a contempt in disregarding that order is void, their detention by the marshal under that adjudication is without authority of law, and they are entitled to be discharged. In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 221, 31 L. Ed. 402.

Contempt of writ of mandamus.—If the commitment is for contempt of a writ of mandamus, which the court wrongfully issued, the prisoner will be discharged. Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 615, 26 L. Ed. 861.

In this case, the commissioners of a county in Alabama were, on a writ of habeas corpus, discharged by the federal supreme court from imprisonment to which they had been adjudged in consequence of an alleged contempt of the circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Alabama, in refusing to obey the command of a peremptory writ of mandamus issued by that court requiring them to levy certain taxes. This court said: "If the command of the peremptory writ of mandamus was in all respects such as the circuit court had jurisdiction to make, the proceedings for the contempt are not reviewable here. But if the command was in whole or in part beyond the power of the court, the writ, or so much as was in excess of jurisdiction, was void, and the court had no right in law to punish for any contempt of its unauthorized requirements. Such is the settled rule of decision in this court." Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 612, 26 L. Ed. 861.

43. Contempt by witnesses.—Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 586, 35 L. Ed. 1110.

Where a prisoner is in custody for

i. Of De Facto Judge.—A person convicted by a judge de facto, though not de jure, acting under color of office, and detained in custody in pursuance of his sentence, cannot be properly discharged upon habeas corpus.[44]

7. AUTHORITY OF PARTICULAR PERSONS AND COURTS—a. Executive and Legislative Branches of Government.—The writ of habeas corpus has been often used to defend the liberty of the citizen, and even his life, against the assertion of unlawful authority on the part of the executive and the legislative branches of the government.[45]

b. Military Authorities.—The writ will be granted for the relief of a person under the authority of military officers only in cases of rare and unusual restraint.[46]

c. Courts-Martial.—A court-martial is a court of limited jurisdiction only, whose judgments may be attacked collaterally.[47] Yet, if a court-martial has jurisdiction over the subject matter of the charge against the defendant and of his person, or if such jurisdiction is given by the consent of the defendant, the writ of habeas corpus will afford no relief, for generally, in such case, any error committed by a court-martial regularly organized and with full jurisdiction is not assailable before the civil courts.[48] And the civil courts can relieve a person from imprisonment under an order of such court only by writ of habeas corpus, contempt of an order of a circuit court to appear and submit to an examination by the adverse party, as is the practice in a state, but which is contrary to § 861, Revised Statutes, he may be discharged on habeas corpus. Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 713, 718, 28 L. Ed. 1117; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 485, 31 L. Ed. 216.

44. Of de facto judge.—Ex parte Ward, 173 U. S. 452, 455, 43 L. Ed. 765; In re Manning, 139 U. S. 504, 506, 35 L. Ed. 264.

Where a court has jurisdiction of an offense, and of the accused, and the proceedings are otherwise regular, a conviction is lawful, although the judge holding the court be only an officer de facto, and the validity of the title of such judge to the office, or his right to exercise the judicial functions, cannot be determined on a writ of habeas corpus. Nor can the prisoner under conviction be discharged. Ex parte Ward, 173 U. S. 452, 454, 43 L. Ed. 765.

Want of organization of court.—See Matter of Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 103, 51 L. Ed. 105.

45. Executive and legislative branches of government.—United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 220, 27 L. Ed. 171. See Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 26 L. Ed. 377; Carfer v. Caldwell, 200 U. S. 293, 50 L. Ed. 488.

46. Military authorities.—In the case of a person in the military or naval service, where he is, whether as an officer or a private, always more or less subject in his movements, by the very necessity of military rule and subordination, to the orders of his superior officer, it should be made clear that some unusual restraint upon his liberty of personal movement exists to justify the issue of the writ; otherwise every order of the superior officer directing the movements of his subordinate, which necessarily to some extent curtails his freedom of will, may be held to be a restraint of his liberty, and the party so ordered may seek relief from obedience by means of a writ of habeas corpus. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277. See post, "Infants," V, L, 4.

47. Courts-martial.—McClaughry v. Deming, 186 U. S. 49, 68, 46 L. Ed. 1049. See the title MILITARY LAW.

"This court in Wise v. Withers, 3 Cranch 331, 2 L. Ed. 457, * * * according to the interpretation given it by Chief Justice Marshall in Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 207, 7 L. Ed. 650, ranked a court-martial as 'one of those inferior courts of limited jurisdiction whose judgments may be questioned collaterally.'" Runkle v. United States, 122 U. S. 543, 556, 30 L. Ed. 1167.

48. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281; Ex parte Mason, 105 U. S. 696, 697, 26 L. Ed. 1213; McClaughry v. Deming, 186 U. S. 49, 53, 46 L. Ed. 1049.

"The court-martial having jurisdiction of the person accused and of the offense charged, and having acted within the scope of its lawful powers, its proceedings and sentence cannot be reviewed or set aside by the civil courts. Swaim v. United States, 165 U. S. 553, 561, 41 L. Ed. 823.

Imprisonment of paymaster's clerk.—A court-martial has jurisdiction to punish a paymaster's clerk and habeas corpus will not lie on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 21, 25 L. Ed. 538.

In naval court-marshal.—This doctrine has been applied by the federal supreme court to the judgment and sentence of a naval general court-martial, which was sought to be reviewed on a writ of habeas corpus. Keyes v. United States, 109 U. S. 336, 340, 27 L. Ed. 954; Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 25 L. Ed. 538.

and then only when it is made apparent that the court-martial proceeds without jurisdiction,[49] exceeds its powers in pronouncing sentence,[50] or is illegally constituted.[51]

d. Inspectors of Immigration.—The decision of an inspector of immigration, that an alien immigrant shall not be permitted to land, cannot be reviewed on habeas corpus, even if it is not shown that the inspector took or recorded any evidence and based his decision thereon.[52]

K. As Determined by Nature of Proceedings—1. CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS—a. In General.—Confinement in criminal proceedings may be relieved against by this writ;[53] but the ordinary procedure, by writ of error, should be pursued, in the absence of special circumstances calling for a more speedy relief.[54]

b. Treason or Felony Cases.—The Habeas Corpus Act of Charles II itself excepts from its privileges persons committed or detained for treason or felony expressed in the warrant.[55]

2. CIVIL PROCEEDINGS—a. In General.—The writ of habeas corpus is the proper remedy, in a case of arrest under a civil as well as a criminal process,[56] but a person held in prison bounds under a ca. sa. in a civil suit will not be released.[57]

b. Mandamus.—A prisoner in custody under a writ of mandamus which the court had no jurisdiction to issue may be discharged.[58]

3. IN EXTRADITION CASES.—See elsewhere for treatment of this subject.[59]

L. As Determined by Character of Person in Custody—1. ALIENS—a. In General.—The fact that the prisoner is the subject of a foreign government is not ground for his discharge,[60] nor is that of his ignorance of our laws.[61]

b. Alien Immigrants—(1) In General.—An alien immigrant, prevented from landing by an inspector of immigration claiming authority to do so under an

49. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 570, 29 L. Ed. 277.

A court-martial has no jurisdiction over a person not belonging to the militia, and custody under an exercise of such unlawful power may be relieved against by habeas corpus. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 209, 7 L. Ed. 650; Wise v. Withers, 3 Cranch 331, 2 L. Ed. 457.

50. Carter v. McClaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 46 L. Ed. 236.

The mere fact that the court-martial reconsidered the case and rendered a second decision, before dissolution, is no ground for discharge. Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 23, 25 L. Ed. 538.

51. The invalidity of the court-martial can be raised upon a hearing on habeas corpus. Where on the trial of an officer of volunteers, all the members of a court-martial are officers of the regular army, such court is illegal and the objection can be taken on habeas corpus. McClaughry v. Deming, 186 U. S. 49, 53, 46 L. Ed. 1049. See the title MILITARY LAW.

52. Inspectors of immigration.—Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. Ed. 1146. See ante, "Under Chinese Exclusion Acts," IV, C, 3, d; post, "Aliens," V, L, 1.

53. Criminal proceedings.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277.

54. In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 183, 50 L. Ed. 984, distinguishing Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. Ed. 848.

It is not necessary or proper for the federal supreme court to issue a habeas corpus in every case involving the question of the legality of a sale of liquor to Indians or the bringing of liquor into the Indian country. In re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 183, 50 L. Ed. 984.

55. Treason or felony cases.—Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 21, 23 L. Ed. 787. See United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 207, 7 L. Ed. 650; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 189, 12 L. Ed. 104. See post, "Members of Congress," V, L, 2.

56. Civil proceedings.—Ex parte Wilson, 6 Cranch 52, 53, 3 L. Ed. 149; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277.

57. Ex parte Wilson, 6 Cranch 52, 53, 3 L. Ed. 149.

58. Mandamus.—Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 615, 26 L. Ed. 861. See the title MANDAMUS.

59. In extradition cases.—See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

60. As determined by character of person in custody.—In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 297, 35 L. Ed. 510; Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 391, 41 L. Ed. 1045. See ante, "Where Prisoner Is Citizen of Foreign State," IV, C, 3, b, (5); "In United States," II, C.

61. It may be, as is claimed, that the appellant is unacquainted with our laws and language. But that fact is immaterial upon this inquiry as to the authority of a court of the United States, by a writ of act of congress, and thereby restrained of his liberty, is doubtless entitled to a writ of habeas corpus to ascertain whether the restraint is lawful.[62]

(2) Under Chinese Exclusion Acts.—Congress has power to provide laws for the exclusion of foreigners from the United States,[63] and may commit the enforcement of such laws exclusively to executive officers, without judicial intervention.[64] Under the act of August 18, 1894, the finding of the immigration officers is made final in every case,[65] except on appeal to the secretary of the treasury[66] (now to the secretary of commerce and labor),[67] and the writ of habeas corpus cannot issue from any other tribunal to take such excluded foreigner out of the custody of the immigration officers.[68] The regulations in the habeas corpus, to review and annul the judgment of a state court administering the criminal laws of a state. In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 297, 35 L. Ed. 510.

62. Alien immigrants.—Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 660, 35 L. Ed. 1146. See the title ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 219.

63. Under Chinese exclusion acts—Power of congress.—Lee Gon Yung v. United States, 185 U. S. 306, 46 L. Ed. 921; Fok Yung Yo v. United States, 185 U. S. 296, 46 L. Ed. 917. See the title CHINESE EXCLUSION ACTS, vol. 3, p. 769.

64. Delegation of power.—Congress may commit the enforcement of such provisions, conditions and regulations exclusively to executive officers, without judicial intervention. The Japanese Immigrant Case, 189 U. S. 86, 97, 47 L. Ed. 721; Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. Ed. 1146; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. Ed. 905; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 543, 39 L. Ed. 1082; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228, 41 L. Ed. 140; Fok Yung Yo v. United States, 185 U. S. 296, 305, 46 L. Ed. 917; Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 391, 394, 41 L. Ed. 1045; Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 28 L. Ed. 770; United States v. Jung Ah Lung, 124 U. S. 621, 31 L. Ed. 591; Wan Shing v. United States, 140 U. S. 424, 35 L. Ed. 503; Lau Ow Bew, Petitioner, 141 U. S. 583, 35 L. Ed. 868; Lee Gon Yung v. United States, 185 U. S. 306, 46 L. Ed. 921; Lee Lung v. Patterson, 186 U. S. 168, 175, 46 L. Ed. 1108. See the title CHINESE EXCLUSION ACTS, vol. 3, p. 771.

65. Findings of immigration officers.—United States v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 295, 48 L. Ed. 979; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 260, 49 L. Ed. 1040; United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 48 L. Ed. 917; United States, Petitioner, 194 U. S. 194, 48 L. Ed. 931; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. Ed. 905; Chin Bak Kan v. United States, 186 U. S. 193, 46 L. Ed. 1121; Ah How v. United States, 193 U. S. 65, 48 L. Ed. 619; United States v. Coe, 196 U. S. 635, 49 L. Ed. 629. See Pearson v. Williams, 202 U. S. 281, 285, 50 L. Ed. 1029; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 547, 39 L. Ed. 1082; Li Sing v. United States, 180 U. S. 486, 490, 45 L. Ed. 634.

The sufficiency of the evidence on which he acts cannot be reviewed by any other tribunal, except as permitted by statute. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 714, 37 L. Ed. 905; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 12 L. Ed. 104; Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. Ed. 234; In re Cortes, 136 U. S. 330, 34 L. Ed. 464; Wan Shing v. United States, 140 U. S. 424, 35 L. Ed. 503. See the title CHINESE EXCLUSION ACTS, vol. 3, p. 780.

66. Appeal to secretary of commerce and labor.—Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. Ed. 1146.

67. Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 548, 39 L. Ed. 1082, distinguishing Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 36 L. Ed. 340, which was decided under the acts of 1882 and 1884.

"An appeal is provided by the statute. The first mode of attacking his decision is by taking that appeal. If the appeal fails, it then is time enough to consider whether upon a petition showing reasonable cause there ought to be a further trial upon habeas corpus." United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 167, 48 L. Ed. 917.

68. Exclusive power of immigration officers.—A district court of the United States should not grant a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person of Chinese descent held for return to China by the steamship company which brought him therefrom, who, after examination by the immigration officers, was denied admission and ordered deported, which finding and action upon appeal was affirmed by the secretary of commerce and labor. United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 259, 49 L. Ed. 1040.

Acts of collector's subordinates.—"If petitioner had just cause of complaint of the conduct of the collector's subordinates, the remedy is not found in his discharge on habeas corpus." Lee Gon Yung v. United States, 185 U. S. 306, 307, 46 L. Ed. 921.

Want of knowledge of English language.—"As no appeal was taken to the secretary from the decision of the immigration inspector, that decision was final and conclusive. If the appellant's want of knowledge of the English language put her at some disadvantage in the investigation conducted by that officer, that was her misfortune, and constitutes no reason, statute, are intended to effectuate the same purpose as the writ of habeas corpus.[69] The detention during the time necessary for investigation is not unlawful.[70]

2. Members of Congress.—The senators and representatives in congress are, in all cases, except treason, felony and breach of the peace, exempted from arrest, during their attendance at the sessions thereof, and in going to and returning from the same. Congress may enforce this right, by authorizing a writ of habeas corpus, to free them from an illegal arrest, in violation of this clause of the constitution.[71]

3. Persons Acting under Federal Authority.—If a person is held in custody in violation of the constitution or a law of the United States, or for an act done or omitted in pursuance of a law of the United States, he must be discharged.[72]

4. Infants.—It is not important to inquire at what period the writ first was employed to place infant children under the disposal of courts of law and equity. This was clearly so in England anterior to our Revolution, and the practice has been fully confirmed in the continued assertion of the authority by those courts unto the present day—and this indifferently, whether the interposition of the court is demanded by the father or mother.[73] The writ is granted not to determine the right of personal freedom, but to determine to which custodian a child of tender years should be committed.[74] An infant, after enlistment in the military service of the United States, cannot be discharged therefrom by habeas corpus.[75]

5. Husband or Wife.—A wife may be released from the custody of her husband by habeas corpus.[76]

6. Wards.—A ward withheld from its guardian may be released on habeas corpus.[77] under the acts of congress, or under any rule of law, for the intervention of the court by habeas corpus. We perceive no ground for such intervention—none for the contention that due process of law was denied to appellant." The Japanese Immigrant Case, 189 U. S. 86, 102, 47 L. Ed. 721.

69. Statutory substitute for habeas corpus.—Fok Yung Yo v. United States, 185 U. S. 296, 305, 46 L. Ed. 917.

70. Detention during investigation.—United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 169, 48 L. Ed. 917; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228, 235, 41 L. Ed. 140. See the title ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 250.

71. Members of congress.—Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 619, 10 L. Ed. 1060.

72. Persons acting under federal authority.—In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 41, 34 L. Ed. 55. See ante, "For Act Done or Omitted in Pursuance of Law, etc.," IV, C, 3, b, (3); "In Violation of Constitution, Law or Treaty," IV, C, 3, b, (4); "In Violation of Constitution," V, G, 5, c.

73. Infants.—New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 438, 51 L. Ed. 254; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 34 L. Ed. 500; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 495, 29 L. Ed. 458; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277.

"In respect to married women or other adults, held in detention by private individuals, the sovereign, through this writ, acts as conservator pacis and custos morum, and, in regard to infant children, as parens patriæ, taking, in these high capacities, summary order that the party be forthwith set at liberty, if improperly and wrongfully detained." In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 604, 34 L. Ed. 500. See ante, "In Other Cases," IV, C, 3, f.

74. "It is the settled doctrine that in such cases the court exercises a discretion in the interest of the child to determine what care and custody are best for it in view of its age and requirements. Such cases are not decided on the legal right of the petitioner to be relieved from unlawful imprisonment or detention, as in the case of an adult, but upon the court's view of the best interests of those whose welfare requires that they be in custody of one person or another. In such cases the question of personal freedom is not involved except in the sense of a determination as to which custodian shall have charge of one not entitled to be freed from restraint." New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 439, 51 L. Ed. 254.

75. In military service.—In re Morrissey, 137 U. S. 157, 34 L. Ed. 644.

76. Husband or wife.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 604, 34 L. Ed. 500. See the title HUSBAND AND WIFE.

77. Wards.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277. See the title GUARDIAN AND WARD, ante, p. 599.

M. As Determined by Nature of Offense—1. Offense Not Criminal.—A person in custody under the charge of the commission of an act which does not constitute a crime may be released on habeas corpus.[78] This rule, when applied to imprisonment under conviction and sentence, is confined to cases of clear and manifest want of criminality in the matter charged, such as in effect to render the proceedings void.[79]

2. Determination of Criminality.—The question whether the act charged is or is not a crime is one which the trial court was competent to decide, and which cannot be reviewed upon a writ of habeas corpus.[80] Whether a matter for which a party is indicted in a circuit or district court is, or is not, a crime against the laws of the United States, is a question within the jurisdiction of that court, which it must decide. Its decision will not be reviewed here by habeas corpus.[81]

N. As Determined by Object of Writ—1. To Admit to Bail.—The writ may be availed of to bring the prisoner into court to admit him to bail.[82]

2. To Bring into Court to Testify.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere in this title.[83]

3. To Serve Purpose of Writ of Error.—The writ of habeas corpus is not to be used to perform the office of a writ of error or appeal; but when no writ of error or appeal will lie, if a petitioner is imprisoned under a judgment of the circuit court, which had no jurisdiction of the person or of the subject matter, or authority to render the judgment complained of, then relief may be accorded.[84]

4. As Ancillary Proceeding.—A writ of habeas corpus cum causa may be issued by the clerk of the circuit court, as ancillary to a removal of the prosecution into that court.[85]

O. As Determined by Defenses to Prosecution.—For treatment of this 78. For act not criminal.—Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 208, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 376, 25 L. Ed. 717; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. Ed. 90; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; In re Lancaster, 137 U. S. 393, 395, 34 L. Ed. 713; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 330, 28 L. Ed. 1005; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 55.

79. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 376, 25 L. Ed. 717.

Under unconstitutional law.—Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 376, 25 L. Ed. 717.

80. Determination of criminality.—Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 83, 50 L. Ed. 90, followed in Dimond v. Shine, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99; Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. Ed. 919; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 206, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787.

"It would be an assumption of authority for this court, by means of the writ of habeas corpus, to review every case in which the defendant attempts to controvert the criminality of the offense charged in the indictment." Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 20, 23 L. Ed. 787.

81. Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650; In re Lancaster, 137 U. S. 393, 395, 34 L. Ed. 713.

82. To admit to bail.—Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 181, 182, 28 L. Ed. 690; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586h, 10 L. Ed. 579. See post, "Custody Pending Hearing," X.

A person committed on warrant of a district judge may be released to bail on habeas corpus. United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490.

Commitment by another court.—"A court possessing the power to bail prisoners, not committed by itself, may award a writ of habeas corpus for the exercise of that power." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 100, 2 L. Ed. 554.

In cases of treason.—In United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490, a prisoner committed for treason was brought before the court and held to bail on habeas corpus. In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 189, 12 L. Ed. 104; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495.

In extradition cases.—Wright v. Henkel, 190 U. S. 40, 62, 47 L. Ed. 948.

83. To bring into court to testify.—See ante, "The Different Writs of Habeas Corpus," III; "To Bring Prisoner into Court to Testify." IV, C, 3, b, (6).

84. To serve purpose of writ of error.—Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 32 L. Ed. 405; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118; In re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 180, 37 L. Ed. 689. See ante, "Nature." I, B; "As Determined by the Validity of Proceedings," V, E. And see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 399.

85. As ancillary proceeding.—Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 123, 37 L. Ed. 386. See ante, "The Different Writs of Habeas Corpus," III.

subject, see elsewhere in this title.[86]

P. As Determined by Effect of Writ.—The writ will not be awarded if it appear upon the showing made by the petitioner, that if brought into court, and the cause of his commitment inquired into, he would be remanded to prison.[87]

VI. Application for Writ.

A. Statutory Provision.—The statute requires the application for a writ of habeas corpus to set forth the facts concerning the detention of the party restrained, in whose custody he is detained and by virtue of what claim or authority, if known.[88]

B. To Whom Made.—The supreme court may entertain an original application for a writ of habeas corpus without requiring the petitioner to apply, in the first instance, to the proper circuit or district court.[89]

C. By Whom Made.—A mere stranger has no right to come into court without the request or authority of a person in custody and ask that such person, who is not suggested to be coerced or to be incapable of making such request or granting such authority, may be brought up by habeas corpus to be discharged from restraint,[90] merely because he sympathizes with the prisoner or has concern for the constitutionality of a state law.[91] One bringing up a person on habeas corpus without his request or authority, may be sued in an action on the case by the person thus brought up.[92]

D. At What Time Made.—Applications may be made in vacation.[93]

E. Form and Requisites—1. WRITING.—It is necessary that there be a petition in writing.[94]

2. SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION.—The petition is required to be signed by, and verified by the oath of the person for whose relief it is intended.[95]

86. As determined by defenses to prosecution.—See ante, "In General," V, G, 5, c, (8), (a); "Former Jeopardy," V, G, 5, c, (8), (b).

87. As determined by effect of writ.—Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 45, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 111, 18 L. Ed. 281; Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704, 706, 9 L. Ed. 280; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 601, 34 L. Ed. 500; In re Boardman, 169 U. S. 39, 34, 42 L. Ed. 653; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 349, 25 L. Ed. 676; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787.

88. Statutory provision.—Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 283, 33 L. Ed. 154; Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 278, 46 L. Ed. 534; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405. See Rev. Stat., § 754.

89. To whom made.—In Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 24 L. Ed. 877, the federal supreme court considered the case without regard to the fact that there had been no application for habeas corpus in the court below. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676.

No habeas corpus was sued out either in the district or circuit court, which would have been a more regular proceeding. However, this is not indispensable. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 342, 25 L. Ed. 676, citing United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 24 L. Ed. 877; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872.

But in the two cases below "the application proceeded upon the ground that the circuit court itself had made the order by which he was alleged to have been deprived of his liberty in violation of the constitution of the United States." Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 302, 32 L. Ed. 405; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. Ed. 402.

90. By whom made.—Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 104, 11 L. Ed. 514. See Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405.

91. Gusman v. Marrero, 180 U. S. 81, 87, 45 L. Ed. 436.

However friendly he may be to the doomed man and sympathetic for his situation; however concerned he may be lest unconstitutional laws be enforced, and however laudible such sentiments are, the grievance he suffers and feels is not special enough to empower him to apply for a writ of habeas corpus. Gusman v. Marrero, 180 U. S. 81, 87, 45 L. Ed. 436; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 45 L. Ed. 249.

92. Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 104, 11 L. Ed. 514.

93. At what time made.—Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 27 L. Ed. 232. See ante, "On Reference from Justices in Chambers or Vacation," IV, C, 4, a, (4).

94. Form and requisites.—Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405.

95. Signature and verification.—Ex

3. PRAYER.—The prayer of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus is, that the petitioner may be discharged from custody.[96]

4. STATEMENT OF FACTS—a. In General.—Averments of mere conclusions of law, and not of matters of fact, are inadequate.[97]

b. To Show Jurisdiction.—An application for the writ made to a federal court must set out facts showing jurisdiction in such court.[98]

c. To Show Prima Facie Case for Discharge.—The writ does not issue as a matter of course; and, if no sufficiency or probable cause for a discharge is shown and it is apparent that the prisoner must be remanded if brought up, it will be denied.[99]

d. Nature of Custody—(1) Illegality.—If the petitioner desires his release on the ground of the illegality of his custody, such fact should be set forth in his petition.[1]

(2) Want of Probable Cause.—The petition should set forth the evidence relied upon to show a want of probable cause.[2]

e. Nature of Authority.—Where the petitioner claims he is in custody without authority, the judgment, order or process under which he is held and which he contends is invalid, should be set out substantially in the petition or annexed thereto,[3] else the petition is insufficient.[4]

f. Name of Custodian.—The petition must set forth the name of the person in whose custody petitioner is if known.[5] parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 296, 40 L. Ed. 432.

This requirement grows out of § 754 of the Revised Statutes. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. Ed. 406.

96. Prayer.—In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 280, 30 L. Ed. 658.

97. Statement of facts.—In Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. Ed. 406, it was said: "The general allegations in the petition, that the petitioner is detained in violation of the constitution and laws of the United States, and of the constitution and laws of the particular state, and is held without due process of law, are averments of mere conclusions of law, and not of matters of fact." Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 296, 40 L. Ed. 432; Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 286, 33 L. Ed. 154; Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 42 L. Ed. 407; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 571, 34 L. Ed. 500.

98. To show jurisdiction.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500.

99. To show prima facie case.—Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405. See ante, "As Determined by Materiality," V, C.

Probable cause for issuance must be shown. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

1. Nature of custody.—Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 142, 46 L. Ed. 120; Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 42 L. Ed. 407. See ante, "Illegal Restraint or Custody," V, G, 5.

In violation of the constitution.—Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 242, 40 L. Ed. 406.

2. Want of probable cause.—Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 279, 46 L. Ed. 534; Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 42 L. Ed. 407; Hyde v. Shine, 991 U. S. 62, 85, 50 L. Ed. 90, followed in Dimond v. Shine, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

"The evidence which was taken before the commissioner and which was before the district judge upon the question of the existence of probable cause was not annexed to the petition and forms no part of the proceeding before the circuit court upon the application for the writ of habeas corpus." Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 259, 46 L. Ed. 177. See ante, "Without Probable Cause," V, G, 5, b.

3. Nature of authority.—"The general rule is undoubted that if the detention is claimed to be unlawful by reason of the invalidity of the process or proceedings under which the party is held in custody, copies of such process or proceedings must be annexed to or the essential parts thereof set out in the petition, and mere averments of conclusions of law are necessarily inadequate." Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 42 L. Ed. 407; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. Ed. 406; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 40 L. Ed. 432; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405.

The petition was insufficient in not setting forth the proceedings, or the essential parts thereof, prior to the day it was presented. Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 42 L. Ed. 407; Anderson v. Treat, 172 U. S. 24, 29, 43 L. Ed. 351.

4. Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 129, 42 L. Ed. 407. See ante, "As Determined by Nature of Authority," V, J; post, "Annexing Copy of Process, etc.," VI, F.

5. Name of custodian.—Ex parte Terry,

g. In Extradition Cases.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere.[6]

F. Annexing Copy of Process, etc.—Copies of the information, the verdict, and the judgment thereon may be annexed to the petition instead of essential parts being stated therein.[7]

G. Amendment of Application.—The petition may be amended to show the diverse citizenship of the parties.[8]

H. Operation and Effect of Application—1. As Evidence.—In a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, verified by the oath of the petitioner, facts duly alleged may be taken to be true, unless denied by the return, or controlled by other evidence; but no allegation of fact in the petition can be assumed to be admitted, unless distinct and unambiguous.[9]

2. As Institution of Suit.—The petition for a writ of habeas corpus, duly presented, is the institution of a cause on behalf of the petitioner.[10]

VII. Issuance.

A. Statutory Provision.—It is the duty of the court to "forthwith award a writ of habeas corpus, unless it appears from the petition itself that the party is not entitled thereto."[11]

B. Necessity for.—The usual course of proceeding is for the court, on the application of the prisoner for a writ of habeas corpus, to issue the writ, and on its return to hear and dispose of the case; but, where the cause of imprisonment is fully shown by the petition, the court may, without issuing the writ, consider and determine whether, upon the facts presented in the petition, the prisoner, if brought before the court, would be discharged;[12] and, where the order of a court under which a marshal holds a person in custody is a nullity and the parties are willing, an order of discharge may be entered without further proceedings.[13]

C. Time of Issuance—1. In Vacation.—The writ may be issued during vacation.[14]

2. At Discretion of Court.—The court may at its discretion refuse to issue the writ immediately upon the filing of the petition.[15]

3. As Determining Priority.—The priority in issuance of a writ of habeas corpus gives it precedence over a writ of certiorari subsequently issued.[16]

D. To Whom Issued.—The writ should be issued to the person who has the immediate custody of the petitioner with the power to produce the body of such party before the court or judge.[17]

128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405. See ante, "Authority of Particular Persons and Courts," V, J, 7.

6. In extradition cases.—See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

7. Annexing copy of process, etc.—Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U. S. 124, 129, 42 L. Ed. 407; Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 259, 46 L. Ed. 177.

8. Amendment of petition.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 596, 34 L. Ed. 500.

9. As evidence.—Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 296, 40 L. Ed. 432; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. Ed. 406.

10. As institution of suit.—Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

11. Issuance.—Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 301, 32 L. Ed. 405; Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 278, 46 L. Ed. 534; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 240, 40 L. Ed. 406; Rev. Stat., §§ 754, 755.

12. Necessity for.—Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

13. Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 618, 26 L. Ed. 861. See post, "Rule to Show Cause," VII, H.

14. Time of issuance.—Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 27 L. Ed. 232.

15. At discretion of court.—If it is apparent upon the petition, that the writ if issued ought not, on principles of law and justice, to result in the immediate discharge of the accused from custody, the court is not bound to award it as soon as the application is made. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 111, 18 L. Ed. 281; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 250, 29 L. Ed. 868. See post, "Discretion to Issue," VII, F.

16. As determining priority.—"In this case, the defendant not having affected delay, but proceeded in the usual course, having taken out the first writ, and delivered it as soon as was usual, his writ should take preference; and the court accordingly order the return to be made on the habeas corpus." Steiner v. Fell, 1 Dall. 22, 23, 1 L. Ed. 20.

17. To whom issued.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 574, 29 L. Ed. 277. See ante, "Name of Custodian," VI, E, 4, f.

E. To What Place Issued.—The federal supreme court may issue the writ to any part of the United States.[18]

F. Discretion to Issue.—In determining whether the petitioner has shown a good cause for his discharge and whether the writ shall issue, the court acts at their discretion.[19]

G. Mandamus to Compel Issuance.—In exercising the proper discretion in regard to the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus, the inferior federal courts cannot be controlled by mandamus. It is only in cases of excess or abuse of discretion that the latter writ will lie.[20]

H. Rule to Show Cause.—The court, on the filing of the petition, may issue a rule on the marshal, or on any person in whose custody the prisoner may be found, to show cause why the writ of habeas corpus should not issue for his release.[21]

I. Issuance with Certiorari.—Petitions for habeas corpus are frequently accompanied by applications for certiorari as ancillary thereto, and both are awarded or denied together.[22]

J. In Extradition Cases.—In extradition cases, the writ of habeas corpus may be issued before the commissioner enters upon the examination.[23]

K. Waiver of Issuance.—The issuance of the writ may be waived by the government.[24]

VIII. Return of Writ.

A. In General.—It is to be presumed that a return will be made.[25]

B. Time Allowed for Return.—It is provided by the Revised Statutes that any person to whom the writ of habeas corpus is directed shall make due return thereof within three days thereafter, unless the party be detained beyond the distance of twenty miles; and, if beyond that distance and not beyond the distance of a hundred miles, within ten days; and, if beyond the distance of a hundred miles, within twenty days.[26]

C. Recitals of Facts.—The return of the sheriff to the writ of habeas corpus should set forth the ground for the detention of the prisoner.[27]

18. To what place issued.—Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 25 L. Ed. 715.

19. Discretion to issue.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. Ed. 868; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 32 L. Ed. 405. See ante, "Discretion to Issue," VII, F.

But it had formally been held that the allowance or refusal of the writ is matter of law and not of discretion. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

20. Mandamus to compel issuance.—Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 323, 25 L. Ed. 667; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 123, 37 L. Ed. 386. See the title MANDAMUS.

21. Rule to show cause.—Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 652, 28 L. Ed. 274; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 123, 37 L. Ed. 386. See ante, "Necessity for," VII, B.

22. Issuance with certiorari.—Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 85, 50 L. Ed. 90, followed in Dimond v. Shine, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99. See, also, Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 100, 2 L. Ed. 554. See post, "Habeas Corpus and Certiorari," IX, D, 8, c, (2).

Contrary holding in former case.—"The proceedings on a habeas corpus are de novo; on a certiorari, the court proceed on the state returned. Therefore, both writs cannot issue in the same cause; for the court cannot proceed de novo, and on the old record, too; which, upon the idea of returning both writs, must be done." Steiner v. Fell, 1 Dall. 22, 1 L. Ed. 20.

23. In extradition cases.—Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 46 L. Ed. 534. See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

24. Waiver of issuance.—Ex parte Baez, 177 U. S. 378, 389, 44 L. Ed. 813. See ante, "Necessity for," VII, B.

25. Return of writ.—Ex parte Baez, 177 U. S. 378, 389, 44 L. Ed. 813.

26. Time allowed for return.—See Rev. Stat., § 756.

This section was taken almost literally from the Habeas Corpus Act, chap. 2 of the 31st Car. II, which was designated to remedy procrastination and trifling with the writ. Prior to that act the mode of compelling a return was by taking out an alias, and then a pluries writ, and thereafter issuing an attachment. A reasonable time has always been allowed for making the return and is not to be presumed that one will not be made. Ex parte Baez, 177 U. S. 378, 388, 44 L. Ed. 813.

27. Recitals of facts.—Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 245, 40 L. Ed. 406; Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 283, 33 L. Ed. 154.

D. Presumption of Verity.—At common law, no evidence was necessary to support the return. It was deemed to import verity until impeached. And this rule is not changed by any statute of the United States.[28]

E. Contradicting Return.—Ordinarily where the return fails to set forth a true state of facts, it may be contradicted;[29] but this cannot be done where the case is heard upon exceptions or demurrer to the return. Its averments must be taken as true.[30]

F. Amending Return.—The return may be amended with leave of court.[31]

IX. Hearing and Determination.

A. Nature of Proceeding.—It is provided by act of congress that in all proceedings on habeas corpus, the court or justice or judge shall proceed in a summary way to determine the facts of the case by hearing, testimony or arguments, and thereupon to dispose of the party as law and justice require.[32]

B. Rule of Decision.—The requirement that the usual mode of process adopted in the state shall be pursued in the arrest and examination of an accused person has no bearing upon the independent proceeding before the circuit court upon habeas corpus.[33]

C. Presence of Petitioner.—The petitioner need not be present in the supreme court on the hearing, where the return shows he is in custody under conviction in a federal court;[34] and, by agreement between the attorney for the prosecution and the petitioner for the prisoner, the federal supreme court may enter a rule and proceed with the hearing and determination in the absence of the prisoner.[35]

D. Extent of Inquiry—1. In General.—The inquiry upon a writ of habeas corpus extends to the questions of the illegality of the detention in restraint of 28. Presumption of verity.—Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 94, 34 L. Ed. 620; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. Ed. 406.

29. Contradicting return.—The return must specify the true cause of detention, and petitioner, or the party imprisoned, "may deny any of the facts set forth in the return, or may allege any other facts that may be material in the case." Such denials or allegations must be under oath, so that thereby the material facts may be ascertained, and the matter disposed of as law and justice require. Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 283, 33 L. Ed. 154; Rev. Stat., §§ 757, 760, 761.

30. Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 94, 34 L. Ed. 620.

31. Amending return.—Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 283, 33 L. Ed. 54.

32. Nature of proceedings on the hearing.—"Proceedings in habeas corpus are to be disposed of in a summary way. The interests of both the public and the petitioner require promptness; that if he is unlawfully restrained of his liberty it may be given to him as speedily as possible; that if not, all having anything to do with his restraint be advised thereof, and the mind of the public be put at rest, and also that if further action is to be taken in the matter it may be taken without delay. Especially is this true when the habeas corpus proceedings are had in the courts of a jurisdiction different from that in pursuance of whose mandate he is detained. This matter of promptness is not peculiar to these cases in federal courts, but is the general rule which obtains wherever the common law is in force. It is one of those things which give to such proceedings their special value, and is enforced by statutory provisions, both state and federal. The command of the section is 'to dispose of the party as law and justice require.' All the freedom of equity procedure is thus prescribed; and substantial justice, promptly administered, is ever the rule in habeas corpus." Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 143, 46 L. Ed. 120.

This provision is applicable to the federal supreme court, when exercising either its original or appellate jurisdiction. Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 46 L. Ed. 120. See § 761, Rev. Stat.

33. Rule of decision.—Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 84, 50 L. Ed. 90, followed in Dimond v. Shine, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99.

34. Presence of petitioner.—Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 653, 28 L. Ed. 274.

"Petitions of the kind when presented here are heard in the first place ex parte." Ex parte Lange, 131 U. S., appx ccvii, ccviii, 21 L. Ed. 872.

35. Ex parte Baez, 177 U. S. 378, 389, 44 L. Ed. 813; Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 162, 33 L. Ed. 835; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 117, 18 L. Ed. 281.

liberty,[36] and the sufficiency and lawfulness of the cause of detention.[37] Where, however, a district judge has determined that probable cause exists, such determination cannot be revised on habeas corpus.[38]

2. Statutory Provision.—By act of congress, the federal courts are empowered, and it is their duty, to inquire into the cause of the restraint of liberty.[39]

3. Guilt or Innocence.—Upon the writ of habeas corpus, upon which it is to be determined whether the prisoner shall be discharged or held to bail,[40] it is not proper to inquire into the prisoner's guilt or innocence.[41] The inquiry under this writ is always distinct from the question whether the prisoner shall be convicted or acquitted;[42] but it would seem that the supreme court, in at least one case, did not restrain itself to this rule of law.[43] This question being distinct from the question involved in the cause itself, may be decided by a different court.[44]

36. Extent of inquiry.—Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 713, 718, 28 L. Ed. 1117; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277; Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 559, 27 L. Ed. 826; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. Ed. 868; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 431, 30 L. Ed. 425; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 169.

37. United States v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 295, 48 L. Ed. 979; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277; New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 437, 51 L. Ed. 254.

The court can undoubtedly inquire into the sufficiency of the cause of commitment. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 202, 7 L. Ed. 650.

"Upon a habeas corpus, we are only to inquire whether the warrant of commitment states a sufficient probable cause to believe, that the person charged has committed the offense stated." United States v. Johns, 4 Dall. 412, 413, 1 L. Ed. 888.

The case on a habeas corpus is "a mere inquiry, whether the accused shall be discharged or held to bail." The law which gives authority to issue the writ, defines its object, "for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of commitment, its legality, and the sufficiency of that cause." Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586o, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 202, 7 L. Ed. 650.

The inquiry upon a writ of habeas corpus is limited to the sufficiency of the statement of probable cause for detention in the warrant of commitment. United States v. Johns, 4 Dall. 412, 413, 1 L. Ed. 888.

38. Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 32, 51 L. Ed. 689.

39. Statutory provision.—Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 713, 718, 28 L. Ed. 1117; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 63, 38 L. Ed. 631. See § 752, Rev. Stat.

But no law of the United States prescribes the power of the supreme court over the party brought up by habeas corpus. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201, 7 L. Ed. 650.

40. Guilt or innocence.—"This being a mere inquiry, which, without deciding upon guilt, precedes the institution of a prosecution, the question to be determined is, whether the accused shall be discharged or held to trial and if the latter, in what place they are to be tried, and whether they shall be confined or admitted to bail." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 125, 2 L. Ed. 554; Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. Ed. 690; United States v. Lewis, 200 U. S. 1, 8, 50 L. Ed. 343.

41. Habeas corpus is not the proper proceeding to try the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused. Hyatt v. Corkran, 188 U. S. 691, 710, 47 L. Ed. 657; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 548, 586h, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 100, 125, 2 L. Ed. 554; Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 206, 51 L. Ed. 148; Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 651, 32 L. Ed. 234; In re Cortes, 136 U. S. 330, 335, 34 L. Ed. 464; Bryant v. United States, 167 U. S. 104, 108, 42 L. Ed. 94.

Resort to this writ sometimes becomes necessary, because of what is done to enforce laws for the punishment of crimes, but the judicial proceeding under it is not to inquire into the criminal act which is complained of, but into the right to liberty notwithstanding the act. Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 559, 27 L. Ed. 826.

42. Inquiry distinct from that of guilt. —Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 100, 125, 2 L. Ed. 554; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586p, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Watkins, 7 Pet. 568, 8 L. Ed. 786.

43. But in the case of In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 55, a marshal of the United States who had killed a person in defending a justice of the supreme court, was on habeas corpus discharged and delivered from any trial or further inquiry in any court. See dissenting opinion of Lamar, J., and Fuller, C. J., in In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 76, 34 L. Ed. 55, quoting Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 180, 28 L. Ed. 690.

44. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 101,

4. Motive of Prosecution.—On the writ of habeas corpus the motive of the prosecution in acquiring evidence will not be inquired into, even though the object is to detect or entrap the party into criminal practices.[45]

5. Criminality of Offense.—An inquiry into the criminality of an offense charged in the indictment is improper.[46]

6. Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence.—The inquiry upon the writ of habeas corpus does not extend to questions arising in regard to the evidence presented to sustain the charge.[47]

7. Custody in Violation of Constitution.—Custody in violation of the constitution or laws or treaties of the United States may be inquired into.[48]

8. Custody under Judgments or Orders of Court—a. In General.—As a general rule no inquiry can be made in regard to a commitment by a court of competent jurisdiction;[49] for the finding of such court is conclusive and cannot

2 L. Ed. 554; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586o, 10 L. Ed. 579; Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 560, 27 L. Ed. 826. See ante, "For Act Not Criminal," V, J, 5, g.

45. Motive of prosecution.—Thus the motive of a person who entrusts a letter to a letter carrier will not be inquired into. In re Wright, 134 U. S. 136, 33 L. Ed. 865.

46. Criminality of offense.—In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 757, 32 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650.

It was not proper on the writ of habeas corpus, to determine the question as to whether a certain scheme alleged in an indictment constituted a lottery. Horner v. United States, 147 U. S. 449, 467, 37 L. Ed. 237; Horner v. United States, No. 2, 143 U. S. 570, 577, 36 L. Ed. 266; In re Cortes, 136 U. S. 330, 34 L. Ed. 464; Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 468, 34 L. Ed. 461; In re Fassett, 142 U. S. 479, 483, 484, 35 L. Ed. 1086. See ante, "As Determined by Nature of Offense," V, M.

47. Weight and sufficiency of evidence.—"We have nothing to do with questions arising on the evidence presented to sustain the charge." Ex parte Carll, 106 U. S. 521, 523, 27 L. Ed. 288; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 84, 50 L. Ed. 90; Dimond v. Shine, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99. But see Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 114, 2 L. Ed. 554.

The federal supreme court cannot inquire "whether the evidence established the fact alleged, that the defendant was a member of an order or organization known as the Mormon Church, called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, or the fact that the order or organization taught and counseled its members and devotees to commit the crimes of bigamy and polygamy as duties arising from membership therein. On this hearing we can only consider whether, these allegations being taken as true, an offense was committed of which the territorial court had jurisdiction to try the defendant." Davis v. Beason, 133 U. S. 333, 341, 33 L. Ed. 637.

48. Custody in violation of constitution.—Ex parte Royall, 112 U. S. 181, 28 L. Ed. 690; Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. Ed. 868; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 718, 32 L. Ed. 283.

It is upon the hearing to be finally determined by the tribunal before whom the prisoner is brought whether his imprisonment or custody is in violation of the constitution or laws or treaties of the United States. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 591, 34 L. Ed. 500. See Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872.

"And, as the laws of congress are only valid when they are within the constitutional power of that body, the validity of the statute under which a prisoner is held in custody may be inquired into under a writ of habeas corpus as affecting the jurisdiction of the court which ordered his imprisonment. And if their want of power appears on the face of the record of his condemnation, whether in the indictment or elsewhere, the court which has authority to issue the writ is bound to release him." In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 758, 32 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. Ed. 717. See ante, "In Violation of Constitution," V, G, 5, c.

49. Custody under judgments or orders of court.—On an application for a writ of habeas corpus, after judgment on an indictment for an offense within the jurisdiction of the circuit court, the federal supreme court cannot revise such a judgment, or the proceedings which led to it, or set it aside, and discharge the prisoner. Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 43, 5 L. Ed. 391.

A commitment by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction is a sufficient answer to a writ of habeas corpus intended to effect his discharge, said Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650. In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 756, 32 L. Ed. 274.

Where a prisoner shows that he is held under a judgment of a federal court, made without authority of law, the supreme court will, by writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, look into the record so far as to ascertain that fact, and if it is found to be so, will discharge the prisoner. Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872.

be questioned upon habeas corpus;[50] but, where personal liberty is concerned, the judgment of an inferior court affecting it is not so conclusive but that the question of its authority to try and imprison the party may be reviewed on habeas corpus by a superior court or judge having power to award the writ.[51]

b. Jurisdiction.—Where a person is in custody under the judgment, sentence or order of any inferior court or magistrate of the United States, the inquiry into such restraint of liberty on the writ of habeas corpus is restricted to the one question whether or not such court or magistrate has jurisdiction of the offense and of the person.[52] This rule applies in review of the rulings of the district[53] and circuit courts,[54] circuit court of appeals,[55] courts-martial,[56] and See ante, "Judgment or Order of Court," V, J, 6.

50. Where a court, in passing sentence of imprisonment in the penitentiary, finds that, in the district or territory where the court is holden, there is no penitentiary suitable for the confinement of convicts, or available therefor, such finding is conclusive, and cannot be reviewed here upon a petition for habeas corpus. Ex parte Karstendick, 93 U. S. 396, 23 L. Ed. 889.

51. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 377, 25 L. Ed. 717.

52. Jurisdiction.—Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 166, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. Ed. 861; Ex parte Carll, 106 U. S. 521, 522, 27 L. Ed. 288; Davis v. Beason, 133 U. S. 333, 341, 33 L. Ed. 637; Ornelas v. Ruiz, 161 U. S. 502, 40 L. Ed. 787; Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 46 L. Ed. 534; Wright v. Henkel, 190 U. S. 40, 57, 47 L. Ed. 948; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. Ed. 717; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 2 L. Ed. 554; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Watkins, 7 Pet. 568, 8 L. Ed. 786; In re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 12 L. Ed. 104; In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 14 L. Ed. 345; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 329, 15 L. Ed. 421; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281; Ex parte McCardle, 6 Wall. 318, 18 L. Ed. 816; Ex parte McCardle, 7 Wall. 506, 19 L. Ed. 264; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. Ed. 332; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 758, 32 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; Bessette v. Conkey Co., 194 U. S. 324, 335, 48 L. Ed. 997; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 207, 214, 36 L. Ed. 126; Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 32 L. Ed. 223; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 183, 185, 33 L. Ed. 118; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 43, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 653, 28 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 375, 27 L. Ed. 232; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 62, 63, 38 L. Ed. 631; In re Wight, 134 U. S. 136, 148, 33 L. Ed. 865; Horner v. United States, No. 2, 143 U. S. 570, 578, 36 L. Ed. 266; Ex parte Mason, 105 U. S. 696, 26 L. Ed. 1213; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 420, 29 L. Ed. 89; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 29 L. Ed. 277; Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 783, 30 L. Ed. 824; Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. Ed. 234; In re Cortes, 136 U. S. 330, 34 L. Ed. 464; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 510; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. Ed. 367; Huntington v. Laidley, 176 U. S. 668, 44 L. Ed. 630; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 143, 46 L. Ed. 120; Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 468, 477, 478, 34 L. Ed. 461; In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 589, 34 L. Ed. 500; Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. Ed. 690; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 28 L. Ed. 1005; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 218, 39 L. Ed. 401.

"Our inquiries in this class of cases are limited to such objections as relate to the authority of the court to render the judgment by which the prisoner is held." Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371, 375, 27 L. Ed. 232.

"Upon this writ the question for our determination is simply one of jurisdiction. If that were not lacking at the time of the trial and if it continued all through, then the application for the writ was properly denied by the circuit court." Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 129, 50 L. Ed. 689.

"In all such cases, when the question of jurisdiction is raised, the point to be decided is, whether the court has jurisdiction of that class of offenses." In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 758, 32 L. Ed. 274.

53. District court.—"The district court had plenary jurisdiction, both of the person, the place, the cause, and everything about it. To review the decision of that court by means of a writ of habeas corpus would be to convert that writ into a mere writ of error, and to assume an appellate power which has never been conferred upon this court." In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 759, 32 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23, 23 L. Ed. 787.

54. Circuit court.—Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 162, 43 L. Ed. 399.

55. Circuit court of appeals.—The circuit court of appeals having jurisdiction in the matter of the appeal herein involved, its decrees and orders in the premises are not void and cannot be revised on habeas corpus. In re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536, 45 L. Ed. 657.

56. Courts-martial.—Carter v. McClaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 390, 46 L. Ed. 236; Ex parte Mason, 105 U. S. 696, 697, 26 L. Ed. 1213.

A district court of the United States may inquire into the jurisdiction of a courts of equity.[57] Such inquiry may involve an examination of facts outside of but not inconsistent with the record.[58]

c. Mere Errors—(1) In General.—Mere errors committed at the trial in the court below cannot be inquired into upon a writ of habeas corpus.[59]

(2) Habeas Corpus and Certiorari.—In all cases where a circuit court of the United States has, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, caused a prisoner to be brought before it, and has, after inquiring into the cause of detention, remanded him to the custody from which he was taken, the federal supreme court, in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, may, by the writ of habeas corpus, aided by the writ of certiorari, revise the decision of the circuit court, and if it be found unwarranted by law, relieve the prisoner from the unlawful restraint to which he has been remanded.[60]

d. Commitments for Contempt.—The inquiry in this case extends merely to court-martial, and if it appears that the party condemned was not amenable to its jurisdiction, may discharge him from the sentence. In re Grimley, 137 U. S. 147, 150, 34 L. Ed. 636.

By habeas corpus the civil courts exercise no supervisory or correcting power over the proceedings of a court-martial; and no mere errors in their proceedings are open to consideration. The single inquiry, the test, is jurisdiction. That being established, the habeas corpus must be denied and the petitioner remanded. That wanting, it must be sustained and the petitioner discharged. In re Grimley, 137 U. S. 147, 150, 34 L. Ed. 636.

57. Court of equity.—The jurisdiction of a court of equity to enjoin prosecution of a crime may be inquired into on hearing the writ. Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 169, 43 L. Ed. 399.

58. Examination of facts outside of record.—"This court * * * had power to inquire with regard to the jurisdiction of the inferior court, either in respect to the subject matter or to the person, even if such inquiry involved an examination of facts outside of, but not inconsistent with, the record. Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. Ed. 332; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. Ed. 676; Ex parte Carll, 106 U. S. 521, 27 L. Ed. 288; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. Ed. 274; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 28 L. Ed. 1005; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118; Savin, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 267, 33 L. Ed. 150." In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 116, 35 L. Ed. 635. See ante, "Without Jurisdiction," V, J, 1; "Acquisition of Jurisdiction by Unlawful Means," V, J, 2; "Judgment or Order of Court," V, J, 6.

59. Mere errors.—"The general rule is well established that a writ of habeas corpus cannot be used to perform the office of a writ of error, and that this doctrine applies not only to original writs of habeas corpus issued by this court, but on appeals to it from courts below in habeas corpus proceedings." Gonzales v. Cunningham, 164 U. S. 612, 621, 41 L. Ed. 572; In re Schneider (No. 2), 148 U. S. 162, 37 L. Ed. 406; Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 461, 462, 32 L. Ed. 234; Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 468, 478, 34 L. Ed. 461; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 758, 759, 32 L. Ed. 274; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 182, 184, 33 L. Ed. 118; Savin, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 267, 279, 33 L. Ed. 150; Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 285, 33 L. Ed. 154. See ante, "As Determined by Validity of Proceedings," V, E.

Error of jurisdiction.—"The argument of counsel assumes that in this proceeding, by writ of habeas corpus, we can inquire into and correct nearly all errors which may have been committed by the district court in the control of the case originally. This has been so often denied by this court, and the proposition is so clear, that in a writ of habeas corpus nothing can be inquired into but the jurisdiction of the court, that it is unnecessary to pursue the entire line of argument of counsel for appellant." In re Wight, 134 U. S. 136, 148, 33 L. Ed. 865.

"We have no power under this writ to inquire into mere errors committed by the district court, save as to the error of the assumption of jurisdiction." In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 589, 34 L. Ed. 500.

Not considered as on demurrer.—A case on habeas corpus is not considered as on a demurrer before trial. In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 758, 32 L. Ed. 274.

What constitutes mere error.—Where the authorities all concede that neither irregularities nor error, so far as they were within the jurisdiction of the court, can be inquired into upon a writ of habeas corpus—they differ widely as to what constitutes error, and what should be regarded as rendering the judgment or proceedings void. United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 63, 38 L. Ed. 631.

60. Habeas corpus and certiorari.—Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. Ed. 332; Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 181, 182, 28 L. Ed. 600; Barry v. Mercein, 5 How. 103, 12 L. Ed. 70; In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 14 L. Ed. 345; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 329, 15 L. Ed. 421.

As to extent of hearing on certiorari to send up record of privileges on habeas corpus, see the title CERTIORARI, vol. 3, p. 651. And see Ex parte Dugan, 2 Wall. 134, 17 L. Ed. 871.

the question of the jurisdiction of the committing magistrate or court.[61] In determining the question of jurisdiction, facts not contradictory to the record may be inquired into,[62] but the sufficiency of the cause of commitment cannot be inquired into.[63] The truth of the specific facts recited in the order of commitment, as constituting the contempt, cannot be examined.[64] The validity of a state law and the sentences of her courts thereunder in commitments for contempt may be inquired into by the supreme court.[65]

E. Evidence and Presumptions on Hearing.—Facts alleged in the petition for the writ of habeas corpus, forfeited by the oath of the petitioner, unless denied by the return, or contradicted by other evidence, if distinct and unambiguous, are taken to be admitted.[66] Facts not contradictory to the record, going to show want of jurisdiction, may be shown;[67] but the facts in the record cannot be disputed.[68] It will not be presumed that a prisoner has been kept in custody in pursuance of a statute not applicable to the particular case.[69]

61. Commitments for contempt.—The attack upon the contempt proceedings by habeas corpus is in a collateral way and the inquiry is limited to the question of jurisdiction. In re Delgado, 140 U. S. 586, 588, 35 L. Ed. 578; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 203, 7 L. Ed. 650; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. Ed. 787; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. Ed. 274; Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 285, 286, 33 L. Ed. 154; In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. Ed. 513; In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 652, 37 L. Ed. 1207.

There is no distinction between custody under commitments for contempts and custody under sentence in other cases; for when a court commits a party for a contempt, their adjudication is a conviction, and their commitment, in consequence, is execution. Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 43, 5 L. Ed. 391.

62. Inquiry outside of record.—"In Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. Ed. 154, it was held directly, that where the petitioner had been committed for a contempt, he was at liberty, upon application for a writ of habeas corpus, to allege and prove facts not contradictory to the record, which went to show that the court was without jurisdiction." In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 116, 35 L. Ed. 635.

63. Cause of commitment.—Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 44, 5 L. Ed. 391; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 306, 32 L. Ed. 405.

64. Facts contrary to record.—The question of jurisdiction, it must be here observed, does not involve an inquiry into the truth of the specific facts recited in the order of commitment, as constituting the contempt. As the writ of habeas corpus does not perform the office of a writ of error or an appeal, these facts cannot be re-examined or reviewed in this collateral proceeding. Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 305, 32 L. Ed. 405.

This court cannot, in this proceeding, in virtue of any power conferred upon it by existing legislation, go behind the determination of a circuit court as to whether the prisoner was or was not guilty of contempt. It can deal only with such defects in the proceedings as render them, not simply erroneous or irregular but absolutely void. Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 306, 32 L. Ed. 405; Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. 505, 511, 22 L. Ed. 205; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 43, 5 L. Ed. 391; Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. Ed. 154.

The determination of the circuit court that a constable was in contempt for seizing and persisting in holding certain property contrary to its orders is not open to inquiry here. In re Swan, 150 U. S. 637, 652, 37 L. Ed. 1207.

"The only question which can properly be raised upon this writ is whether the circuit court exceeded its jurisdiction in holding the petitioner for a contempt and in imposing upon him a fine therefor. We are not at liberty to consider the testimony, or to inquire whether the facts, as they appeared upon the hearing, justified the action of the circuit court. It is only upon the theory that the proceedings and judgment of the court were nullities that we are authorized to reverse its action." In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 552, 41 L. Ed. 1110.

65. Constitutionality of state law.—Pepke v. Cronan, 155 U. S. 100, 101, 39 L. Ed. 84. See ante, "In Contempt Cases," V, J, 6, h.

66. Evidence and presumptions on hearing.—Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 242, 40 L. Ed. 406.

67. Facts outside of record.—In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 116, 35 L. Ed. 635; Cuddy, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. Ed 154.

68. Parties to the collateral proceeding by habeas corpus are bound by the jurisdictional averments in the record, and will not be permitted to dispute them except so far as they may have contained a false recital with respect to such parties. In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 552, 553, 41 L. Ed. 1110. See ante, "Commitments for Contempt," IX, D, 8, d.

69. Presumptions.—It will not be presumed that the prisoner was kept in solitary confinement in pursuance of a statute not applicable to the case of the prisoner.

F. Decision on Hearing—1. In General.—Under the Habeas Corpus Act of Charles II, it was the regular course to take bail and recognizance of the party to appear in the King's Bench or assizes; though the judge would discharge absolutely, if the case was clearly one of illegal imprisonment.[70] Under the act of congress, it is the duty of the court, justice or judge, granting the writ, on hearing, "to dispose of the party as law and justice may require."[71] If it appears that the court under whose authority the prisoner is held is without jurisdiction to proceed against him,[72] that no crime has been committed,[73] or that the suspicion entertained of the prisoner was wholly groundless, he should be discharged.[74] Otherwise he should be remanded to the custody of the proper officer,[75] or admitted to bail.[76] If the prisoner is detained under a conviction and sentence by a court having jurisdiction of the cause, the general rule is that he will be instantly remanded.[77]

2. Providing for Delivery of Infant to Parent.—See elsewhere in this title.[78]

3. Providing for Rearrest on Discharge.—Under the writ of habeas corpus, the federal supreme court cannot do anything else than discharge the prisoner from the wrongful confinement.[79] In some cases, no correction can be made of the judgment, as where the court had under the law no jurisdiction of the case—that is, no right to take cognizance of the offense alleged, and the prisoner must then be entirely discharged;[80] but in other cases, as where the court merely exceeds its jurisdiction, it is in the interest of justice and to prevent its defeat, that the discharge of the petitioner should be delayed for such reasonable time as may be necessary to have him taken before the court where the judgment was rendered, that the defects which are the subject of complaint in that judgment may be corrected.[81]

4. Effect of Decision of Discharge.—The discharge of a party, under a writ of habeas corpus, from the process under which he is imprisoned, discharges him from any further confinement under the process; but not under Holden v. Minnesota, 137 U. S. 483, 491, 34 L. Ed. 734; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 89, 34 L. Ed. 620.

70. Decision on hearing—Act of Car. II.—Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 403, 25 L. Ed. 715.

71. Under act of congress.—Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 391, 41 L. Ed. 1045; Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. Ed. 1146; In re Boardman, 169 U. S. 39, 43, 42 L. Ed. 653. See Rev. Stat., § 761.

72. When discharged—Want of jurisdiction.—Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. Ed. 872; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. Ed. 861; Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 713, 724, 28 L. Ed. 1117; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 733, 32 L. Ed. 274; In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 262, 38 L. Ed. 149; Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 174, 33 L. Ed. 835; Savage, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 842; McClaughry v. Deming, 186 U. S. 49, 69, 46 L. Ed. 1049; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 343, 25 L. Ed. 676; United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. Ed. 490; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch 448, 2 L. Ed. 495; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 24 L. Ed. 877; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 519, 24 L. Ed. 1118; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 101, 19 L. Ed. 332; New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 203 U. S. 429, 437, 51 L. Ed. 254.

73. No crime committed.—See ante, "As Determined by Nature of Offense," V, M.

74. Held under groundless suspicion.—Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 125, 2 L. Ed. 554; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277.

75. When remanded.—Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 571, 29 L. Ed. 277; Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 560, 27 L. Ed. 826; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 64, 38 L. Ed. 631.

76. When admitted to bail.—Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 125, 2 L. Ed. 554.

77. Remanded if court has jurisdiction.—Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. Ed. 717.

Awarding damages.—See the title FALSE IMPRISONMENT, ante, p. 242.

78. Delivery of infant to parent.—See ante, "Infants," V, L, 4.

Wife and husband.—See ante, "Husband or Wife," V, L, 5.

Ward to guardian.—See ante, "Wards," V, L, 6.

79. Providing for rearrest on discharge.—Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 173, 33 L. Ed. 835, followed in Savage, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 842.

80. In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 262, 38 L. Ed 149.

81. Delay of discharge.—Where the error or excess of jurisdiction consists in ordering the prisoner confined in a penitentiary contrary to law, justice requires that any other process, which may be issued against him, under the same indictment.[82]

X. Custody Pending Hearing.

Pending the examination or hearing, the prisoner, in all cases, on the return of the writ, is detained, not on the original warrant, but under the authority of the writ of habeas corpus. He may be bailed on the return de die in diem, or be remanded to the same jail whence he came, or to any other place of safe-keeping under the control of the court, or officer issuing the writ, and by its order brought up from time to time, till the court or officer determines whether it is proper to discharge or remand him absolutely.[83] The entire responsibility for the safe-keeping of the prisoner rests with the officer before whom the prisoner is brought pursuant to the writ.[84] jurisdiction of the prisoner should be reassumed and defects corrected by the court that imposed the sentence. The discharge of the prisoner on habeas corpus should be delayed for such reasonable time as may be necessary to have him taken before the court where the judgment was rendered. In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 261, 38 L. Ed. 149.

"What disposition shall we now make of the prisoner, who is entitled to his discharge from the custody of the warden of the penitentiary under the order and judgment of the court, because, within the language of § 753, he is in custody in violation of the constitution of the United States, but who is, nevertheless, guilty, as the record before us shows, of the crime of murder in the first degree? We do not think that we are authorized to remand the prisoner to the custody of the sheriff of the proper county to be proceeded against," app. in Savage, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 842. "Upon the whole, after due deliberation, we have come to the conclusion that the attorney general of the state of Colorado shall be notified by the warden of the penitentiary of the precise time when he will release the prisoner from his custody under the present sentence and warrant at least ten days beforehand, and after doing this, and at that time, he shall discharge the prisoner from his custody; and such will be the order of this court." Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 174, 33 L. Ed. 835.

82. Effect of decision.—Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704, 710, 9 L. Ed. 280; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 586, 10 L. Ed. 579; Skillern v. May, 4 Cranch 137, 2 L. Ed. 574.

George Milburn was imprisoned in the jail of the county of Washington, upon a bench warrant, issued by the circuit court of the United States for the District of Columbia, to answer an indictment pending against him for keeping a faro bank, an offense which, by an act of congress, is punishable by imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary of the district. He had been arrested on a former capias, issued on the same indictment, upon which he gave a recognizance of bail, with sureties, in the sum of one hundred pounds, Maryland currency, according to the statute of Maryland, conditioned to appear in court at the return day of the process, etc.; he did not appear, and the recognizance was forfeited, and a scire facias was issued against him, and his sureties, returnable to December term, 1833. At the same term, another writ of capias was issued against him, returnable immediately, and returned non est inventus; at June vacation, 1834, another writ of capias was issued against him, returnable to November term, 1834, on which he was arrested, and from which arrest he was discharged on a habeas corpus, by the chief justice of the circuit court, on the ground that the writ of capias improperly issued; on a return of this discharge by the marshal, a bench warrant was issued by order of a majority of the judges of the circuit court, and on which he was in custody. He applied for a writ of habeas corpus to this court, to obtain his discharge. Held, that he was properly in custody. The rule for the habeas corpus was refused. Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704, 9 L. Ed. 280.

83. Custody pending hearing.—In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 133, 14 L. Ed. 345, Nelson, J.

"When a prisoner is brought into court upon the return of a habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, he is then in the power and under the control of the court; but until the court makes some order changing the custody, it remains. The court may, in some cases, admit to bail, and may also take order for the future production of the prisoner, without bail; but in all cases, until the court makes some order changing the custody, either for the care or security of the prisoner, or funded on the illegality of his commitment, the original custody continues." In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 122, 14 L. Ed. 345.

"The award of the capias ad satisfaciendum must be considered as the act of the circuit court, it being judicial process issuing under the authority of the court. The party is in custody under that process. He is then in custody in contemplation of law, under the award of process by the court." In re Kaine, 14 How. 103, 126, 14 L. Ed. 345; Ex parte Watkins, 7 Pet. 568, 572, 8 L. Ed. 786.

84. Responsibility for safe-keeping of

XI. Suspension of Writ.

A. Power of Suspension.—It is essential to the safety of every government that, in a great crisis, there should be a power somewhere of suspending the writ of habeas corpus. In every war, there are men of previously good character, wicked enough to counsel their fellow citizens to resist the measures deemed necessary by a good government to sustain its just authority and overthrow its enemies; and their influence may lead to dangerous combinations. In such an emergency an immediate public investigation according to law may not be possible; yet the peril to the country may be too imminent to suffer such persons to go at large. In this exigency if the government should see fit in the exercise of a proper discretion to make arrests, it should not be required to produce the persons arrested in answer to a writ of habeas corpus.[85] Hence, the second clause of § 9, art. 1, of the constitution of the United States, provides: "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it."[86] The two questions arising thereunder are: By whom may the writ be suspended, and when does public safety require it to be suspended? As it is a political question,[87] the first has been considered, though probably not finally decided, as abiding originally within the implied powers of the legislative branch of the government,[88] which may be delegated to the executive branch of the gov-prisoner.—Barth v. Clise, 12 Wall. 400, 403, 20 L. Ed. 393.

Thus, when a sheriff, in obedience to a writ of habeas corpus, makes a proper return and brings his prisoner before the court which issued the writ, the safe-keeping of the prisoner while he is before it is entirely under the control and direction of the court to which the return is made. The sheriff is accordingly not responsible for escape of the prisoner while thus in the custody of the court, and before a remand or other order placing new duties on him. Barth v. Clise, 12 Wall. 400, 20 L. Ed. 393.

"By the common law, upon the return of a writ of habeas corpus and the production of the body of the party suing it out, the authority under which the original commitment took place is superseded. After that time, and until the case is finally disposed of, the safe-keeping of the prisoner is entirely under the control and direction of the court to which the return is made. The prisoner is detained, not under the original commitment, but under the authority of the writ of habeas corpus. Pending the hearing he may be bailed de die in diem, or be remanded to the jail whence he came, or be committed to any other suitable place of confinement under the control of the court. He may be brought before the court from time to time by its order until it is determined whether he shall be discharged or absolutely remanded." Barth v. Clise, 12 Wall. 400, 402, 20 L. Ed. 393.

85. Suspension of writ.—Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 125, 18 L. Ed. 281.

86. Constitutional provision.—Fisher v. Baker, 203 U. S. 174, 179, 51 L. Ed. 142; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. Ed. 581.

The constitution, by this provision, added to the exalted estimate in which the writ has always been held in this country and in England. In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 589, 34 L. Ed. 500.

But, despite this exalted esteem, it may be worthy of observation, that this is the only constitutional safeguard of civil liberty that is voidable and subject to suspension. See Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

In the Philippine Island.—"The seventh paragraph of § 5 of the act of congress of July 1, 1902, 32 Stat., c. 1369, pp. 691, 692, reads: 'That the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion, insurrection, or invasion the public safety may require it, in either of which events the same may be suspended by the president, or by the governor, with the approval of the Philippine commission, wherever during such period the necessity for such suspension shall exist.'" Fisher v. Baker, 203 U. S. 174, 179, 51 L. Ed. 142.

87. Who may suspend.—"If at any time the public safety should require the suspension of the powers vested by this act in the courts of the United States, it is for the legislature to say so. That question depends on political considerations, on which the legislature is to decide. Until the legislative will be expressed, this court can only see its duty, and must obey the laws." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch 75, 101, 2 L. Ed. 554.

88. Congress.—The constitution declares that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless, when in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it. No express power is given to congress to secure this invaluable right in the non-enumerated cases, or to suspend the writ in cases of rebellion or invasion. And ernment,[89] as was in fact done by the act of March 3, 1863.[90] As yet, the decisions have gone no further than to answer the second question in the terms of the constitution itself[91] except to declare that it is a judicial question.[92] This is not a restraint upon the judiciary.[93] The provisions of the federal constitution relating to the writ of habeas corpus has no relation to crimes committed without the jurisdiction of the United States against the laws of a foreign country.[94]

B. Effect of Suspension.—The suspension of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus does not suspend the writ itself. The writ issues as a matter of course; and, on the return made to it, the court decides whether the party applying is denied the right of proceeding any further with it.[95] Under the act of March 3, 1863, it will be granted where the prisoner is detained without trial an unnecessary long time.[96] Its suspension simply denies to one arrested the privilege of this writ in order to obtain his liberty, and does not authorize the arrest of anyone,[97] nor does it authorize the denial of a trial in a civil yet it would be difficult to say, since this great writ of liberty is usually provided for by the ordinary functions of legislation, and can be effectually provided for only in this way, that it ought not to be deemed, by necessary implication, within the scope of the legislative power of congress. Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 619, 10 L. Ed. 1060. See Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. Ed. 293.

In Fisher v. Baker, 203 U. S. 174, 51 L. Ed. 142, as the suspension had been revoked before appeal to the federal supreme court, the question was a mooted one and not decided.

89. Delegation of power to president.—"I do not believe it within the power of congress to give to ministerial officers a final adjudication of the right to liberty or to oust the courts from the duty of inquiry respecting both law and facts." United States v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 925, 48 L. Ed. 979, opinion of Mr. Justice Brewer.

90. Act of March 3, 1863.—The president was authorized by the act of March 3, 1863, to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, whenever, in his judgment, the public safety required; and he did, by proclamation, bearing date the 15th of September, 1863, reciting, among other things, the authority of this statute, suspend it. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 115, 18 L. Ed. 281.

91. Propriety of suspension.—Ex parte Royall, No. 1, 117 U. S. 241, 249, 29 L. Ed. 868; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 649, 28 L. Ed. 279; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

92. Judicial question.—In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 610, 34 L. Ed. 500.

93. "It is in restraint of executive and legislative powers, and no further affects the judiciary than to impose on them the necessity, if the privilege of habeas corpus is suspended by any authority, to decide whether the exigency demanded by the constitution exists to sanction the act." In re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 610, 34 L. Ed. 500.

94. In cases arising in foreign country.—Neely v. Henkel, No. 1, 180 U. S. 109, 122, 45 L. Ed. 448.

95. Effect of suspension.—Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 130, 18 L. Ed. 281.

96. Under act of March 3, 1863.—The second and third sections of the act of March 3, 1863, are explicit, plain and direct, and the meaning of congress cannot be mistaken. "The public safety demanded, if the president thought proper to arrest a suspected person, that he should not be required to give the cause of his detention on return to a writ of habeas corpus. But it was not contemplated that such person should be detained in custody beyond a certain fixed period, unless certain judicial proceedings, known to the common law, were commenced against him. The secretaries of state and war were directed to furnish to the judges of the courts of the United States, a list of the names of all parties, not prisoners of war, resident in their respective jurisdictions, who then were or afterwards should be held in custody by the authority of the president, and who were citizens of states in which the administration of the laws in the federal tribunals was unimpaired. After the list was furnished, if a grand jury of the district convened and adjourned, and did not indict or present one of the persons thus named, he was entitled to his discharge; and it was the duty of the judge of the court to order him brought before him to be discharged, if he desired it. The refusal or omission to furnish the list could not operate to the injury of any who was not indicted or presented by the grand jury; for, if twenty days had elapsed from the time of his arrest and the termination of the session of the grand jury, he was equally entitled to his discharge as if the list were furnished; and any credible person, on petition verified by affidavit, could obtain the judge's order for that purpose." Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 115, 18 L. Ed. 281.

97. Does not authorize arrests.—Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 115, 18 L. Ed. 281.

court.[98] The suspension in no respect affects the claims of private citizens against each other arising out of contracts between them, or the means of their enforcement. The constitution does not forbid, during such suspension or by reason of it, the institution of suits for such claims, or authorize congress to forbid it.[99]

XII. Compelling Obedience to Writ.

Sections 763, 766, U. S. Rev. Stat., provide, in substance, that any proceeding against a person imprisoned or confined or restrained of his liberty, in any state court, or by authority of any state, pending the proceedings or appeal in habeas corpus cases in the federal courts, and until final judgment therein, and after final judgment of discharge, shall be null and void.[1]

XIII. Costs and Fees.

Fees may be allowed by the court to the district attorney for services in defending habeas corpus cases, and should be accounted for by him as fees and emoluments of his office.[2]

XIV. Appeal.

See elsewhere.[3]

XV. Removal of Cause.

Writs of habeas corpus are not removable from a state court into a circuit court of the United States under the act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, § 2.[4]

HABENDUM.—See the title DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 257.
HABIT.—See note 5.

98. Does not authorize denial of civil trial.—A citizen not connected with the military service and resident in a state where the courts are open and in the proper exercise of their jurisdiction cannot, even when the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus is suspended, be tried, convicted, or sentenced otherwise than by the ordinary courts of law. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. Ed. 281.

99. Does not forbid private suits.—Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 649, 28 L. Ed. 279, dissenting opinion, Field, J.

1. Compelling obedience to writ.—Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 435, 50 L. Ed. 256.

The statute aims to entirely prevent action which shall interfere with the perfect freedom of the federal courts to inquire into the case and make such orders and render such judgment as they shall see fit. Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 436, 50 L. Ed. 256.

The object of Rev. Stat., §§ 763, 764, 765, "was—in cases where the applicant was held in custody under the authority of a state court or by the authority of a state—to stay the hands of such court or state, while the question as to whether his detention was in violation of the constitution, laws or treaties of the United States was being examined by the courts of the Union having jurisdiction in the premises. But the jurisdiction of the state courts in the cases specified is restrained only pending the proceedings in the courts of the United States, and until final judgment therein." In re Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 295, 35 L. Ed. 510.

2. Costs and fees.—Hilborn v. United States, 163 U. S. 342, 41 L. Ed. 183. See Green v. MacDougall, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328; Wimbish v. Jamison, 199 U. S. 599, 50 L. Ed. 327.

3. Appeal.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, pp. 381, 531.

4. Removal of cause.—Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 498, 29 L. Ed. 458.

5. Habit.—"When we speak of the habits of a person, we refer to his customary conduct, to pursue which he has acquired a tendency, from frequent repetition of the same acts. It would be incorrect to say that a man has a habit of anything from a single act. A habit of early rising, for example, could not be affirmed of one because he was once seen on the streets in the morning before the sun had risen; nor could intemperate habits be imputed to him because his appearance and actions on that occasion might indicate a night of excessive indulgence. The court did not, therefore, err in instructing the jury that if the habits of the insured, 'in the usual, ordinary, and everyday routine of his life, were temperate,' the representations made are not untrue, within the meaning of the policy, although he may have had an attack of delirium tremens from an exceptional overindulgence." Insurance Co. v. Foley, 105 U. S. 350, 354, 26 L. Ed. 1055. See, also, Northwestern Life Ins. Co. v. Muskegon Bank, 122 U. S. 501, 512, 30 L. Ed. 1100. And see, also, the titles EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1024; INSURANCE.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS.—See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 392, 520; SENTENCE AND PUNISHMENT.

HABITUAL INTEMPERANCE.—If one is addicted to the excessive use of alcoholic stimulants, he is habitually intemperate; and to use them often or daily is, according to the ordinarily acception of those words, to use them habitually.[1]

HACK.—As to whether negligence of driver of public hack is imputable to passenger riding therein, see the title NEGLIGENCE. As to cab and hack privileges at stations, see the title CARRIERS, vol. 3, p. 577.

HAIR.—See note 2.

HALF-BREED SCRIP.—See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

HALF PILOTAGE.—In the law of shipping, half pilotage is compensati for services which the pilot has put himself in readiness to perform by lab risk, and cost, and which he has actually offered to perform.[3]

HANDWRITING.

BY JOHN CALLAN BROOKS.

I. Definition, 673.

II. When Proof of Handwriting May Be Resorted to, 673.

III. Modes of Proof, 673.

A. By Nonexpert Witnesses, 673.
1. Who Have Seen Party Write, 673.
2. Who Have Personally Communicated with Him by Letter, 673.
3. Competency and Opinion of Witnesses, 673.
a. Preliminary Examination, 673.
b. Familiarity through Official Position, 673.
c. Familiarity with Attainments, 676.

B. By Comparison of Handwriting, 676.
1. Definition and Distinction, 676.
2. In Absence of Statute, 676.
a. In General, 676.
b. Ancient Writings, 677.
3. Under Statutes, 677.
4. Standard of Comparison, 677.
a. In General, 677.
b. Standard Must Be Proved to Be Genuine, 678.
c. Use of Enlarged Photographs of Signatures, 678.
d. Signatures Made on Occasion, 678.
5. Who May Make Comparison, 679.
a. In General, 679.
b. Court of Claims, 679.
6. Value of Evidence, 679.

C. By Expert Witnesses, 679.
1. General Statement, 679.
2. Who Are Experts, 679.
3. When Expert May Testify, 679.
a. Papers Produced at Trial, 679.
b. Knowledge through Official Position, 679.

IV. Proof of Identity by Comparison, 679.

1. Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Davey, 123 U. S. 739, 742, 31 L. Ed. 315. See, also, the title INSURANCE.

2. Hair.—See Authur v. Butterfield, 125 U. S. 70, 75, 31 L. Ed. 643. See, generally, the title REVENUE LAWS.

Hair seating.—See Arthur v. Butterfield, 125 U. S. 70, 73, 31 L. Ed. 643.

3. Steamship Company v. Portwardens, 6 Wall. 31, 34, 18 L. Ed. 749. See Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 211, 29 L. Ed. 158. And see, generally, the title PILOTS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ANCIENT DOCUMENTS, vol. 1, p. 313; BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE, vol. 3, p. 214; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 861; DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 431; EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, ante, p. 200; IDENTITY.

As to antiquity of deed affecting its admissibility, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 467. As to proof of instrument having subscribing witnesses, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 465. As to admissibility of deed to prove forgery, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 450. As to necessity for other confirmatory evidence than proof of handwriting to establish validity of claim, see, generally, the title PUBLIC LANDS. As to admissibility of entries in book of account, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 462. As to mode of proof where witnesses are not within the jurisdiction of the court, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 465. As to mode of proof where witnesses are otherwise incapable of being produced, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 465. As to presumption that witness would not have subscribed to a false attestation, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 465. As to mode of proof where there are no subscribing witnesses, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 467. As to foundation for introduction of evidence, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 464. As to power of attorney authenticated before a regidor being admissible in evidence, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 469. As to admissibility of copies of deeds into evidence, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 468.

I. Definition.

Handwriting is a physical matter and does not in itself represent any characteristics of the writer as to composition or general style, or as to his literary or legal attainments. It is to be seen and the characters recognized by the eye.[1]

II. When Proof of Handwriting May Be Resorted to.

See, generally, the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 431, and the specific references given at the head of this title.

III. Modes of Proof.

A. By Nonexpert Witnesses—1. WHO HAVE SEEN PARTY WRITE.—The man being ascertained, it is competent to prove that a signature in question is his by those who have seen him write and know his handwriting.[2]

Who Saw Party Write but Once.—If a person has seen another write but once, he can testify as to the genuineness of his signature.[3]

2. WHO HAVE PERSONALLY COMMUNICATED WITH HIM BY LETTER.—A person is competent to testify as to the genuineness of another's signature, if he has personally communicated with him by letter, although he has never seen him write at all.[4]

3. COMPETENCY AND OPINION OF WITNESSES—a. Preliminary Examination.—If the court on the preliminary examination of a witness can see that he has that degree of knowledge of the party's handwriting which will enable him to judge of its genuineness, he should be permitted to give to the jury his opinion on the subject.[5]

b. Familiarity through Official Position.—Witnesses, who, in the course of administration of the duties of an official position, have acquired a familiarity with a certain signature, although they had never seen the party write and had

1. Definition.—Throckmorton v. Holt, 180 U. S. 552, 569, 45 L. Ed. 663.

2. Who have seen party write.—Hardy v. Harbin, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 598, 604, 22 L. Ed. 378.

3. Who saw party write but once.—Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 322, 20 L. Ed. 417, cited in United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 429, 44 L. Ed. 529.

4. Personal communication by letter.—Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 322, 20 L. Ed. 417, cited in United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 429, 44 L. Ed. 529.

5. Preliminary examination of witness.— never corresponded with him, are competent to express an opinion on the subject of the genuineness of a signature purporting to have been made by that person.[6]

c. Familiarity with Attainments.—The court cannot permit witnesses to give an opinion as to the genuineness of handwriting founded partly upon knowledge and familiarity with the legal attainments, the style and composition of the individual whose handwriting was in controversy and as corroborative of their opinion from knowledge of handwriting alone.[7]

B. By Comparison of Handwriting—1. Definition and Distinction.—"All evidence of handwriting, * * * except where the witness sees the document written, is in its nature comparison. It is the belief which a witness entertains upon comparing the writing in question with an exemplar in his mind derived from some previous knowledge." There is an obvious distinction between comparison by juxtaposition of an admitted or established writing and the disputed writing, and comparison of the latter with an image in the mind's eye, but in either instance papers prepared for the purpose of having the comparison made are objectionable.[8]

2. In Absence of Statute—a. In General.—Rule at Common Law.—By the general rule of the common law, the genuineness of a signature cannot be determined by comparing it with other handwriting of the party, either by the court or a jury.[9] And evidence by comparison of hands is not admissible where the witness has had no previous knowledge of the handwriting, but is called upon to testify merely from a comparison of hands.[10]

Exceptions to Common-Law Rule.—The general rule of the common law, disallowing a comparison of handwriting as proof of signature has exceptions equally as well settled as the rule itself. One of those exceptions is, that if a paper admitted to be in the handwriting of the party or to have been subscribed by him, is in evidence for some other purpose in the cause, the signature or paper

Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 322, 20 L. Ed. 417, cited in United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 429, 44 L. Ed. 529.

6. Familiarity through official position.—Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 322, 20 L. Ed. 417, cited in United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 429, 44 L. Ed. 529.

7. Familiarity with attainments.—Throckmorton v. Holt, 180 U. S. 552, 570, 45 L. Ed. 663.

Evidence competent as rebuttal.—The main issue in this case was the proving of an alleged will of Judge Advocate General Holt; the witness, P. Tecumseh Sherman, had been called by the proponents of the will for the purpose of proving the signature of his mother, Mrs. Ellen B. E. Sherman, and had stated that in his opinion the signature on the paper was genuine. He did not testify as to the genuineness of the signature of his father, as Senator John Sherman, the brother of the General, had testified that in his opinion the signature was genuine. Subsequently, when the case was with them, the contestants called as a witness John B. Randolph, who, testified that he was familiar with the signature of General Sherman, and that in his opinion the signature was not that of General Sherman, because in the genuine signatures of the General, the upper and lower lines in the long quirl on the capital T meet. The proponents in rebuttal called as a witness P. Tecumseh Sherman, who had already been sworn in relation to the handwriting of his mother, and by him they offered to prove that this failure of the lines to meet in the letter T was by no means an unusual feature in the signature of his father, General Sherman, and that it was frequently, if not habitually, found therein, and also that the loops at the bottom of the S, as large as that in the signature to the paper, were also usually found. The court held that this evidence was competent as rebuttal, and should be received. Throckmorton v. Holt, 180 U. S. 552, 563, 45 L. Ed. 663.

8. Definition and distinction.—Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 307, 38 L. Ed. 170. See post, "Signatures Made on Occasion," III, B, 4, d.

9. Comparison not allowed at common law.—Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 273, 24 L. Ed. 346, cited in Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 194, 39 L. Ed. 667; Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 305, 38 L. Ed. 170, citing Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 320, 20 L. Ed. 417.

10. Necessity for previous knowledge of handwriting.—Strother v. Lucas, 6 Pet. 763, 767, 8 L. Ed. 573, cited in Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 321, 20 L. Ed. 417, and in Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 414, 31 L. Ed. 778; Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 305, 38 L. Ed. 170.

in question may be compared with it by the jury.[11]

General Rule in United States.—There has been a great diversity of opinion, in the different courts of this country, in relation to this species of evidence.[12] But the rule at common law is the general rule in this country although the courts of a few states have allowed it, and the legislature of a few others have authorized it.[13]

b. Ancient Writings.—There may be cases where, from the antiquity of the writing, it is impossible for any living witness to swear that he ever saw the party write; comparison of handwriting with documents known to be in his handwriting has been admitted. But these are extraordinary instances, arising from the necessity of the case.[14]

3. Under Statutes.—Law in England.—In England this rule of the common law has been abrogated by the legislature in 1854, so that in the courts there, at the present day, the witness can compare two writings with each other, in order to ascertain whether they were both written by the same person.[15] In the United States, Missouri has passed a statute in the very words of the English Act of 1854,[16] and evidence by comparison is also admissible in Oregon.[17]

4. Standard of Comparison—a. In General.—It is the result of the weight of authority that papers cannot be produced in a cause for the mere purpose of enabling the jury to institute a comparison of handwriting, said papers not being competent for any other purpose. But where other writings admitted or proved to be genuine are properly in evidence for other purposes, the handwriting of

11. Exceptions to common-law rule.—Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 274, 24 L. Ed. 346, cited in Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 194, 39 L. Ed. 667; Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 305, 38 L. Ed. 170.

12. Diversity of opinion in United States.—Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 320, 20 L. Ed. 417, cited in Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 305, 38 L. Ed. 170; Thompson v. Missouri, 171 U. S. 380, 388, 43 L. Ed. 204.

13. General rule at common law, general rule in United States.—Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 273, 24 L. Ed. 346, cited in Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 194, 39 L. Ed. 667. See post, "Under Statutes," III, B, 3.

14. Ancient writings.—Strother v. Lucas, 6 Pet. 763, 767, 8 L. Ed. 573. See, generally, the title ANCIENT DOCUMENTS, vol. 1, p. 314.

15. Law in England.—"By acts of Parliament it is now provided in England, as to all courts of judicature, as well criminal as others, * * * that comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine, shall be permitted to be made by the witnesses; and such writings and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same, may be submitted to the court and jury as evidence of the genuineness, or otherwise, of the writing in dispute." 17, 18 Vict. c. 125; 28, 29 Vict. c. 18. Under these statutes it has been decided that any writings of the genuineness of which the judge is satisfied upon the proof, may be used for the purposes of comparison, although they may not be admissible for any other purpose in the cause. And that the comparison may be made either by witnesses or without the intervention of any witnesses at all, by the jury themselves. But in the absence of statute, papers irrelevant to the issues on the record were held not receivable in evidence at the trial for the mere purpose of enabling the jury or witnesses to institute a comparison of hands. Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 305, 38 L. Ed. 170; Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 322, 20 L. Ed. 417.

16. Law in Missouri.—The general assembly of Missouri passed an act which became operative in July, 1895, providing that "comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine shall be permitted to be made by witnesses, and such writings and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same may be submitted to the court and the jury as evidence of the genuineness or otherwise of the writing in dispute." Laws Missouri, April 8, 1895, p. 284. This statute is in the very words of § 27 of the English Common Law Procedure Act of 1854, 17 and 18 Vict., c. 125, and by the 28 Vict., c. 18, §§ 1, 8, the provisions of that act were extended to criminal cases. Thompson v. Missouri, 171 U. S. 380, 381, 43 L. Ed. 204.

17. Law in Oregon.—An Oregon statute provides that evidence respecting the handwriting may also be given by a comparison made by a witness skilled in such matters, or the jury, with writings admitted or treated as genuine by the party against whom the evidence is offered. 1 Hill's Ann. Laws of Oregon, § 765. Holmes v. Goldsmith, 147 U. S. 150, 153, 37 L. Ed. 118.

such instruments may be compared by the jury with that of the instrument or signature in question, and its genuineness inferred from such comparison.[18]

b. Standard Must Be Proved to Be Genuine.—It is a rule that a paper used as a standard of comparison must either be proved to be genuine, or admitted to be in the handwriting of the party, or he must be estopped from denying it to be so.[19] But papers whose genuineness has never been challenged and were officially treated as authentic, can be admitted as standards of comparison in absence of any suggestion of proof of their nongenuineness.[20]

c. Use of Enlarged Photographs of Signatures.—Enlarged photographs of the signature of an official to an alleged grant, and a signature existing on one of the documents offered as a standard of comparison, may be admitted in evidence after proving by the photographer by whom the photographs were made the accuracy of the method pursued and the results obtained by him.[21]

d. Signature Made on Occasion.—"A signature made for the occasion post litem motam and for use at the trial ought not to be taken as a standard of genuineness. * * * It would, * * * open too wide a door for fraud, if a witness was allowed to corroborate his own testimony by a preparation of specimens of his writing for the purpose of comparison."[22]

18. Standard of comparison generally.—Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 413, 31 L. Ed. 778, cited in Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 194, 39 L. Ed. 667; Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 38 L. Ed. 170. See ante, "In Absence of Statute," III, B, 2.

19. Estopped from denying signature.—In that case the paper referred to as the standard of comparison was the claimant's power of attorney given to his attorney in fact, by virtue of which the latter presented his case to the court of claims. It was held that he was estopped from denying that the signature to the power was in his handwriting. Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 24 L. Ed. 346, cited in Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 414, 31 L. Ed. 778

Standard of comparison must be proved genuine.—"The plaintiff himself claims title under the very application of Rabago, the signature to which is claimed to be a proper standard of comparison of Rabago's handwriting. Is he not estopped from denying it to be Rabago's hand? His counsel say that at that period of time the application did not require the party's signature. Even if this be so, still it is proved that Rabago was at Saltillo at the time the application was made, and it purports to be signed by him, and not by any person for him; and, if the document is the real protocol of the application as presented, it is to be presumed, at least until the contrary is shown, that the signature which it bears is the real signature of Rabago. Whether the document is or is not the real protocol of the application as presented, was fairly left to the jury under the circumstances and evidence of the case—which, we may add, were so strong and convincing that the jury would not have been justified in finding in the negative. The evidence, indeed, was such as abundantly to satisfy the condition, that the paper referred to as a standard of comparison must be clearly proved to be genuine." Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 414, 31 L. Ed. 778.

Where note not admitted to be genuine.—A note for five dollars and fifty cents, signed by Jno. Hardy bearing date in 1831, and proved by some witnesses to have been signed by him, is taken as the standard. This note is not admitted to be genuine. The proof is in 1864 of a signature made in 1831. The competency of this evidence is quoted doubtfully. Hardy v. Harbin, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 698, 605, 22 L. Ed. 378.

20. Where genuineness of paper never been challenged.—The witness Tipton produced fifteen signatures of Governor Arnija and several of Secretary Vigil, written approximately about the time when the alleged grant in question purported to have been made, taken from among the signatures of these officers contained in the archives, and they were offered as standards of comparison with the signatures found on the grant in controversy. It is objected that the genuineness of these signatures had not been adequately proved, and therefore they should not have been admitted to be used as standards of comparison. They were correctly received. The whole testimony of the witness demonstrated that the signatures in question were upon documents which the witness produced from the archives, the appropriate place for them, and the genuineness of the papers to which they were annexed had never been challenged and were officially treated as authentic. This justified their admission at all events in the absence of any suggestion of proof as to their nongenuineness. United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 430, 44 L. Ed. 529.

21. Use of enlarged photographs of signatures.—United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 430, 44 L. Ed. 529.

22. Signature made for occasion.—Hick-

5. Who May Make Comparison—a. In General.—For a general discussion of comparison made by court, jury or witnesses, see ante, "In Absence of Statute," III, B, 2; "Under Statutes," III, B, 3.

b. Court of Claims.—The court of claims determines the facts as well as the law, and may make the comparison in like manner as the jury.[23]

6. Value of Evidence.—In relation to comparison of handwriting, i. e., where genuine signatures are put in evidence to enable the jury to judge by comparison, it is said: "Those having much experience in the trial of questions depending upon the genuineness of handwriting will not require to be reminded that there is nothing in the whole range of the law of evidence more unreliable or where courts and juries are more liable to be imposed upon."[24]

C. By Expert Witnesses—1. General Statement.—In this title will be discussed only expert testimony concerning matters relating exclusively to experts in handwriting, as distinguished from experts in general, for which see the title Expert and Opinion Evidence, ante, p. 200.

2. Who Are Experts.—An expert in regard to handwriting is one who has become familiar with the handwriting of the individual in regard to whom the question is raised.[25] Some men are called who claim to be skilled in the subject of genuine handwritings, and who have experience in comparison of handwritings.[26]

3. When Expert May Testify—a. Papers Produced at Trial.—"It is well settled that a witness who only knows a person's handwriting from seeing it in papers produced on trial, and proved or admitted to be his, will not be allowed, from such knowledge, to testify to that person's handwriting, unless the witness be an expert, and the writing in question is of such antiquity that witnesses acquainted with the person's handwriting cannot be had."[27]

b. Knowledge through Official Position.—The special qualification of a witness, resulting from his great familiarity, acquired during a long course of official action, with official records and the signatures of officials, qualifies him to testify as an expert as to the genuineness of a signature found upon an alleged grant.[28]

IV. Proof of Identity by Comparison.

See the title Identity.

HARBOR.—See Haven. And see, generally, the titles Collision, vol. 3, p. 884; Criminal Law, vol. 5, pp. 78, 80; Navigable Waters; Ships and Shipping; Waters and Watercourses; Wharves and Wharfingers.

HARBOR COMMISSIONERS.—See the title Ships and Shipping.

HARBOUR.—See Conceal, vol. 3, p. 1003.

HARMLESS ERROR.—See, generally, the title Appeal and Error, vol. 2, p. 331.

HARTER ACT.—See the titles Collision, vol. 3, p. 937; Ships and Shipping.

ory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 306, 38 L. Ed. 170. See, ante, "Definition and Distinction," III, B, 1.

23. Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 24 L. Ed. 346, cited in Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 194, 39 L. Ed. 667. See, generally, the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 861.

24. Value of evidence.—Hardy v. Harbin, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 598, 605, 22 L. Ed. 378.

25. Who are experts generally.—Throckmorton v. Holt, 180 U. S. 552, 569, 45 L. Ed. 663.

26. Who are experts in comparison.—Hardy v. Harbin, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 598, 605, 22 L. Ed. 378.

27. Paper produced at trial.—Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 413, 31 L. Ed. 778.

28. Knowledge through official position.—United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 429, 44 L. Ed. 529.

HAT.—See note 1.

HATH.—See note 2.

HAVEN.—See note 3.

HAVING.—As to continuing guaranty, see the title GUARANTY, ante, p. 580.

HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.—As to appellate jurisdiction over courts of Hawaii, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 527. As to power of judges of Hawaii at chambers, see the title CHAMBERS AND VACATION, vol. 3, p. 666. See, also, the title GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570.

HAWKERS AND PEDDLERS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

As to requisites and sufficiency of a certiorari to remove proceedings against huckstering, see the title CERTIORARI, vol. 3, p. 664. As to right to engage in trade in other states, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 475. As to the right to tax peddlers from another state, see the title INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE.

Definition of Hawker.—The leading primary idea of a hawker and peddler is that of an itinerant or traveling trader, who carries goods about in order to sell them, and who actually sells them to purchasers, in contradistinction to a trader who has goods for sale and sells them in a fixed place of business. By a hawker is generally understood one who not only carries goods for sale, but seeks for purchasers, either by outcry, which some lexicographers conceive as intimated by the derivation of the word, or by attracting notice and attention to them as goods for sale, by an actual exhibition or exposure of them, by placards or labels, or by a conventional signal, like the sound of a horn for the sale of fish.[4]

1. Hat braids.—See Arthur v. Zimmerman, 96 U. S. 124, 125, 24 L. Ed. 770. See, also, the title REVENUE LAWS.

Hat trimmings.—See Cadwalader v. Wanamaker, 149 U. S. 532, 540, 37 L. Ed. 837. See, also, the title REVENUE LAWS.

2. Hath.—A statute provided "that no insurance shall be made on a life or lives wherein the assured shall have no interest, or by way of gaming or wagering," and that in all cases where the insured hath interest in such life, etc., no greater sum shall be recovered than the amount or value of the interest. The word hath was construed as necessarily referring to the time of effecting the insurance, and not to the time of the death; that being the only construction which would subserve the object of the statute to discourage wagering, render the contract uniform and certain, and preserve a fixed relation between the premiums and the amount insured, as required by the principles of life assurance. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457, 462, 24 L. Ed. 251.

3. Haven.—In Lowndes v. Huntington, 153 U. S. 1, 23, 38 L. Ed. 615, a case involving a grant of certain lands with appurtenant havens, harbors, creeks, etc., the court said: "While not perhaps of much significance, it may be noticed that in the first charter, that from Governor Nicolls, the description of the appurtenances is 'havens, harbors, creeks,' etc. The word haven has perhaps a broader signification than 'harbor.' At any rate, the use of both words in the same grant suggests that all bodies of water which might come within the reach of either term were intended to be included in the grant. In Webster the first definition given to the word haven is 'a bay, recess, or inlet of the sea, or the mouth of a river, which affords good anchorage and a safe station for ships.' While this bay might not be a place of safety against all storms coming from any direction, it was protected on three sides, and to that extent was 'a safe station for ships.'"

4. Definition of hawker.—Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 309, 39 L. Ed. 430.

In Missouri.—Where one solicited the sale of sewing machines by going from one place to another, he was held to be a peddler under the Missouri statute taxing peddlers. Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 309, 39 L. Ed. 430. See, also, Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. Ed. 754.

Distinction between "peddlers" and "commercial brokers."—A distinction was recognized in the United States Internal Revenue Act of 1862, in which "peddlers" were distinguished from "commercial brokers" and were subjected to a different license tax. Among "commercial brokers" was classed "any person or firm, except one holding a license as wholesale dealer or banker, whose business it is, as the agent of others, to purchase or sell goods, or seek orders therefor, in original

HEADNOTE.—The headnote of a case is not the work of the court, nor does it state its decision—though a different rule, it is true, is prescribed by statute in some states. It is simply the work of the reporter, gives his understanding of the decision, and is prepared for the convenience of the profession in the examination of the reports.[1]

HEAD OF CORPORATION.—See note 2.

HEAD OF DEPARTMENT.—See the titles PUBLIC OFFICERS; UNITED STATES. See note 3.

HEAD OF FAMILY.—See note 4.

HEALTH.

BY WALTER CARRINGTON.

I. Powers in Relation to the Public Health, 682.
- A. Powers of the Federal Government, 682.
- B. Powers of the States, 682.
  1. In General, 682.
  2. Power to Pass Laws to Prevent the Spread of Contagious Diseases, 683.
     a. In General, 683.
     b. Quarantine Laws, 683.
  3. Delegation of Power, 683.
- C. Powers of Municipal Corporations, 683.
- D. Powers of Boards of Health, 684.
  1. Power to Establish Regulations for the Preservation of Health, 684.
     a. Quarantine Regulations, 684.
     b. Compulsory Vaccination, 684.
  2. Powers as to Expenditures, 685.

II. Public Policy or Expediency Not Ground for Abrogating Health Regulations, 685.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 316; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1; or unbroken packages or produce." Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 314, 39 L. Ed. 430. See, generally, the title REVENUE LAWS.

1. United States v. Detroit Lumber Co., 200 U. S. 321, 337, 50 L. Ed. 499. See, also, the title COPYRIGHT, vol. 4, p. 602.

2. Head of a corporation.—Where the charter of a city declares that the president of the board of trustees shall be the general executive officer of the city government and the general executive head of the city, he is the head of the corporation within the meaning of a process act, enacting that in a suit against a corporation the summon may be served on "the president or other head of the corporation." City of Sacremento v. Fowle, 21 Wall. 119, 122, 22 L. Ed. 592. See, generally, the title SUMMONS AND PROCESS.

3. Head of a department.—In United States v. Mouat, 124 U. S. 303, 307, 31 L. Ed. 463, the court says: "What is necessary to constitute a person an officer of the United States, in any of the various branches of its service, has been very fully considered by this court in United States v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508, 25 L. Ed. 482. In that case, it was distinctly pointed out that, under the constitution of the United States, all its officers were appointed by the president, by and with the consent of the senate, or by a court of law, or the head of a department; and the heads of the departments were defined in that opinion to be what are now called the members of the cabinet. Unless a person in the service of the government, therefore, holds his place by virtue of an appointment by the president, or of one of the courts of justice or heads of departments authorized by law to make such an appointment, he is not, strictly speaking, an officer of the United States."

The commissioner of pensions is not the head of a department, within the meaning of § 2, art. 2, of the constitution, prescribing by whom officers of the United States shall be appointed. United States v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508, 25 L. Ed. 482.

4. Head of a family.—A grandmother, living with her grandchildren, was the head of a Creek family, within the mean-

DRAINS AND SEWERS, vol. 5, p. 492; DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746; EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, ante, p. 200; GAS, ante, p. 545; INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE; INTOXICATING LIQUORS; NUISANCES; PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS; POLICE POWER; QUARANTINE; TREATIES.

As to quarantine, see the titles ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 325, et seq.; QUARANTINE. As to review of state court decision in reference to health laws, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 691. As to whether requirement of permission from a board of health to sell milk is a valid regulation, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 370. As to the powers of the states to legislate for the purpose of protecting the people against fraud and deception in the sale of food products, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 376. As to jurisdiction of federal courts of suits filed by one state against another to enjoin enforcement of health laws, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, pp. 1010, 1012. As to taking private property to be used in the preservation of public health, see the title EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746. As to whether the protection of health is a reasonable ground for interfering with the freedom of contract, by determining the hours of labor, see the titles IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS; LABOR. As to court taking judicial notice of the effect of garbage on public health, see the title JUDICIAL NOTICE.

I. Powers in Relation to the Public Health.

A. Powers of the Federal Government.—See the titles ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 324; INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE; QUARANTINE.

B. Powers of the States—1. IN GENERAL.—The police power of a state embraces such reasonable regulations, established directly by legislative enactment, as will protect the public health;[1] and in pursuance of that object persons and property may be subjected to all kinds of restraints and burdens.[2] But this power is subject to the restriction that no rule prescribed by a state shall contravene the constitution of the United States or infringe any right granted or secured by that instrument,[3] or interfere with the enjoyment of individual rights ing of the treaty with the Creek Indians in 1832, providing that every head of a family was entitled to select a certain amount of land. Ladiga v. Roland, 2 How. 581, 11 L. Ed. 387.

1. Police power embraces health regulations.—Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 25, 49 L. Ed. 643; Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 472, 24 L. Ed. 527; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 237, 49 L. Ed. 169; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 558, 46 L. Ed. 679.

The states possess the power to prescribe such regulations as may be reasonable, necessary and appropriate, for the protection of the public health. California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 318, 50 L. Ed. 204.

The police power extends to the protection of the health of all persons within the state. Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 471, 24 L. Ed. 527.

2. Persons and property subject to restraints and burdens.—California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 318, 50 L. Ed. 204; Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 471, 24 L. Ed. 527; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 26, 49 L. Ed. 643.

Property owners not entitled to compensation for pecuniary losses incident to health regulations.—The power which the states have of prohibiting such use by individuals of their property as will be prejudicial to the health, of the public, is not —and, consistently with the existence and safety of organized society, cannot be— burdened with the condition that the state must compensate such individual owners for pecuniary losses they may sustain, by reason of their not being permitted, by a noxious use of their property, to inflict injury upon the community. California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 324, 50 L. Ed. 204; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 669, 31 L. Ed. 205.

3. Power of state must be exercised within constitutional limits.—Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 25, 49 L. Ed. 643; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 318, 50 L. Ed. 204.

If a statute purporting to have been enacted to protect the public health is, beyond all question, a plain, palpable invasion of rights secured by the fundamental law, it is the duty of the courts to so adjudge, and thereby give effect to the constitution. Jacobson v.

beyond the necessities of the case.[4] Thus it is not permissible for a state, by its health regulations, to deny to persons within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws,[5] or to interfere with transportation into or through the state, beyond what is absolutely necessary for its self-protection.[6] But though a state health law affects interstate or foreign commerce, if such effect is incidental to the legitimate object of the law, and essential to render it efficacious, the law is not thereby rendered invalid.[7]

2. Power to Pass Laws to Prevent the Spread of Contagious Diseases —a. In General.—A state has the right to pass laws which, according to the common belief of the people, are adapted to prevent the spread of contagious diseases.[8]

b. Quarantine Laws.—See the title Animals, vol. 1, p. 325, et seq.; Interstate and Foreign Commerce; Quarantine.

3. Delegation of Power.—A state may invest local bodies called into existence for purposes of local administration with authority in some appropriate way to safeguard the public health. The mode or manner in which these results are to be accomplished is within the discretion of the state.[9] Thus a state may authorize the board of health of a municipality, when the public health or safety demands it, to require and enforce the vaccination of the inhabitants thereof.[10] This delegation of authority is subject, of course, so far as federal power is concerned, to the condition that no regulation adopted by a local governmental agency acting under the sanction of state legislation, shall contravene the constitution of the United States or infringe any right granted or secured by that instrument.[11]

C. Powers of Municipal Corporations.—By constitutional or statutory en-

Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 31, 49 L. Ed. 643.

4. Individual rights must not be unnecessarily interfered with.—California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 318, 50 L. Ed. 204.

5. Denial of equal protection of laws forbidden.—If, by their necessary operation, the health regulations of a state amount to a denial to persons within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws, they are unconstitutional and void. Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 237, 49 L. Ed. 169; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 558, 46 L. Ed. 679.

6. Effect of commerce clause of federal constitution.—Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 472, 24 L. Ed. 527.

7. Compagnie Francaise v. Board of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 391, 46 L. Ed. 1209.

A state may, by its health laws, incidentally regulate the subjects of legitimate commerce, until congress has acted under the authority conferred upon it by the constitution, even though interstate and foreign commerce is affected. Compagnie v. Francaise v. Board of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 391, 46 L. Ed. 1209. See the title INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE.

8. Prevention of spread of contageous diseases.—Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 35, 49 L. Ed. 643.

9. Delegation of power to local bodies.—Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 25, 49 L. Ed. 643; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 50 L. Ed. 204.

10. Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. Ed. 643. See post, "Compulsory Vaccination," I, D, 1, b.

11. Delegated power must be exercised within constitutional bounds.—Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 25, 49 L. Ed. 643.

A local enactment or regulation, even if based on the acknowledged police powers of a state, must always yield in case of conflict with the exercise by the general government of any power it possesses under the constitution, or with any right which that instrument gives or secures. Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 25, 49 L. Ed. 643.

Constitutionality of Massachusetts compulsory vaccination law upheld.—The revised laws of Massachusetts, ch. 75, § 137, provided that the board of health of a city or town, if in its opinion it was necessary for the public health or safety, should require and enforce the vaccination and revaccination of all of the inhabitants thereof, and that if one who was over twenty-one years of age and not under guardianship should refuse or neglect to comply with such requirement, he should forfeit five dollars. By § 139 of the statute, an exception was made in favor of children who should present a certificate signed by a registered physician that they were unfit subjects for vaccination. In pursuance of this statute the board of health of the city of Cambridge, in which smallpox was prevalent, adopted a regulation requiring all the inhabitants of the city who had not been successfully vaccinated within five years, to be vacciactments, municipal corporations are generally empowered to make regulations to promote and preserve the public health. Every intendment is to be made in favor of the lawfulness of the exercise of this power. It is not the province of the courts, except in clear cases, to interfere with its exercise.[12] But notwithstanding this general rule, it is now thoroughly well settled by decisions of the supreme court of the United States that municipal by-laws and ordinances, undertaking to regulate useful business enterprises, are subject to investigation in the courts with a view to determine whether the law or ordinance is a lawful exercise of the police power, or whether under the guise of enforcing police regulations there has been an unwarranted and arbitrary interference with the constitutional rights to carry on a lawful business, to make contracts, or to use and enjoy property.[13]

D. Powers of Boards of Health—1. POWER TO ESTABLISH REGULATIONS FOR THE PRESERVATION OF HEALTH—a. Quarantine Regulations.—This subject is fully treated under the title QUARANTINE.

b. Compulsory Vaccination.—The authority to compel vaccination may be vested in a board of health; such authority to be exercised when in their opinion it is necessary for the public health.[14] nated, or revaccinated. It was held that the statute was a health law enacted in a reasonable and proper exercise of the police power, and was not violative of the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution, nor otherwise unconstitutional and inoperative, in its application to an inhabitant of Cambridge who was an adult not under guardianship, and who did not offer to prove that, by reason of his then condition, he was not a fit subject for vaccination at the time he was informed of the requirement of the regulation adopted by the board of health. Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. Ed. 643.

12. Powers of municipal corporations.—California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 319, 50 L. Ed. 204; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 235, 49 L. Ed. 169.

Powers of board of supervisors of San Francisco.—In the constitutional and statutory provisions of the state of California is found full authority for the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco, to make and enforce, within that city and county, all such reasonable sanitary and other regulations as are not in conflict with any general statute or with the constitution, and which have for their object the preservation of the public health, by whatever cause endangered; and this broad power carries with it the power, by contract and ordinance, to guard the public health in all reasonable ways. California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 316, 50 L. Ed. 204.

In pursuance of this power the board of supervisors by ordinance granted to a certain person, his associates and assigns, the sole and exclusive right and privilege, for a term of fifty years, to cremate and destroy within the city and county of San Francisco, by crematories or by a process of reduction, house refuse, dirt, ashes, cinders, sludge, crockery, tins, bones and other like matter, dead animals (not provided for by contract or franchise heretofore granted), putrid vegetable matter fish, flesh and food condemned by the board of health of the city and county as unfit for human food—the grantees, their associates and assigns, having the right to charge and collect therefor not exceeding the sum of twenty cents per load. And it was further provided that all such substances should be delivered at and to the crematory erected by the persons to whom this exclusive right was granted, and there, at the expense of the person or corporation conveying the same, be cremated or destroyed, or subjected to such disposition and treatment as would secure and effect a complete combustion of all gases and odors arising therefrom. It was held that this was a valid exercise of the power delegated to the board of supervisors. California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 50 L. Ed. 204.

13. Restrictions upon exercise of police power by municipalities.—Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 236, 49 L. Ed. 169. See the titles EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746; IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS; ORDINANCES; POLICE POWER.

14. Authority to compel vaccination.—Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 27, 49 L. Ed. 643.

At a time when smallpox was prevalent to some extent in the city of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and was increasing, the board of health of that city in pursuance of legislative authority adopted a regulation requiring all the inhabitants of the city who had not been successfully vaccinated within five years, to be vaccinated or revaccinated. It was held that it could not be adjudged that such regulation was arbitrary, and not necessary in order to protect the public health and secure the

2. Powers as to Expenditures.—Under the act of congress establishing the national board of health and subsequent acts making appropriations for and relating to expenditures by the board, the board had no authority to incur any liability upon the part of the government for salaries or other expenses in excess of the amounts appropriated by congress for such purposes.[15]

II. Public Policy or Expediency Not Ground for Abrogating Health Regulations.

If a regulation, enacted by competent public authority avowedly for the protection of the public health, has a real, substantial relation to that object, the courts will not strike it down upon grounds merely of public policy or expediency.[16]

Hearing.—See the titles Appeal and Error, vol. 2, p. 352; Equity, vol. 5, p. 875. And see Final, ante, p. 282. "In Bouvier's Law Dictionary (1 Bouv., p. 581) 'Hearing' is thus defined: 'The examination of a prisoner charged with a crime or misdemeanor and of the witnesses for the accused.' In 9th American and English Encyclopædia of Law, p. 324, it is said to be 'the preliminary examination of a prisoner charged with a crime and of witnesses for the prosecution and defense.' "[1] public safety. Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 27, 28, 49 L. Ed. 643. See ante, "Delegation of Power," I, B, 3.

15. National board of health had no authority to incur liabilities in excess of appropriations.—Dunwoody v. United States, 143 U. S. 578, 586, 36 L. Ed. 269, distinguishing United States v. Langston, 118 U. S. 389, 30 L. Ed. 164.

16. Public policy or expediency not ground for abrogating health regulations.—California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 318, 50 L. Ed. 204.

1. Hearing.—United States v. Patterson, 150 U. S. 65, 68, 37 L. Ed. 999.

Section 847 of the Revised Statutes provides for the hearing and deciding on criminal charges a United States commissioner should be entitled to a certain per diem compensation. It was held that the decision upon a motion for bail and the sufficiency thereof fell within this provision, and in regard to a motion for a continuance, the court said: "With respect to motions for continuance, the granting or refusal of them is unquestionably a necessary incident to, and a part of, the hearing and determining of criminal charges." United States v. Jones, 134 U. S. 483, 487, 33 L. Ed. 1007. But in United States v. Patterson, 150 U. S. 65, 37 L. Ed. 999, it was held that hearing charges made by complaining witnesses against persons charged with violations of the laws of the United States and holding examinations of such complaining witnesses and other witnesses, was not within the statute. The court said: "The question presented in the Jones case was whether the hearing and deciding of motions with respect to bail, and for continuances in cases pending before the commissioner, was a hearing and deciding on criminal charges within the scope of that clause, and it was held that it was. But in that case the criminal charges had been made; that is, formal written complaints had been filed, warrants issued, the defendants arrested, and cases were pending, and the ruling was that any judicial action in such cases was hearing and deciding on criminal charges, and the general language of classification used in the opinion must be taken in connection with the facts as they existed and the question presented." See, generally, the title UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS.

Removal of causes.—See, also, the title REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

In Vannevar v. Bryant, 21 Wall. 41, 43, 22 L. Ed. 476, a case involving the United States statute authorizing removal of causes from state to federal courts in certain cases, the court said: "The act authorizes the petition for removal to be filed 'at any time before the final hearing or trial of the suit.' The hearing or trial, here referred to, is the examination of the facts in issue. Hearing applies to suits in chancery and trial to actions at law."

HEARSAY EVIDENCE.

BY WALTER CARRINGTON.

I. Scope of Title, 686.

II. Definition, 686.

III. Admissibility, 687.

A. In General, 687.

1. General Rule, 687.

a. Rule Stated, 687.

b. Reasons for Rule, 687.

2. Exceptions to Rule, 687.

B. Testimony of a Witness in a Former Proceeding, 688.

1. In a Civil Proceeding, 688.

2. In a Criminal Proceeding, 688.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1; DEPOSITIONS, vol. 5, p. 321; DYING DECLARATIONS, vol. 5, p. 686; EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004; PAROL EVIDENCE; PEDIGREE; PRESCRIPTION; REFERENCE; USAGES AND CUSTOMS; WITNESSES.

As to the admissibility of declarations and admissions, see the title DECLARATIONS AND ADMISSIONS, vol. 5, p. 214. As to the admissibility of documentary evidence, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 431. As to the admissibility of evidence on the ground that it constitutes part of the res gestæ, see the title RES GESTÆ. As to when the admission of hearsay evidence is ground for reversal, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 333.

I. Scope of Title.

As questions relating to the admissibility in evidence of declarations and admissions, and of exceptions to the general rule excluding hearsay evidence, have been fully treated under other titles in this work,[1] and as such treatment almost completely covers the question of the admissibility of hearsay evidence, this title will be confined to the statement of the general rule as to the admissibility of such evidence, with illustrations thereof, and the question of the admissibility of evidence given in a former proceeding.

II. Definition.

Hearsay evidence, in its legal sense, denotes that kind of evidence which does not derive its value solely from the credit to be given to the witness himself, but rests, also, in part, on the veracity and competency of some other person.[2]

1. As to the admissibility of oral declarations and admissions, see the title DECLARATIONS AND ADMISSIONS, vol. 5, p. 214, and the table of cross references there given. As to the admissibility of written declarations and admissions, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 431, and the table of cross references there given. As to the admissibility of dying declarations, see the title DYING DECLARATIONS, vol. 5, p. 686. As to the admissibility of evidence on the ground that it constitutes a part of the res gestæ, see the title RES GESTÆ, and the table of cross references there given. As to the admissibility of declarations to impeach the credibility of witnesses, see the title WITNESSES. As to the admissibility of hearsay evidence to prove pedigree, see the title PEDIGREE. As to the admissibility of hearsay evidence to prove prescription, see the title PRESCRIPTION. As to the admissibility of hearsay evidence to prove a usage or custom, see the title USAGES AND CUSTOMS.

2. Hearsay evidence defined.—Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 581, 28 L. Ed. 262.

Testimony of veternary surgeons as to cattle disease not hearsay.—Where veternary surgeons who, while in the employ of United States government, in-

III. Admissibility.

A. In General—1. General Rule—a. Rule Stated.—As a general rule, subject to certain well-established exceptions, hearsay evidence is not admissible.[3] It is not admissible to prove a specific fact, merely because the eye-witnesses to that fact are dead.[4]

b. Reasons for Rule.—The exclusion of hearsay evidence stands upon the general consideration, that it is not upon oath; that the party affected by it has no opportunity of cross-examination; that it often supposes better evidence behind; that it is peculiarly liable to be obtained by fraudulent contrivances; and above all, that it is exceedingly infirm, unsatisfactory and intrinsically weak in its very nature and character.[5]

2. Exceptions to Rule.—Certain exceptions to the rule excluding hearsay evidence have been allowed, which perhaps may be as old as the rule itself.[6] But these exceptions stand upon peculiar grounds.[7] In certain exceptional cases vestigated a certain disease to which cattle were subject, testified as experts from the knowledge thus gained as to the nature and symptoms of the disease, and to the fact that there were certain districts infected with it, it was held that such evidence was not hearsay, since it was a part of their official duty to obtain such knowledge, and learn where such disease originated or was prevalent, and how it became disseminated throughout the country. Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 468, 480, 41 L. Ed. 230.

3. Hearsay evidence not generally admissible.—Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 581, 28 L. Ed. 262; Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426, 439, 23 L. Ed. 286; Wilson v. Simpson, 9 How. 109, 121, 13 L. Ed. 66; United States v. Kingsley, 12 Pet. 476, 483, 9 L. Ed. 1163; Albertson v. Robeson, 1 Dall. 9, 1 L. Ed. 14.

As a general rule hearsay evidence is inadmissible to establish any specific fact which in its nature is capable of being proved by the testimony of a person who speaks from his own knowledge. Clement v. Packer, 125 U. S. 309, 321, 31 L. Ed. 721; Queen v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch 290, 3 L. Ed. 348; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 581, 28 L. Ed. 262.

The testimony of a witness on a subject, which it does not appear that he himself personally knew anything about, is not admissible in evidence. Patrick v. Graham, 132 U. S. 627, 631, 33 L. Ed. 460.

Affidavits resting on hearsay testimony are not competent evidence. Leadville Coal Co. v. McCreary, 141 U. S. 475, 478, 35 L. Ed. 824.

Questions to which hearsay testimony responsive, properly excluded.—A question to which an answer detailing the hearsay statements of others, whether verbal or in writing, made at any time or place, would have been responsive, was held to have been properly excluded. Xenia Bank v. Stewart, 114 U. S. 224, 232, 29 L. Ed. 101.

Attorney general's report containing statements purporting to have been made by defendants.—In a murder trial a report of one of the defendant's attorneys, made while such attorney was attorney general of the state, and containing statements purporting to have been made by the defendants, and connecting them with the killing, was admitted in evidence. It was held that the evidence was hearsay, and its admission error. Cook v. United States, 138 U. S. 157, 184, 34 L. Ed. 906.

Claims to freedom in Maryland are not exempt from the general rule that hearsay evidence is inadmissible. Queen v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch 290, 3 L. Ed. 348.

Evidence by hearsay and general reputation is not admissible to establish the freedom of the petitioner's ancestor, and thence to deduce his or her own. Davis v. Wood, 1 Wheat. 6, 4 L. Ed. 22.

4. Death of eyewitnesses not ground for admitting hearsay.—Queen v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch 290, 296, 3 L. Ed. 348.

5. Reasons for rule excluding hearsay.—Ellicott v. Pearl, 10 Pet. 412, 436, 9 L. Ed. 475.

"The testimony of living witnesses personally cognizant of the facts of which they speak, given under the sanction of an oath in open court, where they may be subjected to cross-examination, affords the greatest security for truth." Chaffee & Co. v. United States, 18 Wall. 516, 541, 21 L. Ed. 908.

That hearsay testimony supposes some better testimony which might be adduced in the particular case, is not the sole ground of its exclusion. "Its intrinsic weakness, its incompetency to satisfy the mind of the existence of the fact, and the frauds which might be practised under its cover, combine to support the rule that hearsay evidence is totally inadmissible." Clement v. Packer, 125 U. S. 309, 321, 31 L. Ed. 721; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 581, 28 L. Ed 262; Queen v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch 290, 295, 3 L. Ed. 348.

6. Exceptions to rule excluding hearsay old as rule itself.—Ellicott v. Pearl, 10 Pet. 412, 434, 9 L. Ed. 475; Queen v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch 290, 296, 3 L. Ed. 348; Clement v. Packer, 125 U. S. 309, 321, 31 L. Ed. 721.

7. Exceptions stand on peculiar grounds.—Ellicott v. Pearl, 10 Pet. 412, 434, 9 L. Ed. 475.

the declarations and admissions of a party to the suit or of one in privity with him, or in some cases even those of a stranger to the suit are admissible. Cases of pedigree, of prescription, of custom, and of boundary, are exceptions to the rule excluding hearsay. There are also matters of general and public history which may be received without that full proof which is necessary for the establishment of a private fact. These exceptions to the general rule are fully treated under other titles in this work.[8]

B. Testimony of a Witness in a Former Proceeding—1. In a Civil Proceeding.—Where the basis of an action is a judgment in a former action, the testimony of a witness in the former action, who has since died, is admissible for the purpose of ascertaining the subject matter of the controversy in the former action and fixing the scope of the thing adjudged.[9] So a deposition of a witness since deceased taken in a former suit in which both the plaintiff and defendant were parties, and the issues were the same, is admissible in evidence, although one who was a coplaintiff in the former suit is not a party to the suit at bar.[10] But where the parties in the former suit were not the same as those in the latter, the testimony of a witness thereat is not admissible.[11] In an action for damages to a vessel, testimony given in another suit by one of the part owners thereof, as to the extent and value of the repairs, is not admissible.[12] The testimony of a witness on a former trial to be admissible must of course be pertinent and material to the issue between the parties.[13]

2. In a Criminal Proceeding.—Under the 6th amendment of the constitution of the United States, which provides that, in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall be entitled to be confronted with the witnesses against him, the general rule is that, in such a prosecution, the testimony of a witness taken before the examining magistrate or at a former trial is not admissible against the accused.[14] But if a witness is absent by the wrongful procurement of the

8. See ante, "Scope of Title," I.

What is generally essential to authorize admission of hearsay evidence.—To authorize the admission of hearsay evidence (except in cases of pedigree), three things must generally concur: First, the fact, to which the reputation or tradition applies, must be of a public nature; second, if he reputation or tradition relate to the exercise of a right or privilege, it must be supported by acts of enjoyment or privilege, within the period of living memory; third, it must not be reputation or traditionary declarations to a particular fact. Ellicott v. Pearl, 10 Pet. 412, 437, 9 L. Ed. 475.

9. Testimony of a witness since deceased.—Washington Gas Light Co. v. District of Columbia, 161 U. S. 316, 328, 40 L. Ed. 712.

10. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Howard, 13 How. 307, 335, 14 L. Ed. 157.

11. Testimony admissible only where parties to two suits are the same.—Beardman v. Reed, 6 Pet. 328, 341, 8 L. Ed. 415.

Where no attempt is made to account for the absence of one who was a witness at the trial of another cause, to which the plaintiff in the case being tried was not a party, evidence by one present at the former trial, as to what such witness testified to, is not admissible. Fresh v. Gilson, 16 Pet. 327, 331, 10 L. Ed. 982.

12. Testimony of part owner of injured vessel, as to repairs, not admissible.—The New Orleans, 106 U. S. 13, 16, 27 L. Ed. 96.

Such statements could at best bind only such part owner himself and not his coowners, who were merely tenants in common with him and not partners. The New Orleans, 106 U. S. 13, 16, 27 L. Ed. 96.

13. Testimony must be pertinent and material to the issue.—Beardman v. Reed, 6 Pet. 328, 341, 8 L. Ed. 415.

In ejectment, a witness was called to prove that a person who was dead had, at a former trial between the plaintiffs and some of the defendants, to recover the land in controversy, testified that an anciently marked corner tree was found by him, at a particular point, of a different kind of timber from that called for in a patent to one Young; no part of the survey of Young was involved in the controversy in this suit; and with several other surveys it was only laid down by the surveyor, as, by showing certain connections, it might conduce to identify the land claimed by the plaintiffs. It was held that as the evidence was not given between the same parties, this testimony could only be received as hearsay; and being immaterial and not tending to elucidate any questions before the jury, was not admissible. Beardman v. Reed, 6 Pet. 328, 8 L. Ed. 415.

14. As a general rule testimony before examining magistrate or at former trial accused, his testimony on a former trial for the same offense under another indictment is admissible.[15] So upon the second trial of a person accused of crime, the testimony of a witness at the first trial who has since died is admissible if the defendant was present at the first trial and the witness was fully examined and cross-examined.[16] The testimony of a witness in a criminal proceeding in a military court is not admissible as independent or original evidence to establish a fact in another case, if the witness is still alive and competent to testify.[17] is not admissible.—Motes v. United States, 178 U. S. 458, 471, 44 L. Ed. 1150; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 158, 25 L. Ed. 244.

The primary object of this provision was to prevent depositions or ex parte affidavits, such as were sometimes admitted in civil cases, being used against the prisoner in lieu of a personal examination and cross-examination of the witness in which the accused has an opportunity, not only of testing the recollection and sifting the conscience of the witness, but of compelling him to stand face to face with the jury in order that they may look at him, and judge by his demeanor upon the stand and the manner in which he gives his testimony whether he is worthy of belief. Mattox v. United States, 156 U. S. 237, 242, 39 L. Ed. 409.

Absence of witness due to negligence of prosecution.—The deposition or statement of an absent witness taken at the examining trial cannot be read at the final trial when it does not appear that the witness was absent by the suggestion, connivance or procurement of the accused, but does appear that his absence was due to the negligence of the prosecution. Motes v. United States, 178 U. S. 458, 474, 44 L. Ed. 1150.

15. Testimony of witness absent by wrongful procurement of accused admissible.—Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 158, 25 L. Ed. 244. In delivering the opinion of the court in this case, Waite, C. J., said: "The constitution does not guarantee an accused person against the legitimate consequences of his own wrongful acts. It grants him the privilege of being confronted with the witnesses against him; but if he voluntarily keeps the witnesses away, he cannot insist on his privilege. If, therefore, when absent by his procurement, their evidence is supplied in some lawful way, he is in no condition to assert that his constitutional rights have been violated."

In a criminal prosecution when enough has been proved to cast upon the accused the burden of showing and he, having full opportunity therefor, fails to show, that he has not been instrumental in concealing a witness or in keeping him away, his constitutional right is not violated by the admission of competent evidence of the testimony which such witness gave on a previous trial for the same offense under another indictment. Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 160, 25 L. Ed. 244.

16. When testimony of witness since deceased is admissible.—Mattox v. United States, 156 U. S. 237, 39 L. Ed. 409.

In such case a copy of the stenographic report of the entire former testimony of the witness supported by the oath of the stenographer that it is a correct transcript of his notes and the testimony of the deceased witness, is competent evidence of what he said. Mattox v. United States, 156 U. S. 237, 244, 39 L. Ed. 409.

17. Testimony in criminal proceeding in military court.—United States v. Clark, 96 U. S. 37, 40, 34 L. Ed. 696.

HEIR, HEIRS AND THE LIKE.

I. Definitions and Construction, 690.

II. Proof of Heirship and Existence of Heirs, 690.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 210; BASTARDY, vol. 3, p. 204; DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 245; DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 335; ESTATES, vol. 5, 904; REMAINDERS, REVERSIONS AND EXECUTORY INTERESTS; SHELLEY'S CASE, RULE IN; WILLS. And see CHILD, CHILDREN, vol. 3, p. 767; ISSUE; NEXT OF KIN.

As to construction of word "heirs" in a patent issued, after the inventor's death, to him, his "heirs or assigns," see the title PATENTS. As to what constitutes heirs within the meaning of the pre-emption laws, see the title PUBLIC LANDS. As to construction of words "heirs," "heirs of the body," etc., in wills, see the title WILLS.

I. Definitions and Construction.

The word "heirs" according to its strict and technical import, designates the person or persons appointed by law to succeed to the real estate in case of intestacy.[1] The word "heirs" is inapplicable to personal estate.[2] When used in its technical sense the word "heir" does not mean "next of kin,"[3] but when not used in its technical sense it may mean "heir apparent,"[4] "children," "issue," "lineal descendants," or "next of kin."[5]

II. Proof of Heirship and Existence of Heirs.

Proof of Heirship.—It is competent to prove death and heirship by reputation.[6]

1. "Heirs."—See the following cases: McLean v. Wallace, 10 Pet. 625, 638, 9 L. Ed. 559; De La Vergne, etc., Co. v. Featherstone, 147 U. S. 209, 222, 37 L. Ed. 138; Barber v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 166 U. S. 83, 108, 41 L. Ed. 925; Orr v. Hodgson, 4 Wheat. 453, 461, 4 L. Ed. 613.

Heir of living person.—Strictly speaking no one is the heir of a living person. Barber v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 166 U. S. 83, 108, 41 L. Ed. 925.

2. Heirs, etc., inapplicable to personal estate.—" 'The words "heirs," and "heirs of his body," ' says Mr. Williams, 'are quite inapplicable to personal estate; the heir, as heir, has nothing to do with the personal property of his ancestor. Such property has nothing hereditary in its nature, but simply belongs to its owner for the time being. Hence, a gift of personal property to A simply, without more, is sufficient to vest in him the absolute interest. Whilst, under the very same words, he would acquire a life interest only in real estate, he will become absolutely entitled to personal property.' " De La Vergne, etc., Co. v. Featherstone, 147 U. S. 209, 222, 37 L. Ed. 138. See the titles DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 245; ESTATES, vol. 5, p. 906; WILLS.

3. McLean v. Wallace, 10 Pet. 625, 638, 9 L. Ed. 559. See the titles ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 228; DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 336.

Issue who are aliens not deemed heirs at law.—See the title ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 224.

4. "Heirs" may mean "heirs apparent." —Barber v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 166 U. S. 83, 41 L. Ed. 925. See the title WILLS.

5. "Heirs," "lawful heirs," etc., meaning lineal descendants, issue or children. —Abbot v. Essex Co., 18 How. 202, 15 L. Ed. 352. See the titles REMAINDERS, REVERSIONS AND EXECUTORY INTERESTS; SHELLEY'S CASE, RULE IN; WILLS.

6. Secrist v. Green, 3 Wall. 744, 751, 18 L. Ed. 153.

Reputation being sufficient to establish death and heirship, a statement of them in a deposition, by an ancient witness, long and intimately acquainted with the family about which he testifies, and who says that certain children ("as appears from entries in the family Bible, and which I believe to be true"), died at such a time, and another child at another time, "as I am informed and believe."—is not subject to exception at the trial. Secrist v. Green, 3 Wall. 744, 18 L. Ed. 153.

Proof of Existence of Heirs.—The record of proceedings against "unknown heirs" is no evidence that any such heirs existed.[7]

Presumption That Decedent Left Heirs.—Although it may sometimes be presumed that a decedent left heirs, rather than that he left none; it is but a presumption of fact, in any case, and like other presumptions, may be repelled by countervailing facts and presumptions.[8]

HELD IN TRUST.—See the title INSURANCE.
HENCEFORTH.—See note 1.
HERD LAWS.—See the title ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 316.
HEREDITAMENTS.—See note 2.
HEREDITARY REAL ESTATE.—See note 3.
HEREIN.—See note 4.
HERETOFORE.—See note 5.
HIDDEN DEFECTS.—See note 6.

7. Hollingsworth v. Barbour, 4 Pet. 466, 7 L. Ed. 922.

8. Hollingsworth v. Barbour, 4 Pet. 466, 477, 7 L. Ed. 922.

Presumption that deceased left heirs is overcome by evidence showing him to be a foreigner, and that he has been dead twenty-five years. Hollingsworth v. Barbour, 4 Pet. 466, 478, 7 L. Ed. 922.

1. Henceforth.—In United States v. Le Baron, 19 How. 73, 75, 15 L. Ed. 525, the court said: "In Clayton's case (5 Co., 1), a lease, bearing date on the 26th of May, to hold for three years 'from henceforth,' was delivered on the 20th of June. It was resolved, that 'from henceforth' should be accounted from the day of delivery of the indentures, and not from the day of their date; for the words of an indenture are not of any effect until delivery—traditio loqui facit chartam." See, also the title DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 263.

2. Hereditaments.—"In respect to the word 'tenements,' it is only necessary to observe, that it has never been construed in a will, independently of other circumstances, to pass a fee. In Canning v. Canning, Moseley 240, and Doe ex dem. Palmer v. Richards, 3 T. & R. 356, and Dean ex dem. Moor v. Mellor, 5 T. & R. 558; S. C., 2 Bos. & Pul. 247, the same term occurred, as well as the broader expression, hereditaments; in neither case, was the term 'tenement' supposed to have any peculiar effect; and the argument, attempting to establish a fee upon the import of the word hereditaments, even in a residuary clause, was deliberately overruled by the court." Wright v. Page, 10 Wheat. 204, 238, 6 L. Ed. 303. See, generally, the title WILLS.

3. Hereditary real estate.—The compiled laws of 1884 of New Mexico provided that the words "bargained and sold," or words to the same effect, in all conveyances of hereditary real estate, should have a certain designated effect. It was held that the term hereditary real estate meant real estate by inheritance. Douglass v. Lewis, 131 U. S. 75, 81, 33 L. Ed. 53. See, also, the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 8.

4. Herein.—The words "not otherwise herein provided for," in an act providing for customs duties, mean, not otherwise provided for in the act of which they are a part, and the words "not herein otherwise provided for," are identical in meaning. Arthur v. Vietor, 127 U. S. 572, 576, 32 L. Ed. 201. See Arthur v. Butterfield, 125 U. S. 70, 76, 31 L. Ed. 643; Movius v. Arthur, 95 U. S. 144, 147, 24 L. Ed. 420. And see the title REVENUE LAWS.

5. Heretofore contracted.—The 4th article of the treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain provided as follows: "It is agreed, that creditors, on either side, shall meet with no lawful impediment to the recovery of the full value, in sterling money, of all bona fide debts, heretofore contracted. In Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199, 242, 1 L. Ed. 568, in construing the words heretofore contracted in the treaty, the court said: "'Heretofore contracted,' that is, entered into at any period of time, before the date of the treaty; without regard to the length or distance of time. These words are descriptive of the particular debts that might be recovered, and relate back to the time such debts were contracted. The time of the contract was plainly to designate the particular debts that might be recovered. A debt entered into during the war, would not have been recoverable, unless under this description of a debt contracted at any time before the treaty."

6. Hidden defects.—Hidden defects are those which cannot be discovered by simple inspection. Bulkley v. Honold, 19 How. 390, 15 L. Ed. 663.

HIGH—HIGH SEAS.—"The term 'high' in one of its significations is used to denote that which is common, open, and public. Thus every road or way or navigable river which is used freely by the public is a 'high' way. So a large body of navigable water other than a river, which is of an extent beyond the measurement of one's unaided vision, and is open and unconfined, and not under the exclusive control of any one nation or people, but is the free highway of adjoining nations or people, must fall under the definition of 'high seas' within the meaning of a statute punishing offenses committed on the high seas."[1]

HIGHEST BIDDER.—See the titles JUDICIAL SALES; SHERIFFS', CONSTABLES' AND MARSHALS' SALES.

HIGHEST COURT.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 556.

HIGHWATER.—See note 2.

HIGHWAYS.—See the title STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

HIMSELF.—See note 3.

HIRE.—See the titles BAILMENTS, vol. 2, p. 782; LANDLORD AND TENANT. See note 4.

HIS.—See note 5.

1. High.—United States v. Rodgers, 150 U. S. 249, 258, 37 L. Ed. 1071.

High seas.—See the titles CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 78; NAVIGABLE WATERS.

"The term high seas includes waters on the sea coast without the boundaries of low-water mark; and the waters of the port of Yokohama constitute, within the meaning of the statute, high seas." In re Ross, 140 U. S. 453, 471, 35 L. Ed. 581.

In cases of collision and injury to property or persons on the high seas it has frequently been adjudicated in the English common-law courts, since the restraining statutes of Richard II and Henry IV were passed, that high seas mean that portion of the sea which washes the open coast; and that any branch of the sea within the fauces terræ, where a man may reasonably discern from shore to shore, is, or at least may be, within the body of a county. In fact, the general rule in England has been, since the time of Lord Coke, upon the interpretation given by the courts of common law to the statutes 13 and 15 Richard II and 2 Henry IV, to prohibit the admiralty from exercising jurisdiction in civil cases, or causes of action arising infra corpus comitatus, but in cases of tort, or collision, upon the high seas, or within the ebb and flow of the tide, as far up a river as the tide ebbs and flows, though it may be infra corpus comitatus, courts of admiralty of the United States have jurisdiction. Waring v. Clarke, 5 How. 441, 453, 12 L. Ed. 226. See, also, the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 132.

2. Highwater.—"The term highwater, when applied to the sea or to a river where the tide ebbs and flows, has a definite meaning. The line is marked by the periodical flow of the tide, excluding the advance of waters above this line in the one case by winds and storms, and in the other by freshets or floods. But in respect to fresh-water rivers, the term is altogether indefinite, and the line marked uncertain. It has no fixed meaning in the sense of highwater mark when applied to a river where the tide ebbs and flows, and should never be adopted as a boundary in the case of freshwater rivers, by intendment or construction, whether between states or individuals. It may mean any stage of the water above its ordinary height, and the line will fluctuate with every varying freshet or flood that may happen." Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 381, 423, 14 L. Ed. 189.

3. Himself.—The provision in the law punishing certain improper use of the mail that "nothing in the act shall authorize any person to open any letter or sealed matter of the first class not addressed to himself," has been held not to preclude one from testifying as to the contents of a letter addressed to himself under a fictitious name, though it was contended that the opening of the letter was an offense which would vitiate the evidence thus produced. Andrews v. United States, 162 U. S. 420, 424, 40 L. Ed. 1023.

4. Hire.—In Central Transportation Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 51, 35 L. Ed. 55, the court said: "The provision of this statute, by which the plaintiff is empowered to contract with other corporations 'for the leasing or hiring and transfer to them, or any of them,' of its 'railway cars and other personal property,' is fully satisfied by construing it as confirming the plaintiff's right to do as it had been doing, to 'lease' or hire (which are equivalent words) to other corporations in the regular course of its business, and to 'transfer' under such leasing or hiring, its 'railway cars,' and 'other personal property,' either connected with the cars, or at least of the same general nature of tangible property."

5. His attendants.—A statute provided that one convicted of a capital crime and sentenced to suffer the penalty of death

HISTORICAL FACTS.—See the title JUDICIAL NOTICE.

HOLD.—See note 1.

HOLDER.—For definition of holder of a negotiable instrument, see the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 296. As to lien of bank on stock, see BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, p. 167.

HOLIDAYS.—See the title SUNDAYS AND HOLIDAYS.

HOLOGRAPHIC WILLS.—See the title WILLS.

HOME.—See, generally, the title DOMICILE, vol. 5, p. 473. As to home of an officer, see the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 520.

HOME PORT.—The solution of the question, where a vessel's home port is, when it arises, depends wholly upon the locality of her owner's residence, and not upon the place of her enrollment.[2]

HOMESTEAD CLAIM OR ENTRY.—See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTIONS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1; FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472; PUBLIC LANDS.

As to setting apart bankrupt's exemptions, see the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 907. As to determination of bankrupt's exemptions, see the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 821. As to homestead on public lands, see the title PUBLIC LANDS.

Nature of Homestead Right.—It has been held that the nature of the homestead right is not an estate in land.[3]

Homestead Laws as Laws of the United States.—The laws of a state creating homestead exemptions are not laws for the United States, unless they have been made such by congress itself.[4]

Entry of "Homestead" on Record.—Where it is provided that the word "homestead" be entered of record on the margin of the recorded title, if one should be kept in solitary confinement until the infliction of the death penalty; and that no person should be allowed to have access to him, except his attendants, counsel, physician, a spiritual adviser of his own selection and members of his own family. In Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 179, 33 L. Ed. 835, the court said: "By the words 'his attendants' in the statute, is evidently meant the officers of the prison and subordinates, who must necessarily furnish him with his food and his clothing, and make inspection every day that he still exists."

His own establishment.—A license to use an invention by a person only to "his own establishment," does not authorize a use at an establishment owned by himself and others. Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 788, 19 L. Ed. 566.

1. Hold.—As to distinction between right to purchase and right to hold, see Runyan v. Coster, 14 Pet. 122, 131, 10 L. Ed. 382. See, also, the title FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, ante, p. 305.

2. Home port.—St. Louis v. Ferry Co., 11 Wall. 423, 431, 20 L. Ed. 192. See, generally, the titles MARITIME LIENS; SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

"These provisions, and others that might be referred to, very clearly indicate that the domicile of a vessel that requires to be registered, if we may so speak, or home port, is the port at which she is registered, and which must be the nearest to the place where the owner or owners reside." Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., 17 How. 596, 598, 15 L. Ed. 254. See, also, the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

The home port of the vessel is the port in the office of whose collector the bill of sale, mortgage, etc., should be recorded; not the port of last registry or enrollment when not such home port. White's Bank v. Smith, 7 Wall. 646, 19 L. Ed. 211.

3. Nature of right.—By the laws of Illinois, the nature of the homestead right is not in an absolute sense an estate in the land. The law creates none and the fee is left as it was before, and the right of occupancy cannot be disturbed while the homestead character exists. Black v. Curran, 14 Wall. 463, 469, 20 L. Ed. 849.

4. Exemption against United States.—Where a statute of a state exempting homesteads from levy and sale upon executions has become a law of the United States in that state, it applies to executions issued upon judgments in civil causes recovered in the courts of the United States in the name and on behalf of the United States, equally with those upon judgments rendered in favor of wishes to claim homestead, actual notice that property is homestead is not equivalent to the entry on record of the word "homestead."[3]

Time to Set Up Right of Homestead.—Where a debtor's property was sold under a creditor's bill, and the purchaser brought an action of ejectment, it was held that the debtor, against the purchaser, could not set up the right of homestead in a part of the land, but should have set same up in the suit upon the creditor's bill.[4]

Contracts Made before Right of Exemption.—Contracts made before there was a right of homestead exemption are not subject to such exemption.[5]

Property Must Be Used as Homestead.—A secret intention of the seller of land to use same as homestead cannot affect the purchaser of the land.[6]

Payment of Amount of Homestead by Holder of Lien against Same.—Payment by the holder of a lien, seeking its enforcement by sale of the premises, of the amount of the homestead exemption to the party entitled to claim such exemption entitled the payor to possession of the whole premises under an Illinois act.[7]

Conveyance without Waiving Right of Homestead.—Where land is sold under execution subject to the homestead, the purchaser has the absolute title when the homestead right ceases.[8]

Exemption against the Foreclosure of a Mortgage.—Under a statute of Texas, the homestead was held exempt from the foreclosure of a mortgage.[9]

Liens upon Homestead Created by Contract before Bankruptcy.—The setting apart of a homestead to a bankrupt under § 5045 of the Revised Statutes does not relieve the property from the operation of liens created by contract before the bankruptcy. So upon discharge from bankruptcy, a lien created by contract before bankruptcy is not discharged.[10]

Not Duty of Assignee in Bankruptcy to Inquire into Homestead Rights.—It is no part of the duty of an assignee in bankruptcy to inquire whether the bankrupt or his wife can claim homestead rights as against incumbrances whose title is superior to his own.[11] private parties. Fink v. O'Neil, 106 U. S. 272, 279, 27 L. Ed. 196.

3. Entry of "homestead" on record.—By statute in Colorado it is provided that the word "homestead" be entered of record on the margin of the recorded title, if one wishes to claim same as homestead, and under this statute it was held that actual notice that property was a homestead was not equivalent to the entry on record of the word "homestead." Goodwin v. Colorado Mortgage, etc., Co., 110 U. S. 1, 5, 28 L. Ed. 47.

4. Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 237, 251, 17 L. Ed. 827.

5. Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 596, 607, 24 L. Ed. 793.

6. Grosholz v. Newman, 21 Wall. 481, 487, 22 L. Ed. 471.

Must be used as homestead.—Where a husband sold land without having wife sign the deed, the conveyance was not void because the grantor intended to use the property conveyed as a part of the homestead. Grosholz v. Newman, 21 Wall. 481, 486, 22 L. Ed. 471.

7. Knight v. Paxton, 124 U. S. 552, 558, 31 L. Ed. 518.

Payment of exemption where property cannot be divided.—By statute of Illinois passed in 1871, if, in the enforcement of a lien upon premises including the homestead, the value thereof exceeds the exemption, and the premises cannot be divided, there might be a sale of the whole and the payment of the amount of the exemption to the party entitled. Knight v. Paxton, 124 U. S. 552, 557, 31 L. Ed. 518.

8. Where exemption not waived.—By the law of Illinois where a conveyance is made without waiving the homestead, the fee passed, but its operation was suspended until the grantor abandoned the premises or surrendered possession, and the homestead when occupied as such by the debtor, was not subject to a lien of judgment. Black v. Curran, 14 Wall. 463, 470, 20 L. Ed. 849.

9. Against foreclosure of mortgage.—By the constitution of the state of Texas of 1868, the homestead of a family was not subject to forced sale for debts, except for the purchase money, or for taxes, and for labor and materials expended thereon. Therefore, premises could not be sold under any decree in a suit for the foreclosure of the mortgage. The prohibition of the constitution extended to any species of compulsory disposition of the homestead, whether denominated a sale or otherwise. Lanahan v. Sears, 102 U. S. 318, 321, 26 L. Ed. 180.

10. Long v. Bullard, 117 U. S. 617, 621, 29 L. Ed. 1004.

11. Dudley v. Easton, 104 U. S. 99, 103, 26 L. Ed. 668. See, generally, the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 907.

HOMICIDE.

BY ERNEST P. STEINHAUER.

I. Definition, 697.

II. Murder, 697.

A. Definition, 697.
B. Elements, 697.
1. Malice, 697.
a. Necessity for Malice, 697.
b. Express Malice, 697.
c. Implied Malice, 698.
2. Intent, 698.
a. As Criterion of Crime, 698.
b. When Intent May Exist, 698.
3. Motive, 699.
C. Degrees of Murder, 699.
D. Time of Death, 699.
E. Killing in the Heat of Passion, 699.
F. Killing Provoked by Mere Aggravating Words, 699.
G. Derailing Mail Train, 700.
H. Repelling a Trespasser, 700.

III. Manslaughter, 700.

A. Definition and General Consideration, 700.
B. Effect of Defendant Arming Himself, 700.
C. Resisting Arrest by Officer without a Warrant, 701.
D. Pushing a Person from a Door, 701.
E. Repelling a Trespasser, 701.
F. Killing in the Heat of Passion, 701.

IV. Justifiable and Excusable Homicide, 701.

A. Justifiable Homicide, 701.
1. Definition, 701.
2. Illustrations, 701.
B. Excusable Homicide, 702.
C. Self-Defense, 702.
1. In General, 702.
2. Duty to Retreat, 703.
a. General Rule, 703.
b. By One on His Own Premises but Outside of Dwelling House, 703.
c. When Accused Was Where He Had a Right to Be, 704.
d. Where Deceased Found Entering Room of Defendant's Wife, 704.
e. When Right of Self-Defense Restored, 704.
f. Test Whether Limits of Self-Defense Exceeded, 704.

V. Procedure, 705.

A. Jurisdiction, 705.
1. In General, 705.
2. Between a State and the United States, 705.
B. Indictment, 705.
1. Necessity for Indictment by Grand Jury, 705.
2. Time and Place, 705.
3. Construction, 705.

4. Duplicity and Uncertainty, 706.
5. Finding Guilty of Less Offense than Charged, 706.
6. Election, 706.
7. Failure to Indicate Degree of Murder, 706.
8. Allegation of Joint Assault, 707.
9. Alleging Deliberate and Premeditated Malice, 707.
10. Alleging Death by Poisoning, 707.

C. Defenses, 708.
1. Insanity, 708.
2. Infancy, 708.
3. Drunkenness, 708.
4. Lack of Intention and Malice, 708.

D. Evidence, 708.
1. Presumptions, 708.
2. Admissibility, 708.
a. In General, 708.
b. To Prove Guilt of Accused, 708.
c. To Prove Self-Defense, 708.
d. Character, 708.
(1) Of Deceased, 708.
(2) Of Third Person, 709.
(3) Of Accused, 709.
e. Prior Provocation, 709.
f. Fruits of Crime, 709.
g. Facts Too Remote, 709.
h. Bloodstains, 709.
i. Picture of Deceased, 709.
j. Proof of Other Crimes, 709.
k. Threats, 709.
(1) Uncommunicated Threats, 709.
(2) Communicated Threats, 710.
l. Dying Declarations, 711.
m. Confessions, 711.

E. Witnesses, 711.
1. In General, 711.
2. Defendant's Right to Have List of Witnesses, 711.
3. Examination of, 711.

F. Questions of Law and Fact, 711.
1. To Determine Nature of Crime, 711.
2. Degree of Murder, 711.
3. Overt Demonstration of Violence, 711.

G. Instructions, 711.
1. In General, 711.
2. As to the Philosophy of the Mental Operations, 711.
3. Self-Defense and Effect of Arming Oneself, 712.
4. Obligation to Instruct upon Manslaughter, 713.
5. Corpus Delicti, 713.
6. Instruction to Find Verdict of Not Guilty, 713.
7. Manner of Instructing, 714.

VI. Sentence and Punishment, 714.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ACCOMPLICES AND ACCESSORIES, vol. 1, p. 63; APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 333; ARREST, vol. 2, p. 541; CIVIL RIGHT, vol. 3, p. 814; COMMITMENT AND PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF ACCUSED, vol. 3, p. 951; CONFESSIONS, vol. 3, p. 1009; DEATH BY WRONGFUL ACT, vol. 5, p. 200; DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499; DYING DECLARATIONS, vol. 5, p. 686; EVIDENCE, vol. 5.

p. 1004; EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, ante, p. 200; EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215; HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610; HEARSAY EVIDENCE, ante, p. 686; INDIANS; INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS; INSANITY; INSURANCE; JURY; PARDON; PIRACY; PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF; REASONABLE DOUBT; REMOVAL OF CAUSES; RES GESTÆ; SENTENCE AND PUNISHMENT; VERDICT; WITNESSES.

As to defense of former jeopardy, see the title AUTREFOIS, ACQUIT AND CONVICT, vol. 2, p. 751. In regard to ex post facto laws, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1. As to necessity for presence of accused during trial, see the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 114. As to admissibility of stenographic notes stating testimony of deceased witness, see the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 431. As to review of erroneous sentence on habeas corpus, see the title HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610. As to homicides committed by Indians within the Indian Territory, see the title INDIANS. In regard to insurance questions arising from homicides, see the title INSURANCE. As to questions arising in regard to impaneling, objecting to, and striking out jurors, see the title JURY. Effect of acceptance of pardon, see the title PARDON. In regard to piratical homicides, see the title PIRACY. As to right, and questions arising thereunder, of one accused of homicide to offer himself as a witness in his own behalf, see the title WITNESSES.

I. Definition.

Homicide is the act of a human being in killing another human being.[1]

II. Murder.

A. Definition.—"Murder at common law, is defined to be, when a person of sound memory and discretion unlawfully killeth any reasonable creature in being, and in the peace of the state, with malice aforethought, either express or implied."[2]

B. Elements—1. MALICE—a. Necessity for Malice.—The presence or absence of malice marks the boundary which separates the two crimes of murder and manslaughter.[3]

b. Express Malice.—"Express malice is when there is manifested a deliberate intention unlawfully to take away the life of a fellow creature."[4]

1. Definition.—Black's Law Dict., p. 577.

2. Definition.—Mr. Justice Clifford's dissenting opinion in Wiggins v. People, 93 U. S. 465, 470, 23 L. Ed. 941.

Justice Harlan, speaking of murder in Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 484, 40 L. Ed. 499, said: "It is of the very essence of that heinous crime that it be committed by a person of sound memory and discretion, and with malice aforethought; either express or implied."

"Murder is declared by the statutes of Utah to be 'the unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought.' This is substantially murder as defined at common law. 4 Bl. Com. 195; 3 Inst. 47." Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 264, 38 L. Ed. 153; Wilkerson v. Utah, 99 U. S. 130, 131, 25 L. Ed. 345.

3. Necessity for malice.—Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 320, 40 L. Ed. 980.

4. Express malice.—Wilkerson v. Utah, 99 U. S. 130, 131, 25 L. Ed. 345.

"Express malice exists when one, by deliberate premeditation and design, formed in advance, to kill or to do bodily harm, the premeditation and design being implied from external circumstances capable of proof, such as lying in wait, antecedent threats and concerted schemes against a victim." Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 60, 39 L. Ed. 343.

"The term 'express malice' means that the homicide was the result of a formed design, based upon a wicked and depraved spirit, and is maliciously conceived and wickedly and maliciously executed without justifiable or lawful excuse. The most usual illustrations, and the ones best understood generally of the term 'express malice' are such as lying in wait for the intended victim, and when he approaches he is slain, or the preparation and administration of poison for the purpose of taking life, because in such instances the acts clearly show the formed design and the unlawful intent and its execution, and therefore is said to be killing upon express malice. These are only illustrations of what is meant by the terms 'express malice,' and any homicide that is shown to have been the result of willful intent and committed without legal excuse is said to be a killing upon

c. Implied Malice.—The proof of homicide, as necessarily involving malice, must show the facts under which the killing was effected, and from the whole facts and circumstances surrounding the killing the jury infers malice or its absence. Malice in connection with the crime of killing is but another name for a certain condition of a man's heart or mind, and as no one can look into the heart or mind of another, the only way to decide upon its condition at the time of a killing is to infer it from the surrounding facts, and that inference is one of fact for a jury.[5]

2. INTENT—a. As Criterion of Crime.—To constitute murder of the first degree the intention is the true criterion of the crime.[6]

b. When Intent May Exist.—The intent necessary to constitute malice aforethought need not have existed for any particular time before the act of killing, but it may spring up at the instant and may be inferred from the fact of killing. This is within the authorities as applied to the common-law crime of murder, though where the crime is classified as in some states, proof of deliberate premeditation is necessary to constitute murder in the first degree.[7] express malice." Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 46 L. Ed. 1225.

Where one, after an altercation with another, arms himself for the purpose of pursuing his adversary, or with the intention of putting himself in the way of his adversary, so as to obtain an opportunity to kill him, he is guilty of murder. Gourko v. United States, 153 U. S. 183, 191, 38 L. Ed. 680.

5. Implied malice.—Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 320, 40 L. Ed. 980.

"By the term 'implied malice' is meant that in the case charged the evidence shows that the party charged committed the act, and that it was intentional and unlawful, that is, without justifiable excuse, and the evidence fails to reveal the motive why the person committed the act. In that state of case the law attaches or implies malice to the nature of the act done; that is, the taking of human life without justifiable excuse. Where the evidence fails to show that it was done upon express malice, yet it shows that the party charged intentionally did the act without lawful excuse, malice is inferred, although the evidence may not disclose any motive whatever, and therefore if the killing was intentional and without justifiable excuse, although no motive is shown for it, the party would be guilty of murder and should be convicted therefor, unless excused upon the ground of insanity or the want of mental capacity to form a criminal intent. Therefore in this case it is not material, so far as the question of guilt or innocence is concerned, that the evidence fails to show any motive for the killing, because if the killing was intentional and was not justifiable, the law implies the criminal intent, and, unless rebutted by testimony, would justify a conviction, provided the evidence shows that the party charged had sufficient mental ability to be held responsible for his acts." Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 46 L. Ed. 1225.

"Implied malice is an inference of the law from any deliberate and cruel act committed by one person against another." Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 115, 39 L. Ed. 343.

Whether there be what is termed express malice or only implied malice, the proof to show either is of the same nature, viz, the circumstances leading up to and surrounding the killing. Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 320, 40 L. Ed. 980.

"The two kinds of malice, therefore, to repeat, indicate but one state of mind, established in different ways—the one by circumstances showing premeditation of the homicide, the other by an inference of the law from the act committed; that is, malice is inferred when one kills another without provocation, or when the provocation is not great." Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 115, 39 L. Ed. 343.

"Malice may be presumed from the mere fact of killing, nothing further being shown." Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 414, 38 L. Ed. 208.

Express malice may be implied when there is no considerable provocation, or when the circumstances attending the killing show an abandoned or malignant heart. Wilkerson v. Utah, 99 U. S. 130, 131, 25 L. Ed. 345.

Common law.—By the common law malice may be implied from the use of a deadly weapon or other significant facts. Tucker v. United States, 151 U. S. 164, 169, 38 L. Ed. 112.

Utah.—The statute of Utah provide that the malice necessary to constitute murder may be express or implied. Wilkerson v. Utah, 99 U. S. 130, 131, 25 L. Ed. 345.

Instructions.—Where the evidence on a trial for murder justifies the court in so doing, it may charge the jury that it can infer not only willfulness but malice aforethought. Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 495, 41 L. Ed. 528.

6. Intent as criterion of crime.—Respublica v. Mulatto Bob, 4 Dall. 145, 146, 1 L. Ed. 776.

7. When intent may exist.—Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 495, 41 L. Ed. 528.

3. Motive.—While a motive exists for every act done by a person of sound mind, it is not indispensible to conviction that the particular motive for taking the life of a human being shall be established by proof to the satisfaction of the jury.[8]

C. Degrees of Murder.—"Modern statutes defining murder in many cases affix degrees to the offense, according to the nature and aggravation of the circumstances under which the act of homicide is committed."[9]

Murder in First Degree.—"Murder, in the first degree, is the willful, deliberate and premeditated killing of another."[10]

D. Time of Death.—In cases of murder the rule at common law undoubtedly was that no person should be adjudged "by any act whatever to kill another who does not die by it within a year and a day thereafter; in computation whereof the whole day on which the hurt was done shall be reckoned first." The reason assigned for that rule was that if the person alleged to have been murdered "die after that time, it cannot be discerned, as the law presumes, whether he died of the stroke or poison, etc., or a natural death; and in case of life, a rule of law ought to be certain." And such is the rule in this country in prosecutions for murder, except in jurisdictions where it may be otherwise prescribed by statute.[11]

E. Killing in the Heat of Passion.—"The law, in recognition of the frailty of human nature, regards a homicide committed under the influence of sudden passion, or in hot blood produced by adequate cause, and before a reasonable time has elapsed for the blood to cool, as an offense of a less heinous character than murder. But if there be sufficient time for the passions to subside, and shaken reason to resume its sway, no such distinction can be entertained. And if the circumstances show a killing 'with deliberate mind and formed design,'—with comprehension of the act and determination to perform it, the elements of self-defense being wanting,—the act is murder. Nor is the presumption of malice negatived by previous provocation, having no causal connection with the murderous act, or separated from it by such an interval of time as gives reasonable opportunity for the access of fury to moderate."[12]

F. Killing Provoked by Mere Aggravating Words.—"It is well settled

8. Motive.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 414, 38 L. Ed. 208.

"The absence of evidence suggesting a motive for the commission of the crime charged is a circumstance in favor of the accused, to be given such weight as the jury deems proper; but proof of motive is never indispensable to conviction." Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 414, 38 L. Ed. 208.

Instructions.—Where the attention of the court was directed to the subject of proving motive upon the trial of a person charged with murder, and he charged that it was unnecessary to show a motive for the commission of the crime so long as the evidence satisfied the jury that the person charged was in fact guilty of the act; that it was not necessary to prove by any particular expression of the party charged that he had some personal or what may be termed express malice toward the individual who was killed, the court commits no error. Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 414, 46 L. Ed. 1225.

There is no error in instructing the jury in effect, that they have the right to consider the absence of any proof of motive, but that such proof is not essential to enable them to convict. Johnson v. United States, 157 U. S. 320, 325, 39 L. Ed. 717.

9. Degrees of murder.—Mr. Justice Clifford, dissenting opinion in Wiggins v. People, 93 U. S. 465, 470, 23 L. Ed. 941.

"No act of congress has established degrees of the crime of murder." Tucker v. United States, 151 U. S. 164, 169, 38 L. Ed. 112. See, also, Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 39 L. Ed. 343.

10. Murder in first degree.—Respublica v. Mulatto Bob, 4 Dall. 145, 146, 1 L. Ed. 770.

11. Time of death.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, 152 U. S. 230, 239, 38 L. Ed. 422.

12. Killing in the heat of passion.—Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 510, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

Instructions.—Instruction cannot properly be complained of by the defendant, which states that, if the defendant in a moment of passion, aroused by the wrongful treatment of his brother and without any previous preparation, did the shooting, the offense would be manslaughter and not murder; but if he prepared himself to kill, and had a previous purpose to do so, then the mere fact of passion would not reduce the crime below murder. Collins v. United States, 150 U. S. 62, 65, 37 L. Ed. 998.

by the authorities that mere words, however aggravating, are not sufficient to reduce the crime from murder to manslaughter."[13]

G. Derailing Mail Train.—See post, "Jurisdiction," V, A, footnote.

H. Repelling a Trespasser.—See post, "Repelling a Trespasser," III, E.

III. Manslaughter.

A. Definition and General Consideration.—Manslaughter at common law was defined to be the unlawful and felonious killing of another without any malice, either express or implied.[14] The definition of the crime given by § 5341 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is substantially the same.[15]

B. Effect of Defendant Arming Himself.—Where one, after an altercation with another, had reasonable grounds to believe, and in fact believed, that such other intended to take his life, or to inflict upon him great bodily harm, and, so believing, armed himself solely for necessary self-defense in the event of his being pursued and attacked, and if the circumstances occurring on the occasion of the meeting were such as, by themselves, made a case of manslaughter, then the defendant's arming himself, after the altercation, did not have, in itself, the effect to convert his crime into that of murder.[16]

13. Killing provoked by mere aggravating words.—Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 497, 41 L. Ed. 528.

14. Definition and general consideration.—Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 320, 40 L. Ed. 980.

By the common law any unlawful killing without malice, express or implied, is manslaughter. Tucker v. United States, 151 U. S. 164, 170, 38 L. Ed. 112.

Instructions.—A court does not err in refusing to give an instruction upon the subject of manslaughter where it had already fully instructed upon the subject, and by reference to the record it appears that the charge as given, which defined manslaughter to be "the willful and unlawful killing of a human being without malice aforethought," was more accurate than the instruction asked for, which omitted the element of the killing being without any malice either express or implied. Brown v. United States, 150 U. S. 93, 95, 37 L. Ed. 1010.

An instruction to the jury as follows: "I give you the law of manslaughter because it has been invoked in the case, and you are to see whether it exists; and because you may apply the doctrine of exclusion to enable you to come to the conclusion as to whether murder exists or not, because, if self-defense does not exist, and if manslaughter does not exist, the only other condition that can exist in the case is a state of murder. Manslaughter is the willful and unlawful killing of a human being without malice aforethought, and it occupies a midway position between a state of case where the law of self-defense would apply and a state of case where the law defining murder applies," is not open to exception when taken with other parts of the charge, which correctly state the law upon the subject of manslaughter. Brown v. United States, 150 U. S. 93, 94, 37 L. Ed. 1010.

The court charged the jury that "manslaughter, as applied to a case of this character, is the intentional taking of human life, but the distinguishing trait between manslaughter and murder is the absence of malice; it must spring from a gross provocation, and of such character as to temporarily render the party incapable of that cool reflection that otherwise makes it murder. Of course, the defendant intends to do what he does, but he must be laboring at the time he performs the act under intense mental excitement such as would render any ordinarily prudent person for the time being incapable of that cool reflection that otherwise makes it murder. In that state of case the law does not wholly excuse the offense; but the law, in its charity for the imperfections and weaknesses of human nature, reduces it from murder to manslaughter." Held, this was for the benefit and not to the prejudice of the accused, and, therefore he could not claim there was error. Addington v. United States, 165 U. S. 184, 185, 41 L. Ed. 679.

15. Definition under § 5341, Rev. Stat.—Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 320, 40 L. Ed. 980.

"The statutes of the United States provide that any person who, within any of the places or upon any of the waters described in section fifty-three hundred and thirty-nine, 'unlawfully and willfully, but without malice, strikes, stabs, wounds or shoots at, or otherwise injuries another, of which striking, stabbing, wounding, shooting or other injury such other person dies, either on land or sea, within or without the United States, is guilty of the crime of manslaughter.' Rev. Stat., § 5341." Addington v. United States, 165 U. S. 184, 186, 41 L. Ed. 679.

16. Effect of defendant arming himself.—Gourko v. United States, 153 U. S. 183, 191, 38 L. Ed. 680, followed and applied in Thompson v. United States, 155 U. S. 271, 39 L. Ed. 146.

Stated in another form: Although the

C. Resisting Arrest by Officer without a Warrant.—"At common law, if a party resisted arrest by an officer without warrant, and who had no right to arrest him, and if in the course of that resistance the officer was killed, the offense of the party resisting arrest would be reduced from what would have been murder, if the officer had had the right to arrest, to manslaughter. What would be murder, if the officer had the right to arrest, might be reduced to manslaughter by the very fact that he had no such right."[17]

D. Pushing a Person from a Door.—In a Pennsylvania case it was held to be manslaughter for one to push another from a door, which the latter was trying to enter, in such a manner as to cause the latter to fall down some steps causing injuries resulting in death.[18]

E. Repelling a Trespasser.—A person "cannot repel a mere trespass on his land by the taking of life, or proceed beyond what necessity requires. When he uses in the defense of such property a weapon which is not deadly, and death accidently ensues, the killing will not exceed manslaughter, but when a deadly weapon is employed it may be murder or manslaughter, according to the circumstances."[19]

F. Killing in the Heat of Passion.—See ante, "Killing in the Heat of Passion," III, F.

IV. Justifiable and Excusable Homicide.

A. Justifiable Homicide—1. DEFINITION.—Justifiable homicide is that committed with full intent, but under such circumstances as to render the act one proper to be performed.[20]

2. ILLUSTRATIONS.—A homicide is justifiable when committed in resisting an attempt to murder a person,[21] and by statute, in some states, when committed in defendant may not have been justified on the occasion and under the particular circumstances of the difficulty in believing that the taking of his adversary's life was, then and there, necessary to save his own life or to protect himself from serious bodily harm, nevertheless, the jury were not authorized to find him guilty of murder because of his having deliberately armed himself; provided he rightfully so armed himself for purposes simply of self-defense, and if, independently of the fact of arming himself, the case tested by what occurred on the occasion of the killing was one of manslaughter only. Gourko v. United States, 153 U. S. 183, 191, 38 L. Ed. 680, followed and applied in Thompson v. United States, 155 U. S. 271, 39 L. Ed. 146.

Instructions.—See post, "Self-Defense and Effect of Arming Oneself," V, G, 3.

"The court, in effect, said—or the jury may, not unreasonably, have understood the court as declaring—that preparation, by arming, although for self-defense only, could not be followed, in any case, by manslaughter, if the killing, after such arming, was not, in fact, in necessary self-defense. Such we understand to be the meaning of the charge. In our opinion the court erred in so charging the jury. If the accused was justified in the eye of the law in arming himself for self-defense, and if, without seeking, but on meeting, his adversary, on a subsequent occasion, he killed him, not in necessary self-defense, then his crime was that of manslaughter or murder, as the circumstances, on the occasion of the killing, made it the one or the other. If guilty of manslaughter, looking alone at those circumstances, he could not be found guilty of murder by reason of his having previously armed himself solely for self-defense." Gourko v. United States, 153 U. S. 183, 191, 38 L. Ed. 680.

17. Resisting arrest by officer without a warrant.—John Bad Elk v. United States, 177 U. S. 529, 534, 44 L. Ed. 874. See, generally, the title ARREST, vol. 2, p. 541.

18. Pushing a person from a door.—Commonwealth v. Biron, 4 Dall. 125, 1 L. Ed. 769.

19. Repelling a trespasser.—Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 473, 40 L. Ed. 1039.

20. Definition.—Bouvier's Law Dict., vol. 1, p. 958.

21. A marshal of the United States, charged with the duty of protecting and guarding a judge of the United States court against assault upon his person and his life, being present at the critical moment, when prompt action was necessary, and having found it to be his duty, a duty which he had no liberty to refuse to perform, to take the life of a person attempting to assault the judge, was justified in so doing. In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 69, 34 L. Ed. 55.

"The penal code of California declares (§ 197) that homicide is justifiable when committed by any person 'when resisting any attempt to murder any person.'" In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 68, 34 L. Ed. 55

the lawful defense of the person.[22]

B. Excusable Homicide.—Definition.—Excusable homicide is that which takes place under such circumstances of accident or necessity that the party cannot strictly be said to have committed the act willfully and intentionally, and whereby he is relieved from the penalty annexed to the commission of a felonious homicide.[23]

C. Self-Defense—1. IN GENERAL.—A homicide committed in actual defense of life or limb is excusable if it appear that the slayer was acting under a reasonable belief that he was in imminent danger of death or great bodily harm from the deceased, and that his act in causing death was necessary in order to avoid the death or great bodily harm which was apparently imminent.[24]

When Slayer Is the Aggressor.—But where there is manifestly no adequate or reasonable ground for such belief, or the slayer brings on the difficulty for the purpose of killing the deceased, or violation of the law on his part is the

22. "By the Revised Code of Mississippi (1880), § 2878 (and this section is common to the homicide statutes of several states), homicide is justifiable when committed in the lawful defense of the person when there shall be reasonable ground to apprehend a design to do some great personal injury, and imminent danger of such design being accomplished." New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Jopes, 142 U. S. 18, 23, 35 L. Ed. 919.

23. Definition.—Bouvier's Law Dict., vol. 1, p. 958.

24. In general.—Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 508, 42 L. Ed. 1116; Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 41 L. Ed. 528; Addington v. United States, 165 U. S. 184, 41 L. Ed. 679.

Where the accused embarks in a quarrel with no felonious intent, or malice, or premeditated purpose of doing bodily harm or killing, and under reasonable belief of imminent danger he inflicts a fatal wound, it is not murder. Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 471, 40 L. Ed. 1039.

"The law of self-defense justifies an act done in honest and reasonable belief of immediate danger. The familiar illustration is, that if one approaches another, pointing a pistol and indicating an intention to shoot, the latter is justified by the rule of self-defense in shooting, even to death; and that such justification is not avoided by proof that the party killed was only intending a joke, and that the pistol in his hand was unloaded. Such a defense does not rest on the actual, but on the apparent facts and the honesty of belief in danger. By the Revised Code of Mississippi (1880), § 2878 (and this section is common to the homicide statutes of several states), homicide is justifiable when committed in the lawful defense of the person when there shall be reasonable ground to apprehend a design to do some great personal injury, and imminent danger of such design being accomplished. In 1 Wharton's Criminal Law, 9th Ed., § 488, the author says: 'It is conceded on all sides that it is enough if the danger which the defendant seeks to avert is apparently imminent, irremedial and actual.'" New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Jopes, 142 U. S. 18, 23, 24, 35 L. Ed. 919.

Resisting arrest.—Where an officer attempts to arrest a person, and such person is placed in a position in which his life is imperiled by the officer, and he slays the officer without having any notice of his official character, and the killing was apparently necessary to save his own life, then the killing of the officer is homicide in self-defense, and it is error for the judge in such case to qualify the above rule, in his instructions to the jury, to the effect that if the defendant prevented the officer from giving notice that he was acting officially, then the rule invoked would not apply. Starr v. United States, 153 U. S. 614, 620, 38 L. Ed. 841.

"The possession of a conscience void of offense toward God and men is not an indispensable prerequisite to justification of action in the face of imminent and deadly peril, nor does the intrinsic rightfulness of the occupation or situation of a party, having in itself no bearing upon or connection with an assault, impose a limitation on the right to repel it." Starr v. United States, 153 U. S. 614, 623, 38 L. Ed. 841.

"The motive of the accused in being where he was had nothing to do with the question of his right of self-defense in itself, and the unlawfulness of his previous conduct formed in itself no element in the solution of that question, but was to be considered only in so far as it threw light on his belief that his arrest was sought by the officer." Starr v. United States, 153 U. S. 614, 624, 38 L. Ed. 841.

Instructions.—Where the court said, in substance, that if the circumstances were such as to produce upon the mind of the accused, as a reasonably prudent man, the impression that he could save his own life, or protect himself from serious bodily harm, only by taking the life of his assailant, he was justified by the law in resorting to such means, unless he went to where the deceased was for the purpose of provoking a difficulty in order reason of his expectation of an attack, the plea of self-defense cannot avail.[25]

Perfect and Imperfect Right of Self-Defense.—"A perfect right of self-defense can only obtain and avail where the party pleading it acted from necessity, and was wholly free from wrong or blame in occasioning or producing the necessity which required his action. If, however, he was in the wrong—if he was himself violating or in the act of violating the law—and on account of his own wrong was placed in a situation wherein it became necessary for him to defend himself against an attack made upon himself, which was superinduced or created by his own wrong, then the law justly limits his right of self-defense, and regulates it according to the magnitude of his own wrong. Such a state of case may be said to illustrate and determine what in law would be denominated the imperfect right of self-defense."[26]

2. Duty to Retreat—a. General Rule.—Where a person is assaulted, the general rule is, that, before killing his assailant, he must retreat as far as he can reasonably do so with regard to his own safety.[27]

b. By One on His Own Premises but Outside of Dwelling House.—A person while on his premises, outside of his dwelling house, is not obliged to retreat, nor to consider whether he can safely retreat, but is entitled to stand his ground and meet any attack made upon him with a deadly weapon, in such way and with such force as, under all the circumstances, he, at the moment, honestly believes, and has reasonable grounds to believe, is necessary to save his own life or to protect himself from great bodily injury.[28] that he might slay his adversary, it committed no error. Addington v. United States, 165 U. S. 184, 187, 41 L. Ed. 679.

25. When slayer is the aggressor.—Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 508, 42 L. Ed. 1116; Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 41 L. Ed. 528; Addington v. United States, 165 U. S. 184, 41 L. Ed. 679; Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 40 L. Ed. 1039.

"Where a difficulty is intentionally brought on for the purpose of killing the deceased, the fact of imminent danger to the accused constitutes no defense." Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 471, 40 L. Ed. 1039.

26. Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 472, 40 L. Ed. 1039.

27. General rule.—Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 498, 41 L. Ed. 528.

"It is clear that to establish a case of justifiable homicide it must appear that something more than an ordinary assault was made upon the prisoner; it must also appear that the assault was such as would lead a reasonable person to believe that his life was in peril. Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 40 L. Ed. 1039." Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 498, 41 L. Ed. 528.

"Nor is there anything in the instruction of the court that the prisoner was bound to retreat as far as he could before slaying his assailant that conflicts with the ruling of this court in Beard v. United States, 158 U. S. 550, 39 L. Ed. 1086. That was the case of an assault upon the defendant upon his own premises, and it was held that the obligation to retreat was no greater than it would have been if he had been assailed in his own house. So, too, in the case of Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051, the defendant found the deceased trying to obtain access to his wife's chamber through a window, in the night time, and it was held that he might repel the attempt by force, and was under no obligation to retreat if the deceased attacked him with a knife. The general duty to retreat instead of killing when attacked was not touched upon in these cases. Whart. on Homicide, § 485." Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 498, 41 L. Ed. 528.

28. By one on his own premises but outside of dwelling house.—Beard v. United States, 158 U. S. 550, 563, 39 L. Ed. 1086.

"We cannot agree that the accused was under any greater obligation, when on his own premises, near his dwelling house, to retreat or run away from his assailant, than he would have been if attacked within his dwelling house. The accused being where he had a right to be, on his own premises, constituting a part of his residence and home, at the time the deceased approached him in a threatening manner, and not having by language or by conduct provoked the deceased to assault him, the question for the jury was whether, without fleeing from his adversary, he had, at the moment he struck the deceased, reasonable grounds to believe, and in good faith believed, that he could not save his life or protect himself from great bodily harm except by doing what he did, namely, strike the deceased with his gun, and thus prevent his further advance upon him." Beard v. United States, 158 U. S. 550, 39 L. Ed. 1086.

To come within the consideration of self-defense one was doing what he had the legal right to do, when, keeping within

c. When Accused Was Where He Had a Right to Be.—Where the accused was where he had a right to be, the law does not require him to step aside when his assailant is rapidly advancing upon him with a deadly weapon, and a charge to the effect that although the deceased sprang at the accused, with a knife in hand, for the purpose of cutting him to pieces, yet if the accused could have stepped aside or paralyzed the arm of his assailant, his killing the latter was not in the exercise of the right of self-defense, is erroneous.[29]

d. Where Deceased Found Entering Room of Defendant's Wife.—"A man who finds another trying to obtain access to his wife's room in the night time, by opening a window, may not only remonstrate with him, but may employ such force as may be necessary to prevent his doing so; and if the other threatens to kill him, and makes a motion as if to do so, and puts him in fear of his life, or of great bodily harm, he is not bound to retreat, but may use such force as is necessary to repel the assault."[30]

e. When Right of Self-Defense Restored.—"If a person, under the provocation of offensive language, assaults the speaker personally, but in such a way as to show that there is no intention to do him serious bodily harm, and then retires under such circumstances as show that he does not intend to do anything more, but in good faith withdraws from further contest, his right of self-defense is restored when the person assaulted, in violation of law, pursues him with a deadly weapon and seeks to take his life or do him great bodily harm."[31]

f. Test Whether Limits of Self-Defense Exceeded.—The doctrine is impracticable which tests the question whether a defendant exceeded the limits of self-defense or acted in the heat of passion by the deliberation with which a judge his own premises and near his dwelling, he joined his wife who was in dispute with others, one of whom, as he had been informed, had already threatened to take the cow away or kill him. Beard v. United States, 158 U. S. 550, 558, 39 L. Ed. 1086.

29. When accused was where he had a right to be.—Rowe v. United States, 164 U. S. 546, 558, 41 L. Ed. 547.

"By numerous quotations from adjudged cases, the court, by every form of expression, pressed upon the jury the proposition that 'a person who has slain another cannot urge in justification of the killing a necessity produced by his own unlawful and wrongful acts.' But that abstract principle has no application to this case, if it be true—as the evidence on behalf of the defense tended to show—that the first real provocation came from the deceased when he used towards the accused language of an offensive character, and that the accused immediately after kicking at or lightly kicking the deceased, signified by his conduct that he no longer desired controversy with his adversary; whereupon the deceased, despite the efforts of the accused to retire from further contest, sprang at the latter, with knife in hand, for the purpose of taking life, and would most probably have accomplished that object, if the accused had not fired at the moment he did. Under such circumstances, did the law require that the accused should stand still, and permit himself to be cut to pieces, under the penalty that if he met the unlawful attack upon him and saved his own life, by taking that of his assailant, he would be guilty of manslaughter? We think not." Rowe v. United States, 164 U. S. 546, 555, 41 L. Ed. 547.

30. Where deceased found entering room of defendant's wife.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 508, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

"We think the charge of the court in this connection is open to the same objection that was made to the charge in the case of Beard v. United States, 158 U. S. 550, 39 L. Ed. 1086. The only difference suggested is that in that case the attack was made with firearms, and in this case it would appear that the defendant supposed that the deceased was about to attack him with a knife. Defendant, however, was working at Lipes,' where his wife was staying, and if, as he claims, he saw a man in the act of raising a window which led to his wife's room, it was perfectly natural that he should wish to investigate, and to ascertain for what purpose the man was there. It appears to have been so dark at the time that defendant did not recognize deceased except by his voice, that the deceased threatened, with an oath, to kill him, and as he says, made for him with a knife. Under such circumstances we think a charge to the jury that he was bound to retreat as far as he could, or disable his adversary without killing him, was misleading." Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 507, 508, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

31. When right of self-defense restored.—Rowe v. United States, 164 U. S. 546, 555, 41 L. Ed. 547.

expounds the law to a jury or a jury determines the facts, or with which judgment is entered and carried into execution.[32]

V. Procedure.

A. Jurisdiction—1. In General.—For a full treatment of this subject of jurisdiction, see the title Criminal Law, vol. 5, p. 43.

2. Between a State and the United States.—Criminal homicide, committed in a state, is an offense against the authority of the state,[33] unless it was committed in a place within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States.[34]

B. Indictment—1. Necessity for Indictment by Grand Jury.—The words "due process of law" in the fourteenth amendment do not necessarily require an indictment by a grand jury in a prosecution by a state for murder, whose constitution authorizes such prosecution by information.[35]

2. Time and Place.—For treatment of this subject see elsewhere.[36]

3. Construction.—A rule of construction should not be applied, which would compel the pleader to indulge in too much repetition.[37]

32. Test whether limits of self-defense exceeded.—Brown v. United States, 150 U. S. 93, 99, 37 L. Ed. 1010; Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 316, 38 L. Ed. 170.

33. Between a state and the United States.—Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 536, 24 L. Ed. 1118.

Derailing a mail train.—Where the accused derailed a mail train and thereby caused the death of the engineer, his act is an offense by the law of the state, and the state may punish him accordingly for murder; and it is no defense that the act was an offense against the United States, for it is settled law that the same act may constitute an offense against the United States and against a state, subjecting the guilty party to punishment under the laws of each government. Crossley v. California, 168 U. S. 640, 641, 42 L. Ed. 610.

34. Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 536, 24 L. Ed. 1118.

"Murder is not an offense against the United States, except when committed on an American vessel on the high seas, or in some port or haven without the jurisdiction of the state, or in the District of Columbia, or in the territories, or at other places where the national government has exclusive jurisdiction. The offense within the limits of a state, except where jurisdiction has been ceded to the United States, is as much beyond the jurisdiction of these courts as though it had been committed on another continent. The prosecution of the offense in such a case does not, therefore, arise under the constitution and laws of the United States; and the act of congress which attempts to give the federal courts jurisdiction of it is, to my mind, a clear infraction of the constitution. That instrument defines and limits the judicial power of the United States." Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 336, 25 L. Ed. 667.

"There are no common-law crimes of the United States, and the crime of murder, as such, is not known to the national government, except in places over which it may exercise exclusive jurisdiction." Pettit v. Walshe, 194 U. S. 205, 217, 48 L. Ed. 938.

35. Necessity for indictment by grand jury.—Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 232; McNulty v. California, 149 U. S. 645, 648, 37 L. Ed. 882; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. Ed. 923; In re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. Ed. 519; In re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. Ed. 796; Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 36 L. Ed. 986. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 492, 496; DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 667.

36. Time and place.—See the title INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS.

37. Construction.—"The only question that could arise as to the sufficiency of the indictment is suggested by the words, 'and did then and there, to wit, at the time and place last above mentioned, him, the said Maurice Fitzgerald, cast and throw from and out of the said vessel into the sea, and plunge, sink, and drown him, the said Maurice Fitzgerald, in the sea aforesaid.' These words, it is said, do not necessarily import that the casting and throwing the deceased into the sea was done willfully, feloniously, and with malice aforethought. But they cannot properly be separated from those which show the nature and effect of the assault. The words immediately preceding show that the accused did 'then and there piratically, willfully, feloniously, and with malice aforethought, strike and beat the said Maurice Fitzgerald, then and there giving to the said Maurice Fitzgerald several grievous, dangerous, and mortal wounds.' The latter words and those first above quoted are connected by the conjunctive 'and,' and should be construed together; and, so construed, it is clear that the words 'piratically, willfully, feloniously, and with malice aforethought' refer not only to the striking and beating of the deceased,

4. Duplicity and Uncertainty.—An indictment for murder is not objectionable on the ground of duplicity or uncertainty where it charges that death occurred by shooting and drowning.[38]

5. Finding Guilty of Less Offense than Charged.—Under § 1035, Rev. Stat., a defendant charged with the crime of murder may be found guilty of manslaughter.[39]

6. Election.—Where two counts in an indictment differ from each other only in stating the manner in which the murder was committed, the question whether the prosecution should be compelled to elect is a matter purely within the discretion of the court.[40]

7. Failure to Indicate Degree of Murder.—"An indictment which clearly and distinctly alleges facts showing a murder by the unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought is good as an indictment for murder under the Utah statutes, although it may not indicate, upon its face, in terms, the degree of that crime."[41] whereby mortal wounds were inflicted upon him, but to the casting and throwing of him into the sea, whereby he was drowned. Any other rule of construction would compel the pleader to indulge in too much repetition. Heydon's Case, 3 Rep. 7." St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 145, 38 L. Ed. 936.

38. Duplicity and uncertainty.—Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 500, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

"Granting that death could not occur from shooting and drowning at the same identical instant, yet the charge that it ensued from both involved no repugnancy in the pleading. For the indictment charged the transaction as continuous, and that two lethal means were employed cooperatively by the accused to accomplish his murderous intent, and whether the vital spark fled before the riddled body struck the water, or lingered until extinguished by the waves, was immaterial." Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 500, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

"The government was not required to make the charge in the alternative in separate counts. The mate was shot and his body immediately thrown overboard, and there was no doubt that, if not then dead, the sea completed what the pistol had begun." Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 500, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

39. Finding of less offense than charged.—"By § 1035 of the Revised Statutes of the United States it is enacted that 'in all criminal causes the defendant may be found guilty of any offense, the commission of which is necessarily included in that with which he is charged in the indictment, or may be found guilty of an attempt to commit the offense so charged: Provided, that each attempt be itself a separate offense.' Under this statute the defendant charged in the indictment with the crime of murder may be found guilty of the lower grade of crime, viz, manslaughter. There must, of course, be some evidence which tends to bear upon that issue." Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 315, 40 L. Ed. 980.

40. Election.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 38 L. Ed. 208; Pierce v. United States, 160 U. S. 355, 356, 40 L. Ed. 454.

Where two murders were committed under such circumstances, that there is a close connection between the two killings, in respect of time, place, and occasion, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to separate the proof of one charge from the proof of the other, the accused is not confounded in his defense by the union of the two offenses of murder in the same indictment, and his substantial rights are not prejudiced by the refusal of the court to compel the prosecutor to elect upon which of the two charges he would proceed; but if in the progress of the trial it appears that the accused might be embarrassed or confounded in his defense, by reason of being compelled to meet both charges of murder at the same time, and before the same jury, it is in the power of the court, at any time before the trial is concluded, to require the government to elect upon which charge it will seek a verdict. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 404, 38 L. Ed. 208.

41. Failure to indicate degree of murder.—Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 266, 38 L. Ed. 153.

"Of course, if an indictment is so framed as to clearly show that the crime charged is not of the class designated as murder in the first degree, the jury could not find a verdict of guilty of murder in that degree. But, as already suggested, the pleader need not indicate the degree, but may restrict the averments to such facts, as, in law, show a murder, that is to say, an unlawful killing with malice aforethought, leaving the ascertainment of the degree to the jury, or, in case of confession, to the court. As the acts which, under the Utah statute, constitute murder, whether of the highest or lowest degree, constituted murder at common law, it is clear that an indictment good at common law as an indictment for murder, in whatever circumstances of atrocity the crime may have been committed, is suffi-

8. Allegation of Joint Assault.—It is not necessary for an indictment, which alleges a joint assault, to show which one or more of the defendants committed the assault, as the proof of the guilt of one would authorize his conviction and the acquittal of the others.[42]

9. Alleging Deliberate and Premeditated Malice.—An indictment alleging that the defendants did, with deliberate and premeditated malice, inflict a mortal wound, of which he instantly died, and that they killed and murdered him in the manner and form aforesaid, sufficiently avers deliberate and premeditated malice under the Oregon statute which requires a statement of the acts constituting the offense, in ordinary and concise language, without repetition, and in such manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended.[43]

10. Alleging Death by Poisoning.—When it is charged in the indictment that the accused administered strychnine and other poisons with the unlawful and felonious intent to take the life of the deceased, and that, so administered, they did have the effect of causing death, the charge is sufficient. It matters not whether he knew the exact character of the strychnine or other poisons.[44] cient for any degree of the crime of murder under a statute relating to murder as defined at common law, and establishing degrees of that crime in order that the punishment may be adapted to the special circumstances of each case." Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 267, 38 L. Ed. 153.

"We are of opinion that the indictment in this case sufficiently charged the crime of murder. The acts constituting the crime are set forth with such clearness and distinctness that both the defendant and the court understood the character of the offense charged, and the court was enabled to pronounce judgment according to the right of the case. The defendant was charged with having willfully, feloniously, and of his deliberately premeditated malice aforethought, assaulted the deceased with a revolver, with which he beat, bruised, and wounded her upon the head, inflicting a mortal wound, from which death instantly resulted, whereby, in the manner stated, the defendant killed and murdered the person so assaulted. The indictment alleges an unlawful killing with malice aforethought and thereby a murder. It was not necessary to allege, in express words, an intent to kill, because murder, as defined by the statute, may be committed if the killing be unlawful, and if no considerable provocation appears, or the circumstances attending the killing show an abandoned or malignant heart. Under the charge made in this case it was competent to show by evidence, under § 4454 of the Complied Laws of Utah, that the killing was with willful, deliberate malice, and was premeditated, and it was, perhaps, competent to show that the killing, in the mode charged, was by an act greatly dangerous to the life of the decedent, and 'evidencing a depraved mind, regardless of human life.' In either case, a verdict of murder in the first degree would have been proper. If the evidence showed a case of homicide, that under the statute was not murder in the first degree, but was nevertheless committed under such circumstances as would have constituted murder at common law, then the verdict should have been that the defendant was guilty of murder in the second degree. But as the evidence was not preserved in a bill of exceptions, we cannot say that the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was unauthorized by the facts adduced at the trial. It certainly was within the scope of the indictment." Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 269, 38 L. Ed. 153.

42. Allegation of joint assault.—St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 145, 38 L. Ed. 936.

"Without merit is the objection that the indictment does not show which one or more of the defendants committed the alleged assault. The indictment charged that the defendants St. Clair, Sparf, and Hansen, acting jointly, killed and murdered Fitzgerald. The offense was one which in its nature might be committed by one or more of the defendants. Proof of the guilt of either one would have authorized his conviction and the acquittal of the others. Archbold's Cr. Pr. & Pl. 176; 2 State Trials, 526; Young v. McKay, 8 T. R. 98, 105." St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 145, 38 L. Ed. 936.

43. Alleging deliberate and premeditated malice.—Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 308, 44 L. Ed. 1078.

44. Alleging death by poisoning.—Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255.

"At the common law, though it was necessary to allege the kind of poison administered, nevertheless proof of the use of a different kind of poison was regarded as an immaterial variance. 'If A. be indicted for poisoning of B., it must allege the kind of poison, but if he poisoned B. with another kind of poisoning, yet it maintains the indictment, for the kind of death is the same.' 2 Hale P. C. 185; 2 Bishop Crim. Pro., §§ 514 and 555." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255.

"The indictment need not specify in de-

C. Defenses—1. INSANITY.—For a discussion of insanity as a defense, see the titles CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43; INSANITY.

2. INFANCY.—The discussion of infancy as a defense is treated under the titles CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43; INFANTS.

3. DRUNKENNESS.—In general, drunkenness is no defense to homicide.[45]

4. LACK OF INTENTION AND MALICE.—"It would be a very singular principle to establish, that, where a man was charged with a homicide, caused by maliciously shooting into a crowd with the purpose of killing some person against whom he bore malice, but with no intent to injure or kill the individual who was actually struck by the shot, he should be held excused because he did not intend to kill that particular person, and had no malice against him."[46]

D. Evidence—1. PRESUMPTIONS.—As to presumptions arising from conduct of accused, such as escape or attempting to escape, and hiding evidences of the crime, see the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43.

2. ADMISSIBILITY—a. In General.—The general discussion of the subject of evidence is treated under the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004.

b. To Prove Guilt of Accused.—Where there is no doubt that a homicide has been committed, it is the province of the jury to determine whether the defendant is a guilty party, and any fact which had a bearing upon this question, immediate or remote, and occurring at any time before the incident was closed, is proper for the consideration of the jury. But statements made by other defendants in his absence implicating him with the murder would not be competent.[47]

c. To Prove Self-Defense.—Upon the question whether the killing of the deceased by the defendant was in self-defense, any evidence, which, according to the common experience of mankind, tended to show that the defendant had reasonable cause to apprehend great bodily harm from the conduct of the deceased towards him just before the killing, is admissible.[48]

d. Character—(1) Of Deceased.—Evidence that the deceased was a larger and more powerful man than the defendant, as well as evidence that the deceased had the general reputation of being a quarrelsome and dangerous person, is competent, especially if his character in this respect was known to the defendant.[49] tail the mode in which its operation was had. It is enough to charge that poison was administered, and that such poison, so administered, caused the death." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255.

"So, also, it is unnecessary to aver that the poison was taken into the stomach of the deceased. The crime would be complete if the poison was by hypodermic injection, or otherwise, introduced into the body of the deceased, and affecting the heart, or other organ, caused the death." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255.

45. Drunkenness.—See the title DRUNKENNESS, vol. 5, p. 496.

Where the court has charged that there must be a willful and intentional killing in order to warrant a conviction of murder, it is not erroneous to add that the recent use of whiskey would not be a defense in this case. Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 418, 46 L. Ed. 1225.

46. Lack of intention and malice.—In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 753, 32 L. Ed. 274.

47. To prove guilt of accused.—Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 313, 44 L. Ed. 1078.

Where the defense put a calender in evidence, to show at what time the moon arose on the night of the killing, and for the purpose of showing that it was not light enough to indentify the accused, the prosecution may put in evidence with respect to the effect of light from the flash of a revolver to show whether such light would be sufficient to enable a person firing the revolver to be identified. Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 316, 44 L. Ed. 1078.

Where the evidence against one accused of murder is purely circumstantial, it is clearly proper for the government to endeavor to establish, as a circumstance in the case, the fact that another person who was present in the vicinity at the time of the killing, could not have committed the crime. Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 568, 42 L. Ed. 568.

48. To prove self-defense.—Smith v. United States, 161 U. S. 85, 88, 40 L. Ed. 626, citing Wiggins v. People, 93 U. S. 465, 23 L. Ed. 941; Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 215, 40 L. Ed. 395.

49. Character of deceased.—Smith v. United States, 161 U. S. 85, 88, 40 L. Ed. 626, citing Wiggins v. People, 93 U. S.

(2) Of Third Person.—On a trial for murder of a mate committed upon the high seas, proof of the character of the captain of the vessel and his treatment of the accused prior to the killing, was not admissible, where there was nothing to indicate that the captain's conduct was so connected with the killing of the mate as to form part of the res gestæ, or that it could have any legitimate tendency to justify, excuse or mitigate the crime.[50]

(3) Of Accused.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 125.

e. Prior Provocation.—In a trial for murder, if the defendant's testimony fails to establish any grounds of self-defense, it is proper for the court to exclude any evidence of prior provocation, or even of injuries previously inflicted by the deceased upon the accused.[51]

f. Fruits of Crime.—"Proof that defendant had in his possession, soon after, articles apparently taken from the deceased at the time of his death, is always admissible, and the fact, with its legitimate inference, is to be considered by the jury along with the other facts in the case in arriving at their verdict."[52]

g. Facts Too Remote.—Evidence of facts too remote from the time of the homicide is inadmissible.[53]

h. Bloodstains.—"The existence of bloodstains at or near a place where violence has been inflicted is always relevant and admissible in evidence."[54]

i. Picture of Deceased.—The picture of the deceased is admissible on the question of identity.[55]

j. Proof of Other Crimes.—See the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004.

k. Threats—(1) Uncommunicated Threats.—In a trial for homicide, where the question, whether the prisoner or the deceased commenced the encounter which resulted in death, is in any manner of doubt, it is competent to prove threats of violence against the prisoner made by the deceased, though not brought to the knowledge of the prisoner.[56]

465, 23 L. Ed. 941; Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 215, 40 L. Ed. 395.

50. Of third person.—Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 503, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

On a trial for the murder of the mate, evidence of the character of the captain for ferocity, brutality and vindictiveness, is inadmissible, where there is no adequate basis for the contention that the accused killed the mate in self-defense. Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 509, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

51. Prior provocation.—Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 509, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

52. Fruits of crime.—Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 620, 40 L. Ed. 1090.

"Possession of the fruits of crime, recently after its commission, justifies the inference that the possession is guilty possession, and, though only prima facie evidence of guilt, may be of controlling weight unless explained by the circumstances or accounted for in some way consistent with innocence." Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 619, 40 L. Ed. 1090.

53. Facts too remote.—Testimony that the accused had, a month previous to the homicide, threatened violence against another member of the same party, and that he was disagreeable and used vulgar language toward the other members of the party, is inadmissible, because such incidents are too remote from the time of the homicide, nor do they tend to show that he had any feeling of enmity toward the deceased. Bird v. United States, 180 U. S. 356, 360, 45 L. Ed. 570.

Testimony that the accused tried to pick a fight with another person of the same party six months after the homicide, is inadmissible because too remote and it does not show that he had any feeling of enmity toward the deceased. Bird v. United States, 180 U. S. 356, 360, 45 L. Ed. 570.

54. Bloodstains.—Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 620, 40 L. Ed. 1090.

"The jury might regard bloodstains not satisfactorily explained as a circumstance in determining whether or not a murder had been committed." Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 620, 40 L. Ed. 1090.

55. Picture of deceased.—Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 621, 40 L. Ed. 1090.

56. Wiggins v. People, 93 U. S. 465, 23 L. Ed. 941.

"Although there is some conflict of authority as to the admission of threats of the deceased against the prisoner in a case of homicide, where the threats had not been communicated to him, there is a modification of the doctrine in more recent times, established by the decisions of courts of high authority, which is very well stated by Wharton, in his work on Criminal Law, § 1027: 'Where the question is as to what was deceased's attitude at the time of the fatal encounter, recent threats may become relevant to show that this attitude was one hostile to the defendant, even though such threats were not communicated to defendant. The evidence is not relevant to show the quo animo of the defendant, but it may be relevant to show that, at the time of the meeting, the deceased was seeking defendants's life.'" Wiggins v. People, 93 U. S. 465, 466, 23 L. Ed. 941.

(2) Communicated Threats.—In a murder case recent threats made by the deceased and communicated to the defendant are admissible in evidence upon the question whether defendant had reasonable cause to apprehend an attack, fatal to life or fraught with great bodily injury, and hence was justified in acting on a hostile demonstration and one of much less pronounced character than if such threats had not preceded it.[57] They are relevant because indicating cause for apprehension of danger and reason for promptness to repel attack, but they cannot be admitted if offered by the prosecution as tending to show spite, ill-will, or grudge on the part of the person threatened; nor can they, being admitted on defendant's behalf, if coupled with an actual or apparent hostile demonstration, be turned against him in the absence of evidence justifying such a construction.[58]

57. Communicated threats.—Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 215, 40 L. Ed. 395.

If it appears that the accused believed and had reasonable ground for the belief that he was in imminent danger of death or great bodily harm from the person whom he shot at the moment that he fired, and would not have fired but for such belief, and if that belief, founded on reasonable ground, might in any view the jury could properly take of the circumstances surrounding the killing, have excused his act or reduced the crime from murder to manslaughter, then evidence of threats of the deceased before the killing is relevant and the exclusion of it is error. Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 471, 40 L. Ed. 1039.

In Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 40 L. Ed. 1039, defendant offered to prove by Mrs. Alice Sargent that somewhere near the middle of February, 1895, she had a conversation with Zane, on which occasion "Alex. Zane said to this woman and threatened that he would kill Jerry Wallace, and that he had a knife that he was carrying at that time for that purpose, and that these threats were communicated to Jerry Wallace by this witness afterwards." This was objected to, the objection sustained and defendant excepted. A similar offer of proof by one Taylor was made and a similar exception taken. Defendant also offered to prove by Samuel Collins "that at a time shortly before the 7th of March last he met Alexander Zane and had a conversation with Alexander Zane about Jerry Wallace, and that in that conversation he threatened to kill Jerry Wallace, and that he said to this witness that he at one time made him look down the muzzle of a double-barrelled shotgun and he wished he had killed him at that time, and that these threats were communicated to the defendant." An offer to prove similar threats prior to the homicide by Mary Crow was made, excluded and exception taken. When the defendant was on the stand he testified that he took the gun into the field because he was afraid of the party, and especially of Alexander Zane, and did not feel safe without some protection. The following questions were put and ruling made: "Q. You may state, Mr. Wallace, what Zane did at that time, just before you fired the shot. A. He just took his hand something like this (indicating) saying, 'Damm you, I will kill you.' Q. You may state to the jury from that demonstration what you belived Zane was about to do." To this question plaintiff objected, the objection was sustained and defendant excepted. The supreme court held that: "If Jerry Wallace believed and had reasonable ground for the belief that he was in imminent danger of death or great bodily harm from Zane at the moment he fired, and would not have fired but for such belief, and if that belief, founded on reasonable ground, might in any view the jury could properly take of the circumstances surrounding the killing, have excused his act or reduced the crime from murder to manslaughter, then the evidence in respect of Zane's threats was relevant and it was error to exclude it; and it was also error to refuse to allow the question to be put to Wallace as to his belief based on the demonstration on Zane's part to which he testified."

And the mere fact that the accused, when he saw the deceased trespassing on his property, procured a gun and returned with it, is not in itself sufficient ground for the exclusion of such evidence. Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 40 L. Ed. 1039.

58. Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 215, 40 L. Ed. 395.

"We think that the language of the court in the particulars named is open to the criticism made in reference to like instructions under consideration in Thompson v. United States, 155 U. S. 271, 281, 39 L. Ed. 146, where we remarked: 'While it is no doubt true that previous threats will not, in all circumstances,

l. Dying Declarations.—The admissibility of dying declarations is treated in the title DYING DECLARATIONS, vol. 5, p. 686.

m. Confessions.—This part of the subject is treated under the title CONFESSIONS, vol. 3, p. 1009.

E. Witnesses—1. IN GENERAL.—For a general discussion of this subject, see the title WITNESSES.

2. DEFENDANT'S RIGHT TO HAVE LIST OF WITNESSES.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 110.

3. EXAMINATION OF.—A witness may be cross-examined upon facts relevant to the issue,[59] or which effect his character or credibility as a witness.[60]

F. Questions of Law and Fact—1. TO DETERMINE NATURE OF CRIME.—Though the evidence might appear to the court to be simply overwhelming to show that the killing was in fact murder, and not manslaughter or an act performed in self-defense, yet, so long as there was some evidence relevant to the issue of manslaughter, the credibility and force of such evidence must be for the jury, and cannot be matter of law for the decision of the court.[61]

2. DEGREE OF MURDER.—Where, under the statute, it is for the jury to say whether the facts make a case of murder in the first degree or murder in the second degree, it is error for the court to say, in its charge, that the offense, by whomsoever committed, was that of murder in the first degree.[62]

3. OVERT DEMONSTRATION OF VIOLENCE.—"What is or is not an overt demonstration of violence varies with the circumstances. Under some circumstances a slight movement may justify instant action because of reasonable apprehension of danger; under other circumstances this would not be so. And it is for the jury, and not for the judge, passing upon the weight and effect of the evidence, to determine how this may be."[63]

G. Instructions—1. IN GENERAL.—This subject is treated, generally, under the title INSTRUCTIONS.

2. AS TO THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE MENTAL OPERATIONS.—"To direct the at-justify or, perhaps, even extenuate the act of the party threatened in killing the person who uttered the threats, yet it by no means follows that such threats, signifying ill-will and hostility on the part of the deceased, can be used by the jury as indicating a similar state of feeling on the part of the defendant. Such an instruction was not only misleading in itself, but it was erroneous in the present case, for the further reason that it omitted all reference to the conduct of the deceased at the time of the killing, which went to show an intention then and there to carry out the previous threats.'" Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 216, 40 L. Ed. 395.

59. Examination of.—On a trial for homicide a woman may be cross-examined as to the defendant's drunken sleep on the occasion, and as to the conversation between defendant and her husband after he awoke. Tla-Koo-Yel-Lee v. United States, 167 U. S. 274, 42 L. Ed. 166.

60. Where, on a trial for homicide, a woman testifies against her husband, she may be asked if she is living with another person, as her answers bear upon her character and credibility as a witness. Tla-Koo-Yel-Lee v. United States, 167 U. S. 274, 42 L. Ed. 166. See, generally, the title WITNESSES.

61. To determine nature of crime.—Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 315, 40 L. Ed. 980.

"The ruling of the learned judge was to the effect that, in this case, the killing was either murder, or else it was done in the course of self-defense, and that under no view which could possibly be taken of the evidence would the jury be at liberty to find the defendant guilty of manslaughter. The court passed upon the strength, credibility and tendency of the evidence, and decided, as a matter of law, what it seems to us would generally be regarded as a question of fact, viz, whether under all the circumstances which the jury might, from the evidence, find existed in the case, the defendant was guilty of murder, or whether he killed the deceased not in self-defense, but unlawfully and unjustly, although without malice. The presence or absence of malice would be the material consideration in the case, provided the jury should reject the theory of self-defense, and yet this question of fact is, under the evidence in the case, determined by the trial court as one of law and against the defendant." Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 315, 40 L. Ed. 980.

62. Degree of murder.—Hopt v. People, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. Ed. 262.

63. Overt demonstration of violence.—

tention of the jury to the contemplation of the philosophy of the mental operations, upon which justification or excuse or mitigation in the taking of human life may be predicated, is to hazard the substitution of abstract conceptions for the actual facts of the particular case as they appeared to the defendant at the time."[64]

3. Self-Defense and Effect of Arming Oneself.—An instruction is erroneous in withstanding from the jury the question of self-defense,[65] and likewise in telling them that the intentional arming himself with a pistol by the

Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 216, 40 L. Ed. 395.

64. As to the philosophy of the mental operations.—Allen v. United States, 150 U. S. 551, 561, 37 L. Ed. 1179.

65. Self-defense.—Allen v. United States, 157 U. S. 675, 681, 39 L. Ed. 854.

In Allen v. United States, 157 U. S. 675, 39 L. Ed. 854, the following instruction was held erroneous: If it is true that deceased and the other boys attacked defendant with sticks, and while that attack was going on and in the heat of that affray, and the sticks were not of a dangerous or deadly character, and under such circumstances the defendant shot and killed the deceased, that would be manslaughter; but if there was an absence of that condition, then there is no manslaughter in it, nor could there be any self-defense in it. The court said: "By this instruction the jury were shut up, in effect, to find either manslaughter or murder—the claim of self-defense was excluded. Or, rather, self-defense was eliminated if the sticks were not 'deadly weapons.' In this we think there was error. In one sense it may be true that sticks or clubs are not deadly weapons. Carrying them does not import any hostile intent, nor, even in view of an expected affray, a design to take life. But when a fight is actually going on sticks and clubs may become weapons of a very deadly character. Life may be endangered or taken by blows from them as readily as by balls from a pistol. Hence we think that the jury ought not to have been told that there 'could not be any self-defense in it;' and that 'it could not be self-defense because the injury received would not be of that deadly character or that dangerous nature that would give a man the right to slay another because of threatened deadly injury or great bodily injury received.' Such a question as that was one peculiarly for the jury, and we think that they should have been left free to say whether the accused had not a right, when defending himself from an attack made by several persons using sticks, to consider himself in danger of life or limb. The verdict found, that of murder, is, we think, convincing that the jury were misled by this instruction."

A charge to the jury that "you are to distinguish * * * between a case where a man prepares simply to defend himself and keeps himself in the right in that defense, and a state of case where he prepares himself recklessly, wantonly, and without just cause to take the life of another. If he prepares himself in the latter way, and he is on the lookout for the man he has thus prepared himself to kill and he kills him upon sight, that is murder, and it would shock humanity or even the most technical and hair-spliting court to decide anything else. That can be nothing else but murder. If he is in the right—if he is in the right at the time of the killing—and simply prepared himself to defend his own life, that is preparation not to take the life of another, but preparation to defend himself. That is the distinction, a distinction that is clear and comprehensive,"—is erroneous when it ignores evidence tending to show that the defendant had not armed himself at all, but had the gun with him for the purpose of sport, and that his appearance at the place of the killing had no connection with the deceased. It invites the jury to contemplate the spectacle of the defendant looking up the deceased with deliberate preconceived intention of murdering him, unrelieved by allusion to defensive matter, which throws a different light on the transaction. Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 211, 40 L. Ed. 395.

Instructions are erroneous which fail to inform the jury of defendant's right to kill in self-defense where he had testified to his own belief that his life was in danger, and to the facts that led him so to believe. Bird v. United States, 180 U. S. 356, 362, 45 L. Ed. 570.

In Bird v. United States, 187 U. S. 118, 129, 47 L. Ed. 100, a court upon the question of self-defense charged as follows: "But in determining this matter, under the evidence before you, you must consider the situation of the parties at the time and all the surrounding circumstances, together with the testimony of the witnesses for the prosecution, as well as the evidence of the defendant." The contention of the plaintiff in error was that the last paragraph "qualified the whole instruction and permeated it with two errors;" because it was in effect declared that even if the testimony of the witnesses for the government were untrue it was to be considered in determining the verdict; and because all of the evidence for the defendant (plaintiff in error) except his own was withdrawn from the jury in passing on the issue of self-defense. But the supreme court held the defendant, even if with a view to self-defense, would make a case of murder unless the actual affray developed a case of necessary self-defense.[66]

4. Obligation to Instruct upon Manslaughter.—Where there is no evidence to reduce an offense below the grade of murder, a court is under no obligation to give an instruction upon manslaughter.[67]

5. Corpus Delicti.—Where there was no witness to the homicide and the identification of the body was not perfect owing to its condition caused by fire, yet when taking all the circumstances together, there was clearly enough to warrant the jury in finding that the partially burned body was that of deceased and that he had been killed by the defendant, the trial court properly refuses to instruct the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty for the reason that the corpus delicti had not been proved.[68]

6. Instruction to Find Verdict of Not Guilty.—Where on a trial for murder there is not sufficient evidence to support a verdict of guilty of an offense less than one charged, it is not error for the court to instruct the jury that they instruction was not open to this criticism when considered in connection with other instructions. The rule as to the credibility of witnesses was given in other instructions, and did not have to accompany every ruling, and the jury were instructed that it was their duty "to consider the whole evidence and render a verdict in accordance with the facts proved upon the trial." The injunction was not limited by the paragraph complained of by plaintiff in error. That was preceded by the following: "In considering whether the killing in this case was justifiable or excusable on the ground of self-defense, the jury should consider all the circumstances attending the killing, the conduct of the parties at the time and shortly prior thereto, and their respective situations at the time. You should determine from the evidence in this case whether the several parties were situated at the time of the killing as described by the witness for the prosecution or described by the defendant himself."

66. Effect of arming oneself.—Allen v. United States, 157 U. S. 675, 39 L. Ed. 854.

An instruction that if the defendant was assaulted with sticks, and the sticks were not deadly weapons, and they were engaged in a conflict, and in that conflict the defendant shot the deceased, without previous preparation, without previous deliberation, without previous selection of a deadly weapon, without a contemplated purpose to use that weapon in a dangerous way, then that would be manslaughter, and it could not be self-defense, is objectionable, not only on the ground that it shuts out from the consideration of the jury the claim of self-defense, but because of the assumption that if the defendant in view of the previous threats that he was to be killed, had armed himself with a pistol and subsequently used it when attacked, it would have been not only not a case of self-defense, but not even of manslaughter, but of murder. Allen v. United States, 157 U. S. 675, 680, 39 L. Ed. 854.

"In this respect the instruction involved the same error which we considered in the case of Gourko v. United States, 153 U. S. 183, 38 L. Ed. 680, and where it was held that a person who has an angry altercation with another person, such as to lead him to believe that he may require the means of self-defense in case of another encounter, may be justified, in the eye of the law, in arming himself for self-defense; and if, on meeting his adversary, on a subsequent occasion, he kills him, but not in necessary self-defense his crime may be that of manslaughter or murder, as the circumstances, on the occasion of the killing, make it the one or the other; and that if, looking alone at those circumstances, his crime be that of manslaughter, it is not converted into murder by reason of his having previously armed himself. In the case of Thompson v. United States, 155 U. S. 271, 39 L. Ed. 146, the same view was taken by this court, and the judgment of the court below was reversed because, at the trial, the jury was instructed that 'the previous selection, preparation, and subsequent use of a deadly weapon shows that there was a purpose to kill contemplated before that affray existed, and whenever that exists, when it is done improperly and unlawfully so that there is no law of self-defense in it, the fact that they may have been in an actual affray with hands or fists would not reduce the grade of the crime to manslaughter.' This language was regarded by this court as erroneous because it involved the assumption that the act of the defendant in arming himself showed a purpose to kill, formed before the actual affray." Allen v. United States, 157 U. S. 675, 680, 39 L. Ed. 854.

67. Obligation to instruct upon manslaughter.—Davis v. United States, 165 U. S. 373, 375, 41 L. Ed. 750. See ante, "Definition and General Consideration," III, A.

68. Corpus delicti.—Perovich v. United States, 205 U. S. 86, 91, 51 L. Ed. 722.

could not consistently with the law arising from the evidence find the defendants guilty of manslaughter or of any offense less than the one charged; that if the defendants were not guilty of the offense charged, the duty of the jury was to return a verdict of not guilty.[69]

7. MANNER OF INSTRUCTING.—It is the duty of the judge to be impartial and calm in his instructions to the jury.[70]

VI. Sentence and Punishment.

"As the crime of murder involves sufficient capacity to distinguish between right and wrong, the legal interpretation of every verdict of guilty as charged is that the jury believed from all the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused was guilty, and was therefore responsible, criminally, for his acts."[71]

HOPPER BARGE.—See note 1.

HORSE RACING.—See the titles ACCIDENT INSURANCE, vol. 1, p. 60; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 379.

69. Instruction to find verdict of not guilty.—Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 106, 39 L. Ed. 343.

The jury will not be justified in finding a verdict of manslaughter if there is no evidence upon which to base such a finding, and in that event the court will have the right to instruct the jury to that effect. Anderson v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 511, 42 L. Ed. 1116; Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 39 L. Ed. 343; Stevenson v. United States, 162 U. S. 313, 315, 40 L. Ed. 980.

70. Manner of instructing.—Hickory v. United States, 160 U. S. 408, 40 L. Ed. 474.

An instruction which is tantamount to saying to the jury that flight created a legal presumption of guilt, so strong and so conclusive, that it is the duty of the jury to act on it as an axiomatic truth, is incorrect; it should be impartial and calm. Hickory v. United States, 160 U. S. 408, 422, 40 L. Ed. 474.

On a homicide charge, the court instructed the jury: "Bearing in mind that he stands before you as an interested witness, while these circumstances are of a character that they cannot be bribed, that cannot be dragged into perjury, they cannot be seduced by bribery into perjury, but they stand as bloody, naked facts before you, speaking for Joseph Wilson and justice, in opposition to and confronting this defendant, who stands before you as an interested party, the party who has in this case the largest interest a man can have in any case upon earth." Held, such instruction crosses the line which separates the impartial exercise of the judicial function from the region of partisanship where reason is disturbed, passions excited, and prejudices are necessarily called into play. Hickory v. United States, 160 U. S. 408, 424, 40 L. Ed. 474, citing Allison v. United States, 160 U. S. 203, 40 L. Ed. 395; Starr v. United States, 153 U. S. 614, 38 L. Ed. 841; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. Ed. 244.

71. Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 488, 40 L. Ed. 499. See the title SENTENCE AND PUNISHMENT.

1. Hopper barge.—As to whether or not a hopper barge is a ship in the meaning of the salvage laws, see Cope v. Vallette Dry Dock Co., 119 U. S. 625, 629, 30 L. Ed. 501. See, also, the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

HOSPITALS AND ASYLUMS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

As to right of secretary of commissioners of naval hospitals to commissions on disbursements, see the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, pp. 532, 533. As to soldiers' homes, see the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 539. As to construction of conveyances of property for hospital purposes to charitable uses, see the title CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 678. As to certainty of a devise of property for a site for the erection of a hospital, see the title CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 684. As to right of congress to make appropriation for hospitals upon grounds owned by Roman Catholic Church, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 464. As to right of a lessee to use property for hospital purposes, see the title LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Navy Hospital Commissioners and Their Authority.—The act of 1811, constituting the fund for navy hospitals, makes the secretaries of the navy, treasury and war departments, a board of commissioners, by the name and style of commissioners of navy hospitals, and gives some general directions in what way the fund is to be employed; but the mode and manner of transacting their business is not in any way prescribed.[1]

HOTCHPOT.—See the title ADVANCEMENTS, vol. 1, p. 198.

HOTEL.—See the title INNS AND INNKEEPERS.

HOUSE.—See BUILDING, vol. 3, p. 542.

HOUSEHOLD.—Persons who dwell together as a family constitute a "household."[2]

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1.

HUNTING GROUNDS.—See note 3.

1. Naval hospital commissioners and their authority.—United States v. Fillebrown, 7 Pet. 28, 29, 8 L. Ed. 596.

Necessity that proceedings of commissioners be in writing.—There is no general principle of law, known to the court, and no authority has been shown, establishing the doctrine, that all the proceedings of the commissioners of navy hospitals must be in writing, or that they shall be deemed void, unless the statute under which they act shall require their proceedings to be reduced to writing; it is certainly fit and proper that every important transaction of the board should be committed to writing, but the law imposes no such indispensable duty. United States v. Fillebrown, 7 Pet. 28, 29, 8 L. Ed. 596.

2. Arthur v. Morgan, 112 U. S. 495, 499, 28 L. Ed. 825. See EFFECTS, vol. 5, p. 693. See, also, the title REVENUE LAWS.

3. Hunting grounds.—See Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 553, 8 L. Ed. 483. See the title INDIANS.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

BY J. N. CLAYBROOK.

I. Powers and Disabilities, 718.

A. Powers and Disabilities of Wife, 718.
1. Contractual Capacity, 718.
a. General Rules, 718.
b. Particular Contracts, 718.
(1) Contracts to Convey, 718.
(2) Covenants of Title, 718.
(3) Contracts of Purchase, 718.
(4) Promissory Notes, 719.
(5) Conveyances of Real Estate, 719.
(a) At Common Law, 719.
(b) Under Statutes, 719.
(6) Mortgages, 720.
c. Ratification or Disaffirmance, 721.
2. Powers of Attorney, 722.
3. Capacity to Act as Trustee, 723.
a. In General, 723.
b. Conveyances of Real Estate, 723.
4. Capacity to Be Estopped, 723.
5. Testamentary Capacity, 724.
6. Capacity to Execute Powers, 724.
7. Acquisition of National Character or Citizenship, 724.
8. Criminal Responsibility of Married Women, 724.
9. When Wife Entitled to Act as Feme Sole, 724.
a. Desertion or Abandonment by Husband, 724.
b. Wife Acting as Sole Trader, 724.
B. Powers and Disabilities of Husband, 724.

II. Property Rights, 725.

A. Interest of Husband in Wife's Property, 725.
1. Personal Property, 725.
a. Property in Possession at Time of Marriage, 725.
b. Property Acquired after Marriage, 725.
(1) In General, 725.
(2) Earnings of Wife, 725.
c. Property in Action, 725.
2. Real Estate, 726.
a. Estates of Inheritance, 726.
b. Leaseholds, 726.
c. Rents and Profits, 726.
d. Proceeds of Sale, 726.
B. Community Property, 727.
1. In General, 727.
2. In Louisiana, 727.
a. In General, 727.
b. What Constitutes, 727.
c. Descent, 727.
3. In Porto Rico, 728.
a. Power of Husband, 728.

b. Divorce as Defeating Wife's Interest, 728.
c. Liquidation of Community Property, 728.
4. In Texas, 728.
5. In Washington, 728.
C. Conveyances to Husband and Wife, 729.
D. Conveyances in Fraud of Marital Rights, 729.
E. Liability of Wife's Property for Husband's Debts, 729.

III. Support of Wife, 730.

IV. Transactions between Husband and Wife, 730.
A. Validity as between Parties, 730.
B. Validity as to Creditors and Purchasers, 730.

V. Liability of Husband for Wife's Contracts or Torts, 731.
A. Contracts, 731.
B. Torts, 731.

VI. Criminal Conversation, 731.

VII. Separation, 731.
A. Contracts for Separate Maintenance, 731.
B. Separate Maintenance under Statute, 732.
C. Agreements as to Property Rights, 732.

VIII. Actions, 732.
A. Actions by Husband or Wife or Both, 732.
1. Parties, 732.
a. Actions by Husband, 732.
b. Actions by Wife, 732.
c. Actions by Both Husband and Wife, 733.
2. Declaration, 733.
a. Actions for Criminal Conversation, 733.
b. Actions of Ejectment, 733.
B. Actions against Husband and Wife or Both, 734.
1. Parties, 734.
a. In General, 734.
b. Action to Foreclose Mortgage on Wife's Realty, 734.
c. Recovery of Land from Husband and Wife, 734.
d. Divesting Wife's Title in Trust Realty, 734.
2. Judgment, 734.
C. Actions or Suits between Husband and Wife, 734.
1. Actions at Law, 734.
2. Suits in Equity, 734.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ACKNOWLEDGMENTS, vol. 1, p. 76; BIGAMY AND POLYGAMY, vol. 3, p. 225; DIVORCE AND ALIMONY, vol. 5, p. 412; DOMICILE, vol. 5, p. 473; DOWER, vol. 5, p. 487; ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913; FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472; INFANTS; MARRIAGE; MARRIAGE CONTRACTS AND SETTLEMENTS; SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; UNDUE INFLUENCE; WILLS; WITNESSES.

As to pleading coverture of defendant in abatement, as defense to action, see the title ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 31. As to service of citation in action against women marrying before issuance of writ of error, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 169. As to liability of married women on national bank stock, see the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, pp. 137, 138. As to extent of adoption of common law in relation to husband and wife, by states and territories, see the title COMMON LAW, vol. 3, pp. 965, 972. As to marriage as consideration, see the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552. As to state laws and decisions as controlling federal courts on questions relating to separate estate, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1115. As to impairment of earning capacity as element of damages in action by wife for personal injury, see the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 186. As to domicile of married women, see the title DOMICILE, vol. 5, p. 473. As to joinder of wife in deed of husband as barring dower, see the title DOWER, vol. 5, p. 487. As to estoppel of married women, see the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913. As to right of husband to administer in wife's estate, see the title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, ante, p. 119. As to rights of persons intermarrying with Indians, see the title INDIANS. As to coverture as suspending statute of limitations, see the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION. As to marriage contracts or settlements, see the title MARRIAGE CONTRACTS AND SETTLEMENTS. As to judgment in action by husband and wife as barring action by husband, for same course of action, see the title RES ADJUDICATA. As to separation of property in Louisiana, see the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN. As to purchase by husband and conveyance to wife as constituting resulting trust, see the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES. As to husband or wife as witnesses for or against each other, see the title WITNESSES.

I. Powers and Disabilities.

A. Powers and Disabilities of Wife—1. CONTRACTUAL CAPACITY—a. General Rules.—At the common law, a married women cannot as a general rule bind herself by contract,[1] and her disability in this respect cannot be overcome by any form of acknowledgment or mode of execution, or by her uniting with her husband in the contract.[2] A contract entered into by both husband and wife is the obligation of the husband alone.[3] The doctrine of the common law has, however, been greatly modified in most of the states by legislation, and the extent to which a married woman may contract, and the manner in which her contracts shall be authenticated and enforced, are definitely prescribed.[4]

b. Particular Contracts—(1) Contracts to Convey.—At the common law, a bond for the conveyance of land when signed by a married woman, neither confers a legal nor equitable right upon the obligee.[5]

(2) Covenants of Title.—See the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 17.

(3) Contracts of Purchase.—The disabilities imposed upon married women are intended for their protection, and the law will not allow them to be used

1. Capacity to contract.—Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 330, 25 L. Ed. 390; Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. 242, 248, 7 L. Ed. 666; Pierce v. Turner, 5 Cranch 154, 170, 3 L. Ed. 64; Ankeney v. Hannon, 147 U. S. 118, 123, 37 L. Ed. 105; Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 338, 7 L. Ed. 164; Clark v. Beecher, 154 U. S., appx., 631, 24 L. Ed. 705.

"By the principles of the common law, a married women can, in general, do no act to bind her; she is said to be sub potestate viri, and subject to this will and control. Her acts are not like those of infants, and some other disabled persons, voidable only; but are, in general, absolutely void ab initio." Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 338, 7 L. Ed. 164.

2. Mode of executing contract as overcoming disability.—Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 330, 25 L. Ed. 390.

3. Contract by husband and wife.—Ankeney v. Hannon, 147 U. S. 118, 123, 37 L. Ed. 105.

4. Modification of common-law rule by statute.—Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 25 L. Ed. 390; Marchand v. Griffon, 140 U. S. 516, 35 L. Ed. 527. See post, "Conveyances of Real Estate," I, A, 1, b, (5).

In Mississippi, unless a married woman has a separate estate there situate, she is, as to her contracts, subject to the disability of coverture, and a creditor suing her there must aver in his bill or declaration that she has such an estate, and that his debt is a charge upon it, or ought to be paid out of it. Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 326, 25 L. Ed. 390.

The statute does not oblige a married woman to pay for property purchased on credit, the rule being that such an obligation cannot be enforced. Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 246, 25 L. Ed. 850.

In Louisiana, a married woman cannot bind herself for her husband's debts. Marchand v. Griffon, 140 U. S. 516, 35 L. Ed. 527.

As to wife's powers as to separate estate, in general, see the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

5. Contracts to convey.—Agricultural Bank v. Rice, 4 How. 225, 11 L. Ed. 949. See the title VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

as the means of committing fraud.[6] Hence, it is well settled that a married woman may take land by purchase,[7] and that, in such case, the equitable rule that purchase money is to be treated as a lien on the land sold where the purchaser has taken no separate security, applies with as much force as to any other case.[8]

(4) Promissory Notes.—At common law, a married woman is disabled from executing any promissory notes, either alone or in conjunction with her husband, and a note signed by both is binding on the husband alone.[9]

(5) Conveyance of Real Estate—(a) At Common Law.—By the common law, a married woman could not convey an estate of freehold owned by her unless by levying a fine or suffering a common recovery.[10]

(b) Under Statutes.—The common-law rule as to conveyances by married women was changed in England by the statute of 3 & 4 Will. IV, c, 74, which abolished fines and recoveries, and provided other means for transferring the estates of femes covert.[11] And in most, if not all, of the states of the Union, statutes have been passed providing for the manner in which a married woman may dispose of her real estate.[12] The method usually provided is by deed of both husband and wife,[13] which must, as a general rule, be acknowledged by

6. Disability not to be used as means of defrauding seller.—Chilton v. Braiden, 2 Black 458, 17 L. Ed. 304; Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 339, 27 L. Ed. 112.

7. Purchase of land by married woman.—Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 339, 27 L. Ed. 112; Chilton v. Braiden, 2 Black 458, 17 L. Ed. 304.

Where a married woman buys land giving notes secured by vendor's lien for purchase price, she is liable therein, and is not to be allowed for improvements. The lien may be enforced for amount due, and she is not entitled to set aside contract and recover amount paid on notes. Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 27 L. Ed. 112.

8. Vendor's implied lien against married women.—Chilton v. Braiden, 2 Black 458, 17 L. Ed. 304; Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 27 L. Ed. 112. See the title VENDORS' LIENS.

9. Promissory notes.—Ankeney v. Hannon, 147 U. S. 118, 123, 37 L. Ed. 105; Marchand v. Griffon, 140 U. S. 516, 527, 35 L. Ed. 527.

10. Conveyance by feme covert at common law.—Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 64, 42 L. Ed. 658; Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850.

11. Abolition of common-law rule in England.—Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 64, 42 L. Ed. 658.

Great changes in the rules of the common law in that regard were made, even before the colonies separated from the parent country. Deeds of indenture in transferring the real property of the wife, with the consent of the husband, were substituted in the place of fine and recovery. Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850.

12. Abolition of common-law rule in United States.—Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 64, 42 L. Ed. 658.

13. Method of conveying under state statutes.—Schley v. Pullman Car Co., 120 U. S. 575, 583, 30 L. Ed. 789; Knight v. Paxton, 124 U. S. 552, 31 L. Ed. 518; Sewall v. Haymaker, 127 U. S. 719, 729, 32 L. Ed. 299; Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 63, 42 L. Ed. 658; Kaiser v. Strickney, 131 U. S., appx. clxxxvii, clxxxix, 23 L. Ed. 176; Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 329, 7 L. Ed. 164.

The conveyance of the estates of married women by deed, with separate examination and acknowledgment, has taken the place of the alienation of such estates by fine in a court of record under the law of England, though differing in some of its effects, owing to the diversity in the nature of the two modes of proceeding. Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297, 300, 31 L. Ed. 156.

As to a wife's property generally, it is well settled that she may, by joining in a deed with her husband, convey any interest she has in real estate. Such a deed conveys the interest of both. Stephen v. Beall, 22 Wall. 337, 22 L. Ed. 786.

In Illinois.—Within the meaning of the act of 1847, and according to the tendency of the decisions of the supreme court of the state of Illinois, the wife joins with her husband in the execution of a conveyance of her estate of inheritance where her name alone appears in the granting clause, but the deed is signed by both herself and husband, is acknowledged by both, and is certified as required by law. Such conveyance, so signed, acknowledged, and certified, of the wife's land, seems to be as effectual, under the local law, to invest the grantee with the title and interest of both husband and wife as if his name had also appeared in the granting clause. Schley v. Pullman Car Co., 120 U. S. 575, 583, 30 L. Ed. 789.

In the District of Columbia, a married woman may convey her general property by uniting with her husband in a deed executed in the form required by §§ 450, 451 and 452 of the statutes. In this way she could charge her property with the the wife in the mode prescribed by statute.[14] Whatever the statutory requirements may be, they must be strictly pursued.[15] If a deed purports to convey the wife's lands, the wife, and not the husband, must be the grantor.[16] The fact that a deed for the wife's land is in the form prescribed by the statute does not, of course, prevent it from being impeached for insanity or infancy of the grantor or for fraud or duress.[17]

(6) Mortgages.—Since, at the common law, a married woman is incapable of making a valid contract, it follows that she cannot bind her general property by mortgage.[18] But this rule has been superseded by statute in most of the payment of a debt, although she might not be able to bind herself individually. Where the husband did unite with her in the execution of a deed and the requirements of the law as to the form of execution were in all respects complied with, it was held that the deed was binding. Kaiser v. Strickney, 131 U. S., appx. clxxxvii, clxxxix, 26 L. Ed. 176.

"Under the laws of Maryland, which were in force in the District of Columbia in 1859, we think it was then competent for a married woman, outside of the district, to execute, with her husband, a power of attorney to convey her lands therein, which, when acknowledged by her according to the statute relating to the acknowledgment by married women of deeds conveying their real property in the district, thereby became a valid and sufficient instrument to authorize the conveyance by attorney." Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 63, 42 L. Ed. 658.

In Maryland, a married woman cannot dispose of real property, without the consent of her husband; nor can she execute a good and valid deed to pass real estate, unless he join it; the separate examination and other solemnities required by law are indispensable, and must not be omitted. A deed, therefore, executed by a married woman, of real property, acquired by her while a sole trader and while she was abandoned by her husband, is void. Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 7 L. Ed. 72.

In Ohio a deed for land, acknowledged by the wife, but not acknowledged by the husband in the lifetime of the wife, will not pass her estate in the lands conveyed. Sewall v. Haymaker, 127 U. S. 719, 730, 32 L. Ed. 299.

In Virginia the acknowledgment and the recording of conveyances by husband and wife of lands in that commonwealth, in the mode prescribed by her laws, is essential to pass the estate of the wife in such lands. Sewall v. Haymaker, 127 U. S. 719, 728, 32 L. Ed. 299.

14. Acknowledgment by wife.—See the title ACKNOWLEDGMENTS, vol. 1, pp. 78, 79, 83, 88.

15. Statutes to be strictly pursued.—Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 7 L. Ed. 164; Meegan v. Boyle, 19 How. 130, 15 L. Ed. 577.

In Virginia and Kentucky, the solemn modes of conveyance by fine and common recovery have never been in common use; and in those states, the capacity of a feme covert to convey her estate by deed, is the creature of statute law; and to make her deed effectual, the forms and solemnities, prescribed by the statutes, must be pursued. Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 338, 7 L. Ed. 164.

In Missouri, where a deed was offered in evidence, purporting to convey the titles of married women to land, and their names were in the handwriting of other persons, and there was no proof that the women had either signed or acknowledged the deed, it was properly refused by the court to be allowed to go to the jury. Meegan v. Boyle, 19 How. 130, 15 L. Ed. 577.

16. Wife to be grantor in deed conveying her lands.—Agricultural Bank v. Rice, 4 How. 225, 11 L. Ed. 949.

In order to convey by grant, the party possessing the right must be the grantor, and use apt and proper words to convey to the grantee. If, therefore, the title to land is in married women, and a deed for the land recites the names of the husbands, as grantors, purporting to convey in right of their wives, the deed is insufficient to convey the title of the wives. Nor is such a deed made effective by its being signed and sealed by the wives. The interest of the husbands is conveyed by it, but nothing more. A receipt of money, subsequently, by the female grantors, does not pass the legal title, nor give effect to a deed, which, as to them, was utterly void. Agricultural Bank v. Rice, 4 How. 225, 11 L. Ed. 949.

17. Impeaching deed regular on its face.—Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297, 302, 31 L. Ed. 156.

The alienation of land by deed of husband and wife with her separate examination and acknowledgment is, in form as well as in fact, a conveyance by the parties, and therefore does not, even if the acknowledgment is certified by a magistrate in the form prescribed by statute, and recorded, bind a wife who, by reason of infancy or insanity, is incapable of conveying. Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 26 L. Ed. 87; Williams v. Baker, 71 Penn. St. 476. In any case of fraud or duress, also, it may be impeached by bill in equity, or, in some states, in an action at law. Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297, 302, 31 L. Ed. 156.

18. Power to mortgage at common law.—See ante, "General Rules," I, A, 1, a.

states.[19] In some states a married woman, though possessing general power to contract, cannot mortgage her estate to secure her husband's debts.[20] But a statute which merely exempts the wife's property from her husband's debts does not have this effect.[21] The wife's power to mortgage her separate estate is treated in another title.[22]

c. Ratification or Disaffirmance.—Acts of a married woman which are voidable because of her coverture, may be ratified or disaffirmed after termination of the coverture.[23] If an infant, who is also a married woman, makes an instru-

19. Power to make mortgage under statute.—Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 341, 27 L. Ed. 112; Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297, 300, 31 L. Ed. 156.

In Tennessee "married women over the age of twenty-one years, owning the fee or other legal or equitable interest or estate in real estate, shall have the same powers of disposition, by will, deed, or otherwise, as are possessed by femes sole or unmarried women." Code of Tennessee, § 2486. This provision would seem to be sufficient to confer upon a married woman, purchasing land to her own use, power to execute a mortgage upon the land to secure the purchase money—binding at least upon the land, if not creating any personal obligation against her. Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 341, 27 L. Ed. 112.

In the District of Columbia, "there can be no doubt that by a deed, voluntarily executed and duly acknowledged by the husband and the wife, the entire title of both might be conveyed to secure the payment of his debt, notwithstanding that the act of 1869, as construed by this court, exempted the land, or any interest therein, from being taken on execution against him. Hitz v. National Metropolitan Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 28 L. Ed. 577; Mattoon v. McGrew, 112 U. S. 713, 28 L. Ed. 824." Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297, 300, 31 L. Ed. 156.

The 25th section of the law of Louisiana incorporating the Union Bank of Louisiana declares that in all hypothecary contracts and obligations entered into by any married individual with the bank, it shall be lawful for the wife to unite with him; and in such case the property of the wife, whether dotal or of any other description, shall be affected by the contract. Where a wife united with her husband in mortgaging property to the bank, the mortgage was good under this clause. Union Bank v. Stafford, 12 How. 327, 13 L. Ed. 1008; New Orleans Canal, etc., Co. v. Stafford, 12 How. 343, 13 L. Ed. 1015.

20. Mortgage to secure husband's debts.—Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 12 L. Ed. 416.

Where a wife mortgaged her property to raise money, and the question did not turn upon her doing so as the surety of her husband, it was not necessary for the lender to prove that the proceeds of the loan enured to her separate use. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 12 L. Ed. 416.

The Civil Code of Louisiana (article 2412) enacts, that "the wife, whether separated in property by contract or by judgment, or not separated, cannot bind herself for her husband, nor cojointly with him, for debts contracted by him before or during the marriage. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 12 L. Ed. 416; Marchand v. Griffon, 140 U. S. 516, 527, 35 L. Ed. 527.

Estoppel to show that mortgage was given for husband's debts.—Where a wife mortgaged her property, and then sought relief in chancery upon the ground that the contract was void in consequence of her disability to contract, and it was shown that the lender acted in good faith; proceeded cautiously under legal advice, under assurances that the loan was for the exclusive use of the wife, to whom the money was actually paid; the interest upon the loan paid for several years; the mortgaged property insured by her, and the policy assigned to the mortgagee; a bill to relieve her from the contract cannot receive the sanction of a court of equity. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 12 L. Ed. 416.

21. Statute exempting wife's property from husband's debts.—Barrel v. Tilton, 119 U. S. 637, 642, 30 L. Ed. 511.

A provision of a state constitution, "that the property and possessory rights of every married woman at the time of marriage, or afterwards acquired by gift, devise or inheritance, shall not be subject to the debts or contracts of the husband," merely preserves the property of the wife from its compulsory subjection to his debts or contracts, and was not designed to control her voluntary disposal of it, and in the absence of other restrictions, she can mortgage it to secure the payment of a debt owing by him. Barrell v. Tilton, 119 U. S. 637, 642, 30 L. Ed. 511.

22. Power to mortgage separate estate.—See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

23. Ratification or disaffirmance of voidable acts.—Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 11 How. 329, 13 L. Ed. 717; Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 310, 26 L. Ed. 87.

A recognition by a married woman, when freed from coverture, of a sale which she had made in conjunction with her husband, amounts to no more than a ratification of that particular sale. Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 11 How. 329, 13 L. Ed. 717.

ment voidable because of her infancy, the disability of coverture enables her to postpone the act of avoidance to a reasonable time after the coverture is ended.[24] If a married woman chose to rescind a contract she must, as a general rule, restore what she has received, before she will be permitted to recover.[25]

2. Powers of Attorney.—At common law, married women are incapable of appointing an agent or attorney,[26] and in some states in which the powers of married women have been enlarged by statute, the power to make powers of attorney is expressly denied.[27] But where, by statute, a married woman is capable of doing an act, or of transferring property or rights with the assent of her husband, she may appoint an agent or attorney to do the same,[28] and even if such act or conveyance be defective because unauthorized by statute at the time when made, it may be cured by a statute subsequently enacted.[29] The

24. Time of disaffirmance.—Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 310, 26 L. Ed. 87; Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 11 How. 329, 13 L. Ed. 717.

Where the circuit court instructed the jury that they might consider the acts of one of the daughters and her husband, in acquiescing in a partition, and in receiving "a small tract of land," as a recognition of the true construction of the will to be, that the daughters were not entitled to an equal share, the acts of partition being accompanied by long adverse possession, say thirty or forty years, this instruction was erroneous. The daughter was a minor when she married, and continued covert until within a short time before she brought the suit. No presumption arising from her acts could therefore be made against her. Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 11 How. 329, 13 L. Ed. 717.

25. Restoration of benefits received upon disaffirmance.—Slaughter v. Glenn, 98 U. S. 242, 245, 25 L. Ed. 122.

26. Power of attorney.—Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 67, 42 L. Ed. 658; Holladay v. Daily, 19 Wall. 606, 22 L. Ed. 187.

"In most of the states a married woman cannot, in the absence of statutory authority, execute, either alone or in connection with her husband, a valid power of attorney to convey her interest in real property." Holladay v. Daily, 19 Wall. 606, 609, 22 L. Ed. 187.

Even in case of a joint suit at law, an appointment of an attorney by a married women is void; and her husband may make an attorney for both. Story on Agency, § 6, quoted in Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 67, 42 L. Ed. 658.

27. Power of attorney by feme covert void by statute.—In Minnesota, a married woman cannot make a power of attorney. Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. 24, 33, 17 L. Ed. 780.

In Texas a power of attorney from a wife to her husband does not authorize him to act for her and as her agent in conveying her separate property, as such an instrument is void under the statute and decisions of Texas requiring the privy acknowledgment of married women to transfers of their separate real property, and a deed from the husband, acting for himself and wife, not being signed by her and acknowledged by her privily and apart from her husband, does not convey her separate property. Mexia v. Oliver, 148 U. S. 664, 671, 37 L. Ed. 602.

28. Power of attorney to convey wife's real estate.—Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 67, 42 L. Ed. 658.

Thus, where a wife was capable of conveying her real estate by a deed, properly executed and acknowledged by her privily, etc., and joined in by her husband, it was held that she could accomplish the same thing by authorizing another to convey for her, where the authority was joined in by her husband, and the required private examination, etc., made. Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 67, 42 L. Ed. 658.

29. Cure by statute of conveyance made under power from married woman.—Randall v. Kreiger, 23 Wall. 137, 23 L. Ed. 124. See, also, Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co., 163 U. S. 63, 67, 41 L. Ed. 72.

A. and wife, residents of the state of New York, executed a power of attorney to B. to sell lands in Minnestoa Territory of which A., the husband, was seized. The power was executed and acknowledged by both parties, the wife undergoing such separate examination as by the laws of New York makes valid the execution of deeds by a feme covert. At the time when this power of attorney was given there was no law of the territory authorizing such an instrument to be executed by the wife or the attorney to convey under it. B., professing to act for the two parties, sold and conveyed a piece of land, then worth $3,000, with general warranty, to C., for that sum, and A. received the money. The legislature of Minnesota subsequently passed an act by which it was enacted that "all deeds of conveyance of any lands in the territory, whether heretofore or hereafter made, under a joint power of attorney from the husband and wife, shall be as binding and have the same effect as if made by the original parties." The husband and wife afterwards revoked the power. The husband died leaving a large estate composed entirely of personalty, the whole of which he gave to his wife. The wife now power is to be construed liberally in favor of the object to be accomplished.[30] Neither a married woman nor her heirs at law can repudiate a sale of her land under a power of attorney upon the ground that the power had been revoked by war, where she acquiesced in the transaction and received its benefits with full knowledge of the circumstances.[31]

3. CAPACITY TO ACT AS TRUSTEE—a. In General.—There is no incapacity in a married women to become a trustee, and to exercise the legal judgment and discretion belonging to that character.[32]

b. Conveyances of Real Estate.—Where a married woman is a trustee of land for the benefit of a third person, she may execute a deed to a bona fide purchaser, who has paid the purchase money to the cestui que use, without joining her husband,[33] and this principle is equally applicable to a deed executed under a power of attorney granted by her.[34]

4. CAPACITY TO BE ESTOPPED.—See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

brought suit for dower in the land sold by B. as attorney for her husband and herself. Held, that the power of attorney was validated by the curative act, which the court, adverting to the fact that the husband had received the purchase money for the tract, and that it had become part of his estate, and that the whole of it on his death passed to the wife, declares had a strong natural equity at its root, and accomplished that which a court of equity would have failed to decree against the wife. only because it would be prevented by the unbending law as to feme coverts in such cases. Randall v. Kreiger, 23 Wall. 137, 23 L. Ed. 124.

30. Power construed liberally.—Holladay v. Daily, 19 Wall. 606, 22 L. Ed. 187. See the title POWERS.

A power of attorney to sell and convey real property, given by a husband and his wife, in general terms, without any provision against a sale of the interest of either separately, or other circumstance restraining the authority of the attorney in that respect, authorizes a conveyance by the attorney of the interest of the husband by a deed executed in his name alone. Holladay v. Daily, 19 Wall. 606, 22 L. Ed. 187.

Where a power of attorney is made by husband and wife, French people resident in France, to sell lands in Illinois—the power, a long French instrument with the usual verbiage of the style de notaire, speaking of the lands as lands which "Mr. and Madame," etc., own there—there being evidence that the husband owned land there, but none that the husband and wife did, the presumption is that the joinder of the wife was made to alienate some supposed right of dower, and not to describe lands owned by the wife and husband jointly, instead of by the husband alone; this at least in favor of a bona fide purchaser, long in possession. Dolton v. Cain, 14 Wall. 472, 473, 20 L. Ed. 830.

31. Estoppel of married woman to repudiate transactions done by attorney.—Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 75, 42 L. Ed. 658 (holding, also, that war did not revoke the power of attorney). See the titles POWERS; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT; WAR.

"The purchase money for the land was received by the principal, and to permit her heirs after her death to repudiate the transaction on the ground that the power of attorney had been revoked would be at war with every principle of equity and fair dealing. This principle applies as strongly in the case of a married woman as in any other, and it will not permit her or, upon her death, her heirs at law, to repudiate a transaction the benefits of which she received with full knowledge of the circumstances attending it, and yet claim to recover an estate which had been sold with her authority and the purchase money for which had been paid to her. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 247, 12 L. Ed. 416; Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 329, 25 L. Ed. 390. Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 27 L. Ed. 112, considers generally the obligation of married women to do equity under circumstances somewhat similar in principle to the present case." Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 75, 42 L. Ed. 658.

32. Capacity to act as trustee.—A trustee in equity is regarded in the light of an instrument or agent for the cestui que trust and the authority confined to him is in the nature of a power. Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 502, 16 L. Ed. 411.

33. Conveyance by married woman acting as trustee.—Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 16 L. Ed. 411; Gridley v. Westbrook, 23 How. 503, 16 L. Ed. 412.

By executing the deed she does not defeat an estate to which her husband is entitled and it is within the scope of her authority as trustee, and therefore will be sustained by a court of equity against her heirs. Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 501, 16 L. Ed. 411.

Her children, who were her heirs at law, having brought a suit at law to recover the land from the bona fide purchaser, a court of equity will interpose to restrain their proceedings. Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 501, 16 L. Ed. 411.

34. Conveyance by attorney of married woman acting as trustee.—Gridley v. Westbrook, 23 How. 503, 16 L. Ed. 412.

5. Testamentary Capacity.—As to testamentary capacity of married women, see the title Wills.

6. Capacity to Execute Powers.—A married woman may execute a power without the co-operation of her husband.[35]

7. Acquisition of National Character or Citizenship.—The incapacities of femes covert, provided by the common law, apply to their civil rights, and are for their protection and interest. But they do not reach their political rights, nor prevent their acquiring or losing a national character. Those political rights do not stand upon the mere doctrine of municipal law, applicable to ordinary transactions, but stand upon the more general principles of the law of nations.[36]

8. Criminal Responsibility of Married Women.—At the common law if a wife act in company with her husband in the commission of a felony, other than treason or homicide, it is conclusively presumed that she acted under his coercion, and is consequently without any guilty intent.[37]

9. When Wife Entitled to Act as Feme Sole—a. Desertion or Abandonment by Husband.—There are certain special cases where a married woman is compelled to act from necessity as a feme sole, and where coverture does not disable her from entering into binding contracts. Thus where the husband is imprisoned for life or for years or is banished, or voluntarily abandons her, her disability ceases.[38]

b. Wife Acting as Sole Trader.—The disability of coverture does not exist where the wife is permitted to act as a sole trader, as in England by the custom of London, and in this country by special legislation.[39]

B. Powers and Disabilities of Husband.—The husband cannot sell the wife's real property without her consent.[40] This is true even though the title is in his name, if the wife has an equitable interest in the land, and the purchaser has notice thereof.[41] And, as a general rule, the husband cannot execute a 35. Capacity to execute powers.—Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 502, 16 L. Ed. 411; Barnes v. Irwin, 2 Dall. 199, 201, 1 L. Ed. 348. See, generally, the title POWERS.

36. Acquisition of national character.—Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. 242, 248, 7 L. Ed. 666.

37. Crimes by wife.—Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 308, 24 L. Ed. 954.

38. Desertion or abandonment of husband.—Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 330, 25 L. Ed. 390; Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 7 L. Ed. 72. See, also, Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 589, 16 L. Ed. 226.

In such cases the husband is considered as civilly dead, and the wife as in a state of widowhood. Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 330, 25 L. Ed. 390.

Under Ohio statutes.—See Ankeney v. Hannon, 147 U. S. 118, 125, 37 L. Ed. 105, where the Ohio statute is set out.

Where wife may sue as if feme sole.—See post, "Actions by Wife," VIII, A, 1, b.

Property given to a wife in lieu of alimony decreed to her, passes to her as fully as if conveyed to a third person for a valuable consideration, and in regard to it the wife is to be considered as feme sole, with power to dispose of it. Wallingsford v. Allen, 10 Pet. 583, 9 L. Ed. 542.

39. Wife acting as sole trader.—Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 330, 25 L. Ed. 390; Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 7 L. Ed. 72; Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 25 L. Ed. 850.

When a wife left by her husband, without maintenance and support, has traded as a feme sole and obtained credit as such, she is liable for her own debts as if she were unmarried. Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 7 L. Ed. 72.

In Maryland, a deed, executed by a married woman, of real property, acquired by her while a sole trader, and while she was abandoned by her husband, is void. Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 7 L. Ed. 72.

In Mississippi, when a married woman engages in trade or business as a feme sole she shall be bound by her contracts made in the course of such trade or business, in the same manner as if she was unmarried. Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 25 L. Ed. 850.

40. Power of husband to sell wife's property.—Hennessy v. Woolworth, 128 U. S. 438, 32 L. Ed. 500.

In Minnesota, the husband's assent to a contract for the sale of the wife's lands is not sufficient to bind the wife, so as to authorize a decree of specific performance against her. Hennessy v. Woolworth, 128 U. S. 438, 32 L. Ed. 500.

41. Sale of land, title of which is in husband, but held by him as trustee.—Holgate v. Eaton, 116 U. S. 33, 29 L. Ed. 538. In this case the property was purchased by the husband at a sale decreed in a suit to foreclose a mortgage held by him as his wife's trustee, and the title conveyance of the wife's real estate without her joining in the deed.[42]

II. Property Rights.

A. Interest of Husband in Wife's Property—1. PERSONAL PROPERTY—a. Property in Possession at Time of Marriage.—At the common law, the money or personal property which the wife has at the time of her marriage, not secured to her by a settlement or contract, belongs to the husband absolutely.[43]

b. Property Acquired after Marriage—(1) In General.—At the common law, personal property purchased by a married woman on credit, or with her earnings, during the coverture, belongs absolutely to the husband, and is subject to the levy of an execution against her husband.[44]

(2) Earnings of Wife.—By the common law the earnings of the wife belong exclusively to the husband; they vest in him as absolutely as though they were the proceeds of his own labor and industry.[45]

c. Property in Action.—Marriage is only a qualified gift to the husband of choses in action belonging to the wife, his right to them being dependent on their being reduced to possession during the coverture. The husband may sue for and recover, or release or assign them, and when recovered and reduced to possession, the money becomes absolutely his own.[46] It seems that a bona fide was taken in his own name, but the wife still had an equitable interest in the land.

Where the wife repudiates a contract made by the husband, who is the trustee, for the sale of her lands, she cannot, after the conditions have changed, and the property decreased in value, sue for the specific performance of the contract. Holgate v. Eaton, 116 U. S. 33, 29 L. Ed. 538.

42. Power of husband to convey wife's lands.—Meegan v. Boyle, 19 How. 130, 15 L. Ed. 577.

In Pennsylvania, it was held in an early case that the statute of 32 Henry VIII, ch. 7, validated a deed of a husband to his wife's lands, where the wife did not join in the deed, and where possession had been held under the deed for a long time. Boehm v. Engle, 1 Dall. 15, 1 L. Ed. 17.

Power of husband as to separate estate.—See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

43. Personalty in possession.—Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S. 122, 23 L. Ed. 258; Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850; Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 584, 24 L. Ed. 179.

Money, goods, and personal chattels in possession vested absolutely in the husband, and became his property as completely as property purchased with his own money; and such property never went back to the wife unless given to her by the husband in his lifetime or by his will, and in case of his death it vested in his executors. Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850.

Reason of rule.—This harsh rule of the common law was founded upon the idea, that, as the husband was bound by the marriage to support the wife and the rest of the family, he was entitled to whatever she possessed, or subsequently acquired, which was available for that purpose—a rule which would have had some good ground for its existence, had it only applied when the money or earnings of the wife were necessary for that purpose. But, becoming absolutely the property of the husband, they were subject to his disposal without regard to the necessities of the family, and might be taken from them at the suit of his creditors. They partook of the condition, and were subject to the fate, of his separate property. Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S. 122, 124, 23 L. Ed. 258.

44. Property acquired during coverture.—Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 584, 24 L. Ed. 179.

45. Earnings of wife.—Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S. 122, 124, 23 L. Ed. 258; Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 584, 24 L. Ed. 179. See, also, Belford v. Scribner, 144 U. S. 488, 504, 36 L. Ed. 514.

Exclusion of interest of husband in earnings.—But where the proof shows that an authoress from time to time settled with the owners of the copyright for her royalties, the court will presume that her legal title as the author of the books was in some due and proper manner conveyed to and vested in the persons who secured the copyright thereof; and acquiescence for many years, by all the parties, in that claim of proprietorship in the copyright, is enough to answer the suggestion of the husband's possible marital interest in his wife's earnings. Belford v. Scribner, 144 U. S. 488, 504, 36 L. Ed. 514.

Earnings as separate property.—See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

46. Property in action.—Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850; McClanahan v. Davis, 8 How. 170, 12 L. Ed. 1033; Cassell v. Carroll, 11 Wheat. 131, 6 L. Ed. 438; Price v. Sessions, 3 How. 624, 634, 11 L. Ed. 755.

Remainder in personalty.—By the laws of Virginia, where there is a tenancy for assignment, for a valuable consideration, made by a husband, of a debt, actually and presently due to his wife, divests, in equity, the title of the wife.[47]

2. REAL ESTATE—a. Estates of Inheritance.—By the rules of the common law, marriage gives the husband a freehold tenure in the estate of inheritance in land of the wife.[48]

b. Leaseholds.—Leaseholds of the wife enure to the benefit of the husband and bring him into the relation of tenant to the lessors, where there is nothing in the lease indicating a contrary intent.[49]

c. Rents and Profits.—At the common law, the husband has the right to the rents and profits of the wife's estates of inheritance during their joint lives.[50] The husband's interest is capable of sale,[51] but in some states, by statute, is not subject to seizure by his creditors.[52]

d. Proceeds of Sale.—By the common law, if the husband and wife sell and life in a slave, with remainder to the wife of another person, the interest of the husband in the wife's remainder is placed upon the footing of an interest in a chose in action. If, therefore, he survives the wife, he may reduce the property into possession at the expiration of the life estate; but if he be dead at such expiration, the property survives to the wife, and on her death passes to her legal representative as part of her assets. McClanahan v. Davis, 8 How. 170, 12 L. Ed. 1033.

Query, whether the husband or his personal representative is not bound to administer upon the wife's estate, before bringing suit to recover property so situated in the state of Virginia. McClanahan v. Davis, 8 How. 170, 12 L. Ed. 1033.

The Mississippi statute of 1839 secured to married women their choses in action, free from the rights of their husbands, and such property is not, in that state, liable for the husband's debts. Price v. Sessions, 3 How. 624, 634, 11 L. Ed. 755.

Where a testator devised certain property to his infant daughter, to be delivered over to her when she should arrive at the age of eighteen years, and the daughter, at the age of sixteen, married the executor who had the principal management of the estate, and possession of the property devised, he must be considered as holding it as executor, and not as husband. And the law providing that a wife should retain such property in her own right, notwithstanding her coverture, having gone into operation before the daughter arrived at the age of eighteen years, the distribution to her must be considered to have been made under that law. The property, therefore, cannot be responsible for the husband's debts. Price v. Sessions, 3 How. 624, 11 L. Ed. 755.

47. Assignment as divesting wife's title.—Cassell v. Carroll, 11 Wheat. 134, 6 L. Ed. 438.

In Cassell v. Carroll, 11 Wheat. 134, 6 L. Ed. 438, it was held that under the particular circumstances of the case, where the consideration had actually gone beneficially for the wife, and the whole transaction had been under the direction of a court of chancery, and been confirmed by parliament, the assignment was, to all intents and purposes, valid to assign the rents, and the act of parliament made it, to all intents and purposes, a legal title and assignment.

48. Interest of husband in wife's estates of inheritance.—Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850; Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 308, 26 L. Ed. 87.

49. Leaseholds.—Where one writes to a man's wife (there being a relationship by blood between the party writing and the wife) proposing to her to occupy a certain farm on which she and her husband were then living, and to pay a certain rent therefor, which offer she accepts, and there is nothing in the correspondence beyond the fact that the property is offered to the wife, and that the wife accepts it, to infer a purpose to give it to her to the exclusion of her husband, the husband is not excluded. The lease enures to his benefit and brings him into the relation of a tenant to the lessors. Lucas v. Brooks, 18 Wall. 436, 21 L. Ed. 779.

50. Right to rents and profits.—Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 308, 26 L. Ed. 87; Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850; Baker v. Kilgore, 145 U. S. 487, 36 L. Ed. 786.

By marriage the husband becomes entitled to the rents and profits. His control over the usufruct thereof is absolute, extends during their joint lives, or at least as long as the marriage relations continued. Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 308, 26 L. Ed. 87.

51. Husband's interest capable of sale.—Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 308, 26 L. Ed. 87.

52. Statute exempting rents and profits of wife's lands from liability for husband's debts.—Baker v. Kilgore, 145 U. S. 487, 490, 36 L. Ed. 786.

Validity of act exempting rents and profits from husband's debts.—It is competent for the legislature to exempt the rents and profits of the wife's estate from liability for debts and contracts of the husband, existing at the time such immunity is declared and an act so providing is valid as applied to a judgment previously rendered against the husband, convey her lands, the money which he receives therefor, without any reservation of rights on her part, will belong to him.[53]

B. Community Property—1. In General.—In several states and territories certain property acquired by husband and wife during marriage is treated as belonging to them as partners or as a community, though usually the husband is invested with the power to dispose of it during the coverture.[54] Statutes having this object in view are in force in Louisiana, Porto Rico, Texas and Washington. Although the general idea of all of the statutes is the same, they differ in several material respects, and the statute of each state or territory, so far as passed on by the supreme court of the United States will be treated separately.

2. In Louisiana—a. In General.—In Louisiana, in the absence of a contrary provision by marriage contract, the law gives a community of acquets or gains between married persons, where the marriage is contracted within the state, or where the marriage is contracted out of the state, and the parties afterwards go there to live.[55] This partnership or community exists by operation of law.[56]

b. What Constitutes.—The fruits and income of the wife's paraphernal property administered by the husband belong to the conjugal partnership or community.[57]

c. Descent.—Community property descends to the heirs subject to only such debts as are chargeable against it.[58] The wife's interest in the community prop-where the particular profits of the wife's estate in dispute had not, when that act was passed, come to the hands of the husband, and were not, at that time, in existence, nor in any legal sense, vested in him. Baker v. Kilgore, 145 U. S. 487, 490, 36 L. Ed. 786.

"Moreover, his right, prior to that enactment, to take the profits of his wife's estate did not come from contracts between him and his wife or between him and the state, but from a rule of law established by the legislature, and resting alone upon public considerations arising out of the marriage relation. It was entirely competent for the legislature to change that rule in respect, at least, to the future rents and profits of the wife's estate. Such legislation is for the protection of the property of the wife, and neither impairs nor defeats any vested right of the husband." Baker v. Kilgore, 145 U. S. 487, 490, 36 L. Ed. 786.

53. Interest of husband in proceeds of sale of wife's lands.—Kesner v. Trigg, 98 U. S. 50, 25 L. Ed. 83.

54. Statutes providing for community property.—See Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 484, 44 L. Ed. 555; Fleitas v. Richardson, No. 2, 147 U. S. 550, 552, 37 L. Ed. 276.

55. Community property in Louisiana.—Conner v. Elliott, 18 How. 591, 15 L. Ed. 497; Fleitas v. Richardson, No. 2, 147 U. S. 550, 552, 37 L. Ed. 276; Nalle v. Young, 160 U. S. 624, 638, 40 L. Ed. 560; Mellen v. Buckner, 139 U. S. 338, 388, 35 L. Ed. 199.

56. Partnership exists by operation of law.—Fleitas v. Richardson, No. 2, 147 U. S. 550, 552, 37 L. Ed. 276; Nalle v. Young, 160 U. S. 624, 638, 40 L. Ed. 560.

Marriage contracted out of state and husband and wife residing outside.—The privilege thus conferred upon the wife does not extend, by virtue of the clause in the constitution of the United States providing that "the citizens of each state shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of several states," to a native born citizen of Louisiana, who was married while under age, in the state of Mississippi, in which state was her domicile together with her husband during the continuance of the marriage. Land in Louisiana, acquired by the husband during the marriage, was not subject to the Louisiana law, in respect to the community of acquets or gain. Conner v. Elliott, 18 How. 591, 15 L. Ed. 497.

This right was one which attached to the contract of marriage, which the state of Louisiana had a right to regulate; and was not one of the personal rights of a citizen, within the meaning of the constitution. Conner v. Elliott, 18 How. 591, 15 L. Ed. 497.

As to paraphernal, dotal or extra dotal property, or as to suits by wife for separation of property, see the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

57. Fruits of paraphernal property.—Civil Code, arts. 2386 (2363), 2402 (2371). The husband may appropriate such fruits and income to his own use. He is not liable to her for neglecting to collect them. Nor is he liable for interest on the debt to his wife, except after she has obtained judgment against him. Fleitas v. Richardson, No. 2, 147 U. S. 550, 554, 37 L. Ed. 276.

As to paraphernal property, see the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

58. Descent of community property.—Mellen v. Buckner, 139 U. S. 338, 388, 35

erty descends to her heirs, free from claims against the husband.[59]

3. In Porto Rico—a. Power of Husband.—The very foundation of the community and its efficacious existence depend on the power of the husband, during the marriage, over the community, and his right, in the absence of fraud or express legislative restriction, to deal with the community and its assets as the owner thereof.[60]

b. Divorce as Defeating Wife's Interest.—The rendition of a decree of divorce against a wife, for adultery, does not work a forfeiture of her right to share in the community property.[61]

c. Liquidation of Community Property.—A wife, against whom a decree of divorce has been rendered may enforce a liquidation of the community property, if there is anything due her.[62] The fact that the husband may have been extravagant or even reckless does not require him to account to the community for funds which he has thus improperly expended,[63] and the wife is not entitled to be allowed for attorneys' fees in the liquidation suit.[64]

4. In Texas.—In Texas, property purchased after marriage is prima facie community property, whether the conveyance be in the name of the husband or of the wife, or in their joint names.[65] But this rule only holds good where the purchase is made with community funds, and the presumption may be rebutted by proof that the purchase was intended for the wife.[66] And where the consideration was nominal only, and the deed made to the wife, the presumption is that it was intended to vest the title in her as separate property.[67]

5. In Washington.—In Washington Territory, by the act of Nov. 14, 1879 it was provided that in case of intestacy the share of a deceased husband or wife in the community property should pass to the legal issue of the intestate, and in default of such issue to the surviving husband or wife as the case might be.[68] It was held that this act was not unconstitutional with respect to property acquired under two earlier acts, one of which provided for community property and that the husband should have the entire management or control, "with the like absolute power of disposition as his own separate estate," and the other of which provided that upon the death of the husband or wife the whole of the

L. Ed. 199; Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 28 L. Ed. 547.

59. Mellen v. Buckner, 139 U. S. 338, 388, 35 L. Ed. 199.

60. Power of husband over community property.—Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 79, 51 L. Ed. 369.

"The purpose of the community, as expounded from the earliest times, whilst securing to the wife of the dissolution of the marriage an equal portion of the net results of the common industry, common economy and common sacrifice, was yet, as a matter of necessity, during the existence of the community, not to render the community inept and valueless to both parties by weakening the marital power of the husband as to his expenditures and contracts, so as to cause him to be a mere limited and consequently inefficient agent." Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 79, 51 L. Ed. 369.

61. Divorce as defeating wife's interest.—Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 51 L. Ed. 369.

62. Liquidation of community property.—Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 51 L. Ed. 369.

63. Duty of husband to account to community for extravagance.—Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 78, 51 L. Ed. 369.

The power of the husband, as the head and master and administrator of the community, is not in its nature so restricted that in the absence of express limitation he can, after the dissolution of the community, be called to account and compelled to return to the community money which he has actually expended during the existence of the community, because, in the judgment of a court, such expenses may be deemed to have been not suitable to his situation in life, extravagant, or even reckless. Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 78, 51 L. Ed. 369.

64. Right of wife to attorneys' fees incurred in liquidation suit.—Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 51 L. Ed. 369.

65. In Texas.—Cooke v. Avery, 147 U. S. 375, 395, 37 L. Ed. 209; Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 156, 172, 30 L. Ed. 396.

66. Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 156, 172, 30 L. Ed. 396.

67. Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 156, 30 L. Ed. 396. See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

68. Descent of community property in Washington.—Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 484, 44 L. Ed. 555.

property, subject to the community debts should go to the survivor.[69]

C. Conveyances to Husband and Wife.—Undoubtedly, at common law, husband and wife did not take, under a conveyance of land to them jointly, as tenants in common or as joint tenants, but each became seized of the entirety, per tout et non per my; the consequence of which was that neither could dispose of any part without the assent of the other, but the whole remained to the superior under the original grant.[70] But even at common law when lands are granted to them as tenants in common, thereby treating them without any respect to their social union, they will hold by moieties, as other distinct and individual persons would do.[71]

D. Conveyances in Fraud of Marital Rights.—A husband, even before marriage, may, in virtue of the marriage contract, have inchoate rights in the estate of his wife, which, if the marriage be consummated, will be protected by a court of equity against any antecedent contracts and conveyances secretly made by the wife, in fraud of those marital rights; but they are mere equities, and in no just sense constitute any legal or equitable estate in her lands or other property, antecedent to the marriage.[72]

E. Liability of Wife's Property for Husband's Debts.—If money, which a married woman might have had secured to her own use, is allowed to go into the business of her husband, be mixed with his property, and applied to the purchase of real estate for his advantage, or for the purpose of giving him credit in business, and is thus used for a series of years, such real estate, unless there is at the time of its purchase a specific agreement that it shall belong to the wife, becomes the property of the husband for the purpose of paying his debts.[73] But property purchased by wife with money belonging to her separate estate cannot be subjected by husband's creditors.[74] Inconsiderable improvements made on the wife's property before the contracting of a debt by the husband cannot be subjected by the husband's creditors.[75] Where a statute

69. Act changing mode of descent.—Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 484, 44 L. Ed. 555.

"It is a misconception of that system to suppose that because power was vested in the husband to dispose of the community acquired during marriage, as if it were his own, therefore by law the community property belonged solely to the husband. The conferring on the husband the legal agency to administer and dispose of the property involved no negation of the community, since the common ownership would attach to the result of the sale of the property." Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 484, 497, 44 L. Ed. 555.

70. Tenancy by entireties.—Hunt v. Blackburn, 128 U. S. 464, 469, 32 L. Ed. 488, where this rule was held to obtain in Arkansas.

71. Where land conveyed to husband and wife as tenants in common.—Hunt v. Blackburn, 128 U. S. 464, 469, 32 L. Ed. 488.

A husband and wife purchased the separate halves of a tract of land at different times, with intent of holding in moieties, and conveyed the husband's half to one who paid therefor in good faith and without actual notice. At the request of the purchaser, a second deed was made from the original vendor to the husband and wife which ran directly to the husband and wife, the deed being made at the very time when the husband and wife were executing the conveyance to the purchaser from them. It was held that the wife could not claim that she was entitled to an estate by entirety by reason of the second conveyance to herself and husband, as the second deed did not divest the title which had once vested in her husband and herself by the former conveyance from the same grantor, nor alter its nature. Hunt v. Blackburn, 128 U. S. 464, 469, 471, 32 L. Ed. 488.

Where the highest court of a state has proceeded upon the conclusion that a person and his wife held by moieties, its decree standing unreversed is binding. Hunt v. Blackburn, 128 U. S. 464, 469, 32 L. Ed. 488.

72. Fraud on marital rights.—Crane v. Morris, 6 Pet. 598, 8 L. Ed. 514.

73. Right of husband's creditors against wife's property.—Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 24 L. Ed. 51.

As to conveyances or transfers in fraud of creditors, see the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472.

74. Property purchased with money belonging to separate estate.—Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618, 26 L. Ed. 849.

Right of husband's creditors against wife's separate property.—See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

75. Improvements on wife's property by husband.—Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat.

exempts the wife's property from liability for the husband's debts, curtesy of the husband is exempted, as to debts subsequently contracted.[76]

III. Support of Wife.

The wife is entitled to support from her husband.[77]

IV. Transactions between Husband and Wife.

A. Validity as between Parties.—At the common law, because of the unity of husband and wife, agreements between husband and wife, during coverture, for the transfer of property by one to the other, are void at law.[78] Although the common-law rule still obtains in some states,[79] it has, as a general rule, been superseded by statute permitting husband and wife to contract with each other in the same manner and to the same effect as if they were strangers.[80]

B. Validity as to Creditors and Purchasers.—See the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472.

229, 5 L. Ed. 603. See the title IMPROVEMENTS.

76. Effect of exemption of wife's property from liability.—Hitz v. National Metropolitan Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 28 L. Ed. 577; Halferty v. Wilmeing, 112 U. S. 713, 28 L. Ed. 824.

77. Support.—Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 34, 22 L. Ed. 313.

"A decree awarding alimony to the wife or children, or both, is not a debt which has been put in the form of a judgment, but is rather a legal means of enforcing the obligation of the husband and father to support and maintain his wife and children. He owes this duty, not because of any contractual obligation or as a debt due from him to the wife, but because of the policy of the law which imposes the obligation upon the husband. The law interferes when the husband neglects or refuses to discharge this duty and enforces it against him by means of legal proceedings." Wetmore v. Markoe, 196 U. S. 68, 74, 49 L. Ed. 390; Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 45 L. Ed. 1009.

Liability for alimony as discharged by bankruptcy.—See the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 862.

78. Validity of transaction at common law.—Wallingsford v. Allen, 10 Pet. 583, 9 L. Ed. 542; Kitchen v. Bedford, 13 Wall. 413, 20 L. Ed. 637; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 25 L. Ed. 908.

Validity in equity of settlement on wife for separate use.—See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

79. Common law still in force in some states.—Kitchen v. Bedford, 13 Wall. 413, 20 L. Ed. 637.

The statute law of Arkansas has not changed the common-law rule, that a husband cannot legally make a gift to his wife during coverture. Kitchen v. Bedford, 13 Wall. 413, 20 L. Ed. 637.

80. Validity of transactions under statute.—Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U. S. 252, 257, 34 L. Ed. 923; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 25 L. Ed. 908; Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 24 L. Ed. 179; Wilson v. Riddle, 123 U. S. 608, 616, 31 L. Ed. 280; Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 24 L. Ed. 51; Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 45 L. Ed. 1005; Hitz v. National Metropolitan Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 28 L. Ed. 577; Halferty v. Wilmeing, 112 U. S. 713, 28 L. Ed. 824.

The technical reasons of the common law arising from the unity of husband and wife, which would prevent his conveying the property directly to her for a valuable consideration, as upon a contract or purchase, have long since ceased to operate in the case of his voluntary transfer of it as a settlement upon her. Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 25 L. Ed. 908; Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 571, 45 L. Ed. 1005.

The husband's reservation of a power of revocation or appointment to other uses does not impair the validity or efficiency of the conveyance in transferring the property to his wife, to hold until such power shall be executed; nor does it tend to create an imputation upon his good faith and honesty in the transaction, and such a power does not, in the event of his bankruptcy, pass to his assignee. Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 25 L. Ed. 908.

Where rights of existing creditors are not affected, a voluntary settlement upon the wife, whether made through the husband, or directly by the wife with his consent, is void. Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S. 122, 23 L. Ed. 258.

Conveyance by husband to trustee for benefit of wife.—In United States Bank v. Lee, 13 Pet. 107, 118, 10 L. Ed. 81, it was said: "The capacity of the husband to contract, through the intervention of trustees, with the wife, and to make a valid conveyance, founded on a bona fide consideration paid out of the wife's separate estate, has not been questioned; nor is the doctrine open to controversy."

Conveyance of curtesy by husband to wife.—A husband may, in the absence of fraud, convey his curtesy to trustees for the benefit of his wife and children, where he makes such conveyance to repay the

V. Liability of Husband for Wife's Contracts or Torts.

A. Contracts.—At common law, the husband is liable for the wife's antenuptial debts,[81] especially where he receives property of the wife by virtue of the marriage, and subsequently promises to pay her debts.[82]

B. Torts.—The husband is liable for the torts and frauds of the wife committed during coverture. If committed in his company or by his order, he alone is liable.[83]

VI. Criminal Conversation.

For adultery or criminal conversation with a man's wife, the law gives a satisfaction to the husband by an action of trespass vi et armis.[84]

VII. Separation.

A. Contracts for Separate Maintenance.—A contract by a husband for the separate maintenance of his wife, if reasonable and made in respect to a separation to occur immediately, or for the continuance of one that has already taken place, is valid, especially where the separation is occasioned by the misconduct of the husband.[85] The validity of such a covenant is not impaired by the fact that the deed contains a provision that if the parties should afterwards wife for her property which he has used to pay his debts. Hitz v. National Metropolitan Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 726, 28 L. Ed. 577; Halferty v. Wilmeing, 112 U. S. 713, 28 L. Ed. 824. See the titles CURTESY, vol. 5, p. 155; FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472.

The wife has the same right to buy his curtesy in her real estate, to have it barred by a proper conveyance, as any one else has. Her equity is as good as that of any other creditor, and he could secure her as well as he could another. Hitz v. National Metropolitan Bank, 111 U. S. 722, 726, 28 L. Ed. 577; Halferty v. Wilmeing, 112 U. S. 713, 28 L. Ed. 824.

In New York husband and wife are authorized to make conveyances and contracts of and concerning personal property to and with each other, in the same manner and to the same effect as if they were strangers. Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U. S. 252, 257, 34 L. Ed. 923.

Section 1776 of the Code of Georgia provides that a husband may, at any time during coverture, either through trustees, or directly to his wife, convey any property, subject to the rights of prior purchasers or creditors without notice. Wilson v. Riddle, 123 U. S. 608, 616, 31 L. Ed. 280.

81. Antenuptial debts.—Pierce v. Turner, 5 Cranch 154, 170, 3 L. Ed. 64; Beach v. Lee, 2 Dall. 257, 1 L. Ed. 371.

82. Where husband receives property by marriage and promises to pay debt.—Where a husband comes into the possession of the property of the wife upon the marriage and subsequently promises to pay her antenuptial debts, the property received by him through marriage is a sufficient consideration for his contract and it may be enforced against him after the death of the wife. Beach v. Lee, 2 Dall. 257, 1 L. Ed. 371.

83. Liability of husband for wife's torts.—Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 308, 24 L. Ed. 954.

Breach of trust by wife.—A feme covert may be a trustee, but her husband is personally liable for any breach of trust she may commit, and hence she cannot act in the administration of the trust without his concurrence or consent. Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 308, 24 L. Ed. 954.

84. Criminal conversation.—Tinker v. Colwell, 193 U. S. 473, 481, 48 L. Ed. 754, Quoting 3 Black. Com. (Wendell's Ed., p. 139), where it is said that the damages in such case are usually very large and exemplary.

Judgment for criminal conversation as released by bankruptcy.—See the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 792.

85. Validity of contract for separate maintenance of wife.—Walker v. Walker, 9 Wall. 744, 19 L. Ed. 814.

A covenant by a husband for the maintenance of the wife, contained in a deed of separation between them, through the medium of trustees, where the consideration is apparent, must now be regarded on authority as valid, notwithstanding the serious objections to such deeds. It will accordingly be enforced in equity, if it appears that the deed was not made in contemplation of a future possible separation, but in respect to one which was to occur immediately, or for the continuance of one that had already taken place. And this especially if the separation was occasioned by the misconduct of the husband, and the provision for the wife's support, was reasonable under the circumstances, and no more than a court before which she was entitled to carry her grievances would have decreed to her as alimony. Walker v. Walker, 9 Wall. 744, 19 L. Ed. 814.

A deed by which a husband, on articles of separation between him and his wife, binds himself to pay, in trust for her, come together, the trust should remain and be executed in like manner, as if they should remain separate.[86]

B. Separate Maintenance under Statute.—In some states a wife living apart from her husband, without her fault, is, by statute, entitled to separate maintenance from the husband, the allowance to be one reasonably suited to the condition of the parties in life.[87]

C. Agreements as to Property Rights.—Where property is given by a husband to his wife in lieu of alimony, and subsequently a final separation takes place, and an agreement is entered into between them that each shall retain the property then held by them, the husband has no interest in that given to the wife in lieu of alimony.[88]

VIII. Actions.

A. Actions by Husband or Wife or Both—1. PARTIES—a. Action by Husband.—An action of ejectment to recover land cast by descent on a married woman,[89] or for injuries to profits of her land,[90] or for the recovery of choses in action, the legal title of which, is in him,[91] may be brought by the husband alone.

b. Actions by Wife.—At the common law, husband and wife are regarded as one person, and, except in the cases where she is entitled to act as a feme sole,[92] a certain amount of money (capital) and interest on it till paid, becomes a voluntary settlement if, before payment is made, the parties are reconciled, make null all the covenants of the articles of separation, and cohabit again, with an agreement that the settlement shall stand as agreed on, except that the husband shall not pay interest while he and his wife live together. Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 22 L. Ed. 313. See the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472.

86. Walker v. Walker, 9 Wall. 744, 19 L. Ed. 814.

87. Separate maintenance.—Harding v. Harding, 198 U. S. 317, 49 L. Ed. 1066. See the title DIVORCE AND ALIMONY, vol. 5, p. 412.

As to whether a judgment in suit by wife for separate maintenance finding that separation was not due to fault of wife, is conclusive in suit by husband for divorce on issue as to wife's desertion, see the title RES ADJUDICATA. As to what constitutes denial of full faith and credit to such a judgment, see the title FOREIGN JUDGMENTS, RECORDS AND JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS, ante, p. 335.

88. Construction of agreement as to property rights.—Where a wife having separated herself from her husband, for ill-treatment by him, applied to a court for alimony, which was allowed to her, pendente lite; and the husband gave her several slaves, in discharge of the alimony, which she manumitted, by deed, and subsequently a final separation took place between them by a verbal agreement, each agreeing to retain "the property each had, and to be quits for ever," and the wife relinquished all further claim for alimony, and after the death of the wife, the husband claimed slaves, as his, it was held that they were free by virtue of the deed of manumission executed by the wife. Wallingsford v. Allen, 10 Pet. 583, 9 L. Ed. 542.

The transfer of property must be considered as having been made for a valuable consideration and passed the property as fully to the wife as if the husband had conveyed it to a third person for a valuable consideration. In regard to that property, the wife is to be considered as a feme sole, and her right to dispose of it follows as a matter of course. Wallingsford v. Allen, 10 Pet. 583, 9 L. Ed. 542.

89. Ejectment for wife's land.—If the title to land be cast by descent on a married woman, her husband having a life estate, may bring ejectment; if he fails to do so for seven years, the statute of limitations will bar his right; and if he and his wife convey their title to another, their grantee cannot recover after the expiration of seven years from the time when the limitation first began to run against the husband. Gregg v. Tesson, 1 Black 150, 17 L. Ed. 74.

90. Injury to profits of wife's land.—Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850.

91. Action of trover for recovery of bonds legally owned by husband.—Where a husband gives bond to a person to sell and purchase land for the benefit of his wife, and the person to whom they are entrusted fraudulently disposes of them to one who takes with notice of the trust, his wife is not a necessary party to an action of trover by the husband against the purchaser. Kitchen v. Bedford, 13 Wall. 413, 20 L. Ed. 637.

92. Where wife entitled to act as feme sole.—Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 589, 16 L. Ed. 226. See ante, "When Wife Entitled to Act as Feme Sole," I, A, 9.

When wife may sue as feme sole.—The cases mentioned in the books where a she cannot sue alone.[93] State statutes, however, very generally provide for suits by married women without joinder of the husband,[94] and this is especially true with respect to suits concerning her separate estate.[95]

c. Actions by Both Husband and Wife.—We have already seen that a married woman cannot, as a general rule, sue on a right of action accruing to her without joining her husband.[96] There are also certain causes of action in favor of the wife which cannot be sued on by the husband alone. Thus an action for an injury to the inheritance of the wife must be brought in the joint names of the husband and wife.[97]

2. DECLARATION—a. Actions for Criminal Conversation.—In an action for criminal conversation, the usual and more correct practice is to declare in trespass vi et armis and contra pacem.[98]

b. Actions of Ejectment.—In ejectment, the rule is well established, that feme covert may sue as a feme sole are: When her husband is banished, or has abjured the realm, or has been transported for felony; where the husband is an alien enemy, and his wife is domiciled in the realm; where the husband is an alien domiciled abroad, and has never been in the realm; or where he has voluntarily abandoned her, and is under a disability to return; so where the husband has deserted the wife in a foreign country, and she goes to England and maintains herself as a feme sole; where the husband, in a foreign state, compels his wife to leave him for another political jurisdiction, and she maintains herself there as a feme sole. Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 589, 16 L. Ed. 226.

93. Married woman cannot sue alone as general rule.—Holdane v. Sumner, 15 Wall. 609, 21 L. Ed. 254; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 589, 16 L. Ed. 226; Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850; Marchand v. Livandais, 127 U. S. 775, 32 L. Ed. 324; Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 12 L. Ed. 416; Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 11 How. 329, 359, 13 L. Ed. 717.

A married woman cannot sue, without the assent and association of her husband, for any property for which she owns, or to which she may become entitled in any of the ways in which they may occur. Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 11 How. 329, 359, 13 L. Ed. 717.

Except in cases where the wife is entitled to act as feme sole, she cannot sue at law, unless it be jointly with her husband, for she is deemed to be under the protection of her husband, and a suit respecting her rights must be with the assent and co-operation of her husband. Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 589, 16 L. Ed. 226.

If a married women brings an action in her own name, without joining her husband, the proceeding is not void, although the defect may be pleaded in bar, or set up as a defense on the trial. Holdane v. Sumner, 15 Wall. 609, 21 L. Ed. 254.

Husband as necessary party on appeal.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 71.

94. Suits by married women under statutes.—Sykes v. Chadwick, 18 Wall. 141, 21 L. Ed. 824; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Humble, 181 U. S. 57, 45 L. Ed. 747.

Action for negligent injuries to wife.—In Arkansas, a married woman may sue alone for damages for personal injuries by negligence. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Humble, 181 U. S. 57, 45 L. Ed. 747.

As to whether the Arkansas statute governs in suit by married women injured there, but domiciled in another state, see the title CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1079, note 49.

Action against joint obligor of husband.—In the District of Columbia, a married woman may sue the joint obligor of her husband at law on an instrument given for the recovery of her dower right in lands and given for her separate use. Sykes v. Chadwick, 18 Wall. 141, 21 L. Ed. 824.

In Arkansas where a married woman is a party, her husband must be joined with her, except in the following cases: "First. She may be sued alone upon contracts made by her in respect to her sole and separate property, or in respect to any trade or business carried on by her under any statute of this state. Second. She may maintain an action in her own name for or on account of her sole or separate estate or property, or for damages against any person or body corporate for any injury to her person, character or property. Third. Where the action is between herself and her husband and she may sue and be sued alone." Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Humble, 181 U. S. 57, 63, 45 L. Ed. 747.

95. Suits as to separate estate.—See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

96. See the preceding section.

97. Action for injury to wife's inheritance.—Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850.

98. Declarations in actions for criminal conversation.—Tinker v. Colwell, 193 U. S. 473, 48 L. Ed. 754, quoting Chitty Plead., vol. 1, 150, note h.

when the right of entry is by ouster of the title of the wife, the demise may be laid in the name of the husband, or in the names of the husband and wife.[99]

B. Actions against Husband and Wife or Both—1. PARTIES—a. In General.—At common law, husband and wife during coverture are regarded as one person in most respects, from which it follows as a general rule that the wife cannot be sued without joining her husband.[1]

b. Action to Foreclose Mortgage on Wife's Realty.—In Florida, in an action to foreclose a mortgage on the wife's realty, the husband is a necessary party.[2]

c. Recovery of Land from Husband and Wife.—In Oregon, where a married woman is in possession of land with her husband, she may be joined with her husband in a suit brought for its recovery by the true owner thereof.[3]

d. Divesting Wife's Title in Trust Realty.—Where the object is to divest a feme covert of an interest in real estate, the title of which is in a trustee for her use, the trust being an active one, it is error to decree against her without making the trustee a party to the suit.[4]

2. JUDGMENT.—In the absence of statute, a married woman cannot be subjected on her contract to a personal judgment,[5] and statutes providing for separate estate do not permit the recovery of a personal judgment but only authorize a judgment against the property itself.[6]

C. Actions or Suits between Husband and Wife—1. ACTIONS AT LAW.—An action at law cannot be maintained between husband and wife.[7]

2. SUITS IN EQUITY.—It is well settled, however, that the husband may sue

99. Declaration in ejectment by husband and wife.—Woodward v. Brown, 13 Pet. 1, 10 L. Ed. 31.

1. Bank v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 243, 25 L. Ed. 850.

2. Action to foreclose mortgage on wife's realty.—Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694, 34 L. Ed. 1078.

If the husband is not named in the bill, he may appear at the hearing, with the consent of all the parties. Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694, 34 L. Ed. 1078 (where it was held that objection for want of consent could not be taken).

3. Action to recover land held by husband and wife.—Barrell v. Tilton, 119 U. S. 637, 642, 30 L. Ed. 511.

4. Action to divest wife's title in real estate held in trust.—O'Hara v. MacConnell, 93 U. S. 150, 23 L. Ed. 840. See, generally, the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

5. Personal judgment.—Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 330, 25 L. Ed. 390; Clark v. Beecher, 154 U. S., appx., 631, 24 L. Ed. 705. See, generally, the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

Suit to set aside conveyance from husband to wife.—In an action to set aside a conveyance from a bankrupt to his wife upon the ground that it was in fraud of creditors a personal decree for rents, issues and profits, and use and occupation of the premises, is erroneous. Clark v. Beecher, 154 U. S., appx., 631, 24 L. Ed. 705; Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 24 L. Ed. 591; Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 24 L. Ed. 954; Huntington v. Saunders, 120 U. S. 78, 30 L. Ed. 580. See the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 939.

"While the books of reports are full of cases in which real or personal property conveyed to the wife in fraud of the husband's creditors has been pursued and subjected to the payment of his debts after it had been identified in her hands, or in the hand of voluntary grantees or purchasers with notice, we are not aware of any well-considered case of high authority where the pursuit of the property has been abandoned, and a judgment in personam for its value taken against the wife." Phipps v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 9, 24 L. Ed. 591.

Judgment for damages and costs in Texas.—In Texas, where a married woman is joined with her husband as defendant in a suit to try title to real estate held by them as community property, a personal judgment for damages for use and occupation, under the statute, and for costs, cannot be rendered against her. Cooke v. Avery, 147 U. S. 375, 396, 37 L. Ed. 209.

Decree against infant feme covert.—A decree in chancery will be reversed if rendered against a woman who is shown by the bill to be both a minor and feme covert, where no appearance by or for her has been entered, and no guardian ad litem appointed. O'Hara v. MacConnell, 93 U. S. 150, 23 L. Ed. 840.

6. Effect of separate estate statutes.—Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 25 L. Ed. 390. See the title SEPARATE ESTATE OF MARRIED WOMEN.

7. Action at law.—Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 590, 16 L. Ed. 226.

If a married woman claims some right in opposition to the rights claimed by the husband, and it becomes proper to vindicate her rights against her husband, she cannot maintain a suit against him at law. Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 590, 16 L. Ed. 226.

his wife, or the wife the husband, in equity.[8] Where a wife sues her husband in equity it must be done under the protection of some other person who acts as her next friend, and the bill is accordingly exhibited in her name by such next friend.[9]

HYPOTHECARY ACTION.—See note 1.

HYPOTHECATION.—See the title BOTTOMRY AND RESPONDENTIA, vol. 3, p. 451.

HYPOTHETICAL QUESTIONS.—See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 31; EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, vol. 6. p. 206.

IDAHO.—See the title EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF, AND STATEMENT OF FACTS ON APPEAL, vol. 6, p. 30.

IDEM SONANS.—See, generally, the titles INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS; NAMES; PLEADING. See, also, the title FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING, ante, p. 380.

IDENTICAL.—See the title PATENTS.

IDENTIFICATION.—See the title BOUNDARIES, vol. 3, pp. 465, 467.

8. Suit in equity.—Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 590, 16 L. Ed. 226; Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 12 L. Ed. 416; Adams v. Adams, 21 Wall. 185, 22 L. Ed. 504.

9. Suit to be by wife's next friend.—Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 590, 16 L. Ed. 226; Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 12 L. Ed. 416.

Actions by wife for alimony.—See the title DIVORCE AND ALIMONY, vol. 5, p. 412.

1. Hypothecary action.—As defined by the Louisiana code of practice: "An hypothecary action is a real action which the creditor brings against the property which has been hypothecated to him by his debtor, in order to have it seized and sold for the payment of his debt." Lovell v. Cragin, 136 U. S. 130, 142, 34 L. Ed. 372.

IDENTITY.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43; HANDWRITING, ante, p. 674; HEARSAY EVIDENCE, ante, p. 686; PAROL EVIDENCE; PHOTOGRAPHS; RES ADJUDICATA.

As to whether a question of identity raises a federal question so as to give the United States supreme court jurisdiction over the state courts, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 683. As to identity of design or invention in suits for the infringement of patents, see the title PATENTS. As to review on habeas corpus of decision of United States commissioner upon question of identity, see the title HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610.

Identity of names is prima facie identity of persons where there is no proof to rebut such presumption.[1] But where the names are different, as for example John Hardy and Thomas M. Hardy, the proof must be clear and convincing to show that they are one and the same person.[2]

Comparison of handwritings is allowable to prove identity only where the standard of comparison is shown to be genuine. "It is a different proposition when the identity of a man is to be established by proving that a paper whose origin is disputed looks like one which he is proved to have signed."[3]

Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence.[4]—In any case, slight proof of identity is sufficient.[5] Accordingly it has been held in a prosecution against a vessel for violation of a law of the United States, that it is not necessary to adduce positive testimony of the identity of the vessel. It is sufficient if there be enough to satisfy the judicial mind.[6]

IDIOTS.—See the title INSANITY.

IGNORANCE.—As defense to crime, see the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 67.

1. Identity of names is evidence of identity of persons.—Stebbins v. Duncan, 108 U. S. 32, 27 L. Ed. 641.

In tracing titles identity of names is prima facie evidence of identity of persons. Stebbins v. Duncan, 108 U. S. 32, 47, 27 L. Ed. 641.

2. Rule where names are not indentical.—Where it is claimed that persons of different names (John Hardy and Thomas M. Hardy) are identical, but the evidence shows that no reason existed for a change of name, such as the fact that he had committed crime and wished to conceal his departure, and the other evidence in the case is utterly inconsistent with the contention that the two parties are one and the same person, the case must fail for want of proof. "That a man from any cause, desirous of concealing himself from his relatives, should retain his family name and seek to effect that object by changing his Christian name only, we think is hardly credible." Hardy v. Harbin, 154 U. S., appx., 598, 601, 22 L. Ed. 378.

3. Comparison of handwriting admissible to show identity.—Hardy v. Harbin, 154 U. S., appx., 598, 22 L. Ed. 378. See, generally, the title HANDWRITING, ante, p. 674.

4. See the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004.

5. Sufficiency of evidence to prove identity.—Stebbins v. Duncan, 108 U. S. 32, 47, 27 L. Ed. 641. Compare Hardy v. Harbin, 154 U. S., appx., 598, 601, 22 L. Ed. 378.

Effect of signature by mark and in full.—The fact that the grantor in a deed in one case made his signature by a mark and in another case signed his name, is of little weight against the identity of the grantor in the two deeds, both being properly acknowledged. Mackay v. Easton, 19 Wall. 619, 22 L. Ed. 211.

6. Prosecution for violation of nonintercourse act.—The Jane, 7 Cranch 363, 3 L. Ed. 372. See the title EMBARGO AND NONINTERCOURSE LAWS, vol. 5, p. 732.

ILLEGAL CONTRACTS.

BY ERNEST P. STEINHAUER.

I. Definition and General Consideration, 738.

A. Definition, 738.
B. Effect of Illegality, 739.
C. Effect of Motive in Inducing Contract, 739.
D. Effect of Open Avowal of Unlawful Purpose, 739.
E. Construction of Contracts, 739.
F. Validity Governed by Laws Existing at Time When Made, 739.
G. Meaning of Term "Void," 739.

II. Public Policy and Contracts Contrary to, 739.

A. Public Policy, 739.
1. Meaning of Term, 739.
2. Where to Be Found, 740.

B. Contracts Contrary to Public Policy, 740.
1. General Rule, 740.
2. Immoral Contracts, 741.
3. Contracts in Furtherance of Crime, 741.
4. Contracts Tending to Lessen Competition and Restrain Bidding, 741.
a. Bidding for Public Contract, 741.
b. Judicial Sales, 741.
c. Auctions, 742.
5. Contracts of Indemnity, 742.
6. Contracts in Derogation of Marriage Relation, 742.
a. Deed of Separation, 742.
b. Marriage Brokerage Contracts, 742.
7. Contracts Stipulating for Exemption from Liability for Negligence, 742.
8. Contract Impeding Administration of Justice, 742.
a. Ousting Jurisdiction of Courts, 742.
b. Agreements Not to Defend Action, 742.
c. Compounding Felonies, 743.
9. Gambling Contracts, 743.
10. Contracts Constituting Champerty and Maintenance, 743.
11. Contracts in Restraint of Trade, 743.
12. Usurious Contracts, 743.
13. Ultra Vires Contracts, 743.
14. Contracts Made with the Public Enemy, 743.
15. Slave Contracts, 743.
16. Contracts Detrimental to the Public Service, 743.
a. Corruption of Public Officers, 743.
(1) In General, 743.
(2) Contracts to Procure Legislation—Lobbying Contracts, 743.
(aa) In General, 743.
(bb) Procuring Passage of Bill, 745.
(cc) Procuring Contract from the Government, 745.
b. Sale of Offices, 745.
c. Procuring Pardon, 746.
d. Bribery, 746.

17. Corruption of Officers of Foreign Government, 746.
18. Contracts of Life Insurance, 746.
19. Corporate Contracts, 746.
20. Contracts in Fraud of Pre-Emption Laws, 746.
21. Contracts Made to Injure Third Persons, 747.
a. Fraudulent Contracts, 747.
b. Injury to Creditors, 747.
c. Injury to Employers, 747.
d. Injury to Public, 747.
e. Injury to Corporations, 747.

III. Contracts in Violation of Positive Law, 747.
A. General Rule, 747.
B. Construction of Statutes, 748.
C. Distinction between Malum in Se and Malum Prohibitum, 749.
D. Effect of Repeal of Statute, 749.
E. Evasion of Revenue Laws, 749.
F. Sale of Intoxicating Liquors, 749.
G. Contract in Violation of Sunday Laws, 749.

IV. Contracts Growing Out of and Connected with Illegal Contrac 749.

V. Contracts Indirectly and Remotely Illegal, 750.

VI. Entire and Separable Contracts, 750.

VII. Enforcement of Illegal Contracts, 751.
A. General Rule, 751.
B. Object of Rule, 753.
C. Exceptions to General Rule, 753.
1. Where the Contract Is Not Executed, 753.
2. Parties Not in Pari Delicto, 754.
3. Where the Law Is for the Plaintiff's Protection, 754.
4. Where Plaintiff Does Not Rely on Contract to Recover, 754.

VIII. Assertion of Title to Funds Arising from Illegal Contracts, 754.

IX. Pleading, 755.

X. Evidence, 755.

XI. Waiver, 755.

XII. Ratification, 756.

XIII. Conflict of Laws, 756.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552; LOANS.

As to contracts in regard to fees of counselors at law, see the title ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 2, p. 725. As to effect of illegal consideration upon negotiable paper, see the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 278. As to recovery of bribing money, see the title BRIBERY, vol. 3, p. 515. As to validity of contracts dealing in futures, see the title GAMBLING CONTRACTS, ante, p. 537. As to contracts to commit perjury, see the title PERJURY. As to contracts in regard to buying stock, see the title STOCKS AND STOCKHOLDERS.

I. Definition and General Consideration.

A. Definition.—The general term "illegal" means contrary to law or unlawful,[1] and when used in connection with contracts, it applies to all stipula-

1. Definition.—Bouvier's Law Dict., vol. 1, p. 979.

tions to overturn, or in evasion of, what the law has established; all promises interfering with the workings of the machinery of the government in any of its departments, or obstructing its officers in their official acts, or corrupting them; all detrimental to the public order and public good, in such manner and degree as the decisions of the courts have defined; all made to promote what a statute has declared to be wrong.[2]

B. Effect of Illegality.—Contracts clearly illegal and void, give no title. Such has been the ruling of the federal supreme court in an unbroken series of adjudications.[3]

C. Effect of Motive in Inducing Contract.—The motives which induce one to make a contract, whether justifiable or censurable, can have no influence on its validity.[4]

D. Effect of Open Avowal of Unlawful Purpose.—If a contract is made with an unlawful purpose, an open avowal of such does not make it the less unlawful.[5]

E. Construction of Contracts.—Where a contract is fairly open to two constructions, by one of which it would be lawful and the other unlawful, the former must be adopted,[6] as it is not to be presumed the parties intended to make a contract which the law does not allow.[7]

F. Validity Governed by Laws Existing at Time When Made.—It is the law in force at the time the transaction is consummated and made effectual, that must be looked to as determining its validity and effect.[8]

G. Meaning of Term "Void."—All that can be meant by the term "void," according to any legal usage, is that a court of law will not lend its aid to enforce the performance of a contract which appears to have been entered into by both the contracting parties for the express purpose of carrying into effect that which is prohibited by the law of the land.[9]

II. Public Policy and Contracts Contrary to.

A. Public Policy—1. MEANING OF TERM.—It is impossible to define with accuracy what is meant by that public policy for an interference and violation of which a contract may be declared invalid. It may be understood in general that contracts which are detrimental to the interests of the public as understood at 2. Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396, 410, 32 L. Ed. 979. Bishop on Contracts, § 549; Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond, etc., Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 32 L. Ed. 819; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. Ed. 623; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. Ed. 225.

3. Effect of illegality.—Coppell v. Hall, 7 Wall. 542, 548, 19 L. Ed. 244; United States v. Lane, 8 Wall. 185, 19 L. Ed. 445; United States v. Grossmayer, 9 Wall. 72, 19 L. Ed. 627; Montgomery v. United States, 15 Wall. 395, 21 L. Ed. 97; United States v. Lapene, 17 Wall. 601, 602, 21 L. Ed. 693; Mitchell v. United States, 21 Wall. 350, 22 L. Ed. 584; Desmare v. United States, 93 U. S. 605, 612, 23 L. Ed. 959. See post, "General Rule," II, B, 1; "Enforcement of Illegal Contracts," VII.

4. Effect of motive in inducing contract.—McDonald v. Smalley, 1 Pet. 620, 624, 7 L. Ed. 287.

5. Effect of open avowal of unlawful purpose.—McGourkey v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 536, 567, 36 L. Ed. 1079.

6. Construction of contracts.—United States v. Central Pac. R. Co., 118 U. S. 235, 236, 30 L. Ed. 173, affirming Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567, 29 L. Ed. 940. See the titles CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 570; INTERPRETATION AND CONSTRUCTION.

"A contract is not to be assumed to contemplate unlawful results unless a fair construction requires it upon the established facts." Cincinnati, etc., Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 179, 184, 50 L. Ed. 428.

7. Bang v. Adams Express Co., 93 U. S. 174, 181, 23 L. Ed. 872. See, generally, the title PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

"Where the validity of a contract is attacked on the ground of its illegal purpose, that purpose must clearly appear, and it will not be inferred simply because the performance of the contract might possibly result in a remote, incidental and unintentional aid to an illegal transaction." Houston, etc., Central R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 95, 44 L. Ed. 673.

8. Validity governed by laws existing at time when made.—Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Railroad Comm'rs, 112 U. S. 609, 623, 28 L. Ed. 837.

9. Meaning of term "void."—Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 149, 27 L. Ed. 682.

the time fall within the ban.[10] The standard of such policy is not absolutely invariable or fixed, since contracts which at one stage of our civilization may seem to conflict with public interests, at a more advanced stage are treated as legal and binding.[11] But the principle of public policy is this—ex dolo malo non oritur actio. No court will lend its aid to a man who founds his cause of action upon an immoral or an illegal act.[12]

2. WHERE TO BE FOUND.—"The public policy of the government is to be found in its statutes, and when they have not directly spoken, then in the decisions of the courts and the constant practice of the government officials; but when lawmaking power speaks upon a particular subject, over which it has constitutional power to legislate, public policy in such a case is what the statute enacts."[13]

B. Contracts Contrary to Public Policy—1. GENERAL RULE.—Where a contract is made that is contrary to public policy, it is void.[14]

10. Meaning of term "public policy."—Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 233, 36 L. Ed. 414.

"The authorities all agree that a contract is not void as against public policy, unless it is injurious to the interests of the public, or contravenes some established interest of society." Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 175 U. S. 91, 106, 44 L. Ed. 84.

The right of private contract is no small part of the liberty of the citizen, and the usual and most important function of courts of justice is rather to maintain and enforce contracts, then to enable parties thereto to escape from their obligation on the pretext of public policy, unless it clearly appear that they contravene public right or the public welfare. Baltimore, etc., Railway v. Voigt, 176 U. S. 498, 505, 44 L. Ed. 560.

11. Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 233, 36 L. Ed. 414.

12. Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 149, 27 L. Ed. 682. See post, "Enforcement of Illegal Contracts," VII.

13. Where to be found.—United States v. Frans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 340, 41 L. Ed. 1007.

14. General rule.—Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 14 L. Ed. 953; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. Ed. 225; Hazelton v. Sheckells, 202 U. S. 71, 50 L. Ed. 939; Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond, etc., Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 32 L. Ed. 819; West v. Camden, 135 U. S. 507, 34 L. Ed. 254; Baltimore, etc., Railway v. Voigt, 176 U. S. 498, 44 L. Ed. 560; Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 36 L. Ed. 414; Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 17 L. Ed. 868; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co., 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. Ed. 148; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. Ed. 623; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 655, 43 L. Ed. 1117; Teal v Walker, 111 U. S. 242, 252, 28 L. Ed. 415; Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 274, 26 L. Ed. 539; Meguire v. Corwine, 101 U. S. 108, 111, 25 L. Ed. 899. See ante, "Effect of Illegality," I, B.

A contract may be illegal and void because it is contrary to or inconsistent with sound policy. Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 448, 22 L. Ed. 623.

"The law will not enforce contracts and agreements that are against the public good, and, therefore, are forbidden by public policy." Ritter v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 169 U. S. 139, 158, 42 L. Ed. 693.

It is a rule of the common law of universal application, that where a contract express or implied is as to the consideration or the thing to be done, contrary to sound policy and good morals, no alleged right founded upon it can be enforced in a court of justice. Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 448, 22 L. Ed. 623.

Contracts permissible by other countries are not enforceable in our courts if they contravene our policy. Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 277, 26 L. Ed 539.

In federal courts.—No contract can be enforced in the courts of the United States no matter where made or where to be executed, if in contravention of the government. Kennett v. Chambers, 14 How. 38, 14 L. Ed. 316.

Illustrations.—In Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 449, 22 L. Ed. 623, the court said: "Within the condemned category are: An agreement—to pay for supporting for election a candidate for sheriff; to pay for resigning a public position to make room for another; to pay for not bidding at a sheriff's sale of real property; to pay for not bidding for articles to be sold by the government at auction; to pay for not bidding for a contract to carry the mail on a specified route; to pay a person for his aid and influence in procuring an office, and for not being a candidate himself; to pay for procuring a contract from the government; to pay for procuring signatures to a petition to the governor for a pardon; to sell land to a particular person when the surrogate's order to sell should have been obtained; to pay for suppressing evidence and compounding a felony; to convey and assign a part of what should come from an ancestor by descent, devise, or distribution; to pay for promoting a marriage; to influence the

2. Immoral Contracts.—The court will not lend its aid to enforce a contract to do an act that is inconsistent with sound morals.[15] The whole doctrine of avoiding such contract is founded on public policy.[16]

3. Contracts in Furtherance of Crime.—Public policy forbids the insertion in a contract of a condition which would tend to induce crime, and as it forbids the introduction of such stipulation it also forbids the enforcement of a contract under circumstances which cannot be lawfully stipulated for.[17] For example: it is contrary to public policy to give the aid of the courts to a vendor who knew that his goods were purchased, or to a lender who knew that his money was borrowed, for the purpose of being employed in the commission of a criminal act, injurious to society or to any of its members.[18]

4. Contract Tending to Lessen Competition and Restrain Bidding—a. Bidding for Public Contract.—Where bidders for a public contract secretly agree to put in bids known to each; to conceal the fact of their combination; to put in fictitious bids without expectation or purpose of having them taken; and that if the contract is procured they shall perform the work as partners and share expenses and divide profits, the agreement is contrary to public policy and is illegal.[19]

b. Judicial Sales.—The rules about judicial sales which make void as against public policy agreements that persons competent to bid at them will not bid, forbid such agreements alone as are meant to prevent competition and induce a sacrifice of the property sold. An agreement to bid, the object of it being fair, is not void.[20] disposition of property by will in a particular way."

15. Immoral contracts.—Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 14 L. Ed. 953; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 446, 22 L. Ed. 623.

The court will not listen to claims founded upon services rendered in violation of common decency or public morality. Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 267, 26 L. Ed. 539.

Where a man married a woman by whom he had two children, and she subsequently found he had an undivorced wife living, and he assigned her a mortgage, the court held the assignment valid, saying: "We cannot doubt that in executing and delivering it to her he did a meritorious act, honorable and just, as the only atonement he could make for the deception he had practised upon her, and as placing in her hands the means of supporting the children of whom he was the father. It was not the case of a contract for future illicit intercourse of the class which the authorities hold to be against public policy, but an appropriate means of providing for the support of a woman whom he had married while he had a wife living, and of the children resulting from that marriage." Gay v. Parpart, 106 U. S. 679, 686, 27 L. Ed. 256.

Contracts permissible by other countries are not enforceable in our courts if they contravene our morality. Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 277, 26 L. Ed. 539.

16. Doctrine based on public policy.—Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. 342, 348, 20 L. Ed. 439.

17. Contracts in furtherance of crime.—Burt v. Union Central Life Ins. Co., 187 U. S. 362, 365, 47 L. Ed. 216. See post, "Compounding Felonies," II, B, 8, c.

"History furnishes instances of robbery, arson, and other crimes committed for hire. If, after receiving a pardon, or suffering the punishment imposed upon him, the culprit should sue the instigator of the crime for the promised reward—if we may suppose that audacity could go so far—the court would not hesitate a moment in dismissing his case and sending him from its presence, whatever might be the character of the defense." Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 267, 26 L. Ed. 539.

18. Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. 342, 20 L. Ed. 439.

Contrary cases.—"There are cases to the contrary; but they are either cases where the unlawful act contemplated to be done was merely malum prohibitum, or of inferior criminality; or cases in which the unlawful act was already committed, and the loan was an independent contract, made, not to enable the borrower to commit the act, but to pay obligations which he had already incurred in committing it. Of the latter class was the case of Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468." Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. 342, 348, 20 L. Ed. 439.

19. Bidding for public contract.—McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 653, 43 L. Ed. 1117. See, generally, the titles MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; STATES; UNITED STATES.

20. Judicial sales.—Wicker v. Hoppock, 6 Wall. 94, 18 L. Ed. 752. See the title JUDICIAL SALES.

"In the case before us the agreement was that Wicker should bid. There was no stipulation that Hoppock should not.

c. Auctions.—This subject has been fully treated under another title.[21]

5. CONTRACTS OF INDEMNITY.—The law will not enforce a promise to indemnify a surety for doing an act planned and intended to enable his principal to commit a gross breach of trust. Such a transaction is against the policy of the law and plainly illegal.[22]

6. CONTRACTS IN DEROGATION OF MARRIAGE RELATION—a. Deed of Separation.—See the title HUSBAND AND WIFE, ante, p. 716.

b. Marriage Brokerage Contracts.—"Persons entering into the marriage relation should be free from extraneous or deceptive influences; hence the law avoids all contracts to pay money for procuring a marriage."[23]

7. CONTRACTS STIPULATING FOR EXEMPTION FROM LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE.—By Carriers.—This subject is fully treated under another title.[24]

8. CONTRACT IMPEDING ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE—a. Ousting Jurisdiction of Courts.—See the title JURISDICTION.

b. Agreements Not to Defend Action.—An agreement that a party will not set up a defense to any action which another might bring against him, is invalid.[25]

There was nothing which forbade Hoppock to bid, if he thought proper to do so, and nothing which had any tendency to prevent bidding by others. The object of the contract obviously was to be secure—not to prevent bidding. The benefit and importance of the arrangement to the interests of the judgment debtors is made strikingly apparent when the subject is viewed in the light of the consequences which followed the breach of the agreement. Instead of the property selling for the amount of the judgments, Hoppock was the only bidder, and the property sold was struck off to him for a nominal sum." Wicker v. Hoppock, 6 Wall. 94, 98, 18 L. Ed. 752.

21. Auctions.—See the title AUCTIONS AND AUCTIONEERS, vol. 2, pp. 746, 747.

22. Contracts of indemnity.—Forsyth v. Woods, 11 Wall. 484, 486, 20 L. Ed. 207.

The acceptance of letters of administration being a trust—granted because of the confidence reposed in the grantee—a loss sustained by a surety in the administration bond, who has entered into the suretyship under a representation from a firm of which the administrator was a member, that they intended to take into the possession of the partnership all the assets of the intestate, to make the administration a matter of partnership business, and to share as partners the gains and losses resulting from the administration, so that in signing the bond he would become the surety of the firm and not of the individual partner, cannot be recovered by the surety from the firm. Such a transaction is against the policy of the law. Forsyth v. Woods, 11 Wall. 484, 20 L. Ed. 207.

23. Marriage brokerage contracts.—Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 333, 14 L. Ed. 953

24 See the title CARRIERS, vol. 3, p. 601.

25. Agreement not to defend action.—"A contract not to set up any defense whatever to any suit that may be begun upon fifty different causes of action is in violation of public policy." Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 236, 36 L. Ed. 414.

A contract between a licensee and the owner of a patent, is contrary to public policy, where the licensee agrees not to dispute or contest the validity of such patents or the owner's title thereto, and that if, after the termination of his license, he shall continue to make, sell or use any machine or part thereof containing such patented inventions, the plaintiff shall have the right to treat him as an infringer, and to sue out an injunction against him without notice. Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 36 L. Ed. 414.

"In certain cases a man may doubtless agree that he will interpose no defense to a specified claim, and that another may take judgment against him without notice. This is a matter of everyday occurrence in connection with what are termed judgment notes. But if one should agree for a valuable consideration that he would set up no defense to any action which another might bring against him and such other person might enter up judgment against him in any such action without notice, we think that no court would hesitate to pronounce such an agreement invalid. * * * It is as important to the public that competition should not be repressed by worthless patents, as that the patentee of a really valuable invention should be protected in his monopoly; and it is a serious question whether public policy permits a man to barter away beforehand his right to defend unjust actions or classes of actions, though, in an individual case, he may doubtless assent that a judgment be rendered against him, even without notice." Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 234, 36 L. Ed. 414.

c. Compounding Felonies.—"A contract, the consideration of which is the compounding of felony, is admitted to be void."[26]

9. Gambling Contracts.—See the title Gambling Contracts, ante, p. 537.

10. Contracts Constituting Champerty and Maintenance.—See the title Champerty and Maintenance, vol. 3, p. 668.

11. Contracts in Restraint of Trade.—See the title Restraint of Trade.

12. Usurious Contracts.—See the title Usury.

13. Ultra Vires Contracts.—See the titles Corporations, vol. 4, p. 621; Municipal Corporations; Railroads.

14. Contracts Made with the Public Enemy.—See the title War.

15. Slave Contracts.—See the title Slavery and Involuntary Servitude.

16. Contracts Detrimental to the Public Service—a. Corruption of Public Officers—(1) In General.—The law is general that agreements upon pecuniary considerations, or the promise of them, to influence the conduct of officers charged with duties affecting the public interest, are against the true policy of the state, which is to secure fidelity in the discharge of all such duties. Agreements of that character introduce mercenary considerations to control the conduct of parties, instead of considerations arising from the nature of their duties and the most efficient way of discharging them. They are, therefore, necessarily corrupt in their tendencies.[27]

(2) Contracts to Procure Legislation—Lobbying Contracts—(aa) In General.—Legislation should be prompted solely from considerations of the public good, and the best means of advancing it;[28] and in furtherance thereof, the legislators

Equity will not, in an action where all are liable (as ex. gr. an action of trespass against tort feasors), enforce a secret agreement made by the plaintiff with certain of the defendants, that if they will desist from resistance to his suit, he will, if he recovers judgment, not levy execution on their property, litigants being bound to act fairly to each other, and such an agreement operating as a fraud. Selz v. Unna, 6 Wall. 327, 18 L. Ed. 799.

26. Compounding felonies.—Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 87, 6 L. Ed. 423.

If a conveyance preferring creditors has been induced by a consideration for the compounding of a felony, or the promise of it, or had depended on it, the fault that it was made for the payment of debts justly due would not have secured it from the effect of this contaminating ingredient. Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. 78, 87, 6 L. Ed. 423.

Property conveyed pursuant to a contract made in consideration of the compounding of a crime, and the stifling of a criminal prosecution, and therefore clearly illegal, cannot be recovered back at law, nor the conveyance set aside in equity, unless obtained by such fraud or oppression on the part of the grantee that the conveyance cannot be considered the voluntary act of the grantor." St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 407, 36 L. Ed. 738.

27. In general.—Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond, etc., Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 662, 32 L. Ed. 819.

"It is an undoubted principle of the common law that it will not lend its aid to enforce a contract to do an act that is illegal; or which is inconsistent with sound morals or public policy; or which tends to corrupt or contaminate, by improper influences, the integrity of our social or political institutions." Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 333, 14 L. Ed. 953.

"To enforce a contract which began with the corruption of a public officer, and progressed in the practice of known and willful deception in its execution, can never be consummated or sanctioned by any court." Bartle v. Coleman, 4 Pet. 184, 188, 7 L. Ed. 825.

28. Lobbying contracts in general.—Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 54, 17 L. Ed. 868.

"The foundation of a republic is the virtue of its citizens. They are at once sovereigns and subjects. As the foundation is undermined, the structure is weakened. When it is destroyed, the fabric must fall. Such is the voice of universal history. The theory of our government is, that all public stations are trusts, and that those clothed with them are to be animated in the discharge of their duties solely by considerations of right, justice, and the public good. They are never to descend to a lower plane. But there is a correlative duty resting upon the citizen. In his intercourse with those in authority, whether executive or legislative, touching the performance of their functions, he is bound to exhibit truth, frankness, and integrity. Any departure from the line of rectitude in such cases is not only bad in morals, but involves a public wrong. No people can have any higher public interest, except the preservation of their liberties, than integrity in the administration of their government in all its de-should act with a single eye to the true interest of the whole people;[29] therefore, all contracts for a contingent[30] compensation for obtaining legislation, or to use personal[31] or any secret[32] or sinister influence on legislators, are void by the policy of the law.[33] But such contracts should be distinguished from agreepartments." Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 450, 22 L. Ed. 623.

29. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 334, 14 L. Ed. 953.

"Legislators should act from high considerations of public duty. Public policy and sound morality do therefore imperatively require that courts should put the stamp of their disapprobation on every act, and pronounce void every contract the ultimate or probable tendency of which would be to sully the purity or mislead the judgments of those to whom the high trust of legislation is confided." Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 333, 14 L. Ed. 953.

30. "Agreements for compensation contingent upon success, suggest the use of sinister and corrupt means for the accomplishment of the end desired. The law meets the suggestion of evil, and strikes down the contract from its inception." Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 54, 17 L. Ed. 868.

"Bribes, in the shape of high contingent compensation, must necessarily lead to the use of improper means and the exercise of undue influence. Their necessary consequence is the demoralization of the agent who covenants for them; he is soon brought to believe that any means which will produce so beneficial a result to himself are 'proper means;' and that a share of these profits may have the same effect of quickening the perceptions and warming the zeal of influential or 'careless' members in favor of his bill. The use of such means and such agents will have the effect to subject the state governments to the combined capital of wealthy corporations, and produce universal corruption, commencing with the representative ending with the elector." Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 334, 14 L. Ed. 953.

A contract is void, as against public policy, and can have no standing in court by which one party stipulates to employ a number of secret agents in order to obtain the passage of a particular law by the legislature of a state, and the other party promises to pay a large sum of money in case the law should pass. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 14 L. Ed. 953.

31. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 335, 14 L. Ed. 953.

"In Trist v. Child, reported in 21st of Wallace (21 Wall. 441, 22 L. Ed. 623), the distinction is drawn between the use of personal influence to secure legislation, and legitimate professional services in making the legislature acquainted with the merits of the measures desired. Whilst the former is condemned, the latter are, within certain limits, regarded as appropriate subjects for compensation." Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 275, 26 L. Ed. 539.

"All persons whose interests may in any way be affected by any public or private act of the legislature, have an undoubted right to urge their claims and arguments, either in person or by counsel professing to act for them, before legislative committees, as well as in courts of justice. But where persons act as counsel or agents, or in any representative capacity, it is due to those before whom they plead or solicit, that they should honestly appear in their characters, so that their arguments and representations, openly and candidly made, may receive their just weight and consideration. A hired advocate or agent, assuming to act in a different character, is practicing deceit on the legislature. Advice or information flowing from the unbiased judgment of disinterested persons, will naturally be received with more confidence and less scrupulously examined than where the recommendations are known to be the result of pecuniary interest, or the arguments prompted and pressed by hope of a large contingent reward, and the agent 'stimulated to active partisanship by the strong lure of high profit.' Any attempts to deceive persons intrusted with high functions of legislation, by secret combinations, or to create or bring into operation undue influence of any kind, have all the injurious effects of a direct fraud on the public." Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 334, 14 L. Ed. 953.

32. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 335, 14 L. Ed. 953.

"Secrecy, as to the character under which the agent or solicitor acts, tends to deception, and is immoral and fraudulent; and where the agent contracts to use secret influences, or voluntarily, without contract with his principal, uses such means, he cannot have the assistance of a court to recover compensation." Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 14 L. Ed. 953.

"Speculators in legislation, public and private, a compact corps of venal solicitors, vending their secret influences, will infest the capital of the Union and of every state, till corruption shall become the normal condition of the body politic, and it will be said of us as of Rome—'omne Romæ Venale.'" Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 335, 14 L. Ed. 953.

33. Cases relating to agreements for compensation to procure legislation have ments for services in presenting information on the subject for the consideration of the government.[34]

(bb) Procuring Passage of Bill.—A contract to procure by lobby service the passage of a bill providing for the payment of a claim is void.[35] But such a contract is to be distinguished from one for purely professional services, which is valid.[36]

(cc) Procuring Contract from the Government.—An agreement for compensation for procuring a contract from the government to furnish its supplies is against public policy, and cannot be enforced by the courts.[37]

b. Sale of Offices.—Public offices are trusts, held solely for the public good, and should be conferred from considerations of the ability, integrity, fidelity, and fitness for the position of the appointee. No other considerations can properly be regarded by the appointing power. Whatever introduces other elements to control this power, must necessarily lower the character of the appointments, to the great detriment of the public. Agreements for compensation to procure been uniformly declared invalid. Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 54, 17 L. Ed. 868.

Where a partial consideration of a contract to convey land was services in procuring legislation upon a matter of public interest, in respect of which neither of the parties had any claim against the United States, the contract was void as against public policy. Hazelton v. Sheckells, 202 U. S. 71, 78, 50 L. Ed. 939.

A contract to sell land during a session of congress, part of the consideration being for services rendered both before and after the making of the contract, by the vendee in bringing the property to the attention of the committees of congress as a suitable and appropriate site for a hall of records, the vendee being under no obligation to take and pay for the land, is void because against public policy. Hazelton v. Sheckells, 202 U. S. 71, 78, 50 L. Ed. 939.

34. "In Tool Co. v. Norris, reported in the 2d of Wallace (2 Wall. 45, 17 L. Ed. 868), this court held that an agreement for compensation to procure a contract with the government to furnish it with supplies was against public policy and could not be enforced. That was a case where the compensation was made contingent upon success in procuring the contract, and, as we shall hereafter show, should be distinguished from agreements for services in presenting information on the subject for the consideration of the government." Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 273, 26 L. Ed. 539.

"It is legitimate to lay before the officers authorized to contract, all such information as may apprise them of the character and value of the articles offered, and enable them to act for the best interests of the country. And for such services compensation may be had as for similar services with private parties, either upon a quantum meruit, or, where a sale, is effected, by the ordinary brokerage commissioner. * * * But where, instead of placing before the officers of the government the information which should properly guide their judgments, personal influence is the means used to secure the sales, and is allowed to prevail, the public good is lost sight of, unnecessary expenditures are incurred, and, generally, defective supplies are obtained, producing inefficiency in the public service." Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 275, 26 L. Ed. 539.

35. Procuring passage of bill.—Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 448, 22 L. Ed. 623.

A contract to take charge of a claim before congress, and prosecute it as an agent and attorney for the claimant (the same amounting to a contract to procure by "lobby services"—that is to say, by personal solicitation by the agent, and others supposed to have personal influence in any way with members of congress—the passage of a bill providing for the payment of the claim), is void. Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. Ed. 623.

36. Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 450, 22 L. Ed. 623.

A contract to bring about the passage of a law by personal solicitation is distinguishable from one for purely professional services, within which category are included, drafting a petition which sets forth the claim, attending to the taking of testimony, collecting facts, preparing arguments, and submitted them either orally or in writing to a committee or other proper authority, with other services of like character intended to reach only the understanding of the persons sought to be influenced. They rest on the same principle of ethics as professional services rendered in a court of justice, and are no more exceptionable. Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. Ed. 623.

37. Procuring contracts from the government.—Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 17 L. Ed. 868.

Personal influence to be exercised over an officer of government in the procurement of contracts, is not a vendible article in our system of laws and morals, and the courts of the United States will not lend their aid to the vendor to collect the price of the article. Oscanyan v.

these appointments tend directly and necessarily to introduce such elements. The law, therefore, from this tendency alone, adjudges these agreements inconsistent with sound morals and public policy.[38]

c. Procuring Pardon.—"The pardoning power, committed to the executive, should be exercised as free from any improper bias or influence as the trial of the convict before the court; consequently, the law will not enforce a contract to pay money for soliciting petitions or using influence to obtain a pardon."[39]

d. Bribery.—This subject is treated under its specific title.[40]

17. Corruption of Officers of Foreign Government.—"A contract to bribe or corruptly influence officers of a foreign government will not be enforced in the courts of this country—not from any consideration of the interests of that government or any regard for its policy, but from the inherent viciousness of the transaction, its repugnance to our morality, and the pernicious effect which its enforcement by our courts would have upon our people."[41]

18. Contracts of Life Insurance.—As to legality of provision for paying life insurance in case of suicide, see the title Insurance.

19. Corporate Contracts.—As to agreements disabling from performance of public duty, see the title Corporations, vol. 4, p. 736.

20. Contracts in Fraud of Pre-Emption Laws.—A contract between two persons, neither of them being settlers or housekeepers, that one of them shall enter land for the benefit of both under the pre-emption laws, is a combination to defraud the government, contrary to public policy, illegal, and void.[42]

Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 273, 26 L. Ed. 539.

And if there was no agreement to that effect, there can be no recovery upon the contract, if in fact the agent did conceal from the members of the legislature that he was an agent who was to receive compensation for his services in case of the passage of the law. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 14 L. Ed. 953.

It was also void if, when it was made, the parties agreed to conceal from the members of the legislature the fact that the one party was the agent of the other, and was to receive a compensation for his services in case of the passage of the law. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 14 L. Ed. 953.

"There is no real difference in principle between agreements to procure favors from legislative bodies, and agreements to procure favors in the shape of contracts from the heads of departments. The introduction of improper elements to control the action of both is the direct and inevitable result of all such arrangements." Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 55, 17 L. Ed. 868.

38. Sale of office.—Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. 45, 55, 17 L. Ed. 868.

"It is the interest of the state that all places of public trust should be filed by men of capacity and integrity, and that the appointing power should be shielded from influences which may prevent the best selection; hence the law annuls every contract for procuring the appointment or election of any person to an office." Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 333, 14 L. Ed. 953.

In Meguire v. Corwine, 101 U. S. 108, 111, 25 L. Ed. 899, an agreement to pay the plaintiff—in consideration of his appointment as government counsel—one-half the fees he might recover, was adjudged invalid. Transactions of the kind were declared to be "an unmixed evil;" and the court said that whether forbidden by statute or condemned by public policy, "no legal right can spring from such a source."

39. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 333, 14 L. Ed. 953.

40. See the title BRIBERY, vol. 3, p. 514.

41. Corruption of officers of foreign government.—Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 277, 26 L. Ed. 539.

"An illustration of this rule is found in Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. Ed. 539. There a large sum was claimed from the vendor of firearms as commissions on sale that, through the influence of the plaintiff, had been made to the Turkish government, of which he was then an officer. The defendant pleaded the general issue; and it was contended that the illegality of the contract could not be noticed, because not affirmatively pleaded. But the court held that, assuming the contract to be a corrupt one, forbidden by morality and public policy, the objection to a recovery could not be obviated or waived by any system of pleading, or even by the express stipulation of the parties; that it was one which the court itself was bound to raise in the interest of the due administration of justice." Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 52, 29 L. Ed. 570.

42. Contracts in fraud of pre-emption laws.—Harkness v. Underhill, 1 Black 316, 17 L. Ed. 208.

Such a contract will not operate by way of estoppel to prevent one of the parties, 21. Contracts Made to Injure Third Persons—a. Fraudulent Contracts.—See the titles Fraud and Deceit, ante, p. 394; Fraudulent and Voluntary Conveyances, ante, p. 472.

b. Injury to Creditors.—Though a debtor has a right to prefer one creditor to another, yet any unlawful consideration moving from the preferred creditor to induce this preference will avoid the deed which gives it.[43]

c. Injury to Employers.—Where an employee has agreed, for a money consideration, to violate his obligation to his employer, the contract is illegal and void.[44]

d. Injury to Public.—All arrangements by which directors or stockholders or other persons may acquire gain, by inducing corporations to disregard their duties to the public are illegal and lead to unfair dealing, and thus being against public policy, will not be enforced by the courts.[45]

e. Injury to Corporations.—An agreement to keep a person permanently in the position of vice president of a company, irrespective of its interests, is contrary to public policy and is void.[46]

III. Contracts in Violation of Positive Law.

A. General Rule.—A contract to do an act forbidden by law is void, and cannot be enforced in a court of justice.[47] And the rule is unaffected by the his heirs or alienees, from setting up a good legal title subsequently acquired, against the fraudulent title obtained by the other in accordance with the contract. Harkness v. Underhill, 1 Black 316, 17 L. Ed. 208.

43. Injury to creditors.—Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556, 577, 5 L. Ed. 522. See, generally, the titles ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 599; BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 939; FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472.

44. Injury to employers.—Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond, etc., Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 656, 32 L. Ed. 819. See, generally, the titles MASTER AND SERVANT; TRADEMARKS, TRADE-NAMES AND UNFAIR COMPETITION.

A contract by an employee of a railroad company with a third party, for a consideration to be received from that third party, to violate its engagement with its employer in the important business of locating and constructing a railroad, and instead of selecting the shortest, cheapest and most suitable route, to locate the road by a longer route, and thus impose an unnecessary and heavy burden upon its employer is a void contract, immoral in its conception and corrupting in its tendency. The transaction on the part of the third party was none the less offensive, because of the threats of the employee that, if the land and money mentioned were not donated, it would cause the road to be located on another route. The threats did not excuse, much less justify, the offer. Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond, etc., Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 656, 32 L. Ed. 819.

"In this case the extension company, to which the duty of locating and constructing the railroad between its termini was entrusted, in agreeing, for a consideration offered by a third party, to disregard that duty and locate and construct the road by a longer route than was required, not only committed a wrong upon the railroad company by thus imposing unnecessary burdens upon it, to meet which larger charges for transportation might be called for, but also a wrong upon the public." Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond, etc., Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 657, 32 L. Ed. 819.

45. Injury to public.—Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond, etc., Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 657, 32 L. Ed. 819.

46. Injury to corporations.—West v. Camden, 135 U. S. 507, 520, 34 L. Ed. 254.

47. General rule.—Tiffany v. Boatman's Institution, 18 Wall. 375, 385, 21 L. Ed. 868; Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 436, 7 L. Ed. 903; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396, 412, 32 L. Ed. 979; Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 348, 33 L. Ed. 172; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 548, 46 L. Ed. 679; Coppell v. Hall, 7 Wall. 542, 19 L. Ed. 244; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 733, 28 L. Ed. 1137; Bank v. Ownes, 2 Pet. 527, 7 L. Ed. 508; Groves v. Slaughter, 15 Pet. 449, 10 L. Ed. 800; Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 13 L. Ed. 901; Brown v. Tarkington, 3 Wall. 377, 18 L. Ed. 255; Davidson v. Lanier, 4 Wall. 447, 18 L. Ed. 377; Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. 342, 20 L. Ed. 439; Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 267, 26 L. Ed. 539; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 448, 22 L. Ed. 623.

Object of law.—"The object of all law is to repress vice and to promote the general welfare of society; and it does not give its assistance to a person to enforce a demand, originating in his breach or violation of its principles and enactments.

consent of the opposite party.[48] Nor is ignorance of the law a good defense.[49]

B. Construction of Statutes.—Where a statute prohibits an act or annexes a penalty to its commission, it is true that the act is made unlawful, but it does not follow that the unlawfulness of the act was meant by the legislature to avoid a contract made in contravention of it. When the statute is silent, and contains nothing from which the contrary can properly be inferred, a contract in contravention of it is void. But the whole statute must be examined in order to decide whether or not it does contain anything from which the contrary can be properly inferred.[50]

Contracts in violation of statutes are void; and they are so whether the consideration to be performed or the act to be done be a violation of the statute." Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 82, 13 L. Ed. 901.

In federal courts.—No contract can be enforced in the courts of the United States, no matter where made or where to be executed, if it is in violation of the laws of the United States, or is in conflict with subsisting treaties. Kennett v. Chambers, 14 How. 38, 14 L. Ed. 316.

A debt arising out of a transaction between an alien and a citizen of the United States, involving a violation of the positive laws of the United States, excluding an alien from any interest in an American registered vessel, as well as a violation of the impost laws, cannot be recovered in any court of justice of the United States. Maybin v. Coulon, 4 Dall. 298, 1 L. Ed. 841.

The courts of the United States will not enforce an agreement entered into in fraud of a law of the United States; although that agreement was made between persons who were then enemies of the United States, and the object of the agreement a mere stratagem of war. Dobynes v. United States, 3 Cranch 241, 242, 2 L. Ed. 427.

The act of August 23d, 1842, declaring that no officer of the government drawing a fixed salary shall receive additional compensation for any service, unless it is authorized by law, and a specific appropriation made to pay it, is not repealed by the twelfth section of the act of August 26, the same year. An agreement by the secretary of the interior to pay a clerk in his department for services rendered to the government by labors abroad—the clerk still holding his place and drawing his pay as clerk in the interior—was, accordingly, held void. Stansbury v. United States, 8 Wall. 33, 19 L. Ed. 315.

Honorary obligations of foreign nations.—"The courts of the United States can hardly be authorized to sanction and enforce what are called honorary obligations of a foreign nation, when those obligations have arisen from temptations offered to our own citizens to violate the laws of their own country." Williams v. Gibbes, 17 How. 239, 268, 15 L. Ed. 135.

In Pennsylvania.—In an early Pennsylvania case the court refused to enforce a bond for the purchase of land, where entry under the title was forbidden by law. Mitchell v. Smith, 4 Dall. 269, 1 L. Ed. 828.

In an early Pennsylvania case it was held that one could not maintain an action of trover for a vessel, where his claim to the ship was founded upon a transaction in fraud of the positive laws and public policy of the United States. Duncanson v. McLure, 4 Dall. 308, 313, 1 L. Ed. 845.

Violation of constitution.—"An act forbidden by the constitution of the United States, which is the supreme law, is against law." Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 436, 7 L. Ed. 903.

Violation of act of congress.—"Any one sued upon a contract may set up as a defense that it is a violation of the act of congress, and if found to be so, that fact will constitute a good defense to the action." Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70, 88, 46 L. Ed. 1058.

48. "Courts of justice, even with the consent of the opposite party, will not enforce a right or contract in violation of a statute, although not expressly declared void by the enactment." Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291, 302, 24 L. Ed. 731.

49. "We regard the contention that complainants are exempt from the doctrine in pari delicto because the parties acted in good faith and without intention to violate the law as without merit. With knowledge of the facts and of the statute, the parties turned out to be mistaken in supposing that the statute would not be held applicable to the facts. Neither can plead ignorance of the law as against the other, and defendant secured no unfair advantage in retaining the consideration voluntarily delivered for the price agreed." Harriman v. Northern Securities Co., 197 U. S. 244, 298, 49 L. Ed. 739.

50. Construction of statutes.—Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 13 L. Ed. 901. See the title STATUTES.

"It has never been doubted that, as a general rule, a contract made in contravention of a statute is void and cannot be enforced, and the only exception arise when, from an examination of the statute, the courts are able to discern a different or a limited purpose on the part of the lawmakers." Burck v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 634, 649, 38 L. Ed. 578.

"In order to adjudge a contract unlawful, as prohibited by a statute, the prohibition must be found in the statute."

C. Distinction between Malum in Se and Malum Prohibitum.—There is no distinction, as to vitiating the contract for violating a statute, between malum in se and malum prohibitum.[51]

D. Effect of Repeal of Statute.—"Where the consideration of a contract declared void by statute is morally good, a repeal of the statute will validate the contract."[52]

E. Evasion of Revenue Laws.—"All contracts to evade the revenue laws are void."[53]

F. Sale of Intoxicating Liquors.—See the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

G. Contracts in Violation of Sunday Laws.—See the title SUNDAYS AND HOLIDAYS.

IV. Contracts Growing Out of and Connected with Illegal Contracts. Where a contract grows immediately out of, and is connected with, an illegal or immoral act, a court of justice will not lend its aid to enforce it.[54] So, if the contract be in part only connected with the illegal consideration, and growing immediately out of it, though it be, in fact, a new contract, it is equally tainted by it.[55] But if the promise be entirely disconnected with the illegal act, and is founded on a new consideration,[56] it is not affected by the act, although it was Thompson v. Saint Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 250, 36 L. Ed. 956.

"It is familiar law that not every contract in contravention of the terms of a statute is void, and the courts will search the language of the statute to see whether it was the intent of the makers that a contract in contravention of it should be void or not. Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 13 L. Ed. 901; Miller v. Ammon, 145 U. S. 421, 36 L. Ed. 759." Burck v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 634, 648, 38 L. Ed. 578.

"In Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 13 L. Ed. 901, where the defendant sued upon a note set up the illegality of its consideration, it was held that the whole statute then in question must be examined to discover whether it intended to prevent courts of justice from enforcing contracts in relation to the act prohibited; and that when a statute prohibits an act, or annexes a penalty for its commission, it does not follow that the unlawfulness of the act was meant to avoid a contract made in contravention of it." Gold Mining Co. v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 640, 642, 24 L. Ed. 648.

51. Distinction between malum in se and malum prohibitum.—Bank v. Owens, 2 Pet. 527, 539, 7 L. Ed. 508.

"The distinction between malum in se and malum prohibitum has long since been exploded." Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396, 411, 32 L. Ed. 979.

"A distinction is made between acts which are mala in se, which are generally regarded as absolutely void, in the sense that no right or claim can be derived from them; and acts which are mala prohibita, which are void or voidable, according to the nature and effect of the act prohibited." Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 150, 27 L. Ed. 682.

There is no moral turpitude in making a contract which is malum prohibitum and not malum in se. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 57, 26 L. Ed. 317.

52. Effect of repeal of statute.—Little Rock v. National Bank, 98 U. S. 308, 314, 25 L. Ed. 108.

53. Evasion of revenue laws.—Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 333, 14 L. Ed. 953. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

54. Contracts growing out and connected with illegal contracts.—Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468; Kimbro v. Bullitt, 22 How. 256, 269, 16 L. Ed. 313.

"When a contract is connected by its consideration with an illegal transaction a court of justice will not aid its enforcement." Hanauer v. Woodruff, 15 Wall. 439, 442, 21 L. Ed. 224.

"A subsequent collateral contract, if made in aid and in furtherance of the execution of one infected with illegality, partakes of its nature, and is equally in violation of law." McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 235, 15 L. Ed. 132.

55. Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468.

56. Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468.

An obligation will be enforced, though indirectly connected with an illegal transaction, if it is supported by an independent consideration, so that the plaintiff does not require the aid of the illegal transaction to make out his case. Armstrong v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 433, 469, 33 L. Ed. 747.

"A new contract, founded on a new and independent consideration, although in relation to property respecting which there had been unlawful or fraudulent transactions between the parties, will be dealt with by the courts on its own merits. If the new contract be fair and lawful, and the new consideration be valid and adequate, it will be enforced. If, however, it be unfair or fraudulent, or the new consideration so inadequate as to import fraud, imposition or undue influence, it known to the party to whom the promise was made, and although he was the contriver and conductor of the illegal act.[57]

V. Contracts Indirectly and Remotely Illegal.

A contract may be valid, notwithstanding it is remotely connected with an independent illegal transaction, which, however, it is not designed to aid or promote.[58]

VI. Entire and Separable Contracts.

Whenever the unlawful part of the contract can be separated from the rest, it will be rejected and the remainder established.[59] will be rescinded and justice done to the parties. Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468; McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 15 L. Ed. 132; Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. 70, 17 L. Ed. 732; Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 21 L. Ed. 473; Railroad Co. v. Durant, 95 U. S. 576, 24 L. Ed. 391." Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 66, 33 L. Ed. 242.

57. "Where losses have been made in an illegal transaction, a person who lends money to the loser with which to pay the debt can recover the loan, notwithstanding his knowledge of the fact that the money was to be so used. Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468; Kimbro v. Bullitt, 22 How. 256, 269, 16 L. Ed. 313; Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 500, 21 L. Ed. 473." Armstrong v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 433, 469, 33 L. Ed. 747.

Thus, where A, during a war, contrived a plan for importing goods on his own account, from the enemy's country, and goods were sent to B by the same vessel; A, at the request of B, became surety for the payment of the duties on B's goods, and became responsible for the expenses on a prosecution, for the illegal importation of the goods, and was compelled to pay them; held, that A might maintain an action on the promise of B, to refund the money. Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468.

Tests.—"It is sometimes said that the test whether a demand connected with an illegal transaction is capable of being enforced at law, is, whether the plaintiff requires any aid from the illegal transaction to establish his case. * * * But it is too narrow in its terms and excludes many cases where the plaintiff might establish his case independently of the illegal transaction, and yet would find his demand tainted by that transaction. He might, in some instances, establish his case by showing a simple loan of money, or a simple sale of goods, yet the court would hold the contract of loan or sale to be invalid if at the time the money was loaned or the goods were sold he knew they were to be used for an illegal and criminal transaction, and the contract was made to further its execution." Hanauer v. Woodruff, 15 Wall. 439, 443, 21 L. Ed. 224.

58. Contracts indirectly and remotely connected.—Ocean Ins. Co. v. Polleys, 13 Pet. 157, 164, 10 L. Ed. 105. The case of Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. Ed. 468, presented a question of this sort, and was decided in favor of such a contract. See ante, "Contracts Growing Out of and Connected with Illegal Contracts," IV.

A policy of insurance on a vessel, sailing under a register which has been obtained without conforming to the requisitions of the laws of the United States relative to the registry and enrolling of vessels of the United States, is not void; and an action may be maintained on such a policy, to recover a loss sustained by the assured. The policy may not have been designed to aid, assist or advance any unlawful purpose; it is a lawful contract in itself, and only remotely connected with the use of the certificate of registry. There are cases in which a contract may be valid, notwithstanding it is remotely connected with an independent illegal transaction; which, however, it is not designed to aid or promote. Suppose a vessel had been actually forfeited, for some antecedent illegal act, are all the contracts of her future employment void, although there is no illegal object in view, and the forfeiture may never be enforced? Ocean Ins. Co. v. Polleys, 13 Pet. 157, 10 L. Ed. 105.

Assignment.—An assignment of a contract, collateral to, and disconnected from the illegal transaction out of which the original illegal contract arose, and for a valuable consideration, is valid and binding. McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 237, 15 L. Ed. 132.

Money received as new consideration.—Though an illegal contract will not be enforced by courts, yet it is the doctrine of the federal supreme court that where such a contract has been executed by the parties themselves, and the illegal object has been accomplished, the money or thing which was the price of it may be a legal consideration between the parties for a promise express or implied, and that the court will not unravel the transaction to discover its origin. Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 21 L. Ed. 473.

59. Entire and separable contracts.—McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 115, 43 L. Ed. 382. See the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 567.

"So in Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520, this court said, in reference

VII. Enforcement of Illegal Contracts.

A. General Rule.—Ordinarily the law leaves to parties the right to make such contracts as they please,[60] but when the parties make a contract that is illegal, the courts make an exception and refuse to enforce it.[61] Such refusal is expressed by the common-law maxims, ex turpi causa non oritur actio; ex dolo malo non oritur actio; ex parto illicto non oritur actio.[62] The parties are left as found; the courts applying the well-known doctrine, in pari delicto potior est to a similar contention in a suit on a contract made by the officials of the city of Dubuque (p. 222): 'We have not, therefore, considered the questions which they present. They relate to certain provisions of the contract which are claimed to be invalid. Conceding this to be so, they are clearly separable and severable from the other parts which are relied upon. The rule in such cases, where there is no imputation of malum in se, is that the bad parts do not affect the good. The valid may be enforced.'" McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 115, 43 L. Ed. 382.

In United States v. Bradley, 10 Pet. 343, 9 L. Ed. 448, suit was brought on a paymaster's bond, and it was claimed that as some of the stipulations were in excess of those required by the statute and illegally inserted, the whole bond was void. But the court overruled the contention, saying (p. 360): "That bonds and other deeds may, in many cases, be good in part, and void for the residue, where the residue is founded in illegality but not malum in se, is a doctrine well founded in the common law, and has been recognized from a very early period."

Pigot's case.—"Thus, in Pigot's Case, 11 Co. 27b, it was said, that it was unanimously agreed in 14 Hen. VIII 25-6, that if some of the covenants of an indenture, or of the conditions indorsed upon a bond are against law, and some are good and lawful, that in this case, the covenants or conditions which are against law, are void ab initio; and the others stand good. And, notwithstanding the decision in Lee v. Colshill, Cro. Elliz. 529, which, however, is distinguishable, being founded on a statute, the doctrine has been maintained, and is settled law at the present day, in all cases where the different covenants or conditions are severable, and independent of each other, and do not import malum in se." United States v. Bradley, 10 Pet. 343, 360, 9 L. Ed. 448, cited in McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 115, 43 L. Ed. 382.

60. General rule.—Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 233, 36 L. Ed. 414.

61. Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 233, 36 L. Ed. 414; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 655, 43 L. Ed. 1117; Bank v. Ownes, 2 Pet. 527, 538, 7 L. Ed. 508.

The law will not enforce an illegal contract. Forsyth v. Woods, 11 Wall. 484, 486, 20 L. Ed. 207.

Courts of justice will never yield the locus standi in judicio to the suitor, who is compelled to trace his title through his own criminal acts. The Arrogante Barcelones, 7 Wheat. 496, 519, 5 L. Ed. 507.

Where a party in privy has brought about a contract forbidden by statute, or by public policy, he cannot recover for his services. Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396, 406, 32 L. Ed. 979.

The rule of is of universal operation, that none shall, by the aid of a court of justice, obtain the fruits of an unlawful bargain. Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396, 412, 32 L. Ed. 979.

A party who says in his pleading that the money which he seeks to recover was paid out for the accomplishment of a purpose made an offense by the law, and who testifies and insists to the end of his suit that the contract on which he advanced his money was illegal, criminal, and void, cannot recover it back in a court whose duty it is to give effect to the law which the party admits he intended to violate. Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 685, 29 L. Ed. 764.

62. Common-law maxims.—Courts are instituted to carry into effect the laws of a country; and therefore they cannot become auxiliary to the consummation of violations of law. There can be no civil right, where there can be no legal remedy; and there can be no legal remedy, for that which is itself illegal. That this is true of contracts violating the laws of morality, is recognized in the familiar maxim, "ex turpi causa non oritur actio." Bank v. Ownes, 2 Pet. 527, 538, 7 L. Ed. 508.

"The common-law maxims are ex turpi causa, non oritur actio—ex dolo malo non oritur actio." Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 82, 13 L. Ed. 901.

"There are several old and very familiar maxims of the common law which formulate the result of that law in regard to illegal contracts. They are cited in all law books upon the subject and are known to all of us. They mean substantially the same thing and are founded upon the same principles and reasoning. They are: Ex dolo malo non oritur actio; Ex pacto illicto non oritur actio; Ex turpi causa non oritur actio. About the earliest illustration of this doctrine is almost traditional in the famous case of The Highwayman. It is stated that Lord Kenyon once said, by way of illustration, that he would not sit to take an account between two robbers on Hounslow Heath, and it was questioned whether the legend conditio defendentis.[63] This rule applies if the plaintiff cannot open his case without showing that he has broken the law.[64] Nor will the consent of parties change the application of the rule.[65] Therefore, there can be no recovery of property delivered under an illegal executed contract,[66] by parties in pari delicto,[67] in regard to the highwayman did not arise from that saying. It seems, however, that the case was a real one. He did file a bill in equity for an accounting against his partner, although it was no sooner filed and its real nature discovered than it was dismissed with costs, and the solicitors for the plaintiff were summarily dealt with by the court as for a contempt in bringing such a case before it. (1 Lindley on Partnership, 5th Ed. 94, note n; 9 Law Quarterly Review (London), pp. 105-197." McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 654, 43 L. Ed. 1117.

63. Parties left as found.—McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 655, 43 L. Ed. 1117; Randall v. Howard, 2 Black 585, 588, 17 L. Ed. 269; Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 349, 20 L. Ed. 453; Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. Ed. 347; Sample v. Barnes, 14 How. 70, 14 L. Ed. 330; Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 85, 13 L. Ed. 901; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 407, 36 L. Ed. 738; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co., 197 U. S. 244, 296, 49 L. Ed. 739; Whitfield v. United States, 92 U. S. 165, 169, 23 L. Ed. 705.

The law leaves the parties to such a contract as it found them; if either has sustained a loss by the bad faith of a particeps criminis, it is but a just infliction for premeditated and deeply practiced fraud; he must not expect that a judicial tribunal will degrade itself, by an exertion of its powers, to shift the loss from one to the other, or to equalize the benefits or burdens which may have resulted from the violation of every principle of morals and of law. Bartle v. Coleman, 4 Pet. 184, 7 L. Ed. 825.

It is against the policy of the law to enable either party, in controversies between themselves, to enforce an agreement in fraud of the law, or which was made to injure another. The maxim, in pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis, must prevail. Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 60, 33 L. Ed. 242.

64. Showing illegality in equity case.—"If a plaintiff cannot open his case without showing that he has broken the law, courts of justice will not assist him to recover, whatever the equities of his case may be." Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291, 302, 24 L. Ed. 731.

"If, from the plaintiff's own stating or otherwise, the cause of action appear to arise ex turpi causa, or the transgression of a positive law of this country, then the court says he has no right to be assisted." Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 149, 27 L. Ed. 682.

Directing verdict.—The court may direct the jury to find a verdict for the defendant where the opening statement of counsel for the plaintiff shows that the contract is illegal, because in violation of a positive law or against public policy. Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 264, 26 L. Ed. 539.

"Of course, in all such proceedings nothing would be taken, without full consideration, against the party making the statement or admission. He should be allowed to explain and qualify it, so far as the truth will permit; but if, with such explanation and qualification, it should clearly appear that there could be no recovery, the court should not hesitate to so declare and give such direction as will dispose of the action." Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 264, 26 L. Ed. 539.

Example.—A contract was made for rebuilding Fort Washington, by M., a public agent, and a deputy quartermaster general, with B., in the profits of which M. was to participate; false measures of the work were attempted to be imposed on the government, the success of which was prevented by the vigilance of the accounting officers of the treasury; a bill was filed to compel an alleged partner in the contract to account for and pay to one of the partners in the transaction, one-half of the loss sustained in the execution of the contract. Held, that to state such a case is to decide it; public morals, public justice, and the well-established principles of all judicial tribunals, alike forbid the interposition of courts of justice to lend their aid to purposes like this; to enforce a contract which began with the corruption of a public officer, and progressed in the practice of known willful deception in its execution, can never be approved or sanctioned by any court. Bartle v. Coleman, 4 Pet. 184, 7 L. Ed. 825.

65. Consent of parties.—Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291, 302, 24 L. Ed. 731; Cocks v. Izard, 7 Wall. 559, 542, 19 L. Ed. 275; United States v. Grossmayer, 9 Wall. 72, 19 L. Ed. 627.

66. No recovery when contract executed.—Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 421, 26 L. Ed. 187; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co., 197 U. S. 244, 296, 49 L. Ed. 739.

"Where money has been paid upon an illegal contract, it is a general rule that if the contract be executed and both parties are in pari delicto, neither of them can recover from the other the money so paid." Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 58, 26 L. Ed. 347.

67. Parties in pari delicto.—If the parties are in pari delicto, they are without legal remedy, and parties are left to themselves. Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 349, 356, 20 L. Ed. 453; Whitfield either at law or in equity.[68]

B. Object of Rule.—The object of the rule, rendering illegal contracts unenforceable, is not for the sake of the defendant; but is founded on general principles of policy.[69] Such a rule tends toward reducing the number of illegal transactions to a minimum.[70]

C. Exceptions to General Rule—1. WHERE THE CONTRACT IS NOT EXECUTED.—"Where the illegality consists in the contract itself, and that contract is not executed, * * * there is a locus pœnitentiæ, the delictum is incomplete, and the contract may be rescinded by either party."[71]

v. United States, 92 U. S. 165, 169, 23 L. Ed. 705; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 407, 36 L. Ed. 738; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co., 197 U. S. 244, 295, 49 L. Ed. 739; Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 85, 13 L. Ed. 901.

Where there was a judgment at law against a defendant in Mississippi, and he sought relief in equity, upon the ground that the consideration of the contract was illegal, a court of equity will not grant relief, because the complainant was in pari delicto with the other party. Moreover, such a defense would have been good at law, and the averments, that deception was practised to prevent the complainant from making the defense, are not sustained by the evidence in the case. And, further, after the judgment, the complainant gave a forthcoming bond, thus recognizing the validity of the judgment. Sample v. Barnes, 14 How. 70, 14 L. Ed. 330.

68. Equity.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. Ed. 738.

The following principles of equity jurisprudence may be affirmed to be without exception; namely, that whosoever would seek admission into a court of equity must come with clean hands; that such a court will never interfere in opposition to conscience or good faith; that it will never be called into activity to remedy the consequences of laches or neglect, or the want of reasonable diligence. Therefore, where a complainant prays to be relieved from the fulfillment of a contract, which was intentionally made in fraud of the law, the answer is, that however unworthy may have been the conduct of his opponent, the parties are in pari delicto. The complainant cannot be admitted to plead his own demerits. Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192, 12 L. Ed. 111.

69. Coppell v. Hall, 7 Wall. 542, 548, 19 L. Ed. 244; Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 348, 33 L. Ed. 172.

The rule is not invoked for the sale of the plaintiff, but because the courts will not lend their aid to such a plaintiff. Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 149, 27 L. Ed. 682.

"Lord Mansfield said, with a very proper sensibility of the injustice of such a plea and of the policy which permits it to be insisted upon· 'The objection that a contract is immoral or illegal as between plaintiff and defendant, sounds at all times very ill in the mouth of a defendant. It is not for his sake, however, that the objection is ever allowed, but it is founded on general principles of policy, which the defendant has the advantage of, contrary to the real justice, as between him and the plaintiff.'" Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 85, 13 L. Ed. 901; Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 685, 29 L. Ed. 764.

70. "To refuse to grant either party to an illegal contract judicial aid for the enforcement of his alleged rights under it tends strongly towards reducing the number of such transactions to a minimum. The more plainly parties understand that when they enter into contracts of this nature they place themselves outside the protection of the law, so far as that protection consists in aiding them to enforce such contracts, the less inclined will they be to enter into them. In that way the public secures the benefit of a rigid adherence to the law." McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 669, 43 L. Ed. 1117.

71. Where the contract is not executed.—Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 349, 355, 20 L. Ed. 453.

"If money is paid or goods delivered for an illegal purpose, the person who had so paid the money or delivered the goods may recover them back before the illegal purpose is carried out; but if he waits till the illegal purpose is carried out, or if he seeks to enforce the illegal transaction, in neither can he maintain an action; the law will not allow that to be done." Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 59, 26 L. Ed. 347.

"If the contract continues executory and the party paying the money be desirous of rescinding it, he may do so and recover back by action of indebitatus assumpsit for money had and received." Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 58, 26 L. Ed. 347.

"Money paid on an illegal contract, which remains executory, can be recovered back in an action founded on a disaffirmance, and on the ground that it is void." Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 59, 26 L. Ed. 347.

"All contracts which provide that anything shall be done which is distinctly prohibited by law, or morality, or public

2. Parties Not in Pari Delicto.—If two contracting parties are in delicto, one less so than the other, the former may in many cases maintain an action for his benefit against the latter.[72]

3. Where the Law Is for the Plaintiff's Protection.—Where the law that creates the illegality in the transaction was designed for the coercion of one party and the protection of the other, there is no parity of delictum at all between the parties, and the party so protected by the law, may, at any time, resort to the law for his remedy, though the illegal transaction be completed.[73]

4. Where Plaintiff Does Not Rely on Contract to Recover.—If the plaintiff can recover from the defendant moneys received by him without resorting to the illegal contract, the court will permit a recovery.[74] But he cannot refer to one portion only of the contract; the whole contract must come in, although the portion upon which he founds his cause of action may be legal.[75]

VIII. Assertion of Title to Funds Arising from Illegal Contracts.

Where the illegal transaction is completed and closed, an action may be brought for the purpose of asserting title to the funds that have been realized.[76] policy, are void, so he who advances money in consideration of a promise or undertaking to do such a thing, may at any time before it is done rescind the contract and prevent the thing from being done and recover back his money." Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 58, 26 L. Ed. 347, citing Parsons on Contracts, vol. 2, p. 746.

"While an unlawful contract, the parties to which are in pari delicto, remains executory, its invalidity is a defense in a court of law; and a court of equity will order its cancellation only as an equitable mode of making that defense effectual, and when necessary for that purpose. Adams on Eq. 175." St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 407, 36 L. Ed. 738.

72. Parties not in pari delicto.—Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 420, 26 L. Ed. 187; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 407, 36 L. Ed. 738.

"Where the parties are not in pari delicto, actions are sustained to recover back the money or other consideration received for such obligations, though the obligations themselves, being against law, cannot be sued on." Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 349, 356, 20 L. Ed. 453.

73. When the law is for the plaintiff's protection.—Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 349, 355, 20 L. Ed. 453; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 407, 36 L. Ed. 738.

74. Where plaintiff does not rely on contract to recover.—Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 269, 6 L. Ed. 468; McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 235, 14 L. Ed. 132; Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. 70, 17 L. Ed. 732; Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 21 L. Ed. 473; Armstrong v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 433, 466, 33 L. Ed. 747.

"In no way and through no channels, directly or indirectly, will the courts allow an action to be maintained for the recovery of property delivered under an illegal contract where, in order to maintain such recovery, it is necessary to have recourse to that contract. The right of recovery must rest upon a disaffirmance of the contract, and it is permitted only because of the desire of courts to do justice as far as possible to the party who has made payment or delivered property under a void agreement, and which in justice he ought to recover. But courts will not in such endeavor permit any recovery which will weaken the rule founded upon the principles of public policy." Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transportation Co., 171 U. S. 138, 151, 43 L. Ed. 108.

"And this distinction is taken in the books that where the action is in affirmance of an illegal contract, the object of which is to enforce the performance of an engagement prohibited by law, clearly such an action can in no case be maintained, but where the action proceeds in disaffirmance of such a contract, and instead of endeavoring to enforce it presumes it to be void and seeks to prevent the defendant from retaining the benefit which he derived from an unlawful act, then it is consonant to the spirit and policy of the law that the plaintiff should recover." Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 58, 26 L. Ed. 347, citing 2 Comyn on Contracts, 361.

75. Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 348, 33 L. Ed. 172; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 656, 43 L. Ed. 1117.

"Every part of the consideration goes equally to the whole promise and therefore, if any part of it is contrary to public policy, the whole promise fails." Hazelton v. Sheckells, 202 U. S. 71, 78, 50 L. Ed. 939.

Where a partnership agreement is part of an entire agreement, which contains utterly illegal provisions, an action cannot be maintained on the partnership agreement for an accounting. McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 655, 43 L. Ed. 1117.

76. Assertion of title to funds arising from illegal contract.—There is a distinction between enforcing an illegal or

IX. Pleading.

For the illegality of a contract to be noticed, it is not necessary that it be affirmatively pleaded.[77]

X. Evidence.

"Whatever may be stated in a contract for an illegal purpose, a defendant, against whom it is sought to be enforced, may, to prevent it, show both the turpitude of himself and the plaintiff."[78]

XI. Waiver.

As the consent of the parties will not change the rule as to the enforcibility of an illegal contract,[79] so the illegality cannot be waived.[80] But "if the party who might set up the illegality chooses to waive it, and pay the money, he cannot afterwards reclaim it. And, if even the money be paid to a third person for the other party, such third person cannot set up the illegality of the contract on which the payment has been made, and withhold it for himself."[81] prohibited contract, and the assertion of a title to funds that had been realized out of such transactions. Burck v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 634, 668, 38 L. Ed. 578; McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 239, 15 L. Ed. 132; Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. 70, 87, 17 L. Ed. 732; Railroad Co. v. Durant, 95 U. S. 576, 24 L. Ed. 391.

After a partnership contract confessedly against public policy has been carried out, and money contributed by one of the partners has passed into other forms —the results of the contemplated operation completed—a partner, in whose hands the profits are, cannot refuse to account for and divide them on the ground of the illegal character of the original contract. Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. 70, 17 L. Ed. 732.

"Even where money has been received, either by an agent or a joint owner, by force of a contract which was illegal, the agent or joint owner cannot protect himself from accounting for what was so received, by setting up the illegality of the transaction in which it was paid to him." Kinsman v. Parkhurst, 18 How. 289, 293, 15 L. Ed. 385.

77. Pleading.—Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 266, 26 L. Ed. 539.

78. Evidence.—Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 85, 13 L. Ed. 901.

"Everything which disaffirms the contract, everything which shows it to be void, may be given in evidence on the general issue, in an action of assumpsit." Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 426, 7 L. Ed. 903.

Where a contract was made to obtain a certain law from the legislature of Virginia, and stated to be made on the basis of a prior communication, this communication is competent evidence in a suit upon the contract. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. 314, 14 L. Ed. 953.

79. What constitutes waiver.—Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291, 302, 24 L. Ed. 731.

80. Waiver.—"The instruction given to the jury, that if the contract was illegal the illegality had been waived by the reconventional demand of the defendants, was founded upon a misconception of the law. In such cases there can be no waiver. The defense is allowed, not for the sake of the defendant, but of the law itself. The principle is indispensable to the purity of its administration. It will not enforce what it has forbidden and denounced. The maxim, ex dolo malo non oritur actio, is limited by no such qualification. The proposition to the contrary strikes us as hardly worthy of serious refutation. Whenever the illegality appears, whether the evidence comes from one side or the other, the disclosure is fatal to the case. No consent of the defendant can neutralize its effect. A stipulation in the most solemn form to waive the objection, would be tainted with the vice of the original contract, and void for the same reasons. Wherever the contamination reaches, it destroys. The principle to be extracted from all the cases is, that the law will lend its support to a claim founded upon its violation." Cocks v. Izard, 7 Wall. 559, 19 L. Ed. 275.

Where suit is brought upon a contract which is void as against public policy and the laws, a party who pleads such invalidity of it does not render the plea ineffective by a further defense in "reconvention;" a defense of this sort, to wit, that, if the contract be valid, he himself takes the position of a plaintiff, and makes a claim for damages for its nonperformance. Coppell v. Hall, 7 Wall. 542, 19 L. Ed. 244.

81. Effect of waiver.—McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. 232, 235, 15 L. Ed. 132.

"Where A claims money from B, although due upon an illegal contract, and B acknowledges the obligation and waives the defense of illegality and pays the money to a third party upon his promise to pay it to A, the third party cannot successfully defend an action brought by A to recover the money by alleging that the original contract between A and B was illegal. This is the principle decided, and we think correctly decided, in the

XII. Ratification.

A transaction originally unlawful cannot be made lawful by any ratification.[82]

XIII. Conflict of Laws.

See the title CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1040.

ILLEGITIMATES.—See the title BASTARDY, vol. 3, p. 204.

ILLICIT COHABITATION.—See the title ADULTERY, FORNICATION AND LEWDNESS, vol. 1, p. 195.

ILLINOIS.—See the titles BOUNDARIES, vol. 3, p. 494; CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 714; COMMON LAW, vol. 3, p. 962.

ILLNESS.—"Illness is a word which may include, properly, an attack of a less grave and serious character than disease; an illness may be slight or severe, in either case it is an illness."[1]

ILLUSTRATION.—As to the use of the term illustrations in the copyright laws, see the title COPYRIGHT, vol. 4, p. 606.

IMBECILITY.—See the title INSANITY.

IMMATERIAL ISSUE.—"An immaterial issue is where a material allegation in the pleadings is not answered, but an issue is taken on some point which will not determine the merits of the case, and the court is often at a loss for which of the parties to give judgment."[2]

IMITATION.—See the titles PATENTS; TRADEMARKS, TRADENAMES AND UNFAIR COMPETITION.

IMMIGRATION.—See the titles INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE; TAXATION. As to sufficiency of pleading in an action of assumpsit to recover back money illegally exacted from an immigrant, see the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2 pp. 654, 655. As to admission or exclusion of immigrants, see the titles ALIENS vol. 1, p. 245; CHINESE EXCLUSION ACTS, vol. 3, p. 769; CONTRACT LABOR LAW vol. 4, p. 549.

IMMEDIATE.—See note 3.

cases cited. It was certainly no business of the third party to inquire into the reasons which impelled the person to give him the money to pay to the plaintiff. That was a matter between those parties, and if the party from whom the money was due admitted his indebtedness and chose to pay it, the defendant, who received it upon his promise to pay the plaintiff, would have no possible defense to an action by the plaintiff to compel such payment. Such an action is in one sense founded upon an illegal contract. That matter was closed when the party owing the money under it paid it to a third person to be paid to the plaintiff. The action by the plaintiff in such case is founded upon a new contract upon a totally different consideration and of a perfectly legitimate character." McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 660, 43 L. Ed. 1117.

82. Ratification.—United States v. Grossmayer, 9 Wall. 73, 19 L. Ed. 627.

1. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Union Trust Co., 112 U. S. 250, 259, 28 L. Ed. 708. See, also, the title INSURANCE.

2. Garland v. Davis, 4 How. 131, 146, 11 L. Ed. 907.

3. Immediate delivery.—A bill of sale of goods, twenty-three miles distant, was made at nine o'clock in the evening and the vendee took possession of them at four o'clock the next morning. This was held to constitute an immediate delivery of possession under a statute rendering conclusively fraudulent, sales of personal property unaccompanied by immediate delivery. Kleinschmidt v. McAndrews, 117 U. S. 282, 287, 29 L. Ed. 905. See, also, the title FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472.

Immediate descendants.—See McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 383, 28 L. Ed. 1015. See, also, the titles PERPETUITIES; WILLS.

Immediate descent.—See the title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 336.

Immediate issue.—See McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 383, 28 L. Ed. 1015. See, also, the titles PERPETUITIES; WILLS.

Immediately.—A bond of indemnity given by a company to hold a bank harmless against a fraud of a specified officer contained a requirement "that the employer shall immediately give the company notice in writing of the discovery of any default or loss." It was held that this requirement ought not to receive a construction that it was intended by the parties that notice of a default should be IMMUNITY.—As to the privileges and immunities secured by article 4, § 2, of the federal constitution, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 467, 471. As to the privileges and immunities protected by the 14th amendment of the federal constitution, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 471, 483. And see, generally, the titles CITIZENSHIP, vol. 3, p. 805; CIVIL RIGHTS, vol. 3, p. 816. See note 1.

IMPAIR.—"The lexical definition of 'impair' is 'to make worse; to diminish in quantity, value, excellence, or strength; to lessen in power; to weaken, to enfeeble; to deteriorate.'"[2] given instantly on the discovery of a default, but that what was meant was that notice should be given within a reasonable time, having in view the circumstances of the case. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Courtney, 186 U. S. 342, 346, 46 L. Ed. 1193. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 103.

1. Immunity.—The state of Tennessee in its act of incorporation of the B. Insurance Company conferred an exemption from taxation beyond a defined limit. Later it granted to the D. Insurance Company "all the rights, privileges and immunities" that were granted to the B. company. And a still later act granted to the W. company "all the rights and privileges" of the B. company. It was held that the grant to the W. company did not confer upon it the exemption from taxation granted to the other company. And the court said: "The word immunities is omitted. Is there any meaning to be attached to that omission? And, if so, what? We think some meaning is to be attached to it. The word immunity expresses more clearly and definitely an intention to include therein an exemption from taxation than does either of the other words. Exemption from taxation is more accurately described as an immunity than as a privilege, although it is not to be denied that the latter word may sometimes and under some circumstances include such exemption." Phœnix Fire, etc., Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174, 177, 40 L. Ed. 660. See the title TAXATION.

2. Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 600, 24 L. Ed. 793. See the title IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

BY FRANK MOORE.

I. General Consideration, 764.

A. Academic Discussion of the Constitutional Provision, 764.
B. Reasons for Its Enactment, 765.
C. Definitions and Distinctions, 765.
1. Definitions, 765.
a. "Impair," 765.
b. Contract, 765.
2. Obligation and Contract Distinguished, 765.
3. What Is the "Obligation of a Contract," 765.
a. "Obligation" Defined, 765.
b. Laws Affecting Validity, Construction, Discharge and Enforcement, 766.
c. Postponement of Payment, 767.
d. Moral Obligations, 767.
e. Contingencies and Expectancies, 767.
D. Enforcement of Laws Impairing Contracts, 768.
E. Power of Court to Nullify State Law, 768.
F. Degree of Impairment Immaterial, 768.
G. The Rule That There Must Be a Valid Contract, 769.
H. Effect of Such Invalid Laws, 769.

II. What Laws Impair the Obligation of Contracts, 770.

A. In General, 770.
B. Laws Passed Prior to the Constitution, 770.
C. Laws Passed by the Confederate States, 770.
D. Laws of Congress, 770.
1. In General, 770.
2. Limitations of General Rule, 771.
3. Validity of Legal Tender Acts, 771.
4. Act of Congress to Retire Porto Rican Money, 772.
E. State Constitutions and Amendments Thereto, 772.
1. State Constitutions, 772.
2. Constitutional Amendments, 773.
F. Judicial Decisions, 773.
1. In General, 773.
2. New York Elevated Railroad Cases, 776.
3. Decisions upon the Validity of Municipal Securities, 776.
4. Decisions upon Property Rights, 777.
5. Estoppel, 778.
G. By-Laws and Ordinances, 778.
H. Laws Passed by States before Their Admission, 779.
I. Laws Passed by Territorial Legislatures, 779.
J. Pre-Existing Statutes Unobjectionable, 779.
K. Repealing Laws, 781.
L. Laws of Dominion of Canada, 782.

III. Contracts within Purview of Prohibition, 782.

A. In General, 782.
B. Executory and Executed Contracts, 783.
C. Rights and Obligations Arising Ex Delicto, 783.
D. Contracts of States, 784.

1. In General, 784.
2. Violation of Contracts by the State, 784.
3. The Contract Contained in State Securities, 785.
   a. Funding State Debts, 785.
      (1) In General, 785.
      (2) Virginia Coupon Cases, 786.
         aa. In General, 786.
         bb. Payment of School Tax, 787.
         cc. Occupation and Business Taxes, 787.
         dd. License Fees as Condition to Sale of Coupons, 787.
         ee. Manner of Establishing Genuineness of Coupons, 787.
            aaa. Necessity for Production of Bond, 787.
            bbb. Forbidding Introduction of Expert Testimony, 788.
         ff. Denial of Right of Action against Taxing Officer, 788.
         gg. When Right May Be Asserted, 788.
      (3) Right to Annex Conditions and Restrictions, 789.
   b. Provisions Regarding Payment of Interest, 789.
      (1) Conflicting Rights of Bond Holders, 789.
      (2) Reduction of Interest Rate by Subsequent Statute, 789.
   c. Writing State Bonds Off Its Books, 790.
   d. Redemption and Repudiation of Its Void Securities, 790.
4. Auditing Claims against the State, 791.
5. Release by State, 791.
6. Contracts of Loan, 791.
7. Land Grants, 791.
   a. In General, 791.
   b. Statutes Prescribing the Mode or Form of Settling Titles, 792.
   c. Statutes Annulling Grants, 792.
   d. Statutes Requiring Proof of Genuineness of Grants, 792.
   e. Conflicting Grants, 793.
   f. Particular Grants Considered, 793.
      (1) Grants to Aid Railroad Construction, 793.
      (2) Grants of Rights in Navigable Waters, 793.
      (3) Swamp and Overflowed Land Acts, 794.
   g. Construction of Grants, 795.
   h. Escheat Statutes, 795.
8. Grant of State Funds in Form of Endowments, 795.
9. Right of State to Convey Its Rights, 796.
10. Repeal of Statute Making Certain Securities Receivable for Debts, 796.
   a. In General, 796.
   b. Where There Is an Agreement as to Medium of Payment, 797.
11. Grants of Exclusive Privileges, 797.
   a. In General, 797.
   b. Bridges, 799.
      (1) In General, 799.
      (2) Tolls and Charges, 800.
   c. Ferries, 800.
   d. Grants to Gas and Electric Light Companies, 801.
      (1) In General, 801.
      (2) When Grant Exclusive, 801.
   e. Turnpike Companies, 802.
   f. Grants of Privileges to Water Companies, 803.
      (1) In General, 803.

(2) Construction of Particular Contracts, 803.
(3) Regulation of Rates, 804.
12. Power of State to Impair Contracts through Its Taxing Power, 804.
a. In General, 804.
b. Repeal of Statutes Imposing Taxes, 805.
c. Inheritance Taxes, 805.
d. Occupation and Business Taxes, 805.
13. Bounties and Gratuities, 805.
14. Effect of Constitutional Provision Granting States Immunity fr Suit, 806.
a. In General, 806.
b. Virginia Coupon Cases, 808.
E. Assessments, 808.
F. Compacts, 808.
G. Confederate Contracts and Slave Contracts, 808.
1. Confederate Contracts, 808.
2. Slave Contracts, 810.
H. Contracts of Enlistment, 810.
I. Grants, 810.
J. Contracts of Municipalities, 810.
1. In General, 810.
2. How Obligation Impaired, 811.
a. By Mere Refusal to Perform, 811.
b. By Mere Denial of Liability, 811.
c. By Failure to Perform Discretionary Duties, 811.
d. By Change in Instrumentalities of Government, 812.
3. Right to Contract Away Its Legislative Powers, 812.
4. Ultra Vires Contracts, 812.
5. Particular Contracts Considered, 813.
a. Municipal Aid Contracts, 813.
(1) In General, 813.
(2) Conditions and Restrictions, 814.
b. Contracts with Street Railroads, 815.
(1) Extension of Franchises, 815.
(2) Paving between the Tracks, 815.
(3) Grading and Leveling Streets, 815.
(4) Regulation of Rates, 816.
(5) Right of Consolidated Company, 817.
c. Grants of Exclusive Privileges, 817.
(1) To Waterworks Companies, 817.
aa. In General, 817.
bb. When Privileges Exclusive, 817.
cc. Regulation of Water Rates, 818.
(2) To Gas and Electric Light Companies, 819.
6. Ordinances Granting Privileges to Public Service Companies, 820.
7. Regulation of Streets and Highways, 820.
K. Implied and Constructive Contracts, 820.
L. Incorporeal Hereditaments, 821.
M. Judgments, 821.
1. In General, 821.
2. Judgments Based upon Rights and Obligations Arising Ex Delicto, 821.
3. Interest upon Judgments, 823.
N. Legislative Contracts, 823.
1. In General, 823.
2. Construction of Legislative Contracts, 824.
O. Marriage Contracts, 824.

P. Ordinances and Constitutions, 824.
1. Ordinances, 824.
2. State Constitutions, 825.
Q. Statutes Prescribing Penalties and Forfeitures, 825.
R. Contracts and Property Rights Acquired from Great Britain, 826.
S. Directions to Officers Contained in Statutes, 826.
T. Guaranty, 826.
U. Licenses, 827.

IV. Laws Concerning Civil Institutions or Governmental Subjects, 827.
A. In General, 827.
B. Police Power, 827.
C. Power of State over Counties and Municipalities, 828.
1. In General, 828.
2. Location or Establishment of County Seats, 828.
D. Exercise of Eminent Domain, 828.
1. In General, 828.
2. Corporate Charters, 829.
3. Property of Water Supply Company, 830.
4. Condemnation of Stock, 830.
E. Public Offices and Officers, 830.
1. General Power of State Legislatures, 830.
2. Limitations of General Rule, 831.
3. Limiting, Enlarging or Repealing Authority of Public Officers, 831.
4. Discharge of Public Officers, 831.
a. In General, 831.
b. Army Officers, 831.
5. Government Offices, 831.
6. Salaries and Emoluments of Public Officers, 832.
F. Control over Navigable Waters, 833.

V. Contracts of Private Individuals, 833.
A. Form and Sufficiency of Contracts, 833.
B. How Obligation Impaired, 834.
1. Laws Changing the Construction of Pre-Existing Statutes, 834.
2. Law Affecting Validity, Construction, Discharge and Enforcement, 835.
a. In General, 835.
b. Laws Construing Terms in Contracts, 835.
c. Statute of Frauds, 835.
d. Laws Annexing Conditions to Its Enforcement, 835.
(1) In General, 835.
(2) Confirmation of Title to Land, 836.
e. Laws Affecting Discharge of Contracts, 836.
3. Laws Merely Affecting Value of Contract or Facility of Performance, 836.
4. Laws Denying Negotiability to Choses in Action, 836.
5. Laws Regulating Right of Disposition of Property, 837.
C. Redemption from Tax Sales, 837.
D. Contracts of Stockholders, 837.
E. Interest, 838.
1. In General, 838.
2. Interest on Judgments, 838.
3. Usurious Interest, 838.
4. Interest upon Redemption of Property Sold at Foreclosure of Mortgages, 839.
5. Right to Compound Interest, 839.
F. Appointment and Removal of Trustees, 839.

VI. Legislative Control over Public and Private Corporations, 840.
A. Legislative Control over Private Corporations, 840.
1. Control over Foreign Corporations, 840.
2. Insurance Companies, 840.
3. Reorganization of Corporations, 840.
4. Appropriation of Corporate Assets for Payment of Certain Debts, 841.
5. Exemption from Governmental Control, 841.
a. In General, 841.
b. Rule of Construction, 843.
6. Right to Compel Railroads to Provide Station Facilities, 843.
B. Legislative Control over Municipal Corporations, 843.
1. In General, 843.
2. Limitations of General Rule, 845.
3. What Are Governmental Agencies, 845.
4. Power with Respect to Division of Towns and Alteration of Boundaries, 845.
a. As Affecting Rights of Creditors, 845.
b. Alteration of School Districts, 846.
5. Municipal Debts, 846.
a. In General, 846.
b. Municipal Aid Bonds, 847.
c. Where Charter Is Repealed and Old Municipality Is Annexed, 847.
d. Limiting Taxing Power of Municipalities, 848.
(1) In General, 847.
(2) Withdrawal of Right to Tax to Discharge Municipal Securities, 850.
(3) Withdrawal of Right to Tax to Liquidate the Public Debt, 850.
(4) Mandamus, 851.
e. Change in Subjects of Taxation, 851.
f. Rule Where Municipal Corporation Is Abolished or Destroyed by Statute, 851.
(1) In General, 851.
(2) Liability of Reorganized Corporation for Debts of Old, 851.
6. Municipal Property, 851.
a. In General, 851.
b. Restitution of Taxes to Taxpayers, 854.
7. Change of Governmental Agencies, 854.

VII. Remedies, 854.
A. In General, 854.
B. Limitations of General Rule, 856.
C. Right to Take Away Remedy by Judicial Decisions, 858.
D. Additional Remedies, 858.
E. Defenses, 859.
1. Usury, 859.
2. Set-Offs, 859.
3. Defenses to Actions on Insurance Policies, 860.
F. Various Particular Remedies Considered, 860.
1. Remedies for Enforcement of Judgments, 860.
2. Remedies of Holders of Municipal and State Securities, 860.
a. In General, 860.
b. Levy and Collection of Taxes, 861.
c. Mandamus, 862.

3. Remedies for Mesne Profits and Improvements, 863.
4. Remedy for Resisting Illegal Taxes, 863.
5. Mandamus, 863.
6. Statutes Barring Actions Ex Delicto, 864.
7. Remedies for Review in Appellate Courts, 864.
G. Changing Rules of Evidence, 864.
H. Exemptions from Execution, 865.
1. In General, 865.
2. Continuing Exemptions to Converted Property, 866.
I. Insolvency Laws, 867.
1. Statutes Regulating Priority between Creditors, 867.
2. Statutes Dealing with Assignments for Creditors, 867.
3. Statutes Abolishing Imprisonment for Debt, 867.
4. Arrangements between Corporate Bond Holders, 868.
J. Right to Sue, 869.
1. In General, 869.
2. Right to Sue the State, 869.
3. Annexing Conditions to Right to Sue, 870.
K. Statutory Liabilities, 870.
1. In General, 870.
2. Liability of Stockholders, 870.
a. In General, 870.
b. Stockholders of Foreign Corporations, 872.
L. Right to Grant New Trials and Make New Tribunals, 872.
M. Stay Laws, 872.
N. Forfeiture of Land for Nonpayment of Purchase Money, 872.
O. Laws Relating to the Process, 873.
1. Kinds of Process, 873.
2. Manner of Serving Process, 873.
P. Statutes Changing the Rules as to Parties to Actions, 873.
Q. Statutes Interfering with Liens and Other Securities, 874.
1. Divesting or Postponing Existing Liens, 874.
2. Change of Security, 874.
3. Mortgages, 874.
a. In General, 874.
b. Redemption, 874.
(1) Right of Redemption, 874.
(2) Extension of Time for Redemption, 875.
c. Purchasers at Foreclosure Sales, 875.
(1) In General, 875.
(2) Conditions Annexed to and Restrictions upon Sale, 876.
4. Statutes Affecting Means of Enforcing Liens, 876.
R. Curative Acts, 877.
1. In General, 877.
2. Acts Curing Defective Conveyances, 877.
3. Statutes Taking Away the Right to Avoid a Contract, 878.
S. Recording Acts, 879.
1. In General, 879.
2. Change in Method of Recording, 880.
T. Statutes of Limitation, 880.
1. Statutes Operating Prospectively, 880.
2. Retrospective Statutes of Limitation, 880.
a. In General, 880.
b. Statutes Limiting Time for Bringing Suits and Actions, 880.
(1) Power of States to Enact, 880.
aa. In General, 880.
bb. Construction as to Operation of Statute, 883.

cc. Partial and Total Invalidity, 884.
dd. Determination as to Reasonableness of Time, 884.
(2) Power of Congress to Enact, 884.
c. Statutes Limiting the Time for Review, 884.

VIII. Who May Complain of Impairment, 885.

A. Persons Interested, 885.
B. Complainant Must Show Possibility of Injury, 885.
C. Repeal of Corporate Charters, 886.
D. Purchasers at Mortgage Foreclosures, 886.
E. Estoppel, 886.

IX. How Relief Obtained in Case of Impairment, 887.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, pp. 621, 677; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, ante, p. 305; POLICE POWER; STREET RAILWAYS.

As to jurisdiction of courts under the contract clause, see the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 703; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 910. As to right to enact retroactive laws, see the title STATUTES. As to whether regulation of rates to be charged by a corporation comes within the constitution prohibition, see the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 621; CARRIERS, vol. 3, p. 622. As to repeal or modification of law imposing liability on stockholders, see the title STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

As to impairment of the contract rights of bank-bill holders, or creditors, see the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 1. As to whether dissolution of a corporation works an impairment, see the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 795. As to vested rights, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 412.

I. General Consideration.

A. Academic Discussion of the Constitutional Provision.—In General.—Mr. Madison denounced laws impairing the obligation of contracts as among those not only violating the constitution, but "contrary to the first principles of the social compact and to every principle of sound legislation."[1] Therefore, the constitution of the United States contains a provision which declares (Art. 1, § 10) that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Public credit was thereby reanimated. The owners of property and holders of money freely parted with both, well knowing that no future law could impair the obligation of the contract.[2] No provision of the constitution of the United States has received more frequent consideration by the federal supreme court than this one. This very frequency would appear to have rendered it difficult to apply the result of the court's deliberations to new cases differing somewhat in their facts from those previously considered.[3] The case of Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162, was the first one in the federal supreme court in which this important provision came under consideration.

Importance of the Provision.—There is no more important provision in the federal constitution than this one, and it is one of the highest duties of this court to take care that the prohibition shall neither be evaded nor frittered away. Complete effect must be given to it in all its spirit. The inviolability of contracts, and the duty of performing them, as made, are foundations of all well-ordered society, and to prevent the removal or disturbance of these foundations was one

1. Mr. Madison's view.—Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 319, 12 L. Ed. 447; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 606, 24 L. Ed. 793. See, also, Federalist, Nos. 7 and 44.

2. Effect of provision was beneficial on credit.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 607, 24 L. Ed. 793, citing Ramsey's History of South Carolina 433, and discussing at length the causes that led to this provision.

3. The provision has been often con- of the great objects for which the constitution was framed.[4]

B. Reasons for Its Enactment.—The reason for this provision in the constitution was, that the transcendent power of parliament devolved on the several states by the revolution, so that there was no power by which the state could be prevented from revoking all public grants of property or franchise as parliament could do.[5] In the Dartmouth College Case, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall said: "Anterior to the formation of the constitution, a course of legislation had prevailed in many, if not in all, of the states, which weakened the confidence of man in man, and embarrassed all transactions between individuals, by dispensing with a faithful performance of engagements. To correct this mischief by restraining the power which produced it, the state legislatures were forbidden 'to pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts.'"[6]

C. Definitions and Distinctions—1. DEFINITIONS—a. "Impair."—The lexical definition of "impair" is "to make worse; to diminish in quantity, value, excellence, or strength; to lessen in power; to weaken; to enfeeble; to deteriorate."[7]

b. Contract.—A contract within the contemplation of the federal constitutional provision is a transaction between two or more persons, in which each party comes under an obligation to the other, and each reciprocally acquires a right to whatever is promised by the other.[8] It is further defined as a compact between two or more parties, and is either executory or executed.[9]

2. OBLIGATION AND CONTRACT DISTINGUISHED.—"The terms contract, and obligation, although sometimes used loosely as convertible terms, do not properly import the same idea. The constitution plainly presupposes that a contract and its obligation are different things. Were they the same thing, and the terms, contract and obligation, convertible, the constitution, instead of being read as it now is, 'that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts,' might, with the same meaning, be read, 'that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of obligations,' or, 'the contract of contracts;' and to give to the constitution the same meaning which either of these readings would import, would be ascribing to its framers a useless and palpably absurd tautology. The illustrious framers of the constitution could not be ignorant that there were, or might be, many contracts, without obligations, and many obligations, without contracts."[10]

3. WHAT IS THE "OBLIGATION OF A CONTRACT"—a. "Obligation" Defined.—"Obligation" is defined to be "the act of obliging or binding; that which oblistrued.—Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 121, 41 L. Ed. 93.

4. Importance of provision.—Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 448, 24 L. Ed. 760.

5. Reasons for enactment of provision.—Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 583e, 9 L. Ed. 773, opinion of Baldwin, J.

6. Opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall.—Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 557, 25 L. Ed. 710.

The constitutional provisions that "no state shall emit bills of credit or make anything but gold and silver coin a legal tender in payment of debts," or "pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts" grew out of, and were intended to correct, previous abuses. See discussion in Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 606, 24 L. Ed. 793.

7. Impair defined.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 600, 24 L. Ed. 793, citing Webster's Dict. See IMPAIR, ante, p. 757.

8. Definition of contract.—Opinion of Washington, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 656, 4 L. Ed. 629. See the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 555.

A contract within the constitutional provision prohibiting the impairment of the obligation of contracts, is defined to be an agreement in which a party undertakes to do, or not to do, a particular thing. Opinion of Trimble, J., citing Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 127, 197, 4 L. Ed. 529, in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 316, 317, 6 L. Ed. 606.

9. Contract is an executory or executed compact.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 136, 3 L. Ed. 162.

10. Obligation and contract distinguished.—Opinion of Trimble, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 316, 6 L. Ed. 606.

gates; the binding power of a vow, promise, oath, or contract."[11] The word is derived from the Latin word obligatio, tying up; and that from the verb obligo, to bind or tie up; to engage by the ties of a promise or oath, or form of law; and obligo is compounded of the verb ligo, to tie or bind fast, and the preposition ob, which is prefixed to increase its meaning.[12] The best definition of this phrase is as follows: "The obligation of a contract," said the supreme court, in McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, "consists in its binding force on the party who makes it. This depends on the laws in existence when it is made; these are necessarily referred to in all contracts, and forming a part of them as the measure of the obligation to perform them by the one party and the right acquired by the other."[13]

b. Laws Affecting Validity, Construction, Discharge and Enforcement.—And laws affecting the obligation of contracts embrace alike those which affect its validity, construction, discharge and enforcement.[14] Nothing could be more material to the obligation than the means of enforcement.[15]

11. Definition of obligation.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 600, 24 L. Ed. 793, citing Webster's Dict. See OBLIGATION.

12. Derivation of word "obligation."—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 600, 24 L. Ed. 793.

13. Approved definition of "obligation of contracts."—Approved in Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 304, 29 L. Ed. 185; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 153 U. S. 628, 38 L. Ed. 846; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93.

All laws in existence when the contract is made are necessarily referred to in it and form a part of the measure of the obligation of the one party, and of the right acquired by the other. Cooley, Constitutional Limitations, 285. Rees. v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 121, 22 L. Ed. 72.

Laws binding parties to perform.—"The obligation of a contract 'is the law which binds the parties to perform their agreement.'" Davidson v. Lanier, 4 Wall. 447, 452, 18 L. Ed. 377; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. Ed. 403, followed in Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 318, 21 L. Ed. 357; Bedford v. Eastern Building, etc., Ass'n, 181 U. S. 227, 241, 45 L. Ed. 834.

The law which binds parties to perform their agreement constitutes the obligation of the contract. (Washington, J., approving the definition of obligation given by the Chief Justice in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529.) Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 257, 6 L. Ed. 606.

"In the case of Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529, the court in explaining the meaning of the terms 'obligation of a contract,' say, 'a contract is an agreement in which a party undertakes to do, or not to do, a particular thing; the law binds him to perform his undertaking, and this is, of course, the obligation of his contract.' That is, as I understand it, the law of the contract forms its obligation, and if so, the contract is fulfilled, and its obligation discharged, by complying with whatever the existing law required in relation to such contract." Opinion of Thompson, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 301, 6 L. Ed. 606.

14. Laws affecting validity, construction, discharge, etc.—McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 317, 21 L. Ed. 357; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. Ed. 793; Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 637, 24 L. Ed. 858; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 774, 27 L. Ed. 468.

15. Means of enforcement.—Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 319, 14 L. Ed. 705; White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 653, 20 L. Ed. 685; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 21 L. Ed. 357; Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 720, 28 L. Ed. 574.

"The obligation of a contract, in the constitutional sense, is the means provided by law by which it can be enforced—by which the parties can be obliged to perform it. Whatever legislation lessens the efficacy of these means impairs the obligation." If it tend to postpone or retard the enforcement of the contract, the obligation of the latter is to that extent impaired. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 206, 26 L. Ed. 132, approved in Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 798, 27 L. Ed. 468; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 295, 30 L. Ed. 1161.

The obligation of a contract is impaired, in the sense of the constitution, when the means by which the contract at the time of its execution could be enforced, that is, by which the parties could be obliged to perform it, are rendered less efficacious by legislation operating directly upon those means. Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395.

The obligation of a contract includes everything within its obligatory scope. Among these elements nothing is more important than the means of enforcement.

c. Postponement of Payment.—Hence any authorization of the postponement of payment, or of means by which such postponement may be effected, is in conflict with the constitutional inhibition.[16]

d. Moral Obligations.—But by the terms "obligation of contracts" the mere moral law could not have been intended, since the obligation which that imposes is altogether of the imperfect kind, which the parties to it are free to obey, or not, as they please.[17]

e. Contingencies and Expectancies.—So, also, the obligation of a contract within the meaning of the constitution is a valid subsisting obligation, not a contingent or speculative one.[18]

This is the breath of its vital existence. Without it, the contract, as such, in the view of the law, ceases to be, and falls into the class of those "imperfect obligations," as they are termed, which depend for their fulfillment upon the will and conscience of those upon whom they rest. The ideas of right and remedy are inseparable. "Want of right of remedy are the same thing." Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 600, 24 L. Ed. 793.

"The obligation of a contract consists in the power and efficacy of the law, which applies to, and enforces the performance of the contract, or the payment of an equivalent for nonperformance. The obligation does not inhere, and subsist in the contract itself proprio vigore, but in the law applicable to the contract. This is the sense, I think, in which the constitution uses the term obligation." Opinion of Trimble, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 318, 6 L. Ed. 606.

Distinguished from obligation in a state of nature.—"As in a state of nature, the natural obligation of a contract consists in the right and potential capacity of the individual to take, or enforce the delivery of the thing due to him by the contract, or its equivalent; so, in the social state, the obligation of a contract consists in the efficacy of the civil law, which attaches to the contract, and enforces its performance, or gives an equivalent in lieu of performance. From these principles, it seems to result, as a necessary corollary, that the obligation of a contract, made within a sovereign state, must be precisely that allowed by the law of the state, and none other." Opinion of Trimble, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 320, 6 L. Ed. 606.

So far as relates to private contract between individual and individual it is the civil obligation of contracts, that obligation which is recognized by and results from the law of the state in which the contract is made, which are within the meaning of the constitution. Opinion of Trimble, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 321, 6 L. Ed. 606.

All laws in existence when a contract in regard to real estate is made, including the contract of mortgage, enter into and become a part of such contract. Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 24 L. Ed. 858, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 126, 41 L. Ed. 93.

16. Laws postponing payment.—Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 207, 26 L. Ed. 132.

Thus when a person executed his written promise to pay a sum of money on or before a certain day, the contract binds him to pay that money on that day: and this is its obligation. Any law which releases a part of this obligation must in the literal sense of the word impair it. Much more must a law impair it, which makes it totally invalid, and entirely discharges it. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 197, 4 L. Ed. 529.

17. Moral obligation of contract not embraced in these terms.—Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 256, 6 L. Ed. 606.

"Right and obligation are considered by all ethical writers as correlative terms: Whatever I, by my contract, give another a right to require of me, I, by that act lay myself under an obligation to yield or bestow. The obligations of every contract will then consist of that right or power over my will or actions, which I, by my contract, confer on another. And that right and power will be found to be measured neither by moral law alone, nor universal law alone, nor by the laws of society alone, but by a combination of the three—an operation in which the moral law is explained and applied by the law of nature, and both modified and adapted to the exigencies of society by positive laws." Opinion of Johnson, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 282, 6 L. Ed. 606.

18. Contingencies and expectancies.—Ochiltree v. Railroad Co., 21 Wall. 249, 252, 22 L. Ed. 546. See Maryland v. Railroad Co., 22 Wall. 105, 112, 22 L. Ed. 713, citing Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 20 L. Ed. 287.

Increase of capital stock.—Thus, plaintiff being a creditor of a corporation whose stockholders were individually liable upon such indebtedness in an amount equal to the value of the stock held by them, the state authorized an increase of the capital stock, the new subscribers to be subject to individual liability the same as the old. Held, that, as to plaintiff, this was a mere contingency or expectancy, and that a change in the law, before any of the new stock was subscribed, exempting the persons subscribing to the new stock, from all personal

D. Enforcement of Laws Impairing Contracts.—The constitutional provision prohibiting a state from passing a law impairing the obligation of contracts, equally prohibits a state from enforcing as a law an enactment of that character from whatever source originating.[19]

E. Power of Court to Nullify State Law.—The supreme court of the United States has authority to declare a state law unconstitutional, upon the ground of its impairing the obligation of a contract between different states of the Union.[20]

F. Degree of Impairment Immaterial.—The objection to a law, as impairing the obligation of a contract, does not depend upon the extent of the change it affects; the laws in existence when a contract was made, including those which affect its validity, construction, discharge and enforcement, enter into and form a part of it, measuring the obligation to be performed by one party, and the rights acquired by the other; and one of the tests that a contract has been impaired is that its value has been diminished, when the constitution prohibits any impairment at all of its obligation.[21] The obligation of a contract cannot be substantially impaired in any way by a state law.[22] But while it is a settled rule that the constitutional inhibition prohibits any impairment, and that the degree of impairment is immaterial, yet it is to be understood that the en-liability thereon, did not impair the obligation of his contract. Ochiltree v. Railroad Co., 21 Wall. 249, 22 L. Ed. 546.

19. Enforcement of such laws forbidden.—An enactment of the Confederate States, enforced as a law of one of the states composing that confederation, sequestrating a debt owing by one of its citizens to a citizen of a loyal state as an alien enemy, is void, because it impairs the obligation of the contract, and discriminates against citizens of another state. Williams v. Bruffy, 96 U. S. 176, 24 L. Ed. 716. See post, "Confederate Contracts," III, G, 1.

20. Power of court to nullify state law.—Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547.

21. Degree of impairment immaterial.—Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 12 L. Ed. 447; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793, distinguished in Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 65, 27 L. Ed. 48.

"The amount of the impairment of the obligation is immaterial. If there be any, it is sufficient to bring into activity the constitutional provision and the judicial power of this court to redress the wrong. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403." Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 683, 24 L. Ed. 558.

"The prohibition has no reference to the degree of impairment. The largest and least are alike forbidden." Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. Ed. 403.

"Any impairment of the obligation of a contract—the degree of impairment is immaterial—is within the prohibition of the constitution." Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 318, 21 L. Ed. 357.

The validity of a state law impairing the obligation of contracts, does not depend upon the extent of the change which the law effects in the contract. Any deviation from its terms, by postponement or accelerating the period of its performance imposing conditions not expressed in the contract, or dispensing with the performance of those which are expressed, however minute or apparently immaterial in their effect upon the contract, impairs its obligation. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547, approved in Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 553, 18 L. Ed. 403; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93.

One of the best tests that a contract has been impaired is, that its value has been diminished by the legislature in question. It is not a question of degree or manner or cause, but of encroaching in any respect on its obligation, or dispensing with any part of its force. It is not, by the constitution, to be impaired at all. Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 327, 12 L. Ed. 447, approved in Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. Ed. 793.

Laws changing intention of parties.—Any law, then, which enlarges, abridges, or in any manner changes the intention of the parties to a contract, when it is discovered, necessarily impairs the contract itself, which is but the evidence of that intention. The manner, or the degree, in which this change is effected, can in no respect influence this conclusion; for whether the law affect the validity, the construction, the duration, the mode of discharge, or the evidence of the agreement, it impairs the contract, though it may not do so to the same extent, in all the supposed cases. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 256, 6 L. Ed. 606.

22. Obligation cannot be impaired in any way.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 603, 24 L. Ed. 793.

croachment thus denounced must be material. If it be not material, it will be regarded as of no account.[23]

G. The Rule That There Must Be a Valid Contract.—There can be no just complaint that a statute or constitutional provision impairs the obligation of a contract where there was in fact no valid contract.[24] As, for example, where the contracts alleged to be impaired were evidenced by railroad aid bonds issued in contravention of the state statute,[25] or where the alleged contract is wholly ultra vires and void.[26] In other words, it cannot be determined that there is an impairment of the obligation of a contract until it is determined what the contract is, and whether it is a valid contract.[27]

H. Effect of Such Invalid Laws.—Where a state statute or constitution is declared void on the ground that it impairs the obligation of a contract, the holders of the contract are entitled to enforce it in all respects as if such provision had not been passed.[28]

23. Held, that encroachment must be material.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. Ed. 793, distinguished in Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 65, 27 L. Ed. 648.

24. No impairment in absence of valid contract.—Railroad Co. v. Hamersley, 104 U. S. 1, 26 L. Ed. 629. See post, "Ultra Vires Contracts," III, J, 4.

25. Railroad aid bonds issued in contravention of the statute.—There can be no impairment of the obligation of contract as to bonds issued by a county in accordance with an Illinois act which has been declared void by the state courts. Such bonds, having been illegally issued, do not constitute contracts which are protected by the constitution. Zane v. Hamilton County, 189 U. S. 370, 47 L. Ed. 858.

Upon objection that a statute or constitutional amendment operates to impair the obligation of a contract, as, for example, a municipal donation in aid of a railroad, the existence of a contract must be clearly proved before the protection of the federal constitution can be invoked. Concord v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 92 U. S. 625, 630, 23 L. Ed. 628.

Under the Illinois statute enforced March 7, 1867, a town in that state could not make an appropriation or donation in aid of a railroad company until the road had been located and constructed through the town. On November 20, 1869, the town of Concord voted an appropriation, provided the company "would," run its road through the town. On the 20th of June, 1870, the company gave notice of its acceptance of the donation, and the bonds were issued on the 9th of October, 1871. In the meantime a new state constitution going into operation upon July 2, 1870, annulled the power of any city, town or township to make donations or loan its credit to a railroad company. Held, that as the town was not empowered to make a donation until the road was located through the town, its contract to give in consideration that the company would soon locate and construct its road, was without authority and void; therefore, an objection that the constitution of 1870 impaired the obligation of a contract was without merit, and there was no valid contract to be impaired. Concord v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 92 U. S. 625, 630, 23 L. Ed. 628.

26. Ultra vires contracts not protected by contract clause.—Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 5 L. Ed. 339; Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. Ed. 471; Hoadley v. San Francisco, 124 U. S. 639, 31 L. Ed. 553; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943.

A party to an alleged contract cannot justly complain that a subsequent statute or constitutional amendment operates as an impairment thereof when in fact there was no binding contract to be impaired; as, for example, where the alleged contract was wholly ultra vires and void. Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. Ed. 471.

Thus, where the contract of a municipal corporation to subscribe for stock in a railroad company was wholly ultra vires and void because, under the statute, the construction of the road was a condition precedent to its power to enter into such contract, a subsequent constitutional amendment adopted before the subscription was actually made, and forbidding municipal subscriptions in aid of railroads was not invalid as impairing the obligation of a contract. Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. Ed. 471, distinguishing County of Moultrie County v. Rockingham, etc., Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 23 L. Ed. 631.

Where, upon a just construction of the statutes defining their authority, the state railroad commissioners had authority to consent to the abandonment of railroad stations, but no authority to bind the state by contract that stations so bound should not be re-established, the statute re-establishing a station which had been abandoned with the consent of the commissioners was not obnoxious as impairing the obligation of the contract. Railroad Co. v. Hamersley, 104 U. S. 1, 26 L. Ed. 629.

27. Mercantile Trust, etc., Co. v. Columbus, 203 U. S. 311, 321, 51 L. Ed. 198.

28. Effect of such invalid laws.—Shreve-

II. What Laws Impair the Obligation of Contracts.

A. In General.—It is a municipal law of the state, whether that be written or unwritten, which forms part of the obligation of a contract, rather than the common law of nations.[29]

B. Laws Passed Prior to the Constitution.—The present constitution of the United States did not commence its operation, until the first Wednesday in March, 1789, and the provision in the constitution, that "no state shall make any law impairing the obligation of contracts," does not extend to a state law enacted before that day, and operating upon rights of property vested before that time.[30]

C. Laws Passed by the Confederate States.—At no time during the rebellion were the rebellious states out of the pale of the Union. Their constitutional duties and obligations remained unaffected by the rebellion. They could not then pass a law impairing the obligation of a contract more than before the rebellion, or now, since.[31] Hence, an enactment of the Confederate States, enforced as a law of one of the states composing that confederation, sequestrating a debt owing by one of its citizens to a citizen of a loyal state as an alien enemy, is void, because it impairs the obligation of the contract, and discriminates against citizens of another state.[32]

D. Laws of Congress—1. IN GENERAL.—This constitutional provision is only a restriction upon the states. No provision of the constitution prohibits congress from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts.[33] Hence, congress may in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it, annul or impair the obligation of contracts; as, for example, in the exercise of its power to enact bankrupt laws, nonintercourse acts, etc.[34] And this may be done not only in pott v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 32 L. Ed. 589.

29. The "law" referred to is the municipal law.—"Whilst I admit, then, that this common law of nations, which has been mentioned, may form in part of the obligation of a contract, I must unhesitatingly insist, that this law is to be taken in strict subordination to the municipal laws of the land where the contract is made, or is to be executed. The former can be satisfied by nothing short of performance; the latter may affect and control the validity, construction, evidence, remedy, performance and discharge of the contract. The former is the common law of all civilized nations, and of each of them; the latter is the peculiar law of each, and is paramount to the former, whenever they come in collision with each other. It is, then, the municipal law of the state, whether that be written or unwritten, which is emphatically the law of the contract made within the state, and must govern it throughout, wherever its performance is sought to be enforced. It forms, in my humble opinion, a part of the contract, and travels with it, wherever the parties to it may be found. It is so regarded by all the civilized nations of the world, and is enforced by the tribunals of those nations, according to its own forms, unless the parties to it have otherwise agreed, as where the contract is to be executed in, or refers to the laws of, some other country than that in which it is formed, or where it is of an immoral character, or contravenes the policy of the nation to whose tribunals the appeal is made; in which latter cases, the remedy which the comity of nations affords for enforcing the obligation of contracts wherever formed, is denied." Opinion of Washington, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 259, 6 L. Ed. 606.

30. Laws passed prior to adoption of constitution.—Owings v. Speed, 5 Wheat. 420, 5 L. Ed. 124. See, also, League v. DeYoung, 11 How. 185, 13 L. Ed. 657; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. 79, 14 L. Ed. 334.

31. Laws passed by Confederate States.—White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 20 L. Ed. 685.

32. Confederate statute sequestrating debts owed to alien enemies.—Williams v. Bruffy, 96 U. S. 176, 24 L. Ed. 716, approved in New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31, 31 L. Ed. 607.

33. This provision only restricts the states.—Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 416, 7 L. Ed. 458.

34. Congress may annul or impair contracts.—Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 19 L. Ed. 513; Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 550, 20 L. Ed. 287.

It is no answer to the power of congress to enact statutes of limitation to say that it interferes with the validity of contracts, for no provision of the constitution prohibits congress from doing this, as it does the states; and where the question of the power of congress arises, as in the legal tender cases, and in bankruptcy cases, it does not depend upon the incidental the exercise of its express powers but also in the exercise of its so-called implied or auxiliary powers; powers of the last description being as expressly given as the power to declare war or to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcy, but not being catalogued or enumerative.[35]

2. LIMITATIONS OF GENERAL RULE.—But though congress is not prohibited from passing an act impairing the obligation of contracts, yet the spirit of this prohibition pervades the entire body of legislation. Hence, an act of congress which necessarily and in its direct operation impairs the obligation of contracts, is inconsistent with the spirit of the constitution.[36] Nor is congress competent to authorize any state to evade or infringe the constitutional provision forbidding the impairment of the obligation of contracts.[37]

3. VALIDITY OF LEGAL TENDER ACTS.—The acts of congress known as the effect of its exercise on contracts, but on the existence of the power itself. Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 643, 28 L. Ed. 279.

"Every contract for the payment of money, simply, is necessarily subject to the constitutional power of the government, over the currency, whatever that power may be, and the obligation of the parties is, therefore, assumed with reference to that power." Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 549, 20 L. Ed. 287; Legal Tender Cases, 110 U. S. 421, 449, 28 L. Ed. 204. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 303.

35. Congress may exercise its implied powers to impair contracts.—Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 550, 20 L. Ed. 287.

36. Limitations upon power of congress to impair contracts.—"It is true that this prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States. Congress has express power to enact bankrupt laws, and we do not say that a law made in the execution of any other express power, which, incidentally only, impairs the obligation of a contract, can be held to be unconstitutional for that reason. But we think it clear that those who framed and those who adopted the constitution, intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of legislation, and that the justice which the constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them to be compatible with legislation of an opposite tendency. In other words, we cannot doubt that a law not made in pursuance of an express power, which necessarily and in its direct operation impairs the obligation of contracts, is inconsistent with the spirit of the constitution." Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 623, 19 L. Ed. 513, followed in Broderick v. Magraw, 8 Wall. 639, 19 L. Ed. 531, but overruled in Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 20 L. Ed. 287. But see dissenting opinion of Miller, J.

The United States cannot any more than a state interfere with private rights, except for legitimate governmental purposes. They are not included within the constitutional prohibition which prevents states from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts, but equally with the states they are prohibited from depriving persons or corporations of property without due process of law. Sinking-Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 718, 25 L. Ed. 496.

The United States are as much bound by their contracts as are individuals. If they repudiate their obligations, it is as much repudiation, with all the wrong and reproach that term implies, as it would be if the repudiator had been a state or a municipality or a citizen. Sinking-Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 719, 25 L. Ed. 496.

Congress cannot impair its own grants.—The United States cannot legislate back to themselves, without making compensation, the lands they have given to a corporation to aid in the construction of its railroad. Neither can they by legislation compel the corporation to discharge its obligations in respect to its subsidy bonds otherwise than according to the terms of the contract already made in that connection. Sinking-Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 719, 25 L. Ed. 496.

37. Congress cannot authorize states to impair contracts.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 607, 24 L. Ed. 793.

Georgia statute forbidding enforcement of slave contracts.—The provision of the constitution of Georgia, adopted in 1868, that "no court or officer shall have nor shall the general assembly give jurisdiction to try, or give judgment on, or enforce any debt, the consideration of which was a slave, or the hire thereof," cannot be sustained upon the ground that said constitution was adopted under the coercion and dictation of congress, and that such provision was in effect an enactment of congress, upon which the constitutional inhibition against the impairment of the obligation of contracts had no effect. White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 20 L. Ed. 685.

If congress had dictated and expressly approved such constitutional provision, such dictation and approval would have been without effect, since congress has no power to supersede the national constitution. White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 649, 20 L. Ed. 685.

Though the constitution of Georgia adopted after the Civil War, and before its readmission to representation in congress, was sanctioned by congress the legal tender acts are constitutional, when applied to contracts made before their passage.[38]

4. Act of Congress to Retire Porto Rican Money.—The act of congress passed 12th day of April, 1900, which provides for retiring Porto Rican coins and substituting American money therefor, does not impair the obligation of pre-existing contracts.[39]

E. State Constitutions and Amendments Thereto—1. State Constitutions.—The fact that the act of the state is a constitutional provision instead of a mere legislative act does not affect the case.[40] Because the constitution of a state is undoubtedly a law within the meaning of this prohibition. A state can no more do what is thus forbidden by one than by the other. There is the provision therein relating to homestead exemption, and which impaired the obligation of existing contracts, can in no sense be considered as an act of congress. The sanction of congress was only permissive as a part of the process of rehabilitation, and involved nothing affirmative or negative beyond that event. Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 623, 21 L. Ed. 212.

38. Legal tender acts held valid.—Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 20 L. Ed. 287, overruling Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 19 L. Ed. 513, and reaffirmed in Dooley v. Smith, 13 Wall. 604, 20 L. Ed. 547; Bigler v. Waller, 14 Wall. 297, 308, 20 L. Ed. 891; Railroad Co. v. Johnson, 15 Wall. 195, 21 L. Ed. 178. See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 303; PAYMENT.

"The power of making the notes of the United States a legal tender in payment of private debts, being included in the power to borrow money and to provide a national currency, is not defeated or restricted by the fact that its exercise may affect the value of private contracts. If, upon a just and fair interpretation of the whole constitution, a particular power or authority appears to be vested in congress, it is no constitutional objection to its existence, or to its exercise, that the property or the contracts of individuals may be incidentally affected." Legal Tender Case, 110 U. S. 421, 448, 28 L. Ed. 204.

The legal tender acts are not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts made before their enactment; since all contracts to pay money generally (otherwise as the contracts to pay some specifically defined species of money), are to be deemed to have been entered into with reference to the vicissitudes of national existence, and possible future changes in the currency laws and the medium of payment. In other words every contract for the payment of money generally, is subject to the constitutional power of the government over the currency, whatever that power may be, and the obligations of the parties are assumed with reference to that power. Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 549, 20 L. Ed. 287. As to a contract to pay in a specific kind of money or in specie, see Bronson v. Rodes, 7 Wall. 229, 19 L. Ed. 141; Trebilcock v. Wilson, 12 Wall. 687, 20 L. Ed. 460.

Overruled cases.—An act compelling acceptance in satisfaction of any other than the stipulated medium of payment, alters arbitrarily the terms of the contract and impairs its obligation; the extent of the impairment is in the proportion of the unequality of the payment accepted under the constraint of the law to the payment due under the contract. Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 609, 19 L. Ed. 513, followed in Broderick v. Magraw, 8 Wall. 639, 19 L. Ed. 531.

In the case of Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 623, 19 L. Ed. 513, it was stated that while the constitutional prohibition against the impairment of the obligation of contracts does not in terms apply to congress, yet it is clear that the framers of the constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of our legislation, and that a law not made in pursuance of an express power, which necessarily and in its direct operation impairs the obligation of contracts, is inconsistent with the spirit of the constitution. Therefore, the "legal tender acts," which were not enacted under any express power, were unconstitutional so far as they apply to existing obligations. Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 623, 19 L. Ed. 513, followed in Broderick v. Magraw, 8 Wall. 639, 19 L. Ed. 531.

39. Act of congress providing for the retiring of Porto Rican money.—The act of congress, April 12, 1900, § 11, providing that United States money shall be accepted in exchange at the rate of sixty cents for one peso of Porto Rican money, does not impair the obligation of a contract, where the seller of a plantation in Porto Rico sought to make the purchaser pay him at the rate of $1.00 for each peso of the debt and the agreement at the time of the purchase in 1894 was that the debt should be satisfied by money current in the province at the rate of 100 centavos for each peso of the debt. Serralles' Succession v. Esbri, 200 U. S. 103, 50 L. Ed. 391.

40. Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 32 L. Ed. 589, citing Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 19 L. Ed. 997.

same impediment in the way of both.[41] And the fact that the new constitution was sanctioned by congress does not affect the question.[42]

2. Constitutional Amendments.—If a contract was valid when made, a state can no more impair its obligation by a constitutional amendment than it can by an ordinary act of legislation.[43]

F. Judicial Decisions—1. In General.—The prohibition upon the passage of state laws impairing the obligation of contracts has reference only to the laws, that is, to the constitutional provisions or to the legislative enactments of a state, and not to judicial decisions or the acts of state tribunals or officers under statutes in force at the time of the making of the contract, the obligation of which is alleged to have been impaired.[44] Hence, there is no impairment of the obliga-

41. State constitutions are within the inhibition.—Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 583e, 9 L. Ed. 773; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. Ed. 401; Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 515, 19 L. Ed. 997; White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 652, 20 L. Ed. 685; Delmas v. Insurance Co., 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. Ed. 757; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 623, 21 L. Ed. 212; Boyce v. Tabb, 18 Wall. 546, 21 L. Ed. 757; Concord v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 92 U. S. 625, 630, 23 L. Ed. 628; Moultrie County v. Rockingham, etc., Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 23 L. Ed. 631; Clay County v. Society for Savings, 104 U. S. 579, 26 L. Ed. 856; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 721, 27 L. Ed. 448; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 672, 29 L. Ed. 516; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525; Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 135, 29 L. Ed. 587; Bier v. McGehee, 148 U. S. 137, 140, 37 L. Ed. 397.

Constitutional enactment cannot affect contracts which, when entered into, were within the power of the state to make, and which, consequently, were protected against impairment, in respect of their obligation, by the constitution of the United States. A state can no more impair the obligation of a contract by her organic law than by legislative enactment; for her constitution is a law within the meaning of the contract clause of the national constitution. Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 429, 14 L. Ed. 997; Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 19 L. Ed. 997; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 672, 29 L. Ed. 516.

Right to grant special franchises to corporations.—Where at the time a contract is entered into between a municipality and a water works company, it was established by the decisions of the highest court of the state that the constitution of the state permitted a grant of special franchises to persons and corporations, and permitted the latter to receive assignments of them from such persons, or grants of them directly from the legislature, it was held that such contract could not be affected by a new constitution adopted by the state. New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516; Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 29 L. Ed. 587; St. Tammany Waterworks v. New Orleans Waterworks, 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. Ed. 563; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. Ed. 886.

42. Effect where state constitution was sanctioned by congress.—Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. Ed. 212.

43. Pre-existing contracts must not be impaired by constitutional amendments.—Delmas v. Insurance Co., 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. Ed. 757.

Contracts represented by charters.—The state can no more impair the obligations of its contracts embodied in chartered corporations, by constitutional adoption or amendments, than it can by ordinary acts of legislation. Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. Ed. 401; Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Debolt, 18 How. 380, 15 L. Ed. 458; Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Thomas, 18 How. 384, 15 L. Ed. 460.

An ordinance of a municipality of the state of Louisiana imposed a tax upon the property of the city to defray expenses of drainage. After the assessments were made and reduced to judgments, a constitutional amendment went into effect, in 1874, limiting the power of the city to contract debts. In order to complete the work, the city purchased a drainage plant and franchise, in 1876, and issued bonds for the payment thereof, advising property holders, by an ordinance without the knowledge of the person from whom the purchase was made, not to pay the assessments. Held, the constitutional amendment was not designed to impair the validity of a debt already legally incurred, and if it had attempted that, it would have been hostile to the provision of the Federal constitution against impairing the obligation of a contract. New Orleans v. Warner, 175 U. S. 120, 144, 44 L. Ed. 96.

44. No impairment by judicial decisions.—Railroad Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. Ed. 381; Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 383, 20 L. Ed. 414; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 30 L. Ed. 1059; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 30, 31 L. Ed. 607; Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 454, 36 L. Ed. 773; Wood v. Brady, 150 U. S. 13, 37 L. Ed. 981; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S.

tion of contract where a state court merely changes a prior decision; and it is settled that such impairment can come only from a subsequent statute, and after it is upheld or effect given to it by the state court.[45]

Limitations of General Rule.[46]—But the rule is well settled that judicial decisions construing the constitution or laws of the state are a part thereof, and a change of decision may have all the practical effect of the adoption of a new constitutional provision, statute, or ordinance; and if the last construction has the effect of impairing the obligation of a contract entered into while the prior decision was regarded as having established a law, the last decision must be disregarded in adjudicating the rights of the parties.[47] And this 103, 109, 40 L. Ed. 91, distinguished in Loeb v. Columbia Tp. Trustees, 179 U. S. 472, 493, 45 L. Ed. 280; Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 273, 278, 41 L. Ed. 157; Weber v. Rogan, 188 U. S. 10, 14, 47 L. Ed. 363. See post, "Right to Take Away Remedy by Judicial Decisions." VII, C.

As stated by Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for the court, in New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 30, 31 L. Ed. 607: "In order to come within the provision of the constitution of the United States which declares that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts, not only must the obligation of a contract have been impaired, but it must have been impaired by a law of the state. The prohibition is aimed at the legislative power of the state, and not at the decisions of its courts, or the acts of administrative or executive boards or officers, or the doings of corporations or individuals." And the language of Mr. Justice Miller, in exposition of the rule, is quoted from two opinions of the court delivered by him: "It must be the constitution, or some law of the state, which impairs the obligation of the contract, or which is otherwise in conflict with the constitution of the United States; and the decision of the state court must sustain the law or constitution of the state in the matter in which the conflict is supposed to exist; or the case for this court does not arise." Railroad Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 181, 18 L. Ed. 381; St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Todd County, 142 U. S. 282, 286, 35 L. Ed. 1014.

45. Mere change in prior decisions.—National Mut., etc., Ass'n v. Brahan, 193 U. S. 635, 48 L. Ed. 823.

Conflicting decisions upon validity of lottery.—Upon an indictment under an Alabama statute for conducting a lottery the defendant justified under an act of incorporation which he alleged amounted to a contract between himself and the state and which the state could not repeal or impair. The only question before the court was whether or not the act constituted a contract, and the court held that it did, the question of the constitutionality of the statutes was not considered. Upon a subsequent indictment against the same defendant for a similar offense the question of the constitutionality of the statute was expressly raised and the courts decided that it was unconstitutional and constituted no defense to the charge against the defendant. Held, that the previous adjudication did not estop the state from denying the constitutionality of the statute, and that the second did not therefore impair the obligation of a contract; and it is immaterial that the question of the constitutionality of the statute might have been raised upon the trial of the first instrument. Boyd v. Alabama, 94 U. S. 645, 24 L. Ed. 3.

46. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1049.

47. When decisions construing constitutions and statutes are immutable.—Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 432, 14 L. Ed. 997; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 206, 17 L. Ed. 520; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. Ed. 38; Thomson v. Lee County, 3 Wall. 327, 18 L. Ed. 177; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 579, 19 L. Ed. 490; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; Pine Grove Tp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 22 L. Ed. 227; Commissioners v. Thayer, 94 U. S. 631, 642, 24 L. Ed. 133; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968; Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60, 71, 26 L. Ed. 1008; New Buffalo v. Iron Co., 105 U. S. 73, 26 L. Ed. 1024; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 294, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

"The same principle applies where there is a change of judicial decision as to the constitutional power of the legislature to enact the law. To this rule, thus enlarged, we adhere. It is the law of this court. It rests upon the plainest principles of justice. To hold otherwise would be as unjust as to hold that rights acquired under a statute may be lost by its repeal." Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 206, 17 L. Ed. 520.

Where a state constitution has received a uniform and undisputed construction by every department of the government, supported by judicial decision for nearly fifty years, a contract with the state authorities may have been made upon the faith of such construction. The courts, upon a question involving the validity of such contracts, are bound to adopt the construction they received from the state authorities at the time the contract was made. Opinion of Taney, C. J., in Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, is true although the first judicial construction of the statute upon which the contract, or the remedy for its enforcement, is based, was not made until after the contract had been entered into.[48] This doctrine applies as well to the construction of a provision of the organic law, as to the construction of a statute. The construction, so far as contract obligations incurred under it are concerned, constitutes a part of the law as much as if embodied in it.[49] And so far does it extend, that when a statute of two states, expressed in the same terms, is construed differently by the highest courts, they are treated as different laws, each embodying the particular construction of its own state, and

431, 14 L. Ed. 997; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. Ed. 85.

After a statute has been settled by judicial construction, the construction becomes, so far as contract rights acquired under it are concerned, as much a part of the statute as the text itself, and a change of decision is, to all intents and purposes, the same in its effect on contracts as an amendment of the law by means of a legislative enactment. Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. Ed. 38; Thomson v. Lee County, 3 Wall. 327, 18 L. Ed. 177; Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. 181, 19 L. Ed. 160; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. Ed. 594; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; Fairfield v. County of Gallatin, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. Ed. 544; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 295, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

Where a contract was valid at the time of its execution under the state law as it was then judicially construed by the state courts, such construction becomes a part of the contract, and the federal courts will follow it in disregard of any subsequent change in the attitude of the state courts with reference to the question. Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 432, 14 L. Ed. 997; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968; Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60, 72, 26 L. Ed. 1008; New Buffalo v. Iron Co., 105 U. S. 73, 26 L. Ed. 1024.

Oscillating decisions not followed.—But although it is the practice of the federal supreme court to follow the latest settled adjudications of the state courts giving constructions to the laws and constitutions of their own states, it will not necessarily follow decisions which may prove but oscillations in the course of such judicial settlement. Nor will it follow any adjudication to such an extent as to make a sacrifice of truth, justice and law. Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520.

Change of judicial construction given a prospective effect.—"The true rule is to give a change of judicial construction in respect to a statute the same operation on contracts and existing contract rights that would be given to a legislative amendment; that is to say, make it prospective, but not retroactive. After a statute has been settled by judicial construction, the construction becomes, so far as contract rights acquired under it are concerned, as much a part of the statute as the text itself; and a change of decision is to all intents and purposes the same in its effect on contracts as an amendment of the law by means of a legislative enactment." Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 432, 14 L. Ed. 997; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968; Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60, 72, 26 L. Ed. 1008; New Buffalo v. Iron Co., 105 U. S. 73, 26 L. Ed. 1024; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 294, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

Construction of saving clause in a statute.—The construction given to a statute of a state by the highest judicial tribunal of such state is regarded as a part of the statute, and is as binding upon the courts of the United States as the text. Hence a ruling of the court of appeals of New York, that a saving clause, in a statute regarding impairing obligation of contract is not applicable in judgments like the plaintiffs, is binding on the supreme court of United States. Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. Ed. 925.

Right to grant special franchises to corporations.—Where at the time a contract is entered into between a municipality and a waterworks company, it was established by the decisions of the highest court of the state that the constitution of the state permitted a grant of special franchises to persons and corporations, and permitted the latter to receive assignments of them from such persons, or grants of them directly from the legislature, this judicial construction is a part of the contract, and cannot be affected by subsequent decisions. Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. Ed. 85; Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L. Ed. 997; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. Ed. 38; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. Ed. 594; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. Ed. 382; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. Ed. 886.

48. Subsequent decisions within the rule.—Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. Ed. 490, followed in United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495.

49. Judicial construction of constitu- enforced in accordance with it in all cases arising under it.[50] And it seems that it is immaterial that the state decision by which it is claimed that the contract is impaired is one of first impression in the state construing the law under which the contract was entered into.[51] Moreover, although the decision of the state court is arrived at without any reference made to the act claimed to impair the contract obligation, yet if the necessary consequence of the judgment is that effect is thereby given to that act, and in a manner in which the complainant claims to be unwarranted and illegal, such decision will be held to infringe the contract clause of the federal constitution.[52]

2. New York Elevated Railroad Cases.—It was held in the New York Elevated Railway Cases that when the court of appeals of that state has once interpreted the contract existing between the landowner and the city, that interpretation becomes a part of the contract, upon which one acquiring land may rely, and any subsequent change of it to his injury impairs the obligation of the contract.[53]

3. Decisions upon the Validity of Municipal Securities.—Where bonds issued to bona fide holders for value, as, for example, bonds to aid the construction of a railroad,[54] are valid by the judicial decisions of a state when is-tion within the rule.—Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 294, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

50. Different construction of same statute.—Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. 361, 6 L. Ed. 495; Christy v. Pridgeon, 4 Wall. 196, 18 L. Ed. 322; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 294, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

51. Decisions on questions of novel impression.—Pine Grove Tp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 22 L. Ed. 227.

Thus where the state constitution provides that the credit of the state should never be granted in aid of any person, association or corporation, and that the state should not be a party to nor interested in any work of internal improvement, a decision of the highest court of the state, being the first decision construing that provision, and holding that it extends to prohibit township aid to railroads, was held to impair the obligation of the contract between the township and the holders of the bonds issued in aid of a railroad enterprise; the federal supreme court saying that the question was one of general commercial and constitutional law, the right to decide which it reserved to itself. Pine Grove Tp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 22 L. Ed. 227.

52. Effect of failure of court to refer to statute.—A construction by a state court of a state statute, whereby a cause of action under the statute for default of payments is enforced on the ground that payments previously made and accepted by the state are void, operates to impair the obligation of the implied contract arising out of the acceptance of the payments, and therefore violates the federal constitution, although the state court does not mention the statute. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 44 L. Ed. 673.

53. New York elevated railroad cases.—Muhlker v. New York, etc., R. Co., 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. Ed. 872, distinguished in Sauer v. New York City, 206 U. S. 536, 51 L. Ed. 1176, Mr. Justice McKenno dissenting.

Abutting owners on New York elevated railroad.—The city of New York, owning the fee of a street, solely for public travel and to give passage across the city over an otherwise impassable bluff, constructed a viaduct which interfered with an abutter's access to his land and with the free admission to it of light and air. This construction was authorized by the state, and no compensation was made to abutting owners. Held, that there is a well-defined distinction between a structure erected for the exclusive use of a railroad and one erected for the general use of the public; and that the decision in the elevated railroad cases did not give abutting owners a contract right to light, air and access as against the use of a street for purely public purposes, which would be impaired within the constitutional provision by such use subsequently. Sauer v. New York City, 206 U. S. 536, 51 L. Ed. 1176, distinguishing Muhlker v. New York, etc., R. Co., 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. Ed. 872.

Where a railroad builds an elevated structure in a city street, in place of a prior depressed roadbed, and by command of a New York statute; and where the state courts have held that an abutting owner has a right to the easement of light, air and access, held, that an abutting owner, deriving his title from the original grantor, has a contract right to light and air entirely distinct from that of access; and that such statute impairs the obligation of contract in so far as it allows an infringement of the right without compensation to the abutting owner. Muhlker v. New York, etc., R. Co., 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. Ed. 872, distinguished in Sauer v. New York City, 206 U. S. 536, 51 L. Ed. 1176.

54. Municipal aid bonds.—Commissioners v. Thayer, 94 U. S. 631, 642, 24 L. Ed.

sued, subsequent decisions in the same state cannot destroy their validity in such hands.[55]

4. Decisions upon Property Rights.—The general rule is especially appli-

133, citing Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. Ed. 490; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; German Sav. Bank v. Franklin County, 128 U. S. 526, 32 L. Ed. 519. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID. See post, "Contracts of Municipalities," III, J.

Rule where appeal is from state to federal court.—"It has been held that where a state court has decided in a series of decisions that its legislature had the power to permit municipalities to issue bonds to pay their subscriptions to railroad companies, and such bonds had been issued accordingly, if in such event suit were brought on the bonds in a United States court, that court would not follow the decision of the state court rendered after the issuing of the bonds and holding that the legislature had no power to permit a municipality to issue them, and that they were therefore void. Such are the cases of Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520, and Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968. In cases of that nature there is room for the principle laid down that the construction of a statute and admission as to its validity made by the highest court of a state prior to the issuing of any obligations based upon the statute, enters into and forms a part of the contract and will be given effect to by this court as against a subsequent changing of decision by the state court by which such legislation might be held to be invalid. But effect is given to it by this court only on appeal from a judgment of a United States court and not from that of a state court." Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 220, 41 L. Ed. 132. See Turner v. Wilkes County Comm'rs, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. Ed. 768.

55. Decisions upholding municipal securities.—Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520; Mitchell v. Burlington, 4 Wall. 270, 18 L. Ed. 350; Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. 181, 19 L. Ed. 160; The City v. Lamson, 9 Wall. 477, 19 L. Ed. 725, followed in Kenosha v. Lamson, 154 U. S., appx., 573, 19 L. Ed. 725; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; Loeb v. Columbia Tp. Trustees, 179 U. S. 472, 492, 45 L. Ed. 280. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

Where under the constitution of a state, as construed by the highest court in the state at the time municipal bonds were issued, such bonds were valid as having been issued for a corporate purpose, the federal supreme court will not consider itself bound by a subsequent decision of the state court construing the state constitution so as to render the bonds invalid. Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 415, 25 L. Ed. 1015; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968.

Where municipal bonds have been put upon the market as commercial paper, the rights of the parties thereto are to be determined according to the statutes of the state as they were then construed by her highest court; and in a case involving those rights the federal supreme court will not be governed by any subsequent decision in conflict with that under which they accrued. Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968.

Where municipal bonds, under the state constitution as it was construed by the highest court of the state at the time of their issuance, were valid as having been issued for a corporate purpose, such construction becomes a part of the contract between the municipality and the bondholders, and they cannot be invalidated by a change in the judicial interpretation of the state constitution. Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 415, 25 L. Ed. 1015; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968.

But while it is true as a general proposition that it is for the state court to construe its own constitution and laws, yet where bonds and securities were valid under the state constitution as construed by the highest state court where issued, the federal courts will not follow a subsequent decision construing the state constitution so as to invalidate the bonds. Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 415, 25 L. Ed. 1015; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968.

As to the assignees or indorsees, with or without notice, of municipal bonds, valid under the law as judicially construed at the time they were issued, their rights are as much within the protection of the constitutional provision against impairment of the obligation, as were the rights of the original holders. So far as they are concerned it is wholly immaterial that prior to the indorsement or assignment of the bonds there had been a change in the decisions of the state court declaring the statute under which they were issued to be invalid. New Buffalo v. Iron Co., 105 U. S. 73, 26 L. Ed. 1024.

Cases distinguished.—But in one case, which is difficult to reconcile, it was held that where the state and federal courts have placed conflicting constructions upon a statute or constitutional provision of the state, with regard to the validity of county bonds, that the federal supreme court on appeal from an inferior federal court would follow later decisions by the state court upholding their validity. Wade v. Travis County, 174 U. S. 499, 43 L. Ed. 1060, following Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291.

cable to decisions upon property rights.[56]

5. Estoppel.—But simply because a contract made by a municipality with a waterworks company has received a judicial interpretation by the highest state court, does not affect the power of the state to change the same by subsequent legislation, because courts have no power to make new contracts or to impose new terms upon parties to contracts without their consent.[57]

G. By-Laws and Ordinances.—So a by-law or ordinance of a municipal corporation may be such an exercise of legislative power delegated by the legislature to the corporation as a political subdivision of the state having all the force of law within the limits of the municipality, that it may properly be considered as a law, within the meaning of this article of the constitution of the United States.[58] But a municipal ordinance, not passed under supposed legis-

8 L. Ed. 402; Morgan v. Curtenius, 20 How. 1, 15 L. Ed. 823, and distinguishing other cases as follows: "An exception has been admitted to this rule, where, upon the faith of state decisions affirming the validity of contracts made or bonds issued under a certain statute, other contracts have been made or bonds issued under the same statute before the prior cases were overruled. Such contracts and bonds have been held to be valid, upon the principle that the holders upon purchasing such bonds and the parties to such contracts were entitled to rely upon the prior decisions as settling the law of the state. To have held otherwise would enable the state to set a trap for its creditors by inducing them to subscribe to bonds and then withdrawing their own security. Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. Ed. 38; Mitchell v. Burlington, 4 Wall. 270, 18 L. Ed. 350; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 166, 18 L. Ed. 768; Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. 181, 19 L. Ed. 160; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. Ed. 594; Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. Ed. 382; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. Ed. 968; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. Ed. 359."

56. Decisions upon property rights.—"The construction of the general law which had been thus given by the courts upon the question of what was a sufficient survey, it is claimed, had become a rule of property which parties were entitled to rely upon, and which no court could overturn, and if it did so, a contract was impaired, and the judgment was reviewable by this court. The proposition cannot be maintained as a basis for giving this court jurisdiction upon writ of error to the state court. It ignores the limits to our jurisdiction in this regard, which, as has been seen, is confined to legislation which impairs the obligation of a contract." New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. Ed. 607; Central Land Co. v Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 109, 40 L. Ed. 91; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 220, 41 L. Ed. 132.

57. Estoppel.—New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943. See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

58. By-laws and ordinances.—United States v. New Orleans, 98 U. S. 381, 25 L. Ed. 225; New Orleans Waterworks Co v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31, 31 L. Ed. 607; Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. Ed. 963; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. Ed. 132; Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341; St. Paul Gas Light Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 148, 45 L. Ed. 788; Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 216, 47 L. Ed. 782; Mercantile Trust, etc., Co. v. Columbus, 203 U. S. 311, 320, 51 L. Ed. 198. See the title ORDINANCES.

Taxation by municipalities.—For instance, the power of determining what persons and property shall be taxed belongs exclusively to the legislative branch of the government, and, whether exercised by the legislature itself, or delegated by it to a municipal corporation, is strictly a legislative power. United States v. New Orleans, 98 U. S. 381, 392, 25 L. Ed. 225; Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. Ed. 197; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. Ed. 607.

Accordingly, where the city council of Charleston, upon which the legislature of South Carolina, by the city charter, had conferred the power of taxing persons and property within the city, passed ordinances assessing a tax upon bonds of the city, and thus diminishing the amount of interest which it had agreed to pay, the federal supreme court held such ordinances to be laws impairing the obligation of contracts, for the reason that the city charter gave limited legislative power to the city council, and, when the ordinances were passed under the supposed authority of the legislative act, their provisions became the law of the state. Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 440, 24 L. Ed. 760. See, also, Home Ins. Co. v. City Council, 93 U. S. 116, 23 L. Ed. 825; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. Ed. 607.

Ordinance infringing exclusive privileges.—The legislature of Louisiana

lative authority, cannot be regarded as a law of the state within the meaning of the constitutional prohibition against state laws impairing the obligation of contracts.[59]

H. Laws Passed by States before Their Admission.—The constitution of the United States was made by, and for the protection of, the people of the United States. The restraints imposed by that instrument upon the legislative power of the several states, could affect them only after they became states of the Union, under the provisions of the constitution, and had consented to be bound by it. Therefore it does not affect laws passed and taking complete effect in a state before that state was admitted as one of the states of this Union.[60]

I. Laws Passed by Territorial Legislatures.—It seems never to have been decided whether acts passed by territorial legislatures are embraced by this provision,[61] though, reasoning from the construction given these terms in the judiciary act providing for the review of decisions of state courts by the federal supreme court, it would seem that they are not within the contract clause of the constitution.[62]

J. Pre-Existing Statutes Unobjectionable.—The contract clause of the constitution of the United States has reference only to a statute of a state enacted after the making of the contract whose obligation is alleged to have been impaired;[63] it does not apply to laws enacted prior to the execution of the contract, the obligation of which is asserted to be impaired.[64] This rule has been granted plaintiff company the exclusive privilege of supplying the inhabitants of the city of New Orleans with water, by a charter which provided that nothing therein should be "so construed as to prevent the city council from granting to any person, contiguous to the river, the privilege of laying pipes to the river, exclusively for his own use." Held, that the power conferred upon the city council was not legislative but administrative, and an ordinance of the city, permitting one to lay pipes for his own use, is but a license, the validity of which is in no way dependent upon the constitution or laws of the United States. New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. Ed. 607.

59. Ordinances not passed under legislative authority.—Williams v. Bruffy, 96 U. S. 176, 183, 24 L. Ed. 716; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 440, 24 L. Ed. 760; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 392, 30 L. Ed. 1059; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 38, 31 L. Ed. 607; Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 266, 36 L. Ed. 963.

60. Laws passed by states before their admission.—If the congress of Texas had abolished all certificates whether fraudulent or genuine; or if the people of Texas had done the same thing by their constitution adopted before their admission as a state of the Union, their right to do so could not be questioned by the federal supreme court; restraints contained in the federal constitution not extending to the state of Texas until after it had been admitted into the Union and consented to be bound thereby. League v. De Young, 11 How. 185, 203, 13 L. Ed. 657; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. 79, 14 L. Ed. 334. See the title STATES.

61. Laws enacted by territorial legislatures.—"Assuming that the prohibition of the federal constitution against the impairment of contracts by state legislation applies equally as would seem to be the opinion of the supreme court of the territory, to legislation by territorial legislatures, we are clear that marriage is not a contract within the meaning of the prohibition." Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 210, 31 L. Ed. 654. See the title TERRITORIES.

62. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 555.

63. Laws operating prospectively unobjectionable.—Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 391, 30 L. Ed. 1059; Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 454, 36 L. Ed. 773; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 122, 41 L. Ed. 93; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. Ed. 132; Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 147, 46 L. Ed. 125; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 351, 46 L. Ed. 936; Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 187 U. S. 437, 446, 47 L. Ed. 249; Bradley v. Lightcap, 195 U. S. 1, 19, 49 L. Ed. 95.

"It is thus most apparent that, whichever way we turn, whether to laws affecting the validity, construction, or discharge of contracts, or the evidence or remedy to be employed in enforcing them, we are met by this overruling and admitted distinction between those which operate retrospectively and those which operate prospectively. In all of them, the law is pronounced to be void, in the first class of cases, and not so in the second." Opinion of Washington, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 262, 6 L. Ed. 606.

64. Laws enacted prior to contract cannot be impeached.—Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 360, 6 L. Ed. 606; Briscoe v. Bank, 11 Pet. 257, 328o, 9 L. Ed. 709; Rail-applied to statutes authorizing assignments for the benefit of creditors,[65] to statutes imposing taxes upon the transfer of property,[66] to statutes affecting the remedy,[67] to constitutional provisions declaring null and void bonds purchased road Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 19 L. Ed. 997; United States v. Memphis, 97 U. S. 284, 24 L. Ed. 937; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 391, 30 L. Ed. 1059; Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 273, 278, 41 L. Ed. 157; Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 147, 46 L. Ed. 125; Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co., 187 U. S. 611, 615, 47 L. Ed. 328; Knights of Pythias v. Meyer, 198 U. S. 508, 49 L. Ed. 1146.

"The principle is well stated in the case of Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 603, 24 L. Ed. 793, in the following language: 'The inhibition of the constitution is wholly prospective. The states may legislate as to the contracts thereafter made, as they may see fit. It is only those in existence when the hostile law is passed that are protected from its effect.' See, also, Railroad Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. Ed. 381; University v. People, 99 U. S. 309, 25 L. Ed. 387; Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 20 L. Ed. 414." Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 495, 32 L. Ed. 491.

"The law must have a present effect upon some contract in existence, to bring it within the plain meaning of the language employed. There would be no propriety in saying, that a law impaired, or in any manner whatever modified or altered what did not exist. The most obvious and natural application of the words themselves, is to laws having a retrospective operation upon existing contracts; and this construction is fortified by the associate prohibitions, 'no state shall pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts.' The first two are confessedly restricted to retrospective laws, concerning crimes and penalties affecting the personal security of individuals. And no good reason is perceived why the last should (not) be restricted to restrospective law relating to private rights growing out of the contract of parties." Opinion of Thompson, J.; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 303, 6 L. Ed. 606.

The inhibition of the constitution is wholly prospective. The states may legislate as to contracts thereafter made, as they may see fit. It is only those in existence when the hostile law is passed that are protected from its effect. Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 603, 24 L. Ed. 793.

Distinction as to prospective and retrospective laws.—"The great principle intended to be established by the constitution, was the inviolability of the obligation of contracts, as the obligation existed, and was recognized by the laws in force at the time the contracts were made. It furnished to the legislatures of the states a simple and obvious rule of justice, which, however theretofore violated, should, by no means, be thereafter violated; and whilst it leaves them at full liberty to legislate upon the subject of all future contracts, and assign to them either no obligation, or such qualified obligation as, in their opinion, may consist with sound policy, and the good of the people; it prohibits them from retrospecting upon existing obligations, upon any pretext whatever." Opinion of Trimble, J., Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 327, 6 L. Ed. 606.

65. Statutes authorizing assignments for creditors.—In so far as it applies to debts subsequently incurred, the Minnesota Act of March 7, 1881, providing that "whenever the property of a debtor is seized by an attachment or execution against him, he may make an assignment of all his property and estate not exempt by law, for the equal benefit of all his creditors who shall file releases of their debts and claims, and his property shall be equitably distributed among such creditors," does not impair the obligation of contract. Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. Ed. 491. See the title ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 599.

66. Inheritance tax laws.—Where a New York law imposed a tax upon all transfers of property within the state, and was in force before a certain deposit was placed with a New York trust company, it does not impair the obligation of contract that such deposit is thereby taxed on the death of depositor, if a tax otherwise lawful ever could have that effect. Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. Ed. 439, citing Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. Ed. 125. See the title SUCCESSION TAXES.

67. Laws relating to the remedy.—If the law, whatever it may be, relating to the remedy, has a prospective operation only, no objection can arise to it under this clause in the constitution. It is a question that must rest in the sound discretion of the state legislature. Opinion of Thompson, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 301, 6 L. Ed. 606; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 22 L. Ed. 72; Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 187 U. S. 437, 47 L. Ed. 249. See post, "Remedies," VII.

The contract between a municipal corporation and a waterworks company made and entered into August 31, 1891, cannot be impaired by a change in the corporate charter which went into operation March 23, 1891, changing the manner in which claims or demands against a city should be presented to the common council. Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 187 U. S. 437, 47 L. Ed. 249.

Personal liability of stockholders.—Where a corporation is formed in one after the constitution took effect,[68] to statutes claimed to impair the obligation of county warrants,[69] and to statutes granting exclusive privileges to corporations.[70] Moreover, the rule is operative as to contracts made after its enactment but before it goes into effect.[71] But in presenting this inquiry it is immaterial whether the law purports to apply to pass as well as future contracts, or is wholly prospective in its provisions. It is not the terms of the law but its effect, that is inhibited by the constitution.[72] On the other hand, a statute does not necessarily impair the obligation of a contract because it may affect it retrospectively.[73]

K. Repealing Laws.—It is competent for a legislature to repeal an act which, when it was passed, was a mere gratuity, if while it was in existence no vested rights were acquired under it or in virtue of it.[74] But when a law is state to do business in another, and it is claimed that the constitutional and statutory provision of the latter state imposing personal liability upon stockholders impairs the obligation of contracts in that by the laws of the state incorporating the company there was no such liability, if it appears that such constitutional and statutory provisions were enacted before the incorporation of the company then § 10, of art. 1 has no application. Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. Ed. 125, citing Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 30 L. Ed. 1059; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. Ed. 91; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. Ed. 382. See the title STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

68. Statutes affecting state securities.—Article 233 of the constitution of the state of Louisiana declares that the consolidated bonds of the state, held for a certain agricultural college, were null and void. Payment having been refused by the state to an innocent holder of one of the bonds, which he had bought for value, he brought suit against the state, alleging that it is beyond the power of the state to annul or cancel bonds outstanding and presumably in the hands of bona fide purchasers. The court held that if the plaintiff had been a holder for value of this bond, "when the constitution was adopted, it would evidently be beyond the power of the state, by act of the legislature, or by an amendment to its constitution, to nullify such bond in his hands. But if, when the constitutional amendment was adopted, the bond was still in the possession of the state, there was then no contract with Bier upon which such amendment could operate and hence no contract subject to impairment. New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943. There was no objection to the state declaring bonds still in its possession to be null and void." Bier v. McGehee, 148 U. S. 137, 140, 37 L. Ed. 397.

69. Prospective statutes affecting county warrants valid.—Ouachita County v. Wolcott, 103 U. S. 559, 26 L. Ed. 505. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

70. Statutes granting exclusive privileges.—Thus a water company claiming exclusive contract privileges under a statute enacted in 1874 cannot claim that such contract is impaired by a statute enacted in 1867 authorizing one of the municipalities which it now claims, the exclusive right to supply, to erect and maintain its own waterworks. The real question in such case is, of course, whether the earlier statute was repealed by the latter, either expressly or by implication, and this, generally, is a question for the state court. In other words it is a question of construction of the statute under which it claims the exclusive right or privilege. As to whether such statute, properly interpreted, conferred an exclusive right upon the water company is a question for the state court to decide. Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 30 L. Ed. 1059. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 681.

71. Computation of time.—A Wisconsin act, taking effect September 1st, 1898, forbade foreign corporations to transact business in the state until they should have filed a copy of their charter with the secretary of state, and had paid a fee of twenty-five dollars for such filing. Held, that such act does not impair the obligation of a contract by which a foreign corporation is to do business in the state after September 1st, 1898, where contract is made after its enactment but before it goes into effect. Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co., 187 U. S. 611, 47 L. Ed. 328.

72. "It is not the terms of the law but its effect, that is inhibited by the constitution. A law may be in part constitutional and in part unconstitutional. It may, when applied to a given case, produce an effect which is prohibited by the constitution; but it may not, when applied to a case differently circumstanced, produce such prohibited effect. Whether the law under consideration, in its effects and operation upon the contract sued on in this case, be a law impairing the obligation of this contract, is the only necessary inquiry." Opinion of Trimble, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 316, 6 L. Ed. 606.

73. Retrospective laws not necessarily void.—Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513.

74. Impairment by repealing statutes.—

in its nature a contract, and absolute rights have vested under that contract, a repeal of the law cannot divest those rights.[75]

L. Laws of Dominion of Canada.—There is no constitutional prohibition in Canada against the passage of laws impairing the obligation of contracts.[76]

III. Contracts within Purview of Prohibition.

A. In General.—It has been stated broadly that the constitutional prohibition against the impairment of the obligation of contracts embraces all contracts, executed or executory, between private individuals, or a state and individuals, or corporations, or between the states themselves.[77] But the provision "has never been understood to embrace other contracts than those which respect property, or some object of value, and confer rights which may be asserted in a court of justice."[78] Or as the rule has otherwise been stated, the contracts

Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 297, 24 L. Ed. 920.

It is, however, true that vested rights may be acquired by the creditor under it and by virtue of it; and when such rights have been acquired, they are beyond the reach of the legislature, and the repeal of the law will not affect them. As to them the law continues in force, notwithstanding its repeal. Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 295, 24 L. Ed. 920.

75. Repealing law cannot divest vested rights.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162.

That a legislature is competent to repeal any act which a former legislature was competent to pass and that one legislature cannot abridge the power of a succeeding legislature, is true as respects general legislation. But when a law is in its nature a contract, or when individuals have acquired absolute or vested rights under a statute, a subsequent repeal cannot impair the obligation of the contract, or divest rights which have become vested rights under the statute. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 135, 3 L. Ed. 162, approved in State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 384, 14 L. Ed. 977.

Repeal of statute granting public lands.—Thus where a statute is enacted conveying public lands to certain individuals, bona fide purchasers for value and without notice of a fraud or wrongdoing, from the original grantees, acquiring vested rights in the lands purchased by them, which rights cannot be impaired or divested by a subsequent statute repealing the original granting act, even though the enactment of such original act was procured by fraud and bribery on the part of the original grantees. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 135, 3 L. Ed. 162, distinguished in United States v. Stockslager, 129 U. S. 470, 477, 32 L. Ed. 785, approved in Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 549, 18 L. Ed. 403.

76. Impairment of contracts in Canada.—Canada Southern R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527, 532, 27 L. Ed. 1020.

77. The constitution protects practically all contracts.—Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547.

The words of the constitutional provisions prohibiting the impairment of the obligation of contracts are general, and are applicable to contracts of every description. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 137, 3 L. Ed. 162.

The terms of the constitutional prohibition are broad enough to comprehend all contracts, and violence would be done the plain meaning of the language, by making any exception by construction. Opinion of Baldwin, J., in Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 583c, 9 L. Ed. 773.

78. Only contracts with respect to property or objects of value are protected.—Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 629, 4 L. Ed. 629; Briscoe v. Bank, 11 Pet. 257, 9 L. Ed. 709; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. Ed. 710; Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 210, 31 L. Ed. 654; Hunt v. Hunt, 131 U. S., appx. clxv, 24 L. Ed. 1109.

"'It was intended to correct the mischiefs of state laws, which had weakened the confidence between man and man, and embarrassed all transactions between individuals, by dispensing with a faithful performance of engagements; to guard against a power which had been extensively abused, and to restrain the legislature in future from violating the rights of property. It protected contracts respecting property, under which some person could claim a right to something beneficial to himself; and since the clause must in construction receive some limitation, it ought to be confined to the mischiefs it was intended to remedy. Not to authorize a vexatious interference with the internal concerns or civil institutions of a state; to embarrass its legislation in the regulation of internal government, or to render immutable those institutions, for these purposes, which ought to vary with varying circumstances. The term contract must be understood in a more limited sense, so as not to embrace other contracts than those which respect property, or some object of value, and confer rights which may be asserted in a court of justice.' Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629." Opinion of Baldwin, J., in Briscoe v. Bank, 11 Pet. 257, 328o, 9 L. Ed. 709.

In the Dartmouth College Case, Mr.

designed to be protected by the tenth section of the first article of that instrument are contracts by which perfect rights, certain, definite, fixed private rights of property are vested.[79]

B. Executory and Executed Contracts.—Since the constitution uses the general term contract without distinguishing between those which are executory and those which are executed, it must be construed to comprehend the latter as well as the former,[80] because a contract executed, as well as one which is executory, contains obligations binding on the party.[81] An executory contract is one in which a party binds himself to do or not to do a particular thing.[82] A contract executed is one in which the object of the contract is performed.[83]

C. Rights and Obligations Arising Ex Delicto.—The term contract is used in the constitution in its ordinary sense, as signifying the agreement of two or more minds, for considerations proceeding from one to the other, to do, or not to do, certain acts. Mutual assent to its terms is of its very essence. Rights and obligations arising ex delicto are not within the protection of the constitutional prohibition.[84] And it is altogether immaterial that the rights or obligations arising from such a case have been merged into a judgment. It is only those judgments based upon contract or agreement that are within the protection of the constitutional provision.[85]

Chief Justice Marshall said: "Anterior to the formation of the constitution, a course of legislation had prevailed in many, if not in all, of the states, which weakened the confidence of man in man, and embarrassed all transactions between individuals, by dispensing with a faithful performance of engagements. To correct this mischief by restraining the power which produced it, the state legislatures were forbidden 'to pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts;' that is, of contracts respecting property, under which some individual could claim a right to something beneficial to himself; and that since the clause in the constitution must, in construction, receive some limitation, it may be confined, and ought to be confined, to cases of this description—to cases within the mischief it was intended to remedy." Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 557, 25 L. Ed. 710.

79. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 416, 13 L. Ed. 472; Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 210, 31 L. Ed. 654.

The contract designed to be protected by the 10th section of the first article of the constitution are contracts by which perfect rights, certain definite fixed private rights of property, are vested. These are clearly distinguishable from measures or engagements adopted or undertaken by the body politic or state government —for the benefit of all, and from the necessity of the case, and according to universal understanding to be varied or discontinued as the public good shall require. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 416, 13 L. Ed. 472.

80. The constitution protects both executory and executed contracts.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Osborn v. Nicholson, 13 Wall. 654, 656, 20 L. Ed. 689; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 232, 21 L. Ed. 447; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 318, 21 L. Ed. 357; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 683, 24 L. Ed. 558; Fiske v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 135, 29 L. Ed. 587; Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 42, 32 L. Ed. 589; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 694, 34 L. Ed. 304.

A contract is either executory or executed, but whether executed or executory it contains an obligation binding on the parties, and, whether the one or the other, it is equally within the provisions of the federal constitution which forbids the state governments to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts. Opinion of Washington, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 657, 4 L. Ed. 629; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162.

81. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 137, 3 L. Ed. 162.

82. Executory contract defined.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 136, 3 L. Ed. 162.

83. Executed contract defined.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 136, 3 L. Ed. 162.

84. Rights and obligations arising ex delicto not protected.—Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 288, 27 L. Ed. 936. See post, "Judgments," III, M; "Statutes Barring Actions Ex Delicto," VII, F, 6.

"The prohibition of the federal constitution was intended to secure the observance of good faith in the stipulation of parties against any state action. Where a transaction is not based upon any assent of parties, it cannot be said that any faith is pledged with respect to it; and no case arises for the operation of the prohibition. Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 203, 22 L. Ed. 612; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 288, 27 L. Ed. 936.

85. Effect where obligation is merged into a judgment.—Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612; Louisiana v.

D. Contracts of States—1. In General.—A sovereign state, and one of the states of the Union, if the latter were not restrained by constitutional prohibitions, might, in virtue of sovereignty, act upon the contracts of its citizens, wherever made, and discharge them, by denying a right of action upon them in its courts.[86] But undoubtedly there are cases in which a state may, as it were, lay aside its sovereignty and contract like an individual, and be bound accordingly.[87] And it has long been settled that contracts between a state and an individual are as fully protected by the constitution as contracts between two individuals.[88] In other words, the prohibition of the constitution against the passage of laws impairing the obligation of contracts, applies to the contracts of a state, and to those of its agents acting under its authority, as well as to contracts between individuals.[89] But a contract binding the state is only created by clear language, and is not to be extended by implication beyond the terms of the statute.[90]

2. Violation of Contracts by the State.—There is a vast difference between the impairment of the obligation of a contract by a state and the violation of the contract. Accordingly where a state conveys land and agrees to erect certain buildings on the premises conveyed, its failure so to do presents no case under the contract clause of the federal constitution.[91]

New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 288, 27 L. Ed. 936; Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 414, 33 L. Ed. 193. See post, "Judgments," III, M.

86. Right of states to destroy contract obligations.—Wayne, J., delivering the opinion in Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. 67, 74, 10 L. Ed. 357. See, generally, the title STATES.

87. Right of state to enter into contracts.—Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. Ed. 447; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 556, 25 L. Ed. 710.

"When a state descends from the plane of its sovereignty, and contracts with private persons, it is regarded pro hac vice as a private person itself, and is bound accordingly. Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. Ed. 447." Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 11, 26 L. Ed. 302.

There is no constitutional objection to the exercise of the power of the state to enter into a contract binding upon itself. This power necessarily exists in its sovereignty. An act which creates a valid contract is binding upon succeeding legislation. State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 389, 14 L. Ed. 977.

88. Contracts between states and its citizens are protected.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162; New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch 164, 166, 3 L. Ed. 303, following Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 519, 4 L. Ed. 629; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 92, 5 L. Ed. 547; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. Ed. 939; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black 436, 446, 17 L. Ed. 173; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 550, 18 L. Ed. 403; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 367, 26 L. Ed. 395; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 286, 29 L. Ed. 185; Marye v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 325, 336, 29 L. Ed. 205; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 673, 29 L. Ed. 516; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. Ed. 363.

"Neither argument nor authority is necessary to prove that a state legislature cannot pass a valid law impairing the obligations of a contract, as that general proposition is universally admitted." Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 529, 25 L. Ed. 699.

The constitutional provisions of prohibiting the impairment of the obligation of contract contains no exception in favor of contracts to which a state is a party; on the other hand the words of the provisions are general and are applicable to contracts of every description. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 137, 3 L. Ed. 162, approved in States Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 385, 14 L. Ed. 977.

A state can no more impair by legislation the obligation of its own contract, than it can impair the obligation of a contract of individuals. Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 207, 13 L. Ed. 383; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 803, 27 L. Ed. 468.

When a state becomes a party of a contract, the same rules of law are applied to her as to private persons under like circumstances. When she or her representatives are properly brought into the forum of litigation, neither she nor they can assert any right or immunity as incident to her political sovereignty. Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 232, 21 L. Ed. 447; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705.

89. Contracts made through agents.—Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395.

90. Contract only created by clear language.—Williams v. Wingo, 177 U. S. 601, 603, 44 L. Ed. 905.

91. Violation and impairment distin-

3. The Contract Contained in State Securities—a. Funding State Debts—(1) In General.—Where a state adopts a plan for funding its floating debt, this constitutes, when accepted by the holders of the security, a new contract with each individual creditor, which cannot be altered by any subsequent modification or repeal of the statute.[92] But it is well settled that the funding act does not create a contract between the holders of state securities and the state, until they have accepted or acted upon its provisions.[93] guished.—Brown v. Colorado, 106 U. S. 95, 27 L. Ed. 132.

92. Funding state debts.—Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 24 L. Ed. 760; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 23 L. Ed. 623; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. Ed. 448; Amy v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 114 U. S. 387, 29 L. Ed. 172. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

Levee debt of Louisiana could not be funded in consolidated bonds.—On the 24th of January, 1874, the legislature of Louisiana passed "The Funding Act," which created a board of liquidation, consisting of the governor and other state officers. Its principal stipulations, aside from that which provided that, prior to the year 1914, the entire state debt should never be increased beyond the sum of fifteen million dollars, are: First, that the "consolidated bonds," the issue of which is thereby authorized, shall not exceed in amount fifteen million dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose of consolidating and reducing the floating and bonded debt of the state, amounting to twenty-five million dollars, and consisting of valid outstanding bonds, and valid warrants of the auditor theretofore issued; secondly, that they shall only be used for exchange for said debt at the rate of sixty cents in consolidated bonds for one dollar in such bonds and warrants; thirdly, that a tax of five and a half mills on the dollar of the assessed value of all the real and personal property of the state shall be annually levied and collected for paying the interest and principal of the bonds, and is set apart and appropriated for that purpose, and no other, any surplus beyond paying interest to be used for the purchase and retirement of the bonds; fourthly, that the power of the judiciary, by means of mandamus, injunction, and criminal procedure, shall be exerted to carry out the provisions of the act. An amendment of the constitution was subsequently adopted, which declared that the issue of the consolidated bonds should create a valid contract between each holder thereof and the state, which the latter should not impair; and directed that the tax should be levied and collected without further legislation. Thereafter, on the 2d of March, 1875, the legislature passed an act authorizing the board of liquidation to issue a portion of such consolidated bonds to the Louisiana Levee Company, in liquidation of a debt claimed to be due it under a contract made in 1871. This debt was not one of those to fund which the consolidated bonds had been issued; but the act, under which that contract was made, provided and set apart certain taxes, to be levied and collected throughout the state, to meet the payments which would accrue to the company. The circuit court, upon a bill filed for that purpose by a citizen of Delaware, who had surrendered his old bonds, and taken sixty per cent of the amount in consolidated bonds, two millions of which had then been issued, granted an injunction restraining the board from using the consolidated bonds, and from issuing any other state bonds in payment of said pretended debt. Held, that as the proposed funding of the levee debt at par in the consolidated bonds destroys all benefits anticipated from the funding, on which benefits those who accepted its terms had a right to rely, and makes an unjust discrimination between one class of creditors and another, the injunction, so far as it restrained the funding of said debt in consolidated bonds issued, or to be issued, under the act of Jan. 24, 1874, was properly granted. Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 23 L. Ed. 623.

Right of federal court to decide for itself whether or not state constitution or law impairs the obligation of contract.—By an amendment of the constitution of the state of Louisiana, adopted in 1870, it was provided that no debt should be thereafter created which, added to the debt of the state then existing, would increase the total indebtedness of the state beyond $25,000,000. Upon a suit by the attorney general of the state to enjoin the payment of certain railroad bonds issued by the state, as having been issued in violation of this amendment, it was held that the federal supreme court would determine for itself whether or not the bonds were issued in violation of this amendment, or whether as contended they were issued in exchange for obligations existing previous to the amendment, and whether the amendment itself as applied to the bonds in question by the state court operated to impair the contract of the state with the bondholders. Williams v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 637, 26 L. Ed. 595; Durkee v. Board of Liquidation, 103 U. S. 646, 26 L. Ed. 598. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 703.

93. Funding act must be accepted.—A funding act creating a board of liquidation

(2) Virginia Coupon Cases—aa. In General.—The Virginia act of March 30th, 1871, known as the "Funding Act," and providing that the coupons of the bonds issued thereunder should be receivable at and after maturity for all taxes, debts, dues and demands due the state, constituted a contract between the coupon holder and the state, the obligation of which the state is forbidden by the constitution of the United States to impair.[94] Moreover, the holders of the coupons of those bonds, whether still attached thereto or separated therefrom, are entitled, by a solemn engagement of the state, to use them in payment of state taxes and public dues.[95] Nor can the Virginia statute repealing the receivability feature of the funding act of March 30, 1871, be upheld on the ground that such acts merely change the general law in regard to offsetting one claim against another. The right of a coupon holder under the funding act to pay his taxes in coupons was of the essence of his contract and cannot be taken away under the authority to regulate the law of offsets.[96] and authorizing such board to fund the outstanding obligation of the state, does not as to the holders of securities which were outstanding at the time of its enactment, create a contract between them and the state until they have accepted or acted upon its provisions. Consequently its repeal before the holders of such outstanding obligations have accepted and acted upon its provision does not impair the obligation of any contract as to them. Durkee v. Board of Liquidation, 103 U. S. 646, 26 L. Ed. 598.

94. Virginia coupon cases.—Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672, 26 L. Ed. 271; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 771, 27 L. Ed. 468; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185; Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 572, 578, 29 L. Ed. 735; Royall v. Virginia, 121 U. S. 102, 30 L. Ed. 883; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 668, 34 L. Ed. 304.

The Virginia funding act of March 30, 1871, which stipulated that the coupons should be receivable for all taxes and dues to the state; that is, for taxes and dues owing by the holders of the coupons, and for their full amount, and upon which pledge the holders of the bonds of the state surrendered them, and took new bonds for two-thirds of their amount, constituted a contract between the state and the holders of the bonds and coupons issued thereunder which it was beyond the power of the state to impair. Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672, 685, 26 L. Ed. 271.

"Any lawful holder of the tax-receivable coupons of the state issued under the act of 1871 or the subsequent act of 1879, who tenders such coupons in payment of taxes, debts, dues and demands due from him to the state, and continues to hold himself ready to tender the same in payment thereof, is entitled to be free from molestation in person or goods on account of such taxes, debts, dues or demands, and may vindicate such right in all lawful modes of redress—by suit to recover his property, by suit against the officer to recover damages for taking it, by injunction to prevent such taking where it would be attended with irremediable injury, or by a defense to a suit brought against him for his taxes or the other claims standing against him." McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 684, 34 L. Ed. 304.

The statement of the court in the Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 270, 29 L. Ed. 185, that a tender of the Virginia tax-receivable coupons in payment of the taxes was equivalent to the payment of the taxes, is not to be construed as extinguishing all claim to them on the part of the state, or as prohibiting the state from instituting an action, in disregard of such tender, so long as the taxpayer was permitted to plead and prove such tender, and the genuineness of the coupons tendered in defense to the action. The act of May 12, 1887, authorizing such suits to be brought in disregard of such tenders, but reserving to the taxpayer the right to plead and prove such tender, cannot, therefore, be considered as impairing any contract right of the holders of such coupons. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 496, 31 L. Ed. 216.

95. Detaching coupons from bonds did not deprive the holder of protection.—McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 34 L. Ed. 304, citing Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672, 26 L. Ed. 271; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185.

96. Cannot be justified as a set-off law.—Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185. See post, "Set-Offs," VII, E, 2.

Deprivation of right to plead tender of coupons in defense to proceeding to enforce taxes.—Under the Virginia Funding Act of March 30th, 1871, the right of holders of coupons to have the same received in payment of taxes was of the essence of the contract. When the taxpayer had tendered such coupon he had, in legal contemplation, performed his part of the contract and paid the debt which he owed to the state for taxes, beyond that every step taken for enforcing the payment of the tax in disregard of the tender was wholly without authority of law, and the owner of the coupons was entitled to plead such tender as a perfect defense to any further proceeding for enforcing the tax. A subsequent statute taking away this right

bb. Payment of School Tax.—The law requiring the school tax to be paid in lawful money of the United States was a valid law, notwithstanding the provisions of the act of 1871; it was sustained by the sections of the state constitution relating to the literary fund, which antedate the law of 1871 and override any provisions therein which are repugnant thereto.[97]

cc. Occupation and Business Taxes.—But the charges, or, as they are called in the statutes, assessments made by law as conditions precedent to obtaining licenses for pursuing a business or profession, are included within the meaning of the words, "taxes, debts, dues and demands due the state," as used in the act of March 30, 1871, and an act requiring such fees, charges or assessments to be paid in money is a violation of the state's contract with the bondholders.[98] But the rule is otherwise as to licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors.[99]

dd. License Fees as Condition to Sale of Coupons.—The statute requiring a prohibitive license fee as a condition to offering these tax-receivable coupons for sale, so far interfered with their negotiability that it was held void under the contract clause.[1]

ee. Manner of Establishing Genuineness of Coupons—aaa. Necessity for Production of Bond.—The act of the general assembly of Virginia which required the production of the bonds, from which the coupons tendered were cut, in order to establish the genuineness of the coupons at the time of offering the same in evidence in court, was an unreasonable condition, and violated the impaired the obligation of his contract and was unconstitutional and void. The question is not of the reasonableness of a remedy for a breach of the contract to receive the tendered coupons in payment of the tax; but whether the right to have them so received, and the use of that right as a defense against all further efforts to exact and compel payment of the tax, in denial and defiance of that right, can be taken away without impairing the obligation of his contract. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 301, 29 L. Ed. 185.

97. Medium of payment of school tax.—McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 713, 34 L. Ed. 304.

98. Medium of payment of license tax.—Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 572, 579, 29 L. Ed. 735; Sands v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 585, 29 L. Ed. 739; Royall v. Virginia, 121 U. S. 102, 30 L. Ed. 883. See post, "Licenses," III, U. See, generally, the title LICENSES.

Lawyer's license.—"The right of the plaintiff in error to pay his license tax as a lawyer in coupons, receivable for taxes, as described in his petition, is affirmed by the opinion and judgment in the case of Royall v. The State of Virginia, just decided, ante, 572. His remedy to have them received for verification and to recover back the money paid for his license, is secured to him by the terms of the act of January 14, 1882, which, for such purposes, was upheld by this court as a valid enactment in Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. Ed. 468." Sands v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 585, 587, 29 L. Ed. 739.

99. License to sell liquor.—"The requirement that the license fee shall be paid in lawful money of the United States does not, as contended, impair the obligation of the contract made by the state with the holders of the coupons referred to. Licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors are not only imposed for the purpose of raising revenue, but also for the purpose of regulating the traffic and consumption of these articles, and hence the state may impose such conditions for conducting said traffic as it may deem most for the public good." McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 709, 34 L. Ed. 304.

1. License fee as condition precedent to sale of coupons.—"The license required by the 65th section of the tax act of March 15, 1884, as amended by the act of May 23, 1887, was a very material interference with such negotiability. * * * The enormous license fee of one thousand dollars in towns of more than ten thousand inhabitants and of five hundred dollars in other counties and towns, with the exception of twenty per cent of the face value on every coupon sold, was absolutely prohibitory in its effect. A material quality of the coupons—their negotiability—was thereby destroyed." And the act was therefore unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of the contract. McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 698, 34 L. Ed. 304.

"It is manifest from the terms of the act of 1871, as well as that of 1879, under which tax-receivable coupons were authorized to be and were issued, that said coupons were intended to circulate from hand to hand, being expressly made payable to bearer, and being made receivable for taxes, debts, dues and demands due to the state. Any undue restraint upon the free negotiability of these instruments, therefore, would be a violation of the clear understanding and agreement of the parties." McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 698, 34 L. Ed. 304.

contract clause of the federal constitution.[2]

bbb. Forbidding Introduction of Expert Testimony.—And the prohibition of expert testimony in establishing the genuineness of coupons was in like manner unconstitutional. To prohibit it is to take from the holder of such instruments the only feasible means he has in his power to establish their validity.[3]

ff. Denial of Right of Action against Taxing Officer.—It was held that the auxiliary part of this act, which prohibits any action against the taxing officer for attempting to collect the taxes in disregard of a lawful tender of coupons, was also void.[4]

gg. When Right May Be Asserted.—But the refusal of the state of Virginia to accept tax receivable coupons in payment of taxes, and its action in instituting proceedings in disregard of such tenders against the taxpayers making the same as delinquent taxpayers, affords no ground of complaint to the holders of such coupons unless they have taxes to pay. The refusal of the state to receive coupons tendered by a taxpayer is no breach of its contract with a coupon holder who has no taxes to pay; and the depreciation of his coupons by reason of the state's refusal to receive coupons tendered by taxpayers is damnum absque injuria.[5] Nor is it material that the holder of such coupons has trans-

2. Statute requiring production of bond from which coupon was clipped, held to be unconstitutional.—"We have no hesitation in saying that the duty imposed upon the taxpayer of producing the bond from which the coupons tendered by him were cut, at the time of offering the same in evidence in court, was an unreasonable condition, in many cases impossible to be performed. If enforced it would have the effect of rendering valueless all coupons which have been separated from the bonds to which they were attached, and have been sold in the open market. It would deprive them of their negotiable character. It would make them fixed appendages to the bond itself. It would be directly contrary to the meaning and intent of the act of 1871 and the corresponding act of 1879. It would be so onerous and impracticable as not only to affect, but virtually destroy, the value of the instruments in the hands of the holder who had purchased them. We think that the requirement was unconstitutional." McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 694, 34 L. Ed. 304.

3. Statute excluding expert testimony unconstitutional.—McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 34 L. Ed. 304. See, generally, the title EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, ante, p. 200.

The Virginia statute of May 12, 1887, requires the commonwealth attorneys in the various counties of that state to institute actions in the name of the state of Virginia in disregard of tenders of tax-receivable coupons made by taxpayers in payment of taxes, against all such taxpayers as delinquent. On the trial of such actions it was required that the defendant should not only prove the fact of tender but the genuineness of the coupons tendered; that as part of that proof he was required to produce the bond from which such coupons was said to have been cut; and the defendant was not permitted to introduce expert testimony to prove the genuineness of the coupon tendered. Held, that this act did impair the obligation of the state's contract under the act of 1871 to receive the state's coupons in payment of taxes due the state. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 493, 31 L. Ed. 216.

4. Denial of right of action against taxing officer.—The Virginia act of January 14th, 1882, as amended by the act of March 13th, 1884, is altogether unconstitutional and void. Neither the substantive part of the act forbidding the receipt of the coupons in payment of taxes, and which constitutes its money design, nor the auxiliary part, which prohibits any action against the taxing officer for attempting to collect the taxes in disregard of a lawful tender of coupons, can be separated the one from the other. The money design of the act being unconstitutional, that which is merely auxiliary and incidental, cannot stand. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 304, 29 L. Ed. 185.

5. When right may be asserted.—In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 496, 31 L. Ed. 216. Accord: Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185.

State scrip which expresses upon its face that it is receivable in payment of taxes due the state, is a contract between the state and the person who has taxes to pay; and it cannot be said that the contract has been broken until it has been tendered for taxes due from a holder and been refused, for then the right of the holder is threatened by the refusal of the state to receive the same in payment of taxes unless he is in a situation to make a present tender for that purpose. The holder has no legal right to have his scrip received for taxes, unless he owes taxes for which it is received: and in order that it may be used for the payment of the taxes of another he must transfer it to the new holder, and that would divest him of all right to enforce the contract, ferred them with a warranty that the state shall receive them in payment of taxes; the state is no party to such a contract between a holder of the coupons and his assignee.[6]

(3) Right to Annex Conditions and Restrictions.—The state has a right to say, when it proposes a scheme for the compromise of its debts, what creditors shall be included.[7] And a provision in the funding act that no bond of questionable or doubtful obligation upon the state should be funded under the provisions of the former act, until such bond should be declared a legal and valid obligation against the state by some designated tribunal, is not unconstitutional as creating additional defenses against bona fide holders of bonds.[8]

b. Provisions Regarding Payment of Interest—(1) Conflicting Rights of Bond Holders.—Although the state, in authorizing an issuance of bonds, directs the levy and appropriation of a tax to meet the interest on the bonds and provide a sinking fund therefor, when such tax had already been set apart for the same purpose in the case of a prior issuance of bonds by the state, yet this does not impair the obligation of the contract between the state and such prior bond holders.[9]

(2) Reduction of Interest Rate by Subsequent Statute.—But where a state statute is passed providing for the funding of the state debt, in which it is agreed, in consideration of the exchange of the old bonds for new coupon ones since he would then be no longer a party, or would have no legal interest therein. Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52, 64, 29 L. Ed. 805; Williams v. Hagood, 98 U. S. 72, 25 L. Ed. 51; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 325, 29 L. Ed. 185.

But the mere discredit cast upon such scrip by the refusal of the tax collectors to receive the same, and the depreciation in value occasioned thereby are not sufficient to sustain the cause of action under the contract clause. Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52, 64, 29 L. Ed. 805; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 325, 29 L. Ed. 185.

6. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 496, 31 L. Ed. 216.

7. State may exclude some creditors from funding act.—Guaranty Co. v. Board of Liquidation, 105 U. S. 622, 26 L. Ed. 1106.

8. Louisiana statute construed not to be unconstitutional as creating new defense against bona fide purchaser of state bonds.—Act number 3 of 1874 of the legislature of Louisiana provided for funding the obligations of the state by an issue, if necessary, of $15,000,000 of consolidated bonds of the state of Louisiana. By act number 11 of 1875 it was provided that no bonds of questionable and doubtful obligation upon the state should be funded under the provisions of the former act until said bonds should first by final decree of the supreme court have been declared legal and valid obligations against the state of Louisiana, and that the same were issued in strict conformity to law, and not in violation of the constitution of this state or of the United States, and for a valid consideration. In this act certain canal bonds were specially designated as questioned and of doubtful validity. Plaintiff, claiming to be a bona fide holder of a portion of canal bonds and being desirous of funding its bonds under the provisions of the funding act, filed a petition in the state court, praying that the bonds held by it, "be decreed to have been issued in strict conformity to law, and not in violation of the constitution of this state or of the United States, and that they be declared legal and valid obligations against the state of Louisiana, and issued for a valid consideration." No other judgment was asked than such an one as was necessary under act number 11, of 1875, to secure the benefit of act number 3 of 1874—the funding act. It was held that the proceeding was not for the purpose of recovery upon the bonds, but merely to determine whether under the provisions of act number 11 of 1875 the plaintiff was entitled to have its bonds funded as provided by act number 3 of 1874; that any right of action upon the bonds remain just as it was, and subject only to such defenses as it would have been subject to prior to the enactment of act number 11, 1875; therefore said act was not unconstitutional as creating additional defenses against bona fide holder of bonds. Guaranty Co. v. Board of Liquidation, 105 U. S. 622, 26 L. Ed. 1106.

9. Conflicting rights of bond holders to interest.—The constitution of Louisiana, 1898, art. 317, ordered the sale of city bonds to pay the debts of a school board of one of its municipal corporations. The bonds were to be paid out of the proceeds of a 1 per cent ad valorem tax. Held, the rights of the takers of the new bonds were subject to the rights of prior bond holders and creditors where both were to be paid out of the same funds, and therefore the provision in the Louisiana constitution for the sale of the new bonds did not impair the obligation of a contract between the city and the holders of the old bonds. Board of Liquidation v. Louis-executed in pursuance of the act, that the state will levy and collect a tax to a certain amount, this act amounts to a formal contract with each and every holder of the bonds, which is impaired by a subsequent constitutional provision reducing the rate of interest.[10]

c. Writing State Bonds Off Its Books.—A state statute which requires a state treasurer to write certain state bonds off the books in his office and no longer carry them on the books as a debt of the state, does not impair the obligation of the state to pay the bonds therein mentioned, or the remedy to recover upon them. The obligation and the remedy remain precisely the same after the enactment of the law as before. Neither the one nor the other is in the slightest degree diminished or affected, for the law merely directs the change of entries on the books of the state treasury, and can by no possibility, in any respect whatever, deny, obstruct, impair or affect the rights of the complainant.[11]

d. Redemption and Repudiation of Its Void Securities.—Where a state issues treasury warrants, and discovering they are void, redeems them at their face value and cancels them, a subsequent statute of the state which repudiates or permits the repudiation of the payments impairs the obligation of the contract which the law raises from the transaction itself.[12] On the other hand, although it is entirely beyond the power of the state by an act of the legislature, or by an amendment to its constitution, to nullify bonds in the hands of a holder for value at the time when the statute or constitution was adopted; yet if when the constitutional amendment or statute was adopted, such bonds were still in the possession of the state, there is no objection to the state declaring them iana, 179 U. S. 622, 638, 639, 45 L. Ed. 347.

10. Reduction of rate of interest.—The legislature of Louisiana, at its session of 1874, by an act known as act number 3 of 1874, provided for an issue of bonds, to be designated as consolidated bonds of the state, for the purpose of consolidating and reducing the floating and bonded debt. By § 7 of this act a tax of five and a half miles on the dollar was thereby annually levied for the purpose of paying the interest and priciple of the consolidated bonds, the proceeds of said tax being thereby set apart and appropriated to that purpose and no other. It was further provided that this interest tax should be a continuing annual tax until the said consolidated bonds, principal and interest should be paid or redeemed, and that the interest appropriation should be a continuing annual appropriation during the same period, and that said levy and appropriation should authorize and make it the duty of certain officers named to collect said tax annually and pay said interest and redeem said bonds until the same should be fully discharged. By the constitution of the state adopted during that same year, this act was in all respects confirmed and declared to constitute a valid and binding contract between the state and persons holding the consolidated bonds issued thereunder. The constitution also further declared that the tax provided by the act should be annually collected and applied to the payment of the bonds principal and interest, without further legislation or appropriation in that behalf. On the first day of January, 1880, a new constitution of Louisiana went into effect containing a "Debt Ordinance," whereby it was provided that the interest upon the consolidated bonds should be reduced from seven per cent. to a scale ranging from two to four per cent., and reducing the tax levy to pay the same to a tax not exceeding three mills, as compared with the five and one-half mills provided by the act of 1874. It was held that the provisions of the act of 1874 and of the constitution of that year confirming and ratifying the same, constituting a contract between the state and the holders of the consolidated bonds which was impaired by the provisions of the debt ordinance of the constitution which went into effect on the first day of January, 1880, but that in as much as the state had made no provision for suit against itself in its own courts, and in as much as it cannot be sued in the courts of the United States by a citizen of another state, the bond holders were without remedy; that a suit against the officers charged with the collection and disbursement or appropriation of the special tax to the payment of the bonds was in substance a suit against the state itself; that the money collected under the special tax and already in the state treasury was the money of the state and a part of its general funds and that the court had no jurisdiction to coerce or control the state officers in the administration of the financial affairs of the state. Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. Ed. 448.

11. Writing state bonds off its books.—Smith v. Jennings, 206 U. S. 276, 51 L. Ed. 1061.

12. Redemption of void securities.—Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 91, 98, 99, 44 L. Ed. 673.

null and void.[13]

4. Auditing Claims against the State.—Since the power given the courts of a state to examine and recommend claims against it to the legislature is not a contract, the repeal of the right to have the claims examined and recommended, does not impair the obligation of a contract in the sense conveyed by those words as used in the constitution of the United States.[14] Nor is the decision by the court of last resort in the state that the right had been taken away an impairment of the contract, for the reason that the question whether or not such right has been repealed becomes purely a question of state law to be determined by the courts of the state.[15]

5. Release by State.—A statute of a state releasing "whatever interest" in certain real estate may "rightfully" belong to it, is not a law impairing the obligation of a contract in a case where an agent of the state, having by contract with it acquired an interest in half the lot, undertakes to sell and conveys the whole of it. In such case, and on an assumption that the agent does own one-half, the statute will be held to apply to the remaining half alone.[16]

6. Contracts of Loan.—States and cities, when they borrow money and contract to repay it with interest, are not acting as sovereignties. They come down to the level of ordinary individuals. Their contracts have the same meaning as that of similar contracts between private persons. Hence, instead of there being in the undertaking of a state or city to pay, a reservation of a sovereign right to withhold payment, the contract should be regarded as an assurance that such a right will not be exercised. A promise to pay, with a reserved right to deny or change the effect of the promise, is an absurdity.[17]

7. Land Grants[18]—a. In General.—A grant from the state is a contract executed, and the state has no right to impair the same or to divest rights acquired thereunder.[19] Therefore, where lands have been granted by a state for

13. When state may nullify its bonds.—Bier v. McGehee, 148 U. S. 137, 37 L. Ed. 397, following New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943.

Article 233 of the constitution of the state of Louisiana, which declares that the consolidated bonds of the state, held for the Agricultural and Mechanical College and the Louisiana Seminary fund are null and void is not repugnant to § 10, art. 1, of the constitution of the United States, prohibiting states from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts. Bier v. McGehee, 148 U. S. 137, 37 L. Ed. 397.

14. Auditing claims against state.—Baltzer v. North Carolina, No. 1, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed. 684.

15. Baltzer v. North Carolina, No. 1, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed. 684.

16. Release executed by state held valid.—Thus where an attorney at law, employed under a valid contract to recover escheated property for the benefit of the state, received, under his contract of employment, a one-half interest in the property, and afterwards undertook to sell and convey the whole, it was held that a subsequent statute, releasing to the persons from whom the property was recovered, whatever interest the state had therein, did not operate to impair the obligation of the contract under which the attorney acquired a half interest therein, but would be construed as applying only to the remaining half belonging to the state. Mulligan v. Corbins, 7 Wall. 487, 19 L. Ed. 278. See the title RELEASE.

17. Contracts of loan by state.—Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 445, 24 L. Ed. 760. See the title LOANS.

18. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

19. Grants of land by the state are contracts.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 656, 4 L. Ed. 629.

A grant whether by the state or by an individual, amounts to an extinguishment of the right of the grantor and implies a contract not to reassert that right. A party is also estopped by his own grant. Opinion of Story, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 682, 683, 4 L. Ed. 629.

A grant of land is a contract, the option of which is that the profits issuing from it shall enure to the benefit of the grantee. Marshall, C. J., delivering the opinion in Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 562, 7 L. Ed. 939.

Grants by the crown to colonial churches.—Even before the Dartmouth College case was decided, it was held by the supreme court that grants of land made by the crown to colonial churches were irrevocable, and that property purchased by, or devised to them, prior to the adoption of the constitution, could not be diverted to other purposes by the states which succeeded to the sovereign power of the colonies. Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch 43, 3 L. Ed. 650; Pawlett v. Clark, one purpose and an attempt is made by law to appropriate them to another, or to revoke the grant, this impairs the obligation of contracts.[20]

b. Statutes Prescribing the Mode or Form of Settling Titles.—But where a state grants lands, and makes no stipulation not to legislate further upon the subject, a statute which proceeds to prescribe a mode or form of settling titles, does not impair the force of the grant or take away any right under it.[21]

c. Statutes Annulling Grants.—A party to a contract cannot pronounce its own deed invalid, although such party be a sovereign state;[22] hence, a statute annulling conveyances is unconstitutional, because it is a law impairing the obligation of contracts, within the meaning of the constitution of the United States.[23] But a state may annul its prior grant and convey the same property to another, if such prior grant was void.[24]

d. Statutes Requiring Proof of Genuineness of Grants.—Judgments as well as grants obtained by fraud or collusion are void, and confer no vested title; and a state may justly require those who claim that their grants are not of this character to make proof of their genuineness in some proper tribunal before they can be entitled to a survey or patent under them, and may limit the time within which suits may be instituted.[25]

9 Cranch 292, 3 L. Ed. 735; Society for the Propagation of the Gospel v. New Haven, 8 Wheat. 464, 5 L. Ed. 662; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 661, 40 L. Ed. 838.

20. Appropriation of lands to other purposes in derogation of grant.—Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 12 L. Ed. 447, citing Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch 43, 3 L. Ed. 650; Pawlett v. Clark, 9 Cranch 292, 3 L. Ed. 735.

21. Statutes prescribing mode of settling titles.—Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679, approved in Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447.

The plaintiff in error claimed to recover the land in controversy, having derived his title under a patent granted by the state of New York to John Cornelius; he insisted that the patent created a contract between the state and the patentee, and his heirs and assigns, that they should enjoy the land, free from any legislative regulations to be made, in violence of the constitution of the state, and that an act passed by the legislature of New York, subsequent to the patent, did violate that contract; under that act, commissioners were appointed to investigate the contending titles to all the lands held under such patents, as that granted to John Cornelius, and by their proceeding, without the aid of a jury, the title of the defendants in error was established against and defeating the title under a deed made by John Cornelius, the patentee, and which deed was executed under the patent. Held, that this is not a case within the clause of the constitution of the United States, which prohibits a state from passing laws which shall impair the obligation of contracts; the only contract made by the state, is a grant to John Cornelius, his heirs and assigns, of the land; the patent contains no covenant to do, or not to do, any further act, in relation to the land; and the court are not inclined to create a contract by implication; the act of the legislature of New York does not attempt to take the land from the patentee, the grant remains in full effect; and the proceedings of the commissioners under the law, operated upon titles derived under, and not adversely to the patent. Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679, approved in Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 520, 27 L. Ed. 808.

22. Statutes annulling grants are void.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162.

23. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162, cited in Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 549, 18 L. Ed. 403.

24. State may annul prior void conveyances.—Where a land entry is, under the statute of the state and the judicial construction thereof by the courts of the state, voidable, but not void, because of the nonpayment of the purchase money at the time of the entry; a subsequent grantee or patentee of the same land, takes no contract or vested right as against a subsequent statute validating and confirming the title to the person making the original entry upon payment of the purchase money and the proof thereof. Williams v. Norris, 12 Wheat. 117, 126, 6 L. Ed. 571, citing Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162.

But had the entry stated in the foregoing paragraph been absolutely void, the title of the subsequent patentee would have constituted a valid contract as between the state and such patentee, and a statute validating the original void entry would have been understood as impairing the obligation thereof. Williams v. Norris, 12 Wheat. 117, 126, 6 L. Ed. 571.

25. Statutes requiring proof of genuineness of grants are valid.—League v. De Young, 11 How. 185, 203, 13 L. Ed. 657; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. 79, 14 L. Ed. 334.

e. Conflicting Grants.—Where the state makes a valid grant of land to one person, and afterwards issues a junior patent for the same land to other persons, no contract can be imputed to the state, nor can any vested rights, or, for that matter, contingent rights be acquired under such junior patent. Such junior patent is not vested with the attribute of hanging over a valid and indefeasible grant of the soil, waiting to vest upon the occurrence of the casualty of an escheat, or an indefinite failure of heirs; and a failure of heirs actually occurring after the lapse of one life does not aid the title of the junior patentee in any way.[26]

f. Particular Grants Considered—(1) Grants to Aid Railroad Construction.—A provision in the constitution of a state repealing grants of land to aid in the construction of railroads, impairs the obligation of contracts entered into between the state and the company prior to the adoption of the constitution.[27] But such a provision is valid of course as applied to statutes attempting to grant land and enacted after its adoption, or as applied to those companies which do not begin operations until after its adoption.[28]

(2) Grants of Rights in Navigable Waters.—A grant by the state to a corporation of rights and privileges in the navigable waters of the state is revocable, and such revocation impairs the obligation of no contract between the state and the grantee.[29]

26. Conflicting grants of land.—Governeur v. Robertson, 11 Wheat. 332, 360, 6 L. Ed. 488.

The state of Virginia having issued a land patent to an alien, afterwards issues a junior patent for same land. The original patent to the alien having been held valid, it was held that the junior patent for the same land conferred no rights upon the patentees. Therefore, the original patentee having died without heirs capable of taking the land, but the land having been conveyed by persons claiming it by descent from such original alien patentee, it was held that statutes confirming and validating the title acquired by the purchasers under such conveyance, impair no contract or vested rights of the persons claiming under the junior patent. Governeur v. Robertson, 11 Wheat. 332, 358, 360, 6 L. Ed. 488.

The land mentioned in the preceding paragraph being in that section of Virginia which was afterwards erected into the state of Kentucky, the Kentucky statute confirming and validating the title to the purchasers thereof were valid under the compact of 1789, between the states of Virginia and Kentucky. Governeur v. Robertson, 11 Wheat. 332, 360, 6 L. Ed. 488.

27. Repealing grants to railroads.—Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 243, 42 L. Ed. 1023, distinguishing Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 226, 42 L. Ed. 1017.

A grant of lands from the state to a railroad company, embodied in the charter of the company upon conditions that the company should do certain things, is a contract within the protection of the federal constitution and a state law or constitutional amendment revoking the grant and disposing of the land of other persons is an impairment of the obligation of the contract. Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 232, 21 L. Ed. 447.

Where a state law provides that any railroad company constructing its line within the state shall be entitled to so many sections of the public domain upon the completion of the agreed number of miles of track, those companies acting upon the faith of the statute and constructing the requisite number of miles of track acquire a contract or vested right to the land; and a constitutional provision adopted after they have so constructed their tracks and acquired such right to the land and which undertakes to revoke or repeal the statute granting the land, is, as to them, unconstitutional both as impairing the obligation of their contract and as depriving them of their property without due process of law. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 243, 42 L. Ed. 1023, holding § 6 of article 10 of the constitution of Texas of 1869 to be invalid in so far as it attempted to deprive those companies, which had already complied with the statute, of the lands to which they were entitled thereunder.

28. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 226, 42 L. Ed. 1017.

29. Grants of privileges in navigable waters may be revoked.—The state holds the title to the lands under the navigable waters of Lake Michigan, within its limits, in the same manner that the state holds title to soils under tidewater, by the common law, and that title necessarily carries with it control over the waters above them whenever the lands are subjected to use. But it is a title different in character from that which the state holds in lands intended for sale. It is different from the title which the United States hold in the public lands which are open to pre-emption and sale. It is a title held in trust for the people of the state that they may enjoy the navigation of the waters, carry on commerce over them, and have liberty of fishing therein freed from the obstruction or interference of private parties. The state can no more abdicate its trust over property in which the whole people are interested, like navigable waters and soils under them, so as to leave them entirely under the use and control of private parties, except in the instance of parcels mentioned for the improvement of the navigation and use of the waters, or when parcels can be disposed of without impairment of the public interest in what remains, than it can abdicate its police powers in the administration of government and the preservation of the peace. Hence any grant of this kind is necessarily revocable, and such revocation is not infringing upon the contract clause of the United States constitution. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 452, 453, 36 L. Ed. 1018.

(3) Swamp and Overflowed Land Acts.—There is no doubt that grants of swamp and overflowed lands by the United States to a state upon conditions constitutes, upon its acceptance by the state, a contract binding upon the state, which it cannot violate by legislation without infringement of the constitution. It has all the elements of a contract, namely, competent parties, proper subject matter, sufficient consideration, and consent of minds.[30] Thus an application to purchase swamp and overflowed lands in acceptance of an offer contained in a statute becomes a binding contract upon both parties as soon as it is accepted by the state and the terms and conditions mentioned in the act are performed by the other party. Accordingly a statute authorizing the cancellation of the certificates of sale violates the constitutional inhibition against impairing the obligation of contracts.[31] But the appropriation of the proceeds of the swamp and overflowed lands granted to the state by the act of congress commonly known as the Arkansas swamp act, which grant was made on condition that the proceeds of the lands should be applied, as far as necessary, in reclaiming the land by means of levees and drains, rests solely in the good faith of the state. The discretion in disposing of them is not controlled by that condition, as neither a contract nor a trust following the lands was thereby created.[32]

The soil under the public navigable waters of East New Jersey belongs to the state and not to the proprietors. The supreme court of the United States so decided in the case of Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 10 L. Ed. 997, and the principle covers the case where land has been reclaimed from the water under an act of the legislature. Therefore, a legislative grant of such lands is not an impairment of the obligation of the contract of one claiming title thereof under the proprietors. Den v. Jersey Co., 15 How. 426, 14 L. Ed. 757. See post, "Laws Concerning Civil Institutions or Governmental Subjects." IV. See the title NAVIGABLE WATERS.

30. Grants of swamp lands constitute contracts.—McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall. 143, 18 L. Ed. 314.

31. Contracts to purchase swamp and overflowed lands.—By an act of the legislature of the state of Oregon of October 26, 1870, provision was made for the sale of swamp and overflowed lands belonging to the state to persons making application to purchase any tract or tracts thereof, such applicant being required to pay twenty per cent. of the purchase price within ninety days after the publication of the notice of the completion, approval and filing of maps and description provided for in § 2 of said act, and it being further provided that no patent should issue therefor until after proof of reclamation and payment of the balance of the purchase money. Held, that this constituted an offer of sale upon the part of the state, the acceptance of which by the filing of an application to purchase certain described tracts and the payment of twenty per cent. of the days after the publication of the notice above mentioned, completed a contract between the state and the applicant which could not be impaired by the acts of January 17, 1879, and February 16, 1886, providing for the cancellation of the certificates of sale and the resale of all lands upon which twenty per cent. of the purchase price had not been paid prior to January 17, 1879; that it was immaterial that the twenty per cent. of the purchase price was not paid until after January 17, 1879, provided it was paid within ninety days after the publication of notice as required by the act of October 26, 1870, that as to an applicant who had made such payment within such time, said acts were unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of his contract. Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 25, 35 L. Ed. 363.

32. Construction of Arkansas swamp act.—Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. Ed. 569, following Mills County v. Railroad Companies, 107 U. S. 557, 27 L. Ed. 578, approved in United States v. Louisiana, 127 U. S. 182, 190, 32 L. Ed. 66.

The states may make binding irrepealable contracts exempting these lands from taxation.[33]

g. Construction of Grants.—"No grant can be raised by mere inference or presumption, and the right granted must be clearly defined."[34]

h. Escheat Statutes.—A statute providing for escheat proceedings is not a statute impairing the obligation of any contract involved in the grant by which the land was held.[35]

8. Grant of State Funds in Form of Endowments.—"The government has no power to revoke a grant, even of its own funds, when given to a private person, or a corporation, for special uses. It cannot recall its own endowments, granted to any hospital or college, or city or town, for the use of such corporations. The only authority remaining to the government is judicial, to ascertain the validity of the grant, to enforce its proper uses, to suppress frauds, and, if the uses are charitable, to secure their regular administration, through the

33. Exemptions of swamp lands from taxation.—Where a state, in order to promote the drainage and sale of certain swamp lands belonging to it and which it was desirous of reclaiming, has passed by way of encouraging purchasers, a law that such lands "shall be exempt from taxation for the term of ten years," and issued transferable scrip receivable for them, a repeal of the exemption act, so far as it concerns lands paid for either before or after the repeal, with scrip issued before the repeal, impairs a contract of the state with the holders of such scrip. McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall. 143, 18 L. Ed. 314. See, generally, the title TAXATION.

34. Grant cannot be raised by inference.—Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. Ed. 773; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. Ed. 1036; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 561, 25 L. Ed. 710. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 677.

Grants from the public are strictly construed in favor of the public, and grants of a privilege are not ordinarily to be taken as grants of an exclusive privilege. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. Ed. 773; Turnpike Co. v. State, 3 Wall. 210, 18 L. Ed. 180; Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co., 141 U. S. 67, 35 L. Ed. 622; Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. Ed. 963; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 696, 41 L. Ed. 1165.

"The contract must be shown to exist. There is no presumption in its favor. Every reasonable doubt should be resolved against it. Where it exists, it is to be rigidly scrutinized, and never permitted to extend either in scope or duration beyond what the terms of the concession clearly require." There must have been a deliberate intention clearly manifested on the part of the state to grant what is claimed. Such a purpose cannot be inferred from equivocal language. Province Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. Ed. 939; Gilman v. Sheboygan, 2 Black 510, 17 L. Ed. 305; Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 527, 22 L. Ed. 805; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 561, 25 L. Ed. 710.

No legislative grant can be held void, on account of its alleged violation of a former grant, which is not definite in its object, the thing granted, and its extent. If it is so imperfectly described as to leave it doubtful whether the subject matter of both grants is the same, the doubt operates conclusively in favor of the power of the legislature to make the second grant. This consideration alone leads to the rule for construing public grants of property or franchise even more strictly than in England; the reason exists in the provisions of the constitution which prohibits any legislative violation of the obligation of a contract; whereas in England, parliament can revoke or annul a grant of property or power. Opinion of Baldwin, J., in Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 583m, 9 L. Ed. 773.

35. Escheat statutes held to be valid.—When a man dies, the legislature is under no constitutional obligation to leave the title to his property, real or personal, in abeyance for an indefinite period; but it may provide for promptly ascertaining, by appropriate judicial proceedings, who has succeeded to his estate. If such proceedings are had, after actual notice by service of summons to all known claimants, and constructive notice by publication to all possible claimants who are unknown, the final determination of the right of succession, either among private persons, as in the ordinary administration of estates, or between all persons and the state, as by inquest of office or similar process to determine whether the estate has escheated to the public, is due process of law; and a statute providing for such proceedings and determination does not impair the obligation of any contract contained in the grant under which the former owner held, whether that grant was from the state or from a private person. Hamilton v. Brown, 161 U. S. 256, 275, 40 L. Ed. 691. See the title ESCHEAT, vol. 5, p. 897.

means of equitable tribunals, in cases where there would otherwise be a failure of justice."[36]

9. Right of State to Convey Its Rights.—Where a state, by an act of its legislature, has reserved to itself an "absolute" right to certain property of a corporation existing under a charter of the state, the state may grant its rights to third parties without impairing any of the rights of the corporation.[37]

10. Repeal of Statute Making Certain Securities Receivable for Debts—a. In General.—A state statute which repeals a prior statute under which certain funds and securities had theretofore been receivable in payment of debts, impairs the obligation of pre-existing contracts.[38] For example, where the charter of a state bank makes its paper receivable for all debts due the state, this provision cannot be repealed as to bills in circulation at the time.[39] Nor

36. Recall of endowments made by a state.—Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 698, 4 L. Ed. 629.

37. Right of state to convey its "absolute" rights.—An act of the general assembly of South Carolina authorized the board of directors of the South Carolina penitentiary, which had acquired the ownership of a canal under a previous act, to transfer the property to the board of trustees of the Columbia Canal, and required the completion of the canal and a reservation to the state, free of charge, on the line of the canal, of 500 horse power of water power, with a further proviso that the right of the state to the free use of the said 500 horse power should be absolute, and any mortgage, assignment, or other transfer of the said canal by the said board of trustees, or their assignees, should always be subject to this right. In § 21 this reservation is described as a provision for the state, with 500 horse power of water power "at" the penitentiary. Held, that, in providing the right of the state should be absolute, it was intended to permit the board of directors to do exactly what was done in this case, i. e., to lease such portion of the 500 horse power as was not required for the individual use of the penitentiary, and that such action did not impair the obligation of any contract as between the state and a waterworks company to which it conveyed the canal. Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric St. R., etc., Co., 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. Ed. 521.

38. Repeal of statute making certain securities receivable for debts.—Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 17 L. Ed. 776.

39. Repeal of statute making bank paper receivable for debts.—Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705; Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. Ed. 610; Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. 454, 24 L. Ed. 1071; South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433, 25 L. Ed. 937; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 663, 40 L. Ed. 838.

Contract to receive notes issued by state bank.—In 1836, the legislature of Arkansas chartered a bank, the whole of the capital of which belonged to the state, and the president and directors of which were appointed by the general assembly. The 28th section of the charter provided, "that the bills and notes of said institution shall be received in all payments of debts due to the state of Arkansas." Held, that the undertaking of the state to receive the notes of the bank constituted a contract between the state and the holders of the notes, which the state was not at liberty to break, and that the act of 1845 repealing the said 28th section was as to the notes issued before the repeal, unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of the contract. (Four justices dissenting.) Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383, reaffirmed in Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 21, 17 L. Ed. 776; Paup v. Drew, 10 How. 218, 13 L. Ed. 394; Trigg v. Drew, 10 How. 224, 13 L. Ed. 397, approved in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 719, 34 L. Ed. 304.

The provision in § 12 of the charter of 1838, of the bank of Tennessee, "that the bills or notes of said corporation, originally made payable or which shall have become payable on demand, in gold or silver coin, shall be receivable at the treasury of the state, or by all tax collectors and other public officers, in all payments for taxes or other moneys due to the state," made a contract on the part of the state with all persons that the state would receive for all payments for taxes or other moneys due to it, all bills of the bank lawfully issued, where the section remained in force. Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. Ed. 370, following Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383. See Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 383, 20 L. Ed. 414, distinguishing Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. Ed. 370.

A general statutory provision that the state will receive for public use the paper of banks generally, unconnected with the state is not analogous to the case of a special charter provision that the notes issued by a bank, the capital stock of which is owned wholly by the state, shall be received in payment of all debts due the state. In the first case it is a question of public policy, influenced by considerations of general conveyances, which may be changed at the discretion of the could such notes of the bank be refused because issued by it during the war between the states,[40] unless it was under the control of the secession government.[41] This guaranty is not a personal one, existing only for the benefit of the first holder, but attaches to the notes so issued, as much as if written on the back thereof. It goes with the notes everywhere as long as the guaranty lasts.[42] But notes issued by the bank after the repeal are not within the contract and may be refused by the state.[43]

b. Where There Is an Agreement as to Medium of Payment.—And although the pledge of the state to receive the notes of the bank in payment of all debts due to it in its own right is a contract which it could not violate, yet, where the state sold lands which were held by it in trust for the benefit of a seminary, and the terms of the sale were, that the debtor should pay in specie or its equivalent, such debtor was not at liberty to tender the notes of the bank in payment.[44] And this was true, although the money to be received from the debtor was intended by the legislature to be put into the bank, and to constitute a part of its capital. The fund belonged to the state only as a trustee, and therefore was not, within the meaning of the charter, a debt due to the state.[45] By the terms of sale, also, to pay "in specie or its equivalent," the notes of the bank were executed.[46]

11. Grants of Exclusive Privileges.—See post, "Contracts of Municipalities," III, J.

a. In General.—Where there is nothing in the constitution and laws of a state which prohibits the granting of exclusive franchises, such grant will constitute a contract inviolable under the contract clause of the federal constitution.[47] And legislature. In the other it is the case of a contract incorporated into the charter imposing an obligation on the state to receive in payment of all debts due to it, the paper of the bank owned by the state, and whose notes are circulated for its benefit. In the latter case the contract is between the state and the holders of the notes who have received the same upon faith of the promise of the state to accept them in payment of all obligations to the state. Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 207, 13 L. Ed. 383.

40. Bank notes issued during Civil War.—The state of Tennessee having, in 1838, organized the Bank of Tennessee, agreed, by a clause in the charter, to receive all its issues of circulating notes in payment of taxes; but, by a constitutional amendment adopted in 1865, it declared the issues of the bank during the insurrectionary period void, and forbade their receipt for taxes. Held, that the amendment was in conflict with the provision of the constitution of the United States against impairing the obligation of contracts. Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. 454, 24 L. Ed. 1071.

The twelfth section of the charter of the Bank of Tennessee constituted a contract between every holder of the circulating notes of the bank and the state of Tennessee, that the state would receive the notes in payment of taxes at their par value. Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. 454, 24 L. Ed. 1071; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. Ed. 370.

41. Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 45, 19 L. Ed. 370.

42. Privilege not a personal one.—Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. Ed. 370.

Therefore a tender made in 1847, of notes issued by the bank prior to the repealing law of 1845, was good to satisfy a judgment obtained against the debtor by the state; and it makes no difference whether or not the debtor had the notes in his possession at the time when the repealing act was passed, since the contract or guaranty of the state was to receive them from the person in whosoever hands they might be. Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383; Paup v. Drew, 10 How. 218, 13 L. Ed. 394; Trigg v. Drew, 10 How. 224, 13 L. Ed. 397.

43. Retrospective operation of statute.—Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383; Paup v. Drew, 10 How. 218, 13 L. Ed. 394; Trigg v. Drew, 10 How. 224, 13 L. Ed. 397.

44. Where there is an agreement as to medium of payment.—Paup v. Drew, 10 How. 218, 13 L. Ed. 394; Trigg v. Drew, 10 How. 224, 13 L. Ed. 397.

45. Paup v. Drew, 10 How. 218, 13 L. Ed. 394; Trigg v. Drew, 10 How. 224, 13 L. Ed. 397.

46. Paup v. Drew, 10 How. 218, 13 L. Ed. 394; Trigg v. Drew, 10 How. 224, 13 L. Ed. 397.

47. When grants of exclusive privileges are inviolable.—New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 683, 685, 29 L. Ed. 510; St. Tammany Waterworks v. New Orleans Waterworks, 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. Ed. 563. See the mere reservation of a right by the state to alter, amend or repeal all charters and grants of and to incorporations, unless the contrary intent be therein expressed, will not confer upon the state the right to impair the obligation of a contract subsequently made and entered into between the state and a private corporation, where the act granting its charter is not a clear expression of the legislative intent that the company's charter should not be amended or repealed, but that the company should enjoy and exercise an exclusive privilege.[48] But if a state grant no exclusive privileges to one company which it has incorporated, it impairs no contract by incorporating a second one which itself largely manages and profits by, to the injury of the first.[49] Moreover, grants of special privileges are to be most strongly construed in favor of the public and where the privilege claimed is doubtful nothing is to be taken by mere implication as against public rights.[50] Thus, when an act of the legislature is fairly susceptible of being construed as a grant of certain franchises and rights in perpetuity or for a term of years, and the obligation of the contract will be impaired by one construction and not by the other, the construction most favorable to the state must be adopted, as grants of property franchises or privileges by the state are strictly construed in favor of the public, and whatever is not unequivocally granted is withheld.[51]

the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 681.

"If the state can, by contract, restrict the exercise of her power to construct and maintain highways, bridges, and ferries, by granting to a particular corporation the exclusive right to construct and operate a railroad within certain lines and between given points, or to maintain a bridge or operate a ferry over one of her navigable streams within designated limits; if she may restrict the exercise of the power of taxation, by granting exemption from taxation to particular individuals and corporations; it is difficult to perceive upon what ground we can deny her authority—when not forbidden by her own organic law—in consideration of money to be expended and important services to be rendered for the promotion of the public comfort, the public health, or the public safety, to grant a franchise, to be exercised exclusively by those who thus do for the public what the state might undertake to perform either herself or by subordinate municipal agencies." New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 665, 29 L. Ed. 516.

Exclusive privileges—Construction—Presumption against surrender of supervisory control by government.—The object and end of all government is to promote the happiness and prosperity of the community by which it is established; and it can never be assumed that the government intended to diminish its power of accomplishing the end for which it was created; the state is never to be presumed to have surrendered this power; because like the taxing power, the whole community has an interest in preserving it undiminished. This presumption is not confined to the taxing power but whenever any power of the state is said to be surrendered or diminished the rule of construction must be the same Thus, that a state has surrendered for seventy years its power of improvement and public accommodation, in a great and important line of travel, along which a vast number of its citizens must daily pass is not to be presumed in a case in which the deliberate purpose of the state to abandon it does not appear. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. Ed. 773

48. Effect of reservation to annul and alter charters.—Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. Ed. 510. See, generally, the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 677.

49. Grants of rights to competing companies do not impair in absence of exclusive privilege.—Turnpike Co. v. State, 3 Wall. 210, 18 L. Ed. 180, followed in Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 269, 36 L. Ed. 963, Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 391, 30 L. Ed. 1059.

50. Construction of grant of exclusive privileges.—"In considering this contract we are to remember the well-established rule in this court which requires grants of franchises and special privileges to be most strongly construed in favor of the public, and that where the privilege claimed is doubtful nothing is to be taken by mere implication as against public rights. This rule has been applied to a series of contracts in waterworks and lighting cases, and we have no disposition to detract from its force and effect. And unless the city has excluded itself in plain and explicit terms from competition with the waterworks company during the period of this contract it cannot be held to have done so by mere implication. The rule, as applied to waterworks contracts, was last announced in this court in Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 L. Ed. 353, decided at this term. Citing previous cases." Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 469, 50 L. Ed. 1102.

51. Construction to uphold not to de-

b. Bridges—(1) In General.—When no clause exists in a charter for a bridge against authorizing other bridges near at suitable places, it is no violation of the terms or obligations of the contract to authorize another.[52] But this does not mean that a state legislature, by the use of appropriate language, may not grant exclusive privileges to a bridge company. In numerous cases it has been held by the federal supreme court that the grant by a state to a bridge company of the exclusive rights to build and maintain bridges across rivers is a contract stroy.—Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 36 L. Ed. 537.

The legislature gave a mining company a right to mine phosphate in a certain river for twenty-one years. Later the legislature proposed modifications of this contract which were accepted by the mining company. The act provided when these modifications were accepted the mining company should have the exclusive privilege of mining phosphate "so long as and no longer" than it complied with these conditions. At the expiration of the twenty-one years the legislature took these phosphate lands and placed them in the control of a board of phosphate commissioners with power to lease them to others. The latter statute giving the mining company the right to mine phosphate was construed with the former statute and was declared to be a grant for twenty-one years and not in perpetuity so that the act of the legislature taking the phosphate lands from the mining company did not impair the obligation of the contract. Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 36 L. Ed. 537. See the title MINES AND MINERALS.

52. Grant of exclusive privileges to bridge companies.—Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447, citing Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. Ed. 773. See the titles BRIDGES, vol. 3, p. 516; CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 682.

An act incorporating a bridge company, in the usual form, and with privileges such as are commonly given corporations of that kind, for the purpose of building a bridge, and establishing certain rates of toll which the company is authorized to take, does not confer any exclusive privilege or franchise upon such company, and is not a contract that the legislature will not authorize the construction of another toll bridge alongside of the former, nor even that the legislature will not authorize the construction of a free bridge and thereby destroy the value of toll privileges of the former. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. Ed. 773.

Charles River Bridge case.—Thus in 1650, the legislature of Massachusetts granted to Harvard College the liberty and power to dispose of a ferry by lease or otherwise, from Charlestown to Boston, passing over Charles River; the right to set up a ferry between these places had been given by government, under the authority of the court of assistance, by an order dated November 9, 1636, to a particular individual; and was afterwards leased successively to others, they having the privilege of taking tolls regulated in the grant; and when, in 1650, the franchise of this ferry was granted to the college, the rights of the lessees in the same had expired; under the grant, the college continued to hold the ferry by its lessees and received the profits therefrom until 1785, when the legislature of Massachusetts incorporated a company to build a bridge over Charles River, where the ferry stood, granting them tolls; the company to pay to Harvard College £200 a year, during the charter, for forty years, which was afterwards extended to seventy years; after which the bridge was to become the property of the commonwealth. The bridge was built under this charter and the corporation received tolls allowed by the law; always keeping the bridge in order and performing all that was enjoined on them to do. In 1828, the legislature of Massachusetts incorporated another company for the erection of another bridge, the Warren Bridge over Charles River from Charlestown to Boston, allowing the company to take tolls; commencing in Charlestown, near where Charles River Bridge commenced, and terminating in Boston, about 800 feet from the termination of the Charles River Bridge; the bridge was to become free after a few years, and had actually become free. Travelers, who formerly passed over the Charles River Bridge from Charlestown Square, then passed over the Warren Bridge and thus the Charles River Bridge Company were deprived of the tolls, they would have otherwise received; the value of the franchise granted by the act of 1785, was thus entirely destroyed. The proprietors of the Charles River Bridge filed a bill, in the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, against the proprietors of the Warren Bridge, first for an injunction to prevent the erection of the bridge and afterwards for general relief; stating that the act of the legislature of Massachusetts authorizing the building of the Warren Bridge, was an act impairing the obligation of a contract, and therefore repugnant to the constitution of the United States; the supreme court of Massachusetts dismissed the bill of the complainants; and the case was brought by writ of error to the supreme court of the United States, under the provisions of the 25th section of the judiciary act of 1789. It was held that within the meaning of the federal constitution.[53] A railway viaduct, however, is not a bridge; and so a legislative authorization to a railroad to build a viaduct does not impair the obligation of a pre-existing exclusive privilege granted to a bridge company.[54]

(2) Tolls and Charges.—Where the legislature in prescribing the tolls that may be charged by bridge companies, agrees not to reduce them so as to bring the net profits of the corporation below a certain amount, this amounts to a contract within the meaning of the federal constitution.[55]

c. Ferries.—A general act forbidding county courts to license additional fer-while the act incorporating the proprietors of the Charles River Bridge constituted a contract between the states and the persons incorporated, and their successors, such contract was to be strictly construed in favor of the public; that such contract did not confer upon the Charles River Bridge Company any exclusive rights of taking tolls in perpetuity, or for any less period, nor prohibit the state from authorizing the construction of another bridge, either free or toll bridge along side the former. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. Ed. 773.

Toll bridges.—Where, under the laws of the state, the power to grant franchises to establish toll bridges upon public highways where they cross rivers is vested in the courts of law, but without power to grant exclusive franchises, such courts cannot bind the public with respect to future necessities of that character and it is competent for the legislature to authorize the erection and maintenance of another bridge within the limits of the original grant. Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 25 L. Ed. 921.

53. When privileges exclusive.—Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co., 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. Ed. 571; The Binghampton Bridge, 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. Ed. 137.

The statute of the legislature of New Jersey, passed A. D. 1790, by which that state gave power to certain commissioners to contract with any persons for the building of a bridge over the Hackensack River; and by the same statute enacted that the "said contract should be valid on the parties contracting as well as on the state of New Jersey;" and that it should not be "lawful" for any person or persons whatsoever to erect "any other bridge over or across the said river for ninety-nine years," is a contract, whose obligation the state can pass no law to impair. Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co., 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. Ed. 571.

54. Railway viaduct not a bridge.—A railway viaduct, if nothing but a structure made so as to lay iron rails thereon, upon which engines and cars may be moved and propelled by steam, not to be connected with the shore on either side of said river, except by a piece of timber under each rail, and in such a manner, as near as may be, so as to make it impossible for man or beast to cross said river upon said structure, except in railway cars (the only roadway between said shores and said structure being two or more iron rails, two and a quarter inches wide, four and a half inches high, laid and fastened upon said timber four feet ten inches asunder), is not a "bridge" within the meaning of the act of New Jersey, passed A. D. 1790, and just mentioned; Catron, J., dissenting. And the act of assembly of that same state, passed A. D. 1860, authorizing a company to build a railway, with the necessary viaduct, over the Hackensack, does not impair the obligation of the contract made by the aforesaid act of 1790. Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co., 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. Ed. 571, cited in New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 662, 29 L. Ed. 516.

55. Tolls to be charged by bridge companies.—By an act approved February 17, 1846, the Covington and Cincinnati Bridge Company was made a body corporate and politic in the state of Kentucky with authority to its president and directors to fix the rate of toll for passing over the bridge proposed to be erected across the Ohio River between the cities of Covington, Kentucky, and Cincinnati, Ohio, subject to the condition that the said president and directors should, from time to time reduce the rates of tolls so that the net profits of the said bridge should not exceed fifteen per cent per annum after making deductions for repairs and certain other charges. By an act of the legislature of Ohio enacted March 9, 1849, the same company was made a body corporate and politic of that state, with the same franchises, rights and privileges, and subject to the same duties and liabilities, as under the original act of incorporation in the state of Kentucky. The company having constructed its bridge pursuant to these statutes, it was held that the Kentucky statute of March 31, 1890, prescribing a maximum rate of toll insufficient to create a net profit of fifteen per cent per annum, was unconstitutional as impairing the original agreement between the bridge company and the two states. Per the minority opinion of Justices Fuller, Field, Gray, and White concurring specially with the judgment in Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 223, 38 L. Ed. 962, and with Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 224, 38 L. Ed. 970. See the title TURNPIKES AND TOLLROADS.

ries is not infringed by a subsequent act giving special right to a single county court to establish a particular ferry. No promise made by the legislature by the first act is broken by the second.[56]

d. Grants to Gas and Electric Light Companies—(1) In General.—Where a state legislature grants to a gas company the right to supply a city or town with such quantities of gas as may be needed, but the right to revoke, alter or repeal corporate franchises is reserved, a subsequent statute authorizing cities and villages to erect gas works or otherwise supply themselves with gas, cannot be regarded as impairing the obligation of the contract, whatever may be the motive of the legislature, or however harshly such legislation may operate in the particular case, upon the corporation or parties affected by it.[57]

(2) When Grant Exclusive.—But in several cases grants by the state of exclusive privileges to private corporations to supply gas to municipalities, have been held to be contracts protected by the federal constitution against state legislation to impair them, after performance by the grantee.[58] And a clause in

56. Ferry franchises.—Williams v. Wingo, 177 U. S. 601, 604, 44 L. Ed. 905. See the title FERRIES, ante, p. 274.

The legislature of Virginia of March 5, 1840, enacted that "it shall not be lawful for the court of any county to grant leave to establish a ferry over any watercourse within one-half mile, in a direct line, of any other ferry legally established over the same watercourse." Held, this act was one of general legislation, and subject to repeal by the general assembly; therefore, it did not tie the hands of the legislature, or prevent it from authorizing another ferry within a half mile whenever in its judgment it saw fit. Williams v. Wingo, 177 U. S. 601, 602, 603, 44 L. Ed. 905, following Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. Ed. 1043, and distinguishing The Binghamton Bridge, 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. Ed. 137.

Where a ferry was licensed, the license conferring no exclusive privilege, a subsequent general law prohibiting the courts of the different counties from licensing a ferry within half a mile in a direct line from an established ferry, was a gratuitous proceeding on the part of the legislature, which had in it nothing of the nature of a contract. Such general law was repealable at the pleasure of the legislature without such repeal being obnoxious to the prohibition contained in the contract clause of the constitution. Wheeling Bridge Co. v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 138 U. S. 287, 292, 34 L. Ed. 967.

57. Grants to gas and electric light companies.—Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. Ed. 963; Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341. See the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 679; GAS, ante, p. 545.

Where there is no contract right to maintain an exclusive gas plant, either by charter or express contract, or by virtue of a law providing for municipal construction in case of conditions broken and forfeiture therefrom; and where, moreover, the state constitution retains in the legislature the right to amend or repeal; held, there can be no impairment of contract obligation by a subsequent law authorizing municipalities to build whenever it be deemed expedient. Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 266, 36 L. Ed. 963.

A municipality under authority of § 2486 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio is given the power to purchase, or erect its own gas and power plant. And the fact that an existing plant is now supplying the town with gas and power, under provisions of acts of May 1, 1852, and March 11, 1853, does not make the above statute (§ 2486) an infringement of the contract clause of the constitution of the United States. Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. Ed. 963.

If the statute under which the plaintiff became incorporated be construed as giving it the exclusive privilege, so long as it met the requirements of law, of supplying gas light to the city of Hamilton and its inhabitants by means of pipes laid in the public ways, there is no escape from the conclusion that such a grant, as respects, at least, its exclusive character, was subject to the power of the legislature, reserved by the state constitution, of altering or revoking it. Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 270, 36 L. Ed. 963.

58. Grants to gas and electric light companies held exclusive.—New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. Ed. 510.

"The grant of a right to supply gas or water to a municipality and its inhabitants through pipes and mains laid in the streets, upon condition of the performance of its service by the grantee, is the grant of a franchise vested in the state in consideration of the performance of a public service, and after performance by the grantee, is a contract protected by the constitution of the United States against state legislation to impair it. New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., a state constitution which declares that "all freemen when they form a social compact are equal, and that no man or set of men are entitled to exclusive, separate public emoluments or privileges from the community, but in consideration of public services," does not prohibit the state from granting to a private corporation the exclusive privileges of manufacturing and distributing gas for public and private use, by means of pipes and mains laid under the streets and other public ways of a municipality, because the services which the gas company undertakes to perform in consideration of the exclusive privileges granted to it, are public services, within the meaning of such provision.[59] But where a corporation is by its charter authorized to engage in a business affecting the public interest, and given exclusive privileges which tend to establish a monopoly, such grant of exclusive privileges does not become a contract or vested right, so as to be protected from impairment by the state or federal constitution, until the grantee has, to say the least, begun preparations or made some expenditures to perform the service to the public which constitutes the consideration for the grant of the privilege.[60]

e. Turnpike Companies.—Where no exclusive privileges have been conferred upon a turnpike company, either in express terms or by necessary implication, the legislature may constitutionally grant a competing privilege or right to another.[61]

115 U. S. 650, 660, 29 L. Ed. 516; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525; St. Tammany Waterworks v. New Orleans Waterworks, 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. Ed. 563; Crescent City Gas Light Co. v. New Orleans Gas Light Co., 27 La. Ann. 138, 147." Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 9, 43 L. Ed. 341.

The grant to a gas company, under Kentucky act of Jan. 22, 1869, of the exclusive privilege of erecting and establishing gas works in the city of Louisville during the continuance of the city charter, and of vending coal gas lights, and supplying that municipality and its people with gas by means of pipes, mains and conduits placed in and under its streets and public ways, constitutes a contract between the state and that company, the obligation of which was impaired by a subsequent grant of the same privilege to another company. Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. Ed. 510.

59. Construction of the Kentucky bill of rights.—Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. Ed. 510, following New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516; New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644, 24 L. Ed. 521.

60. Rule in case of nonuser of corporate franchises.—The Tallahassee Gas & Electric Light Company was incorporated pursuant to the laws of Florida Dec. 20, 1887, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating gas works and electric light works in the city of Tallahassee, and with the apparently exclusive privilege of supplying these products within the city. Held, that aside from the question of whether such exclusive privilege was authorized, there is no impairment of the obligation of contract when the company has failed to use its privilege as to the electric light supply during six years, and there is no other consideration for that portion of the contract, if the city meantime begins the construction of its own plant. Capital City Light, etc., Co. v. Tallahassee, 186 U. S. 401, 46 L. Ed. 1219.

61. Turnpike companies.—In Turnpike Co. v. State, 3 Wall. 210, 213, 18 L. Ed. 180, the state of Maryland incorporated a company with power to construct a turnpike between Baltimore and Washington; and subsequently incorporated a railroad company, with authority to construct a railroad between the same cities, the line of which ran near to and parallel with the turnpike. One of the questions in the case was, whether the last act impaired the obligation of the contract with the turnpike company, it appearing that the construction of the railroad had rendered it impracticable for the company, out of its diminished income, to maintain the turnpike in proper order. This court said: "The difficulty of the argument in behalf of the turnpike company, and which lies at the foundation of the defense, is, that there is no contract in the charter of the turnpike company that prohibited the legislature from authorizing the construction of the rival railroad. No exclusive privileges had been conferred upon it, either in express terms, or by necessary implication; and hence whatever may have been the general injurious effects and consequences to the company, from the construction and operation of the rival road, they are simply misfortunes which may excite our sympathies, but are not the subject of legal redress." Approved in Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 269, 36 L. Ed. 963. Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 664, 40 L. Ed. 838. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 682.

By an act of the legislature of Illinois, approved Feb. 13, 1847, a turnpike com-

f. Grants of Privileges to Water Companies—(1) In General.—A grant of an exclusive privilege to a water company to supply water to a municipality and its inhabitants, when accepted and acted upon by the water company, is likewise a contract protected by the contract clause of the federal constitution.[62] And this rule applies as well where the franchises are bestowed upon corporations by the municipal authorities as where it is granted directly by the state legislature. An ordinance, alleged to impair a prior contract with the gas or water company, creates a case under the constitution and laws of the United States.[63] But where the charter of a water company granted by the state legislature is not exclusive, and is subject to repeal, alteration or amendment at the will of the legislature, it is no impairment of the obligation of the contract for the legislature to authorize the city to erect its own waterworks, and this power the legislature could exercise without compelling the city to purchase the plant of the company then supplying it with water.[64] But there is a limitation, even to the power of amendment when reserved in the constitution or the statutes of a state; the alteration must be reasonably made, in good faith and consistent with the scope and object of the act of incorporation; a sheer oppression alone cannot be inflicted under the guise of amendment or alteration.[65]

(2) Construction of Particular Contracts.—A grant, under legislative authority, of an exclusive privilege, for a term of years, of supplying a municipal corporation and its people with water drawn by means of a system of waterworks from a particular stream or river, does not prevent the state from granting to other persons the privilege of supplying, during the same period, the same corporation and people with water drawn in like manner from a different stream or river.[66] Nor is a contract to supply water for hydrants impaired by the city furnishing itself with water for other purposes.[67]

pany was created a body corporate, to continue as such for twenty-five years from that date, with power to construct and maintain a certain turnpike, erect toll gates, and collect tolls. The state reserved the right to purchase the road at the expiration of the charter, by paying to the corporation the original cost of construction; but the road, with all its appendages, was to remain in the possession of the corporation, to be used and controlled, subject to the rights and restrictions contained in the charter, until such time as the state should refund said cost. By a supplement passed in 1861, the company was authorized to extend its road; and, in consideration of keeping in repair a certain bridge and dyke, to use them as a part of the road, erect a toll gate thereon, and collect tolls. It was held, that, at the expiration of that term, the state, by resuming the control of the bridge and dyke without compensation to the company, did not impair the obligation of her contract with the company. Turnpike Co. v. Illinois, 96 U. S. 63, 24 L. Ed. 651.

62. Grants of privileges to water companies.—New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525, following New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516. See the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 682; WATER COMPANIES AND WATERWORKS.

"The grant of a right to supply gas or water to a municipality and its inhabitants through pipes and mains laid in the streets, upon condition of the performance of its service by the grantee, is the grant of a franchise vested in the state, in consideration of the performance of a public service, and after performance by the grantee, is a contract protected by the constitution of the United States against state legislation to impair it. New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 660, 29 L. Ed. 516; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525." St. Tammany Waterworks v. New Orleans Waterworks, 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. Ed. 563; Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 9, 43 L. Ed. 341.

63. Distinction between charters granted by cities and by the state.—Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341.

64. When privilege not exclusive.—Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 561, 48 L. Ed. 799.

65. Power of state to alter and amend not unlimited.—Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. Ed. 406.

66. Construction of particular contracts.—Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co., 141 U. S. 67, 81, 35 L. Ed. 622, distinguishing New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525; St. Tammany Waterworks v. New Orleans Waterworks, 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. Ed. 563.

67. Contracts to supply water for hydrants.—In Bienville Water Supply Co.

(3) Regulation of Rates.—In order to make a contract between the state and a corporation not to regulate the rates of a water company chartered by it, the language must be plain and susceptible of no other reasonable construction. As a general rule the language of such statutes does not and is not intended to form a contract, but simply amounts to the then pleasure of the legislature, to so remain until subsequently altered by it.[68] A mere reduction of rates, while still leaving reasonable, fair or just compensation for the use of the property, is not prohibited.[69]

12. Power of States to Impair Contracts Through Its Taxing Power —a. In General.—The constitutional prohibition against legislation impairing the obligation of contracts, is also a limitation upon the taxing power of the states.[70] But neither a lawful tax on a new subject, nor an increased tax on

v. Mobile, 175 U. S. 109, 44 L. Ed. 92, a water company which had been organized under the state laws contracted with the city to supply it with water for certain hydrants at an agreed sum. In this contract there was no provision for furnishing the inhabitants with water, and there was no express stipulation that the company would do so. The city had power to make this contract and was also authorized by the legislature to build or otherwise acquire waterworks of its own to supply water to itself and its inhabitants for the extinguishment of fires, and for sanitary and domestic purposes, and in its contract with the Bienville Company the city did not agree not to do so. It was held that the city might construct its own waterworks, and in doing so it did not impair its contract with the water company.

68. Regulation of rates.—Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. Ed. 406, citing Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport City, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. Ed. 679; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. Ed. 636. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 634, and references given.

To regulate or establish rates for which water will be supplied is in its nature the execution of one of the powers of the state, and the right of the state so to do should not be regarded as parted with any sooner than the right of taxation should be so regarded, and the language of the alleged contract should in both cases be equally plain. Owensboro v. Owensboro Waterworks Co., 191 U. S. 358, 48 L. Ed. 217; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 210, 48 L. Ed. 406.

An act of the California legislature which provided that every water company should have power to establish, collect and receive rates, water rents or tolls which shall be subject to regulation by the board of supervisors of the county or counties in which the work is situated, but which shall not be reduced so low as to yield less than one and one-half per cent per month upon the capital actually invested, does not amount to a contract that the rates for the use of water should never be lowered below the amount provided for in that act, especially where the constitution of the state contains a reservation that all general and special laws may be altered or repealed. Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. Ed. 406.

69. Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. Ed. 406.

70. States cannot impair contracts through their taxing power.—Franklin Branch Bank v. Ohio, 1 Black 474, 17 L. Ed. 180; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 24 L. Ed. 760; Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672, 26 L. Ed. 271.

As to exemptions from taxation, and validity of statutes repealing such exemptions, see the title TAXATION.

The provision in the constitution that no state shall pass a law impairing the obligation of contracts, is a limitation upon the taxing power of a state as well as upon all its legislation, whatever form it may assume. Therefore, a law changing the stipulations of a contract, or relieving a debtor from a strict and literal compliance with its requirements, enacted by a state in the exercise of that power, is unconstitutional and void. Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 24 L. Ed. 760.

The power of a state to levy taxes is not without limits, and one of its limitations is found in the clause of the federal constitution, that no state shall pass a law impairing the obligation of contracts. A change of the expressed stipulations of a contract, or a relief of a debtor from strict and literal compliance with its requirements, can no more be effected by an exertion of the taxing power than it can be by the exertion of any other power of a state legislature. The constitutional provision against impairing contract obligations is a limitation upon the taxing power, as well as upon all legislation, whatever form it may assume. Indeed, attempted state taxation is the mode most frequently adopted to affect contracts contrary to the constitutional inhibition. It most frequently calls for the exercise of our supervisory power. Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 444, 24 L. Ed. 760.

Act incorporating state bank of Ohio.—The 60th section of the act of the legislature of Ohio, entitled "An act to incorporate the state bank of Ohio and other an old one, interferes with a contract or impairs its obligation, within the meaning of the constitution, even though such taxation may affect particular contracts, as it may increase the debt of one person and lessen the security of another, or may impose additional burdens upon one class and release the burdens of another, still the tax must be paid unless prohibited by the constitution, nor can it be said that it impairs the obligation of any existing contract in its true legal sense.[71]

b. Repeal of Statutes Imposing Taxes.—But the repeal of a statute imposing a tax does not impair the obligation of a contract.[72]

c. Inheritance Taxes.—A transfer or succession tax, not being a direct tax upon property, but a charge upon a privilege exercised or enjoyed under the law of the state, does not, when imposed in cases where the property passing consists of securities exempt by statute, impair the obligation of a contract within the meaning of the constitution of the United States.[73]

d. Occupation and Business Taxes.—Occupation and business taxes imposed upon resident agents of nonresident business houses have been held unobjectionable, though they deprive the agent of employment altogether.[74]

13. Bounties and Gratuities.—In order to make a contract that is inviolate under art. 1, § 10, of the federal constitution, the language must be plain and susceptible of no other reasonable construction. If the language of the statute does not and was not intended to form a contract, but simply amounted to the statement of the then pleasure of the legislature, to so remain until subsequently altered by it, it is in the nature of a privilege merely, and may be revoked at the pleasure of the sovereign.[75] Hence, if the law be a mere offer of a bounty, it may be withdrawn at any time, notwithstanding the recipients of such bounty may have incurred expense upon the faith of such offer.[76] banking companies," passed February 24th, 1845, constitutes a contract upon the subject of taxation, which is binding upon the state; which is impaired by the subsequent act of the legislature, passed April 5th, 1859, entitled "An act for the assessment and taxation of all the property in this state, and for levying taxes thereon according to its true value in money." Wright v. Sill, 2 Black 544, 17 L. Ed. 333, citing State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 14 L. Ed. 977; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. Ed. 401; Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Debolt, 18 How. 380, 15 L. Ed. 458; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black 436, 17 L. Ed. 173; Franklin Branch Bank v. Ohio, 1 Black 474, 17 L. Ed. 180. These cases are reviewed and distinguished in Shelby County v. Union, etc., Bank, 161 U. S. 149, 40 L. Ed. 650.

71. New taxes and increased taxes.—North Missouri R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wall. 46, 61, 22 L. Ed. 287, citing Blackwell on Tax Titles (2d Ed.), 408.

72. Repeal of statute imposing taxes no impairment.—Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. 71, 19 L. Ed. 101.

73. Inheritance taxes.—Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 289, 46 L. Ed. 196. See the title SUCCESSION TAXES.

Where the general law (N. Y. Laws 1897) provided for a transfer tax upon property passing under a power of appointment, there is no impairment of contract obligation by such transfer by will after such law took effect, although the deed conferring the power was executed prior. Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 466, 51 L. Ed. 882.

74. Occupation and business taxes.—A license tax imposed on a resident managing agent of a nonresident business house is not void on the ground that it impairs the obligation of a contract between the agent and his nonresident employer. And it is immaterial whether there was a stipulation in his contract of hiring for an employment for a definite period or not. It is inconceivable that the state should lose this right of taxation by the fact that the party taxed had entered into an engagement with his employer for the definite period. Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. Ed. 663. See, generally, the title LICENSES. See post, "Licenses," III, U.

75. Bounties and gratuities.—Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. Ed. 406, citing Christ Church v. Philadelphia County, 24 How. 300, 16 L. Ed. 602; Salt Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 373, 20 L. Ed. 611; Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 527, 22 L. Ed. 805; Welch v. Cook, 97 U. S. 541, 24 L. Ed. 1112; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 325, 29 L. Ed. 636; Grand Lodge v. New Orleans, 166 U. S. 143, 41 L. Ed. 951; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport City, 180 U. S. 587, 599, 45 L. Ed. 679. See the title BOUNTIES, vol. 3, p. 508. As to exemptions from taxation, see the title TAXATION.

76. Bounties may be withdrawn.—Grand Lodge v. New Orleans, 166 U. S. 143, 146, 41 L. Ed. 951.

For example, general encouragements held out to all persons indiscriminately to engage in a particular trade or manufacture, whether in the shape of bounties, drawbacks, or other advantage, are always under the legislative control, and may at any time be discontinued.[77] As also are bounties offered for the killing of dangerous or destructive animals,[78] or bounties in the nature of pensions to persons honorably discharged from military service.[79]

14. Effect of Constitutional Provision Granting States Immunity from Suit—a. In General.—It is well settled that no action can be maintained in any federal court by the citizens of one of the states against a state, without its consent, even though the sole object of such suit be to bring the state within the operation of the constitutional provision which provides that "no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts." This immunity of a state from suit is absolute and unqualified, and the constitutional provision securing it is not to be so construed as to place the state within the reach of the process of the court. Accordingly, it is equally well settled that a suit against the officers of a state, to compel them to do the acts which constitute a performance by it of its contracts, is, in effect, a suit against the state itself.[80] On the other

77. Salt Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 373, 20 L. Ed. 611, approved in Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 207, 48 L. Ed. 406.

A law offering to all persons and to corporations to be formed for the purpose, a bounty of ten cents for every bushel of salt manufactured in a state from water obtained by boring in the state, and exemption from taxation of the property used for the purpose, is not a contract in such a sense that it cannot be repealed. Salt Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 373, 20 L. Ed. 611, approved in Grand Lodge v. New Orleans, 166 U. S. 143, 147, 41 L. Ed. 951; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 207, 48 L. Ed. 406.

Such a law is nothing but a bounty law, and in its nature a general law, regulative of the internal economy of the state, dependent for its continuance upon the dictates of public policy, and the voluntary good faith of the legislature. Salt Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 373, 20 L. Ed. 611, approved in Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin, etc., Co., 192 U. S. 201, 207, 48 L. Ed. 406.

78. A law offering a bounty for the killing of every wolf or other destructive animal is not a contract except to bestow the promised bounty upon those who earn it, so long as the law remains unrepealed. There is no pledge that it shall not be repealed at any time. Salt Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 373, 20 L. Ed. 611.

79. Military bounties or pensions.—See, also, Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 561, 25 L. Ed. 710, wherein a law, providing that persons who had served seven years in the militia and had been honorably discharged, were entitled to perpetual immunity from taxation to the extent of $500 each, was held to be repealable at any time by the legislature. Cited in Grand Lodge v. New Orleans, 166 U. S. 143, 150, 41 L. Ed. 951. See the title PENSIONS.

80. Effect of constitutional provision granting states immunity from suit.—Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 9, 35 L. Ed. 363. See post, "How Relief Obtained in Case of Impairment," IX. See, generally, the title STATES.

"That a state cannot be sued by a citizen of another state, or of a foreign state, on the mere ground that the case is one arising under the constitution or laws of the United States, is clearly established by the decisions of this court in several recent cases. Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. Ed. 448; Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52, 29 L. Ed. 805; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. Ed. 216. Those were cases arising under the constitution of the United States, upon laws complained of as impairing the obligation of contracts, one of which was the constitutional amendment of Louisiana complained of in the present case. Relief was sought against state officers who professed to act in obedience to those laws. This court held that the suits were virtually against the states themselves and were consequently violative of the eleventh amendment of the constitution, and could not be maintained. It was not denied that they presented cases arising under the constitution; but, notwithstanding that, they were held to be prohibited by the amendment referred to." Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 10, 33 L. Ed. 842.

"It cannot be doubted that the 11th amendment to the constitution operates to create an important distinction between contracts of a state with individuals and contracts between individual parties. In the case of contracts between individuals, the remedies for their enforcement or breach, in existence at the time they were entered into, are a part of the agreement itself, and constitute a substantial part of its obligation. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 26 L. Ed. 132. That obligation by virtue of the provision of Article 1, § 10, of the constitution of the United States, cannot be impaired by any subsequent state legislation. Thus, not only the covenants and conditions of the hand, although the obligations of a state rest for their performance upon its honor and good faith, and cannot be made the subjects of judicial cognizance unless the state consents to be sued, or comes itself into court, yet where property or rights are enjoyed under a grant or contract made by a state, they cannot wantonly be invaded. Whilst the state cannot be compelled by suit to perform its contracts, any attempt on its part to violate property rights acquired under its contracts, may be judicially resisted; and any law impairing the obligation of contracts under which such property or rights are held is void and powerless to affect their enjoyment.[81] Hence, an officer of the state may be enjoined from executing a statute of a state which is unconstitutional in that it operates to impair the obligation of the contract, where the plaintiff in such a suit is not asking any affirmative relief, but only asks that the defendant be restrained and enjoined from doing certain acts which he alleges are violative of his contract made with the state. He merely asks that an injunction may issue against them to restrain them from acting under a statute of the state alleged to be unconstitutional, which acts will be destructive of his rights and privileges, and will work an irreparable mischief and damage to his property rights.[82] contract are preserved, but also the substance of the original remedies for its enforcement. It is different with contracts between individuals and a state. In respect to these, by virtue of the 11th amendment to the constitution, there being no remedy by a suit against the state, the contract is substantially without sanction, except that which arises out of the honor and good faith of the state itself, and these are not subject to coercion. Although the state may, at the inception of the contract, have consented as one of its conditions to subject itself to suit, it may subsequently withdraw that consent and resume its original immunity, without any violation of the obligation of its contract in the constitutional sense. Beers v. Arkansas, 20 How. 527, 15 L. Ed. 991; Railroad Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337, 25 L. Ed. 960. The very object and purpose of the 11th amendment were to prevent the indignity of subjecting a state to the coercive process of judicial tribunals at the instance of private parties." In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 504, 31 L. Ed. 216.

Funding state debts.—Though a state may violate the obligation of its contracts, contained in statutory and constitutional provisions providing for the funding of its floating debt, yet ordinarily the eleventh amendment precludes any suit against the state or its officers to coerce them in their official capacity. Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. Ed. 448, cited in Christian v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 133 U. S. 233, 243, 33 L. Ed. 589. See ante, "Funding States Debts," III, D, 3, a.

81. How far redress may be had from a state.—Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 20, 33 L. Ed. 842; Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 47 L. Ed. 584; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464.

The immunity from suit secured to the state is a part of the constitution of equal authority with every other, but no greater, and is to be construed and applied in harmony with all the provisions of the instrument. That immunity does not exempt the state from the operation of the constitutional provision that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. It is true, that no remedy for a breach of its contracts, by a state, by way of damages as compensation, or by means of process to compel its performance, is open, under the constitution in the courts of the United States, by a direct suit against the state itself, on the part of the injured party, being a citizen of another state, or a citizen or subject of a foreign state. It is equally true that whenever, in a controversy between parties to a suit of which these courts have jurisdiction, the question arising upon the validity of a law impairing the obligation of its contract, the jurisdiction is not thereby ousted, but must be exercised, with whatever legal consequences, to the rights of the litigants, may be the result of the determination. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185, citing Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162; New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch 164, 3 L. Ed. 303; Meigs v. McClung, 9 Cranch 11, 3 L. Ed. 639; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 84, 5 L. Ed. 547; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. Ed. 939; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. Ed. 496; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383; Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How. 115, 14 L. Ed. 75; Brown v. Huger, 21 How. 305, 16 L. Ed. 125; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black 436, 17 L. Ed. 173; Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. 363, 18 L. Ed. 863; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. Ed. 471; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. Ed. 171; New Hampshire v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 76, 27 L. Ed. 656; Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 446, 27 L. Ed. 992.

82. State officers may be enjoined if no affirmative relief is asked for.—Pennoyer

b. Virginia Coupon Cases.—But no proceedings can be instituted by any holder of such bonds or coupons against the commonwealth of Virginia, either directly by suit against the commonwealth by name, or indirectly against her executive officers to control them in the exercise of their official functions as agents of the state.[83]

E. Assessments.—Even as to third parties an assessment upon abutting owners for street improvements is not a contract in the sense in which the word is used in the constitution of the United States; and whether rights arising thereon have become vested depends upon circumstances.[84]

F. Compacts.[85]—The terms contract and compact are synonymous.[86] Accordingly it is held that both compacts between states,[87] and between a state and the United States,[88] are within the constitutional prohibition.

G. Confederate Contracts and Slave Contracts—1. CONFEDERATE CONTRACTS.—A state statute providing for the scaling of Confederate contracts, which allows the jury to place their own judgment upon the value of the contract in suit, and does not require them to take the value stipulated by

v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. Ed. 363, following Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. Ed. 447; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 23 L. Ed. 623; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 311, 29 L. Ed. 185.

83. Virginia coupon cases.—McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 684, 34 L. Ed. 304, cited and distinguished in Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 15, 35 L. Ed. 363. See ante, "Virginia Coupon Cases," III, D, 3, a, (2).

84. Assessments upon abutting owners.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. 395, 13 L. Ed. 469; Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612; Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 340, 35 L. Ed. 446. See the title SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS.

In Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612, this court decided that the New York act of 1871, authorizing the supreme court of the state to vacate an order made in 1870, confirming the report of the commissioners respecting property taken for a public improvement, if error, mistake, irregularity or illegality appeared in the proceedings, or the assessments for benefits or the awards for damage had been unfair and unjust, or inequitable or oppressive, and to refer the matter back to new commissioners to amend or correct the report, or to make a new assessment, was not unconstitutional. Mr. Justice Field, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In the proceeding to condemn the property of the plaintiff for a public street, there was nothing in the nature of a contract between him and the city." Approved in Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 340, 35 L. Ed. 446.

85. See, generally, the title STATES.

86. Contract and compact synonymous.—Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 92, 5 L. Ed. 547.

87. Compacts between states protected.—Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547; Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. Ed. 190.

Compact between Kentucky and Virginia.—The propositions offered and agreed to by Virginia, looking to the security of land titles derived from the state of Virginia, but within the limits of the territory afterwards set apart as the state of Kentucky, having been accepted and ratified by Kentucky, and sanctioned by the congress of the United States, the admitting Kentucky into the Union upon the basis of such compact, constituted a contract which it is beyond the power of either commonwealth to impair. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 92, 5 L. Ed. 547, approved in Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 245, 45 L. Ed. 162; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 566, 14 L. Ed. 249.

Kentucky, being a party to a compact which guarantied to claimants a land lying in that state, under titles derived from Virginia, their rights as they existed under the laws of Virginia, was incompetent to violate that contract, by passing any law which rendered those rights less valid and secure. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 92, 5 L. Ed. 547.

Obstruction of navigation on Ohio River.—Congress has sanctioned the compact made between Virginia and Kentucky, viz: "That the use and navigation of the River Ohio, so far as the territory of Virginia or Kentucky is concerned, shall be free and common to the citizens of the United States." This compact is obligatory, and can be carried out by the federal supreme court. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 14 L. Ed. 249, following Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547, but distinguishing Wilson v. Black-Bird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet. 245, 250, 7 L. Ed. 412. See the title NAVIGABLE WATERS.

88. Compacts between states and United States.—A state may competently and constitutionally enter into a compact with the federal government whereby it agrees to hold in trust certain lands granted to it by the federal government and to dispose of them for the sole bene-the parties, is null and void because it impairs the obligation of contracts.[89]

Contracts to Pay in Confederate Money.—Likewise, the supreme court of the United States has held that the notes of the Confederate States, in ordinary use as money during the rebellion, might constitute a valid consideration for a contract; and that provisions in the constitution of a state subsequently adopted, declaring such contracts void, was an impairment of the obligation of such contracts within the meaning of the federal constitution.[90] fit of a specified railroad company; and any legislation in violation of such compact is ultra vires the state and void. Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 527, 572, 22 L. Ed. 805.

A grant of public lands by the United States to a state upon conditions that the lands or their proceeds shall be devoted to their draining and reclamation is a contract binding upon the state. All the elements of the contract met in the transaction; that is to say, competent parties, proper subject matter, sufficient consideration and consent of minds, such contract cannot be violated by the legislation of the state without infringement of the constitution. McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall. 143, 155, 18 L. Ed. 314, distinguished in United States v. Stockslayer, 129 U. S. 470, 477, 32 L. Ed. 785.

89. Scaling ordinances held void.—A statute of North Carolina of March, 1866, enacting that in all civil actions "for debts contracted during the late war, in which the nature of the obligation is not set forth, nor the value of the property for which such debts were created is stated, it shall be admissible for either party to show on the trial, by affidavit or otherwise, what was the consideration of the contract, and that the jury in making up their verdict, shall take the same into consideration, and determine the value of said contract in present currency in the particular locality in which it is to be performed, and render their verdict accordingly," in so far as the same authorizes the jury in such actions, upon the evidence thus before them, to place their own estimate upon the value of the contracts, instead of taking the value stipulated by the parties, impairs the obligation of such contracts, and is, therefore, within the inhibition upon the state of the federal constitution. Accordingly, in an action upon a contract for wood sold in that state during the war, at a price payable in Confederate currency, an instruction of the court to the jury, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of the wood without reference to the value of the currency stipulated, was erroneous. Wilmington, etc., R. Co. v. King, 91 U. S. 3, 23 L. Ed. 186, Mr. Justice Bradley dissenting. See the title PAYMENT.

Confederate contracts, solvable in Confederate currency, are to be liquidated upon the basis of the value of Confederate currency as compared with lawful money of the United States at the time and place where made; and a statute which disregards this principle and leaves it to the discretion of the court or jury to award judgment or verdict for the actual value of the thing sold, or for the fair rent or hire of property leased, at the time of the contract, impairs the obligation of the contract by permitting it to be enforced in a manner different from that provided by its terms as made. Effinger v. Kenney, 115 U. S. 566, 572, 29 L. Ed. 495.

A statute of Virginia, of February, 1867—after declaring that, in an action or suit or other proceeding for the enforcement of any contract, express or implied, made between the first day of January, 1862, and the tenth of April, 1865, it shall be lawful for either party to show, by parol or other relevant testimony, what was the understanding and agreement of the parties, either express or implied, in respect to the kind of currency in which the same was to be performed, or with reference to which, as a standard of value, it was made—provides "that when the cause of action grows out of a sale or renting or hiring of property, whether real or personal, if the court, or, when it is a jury case, the jury, think that, under all the circumstances the fair value of the property sold, or the fair rent or hire of it, would be the most just measure of recovery in the action, either of these principles may be adopted as the measure of the recovery instead of the express terms of the contract." Held, that the statute in this provision sanctions the impairment of contracts, which is not, under the federal constitution, within the competency of the legislature of the state. Accordingly, in a suit to enforce a lien for unpaid purchase money of real estate sold during the war, for which a note was given payable in dollars, but shown to have been made with reference to Confederate notes, a decision that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of the land at the time of the sale, instead of the value of Confederate notes at that time, was erroneous. Effinger v. Kenney, 115 U. S. 566, 29 L. Ed. 495.

90. Contracts solvable in Confederate money.—Thorington v. Wright, 8 Wall. 1, 19 L. Ed. 361; Delmas v. Insurance Co., 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. Ed. 757.

A judgment of the state court, holding such a contract void, expressly based on the constitutional provision and not on the general ground of public policy, must be reversed in the federal supreme court. Delmas v. Insurance Co., 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. Ed. 757.

2. Slave Contracts.—Where a contract for the sale of a slave was lawful at the time it was made, it could not be impaired by a subsequent statutory or constitutional enactment declaring such contracts to be invalid.[91] Nor does the thirteenth amendment forbidding slavery and involuntary servitude operate retrospectively so as to impair contracts for the sale of slaves valid at the time they were made.[92]

H. Contracts of Enlistment.—Rules and regulations subsequently passed affecting a contract of enlistment are unobjectionable.[93]

I. Grants.—A grant is a contract executed, the obligation of which still continues.[94] Hence, a legislative grant cannot be repealed.[95]

J. Contracts of Municipalities[96]—1. In General.—In a very early case, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall said that the power of a municipal corporation "to make a contract, which should so operate as to bind its legislative capacities forever thereafter, and disable it from enacting a by-law, which the legislature enables it to enact, may well be questioned."[97] But the rule is well settled now

91. Slave contracts were protected by the contract clause.—Boyce v. Tabb, 18 Wall. 546, 21 L. Ed. 757, citing White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 647, 20 L. Ed. 685. See the title SLAVERY AND INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE.

Impairment by state constitution.—A contract for the sale of a slave valid under the law of the state at the time it was made, cannot be impaired by subsequent constitutional adoption or amendment any more than by the change of the statutory law of the state. Boyce v. Tabb, 18 Wall. 546, 21 L. Ed. 757.

Impairment by judicial interpretation.—Where a contract for the sale of a slave was valid under the laws as judicially interpreted at the time it was made, it cannot be impaired by a subsequent change in the judicial interpretation of the law. Boyce v. Tabb, 18 Wall. 546, 21 L. Ed. 757. See ante, "Judicial Decisions," II, F.

The provision of the constitution of Georgia, adopted in 1868, that "no court or officers shall have, nor shall the general assembly give, jurisdiction to try, or give judgment on, or enforce any debt, the consideration of which was a slave or the hire thereof," impaired the obligation of contracts for the hire or sale of slaves by depriving the parties of all remedy for the enforcement thereof, and was unconstitutional and void. White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 20 L. Ed. 685. Accord: Osborn v. Nicholson, 13 Wall. 654, 20 L. Ed. 689. The cases are reviewed in New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 35, 31 L. Ed. 607.

92. Effect of 13th amendment on slave contracts.—White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 647, 20 L. Ed. 685; Osborn v. Nicholson, 13 Wall. 654, 655, 20 L. Ed. 689; Boyce v. Tabb, 18 Wall. 546, 21 L. Ed. 757.

93. Contracts of enlistment.—At the time of complainant's enlistment in the navy the marine corps was subject to such laws and regulations as might at any time be established for the better government of the navy. Held, that it was a part of his contract of enlistment that he should obey such laws whenever passed. It was, therefore, no objection to the law of which he complained as operating retrospectively and impairing the terms of his enlistment, that they were passed after his entering the services. Wilkes v. Dinsman, 7 How. 89, 126, 12 L. Ed. 618. See the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 527.

94. A grant is an executed contract.—Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 137, 3 L. Ed. 162. See ante, "Land Grants," III, D, 7.

A law annulling conveyances between individuals, and declaring that the grantors should stand seized of their former estates, notwithstanding those grants, would be as repugnant to the constitution as a law discharging the vendors of property from the obligation of executing their contracts by conveyances. An absolute conveyance and the rights derived therefrom are as much protected as a contract of conveyance. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 137, 3 L. Ed. 162.

95. Repealing legislative grants.—Pawlett v. Clark, 9 Cranch 292, 3 L. Ed. 735.

A legislative grant is not revocable. Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch 43, 3 L. Ed. 650.

Conceding that the legislature of Virginia possessed the authority to enact the statute of 1776, ch. 2, making a new grant and confirming to the use of the church lands then held by the established church, such statute vested an indefeasible and irrevocable title, which it was beyond the power of the legislature to impair. Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch 43, 50, 3 L. Ed. 650.

96. See, generally, the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

97. Early rule as to inviolability of municipal contracts.—Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 596, 5 L. Ed. 339.

When a government entered into a contract, there is no doubt of its power to bind itself to any extent not prohibited by its constitution; and its valid contracts, not so prohibited, are within the constitutional prohibition against the impairment that cities or towns, whenever they engage in transactions not public in their nature, act under the same pecuniary responsibility as individuals, and are as much bound by their engagements as are private persons, nor is it in the power of the legislature to authorize them to violate their contracts.[98] As has been stated above, laws passed by a state impairing the obligation of a contract are void, and if a state cannot pass such a law, it follows that no agency can do so which acts under the state with delegated authority.[99]

2. How Obligation Impaired—a. By Mere Refusal to Perform.—But something more than a mere refusal of a municipal corporation to perform its contract is necessary to make a law impairing the obligation of contracts.[1]

b. By Mere Denial of Liability.—In like manner, mere statements of an intention on the part of one of the parties to a contract not to be bound by its obligation, even though such denial be on the part of a municipal corporation, is not legislation impairing the obligation of a contract.[2]

c. By Failure to Perform Discretionary Duties.—A statute of a state which merely provides that any surplus revenue of counties and municipalities, left after paying the expenditures of the current year, may be applied by the city council to the payment of the indebtedness of former years, does not amount to a contract within the meaning of the federal constitution.[3] of the obligation of contracts. Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 597, 5 L. Ed. 339.

98. Municipal contracts are inviolable under the present decisions.—Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 533, 25 L. Ed. 699.

99. Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 534, 25 L. Ed. 699, citing Cooley, Const. Lim. (4th Ed.) 241; Angell & Ames on Copr. (9th Ed.) §§ 332, 333. See ante, "Contracts of States," III, D.

1. Mere refusal of city to perform contract not within inhibition.—Dawson v. Columbia, etc., Trust Co., 197 U. S. 178, 182, 49 L. Ed. 713.

Where a city wrongfully refuses to perform its contract with a waterworks company, and there is no law giving color to such refusal; held, the mere fact of the city being a municipal corporation does not give to such refusal the character of a law impairing the obligation of contract. Dawson v. Columbia, etc., Trust Co., 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. Ed. 713.

2. Mere denial of liability by municipality.—Mercantile Trust, etc., Co. v. Columbus, 203 U. S. 311, 51 L. Ed. 198, citing St. Paul Gas Light Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. Ed. 788.

A contract was made between a gas company and a municipality, whereby the city was to be lighted by gas. The city afterwards substituted electricity in some sections. An ordinance was issued commanding the gas company to remove the gas street-lamp posts in that portion of the city lighted by electricity, and allowed no interest to be paid on the cost of construction of the lamp posts ordered to be removed. Held, this ordinance did not impair the obligation of a contract made by the municipality with the gas company to furnish lights, and the city would not be relieved of the obligation to pay interest on the cost of the construction of the unused lamp posts, since, if the contract imposed the obligation to make such payment, the duty of the city to do so was left absolutely unaffected by the order to remove. St. Paul Gas Light Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 148, 149, 45 L. Ed. 788.

Where a municipal ordinance was passed precluding a comptroller from auditing the claims of a gas company as a prerequisite to the appropriation by the city council of the necessary money to pay such claims, it was held that this ordinance did not impair an obligation of a contract, the auditing of the comptroller being merely advisory, and the payment of the claims could not have been procured without the passage of an appropriation by the council for that purpose. St. Paul Gas Light Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 149, 150, 45 L. Ed. 788.

3. Failure to perform discretionary duties.—The legislature of the state of Louisiana in 1877 passed an act which may be epitomized as follows: That no police jury of any parish or municipal corporation in the state should make appropriations or expenditures of money in any year which should, separately or together with any appropriations or expenditures of the same year, be in actual excess of the actual revenue of the parish or municipality for that year; and that all the revenues of the parishes and municipalities of each year should be devoted to the expenditures of that year, provided "that any surplus of said revenues may be applied to the payment of the indebtedness of former years." Extra Sess. Acts, 1877, p. 47. The surplus having been left by this act under the control of the city council, it follows that this act gave to the claimant no contract right to such surplus. The city having power to dispose of it, the acts of 1882 and 1886, directing the municipality to appropriate

d. By Change in Instrumentalities of Government.—A mere change of an instrumentality of municipal government, without substantially impairing existing remedies for the enforcement of the contract of the municipality, does not impair the obligations of its contracts.[4]

3. Right to Contract Away Its Legislative Powers.—A municipal corporation cannot enter into a contract which abridges its own legislative power. Such an agreement is not within the protection of the constitutional prohibition against the impairment of contracts.[5]

4. Ultra Vires Contracts.—The contract clause of the federal constitution cannot be successfully invoked in favor of a contract, entered into by a municipality, that is ultra vires.[6] And this general rule has been applied to contracts by cities with waterworks companies,[7] to contracts by cities to convey public lands,[8] the surplus to works of public improvement, impaired the obligation of no contract right in favor of claimant, since no right existed, and was therefore a valid exercise of legislative authority. United States v. Thoman, 156 U. S. 353, 39 L. Ed. 450.

4. Change in instrumentalities of government not an impairment.—New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 429, 38 L. Ed. 764.

Repeal of act creating police board.—The act of the legislature of Louisiana repealing the act creating the board of metropolitan police established in 1868 for the government of the city of New Orleans and adjacent municipalities, and the vesting in the city of the function of maintaining its own police, held to be an act of this character and not in contravention of the constitution of the United States, because it was enacted in the exercise of the undisputed power of the state in that regard. New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 429, 38 L. Ed. 764.

5. City cannot usually contract away its legislative powers.—Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 597, 5 L. Ed. 339, approved in East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 534, 13 L. Ed. 518.

The legislative body cannot part with its powers by any proceedings, so as not to be able to continue the exercise of them. It can and should exercise them, again and again, as often as the public interest requires. And though private interests may intervene and then should not be injured except on terms allowed by the constitution; yet public interests in one place or corporation may be affected injuriously by laws, without any redress, as legislation on public matters looks to the whole and not to a part, and may, for the benefit of the whole to the injury of a part, change what is held under it by public bodies for public purposes. The legislature, therefore, cannot properly divest itself of such control, nor devolve it upon towns or counties, nor cease from any cause to exercise it on all suitable occasions. Its members are made by the people agents or trustees for them, and can possess no authority to sell or grant their power over the trust to others. East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 535, 13 L. Ed 518. Accord: Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 596, 598, 5 L. Ed. 339; Clark v. Washington, 12 Wheat. 40, 54, 6 L. Ed 544.

6. Ultra vires contracts of cities not protected.—Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. Ed. 471; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S 79, 35 L. Ed. 943. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 745.

A municipal corporation can make such contracts only as are authorized by its charter or act of incorporation. A contract or compact entered into between a municipal corporation and a part of its inhabitants, if it is ultra vires, is not binding, and is not within the constitutional prohibition against the impairment of contracts. Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 597, 5 L. Ed. 339.

7. Ultra vires contracts with water companies.—A city cannot set up that its contract with a water supply company has been impaired by subsequent legislation, when the contract is ultra vires and void, having been so declared by the highest court of the state. Since being void it is incapable of being impaired. New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943. See the title WATER COMPANIES AND WATERWORKS.

8. Where a municipal corporation, having no authority to convey public lands, undertakes by ordinance to make such conveyance subject to the subsequent approval of the state, and before such approval enacts another ordinance relating to lands embraced in the first and containing provisions with reference to quantity conveyed and the quantity reserved to the city different to those contained in the first ordinance, and the legislature afterwards enacts a statute affirming and approving both ordinances, such statute does not impair the obligation of the grant contained in the first ordinance, since the city having no power to make the grant therein contained, the grantees acquired no right under it except as it was approved by the legislature in conjunction with the latter to contracts to subscribe to railroad stock,[9] and to contracts bartering away its legislative powers.[10]

5. Particular Contracts Considered—a. Municipal Aid Contracts—(1) In General.—An authority to a county, contained in the charter of a railroad company authorizing the county to subscribe for the stock of the company and vote bonds to pay for the same, is not a contract between the state and the county protected by the contract clause of the constitution; and a subsequent revocation by a change of the state constitution, before the subscription is actually made, is not an impairment of the obligation of any contract.[11] On the other hand, where a county or other municipal subdivision acting under competent authority enters into a valid contract to aid, by subscription or otherwise, the construction of a railroad, such contract is within the protection of the contract clause of the constitution, and cannot be impaired by a subsequent constitutional amendment forbidding municipal subscriptions or donations in aid of such enterprise, adopted before the contract was carried into execution.[12] And in order that there may be a contract to be impaired in the case of a municipal ordinance. Hoadley v. San Francisco, 124 U. S. 639, 646, 31 L. Ed. 553.

Nor does it help the case of the grantee making contract rights under the first ordinance that the land, the title to which was in the federal government at the time of the enactment of such ordinance, was afterwards relinquished and granted to the city for the usages and purposes specified in the ordinance of the city as ratified and approved by the act of the legislature. The first ordinance, the second ordinance, and the act of approval are all to be taken together, and the right conferred by the first ordinance is to be construed and confirmed only as limited by the second ordinance, said second ordinance having been enacted previous to the legislative act of approval. Hoadley v. San Francisco, 124 U. S. 639, 646, 31 L. Ed. 553. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

9. Ultra vires municipal aid contracts.—An ultra vires contract by a municipality to subscribe to railroad stock does not prevent the state from prohibiting such subscriptions by municipalities. Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. Ed. 471, distinguishing Moultrie County v. Rockingham, etc., Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 23 L. Ed. 631. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID.

In accordance with the petition of the taxpayers of a town in New York, dated March 25, 1872, the county judge appointed commissioners, who were empowered and directed to subscribe for stock in a railroad company when its road should be constructed through a certain village. The road was not so constructed until October 20, 1875. Held, that as, by the terms of the petition and the proceedings of the judge thereon, the construction of the road was a condition precedent to the exercise by the commissioners of their power to make the subscription, they, being merely agents of the town, had no authority to act in the premises until that condition was performed. A contract, therefore, under date of June 14, 1872, between the company and the commissioners, whereby the latter assumed to bind the town to subscribe for stock when the road should be so constructed, being ultra vires, no rights of the company were impaired by the amendment to the constitution of the state (infra, p. 822), which took effect January 1, 1875, and prohibited all municipal aid to corporations by subscriptions of stock, or otherwise. Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. Ed. 471, distinguishing Moultrie County v. Rockingham, etc., Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 23 L. Ed. 631.

10. Contracts bartering away right of city to grade streets.—The ordinance of May, 1799, by which the corporation of Georgetown first exercised the power of grading its streets, is not in the nature of a compact, and may be altered by the corporation. Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 597, 5 L. Ed. 339.

11. Inviolability of municipal aid contracts.—Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 377, 16 L. Ed. 296, reaffirmed in Wadsworth v. Supervisors, 102 U. S. 534, 26 L. Ed. 221, distinguished in Moultrie County v. Rockingham, etc., Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 635, 23 L. Ed. 631. See Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 666, 40 L. Ed. 838. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID.

12. Municipal aid contracts held inviolable.—Clay County v. Society for Savings, 104 U. S. 579, 590, 26 L. Ed. 856, citing Concord v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 92 U. S. 625, 23 L. Ed. 628; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 30 L. Ed. 1161; Seibert v. United States, 129 U. S. 192, 32 L. Ed. 645. See Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464.

Municipal corporations, says Mr. Justice Field, so far as they are invested with subordinate legislative powers for local purposes, are mere instrumentalities of the state for the convenient administration of their affairs; but when authorized subscription in aid of a railroad, it is not necessary that a subscription should have actually been made upon the books of the company. If there was an authorized contract existing between the city or county when a new constitution forbidding and invalidating such contracts came into operation, the effect of such new constitution was to impair the obligation of the contract, and was, therefore, as to such contract inoperative and void.[13] But county aid bonds illegally issued, because the statute which authorized their issuance did not conform to the constitutional requirement as to the enactment of statutes as repeatedly decided by the state courts, do not constitute contracts which are protected by the federal constitution.[14]

(2) Conditions and Restrictions.—A statute of a state operating retrospectively, which provides that any bond issued by a county in payment of subscriptions to stock of a railroad company thereafter issued, must have upon it the requisite certificate before it shall be deemed to have been completely executed, does not infringe the contract clause.[15] Nor does the fact that one more officer must examine and certify the bond before it can be issued, place such an ad-to take stock in railroad company, and issue their obligations in payment of the stock, they are to that extent to be deemed private corporations, and their obligations are secured by all the guaranties which protect the engagements of private individuals. Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 269, 23 L. Ed. 896; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 529, 25 L. Ed. 699.

13. Actual subscription held unnecessary.—Moultrie County v. Rockingham, etc., Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 635, 23 L. Ed. 631, citing Nugent v. Supervisors, 19 Wall. 241, 22 L. Ed. 83, and distinguishing Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 16 L. Ed. 296; distinguished in Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. Ed. 471.

The contract subscription to the stock of a railroad company and authorized by the act of the legislature of a state, does not become complete until the subscription is actually made on the books of the company for the stock. Until the subscription is made, the contract is unexecuted, and obligatory upon neither party. Therefore the constitutional amendment subsequently adopted prohibiting such subscriptions does not come within the inhibition of § 10, article 1, of the federal constitution which provides that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 16 L. Ed. 296, distinguished in Moultrie County v. Rockingham, etc., Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 635, 23 L. Ed. 631.

County and municipal aid contracts.—Where a county, under authority contained in the charter of a railroad company, has voted in favor of a county subscription of the stock of the company and for a bond issue to pay for the same, and before the county commissioners have made the subscription, a state constitution is adopted forbidding such bond issues, it was held that the mere vote to subscribe did not of itself form such a contract with the railroad company as will be protected by the 10th section first article of the constitution of the United States; that until the subscription was actually made the contract was unexecuted and obligatory upon neither party. Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 379, 16 L. Ed. 296.

Charter provisions authorizing county aid to railroad.—The charter of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company passed by the legislature of Indiana in 1848, and a supplement in 1849, authorizing the county commissioners of a county through which the road passed to subscribe for stock and issue bonds, provided a majority of the qualified voters of the county voted, on the 1st of March, 1849, that this should be done. The election was held on the appointed day, and a majority of the voters voted that the subscription should be made. But before the subscription was made the state adopted a new constitution, which went into effect on the 1st of November, 1851. One of the articles of this constitution prohibited such subscriptions unless paid for in cash, and prohibited also a county from loaning its credit or borrowing money to pay such subscriptions. In 1852, the county commissioners of Daviess county subscribed for stock in the railroad company and issued their bonds for the amount. Held, that the provision of the railroad charter, authorizing the commissioners to subscribe, did not constitute a contract between the state and the railroad company, but merely conferred a power upon the county and public corporation or civil institution of government, which could be modified, changed, enlarged, or restrained, by the legislative authority of the state. Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 16 L. Ed. 296.

14. Defect in title of act authorizing issuance of county bonds.—Zane v. Hamilton County, 189 U. S. 370, 47 L. Ed. 858. See the title STATUTES.

15. Certificate required on county aid bonds.—Hoff v. Jasper County, 110 U. S. 53, 28 L. Ed. 68.

ditional burden on the parties to the subscription as to impair the obligation of their contract. It is in reality no more than providing that two officers shall sign a municipal bond instead of one before the body politic shall be bound by an instrument to be put on the market and sold as commercial paper.[16]

b. Contracts with Street Railroads[17]—(1) Extension of Franchises.—Municipal ordinances extending the franchises of a street railway on conditions which involve the expenditure of large sums of money, and resulting in substantial benefits to the public, constitute contracts protected by article 1, § 10, of the federal constitution.[18]

(2) Paving between the Tracks.—Nor can a contract entered into between a municipal corporation and a railway company defining the duty of the company with respect to paving and repairing the streets upon which its tracks were laid, valid at the time it was entered into, by the law as it then stood, be impaired either by subsequent legislation or judicial decision.[19] But under the general right to alter, amend or repeal corporate charters, contracts already existing with regard to their duty to pave may be extended.[20]

(3) Grading and Leveling Streets.—A city ordinance giving a railway company permission to build bridges over its tracks is not a contract between the city and the railway company. Therefore, a later ordinance, changing the grade of the street and destroying the bridges, is not a violation of the contract clause of the constitution.[21]

16. Certification of bonds.—Hoff v. Jasper County, 110 U. S. 53, 28 L. Ed. 68.

Although when a subscription was made by a county to railroad stock, in exchange for its own bond, a bond if signed by the presiding justice would have been sufficient, the obligation of the contract of subscription is not impaired by a law passed afterwards which requires the signature of the clerk of the court to the bond as well as that of the presiding justice. Hoff v. Jasper County, 110 U. S. 53, 28 L. Ed. 68.

17. See the title STREET RAILWAYS.

18. Extension of franchises.—Where two railway companies are granted franchises expiring at different times, followed by a consolidation under valid Ohio laws; and subsequently ordinances involving public benefits are accepted by consolidated company, which ordinances refer to rights granted by them as terminating with the "grant of the main line," the legislative intent to so extend or change the franchises, when for a reasonable time, will be inferred; and will constitute a contract which may not be impaired within the constitutional provision. Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co., 201 U. S. 529, 50 L. Ed. 854.

Where a railway company obtains separate franchises for two different lines, expiring at different times, and numerous ordinances permit extensions and add new privileges, but contain no clear and unambiguous language showing a legislative intent to merge the franchises; and where a subsequent consolidation, accepted by the city, distinctly denies any rights greater than those of the constituent companies; held, that there is no merger of the franchises, and that a grant to a new company of rights in one line, after expiration of the franchise as to that line, impairs no contract obligations within the constitutional prohibition. Cleveland Electric R. Co. v. Cleveland, 204 U. S. 116, 51 L. Ed. 399.

19. Paving and repairing the street between its tracks.—Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 55, 19 L. Ed. 594. See post, "Laws Concerning Civil Institutions or Governmental Subjects," IV.

20. Extension of existing duty to pave.—By § 1090 of the code of Iowa it was provided that articles of incorporation, by laws, rules and regulations of corporations thereafter organized, should at all times be subject to legislative control, and might be at any time altered, abridged or set aside by law and that every franchise obtained or enjoyed by such corporation might be regulated, withheld, or made subject to conditions imposed upon the enjoyment thereof, whenever the general assembly should deem necessary for the public good. Held, that no municipality in the state had the power to grant to a street railway company any right, privilege or franchise to be held and enjoyed exempt from the operation of this section. Therefore, the grant by a municipality to a street railway company of the right of operating a street railway company with the requirement that it should pave the streets between the rails, created no contract between the company and the state or city which was impaired by an ordinance further requiring it to pave the street for one foot outside of the rails. Sioux City St. R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 34 L. Ed. 898.

21. Grading and leveling streets.—Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 42

(4) Regulation of Rates.—Where the constitution or statutes of a state existing at the time the charter is granted by the city to a street railway, provide that no irrevocable or uncontrollable grant of special privileges or immunities shall be made, but that all privileges granted by the legislature or created under its authority shall be subject thereto, subsequent legislation reducing the rates to be charged do not impair the obligation of the contract, especially where such rate does not seem to be in any way confiscatory.[22] But a state legislature, unless prohibited by constitutional provisions, may authorize a municipal corporation to contract with a street railway company as to the rates of fare, and so bind during the specified period any future common council from altering or in any way interfering with such contract.[23] The contract once having been made, the power of the city over the subject, so far as altering the rates of fare or other matters properly involved in and being a part of the contract, is suspended for the period of the running of the contract.[24]

(5) Right of Consolidated Company.—Where a street railway is chartered before a new constitution takes effect, but is subsequently consolidated with other roads, or accepts new privileges, all the contracts, privileges, and franchises conferred after the adoption of such constitution are subject to its provisions.[25]

L. Ed. 87. See, also, the title STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

22. Regulation of street railroad rates.—San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt, 200 U. S. 304, 50 L. Ed. 491. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 634.

Special rates to school children.—Where a city granted a railway certain privileges, under a Texas special act providing that all contracts with such railway should be "in all respects legal and binding," and twenty-three years later fixed the rates by ordinance, after a new constitution had made inalienable the right to regulate and revoke franchise privileges, and after an authorized assignment to a new company of "all the property, assets, rights and privileges;" held, that such assignment is subject to the provisions of the new constitution, and that a subsequent act requiring half-rates to school children does not impair the obligation of any contract. San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt, 200 U. S. 304, 50 L. Ed. 491.

23. A state may authorize a city to make irrevocable contracts.—Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 382, 46 L. Ed. 592, citing New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525; St. Tammany Waterworks v. New Orleans Waterworks, 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. Ed. 563; Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 9, 43 L. Ed. 341; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 570, 44 L. Ed. 886; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport City, 180 U. S. 587, 593, 45 L. Ed. 679.

Where a city council, authorized by legislature, has passed an ordinance prescribing that the rate of fare charged by a street railway company shall not exceed five cents, and the company accepts such ordinance, it is held that a contract arises between the city and the company, giving the company the right to charge a rate of five cents, and such rate cannot be reduced by the city, by virtue of its authority to prescribe from time to time rules and regulations for the operation of the road. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. Ed. 592.

The language of § 20 in the Michigan Street Railway Act of 1867, which provides that the rate of fare agreed upon shall not be increased without the consent of the city authorities, does not mean that the rate may be reduced without the consent of the railway companies. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 389, 46 L. Ed. 592.

A city has no right to reduce the fares of a street railway company as agreed upon between it and the railway though such agreement is made subsequent to the amendment of March 27, to § 34 of the Michigan Tram. Railway Act. This amendment is a general provision regarding regulations or conditions, destroying or unreasonably impairing rights or franchises already granted, or depriving the company of rights of construction and operation, while the matter of rates of fare is specially provided for by § 20 of the Street Railway Act, which provides for an agreement on that subject. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. Ed. 592.

24. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 382, 46 L. Ed. 592.

25. Effect of consolidation.—San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt, 200 U. S. 304, 50 L. Ed. 491, citing Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. Ed. 357; Railroad Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S. 499, 24 L. Ed. 836; Railroad Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S. 359, 25 L. Ed. 185; Keokuk, etc., R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 38 L. Ed. 450, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v.

c. Grants of Exclusive Privileges.—See ante, "Contracts of States," III, D.

(1) To Waterworks Companies—aa. In General.[26]—In accordance with the general rule that the presumptions are against the grant of exclusive privileges, it has been held repeatedly that the granting of franchises to private individuals to construct waterworks in a city and supply the inhabitants thereof with water does not preclude the city from afterwards erecting its own waterworks.[27]

bb. When Privileges Exclusive.—But a contract entered into by a municipality granting to a water company the right to supply its inhabitants with water, upon condition of the performance of its service by the grantee, is as much protected by the contract clause as similar grants directly by a state legislature.[28]

Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 23, 45 L. Ed. 395, 21 Sup. Rep. 240.

The Texas constitution of 1876 provides that all privileges and franchises granted by or under authority of the legislature shall be subject to the control thereof. Held, that any exemption from regulation of rates, which may have existed in favor of a street railway by virtue of prior legislation, was lost by the foreclosure and sale of its property, and its absorption, together with another company, by a new corporation, although the enabling ordinance expressly transferred all the rights and privileges granted to the old companies, including all the limitations, contracts and obligations. Hence, a legislative act requiring half rate tickets for school children impaired no contract obligation. San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt, 200 U. S. 304, 50 L. Ed. 491.

26. See the title WATER COMPANIES AND WATERWORKS.

27. When privileges of water companies not exclusive.—Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 663, 40 L. Ed. 838; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 175 U. S. 109, 44 L. Ed. 92; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. Ed. 585.

Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 696, 41 L. Ed. 1165; Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co., 191 U. S. 150, 48 L. Ed. 127; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. Ed. 585. These cases hold that the grant of the franchise does not of itself raise an implied contract that the grantor will not do any act to interfere with the rights granted to the waterworks company, and that, in the absence of the grant of an exclusive privilege, none will be implied against the public, but must arise, if at all, from some specific contract binding upon the municipality. Helena Waterworks Co. v. Helena, 195 U. S. 383, 388, 49 L. Ed. 245.

Construction of particular contract.—A grant of an exclusive privilege, for a term of years, of supplying a municipal corporation and its people with water drawn by means of a system of waterworks from a particular stream is not impaired by a grant to other persons of the privilege of supplying, during the same period, the same corporation and people with water drawn from a different stream or river. Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co., 141 U. S. 67, 35 L. Ed. 622, distinguishing New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525 and St. Tammany Waterworks v. New Orleans Waterworks, 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. Ed. 563, followed in Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 265, 36 L. Ed. 963.

There is no impairment of the obligation of contract where a city builds its own waterworks, under the general laws of Montana, before the expiration of a franchise which is expressly stated not to be exclusive. In the absence of an express contract that the city will not erect its own plant, none will be implied, though the grantee may have contracted to furnish water to all inhabitants desiring it during contract period. Helena Waterworks Co. v. Helena, 195 U. S. 383, 49 L. Ed. 245.

A waterworks company, granted a franchise by the village of Skaneateles under the New York act of 1873, acquired no contract right, express or implied, to any exclusive privilege of using the streets of the village for supplying it with water, but merely the right to be a corporation, together with authority to lay its water pipes in the streets of the village. Nor can any contract be implied, after the expiration of maximum statutory contract, from the foregoing facts; nor any legal duty be placed upon the village to acquire the property of the existing corporation. Hence, where the village builds its own waterworks, at the expiration of express contract, there is no impairment of the obligation of contract. Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. Ed. 585.

28. Exclusive privileges to waterworks companies.—Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341.

The obligation of a contract for the exclusive privilege of supplying water to a city and its inhabitants is probably impaired by a subsequent municipal ordinance, and a legislative enactment under which the municipality is proceeding to issue and market its bonds for the purpose of constructing its own waterworks system. Mercantile Trust, etc., Co. v.

And notwithstanding the well-established rule which requires grants of franchises and special privileges to be most strongly construed in favor of the public, and that where the privilege claimed is doubtful nothing is to be taken by mere implication as against public rights, it is held that a contract which gives to a water company exclusive right to erect, maintain and operate waterworks for a definite term, to supply water for public and private use, is a grant of an exclusive privilege, which would be impaired under the contract clause of the constitution, if the city should erect its own works during the term of the contract.[29] Moreover, under a general power conferred by a state legislature upon a municipality to provide for the erection and maintenance of a system of waterworks, the city can, in exercising this legislative power, exclude itself from constructing and operating waterworks for a period of years stipulated for in a contract, although there be an express provision against making an exclusive contract.[30]

cc. Regulation of Water Rates.—A city may exclude itself wholly[31] or in

Columbus, 203 U. S. 311, 51 L. Ed. 198, citing Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. Ed. 808; S. C., 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. Ed. 1102; Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. Ed. 782; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 L. Ed. 353, and distinguishing St. Paul Gas Light Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. Ed. 788.

Pursuant to power vested in it by the state, the city council, on March 15, 1887, passed "An ordinance to secure a supply of water for the city of Walla Walla," by which it granted, under certain restrictions, to the water company, for the period of twenty-five years from the date of the ordinance, "the right to lay, place and maintain all necessary water mains, pipes, connections and fittings in all the highways, streets and alleys of said city, for the purpose of furnishing the inhabitants thereof with water." After this contract had been in force and the stipulated rentals paid for about six years, on June 20, 1893, an ordinance was passed "to provide for the construction of a system of waterworks" for the purpose of supplying the city and its inhabitants with water; to authorize the purchase and condemnation of land for that purpose, and the issue of bonds to the amount of $160,000 to provide the necessary funds. Held, that the grant of a right to supply gas or water to a municipality and its inhabitants through pipes and mains laid in the streets, upon condition of the performance of its service by the grantee, is the grant of a franchise vested in the state, in consideration of the performance of a public service, and after performance by the grantee, is a contract protected by the constitution of the United States against state legislation to impair it. Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341.

Under authority of Mississippi act of March 18, 1886, the city of Vicksburg contracted with the Samuel R. Bullock Company and their assigns for the exclusive privilege of supplying water to the city, and of erecting and maintaining the necessary plant for such purpose, for the period of thirty years. Held, that unless the contract can be avoided for invalidity, any legislation inconsistent with its terms, and within the period of its existence, necessarily impairs the obligation of a contract and is void. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. Ed. 808.

29. Construction of grants.—Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. Ed. 1102, citing Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 L. Ed. 353; Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341.

30. Rule where city is forbidden to grant exclusive franchises.—Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. Ed. 1102, following Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341.

Cases distinguished.—"Cases are not infrequent where, under a general power to cause the streets of a city to be lighted or to furnish its inhabitants with a supply of water, without limitation as to time, it has been held that the city has no right to grant an exclusive franchise for a period of years; but these cases do not touch upon the question how far the city, in the exercise of an undoubted power to make a particular contract, can hedge it about with limitations designed to do little more than bind the city to carry out the contract in good faith and with decent regard for the rights of the other party." Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 468, 50 L. Ed. 1102; Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341.

31. City may exclude itself wholly from right to regulate rates.—Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 206 U. S. 496, 51 L. Ed. 1155, citing New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. Ed. 525; Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 7, 43 L. Ed. 341; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles part, as by agreeing that they shall not be reduced below a certain amount,[32] from the right to regulate water rates. But as a general rule municipalities have full power to regulate the price to be charged by water companies.[33]

(2) To Gas and Electric Light Companies.—And the general rule stated

City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. Ed. 886; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport City, 180 U. S. 587, 593, 45 L. Ed. 679.

The city of Vicksburg was authorized to provide by contract for the erection of a waterworks plant, and thereafter entered into a thirty years contract, giving the company the right to regulate its own rates within a certain maximum. Held, that a state has undoubted power to exclude itself from the right of regulation, where such action is not grossly unreasonable, or may delegate such power to its cities by clear language to that effect; and that the city of Vicksburg has so excluded itself in this case, and any subsequent regulation would impair the obligation of contract. Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 206 U. S. 496, 51 L. Ed. 1155.

32. City may partially deprive itself from right to regulate rates.—A municipal ordinance was passed fixing water rates to be charged and collected, and in an action to contest the constitutionality of this ordinance, it was held that it was unnecessary to show that the income of the water company was reduced by the city in order for the ordinance to violate the clause in the constitution prohibiting the impairment of the obligation of a contract. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 580, 44 L. Ed. 883.

In Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. Ed. 886, where a city leased its waterworks for a term of thirty years, giving power to the lessees to furnish water and collect rents therefor, but reserving to itself the right to regulate the water rates, provided that they should not be reduced to less than those then charged by the lessees, it was held that after the lessees had complied with the conditions it was not in the power of the city authorities, by ordinance or otherwise, to impose additional burdens as a condition to the exercise of the rights and privileges granted, nor to reduce the rates below those prevailing at the date of the contract.

Impairment by subsequent decisions.—In an action by the city waterworks to contest the constitutionality of a municipal ordinance fixing water rates to be charged and collected, it was held that a contract declared by the highest court of the state to be permitted by the existing constitution, could not be affected by subsequent decisions or changes in the constitution and thereby impair its obligation. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 575, 44 L. Ed. 886.

Estoppel.—A municipal ordinance fixed its water rates at a rate inconsistent with a provision in a contract made with the water company. The company, in compliance with the ordinance, paid the various rates for several years, but at the same time protested against the city's right to pass such an ordinance. Held, there was no such acquiescence as estopped the water company from contesting the constitutionality of the city ordinance as impairing the obligation of a contract within the meaning of the constitution. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 177 U. S. 558, 578, 579, 44 L. Ed. 886.

33. Generally municipalities may regulate water rates.—There is no impairment of the obligation of contract where a city regulates the price of water under authority of the general law (Ky. Act of June 14, 1893), although its contract with the water company was made prior to such law, and gives the company "power and authority to make and enforce as a part of the condition upon which it will supply water to its consumers, all needful rules and regulations not inconsistent with the law or provisions of this ordinance." Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport City, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. Ed. 679; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 180 U. S. 624, 45 L. Ed. 702; Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co., 191 U. S. 150, 48 L. Ed. 127; Owensboro v. Owensboro Waterworks Co., 191 U. S. 358, 48 L. Ed. 217.

The Knoxville Water Company was incorporated under a Tennessee general act, which expressly set out that such act was in no way to interfere with the police or general powers of the corporate authorities, who should have power by ordinance to regulate the price of water supplied by such companies. The object of incorporation was stated in the articles to construct waterworks and supply the city and inhabitants with water, and "to charge such prices for the same as may be agreed upon between said company and said parties." In its contract with the city, the company agreed to supply private consumers, "at a rate not to exceed five cents per one hundred gallons." Held, that the city had power to regulate the price under the general law, which power it did not contract away; and hence an ordinance lowering rates did not impair the obligation of contract. Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434, 47 L. Ed. 887.

Where the Florida constitution invested the legislature with "full power" to prevent excessive charges by persons and corporations performing services of a public nature, and the legislature afterwards empowered the municipalities to above as to water companies has been applied where exclusive privileges have been claimed by electric light companies.[34]

6. Ordinances Granting Privileges to Public Service Companies.—A city ordinance permitting the construction of a tunnel under a navigable stream so as to obstruct navigation, is not a contract that is impaired by a subsequent order to remove and lower the same so as to meet the present needs of navigation.[35]

7. Regulation of Streets and Highways.—Statutes or ordinances which merely transfer the reserved power of the state or municipality to regulate the use of the streets and highways in such manner as not to injuriously affect the public interests, from one public functionary to another, do not impair the obligation of contract.[36]

K. Implied and Constructive Contracts.—The protecting power of the constitutional provision against impairing the obligation of contracts, extends to implied contracts as much so as to express contracts.[37] But it has been said that while the courts repudiate all constructive exceptions to the constitutional prohibitions, they equally repudiate its application to constructive contracts. Thus they will preserve and protect an immunity from taxation when it is prescribe maximum reasonable charges for water; held, that an ordinance lowering rates did not impair the obligation of a contract made between the adoption of the constitution and the passing of the legislative act, the construction of the Florida courts, that the right was inalienable in the legislature, being followed. Tampa Water Works Co. v. Tampa, 199 U. S. 241, 50 L. Ed. 172, Brown and Peckham, JJ., dissenting.

34. Claim of exclusive privilege by electric light companies.—Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co., 191 U. S. 150, 48 L. Ed. 127, distinguishing Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341.

Where an electric light company was incorporated under the Missouri act of 1891, which gave the cities the right either to erect their own plants or to grant franchises for such purpose, and its contract with the city of Joplin did not expressly prohibit a municipal plant, or competitive plants, no such contract can be implied, and the erection of such plant within the contract term does not impair the obligation of the contract. Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co., 191 U. S. 150, 48 L. Ed. 127.

35. Ordinance granting privileges to tunnel under navigable rivers.—Where an Illinois act required, as a condition to the right to cross its cars under the Chicago river, that a certain railway company's tunnel should be so located and constructed as not unnecessarily to interrupt navigation; and where by a valid ordinance the city of Chicago authorized the building of the tunnel, but did not stipulate that it would not exert whatever powers it had to protect navigation, or would pay for any subsequent alterations of the tunnel built under its authority; held, that an ordinance afterwards passed, requiring the lowering of the tunnel to allow for changes in navigation, at the sole cost of such railway company, impaired the obligation of no contract. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 50 L. Ed. 845.

36. Regulation of streets and highways.—The grant of permission to a telegraph company to put in electrical subways and requiring the work to be done under the supervision of the commissioner of public works is not impaired by the subsequent passage of an act requiring the plans, and specifications to be submitted to a board of subway commissioners in place of a single commissioner. New York State v. Squire, 145 U. S. 175, 36 L. Ed. 666. See the title STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

37. Implied contracts are protected.—Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 134, 29 L. Ed. 587. See, generally, the title IMPLIED CONTRACTS.

"As to what constitutes a contract, no diversity of opinion exists; all the elementary writers on the subject, sanctioned by judicial decisions, consider it briefly and simply an agreement in which a competent party undertakes to do, or not to do a particular thing; but all know, that the agreement does not always, nay, seldom, if ever, upon its face, specify the full extent of the terms and conditions of the contract; many things are necessarily implied, and to be governed by some rule not contained in the agreement; and this rule can be no other than the existing law when the contract is made, or to be executed." Opinion of Thompson, J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 297, 6 L. Ed. 606.

Statute avoiding previous payments.—Where a statute was so construed by a state court as to declare void all payments previously made and accepted by the state, it was held that the state having accepted payments prior to the passage of the statute, this construction impaired the obligation of an implied contract, and it was unnecessary for the state granted in terms,[38] yet they will not raise an immunity by implication where there is no express contract.[39]

L. Incorporeal Hereditaments.—A gift by the crown, or by the state of incorporeal hereditaments, such as corporate franchises, although without consideration, when executed, is, in the strictest sense of the terms, a grant, which it is beyond the power of the state to impair.[40]

M. Judgments[41]—1. IN GENERAL.—While it is true in some sense and for some purposes that judgments have been treated and considered as contracts, yet they are only contracts because they are evidences of a debt or obligation on the part of the defendant due to the plaintiff. A judgment presupposes and is founded upon some antecedent obligation or contract, the essential nature of which was not changed by being put into the form of a judgment. In deciding how far a judgment may be affected by subsequent legislation, therefore, we must look mainly to the original contract.[42] And in accordance with this it seems to have been decided in some of the earlier cases that a judgment founded upon a contract was protected by the contract clause.[43] But the true rule seems to be that a judgment is in no sense a contract between the parties within the meaning of the contract clause of the federal constitution, because the most important elements of a contract are wanting. There is no aggregatio mentium. The defendant has not voluntarily assented or promised to pay.[44] court to refer to the statute in order to have this effect. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 100, 44 L. Ed. 673.

38. New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch 164, 3 L. Ed. 303.

39. Constructive exemptions, as from taxation.—Opinion of Baldwin, J., citing Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 563, 7 L. Ed. 939; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 583f, 9 L. Ed. 773.

40. Incorporeal hereditaments.—Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 684, 4 L. Ed. 629, opinion of Story, J. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 677.

"All incorporeal hereditaments, whether they be immunities, dignities, offices, or franchises, or other rights, are deemed valuable in law. The owners have a legal estate and property in them, and legal remedies to support and recover them, in case of any injury, obstruction or disseisin of them. Whenever they are the subjects of a contract or grant, they are just as much within the reach of the constitution as any other grant." Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 699, 4 L. Ed. 629.

41. See the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

42. Judgments as contracts.—Blount v. Windley, 95 U. S. 173, 175, 176, 24 L. Ed. 424.

43. When judgment a contract.—It is entirely within the competency of the state supreme court to authorize an inquiry into the cause of action on which the judgment of a municipal creditor was rendered, when he prays for its enforcement by proceedings which were authorized by legislation existing at its date, but subsequently repealed. Whether such repeal is effectual to deprive him of the process prayed, depends upon the question whether the judgment was founded upon a contract, the obligation of which the state was prohibited from impairing, or upon a cause of action arising ex delicto, which is not within the protection of the contract clause of the constitution. Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 720, 28 L. Ed. 574.

"The inquiry, however, which may be thus instituted into the nature of the original cause of action, does not, where the judgment was rendered upon a contract, authorize a re-examination of the validity of the contract, or of the propriety of the judgment. That would involve a retrial of the case." Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 721, 28 L. Ed. 574.

A judgment for damages, estimated in money, is sometimes called by text-writers a specialty or contract of record, because it establishes a legal obligation to pay the amount recovered; and, by a fiction of law, a promise to pay is implied where such legal obligation exists. It is on this principle that an action ex contractu will lie upon a judgment. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 288, 27 L. Ed. 936, approved in Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 413, 33 L. Ed. 193, citing Chitty on Contracts, Perkins' Ed., 87.

But this fiction cannot convert a transaction wanting the assent of parties into one which necessarily implies it. Judgments for torts are usually the result of violent contests, and are imposed upon the losing party by a higher authority against his will and protest. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 288, 27 L. Ed. 936, approved in Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 413, 33 L. Ed. 193.

44. Better rule is that judgment is not a contract.—Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. Ed. 925, re-

2. Judgments Based upon Rights and Obligations Arising Ex Delicto. —It is well settled that a judgment, duly rendered in a court of law, in an action of tort, is not protected by the contract clause of the federal constitution.[45] affirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301.

45. Judgments based upon contracts ex delicto are not protected.—Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 33 L. Ed. 193, citing Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458; Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936. See post, "Statutes Barring Actions Ex Delicto," VII, F, 6.

Judgments based upon rights and obligations arising ex delicto are not protected by the contract clause of the constitution. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936; Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 203, 22 L. Ed. 612; Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 33 L. Ed. 193.

And it was decided by the federal supreme court, in the case of Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936, that a liability for a tort, created by statute, although reduced to judgment by a recovery for the damages suffered, did not thereby become a debt by contract, in the sense of the constitution of the United States, forbidding state legislation impairing its obligation, for the reason that "the term 'contract' is used in the constitution in its ordinary sense as signifying the agreement of two or more minds, for considerations proceeding from one to the other, to do or not to do certain acts. Mutual assent to its terms is of its very essence." Approved in Chase v. Curtis, 113 U. S. 452, 464, 28 L. Ed. 1038; Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 413, 33 L. Ed. 193.

"It may be doubted whether a judgment not founded upon an agreement, express or implied, is a contract within the meaning of the constitutional prohibition. It is sometimes called by text-writers a contract of record, because it establishes a legal obligation to pay the amount recovered, and, by fiction of law, where there is a legal obligation to pay a promise to pay is implied. It is upon this principle, says Chitty, that an action in form ex contractu will lie on a judgment of a court of record. But it is not perceived how this fiction can convert the result of a proceeding, not founded upon an agreement, express or implied, but upon a transaction wanting the assent of the parties into a contract within the meaning of the clause of the federal constitution which forbids any legislation impairing its obligation. The purpose of the constitutional prohibition was the maintenance of good faith in the stipulations of parties against any state interference. If no assent be given to a transaction no faith is pledged in respect to it, and there would seem in such case to be no room for the operation of the prohibition." Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 203, 22 L. Ed. 612.

Action for destruction of property by a mob.—As the contract clause of the constitution was intended to secure the observance of good faith in the stipulation of parties against state action, it cannot be invoked when no such stipulation exists, and therefore not against legislation which interferes merely with the enforcement of claims for damages from the violence of mobs or of judgments upon such claims. Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 720, 28 L. Ed. 574.

Thus the obligation of a city under a statute requiring it to make compensation for property destroyed by mobs and riotous assemblages, is not within the protection of the constitution. Such liability is not contractual but rests upon the act of the legislature and may be withdrawn at pleasure. Louisiana v New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 287, 27 L. Ed. 936.

And it is immaterial that rights of compensation arising under such statutes have been put into judgment. A statute prohibiting the city from paying such a judgment, or depriving it of the power of taxation to the extent that it is unable to pay such judgment, does not impair the obligation of a contract. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 289, 27 L. Ed. 936.

Tortious taking of property under usages of warfare.—Under a provision of the West Virginia constitution of 1872, that "No citizen of this state who aided or participated in the late war between the government of the United States and a part of the people thereof, on either side, shall be liable, in any proceeding, civil or criminal; nor shall his property be seized or sold under final process issued upon judgments or decrees heretofore rendered, or otherwise, because of any act done, according to the usages of civilized warfare in the prosecution of said war, by either of the parties thereto"—and where the legislature provided for carrying this section into effect upon defendant's filing a statement of facts under oath; held, that there was no impairment of the obligation of contract as to such provision, when it was invoked to set aside a judgment based upon a tortious taking of cattle under the recognized usages of civilized warfare, a judgment for a tort not being a contract. Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 33 L. Ed. 193, citing Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458; Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612; Louisiana v.

The rendition of a judgment on a cause of action arising ex delicto does not convert a noncontractual duty into a contractual obligation, even though an action in form ex contractu may be maintained on the judgment.[46] Accordingly the revocation of the right or power of a municipal corporation to levy taxes to pay judgments founded upon a cause of action arising ex delicto, does not impair the obligation of any contract, since such judgments are not within the protection of the contract clause.[47] Nor does a judgment against a corporation, if founded upon a tort, become a debt of the corporation existing and arising ex contractu.[48]

3. Interest upon Judgments.—In accordance with the general rule stated above that a judgment is not a contract within the meaning of art. 1, § 10, of the federal constitution, a statute passed by a state reducing the rate of interest upon all judgments obtained in the courts of the state is valid, even as to judgments obtained prior to its passage.[49]

N. Legislative Contracts—1. In General.—"It has become the established law of this court that a legislative enactment, in the ordinary form of a statute, may contain provisions which, when accepted as the basis of action by individuals or corporations," become contracts between them and the state within the protection of the contract clause of the federal constitution.[50] The

New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936.

Vacation of order confirming report.—An act of the legislature of the state of New York, passed in 1871, in relation to the widening and straightening of Broadway, in the city of New York, authorizing the supreme court of the state to vacate an order made in 1870 confirming the report of commissioners of estimate and assessment respecting the property taken, from which order no appeal was allowable, if error, mistake, irregularity, or illegal acts appeared in the proceedings of the commissioners, or the assessments for benefit or the awards for damage, or either of them, had been unfair and unjust or inequitable or oppressive as respects the city or any person affected thereby, and to refer the matter back to new commissioners to amend or correct the report, or to make a new assessment, is not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts, or depriving a person of a vested right without due process of law. Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612, approved in Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936; Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 414, 33 L. Ed. 193; Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 35 L. Ed. 446.

46. Merger of cause of action in judgment does not alter case.—Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936; Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612, distinguished in Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. Ed. 925.

47. Revocation of right to levy taxes to pay judgments upon causes ex delicto.—Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936.

Revocation of power to tax to pay judgment.—Judgments founded upon causes of action arising ex delicto, as upon a statutory obligation to make compensation for property destroyed by mobs, etc., not being within the protection of the contract clause, the revocation of the power to tax, existing at the time of their rendition, is not, as to them, an impairment of the obligation of the contract. Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 720, 28 L. Ed. 574; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936.

When, therefore, a judgment creditor claims that the obligation of his contract has been impaired by the revocation of power to tax existing at the time of its rendition, it is competent for the court to inquire whether such judgment is founded upon a cause of action arising ex delicto or ex contractu. Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 720, 28 L. Ed. 574.

48. Judgment against corporation arising upon a tort.—Chase v. Curtis, 113 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 1038, citing Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936.

49. Recovery of interest upon judgments.—Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. Ed. 925, Harlan, Field and Brewer, JJ., dissenting.

50. Legislative contracts cannot be impaired.—New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 104, 114, 24 L. Ed. 352. See ante, "Contracts of States," III, D.

It is a principle that, on general questions of policy, a legislature cannot bind those which shall succeed it; but it is equally true that a legislature may make a contract which will be binding upon those that shall come after it. Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 207, 13 L. Ed. 383.

If the legislature, therefore, says to public-spirited citizens: "If you will embark, with your time, money, and skill, in an enterprise which will accommodate commonest case of a legislative contract is that of a charter granted to a corporation.[51] And the statute of a state may make a contract as well by reference to a previous enactment making one, and extending the rights, etc., granted by such enactment to a new party, as by direct enactment setting forth the contract in all its particular terms. And a third contract may be made in a subsequent statute by importation from the previously imported contract, in the former statute, and a fourth contract by importation from a third.[52]

2. CONSTRUCTION OF LEGISLATIVE CONTRACTS.—It is true that legislative contracts are to be construed most favorably to the state if on a fair consideration to be given the charter, any reasonable doubts arise as to their proper interpretation; but, as every contract is to be construed to accomplish the intention of the parties to it, if there is no ambiguity about it, and this intention clearly appears on reading the instrument, it is as much the duty of the court to uphold and sustain it, as if it were a contract between private persons.[53]

O. Marriage Contracts.[54]—A contract of marriage does not come within the meaning of the term "contract" as used in the contract clause of the federal constitution.[55] Hence it does not restrict the right of the legislature to legislate upon the subject of divorce, either as to granting legislative divorces or as to authorizing the granting of divorces by the courts.[56]

P. Ordinances and Constitutions—1. ORDINANCES.—A city ordinance

the public necessities, we will grant to you, for a limited period, or in perpetuity, privileges that will justify the expenditure of your money, and the employment of your time and skill," such a grant is a contract, with mutual considerations, and justice and good policy alike require that the protection of the law should be assured to it. The Binghampton Bridge, 3 Wall. 51, 74, 18 L. Ed. 137.

51. Corporate charters are contracts.—Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch 43, 3 L. Ed. 650; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629, distinguished in United States v. Stockslager, 129 U. S. 470, 32 L. Ed. 785; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 549, 583c, 9 L. Ed. 773; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 531, 12 L. Ed. 535; Richmond, etc., R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co., 13 How. 71, 82, 14 L. Ed. 55; The Binghampton Bridge, 3 Wall. 51, 73, 18 L. Ed. 137; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 19 L. Ed. 495; Washington University v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 439, 19 L. Ed. 498; Wilmington Railroad v. Reid, 13 Wall. 264, 266, 20 L. Ed. 568; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 454, 458, 24 L. Ed. 204; Holyoke Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 21 L. Ed. 133; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 232, 21 L. Ed. 447; The Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 225, 21 L. Ed. 888; Pacific R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wall. 36, 43, 22 L. Ed. 282; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155, 161, 24 L. Ed. 94; Turnpike Co. v. Illinois, 96 U. S. 63, 68, 24 L. Ed. 651; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 557, 25 L. Ed. 710; Railway Co. v. Philadelphia, 101 U. S. 528, 539, 29 L. Ed. 912; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 816, 25 L. Ed. 1079; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Railroad Comm'rs, 112 U. S. 609, 623, 28 L. Ed. 837; Georgia, etc., Banking Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 182, 32 L. Ed. 377; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 362, 392, 38 L. Ed. 1014, followed and reaffirmed in Reagan v. Mercantile Trust Co., 154 U. S. 413, 38 L. Ed. 1028; Reagan v. Mercantile Trust Co., 154 U. S. 418, 38 L. Ed. 1030; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 420, 38 L. Ed. 1031. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 677.

A charter incorporating a bank is a contract. Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. Ed. 939; Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 437, 14 L. Ed. 997.

A bank, where the stock is owned by individuals, is a private corporation. Its charter is a legislative contract, and cannot be changed without its assent. State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 14 L. Ed. 977.

Right to exact tolls.—A chartered right, namely, a right not merely to improve a river, but to exact tolls for the use of the improvement, created by an act of incorporation, is a contract which cannot be set aside by either party to it. Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 344, 37 L. Ed. 463, citing Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629.

52. How legislative contracts are made and entered into.—The Binghampton Bridge, 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. Ed. 137.

53. Construction of legislative contracts.—Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 437, 19 L. Ed. 495.

54. See the title MARRIAGE.

55. Marriage contracts not protected by this clause.—Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 31 L. Ed. 654.

56. Unrestricted right of legislature with regard to divorces.—Hunt v. Hunt, 131 U. S., appx. clxv, 24 L. Ed. 1109.

"That the framers of the constitution did not intend to restrain the states in the regulation of their civil institutions, has been held not to be a contract within the meaning of the contract clause of the federal constitution.[57]

2. STATE CONSTITUTIONS.—Nor is a state constitution a contract within the meaning of that clause of the constitution of the United States which prohibits the states from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts. It is the fundamental law adopted by the people for their government in a state of the United States, and as such it may be construed and carried into effect by the courts of the state, without review by the federal supreme court, except in cases where what is done comes, or is supposed to come, in conflict with the constitution of the United States.[58] Therefore a state statute which violates a state constitution is not a "law impairing the obligation of contracts" within the meaning of that term as used in art. 1, § 10, clause 1, of the constitution of the United States.[59]

Q. Statutes Prescribing Penalties and Forfeitures.[60]—A provision that a party shall forfeit a particular sum, in case he does not perform an act required by law, has always, in the construction of statutes, been regarded not as adopted for internal government, and that the instrument they have given us is not to be so construed, may be admitted. The provision of the constitution never has been understood to embrace other contracts than those which respect property, or some object of value, and confer rights which may be asserted in a court of justice. It never has been understood to restrict the general right of the legislature to legislate on the subject of divorces." Opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 629, 4 L. Ed. 629, approved in Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 557, 25 L. Ed. 710; Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 210, 31 L. Ed. 654.

A general law regulating divorces from the contract of marriage, like a law regulating remedies in other case of breaches of contract, is not necessarily a law impairing the obligation of such contract. But a law prohibiting a breach of the marriage contract, by imposing a forfeiture of the rights acquired under it, or dissolving it, because the mutual obligations are no longer observed, is not a law impairing the obligation of a contract. Opinion of Story, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 696, 4 L. Ed. 629.

Power of legislature to dissolve marriages.—Quære, whether the state has the power where neither of the parties assent, and where there has been no breach of the marital obligation, the legislature may annul the contract of marriage. Opinion of Story, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 696, 697, 4 L. Ed. 629.

Nature of the contract.—"Whilst marriage is often termed by text-writers and in decisions of courts a civil contract—generally to indicate that it must be founded upon the agreement of the parties, and does not require any religious ceremony for its solemnization—it is something more than a mere contract. The consent of the parties is of course essential to its existence, but when the contract to marry is executed by the marriage, a relation between the parties is created, which they cannot change." "It is not, then a contract within the meaning of the clause of the constitution which prohibits the impairing the obligation of contracts." Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 210, 31 L. Ed. 654.

Congressional restriction upon powers of territorial legislatures.—"The 14th section of the organic act of Oregon provides that the inhabitants of the territory shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and advantages granted and secured to the people of the territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio by the articles of compact contained in the ordinance of July 13, 1787, for the government of the territory. The last clause of article two of that ordinance declares 'that no law ought ever to be made or have force in said territory that shall in any manner whatever interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and without fraud previously formed.' This clause, though thus enacted, and made applicable to the inhabitants of Oregon, cannot be construed to operate as any greater restraint upon legislative interference with contracts than the provision of the federal constitution. It was intended, like that provision, to forbid the passage of laws which would impair rights of property vested under private contracts or engagements, and can have no application to the marriage relation." Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 214, 31 L. Ed. 654.

57. City ordinances are not contracts.—Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. Ed. 896. See the title ORDINANCES.

58. A state constitution is not a contract.—Church v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 282, 30 L. Ed. 960.

59. Effect where state statutes violate state constitutions.—Church v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 282, 283, 30 L. Ed. 960.

60. See the title PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.

a contract with the delinquent party, but as a punishment for an offense.[61] For example, a state statute providing for a penalty or forfeiture against a railroad company for failure to locate their road in the manner provided for in the act, is not a contract the obligation of which is impaired by an act of the legislature repealing the penalty.[62] So, also, it has been decided that a state legislature may make banking corporations subject to certain penalties for not performing their duties, such as paying their notes on demand in specie, and this does not violate any contract.[63]

R. Contracts and Property Rights Acquired from Great Britain.—All contracts and property rights acquired by corporations or individuals from the British government prior to the separation of the colonies from the mother country remain, subsist, and are protected under and by the constitution of the United States and of the respective states. The states have no right to impair the contract or property rights acquired from the British crown prior to the separation.[64]

S. Directions to Officers Contained in Statutes.—Mere executory directions to officers to perform acts, which may be revoked or suspended by a subsequent resolution, do not create contracts in the sense of the constitution.[65]

T. Guaranty.—An undertaking on the part of the state, in granting a charter to a banking corporation, to receive the notes of the bank in payment of debts due the state, is a contract within the meaning of that term as used in art. 1, § 10, of the federal constitution. It is a continuing guaranty by the state, 61. Statutes prescribing penalties and forfeitures.—Maryland v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 How. 534, 11 L. Ed. 714.

62. Rights of county under contract between state and railroad company that roads shall be located through said county.—The state of Maryland in 1836 passed a law directing a subscription of $3,000,000 to be made to the capital stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, with the following proviso: "That if the said company shall not locate the said road in the manner provided for in this act, then and in that case they shall forfeit $1,000,000 to the state of Maryland for the use of Washington County." The company having failed to locate its road through Washington County as required and the county commissioners of that county having instituted proceedings for the recovery of the $1,000,000 penalty, the state passed another act repealing so much of the prior act as made it the duty of the company to construct its road by the prescribed route, and remitting and releasing the penalty, and directing the discontinuance of any suit brought to recover the same. Upon objection that this statute impaired the obligation of contract, and divested interest in the county of Washington thereunder, was held that the original proviso requiring the location of the road through Washington County, and imposing the penalty in the event of the failure to so locate it, created no contract and vested no interest in Washington County or the commissioners thereof; that it was a question solely of state policy, which the state had a right to change at any time it should see fit, and neither the commissioners, nor the county, nor any one of its citizens acquired any separate or private interest under it, which could be maintained in a court of justice. Maryland v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 How. 534, 11 L. Ed. 714.

63. Penalties for failure of banks to perform their duties.—Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447.

64. Contracts and property rights acquired from Great Britain.—Dawson v. Godfrey, 4 Cranch 321, 323, 2 L. Ed. 634; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch 43, 50, 3 L. Ed. 650; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 651, 707, 4 L. Ed. 629; Society for the Propagation of the Gospel v. New Haven, 8 Wheat. 464, 5 L. Ed. 662.

65. Mere executory direction to officer.—An act of congress which confirms a private land claim, and which directs that, in as much as the government has already devoted the land in question to other purposes, certificates of new location, to be located upon the public lands, but not specifying any particular land, shall be issued to the claimant, does not create a contract between the government and the claimant or confer upon him anything more than a mere expectancy. It is a mere executory direction to the officers of the government which may be revoked or suspended by a subsequent resolution, directing that such certificates be withheld until the further order of congress, without impairing the obligation of any contract or depriving the claimant of a valid right. United States v. Stockslager, 129 U. S. 470, 32 L. Ed. 785, distinguishing Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 3 L. Ed. 162; McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall. 143, 18 L. Ed. 314; Morrow v. Whitney, 95 U. S. 551, 24 L. Ed. 456.

that the notes shall be so received. Such a contract will be binding on an individual, and is not less so on a state.[66]

U. Licenses.[67]—Occupation and business taxes or licenses are not generally regarded as contracts within the meaning of art. 10, § 1, of the federal constitution.[68] Thus, permission granted by a city council to a waterworks company, to supply the city and its inhabitants with water, though put in the form of an ordinance, is in effect but a license, and hence is not protected by the contract clause of the federal constitution.[69]

IV. Laws Concerning Civil Institutions or Governmental Subjects.

A. In General.—The word contract, in its broadest sense would comprehend the political relation between the government and its citizens; would extend to offices held within a state for state purposes, and to many of those laws concerning civil institutions, which must change with circumstances and be modified by ordinary legislation, which deeply concerns the public, and which, to preserve good government, the public judgment must control.[70] But the framers of the constitution did not intend, by the constitutional prohibition against the passage of laws impairing the obligation of contracts, to restrain the states in the regulation of their civil institutions, adopted for internal government.[71]

B. Police Power.—For example, the police power is a governmental power which neither the legislature nor the people themselves can bargain away.[72]

66. Contracts of guaranty.—Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383. See the title GUARANTY, ante, p. 580.

67. See the titles INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE; INTOXICATING LIQUORS; LICENSES. See ante, "Occupation and Business Taxes," III, D, 3, a, (2), cc.

68. A mere license by a state is always revocable. The power to revoke can only be restrained at all by an explicit contract upon good considerations to that effect. Christ Church v. Philadelphia County, 24 How. 300, 16 L. Ed. 602; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 454, 24 L. Ed. 204; Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 244, 21 L. Ed. 326; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co., 94 U. S. 535, 540, 24 L. Ed. 148.

Licenses to foreign corporations are not contracts.—An insurance company conformed to the requirements of the act of the legislature of Georgia, and received from the comptroller general a certificate authorizing it to transact business in that state for one year from January 1, 1874. That act does not, expressly or by implication, limit or restrain the exercise of the taxing power of the state, or of any municipality. An ordinance of the city council of Augusta, passed January 5, 1874, imposed from that date an annual license tax "on each and every fire, marine, or accidental insurance company located, having an office or doing business within" that city. Held, that the ordinance is not in violation of that clause of the constitution of the United States which declares that "no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts." Home Ins. Co. v. City Council, 93 U. S. 116, 23 L. Ed. 825, citing License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. Ed. 497, approved in New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. Ed. 607; Postal Tele. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 695, 38 L. Ed. 871.

69. License to water company held not a contract.—New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. Ed. 607. See New Orleans City, etc., R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. Ed. 121.

70. Laws concerning civil institutions.—Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 627, 629, 4 L. Ed. 629; Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 377, 16 L. Ed. 296. See ante, "Marriage Contracts," III, O.

"The contracts which the constitution protects are those that relate to property rights, not governmental." Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 820, 25 L. Ed. 1079.

71. States not restrained in regulation of civil institutions.—Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 365, 16 L. Ed. 296, following Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 627, 4 L. Ed. 629; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 820, 25 L. Ed. 1079.

The principle there laid down in the Dartmouth College Case, and since maintained in the cases which have followed and been controlled by it, has no application where the statute in question is a public law relating to a public subject within the domain of the general legislative power of the state, and involving the public rights and public welfare of the entire community affected by it. The two classes of cases are separated by a broad line of demarcation. Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 557, 25 L. Ed. 710; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 13 L. Ed. 518; Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 13 L. Ed. 472.

72. Usually, where a contract, not contrary to public policy, has been entered

C. Power of State over Counties and Municipalities—1. In General.—The power of the states with respect to municipal corporations, is of the same absolute character.[73] With respect to the location, boundaries, and government of counties, county seats, municipalities, etc., the power of the state is absolute and unalienable. In all these cases there can be no contract and no irrepealable law, because they are governmental subjects. They involve public interests, and legislative acts concerning them are necessarily public laws. With regard to them, each succeeding legislature stands upon the same footing as its predecessors, and no one legislature has any power to bind another by any unalterable law or contract with reference thereto. In other words, the right of the legislature to do at all times whatever the varying circumstances and present exigencies may require in reference to the location of counties and municipalities cannot be bargained away.[74]

2. Location or Establishment of County Seats.—The location or establishment of a count seat at a certain place upon the terms and conditions which have been complied with, is not a contract within the meaning of the contract clause of the federal constitution.[75]

D. Exercise of Eminent Domain—1. In General.—The right of eminent domain is an element of sovereignty, and does not fall within the inhibition of § 10, art. 1, of the constitution of the United States which prohibits legislation impairing the obligation of contracts.[76] Hence, an unexecuted right of into between parties competent to contract, it is not within the power of either party to withdraw from its terms without the consent of the other; and the obligation of such a contract is constitutionally protected from hostile legislation. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 72, 42 L. Ed. 948. See the title POLICE POWER.

73. Power of states with respect to cities and towns.—Cooley, Const. Lim., pp. 232, 342; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 559, 25 L. Ed. 710. See post, "Legislative Control over Municipal Corporations," VI, B.

74. Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 559, 25 L. Ed. 710.

75. Location of county seat.—By an act of the legislature of Ohio, passed February 16, 1846, it was provided that, upon the fulfillment of certain terms and conditions by the proprietors or citizens of the town of Canfield in Mahoning County, the county seat should be "permanently established" at that town. Those terms and conditions having been complied with, the county seat was established accordingly. On April 9, 1874, the legislature passed an act providing for the removal of the county seat to Youngstown. Certain citizens of Canfield thereupon filed their bill setting forth that the act of 1846, and the proceedings thereunder, constituted, within the meaning of the constitution, an executed contract the obligation of which was impaired by the later act, and praying for a perpetual injunction against the contemplated removal. Held: 1. That no such contract existed. 2. That the act of 1846 was a public law relating to a public subject with respect to which the legislature which enacted it had no power to bind a subsequent one. 3. That if that act and the proceedings under it constituted a contract, it was satisfied on the part of the state by establishing the county seat at Canfield, with the intent that it should remain there. 4. That there was no stipulation that the county seat should remain there in perpetuity. 5. That the practical interpretation of the phrase "permanently established," which has been in long and frequent use in the statutes of Ohio with respect to county seats established otherwise than temporarily, is, though by no means conclusive, entitled to consideration. Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. Ed. 710, approved in Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 105, 33 L. Ed. 825; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 459, 36 L. Ed. 1018.

In the interpretation of statutes like that of 1846 (supra), the rule is that, as against the state, nothing is to be taken as conceded but what is given in express and explicit terms, or by an implication equally clear. Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. Ed. 710. See the title COUNTIES, vol. 4, p. 834.

76. The right of eminent domain a sovereign right.—Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. Ed. 1165, citing West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. Ed. 535; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. Ed. 516; Adirondack R. Co. v. New York State, 176 U. S. 335, 44 L. Ed. 492. See the title EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746.

The constitution of the United States cannot be so construed as to take away this right of the states. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. Ed. 535.

The exercise of the right of eminent domain does not interfere with the inviolability of contracts. All property is held a railroad company to acquire lands by condemnation for the construction of its railroad, cannot be held to be in itself a vested right surviving the existence of the franchise or an unauthorized circumscription of its scope. Nor does the mere filing of a map of a proposed route take the case out of this rule.[77] But, of course, wherever the state or municipality undertakes to condemn the property of a corporation existing under a contract between itself and such corporation, such condemnation is subject to the rule of just compensation as in all other cases of the exercise of such power.[78]

2. Corporate Charters.—Thus, a corporate charter, like all private rights, is subject to the right of eminent domain in the state.[79] Because manifestly the by tenure from the state, and all contracts are made subject to the right of eminent domain. Therefore the contract is not violated by the exercise of the right. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. Ed. 535, approved in Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 89, 5 L. Ed. 547; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 673, 29 L. Ed. 516.

Error to state court.—The illegal seizure of private property on the pretense of exercising the right of eminent domain, such act being an abuse of the power of the state under the sanction of a state law, is not a violation of the contract between the state and the owner of the land so seized, in the sense and meaning of the constitution. Such invasion and illegal seizure under the pretended exercise of the power of eminent domain is not sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the federal supreme court upon the ground that the obligation of the grant from the state to the owner of property has been impaired. It rests with state legislatures and state courts to protect their citizens from injustice and oppression of this description. Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 569, 585, 12 L. Ed. 1201.

77. Unexecuted right to condemn lands.—Adirondack R. Co. v. New York State, 176 U. S. 335, 44 L. Ed. 492.

Where the court of appeals of the state of New York said, "There is no property in a naked railroad route existing on paper only, that the state is obliged to pay for when it needs the land covered by that route for a great public use, and its officers are authorized to act by appropriate legislation," the United States supreme court held that it accepted the views of this court, and that the perpetual injunction granted by the state against a railroad company's taking certain lands by condemnation proceedings impaired the obligation of no contract between it and the railroad company. Adirondack R. Co. v. New York State, 176 U. S. 335, 346, 44 L. Ed. 492.

78. Compensation must always be made.—Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. Ed. 1165, explaining and distinguishing Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 26 L. Ed. 302.

79. Corporate charters may be condemned.—Richmond, etc., R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co., 13 How. 71, 14 L. Ed. 55.

A charter incorporating a bridge company and vesting it with right to take tolls for a definite number of years, is a contract between the state and the company, but, like all private rights, it is subject to the right of eminent domain in the state. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. Ed. 535, approved in Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 691, 41 L. Ed. 1165.

The right of the state to condemn and appropriate the property or franchise granted, under its power of eminent domain, is one of the implied conditions of all grants and charters made by the state; and when the state exercises its right of taking the property or franchise under this reserved power, it is not an impairment of the obligation, but the exercise of its rights on the part of the state under an essential and inseparable condition of the contract. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 533, 12 L. Ed. 535.

"If, in the judgment of the state, the public interests will be best subserved by an abandonment of the policy of granting exclusive privileges to corporations, other than railroad companies, in consideration of services to be performed by them for the public, the way is open for the accomplishment of that result, with respect to corporations whose contracts with the state are unaffected by that change in her organic law. The rights and franchises which have become vested upon the faith of such contracts can be taken by the public, upon just compensation to the company, under the state's power of eminent domain. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 531, 12 L. Ed. 535; Richmond, etc., R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co., 13 How. 71, 83, 14 L. Ed. 55; Boston Water-Power Co. v. Boston & Worcester Railroad, 23 Pick. 360, 393; Boston & Lowell Railroad Co. v. Salem & Lowell Railroad Co., 2 Gray, 1, 35. In that way the plighted faith of the public will be kept with those who have made large investments upon the assurance by the state that the contract with them will be performed." New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650, 673, 29 L. Ed. 516.

Crossings.—In accordance with the general rule that the exercise of the right of eminent domain does not interfere with right of property in a chartered corporation is no more sacred and intangible than the right in the person of the citizen.[80]

3. PROPERTY OF WATER SUPPLY COMPANY.—The property of a water supply company existing and operating under a contract with a municipality, is private property and as much subject to be taken under eminent domain proceedings by the state as any other property; and such condemnation proceedings do not impair the obligation of any contract with the municipality.[81]

4. CONDEMNATION OF STOCK.—A statute of a state which provides for the condemnation of the minority shares in a corporation, does not impair the obligation of any contract.[82]

E. Public Offices and Officers—1. GENERAL POWER OF STATE LEGISLATURES.—The legislative power of a state, except so far as restrained by its own constitution, is at all times absolute with respect to all offices within its reach. It may at pleasure create or abolish them, or modify their duties. It may also shorten or lengthen the term of service. And it may increase or diminish the salary or change the mode of compensation.[83] Nor is it within the power of one legislature to prevent its successors from repealing an act creating a public office.[84]

the inviolability of contracts, it has been held that the legislature has power to authorize the construction of one railroad across another. Richmond, etc., R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co., 13 How. 71, 14 L. Ed. 55, following West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. Ed. 535.

80. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. Ed. 535.

81. Condemnation of property of water company.—Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. Ed. 1165.

The constitution of the United States (§ 10, art. 1) regarding the impairing of obligation of contracts, is not violated by a state statute authorizing a city to acquire by condemnation, the franchise, reservoir, machinery, etc., of a water company, even though the city has an unexpired contract with the water company to purchase water from it for 25 years as a fixed sum per hydrant. The constitutional guarantee of just compensation is not a limitation of the power to take, but a condition of its exercise. The prohibition against a law impairing the obligation of a contract does not stay the power of eminent domain. Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. Ed. 1165.

82. Condemnation of corporate stock.—Where the public interest is best subserved by the improvement of railroad property, which can only be done by a purchasing company, and three-fourths of the shares are held by such company, a Connecticut statute providing for condemnation of the minority stock impairs the obligation neither of an existing lease of the property, nor of the contract with the stockholders. Offield v. New York, etc., R. Co., 203 U. S. 372, 51 L. Ed. 231. See the title STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

83. Power of legislature over offices and officers.—Matter of Hennen, 13 Pet. 230, 10 L. Ed. 138; Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 13 L. Ed. 472; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 559, 25 L. Ed. 710; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 25 L. Ed. 1079; United States v. McDonald, 128 U. S. 471, 32 L. Ed. 506; Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 33 L. Ed. 825. See, generally, the title PUBLIC OFFICERS.

"Nor does the fact that a constitution may forbid the legislature from abolishing a public office or diminishing the salary thereof during the term of the incumbent, change its character or make it property. True, the restrictions limit the power of the legislature to deal with the office, but even such restrictions may be removed by constitutional amendment. In short, generally speaking, the nature of the relation of a public officer to the public is inconsistent with either a property or a contract right." Taylor v. Beckham, No. 1, 178 U. S. 548, 577, 44 L. Ed. 1187.

The view that a public office is not property has been generally entertained in this country. The decisions are numerous to the effect that public offices are mere agencies or trusts and that the incumbents thereof have no vested property or contract rights therein. Nor are the salary and emoluments property, secured by contract, except compensation for services actually rendered. Taylor v. Beckham, No. 1, 178 U. S. 548, 576, 577, 44 L. Ed. 1187. Accord: Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 416, 13 L. Ed. 472; Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 104, 33 L. Ed. 825; Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 227, 26 L. Ed. 462.

The title to public office is not a contract.—In the absence of constitutional restraints, the state may discontinue the office in the midst of the term for which the incumbent was elected, or reduce the compensation attached thereto, except as to services already rendered. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 416, 13 L. Ed. 472.

84. One legislature cannot tie the hands of its successor.—Crenshaw v. United

2. Limitations of General Rule.—But though, as a general proposition, a state may abolish any public office created by a public law,[85] yet even with respect to those offices the circumstance may be such as to create an exception. When the legislature makes a contract with a public officer, as in case of a stipulated salary for his services during a limited period, this, during the limited period, is just as much a contract within the purview of the constitutional prohibition, as a like contract would be between two private citizens.[86]

3. Limiting, Enlarging or Repealing Authority of Public Officers.—The state legislature has power to enlarge, repeal and limit the authority of public officers.[87]

4. Discharge of Public Officers—a. In General.—An officer appointed for a definite time or during good behavior has no vested interest or contract right in his office of which congress cannot deprive him.[88]

b. Army Officers.—And in this respect of official tenure there is no difference in law between officers in the army and other officers of the government.[89]

5. Government Offices.—Although an office is an employment, it does not follow that every employment is an office. A man may certainly be employed under a contract, express or implied, to perform a service without becoming an States, 134 U. S. 99, 108, 33 L. Ed. 825.

85. Generally states may abolish public offices.—Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 559, 25 L. Ed. 710; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 10, 26 L. Ed. 302.

Rights of professor in a state university —Ouster by state as violation of contract. —The plaintiff was elected as professor of mathematics in the University of Missouri, through the curators appointed by the state for governing that institution, and it was resolved that he should hold his office for six years from July 5, 1856, "subject to law." Held, that plaintiff accepted his office subject to the laws then in existence, and subject to any law which might thereafter be enacted, and that it was competent for the legislature to appoint new curators and vacate his office without any fault on his part being assigned, at any time it might see fit to do so regardless of whether the six years had expired or not. Head v. University, 19 Wall. 526, 22 L. Ed. 160.

86. When a public office may not be abolished.—"But even with respect to those offices the circumstances may be such as to create an exception. In Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, Mr. Justice Story said: 'It is admitted that the state legislatures have power to enlarge, repeal, and limit the authorities of public officers in their official capacities, in all cases where the constitutions of the states respectively do not prohibit them; and this, among others, for the very reason that there is no express or implied contract that they shall always during their continuance in office exercise such authorities. * * * But when the legislature makes a contract with a public officer, as in case of a stipulated salary for his services during a limited period, this, during the limited period, is just as much a contract within the purview of the constitutional prohibition, as a like contract would be between two private citizens.' 4 Wheat. 518, 694, 4 L. Ed. 629." Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 10, 26 L. Ed. 302.

87. The state legislature has power to enlarge, repeal and limit the authorities of public officers, in their official capacities in all cases where the constitution of the states respectively do not prohibit them; there being no express or implied contract that they shall always, during their continuance in office, exercise such authority. Opinion of Story, J., in Dartmouth College v. Wodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 694, 4 L. Ed. 629.

88. Discharge of public officers.—Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 104, 33 L. Ed. 825.

"In substance, a statute under which one takes office, and which fixes the term of office at one year, or during good behavior is the same as one which adds to those provisions the declaration that the incumbent shall not be dismissed therefrom. Whatever the form of the statute, the officer under it does not hold by contract. He enjoys a privilege revocable by the sovereignty at will; and one legislature cannot deprive its successor of the power of revocation." Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 108, 33 L. Ed. 825.

89. Army officers have no vested right to office.—Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 107, 33 L. Ed. 825, citing Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 227, 26 L. Ed. 462. See the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 499.

The contract clause of the federal constitution is not infringed by the provision in the naval appropriation act of August 5, 1882, c. 391, § 1, directing the favorable discharge from the navy, with one years' pay, of those cadets not needed to fill any vacancy in the service happening during the year proceeding their graduation. Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 33 L. Ed. 825.

officer.[90] A government office is different from a government contract. The latter, from its nature, is necessarily limited in its duration and specific in its objects. The terms agreed upon define the rights and obligations of both parties and neither may depart from them without the assent of the other.[91]

6. Salaries and Emoluments of Public Officers.—Except as to compensation for services actually rendered,[92] a state legislature may increase or diminish the salary of an officer or change the mode of compensation, because the salary and emoluments of an office are not property, secured by contract.[93] But when the legislature makes a contract with a public officer, as in case of a stipulated salary for his service during a limited period, this, during the period

90. Government offices.—Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 8, 26 L. Ed. 302; United States v. Maurice, 2 Brock. 96.

91. Government office different from government contract.—United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 18 L. Ed. 830; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 8, 26 L. Ed. 302.

Surveying officers.—By an act of the legislature of Wisconsin entitled an "An act to provide for a geological, mineralogical, and argicultural survey of the state," approved March 3, 1857, the plaintiff was appointed one of the "commissioners" to assist in making the survey. Pursuant to the statute a contract was executed between the plaintiff and the government of the state, wherein it was stipulated that plaintiff was to perform the duties therein enumerated for a certain specified consideration, said contract "to continue till the third day of March, 1863," etc. It was held that the relation between plaintiff and the state was contractual, and not that of an office holder, and that the state should not impair the obligation of its contract by repealing the statute under the authority of which plaintiff was employed. Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 26 L. Ed. 302, citing Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 694, 4 L. Ed. 629, distinguished in Missouri v. Walker, 125 U. S. 339, 344, 31 L. Ed. 769, cited in Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 690, 41 L. Ed. 1165.

92. Power of legislature as to salaries already earned.—Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 13 L. Ed. 472; Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 29 L. Ed. 587.

"We do not assert the proposition that a person elected to an office for a definite term has any such contract with the government or with the appointing body as to prevent the legislature or other proper authority from abolishing the office or diminishing its duration or removing him from office. So, though when appointed the law has provided a fixed compensation for his services, there is no contract which forbids the legislature or other proper authority to change the rate of compensation for salary or services after the change is made, though this may include a part of the term of the office then unexpired." Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 133, 29 L. Ed. 587; Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 13 L. Ed. 472.

But, after the services have been rendered, under a law, resolution, or ordinance which fixes the rate of compensation, there arises an implied contract to pay for those services at that rate. This contract is a completed contract. Its obligation is perfect, and rests on the remedies which the law then gives for its enforcement. Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 134, 29 L. Ed. 587.

Where an officer of a municipal corporation has acquired a vested contract right against the corporation to a stipulated compensation for services already rendered, and which, but for a subsequent constitutional amendment restricting the power of taxation, he could enforce, such amendment impairs the obligation of his contract, and, so far as his rights are concerned, is inoperative. Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 29 L. Ed. 587, citing Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 28 L. Ed. 574.

The promised compensation for services actually performed and accepted, during the continuance of the particular agency or office, may be claimed against the state both upon principle of contract and of equity. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 416, 13 L. Ed. 472.

Validity of statute abolishing fees of office as to the then incumbent.—Quære, whether the act of congress, abolishing the fees of justices of the peace, in the District of Columbia, can affect those justices who were in commission when the act was passed? United States v. More, 3 Cranch 159, 2 L. Ed. 397.

93. Legislature may increase or diminish salaries.—Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 13 L. Ed. 472; United States v. Fisher, 109 U. S. 143, 27 L. Ed. 885; Taylor v. Beckham, No. 1, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. Ed. 1187.

Salaries of canal commissioners.—In 1836 the state of Pennsylvania passed a law directing canal commissioners to be appointed annually, by the governor, and that their term of office should commence on the first of February in every year. The pay was four dollars per diem. In April, 1843, certain persons being then in office as commissioners, the legislature passed another law, providing, amongst limited, is just as much a contract, within the purview of the constitutional prohibition, as a like contract would be between two private individuals.[94]

F. Control over Navigable Waters.—The rule that there can be no irrepealable contract upon governmental subjects, applies with very great force to the control of the soils and beds of navigable waters in the great public harbors, held by the people in trust for their common use and of common right as an incident to their sovereignty.[95]

V. Contracts of Private Individuals.

A. Form and Sufficiency of Contract.[96]—Of course where there is no contract to violate, there can be no impairment.[97] Moreover before the contract clause can be invoked to protect an agreement, it must have all the essentials of a valid contract,[98] such as a sufficient consideration, etc.[99] This for the reason that the term "contract" is used in the constitution in its ordinary sense as signifying the agreement of two or more minds, for considerations proceeding from one to the other, to do or not to do certain acts. Therefore mutual assent other things, that the per diem should be only three dollars, the reduction to take effect upon the passage of the law; and that in the following October, the commissioners should be elected by the state. The commissioners then in office claimed the full allowance during their entire year, upon the ground that the state had no right to pass a law impairing the obligation of a contract. Held, that there was no contract between the state and the commissioners, within the meaning of the constitution of the United States, and that statute was not repugnant to the contract clause of the constitution. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 13 L. Ed. 472, approved in Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 104, 33 L. Ed. 825.

Salaries of judicial officers.—The act of June 17th, 1880, entitled an act to regulate the salaries of chief justices and associate justices in the territories, fixing the annual salary of the chief justice of the territory of Wyoming at $3,000, was not a contract that the salary should not be reduced during his term of office. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 13 L. Ed. 472. Nor was there any provision of the constitution which forbade a reduction. Clinton v. Englebrecht, 13 Wall. 434, 20 L. Ed. 659. United States v. Fisher, 109 U. S. 143, 145, 27 L. Ed. 885, approved in Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 107, 33 L. Ed. 825.

94. Opinion of Story, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 694, 4 L. Ed. 629, approved in Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 26 L. Ed. 302.

95. Control over navigable waters cannot be contracted away.—"We hold, therefore, that any attempted cession of the ownership and control of the state in and over the submerged lands in Lake Michigan, by the act of April 16, 1869, was inoperative to affect, modify or in any respect to control the sovereignty and dominion of the state over the lands, or its ownership thereof, and that any such attempted operation of the act was annulled by the repealing act of April 15, 1873, which to that extent was valid and effective. There can be no irrepealable contract in a conveyance of property by a grantor in disregard of a public trust, under which he was bound to hold and manage it." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 460, 36 L. Ed. 1018, following Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. Ed. 710. See the title NAVIGABLE WATERS.

96. See the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552.

97. No contract no impairment.—Although by the general law of Louisiana a father's guardianship of his minor children imports a mortgage on his immovable property in their favor, yet this mortgage does not make such a contract between the guardian to the minor as that the legislature may not, by special statute, authorize the father to sell his property divested of the tacit mortgage, especially where the proceeds are still preserved to the minors by an investment which the statute prescribes. Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 19 L. Ed. 694.

98. See the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552.

99. Necessity for consideration.—The contract must not be a mere gratuity. There must be a sufficient consideration, or, no matter how long the alleged right has been enjoyed, it may be resumed by the state at its pleasure. Christ Church v. Philadelphia County, 24 How. 300, 16 L. Ed. 602; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 561, 25 L. Ed. 710.

Mere executory contracts cannot be enforced at law, unless there be a valuable consideration to sustain them; and in this respect such contracts are not aided by the constitutional provisions against impairment; that provision does not create a new obligation, or give any efficacy to nude pacts. Opinion of Story, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 683, 4 L. Ed. 629.

But where a voluntary gift or agreement is of its very essence.[1] The prohibition of the federal constitution was intended to secure the observance of good faith in the stipulation of parties against any state action. Where a transaction is not based upon any assent of parties, it cannot be said that any faith is pledged with respect to it; and no case arises for the operation of the prohibition.[2]

B. How Obligation Impaired.—1. LAWS CHANGING THE CONSTRUCTION OF PRE-EXISTING STATUTES.—It is not within the constitutional power of the legislature to alter the rights of parties by changing the construction of pre-existing statutes.[3] Hence, it is not within the constitutional power of a state has become executed, the rights acquired thereunder become as irrevocable as though founded upon a valuable consideration. Property conveyed without consideration becomes, as against the donor, the absolute property of the donee, and whether the donor be the state or a private individual, the right of the donee becomes vested and the state has no power to divest or impair the same. Opinion of Story, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 683, 4 L. Ed. 629.

Legislative contracts.—There is no necessity of looking for the consideration for a legislative contract outside of the objects for which the corporation was created. "These objects were deemed by the legislature to be beneficial to the community, and this benefit constitutes the consideration for the contract, and no other is required to support it. This has been the well-settled doctrine of this court on this subject since the case of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 625, 4 L. Ed. 629." Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 437, 19 L. Ed. 495.

1. Meaning of term "contract" in the constitution.—Chase v. Curtis, 113 U. S. 452, 28 L. Ed. 1038.

2. Mutual assent is necessary.—Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 288, 27 L. Ed. 936, approved in Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 413, 33 L. Ed. 193, citing Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 203, 22 L. Ed. 612.

It may be doubted whether a judgment not founded upon an agreement, express or implied, is a contract within the meaning of the constitutional prohibition. It is sometimes called by tax-writers a contract of record, because it establishes a legal obligation to pay the amount recovered, and, by fiction of law, where there is a legal obligation to pay, a promise to pay is implied. It is upon this principle, says Chitty, that an action in form ex contractu will lie on a judgment of a court of record. But it is not perceived how this fiction can convert the result of a proceeding, not founded upon an agreement express or implied, but upon a transaction wanting the assent of the parties, into a contract within the meaning of the clause of the federal constitution which forbids any legislation impairing its obligation. The purpose of the constitutional prohibition was the maintenance of good faith in the stipulations of parties against any state interference. If no assent be given to a transaction no faith is pledged in respect to it, and there would seem in such case to be no room for the operation of the prohibition. Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 203, 22 L. Ed. 612.

"In Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 288, 27 L. Ed. 936, in which it was contended on behalf of an owner of a judgment that it was a contract, and within the protection of the federal constitution as such, it was said that 'the term "contract" is used in the constitution in its ordinary sense, as signifying the agreement of two or more minds, for considerations proceeding from one to the other, to do, or not to do, certain acts. Mutual assent to its terms is of its very essence.' Where the transaction is not based upon any assent of parties it cannot be said that any faith is pledged with respect to it, and no case arises for the operation of the constitutional prohibition." Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 170, 36 L. Ed. 925, reaffirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301. See ante, "Judgments," III, M.

3. Laws changing construction of statutes.—The rights of the parties must necessarily be determined by the law as it was when the contract was made, and it is not within the constitutional power of the legislature to alter the rights of parties by declaring that an existing law, under which those rights accrued, shall be construed in a different manner from that in which it was intended and constituted by the courts of the state at the time those rights accrued. Statutes declaring the construction of existing statutes can only operate prospectively as to rights previously acquired under the existing statute. Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 679, 26 L. Ed. 886.

In Stockdale v. Insurance Companies, 20 Wall. 323, 331, 22 L. Ed. 348, the federal supreme court, speaking by Mr. Justice Miller, said, that "both on principle and authority it may be taken to be true, that a legislative body may, by statute, declare the construction of previous statutes so as to bind the courts in reference to all transactions occuring after the passage of the law, and may, in many cases, thus furnish the rule to govern the courts in transactions that are past, provided no constitutional right of the party concerned is violated." Sedgwick, Contr. Stat. and legislature to take from a plaintiff his right, whether arising on express or implied contract, to interest upon interest, if, when his contract is made and entered into, he had such right under the laws of the state.[4]

2. Laws Affecting Validity, Construction, Discharge and Enforcement—a. In General.—The principle that laws which subsist at the time and place of the making of a contract, and where it is to be performed, enter into and form a part of it, as if they were expressly referred to or incorporated in its terms, embraces alike those which affect its validity, construction, discharge, and enforcement.[5]

b. Laws Construing Terms in Contracts.—Thus, a statute declaring that the word "ton" should thereafter be held, in prior as well as subsequent contracts, to mean half or double the weight before prescribed, would affect the construction of the contract, and there can be no doubt that such a law passed by a state would be held void as impairing the obligation of pre-existing contracts.[6]

c. Statute of Frauds.—Likewise, a statute of frauds embracing pre-existing parol contracts not before required to be in writing, would affect the validity of pre-existing contracts, and there can be no doubt that such a law passed by a state would impair the obligation of the contract.[7]

d. Laws Annexing Conditions to Its Enforcement—(1) In General.—Where conditions are annexed to the enforcement of a contract subsequently to the making thereof, of such a nature as to substantially impair rights secured by the contract, such law will be held invalid.[8] In other words, a law which alters Const. Law (2d Ed.), pp. 214, 227; Cooley, Const. Lim. 93, 94. Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 679, 26 L. Ed. 886.

4. Right to compound interest.—Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. Ed. 886.

5. Laws affecting validity, construction, discharge and enforcement.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403, approved in Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793.

Illustrations of this proposition are found, in the obligation of the debtor to pay interest after the maturity of the debt, where the contract is silent; in the liability of the drawer of a protested bill to pay exchange and damages, and in the right of the drawer and indorser to require proof of demand and notice. These are as much incidents and conditions of the contract as if they rested upon the basis of a distinct agreement. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 550, 18 L. Ed. 403, citing Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 92, 5 L. Ed. 547; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 231, 6 L. Ed. 606; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 319, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. Ed. 397.

6. Laws construing terms in contracts.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. Ed. 403; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793.

7. Statutes of frauds.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. Ed. 403; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793. See the title FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, ante, p. 451.

Thus, a law which declares that no action shall be brought whereby to charge a person upon his agreement to pay the debt of another, or upon an agreement relating to lands, unless the same be reduced to writing, impairs a contract made by parol, whether the law precede or follow the making of such contract; and if the argument that this law also impairs in the former case the obligation of the contract, be sound, it must follow that the statute of frauds, and all other statutes which in any manner meddle with contracts, impair their obligation, and are, consequently, within the operation of this section and article of the constitution. It will not do to answer that, in the particular case put and in others of the same nature, there is no contract to impair, since the pre-existing law denies all remedy for its enforcement, or forbids the making of it, since it is impossible to deny that the parties have expressed their will in the form of a contract, notwithstanding the law denies to it any valid obligation. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 256, 6 L. Ed. 606.

8. Statute forbidding recovery on debts not returned for taxation.—When, on the 1st of January, 1870, suit was brought on a promissory note given in March, 1864, payable in March, 1865, a law passed in October, 1870, which enacted (by one section) that in all suits pending on any contract made before June 1st, 1865, it should not be lawful for the plaintiff to have a verdict unless he made it appear that all taxes chargeable by law on the same had "been duly paid for each year since the making of the same;" and enacted (by another section) that it should be a condition precedent to such recovery that "the said debt had been regularly given in for taxes and the taxes paid," and (by other sections) made other retrospective enactments—impaired the obligation of a the terms of a contract by imposing new conditions, or dispensing with those expressed, is a law which impairs its obligation.[9] But every state has the power to prescribe the legal and equitable obligation to a contract to be made and executed within its jurisdiction. It may impose such conditions and restrictions upon the creditor as its judgment and policy may dictate in so far as concerns future contracts. Therefore a statute exempting property from judicial sale for the owner's debts, or forbidding its sale until an appraised valuation is bid, or extending the period of redemption, or of foreclosure of mortgage liens, is valid as to future contracts.[10]

(2) Confirmation of Title to Land.—An act repealing a statute which confirmed to certain claimants of land their title thereto upon their complying with certain conditions precedent, is not a law impairing the obligation of contracts, where the conditions have not been complied with at the time of the repeal.[11]

e. Laws Affecting Discharge of Contracts.—A statute providing that a previous contract of indebtment may be extinguished by a process of bankruptcy, would involve its discharge, and there can be no doubt that such a law passed by a state would impair the obligation of the contract.[12]

3. Laws Merely Affecting Value of Contract or Facility of Performance.—Nor does every statute which affects the value of a contract impair its obligation. It is one of the contingencies to which parties look now in making a large class of contracts, that they may be affected in many ways by state and national legislation. For such legislation demanded by the public good, however it may retroact on contracts previously made, and enhance the cost and difficulty of performance, or diminish the value of such performance to the other party, there is no restraint in the federal constitution, so long as the obligation of performance remains in full force.[13]

4. Laws Denying Negotiability to Choses in Action.—But a subsecontract and was unconstitutional. Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 21 L. Ed. 357.

9. Case of the State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds. 15 Wall. 300, 320, 21 L. Ed. 179; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 153 U. S. 628, 647, 38 L. Ed. 846.

10. When conditions and restrictions may be imposed.—Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 321, 11 L. Ed. 143, cited and discussed in Gantly v. Ewing, 3 How. 707, 717, 11 L. Ed. 794; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 422, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

11. Confirmation of title to land.—The Pennsylvania act of March 28, 1787, entitled "An act for ascertaining and confirming to certain persons, called Connecticut claimants, the lands claimed by them within the county of Luzerne," etc., and providing for the presentation of claims before commissioners, etc., did not constitute a valid contract between the state of Pennsylvania and such of the Connecticut claimants as had presented their claims before its repeal, since the lands in question did not belong to the state of Pennsylvania, but to private individuals, and the state could make no valid contract for transferring private property from one individual to another. Therefore, the suspension or repeal of said statutes was not in violation of the contract clause of the federal constitution. Vanhorne v. Dorrance, 2 Dall. 304, 320, 1 L. Ed. 391.

12. Laws affecting discharge of contracts.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. Ed. 403; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793. See the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 804.

13. Laws merely affecting value of contract.—Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 70, 20 L. Ed. 513.

As said by the federal supreme court in Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 70, 20 L. Ed. 513: "Nor does every statute which affects the value of a contract impair its obligation. It is one of the contingencies to which parties look now in making a large class of contracts, that they may be affected in many ways by state and national legislation." If parties wish to guard against contingencies of that kind they must do so by such clear and explicit language as will take their contracts out of the established rule that public grants, susceptible of two constructions, must receive the one most favorable to the public. Approved in Hamilton Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Hamilton City, 146 U. S. 258, 268, 36 L. Ed. 963.

Notice in case of tax sales.—A statute which requires the holder of a tax certificate made before its passage to give notice to an occupant of the land, if there be one, before he takes his tax deed, does not impair the obligation of the contract evidenced by the certificate. Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513, cited and approved in Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 518, 27 L. Ed. 808.

quent statute withdrawing the right of negotiation from choses in action, negotiable under prior statutes, is void under the contract clause.[14]

5. Laws Regulating Right of Disposition of Property.—It was said in one case that state statutes prohibiting all sales of certain kinds of property, or all sales by certain classes of persons or corporations, are forbidden by the federal constitution whenever they operate to impair the obligation of contracts. The power of the state to regulate and control the right of disposition of property, cannot be exercised to the extent of affecting the obligation of contracts.[15]

C. Redemption from Tax Sales.—The authority of the legislature to frame rules by which the right of redemption from tax sales may be rendered effectual cannot be questioned, and among the most appropriate and least burdensome of these is the notice required by statute.[16] Therefore, a statute which requires the holder of a tax certificate made before its passage to give notice to an occupant of the land, if there be one, before he takes his tax deed, does not impair the obligation of the contract evidenced by the certificate.[17]

D. Contracts of Stockholders.—Where the constitution of a state makes each stockholder in a corporation "individually liable for its debts, over and above the stock owned by him," in a further sum at least equal in amount to such stock, and the corporation incurs debts, and is then authorized to obtain subscriptions for new stock, but does not now obtain them, and the constitution of the state is afterwards amended and declares that "in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable in any amount over or above the amount of stock owned by him," and the corporation then, for the first time, issues the new stock, the holders of such new stock are not personally liable under the first constitution.[18]

14. Statute prohibiting transfer or assignment of notes, choses in action, etc.—The statute, applicable to existing contracts, and which forbids the transfer or assignment of promissory notes or other choses in action, which were transferrable and assignable by the payee at the time they were made, under the penalty of rendering such note or chose in action wholly invalid in case of its attempted transfer or assignment, is unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts. Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 326, 328, 12 L. Ed. 447, approved in Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 663, 40 L. Ed. 838. See, generally, the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 292.

Where a bank was chartered with power to "have, possess, receive, retain, and enjoy to themselves and their successors, lands, rents, tenements, hereditaments, goods, chattels, and effects of what kind soever, nature, and quality, and the same to grant, demise, alien, or dispose of for the good of the bank," and also "to receive money on deposit and pay away the same free of expense, discount bills of exchange and notes, and to make loans," etc., and, in the course of business under this charter, the bank discounted and held promissory notes, and then the legislature of the state passed a law declaring that "it shall not be lawful for any bank in the state to transfer, by indorsement or otherwise, any note, bill receivable, or other evidence of debt; and if it shall appear in evidence, upon the trial of any action upon any such note, bill receivable, or other evidence of debt, that the same was transferred, the same shall abate upon the plea of the defendant,"—this statute conflicts with the constitution of the United States, and is void. Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 12 L. Ed. 447, distinguishing those cases in which it is held that states may pass insolvent laws, suspending or taking away actions on contracts, where the debtor goes into insolvency, on the ground that there another remedy is still given on the contract, before the commissioners of insolvency, and a payment is made pro rata, as far as means exist. But here there is no other remedy given, or any part payment made. Indeed, it seems that a forfeiture of all right to recover on the note, in any way, is inflicted here as a penalty for making that very transfer which the bank before, by the act of incorporation, as well as by the note itself, was authorized to make.

15. Laws regulating right to dispose of property.—Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 326, 12 L. Ed. 447.

16. Redemption from tax sales.—Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 71, 20 L. Ed. 513, approved in Barrett v. Holmes, 102 U. S. 651, 657, 26 L. Ed. 291. See, generally, the title TAXATION.

17. Notice by holder of tax certificate.—Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513.

18. Personal liability of stockholders.—Ochiltree v. Railroad Co., 21 Wall. 249, 22 L. Ed. 546. See post, "Statutory Liabilities," VII, K. See generally, the title STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

E. Interest—1. In General.—Interest on a principal sum may be stipulated for in the contract itself, either to run from the date of the contract until it matures, or until payment is made; and its payment in such a case is as much a part of the obligation of contract as the principal, and equally within the protection of the constitution.[19] But if the contract itself does not provide for interest then, of course, interest does not accrue during the running of the contract, and whether, after maturity and a failure to pay, interest shall accrue, depends wholly on the law of the state, as declared by its statutes.[20] If the state declares that, in case of the breach of a contract, interest shall accrue, such interest is in the nature of damages, and, as between the parties to the contract, such interest will continue to run until payment, or until the owner of the cause of action elects to merge it into judgment.[21]

2. Interest on Judgments.—After the cause of action, whether a tort or a broken contract, not itself prescribing interest till payment, shall have been merged into a judgment, whether interest shall accrue upon the judgment is a matter not of contract between the parties, but of legislative discretion, which is free, so far as the constitution of the United States is concerned, to provide for interest as a penalty or liquidated damages for the nonpayment of the judgment, or not to do so.[22] When such provision is made by statute, the owner of the judgment, is, of course, entitled to the interest so prescribed until payment is received, or until the state shall, in the exercise of its discretion, declare that such interest shall be changed or cease to accrue. Should the statutory damages for nonpayment of a judgment be determined by a state, either in whole or in part, the owner of a judgment will be entitled to receive and have a vested right in the damages which shall have accrued up to the date of the legislative change; but after that time his rights as to interest as damages are, as when he first obtained his judgment, just what the legislature chooses to declare. He has no contract whatever on the subject with the defendant in the judgment, and his right is to receive, and the defendant's obligation is to pay, as damages, just what the state chooses to prescribe.[23] Interest allowed for nonpayment of judgments is in the nature of statutory damages, and if the plaintiff has received all such damages which accrued while his judgment remained unpaid, there is no change or withdrawal of remedy. His right was to collect such damages as the state, in its discretion, provided should be paid by defendants who should fail to promptly pay judgments which should be entered against them, and such right has not been destroyed or interfered with by legislation. The discretion exercised by the legislature in prescribing what, if any, damages shall be paid by way of compensation for delay in the payment of judgments, is based on reasons of public policy, and is altogether outside the sphere of private contracts.[24]

3. Usurious Interest.—Where the right to interest called for in a contract

19. Rule where interest is stipulated for in the contract.—Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 168, 36 L. Ed. 925, reaffirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301. See ante, "Judgments," III, M. See the title INTEREST.

20. Rule where contract does not stipulate for interest.—Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 168, 36 L. Ed. 925, reaffirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301.

21. Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 168, 36 L. Ed. 925, reaffirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301.

22. Rule where cause of action is merged into judgment.—Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 168, 36 L. Ed. 925, reaffirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301. See the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

23. State may regulate interest on judgments.—Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 168, 36 L. Ed. 925. Reaffirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301.

24. Interest for nonpayment of judgment is in nature of statutory damages.—Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 171, 36 L. Ed. 925, reaffirmed in Read v. Mississippi County, 188 U. S.

was legal at the time of entering into the contract, statutes making such rate subsequently usurious, and unenforcible, and operating retrospective as to existing contracts, are unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of those contracts.[25]

4. Interest upon Redemption of Property Sold at Foreclosure of Mortgages.—But a statute of a state reducing the rate of interest to be paid by a purchaser at a decretal sale, does not impair the obligation of any contract existing between the mortgagor and mortgagee.[26]

5. Right to Compound Interest.—It is not within the constitutional power of a state legislature to take from a plaintiff his right, whether arising on express or implied contract, to interest upon interest, if, when his contract is made and entered into, he had such right under the laws of the state.[27]

F. Appointment and Removal of Trustees.—A statute authorizing a chancellor to appoint a devisee of a life estate in a trust for life, remainder over, to execute the trust, does not violate the obligation of a contract.[28] But it does impair the obligation of contract, to substitute a new trustee in place of the one named in a railroad mortgage.[29]

739, 47 L. Ed. 677; Gates v. Parmly, 191 U. S. 557, 48 L. Ed. 301.

25. Usury statutes operating retrospectively impair the contract.—Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 207, 4 L. Ed. 529. See post, "Defenses," VII, E. See the title USURY.

26. Interest upon redemption of property sold under mortgage.—A statute of Illinois in force when a mortgage was executed, prescribing the rate of interest which the amount bid or paid by the purchaser should bear as between him and the party redeeming, has no relation to the contract between the mortgagor and mortgagee, hence a statute decreasing the rate of interest to which the decretal purchaser is entitled upon redemption on sales thereafter made, does not impair the obligation of the contract between the mortgagor and mortgagee; and where the mortgagee becomes the purchaser at such decretal sale, the rights of the purchaser are not of the essence of the mortgage contract, but depend upon the law in force at the time of the decretal sale. Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. Ed. 648, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 128, 41 L. Ed. 93; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 48 L. Ed. 1046, distinguished in Bradley v. Lightcap, 195 U. S. 1, 21, 49 L. Ed. 65. See post, "Mortgages," VII, Q, 3. See the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

27. Right to interest upon interest cannot be taken away.—Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. Ed. 886.

Thus it is not within the constitutional power of the legislature to take from the holder of municipal bonds his right, whether arising on express or implied contract, to interest upon interest, if, when the coupons were executed and delivered, he or the then holder thereof had such right under the law of the state. Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 679, 26 L. Ed. 886.

28. Validity of statute authorizing discharge of testamentary trustees and substitution of others.—A New York statute authorized the chancellor of the state to discharge trustees named in a will (the purpose of the trust being to hold real estate and to pay the rents to a person named for life and on his death to dispose of the fee to his children), and to appoint new trustees in their place. The trustees having been discharged pursuant to the statute, it was competent for the legislature, by a supplemental act, to grant power to the chancellor to appoint, as such trustee, in the place of those discharged, the devisee of the life estate, and authorize him to execute the trust. It appearing that the act was passed with the knowledge and at the request of the original trustees, such discharge and substitution did not violate the obligation of a contract as to them; that as to the cestuis que trust, there was no matter of contract involved in the substitution of new trustees, and that they could not complain for the reason that the substitution of a new trustee did not defeat or impair the trust or divest their interest. Williamson v. Suydam, 6 Wall. 723, 738, 18 L. Ed. 967, followed in Williamson v. Moore, 154 U. S., appx., 557, 38 L. Ed. 1088. See the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

29. Substitution of trustees in railroad mortgages.—"Manifestly it is not in the power of the state legislature, without the consent of the cestuis que trust, to substitute a new trustee in place of the persons named in the mortgage. This would impair the obligation of the contract. The salability of railroad bonds depends in no inconsiderable degree upon the character of the persons who are selected to manage the trust. If these persons are of well-known integrity and pecuniary ability the bonds are more readily sold than if this were not the case. It is natural that it should be so, and on this

VI. Legislative Control over Public and Private Corporations.

A. Legislative Control over Private Corporations—1. CONTROL OVER FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.—There is no impairment of the obligation of a contract of employment between a foreign packing company and its resident manager, by a Georgia law imposing a license tax upon agents representing such business within the state; the power of taxation overriding any such contract.[30] And a national benevolent association, by the mere act of chartering a local state council, obtains no contract rights as against such council after the severance of the relation; and a Virginia act chartering such local body, under the same name it used as a council of the national order, with exclusive power to charter subordinate councils within the state, impairs no obligation of contract, even though the national body is thereby excluded from the state.[31] But the power of a state to impose conditions upon foreign corporations doing business in the state, cannot be exercised to discharge the citizens of the state from their contract obligations.[32] Moreover a state may preclude itself by statute from all right to impose any greater liabilities on foreign than on domestic corporations.[33]

2. INSURANCE COMPANIES.—A statute of a state which authorizes an insurance company, organized under the assessment plan, to change its business to the regular premium plan, does not impair the obligation of contracts with holders of policies issued under the old plan.[34]

3. REORGANIZATION OF CORPORATIONS.—The general railroad law of a state making provision for the creation of a new corporation upon the reorganization of a railroad by the purchaser at a foreclosure sale, does not constitute a contract protected by article 1, § 10, of the federal constitution.[35] Ac-account the trustees usually appointed in this class of mortgages are persons of good reputation in the cities where these bonds are likely to sell. To change them is to change the contract in an important particular, and this cannot be done without the consent of the parties for whose benefit the trust was created." Knapp v. Railroad Co., 20 Wall. 117, 122, 22 L. Ed. 328.

30. Right to tax nonresident agents.—Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. Ed. 663. See ante, "Licenses," III, U. See the title FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, ante, p. 305.

31. Foreign benevolent associations.—National Council v. State Council, 203 U. S. 151, 51 L. Ed. 132.

32. Imposing conditions upon foreign corporations.—A membership was taken in a foreign loan association, forty-six shares being subscribed for, which entitled such member to a loan on making proper application. The subscriber made application for a loan. Later, a statute was enacted restricting the right of the association to do business in the state. Held, the member, in complying with the by-laws of the association, had acquired a right to a loan, and the obligation of the contract previously made by the loan association was not impaired by the passage of this statute. Bedford v. Eastern Building, etc., Ass'n, 181 U. S. 227, 240, 241, 45 L. Ed. 834.

33. Right to impose greater liabilities on foreign than on domestic corporations.—Where a New Jersey corporation is allowed to do business in Colorado, on the payment of a prescribed fee and issuance of proper certificate therefor, and statute provides that such corporation shall then be subject to all the liabilities of domestic corporations, held, that this constitutes a contract whereby the state agrees to impose no greater liabilities than on domestic corporations, during the statutory life of its domestic corporations; and that a subsequent statute imposing greater liabilities on foreign corporations impairs the obligation of such contract, although the right to alter, amend or annul corporate charters or privileges is made inalienable by the state constitution. American Smelting, etc., Co. v. Colorado, 204 U. S. 103, 51 L. Ed. 393, Fuller, C. J., and Harlan, Moody, and Holmes, JJ., dissenting.

34. State authorizing adoption of premium plan.—Where a Minnesota insurance company changed from the assessment to the premium plan, under authority of general state laws, and with the consent of a majority of the policy holders, the state law prohibiting any change that would impair contract obligations, and the original articles allowing amendment except as to one article not affected; held, that the original articles made no contract with policy holders to continue the old plan, and that the change made, not affecting the essential character of the business, did not impair the obligation of contract nor require the winding up of the business. Wright v. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co., 193 U. S. 657, 48 L. Ed. 832. See the title INSURANCE.

35. Reorganization acts.—It cannot be admitted that a statutory provision for becoming a corporation in futuro can be-cordingly a tax subsequently imposed upon the purchasers of a road sold under foreclosure as a condition precedent to the filing of the certificate of incorporation and becoming a body politic and corporate, does not impair the obligation of contract.[36]

4. Appropriation of Corporate Assets for Payment of Certain Debts.—The assets of an insolvent corporation are a fund for the payment of its debts, and if held by corporation may be taken on legal process; so a state law depriving creditors of this right and otherwise appropriating the assets, violates the obligation of their contracts.[37] And more especially is this true where the appropriation by the state is for the payment of its own debts.[38]

5. Exemption from Governmental Control—a. In General.—By the former decisions of the federal supreme court it was held that where one corporation is given the rights, powers and privileges of another, such legislative transfer of the privileges of the original corporation included an exemption from taxation or other governmental control granted by the state to the first corporacome a contract, in that sense of the clause of the constitution of the United States which prohibits state legislation impairing its obligation, until it has become vested as a right by an actual organization under it; and then it takes effect, as of that date and subject to such laws as may then be in force. People v. Cook, 148 U. S. 397, 408, 37 L. Ed 498, quoting from Memphis, etc., R. C v. Railroad Comm'rs, 112 U. S. 609, 2 L. Ed. 837. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 786.

The act of 1874 (amended in 1876) in reference to reorganizing of railways sold under mortgages, and providing for the formation of new companies, is not such a contract between the plaintiff and the state, that a later statute of 1886, providing for the payment of a certain per cent of the capital stock, as a condition precedent to obtaining a charter, would be unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of a contract. People v. Cook, 148 U. S. 397, 37 L. Ed. 498, following Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Railroad Comm'rs, 112 U. S. 609, 28 L. Ed. 837, followed in Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Osborn, 193 U. S. 17, 48 L. Ed. 598.

The provisions of an act to facilitate the reorganization of railroads sold under a mortgage, and to provide for the formation of new companies, do not constitute a contract on the part of the state with either the corporations, or the mortgagees, bondholders or purchasers at foreclosure sale. They are merely matters of law instead of contract, and the right therein conferred upon purchasers of the corporate properties and franchises sold under foreclosure of mortgages thereon, to reorganize and become a new corporation, is subject to the laws of the state existing or in force at the time of such reorganization and the grant of a new charter of incorporation. Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Railroad Comm'rs, 112 U. S. 609, 28 L. Ed. 837; People v. Cook, 148 U. S. 397, 410, 37 L. Ed. 498.

A Michigan act of 1873 provided for the reorganization of railroads, and that such corporations should have "the same rights, powers and privileges as are or may be secured to the original company." Subsequently an act of 1884 provided for a uniform schedule for passenger carriage. Held, that where a new corporation bought up a railroad at foreclosure sale, such corporation had no contract rights by virtue of the act of 1873, but took subject to the general law; and the enforcement of the act of 1884 was not an impairment of the contract obligation. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Osborn, 193 U. S. 17, 48 L. Ed. 598.

36. Conditions imposed upon reorganization.—People v. Cook, 148 U. S. 397, 37 L. Ed. 498.

37. Appropriation of corporate assets for payment of certain debts.—Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705.

38. Appropriation for payment of state's own debts.—It was decided in Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705, that if the capital of a state bank, incorporated with the usual banking powers of discount, deposit, and circulation, be withdrawn by the state, either for the payment of it own debts or for deposit in the state treasury, it is a violation of the pledges by which the capital of the bank, though derived from state resources or state obligations, was set apart and appropriated as the basis of the independent credit of the bank; and that a law passed to effect such a withdrawal or misappropriation impaired the validity of the contracts held by the creditors of the bank. Barings v. Dabney, 19 Wall. 1, 9, 22 L. Ed. 90.

An act of the legislature requiring the managers of an insolvent bank belonging to the state to hold its assets appropriated to the payment of certain specified debts, creates a trust in favor of the creditors holding said debts, and, if assented to by them, amounts to a contract with them to carry out said trust. Barings v. Dabney, 19 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 90.

If such an act, however, has the effect to appropriate the assets of the bank to pay the debts of the state, to the preju-tion.[39] But other and later cases have essentially modified the rule as stated in these cases. It is now the rule, notwithstanding early decisions and dicta to the contrary, that a statute authorizing or directing a grant or transfer of the privileges of a corporation, which enjoys immunity from taxation or regulation by the state, should not be interpreted as including that immunity.[40] Accordingly the general rule is that a special statutory exemption, such as immunity from taxation, from the right to determine rates of fare, or to control tolls, and the like, does not pass to a new corporation succeeding others by consolidation or purchase, in the absence of express direction to that effect in the statute.[41] And dice of bill holders and other creditors of the bank, it is repugnant to that clause of the constitution which prohibits a law impairing the obligation of contracts and is void. Barings v. Dabney, 19 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 90, following Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705.

Such an act passed by the legislature of South Carolina, in reference to the assets of the bank of the state of South Carolina, declared to be void. Barings v. Dabney, 19 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 90.

When stock wholly owned by state.—Though the stock of a bank be altogether owned by a state, if the bank is insolvent its assets cannot be appropriated by legislative act or otherwise to pay the debts of the state, as distinguished from the debts of the bank. Those assets are a trust fund first applicable to the payment of the debts of the bank. Barings v. Dabney, 19 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 90, following Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705.

39. Early rule as to personal nature of exemption from legislative control.—Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 244, 21 L. Ed. 326; Southwestern R. Co. v. Georgia, 92 U. S. 676, 23 L. Ed. 762; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 718, 24 L. Ed. 310; Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 129, 135, 29 L. Ed. 830; Gunter v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 200 U. S. 273, 50 L. Ed. 477. As to exemptions from taxation, see the title TAXATION.

40. Present rule is that exemption is personal and does not pass to a successor.—Railroad Co. v. Commissioners, 103 U. S. 1, 26 L. Ed. 359; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U. S. 176, 29 L. Ed. 121; Southwestern R. Co. v. Wright, 116 U. S. 231, 29 L. Ed. 626; Picard v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 130 U. S. 637, 642, 32 L. Ed. 1051; Wilmington, etc., R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 279, 36 L. Ed. 972; Keokuk, etc., R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 38 L. Ed. 450; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Pendleton, 156 U. S. 667, 39 L. Ed. 574; Phœnix, etc., Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174, 40 L. Ed. 660; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66, 46 L. Ed. 86; Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 51 L. Ed. 784.

The federal supreme court has frequently had occasion to decide whether an immunity from the exercise of governmental power which has been granted by contract to one, has by legislative authority been vested in or transferred to another, and in the decisions certain general principles, which control in the determination of the cases at bar, have been established. Although the obligations of such a contract are protected by the federal constitution from impairment by the state, the contract itself is not property which, as such, can be transferred by the owner to another, because, being personal to him with whom it was made, it is incapable of assignment. The person with whom the contract is made by the state may continue to enjoy its benefits unmolested as long as he chooses, but there his rights end, and he cannot by any form of conveyance transmit the contract or its benefits to a successor. Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 217, 23 L. Ed. 860; Wilson v. Gaines, 103 U. S. 417, 26 L. Ed. 401; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Palmes, 109 U. S. 244, 27 L. Ed. 922; Picard v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 130 U. S. 637, 32 L. Ed. 1051; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. Ed. 567; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Pendleton, 156 U. S. 667, 39 L. Ed. 574; Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 247, 51 L. Ed. 784.

41. Immunity from taxation, change of rates, etc.—Georgia, etc., Banking Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. Ed. 377; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. Ed. 567; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Pendleton, 156 U. S. 667, 39 L. Ed. 574; Covington, etc., Turnpike Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. Ed. 560; Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner, 177 U. S. 332, 44 L. Ed. 793; People's Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Chicago, 194 U. S. 1, 17, 48 L. Ed. 851. See the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 634; TAXATION.

Reduction of rates for gas.—An Illinois act of June 5, 1897, authorized the consolidation of gas companies doing business in the same town or city, but provided that any consolidated corporation should be subject to all the legal obligations resting upon the constituent companies prior to and consistent with such consolidation. Held, that an immunity from regulation, held by one company under its charter, is not extended to other companies by the fact of consolidation; and that a subsequent ordinance reducing rates did not impair the obligation of any contract as to them. People's Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Chicago, 194 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 851.

Where a gas company is exempt from regulation under its charter, but after-the same rule is applicable where the constituent companies are merely owned and operated by one of them as authorized by the legislature.[42] But the state, by virtue of the same power which created the original contract of exemption, may either by the same law, or by subsequent laws, authorize or direct the transfer of the exemption to a successor in title.[43]

b. Rule of Construction.—As in determining whether a contract of exemption from a governmental power was granted, so in determining whether its transfer to another was authorized or directed, every doubt is resolved in favor of the continuance of the governmental power, and clear and unmistakable evidence of the intent to part with it is required.[44] In that case the exemption is taken not by reason of the inherent right of the original holder to assign it, but by the action of the state in authorizing or directing its transfer.[45]

6. Right to Compel Railroads to Provide Station Facilities.—Although a railroad company has been permitted by the railroad commissioners to discontinue one of its stations at a certain place, nevertheless a subsequent statute directing the re-establishment of such depot at the same place does not impair the obligation of any contract rights which the company has acquired from the state.[46]

B. Legislative Control over Municipal Corporations—1. In General.—Municipal corporations, such as counties, cities and towns, are simply political subdivisions of the state, and exist by virtue of the exercise of the power of the state through its legislative department. The legislature can at any time terminate the existence of the corporation itself, and provide other and different means for the government of the district comprised within the limits of the former city. The city is the creature of the state.[47] In other words, concessions of wards consolidates with other companies under a general law, and such exemption is held not to extend to such other companies by the fact of consolidation, the question whether a regulating ordinance impairs the obligation of contract as to the part of the system originally exempt, is not raised by a bill for relief as to the entire system, and which is not framed in the alternative. People's Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Chicago, 194 U. S. 1, 16, 48 L. Ed. 851.

42. People's Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Chicago, 194 U. S. 1, 17, 48 L. Ed. 851.

43. Congress may authorize transfer of exemption to corporate successor.—Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 248, 51 L. Ed. 784.

44. Rule of construction as to transfer of corporate exemptions.—Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 248, 51 L. Ed. 784. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 691.

45. Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 248, 51 L. Ed. 784.

Duty of street railroads to repair between tracks.—A contract of immunity from the exercise of governmental power is personal to him with whom it is made, and is not transferred under an assignment of "estate, property, rights, privileges and franchises." Such assignment, where a selling railway company is dissolved by operation of law, is subject to the general law at the time of the transfer; and where a New York act requires railways to repair the street between its rails, and there is no authorized transfer of a contract exemption held by an assignor, there is no contract with the assignee which will be impaired by the enforcement of such act. Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 51 L. Ed. 784. See the title STREET RAILWAYS.

46. Statute compelling railroads to establish depots.—Railroad Co. v. Hamersley, 104 U. S. 1, 26 L. Ed. 629.

47. Legislature has full control over its political subdivisions.—Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch 43, 3 L. Ed. 650; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 533, 534, 13 L. Ed. 518; United States v. Railroad Co., 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. Ed. 597; Commissioners v. Commissioners, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. Ed. 552; Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. Ed. 822; Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 23 L. Ed. 896; New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644, 24 L. Ed. 521; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. Ed. 620; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 42 L. Ed. 1047; Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 43 L. Ed. 679; Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 548, 49 L. Ed. 591.

In respect to public corporations, which exist only for public purposes, such as counties, towns, cities, etc., the legislature may, under proper limitations, change, modify, enlarge, or restrain them; securing, however, the property for the use of those for whom, and at whose expense, it was purchased. Dartmouth College v.

power to municipal corporations are of high importance; but they are not contracts, and consequently are subject to legislative control within limitation, unless the legislature oversteps the limits of the constitution.[48] For example, the legislature of a state, in the exercise of its general legislative power over municipal corporations within the state, may abrogate the provision of a contract between a city and a street railroad company with the assent of the latter with Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 663, 693, 694, 4 L. Ed. 629; Aspinwall v. Commissioners, 22 How. 364, 378, 16 L. Ed. 296.

A municipality being a mere agent of the state, stands in its governmental or public character in no contract relation with its sovereign, at whose pleasure its charter may be amended, changed or revoked, without the impairment of any constitutional obligation, while with respect to its private or proprietary rights and interests it may be entitled to the constitutional protection. New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 91, 35 L. Ed. 943, approved in Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 551, 49 L. Ed. 591.

"Municipal corporations are mere instrumentalities of the state for the more convenient administration of local government. Their powers are such as the legislature may confer, and these may be enlarged, abridged, or entirely withdrawn at its pleasure. This is common learning, found in all adjudications on the subject of municipal bodies and repeated by textwriters. There is no contract between the state and the public that the charter of a city shall not be at all times subject to legislative control." Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 511, 26 L. Ed. 197.

As to municipal corporations, they may be controlled, and their constitution altered and amended by the governor in such manner as the public interest may require. Such legislative interferences cannot be said to impair the contract by which the corporation was formed, because, in reality, there is but one party to it. Opinion of Washington, J., in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 661, 4 L. Ed. 629, approved in East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 536, 13 L. Ed. 518.

"All persons who deal with such bodies are conclusively presumed to act upon knowledge of the power of the legislature. There is no such thing as a vested right held by any individual in the grant of legislative power to them. United States v. Railroad Co., 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. Ed. 597; Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. Ed. 822." Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 511, 26 L. Ed. 197.

Municipal corporations are incorporated for public, and not private objects; they are allowed to hold privileges or property only for public purposes. The members are not shareholders, nor joint partners in any corporate estate, which they can sell or devise to others, or which can be attached and levied on for their debts. Hence, generally, the doings between them and the legislature are in the nature of legislation rather than compact, and therefore are not to be considered as violated by subsequent legislative changes; being mere organizations for public purposes, they are liable to have their public purposes, rights and duties modified or abolished at any moment by the legislature. East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 534, 13 L. Ed. 518. Accord: Dartmouth College v. Wodward (Opinion of Washington, J.), 4 Wheat. 518, 659, 661, 663, 4 L. Ed. 629.

Chancellor Kent, in his Commentaries, says: "In respect to public or municipal corporations, which exist only for public purposes, as counties, cities and towns, the legislature, under proper limitations, has a right to change, modify, enlarge, restrain or destroy them; securing, however, the property for the uses of those for whom it was purchased. A public corporation, instituted for purposes connected with the administration of the government, may be controlled by the legislature, because such a corporation is not a contract within the purview of the constitution of the United States. In those public corporations there is, in reality, but one party, and the trustees or governors of the corporation are merely trustees for the public." 2 Kent's Com., 12th Ed., p. 303. Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 242, 43 L. Ed. 679, citing New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943.

Judicial interpretation of an existing contract between a municipality and a waterworks company does not strip the legislature of the power to pass any laws changing this contract, so far as the rights of the city thereunder are concerned, as its contracts are subject to the will of the legislature. New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 91, 35 L. Ed. 943.

Grant of franchises to cities and towns.—In every legislative grant to a town or other municipality of some public privilege (as, for example, to maintain a ferry across a public navigable river), there must be implied a condition, that the power still remains or was reserved to the legislature to modify or discontinue the privilege in future as the public interest from time to time appear to require. East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 536, 13 L. Ed. 518.

48. Concessions to municipalities not contracts.—Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 533, 25 L. Ed. 699.

regard to the paving and repairing of its streets, and provide another and a different method for the paving and repairing of its streets through which the tracks of the railroad company are laid.[49]

2. Limitations of General Rule.—But a municipal corporation, in respect to its private or proprietary rights and interests, may be entitled to constitutional protection.[50] In other words, the power of the state to alter or destroy its county or municipal corporations is not greater than the power of the state to repeal its legislation. Exercise of the latter power has been repeatedly held to be ineffectual to impair the obligation of a contract.[51]

3. What Are Governmental Agencies.—An involuntary quasi public corporation such as a public road board, created to construct a public work and authorized to procure the means to accomplish the improvement upon private property, is purely a governmental agency, existing wholly for public purposes, and whose interests belong exclusively to the public; therefore, the power of the legislature over it is plenary.[52]

4. Power with Respect to Division of Towns and Alteration of Boundaries—a. As Affecting Rights of Creditors.—Text-writers concede almost unlimited power to the state legislatures in respect to the division of towns and the alteration of their boundaries, but they all agree that in the exercise of these powers they cannot defeat the rights of creditors nor impair the obligation of a valid contract.[53] And though state control over the division of the territory of the state into cities, towns, and districts, unless restricted by some constitutional limitation, is supreme, yet it cannot be exercised to annul another

49. Control of city over street railway companies. — Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. Ed. 591.

In the contract between a city and a Massachusetts railway corporation, the latter is bound to do certain paving and repairing in the streets used, which requirement is changed by subsequent state legislation. Held, that since the city is but a creature of the state, such change does not impair the obligation of the contract where railway consents, although it might otherwise have had that effect as to the railway. Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. Ed. 591. See the title STREET RAILWAYS.

50. When the contract clause protects a municipal corporation.—New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943; Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. Ed. 591.

51. Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 253, 50 L. Ed. 464.

52. What are governmental agencies.—Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 35 L. Ed. 446.

Public road board of New Jersey.—A New Jersey statute approved March 31, 1869, created the Essex public road board, the object of which act was to create a body charging it with the duty of constructing and maintaining a better class of public roads. The statute amongst other things provides for an assessment upon the abutting property holders, and further provides that where the assessments are not paid, the board shall have authority to sell such lands to any person who will take the same for the shortest period of time, not exceeding fifty years. But by a supplement to that act it was provided that such lands as were not bid off, when offered at the original sale, or at a resale, should be struck off to the road board by its corporate name, to be held by such board with all the rights and privileges of a purchaser at such sale. It was held that a subsequent act which provides a mode by which the assessment might be compounded, compromised, and discharged, and that this might be done when the real estate had not been sold to a bona fide purchaser other than the public road board, did not impair the obligation of a contract alleged to exist between the state and the road board, because it held no real estate in a proprietary or private sense. Its purchase was merely in perpetuation of the lien, and in aid of collection. The entire transaction was matter of law, and not of contract, and, as such, open to no constitutional objection. Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 35 L. Ed. 446, citing Maryland v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 How. 534, 11 L. Ed. 714; Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. Ed. 822; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. Ed. 710, approved in New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 90, 35 L. Ed. 943.

53. Power of legislature with respect to boundaries.—Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 533, 25 L. Ed. 699, citing 1 Dillon on Municipal Corporations, § 128.

regulation of the constitution.[54] Therefore, the courts will not permit the obligation of a contract to be impaired by the abolition or change of the boundaries of a municipality.[55]

b. Alteration of School Districts.—The power of the state legislature to create and alter school districts is unquestioned, and there can be no impairing of the obligation of contract by a law redividing such districts, since no contract rights were obtained by virtue of prior legislation upon the subject.[56]

5. MUNICIPAL DEBTS—a. In General.—While the power of the legislature to alter or repeal an act chartering a municipal corporation is undoubted, yet this power cannot be exercised to the injury of creditors of the corporation or of persons holding contracts with it, especially when fully performed on their part so as to entitle them to the compensation provided for in the contract, but such repealing act must be considered in reference to the provisions of the constitution of the United States forbidding the states to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts, because the same obligation to perform its contracts rests upon a municipal corporation as upon a natural person.[57]

54. Limitation on right to alter boundaries.—Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 533, 25 L. Ed. 699.

Institutions of the kind, whether called counties or towns, are the auxiliaries of the state in the important business of municipal rule, and cannot have the least pretension to sustain their privileges or their existence upon anything like a contract between them and the legislature of the state, because there is not and cannot be any reciprocity of stipulation, and their objects and duties are utterly incompatible with everything of the nature of compact. Instead of that, the constant practice is to divide large counties and towns, and to consolidate small ones, to meet the wishes of the residents, or to promote the public interests as understood by those who control the action of the legislature. Opposition is sometimes manifested but it is everywhere acknowledged that the legislature possesses the power to divide counties and towns at their pleasure and to apportion the common property and the common burdens in such manner as to them may seem reasonable and equitable. Commissioners v. Commissioners, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. Ed. 552, quoted with approval in New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 90, 35 L. Ed. 943; Attorney General v. Lowrey, 199 U. S. 233, 240, 50 L. Ed. 167.

55. Abolition of township or change of boundaries as affecting bond holders.—The power of the state to alter or destroy its municipal corporations is not greater than the power of the state to repeal its legislation. Exercise of the latter power has been repeatedly held to be ineffectual to impair the obligation of a contract. The repeal of a law may be more readily undertaken than the abolition of townships or the change of their boundaries or the boundaries of counties. The latter may put on the form of a different purpose than the violation of a contract. But courts cannot permit themselves to be deceived. They will not inquire too closely into the motives of the state, but they will not ignore the effect of its action. Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 253, 50 L. Ed. 464.

Where a township issued bonds to aid a certain railroad which bonds have been declared valid obligations of the township, and the act authorizing their issuance provides for the levy of a tax and the manner of collecting it, etc., but subsequently the state destroys the corporate existence of the township and forms other territory out, it was held that the obligation of these contracts could not be impaired by the abolition of the township or a change of its boundaries, and that the proper state officers would be ordered to levy a tax to pay the bonds. Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464, following Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. Ed. 620, and distinguishing Heine v. Levee Comm'rs, 19 Wall. 655, 22 L. Ed. 223; Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. Ed. 197.

56. Right of legislature to alter school districts.—Attorney General v. Lowrey, 199 U. S. 233, 50 L. Ed. 167, citing Commissioners v. Commissioners, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. Ed. 552. See the title SCHOOLS.

57. Charters of municipalities cannot be altered so as to injure creditors.—Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 304, 29 L. Ed. 620; Shapleigh v. San Angelo, 167 U. S. 646, 42 L. Ed. 310; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464.

While the charter of a municipal corporation may be repealed at the pleasure of the legislature, where there is no inhibition to its action in the constitution of the state, the lawful contracts of the corporation, made whilst it was in existence, may be subsequently enforced against property held by it in its own right at the time of the repeal. In this respect its position is not materially different from that of a private individual, whose property must, upon his decease,

b. Municipal Aid Bonds.—When cities, towns or townships are empowered to take stock in or otherwise aid a railroad company, and they issue their bonds in payment of the stock taken, or to carry out any other authorized contract in aid of the railroad company, they are to that extent to be deemed private corporations, and their obligations are secured by all the guarantees which protect the engagements of private individuals.[58]

c. Where Charter Is Repealed and Old Municipality Is Annexed.—Although extensive powers are doubtless possessed by a state legislature to provide for the payment of the debts of a city which is legislated out of existence and annexed to another city, yet under the contract clause the legislature, in the exercise of any such power, cannot pass a valid law impairing the right of existing creditors of the old municipality.[59] So a change in the charter of a municipal corporation, in whole or part, by an amendment of its provisions, or the substitution of a new charter in place of the old one, should not be deemed, in the absence of express legislative declaration otherwise, to affect the identity of the corporation, or to relieve it from its previous liabilities.[60] go to the satisfaction of his debts before those who succeed to his rights can share in its distribution. Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 511, 26 L. Ed. 197; Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 268, 23 L. Ed. 896.

It is well settled that the rights of antecedent contract creditors of a municipal corporation are protected by the constitution of the United States from an impairment of their contract by a constitutional provision subsequently adopted by the state. Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 32 L. Ed. 589, citing Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403.

Cannot destroy existing securities.—Bonds having been issued and used by a city for purchasing land for a park, which was pledged for the payment of the bonds, held, that a subsequent act of the legislature authorizing a sale of a portion of the park, free of all liens existing by virtue of the original act, was in violation of the federal constitution, as impairing the obligation of contracts. Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 533, 25 L. Ed. 699.

Right of general creditors to exclusive use of taxes to pay their debts.—A state law which provides that a municipal corporation may compromise certain classes of its indebtedness at fifty cents on the dollar, and issue new securities in exchange for the old at that rate, and that the acceptance of the new securities shall operate to assign to the city all claims which those creditors had on back taxes due the city, and that all funds derived from the collection of said back taxes shall be applied to the liquidation of the new securities, does not impair the obligation of the city's contract with its general and unpreferred creditors having no lien upon back taxes owing to the city, nor deprive them of any vested right. Amy v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 114 U. S. 387, 29 L. Ed. 172.

58. Municipal aid bonds cannot be impaired.—Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 23 L. Ed. 896; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 304, 305, 29 L. Ed. 620; Shapleigh v. San Angelo, 167 U. S. 646, 42 L. Ed. 310; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID.

Therefore the remedies for the enforcement of such obligations assumed by a municipal corporation, which existed when the contract was made, must be left unimpaired by the legislature, or, if they are changed, a substantial equivalent must be provided. It follows from this proposition that the remedies necessary to the collection of his debt, which the law gave the creditor of the city of Mobile, remain in force against the port of Mobile. Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 305, 29 L. Ed. 620.

59. Debts of city or town destroyed and annexed.—Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699, citing 1 Dillon on Mun. Corp. (2d Ed.), § 41; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 554, 18 L. Ed. 403; Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. 181, 184, 19 L. Ed. 160; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 62, 19 L. Ed. 370; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 583, 19 L. Ed. 490; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. Ed. 620; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464.

60. Reorganization of municipal corporations.—Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 270, 23 L. Ed. 896.

The inhibition of the constitution, which preserves against the interference of a state the sacredness of contracts, applies to the liabilities of municipal corporations created by its permission; and although the repeal or modification of the charter of a corporation of that kind is not within the inhibition, yet it will not be admitted, where its legislation is susceptible of another construction, that the state has in this way sanctioned an evasion of or escape from liabilities, the creation of which it authorized. When, therefore, a new form is given to an old municipal

d. Limiting Taxing Power of Municipalities—(1) In General.—The power of taxation belongs exclusively to the legislative department of the government, and the extent to which it shall be delegated to a municipal body is a matter of discretion, and may be limited or revoked at the pleasure of the legislature.[61] But as the usual mode by which municipal bodies obtain the funds to meet their pecuniary engagements is taxation, when a contract is made upon the faith that taxes will be levied, legislation repealing or modifying the taxing power of the corporation, so as to deprive the holder of the contract of all adequate and efficacious remedy, is within the constitutional inhibition.[62] A statute, however, which merely provides that people residing within the territory recently annexed to a city, should not be taxed to pay any debts contracted by the city prior to the act authorizing the annexation, does not infringe the contract clause of the federal constitution, because "it was wholly prospective in its operation when it was passed. It furnished a rule only for the future, and it interfered with no vested corporation, or such a corporation is reorganized under a new charter, taking in its new organization the place of the old one, embracing substantially the same corporators and the same territory, it will be presumed that the legislature intended a continued existence of the same corporation, although different powers are possessed under the new charter, and different officers administer its affairs; and, in the absence of express provision for their payment otherwise, it will also be presumed in such case that the legislature intended that the liabilities as well as the rights of property of the corporation in its old form should accompany the corporation in its reorganization. Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 269, 23 L. Ed. 896.

61. Limiting taxing power of municipalities.—Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 290, 27 L. Ed. 936.

A grant of the power of taxation, by the legislature of a state to a municipal corporation, does not form such a contract between the state and the township as is within the protection of the provision of the constitution of the United States which forbids the passage by a state of a law impairing the obligation of contracts. The conferring of such right of taxation is an exercise by the legislature of a public and governmental power. It is the imparting to the township of a portion of the power belonging to the state, which it can lawfully impart to a subordinate municipal corporation. But, from the very character of the power, it cannot be imparted in perpetuity, and is always subject to revocation, modification and control by the legislative authority of the state. The authorities to this effect are uniform. 1 Dillon on Mun. Corp., 3d Ed., §§ 61, 63, and cases there cited; Cooley on Const. Lim., 3d Ed. 192, 193, 237, and cases there cited; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 534, 13 L. Ed. 518; State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 380, 14 L. Ed. 977; United States v. Railroad Co., 17 Wall. 322, 329, 21 L. Ed. 597; Williamson v. New Jersey, 130 U. S. 189, 199, 32 L. Ed. 915, approved in New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 90, 35 L. Ed. 943.

Exemptions from taxation.—Where a state gave a township the right to tax a poor farm located within its limits, such provision did not become, by reason of a subsequent conveyance of the poor farm to a city corporation, a contract between that corporation and the township, the obligation of which was impaired by a statute exempting the property of all charitable institutions. Williamson v. New Jersey, 130 U. S. 189, 32 L. Ed. 915.

Where a state legislature authorizes a city to borrow money, issue bonds and tax all the property in the city to pay it, this is not a contract with the bond holders, that the state shall not afterwards exercise her power to modify the taxation, or exempt portions of the property from taxation. Gilman v. Sheboygan, 2 Black 510, 17 L. Ed. 305.

If such a contract existed and if a subsequent law exempted some portion of the property, it does not lie in the mouth of a property holder in the city to complain of it on the score of bad faith to the bond holders, if the bond holders themselves are silent. Gilman v. Sheboygan, 2 Black 510, 17 L. Ed. 305.

The fact that a state, by an act of her legislature, has stripped herself of any portion of her sovereignty, is not to be assumed unless the language used is too clear to admit of doubt. Gilman v. Sheboygan, 2 Black 510, 17 L. Ed. 305.

62. Limitation on right to abridge city's taxing power.—Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 721, 28 L. Ed. 574.

Creditors cannot be delayed and hindered by infringing city's taxing power.—Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 135, 29 L. Ed. 587; Cape Girardeau County Court v. Hill, 118 U. S. 68, 30 L. Ed. 73; Board of Liquidation v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 622, 45 L. Ed. 347.

But legislation revoking the power of a municipal corporation to tax is subject to this qualification, which attends all state rights, or with the obligation of any contract,"[63] although in the absence of such enactment, they would have been on an exact equality with all other owners of legislation, that it "shall not conflict with the prohibitions of the constitution of the United States, and, among other things, shall not operate directly upon contracts of the corporation, so as to impair their obligation by abrogating or lessening the means of their enforcement. Legislation producing this latter result, not indirectly as a consequence of legitimate measure taken, as will sometimes happen, but directly by operating upon those means, is prohibited by the constitution, and must be disregarded—treated as if never enacted—by all courts recognizing the constitution as the paramount law of the land. This doctrine has been repeatedly asserted by this court when attempts have been made to limit the power of taxation of a municipal body, upon the faith of which contracts have been made, and by means of which alone they could be performed. * * * However great the control of the legislature over the corporation while it is in existence, it must be exercised in subordination to the principle which secures the inviolability of contracts." Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 300, 301, 26 L. Ed. 1090, citing Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395.

When a state has authorized a municipal corporation to contract, and to exercise the power of local taxation to the extent necessary to meet its engagements, the power thus given cannot be withdrawn until the contract is satisfied. The state, and the corporation, in such cases, are equally bound. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 554, 18 L. Ed. 403; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 166, 194, 18 L. Ed. 768; Weber v. Lee Co., 6 Wall. 210, 18 L. Ed. 781; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 301, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 252, 50 L. Ed. 464.

Issue of negotiable securities.—"When authority is granted by the legislative branch of the government to a municipality, or a subdivision of a state, to contract an extraordinary debt by the issue of negotiable securities the power to levy taxes sufficient to meet, at maturity, the obligation to be incurred, is conclusively implied, unless the law which confers the authority, or some general law in force at the time, clearly manifests a contrary legislative intention. The power to tax is necessarily an ingredient of such a power to contract;" and cannot subsequently be repealed to the prejudice of the holders of such securities. Scotland County Court v. United States, 140 U. S. 41, 46, 35 L. Ed. 351, citing Ralls County Court v. United States, 105 U. S. 733, 735, 26 L. Ed. 1220; Loan Ass'n v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. Ed. 455; United States v. New Orleans, 98 U. S. 381, 25 L. Ed. 225; United States v. County of Macon, 99 U. S. 582, 25 L. Ed. 331.

"It follows from this that all laws of the state which have been passed since the bonds in question were issued, purporting to take away from the county courts the power to levy taxes necessary to meet the payments, are invalid, and that, under the well-settled rule of decision in this court, the circuit court has authority by mandamus to require the county court to do all the law, when the bonds were issued, required it to do to raise the means to pay the judgment, or something substantially equivalent." Ralls County Court v. United States, 105 U. S. 733, 738, 26 L. Ed. 1220.

Distinguished from exemption from taxation.—The restraint upon the legislature by the contract clause of the constitution, against revoking or limiting the power of taxation delegated by it to municipal bodies as the means of carrying out the purposes of their incorporation or purposes designed for their benefit, is a different matter from that of exempting property from taxation; and even in the latter case it has been adjudged in repeated instances that one legislature can bind its successors. The restraint in no respect impairs the taxing power of the existing legislature or of its successors, or removes any property from its reach. Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 368, 26 L. Ed. 395.

63. Statutes exempting inhabitants of annexed territory are valid.—In March and July, 1867, A. entered into contracts with the city of Memphis to pave certain streets. Most of the work was done after the passage of an act of the legislature of Tennessee of December 3, 1867, by which contiguous territory was annexed, and designated as the ninth and tenth wards of the city, but none of it was done in them. An act of the legislature of December 1, 1869, declared that the people residing within the limits of them should not be taxed to pay any part of the city debt contracted prior to the passage of said act of 1867. In March, 1875, A., in whose favor a decree against the city for the money due him for work done under his contracts had been rendered, obtained a mandamus commanding the city to levy a tax for its satisfaction. Held: 1. That the debt which the decree represents was contracted in March and July, 1867. 2. That the purpose of the act of 1869 was to relieve that territory from municipal obligations previously incurred for objects in which it had no interest when the obligations were assumed, and in regard to which it had no voice. 3. That no contract relation ever existed between A. and the people of that territory. 4. That the property in the city, equally entitled with them to all municipal rights and privileges, and equally subject to all municipal burdens and charges.[64]

(2) Withdrawal of Right to Tax to Discharge Municipal Securities.—Where a statute has authorized a municipal corporation to issue bonds and to exercise the power of local taxation in order to pay them, and persons have bought and paid value for bonds issued accordingly, the power of taxation thus given is a contract within the meaning of the constitution, and cannot be withdrawn until the contract is satisfied. The state and the corporation in such a case are equally bound.[65] This rule has been invoked most frequently in the case of bonds issued by cities and towns to aid in the construction of railroads.[66]

(3) Withdrawal of Right to Tax to Liquidate the Public Debt.—A funding act which pledges a levying of an annual tax to pay principal and interest of the bonds supposed to be issued thereunder, becomes, as to such provision, a contract between the state and all persons accepting the bonds issued pursuant thereto. A subsequent act discontinuing the tax is an impairment of the obligation of the contract with the bondholders.[67] act of 1869 interfered, therefore, with no vested rights, impaired the obligation of no contract, and violated no provision of the constitution of that state in regard to taxation. United States v. Memphis, 97 U. S. 284, 24 L. Ed. 937.

64. United States v. Memphis, 97 U. S. 284, 24 L. Ed. 937, citing Dillon on Municipal Corporations. See the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

65. Withdrawal of right to tax to discharge municipal securities.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403, approved in White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 653, 20 L. Ed. 685; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 120, 22 L. Ed. 72; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 301, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 32 L. Ed. 589; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 252, 50 L. Ed. 464. See, generally, the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

Where the resource for the payment of the bonds of a municipal corporation is the power of taxation existing when the bonds were issued, any law which withdraws or limits the taxing power and leaves no adequate means for the payment of the bonds is forbidden by the constitution of the United States, and is null and void. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Ralls County Court v. United States, 105 U. S. 733, 26 L. Ed. 1220; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. Ed. 936; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 305, 29 L. Ed. 620; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464.

A subsequently passed statute which repeals or restricts the power of taxation so previously given, is, in so far as it affects bonds bought and held under the circumstances mentioned, a nullity. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403.

Whenever the charter of a city, at the time of the issue of bonds, made it the duty of the city authorities to levy and collect the amount, when reduced to judgment, like other city charges, a subsequent act of the legislature prohibiting the city from levying such a tax would be repugnant to the constitution. Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 533, 25 L. Ed. 699; Soutter v. City of Madison, 15 Wis. 30.

The contract by which, under authority of the legislature, the city of Mobile agreed to levy a special tax for the payment of the principal and interest of the class of bonds to which those held by the plaintiff belong is still in force, and its obligation rests upon its legal successor, the port of Mobile. All laws passed since the making of the contract, whose purpose or effect is to take from the city of Mobile, or its successor, the power to levy the tax and pay the bonds, are invalid and ineffectual, and will be disregarded. Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 305, 29 L. Ed. 620, citing Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 368, 26 L. Ed. 395; Ralls County Court v. United States, 105 U. S. 733, 738, 26 L. Ed. 1220, approved in Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 252, 50 L. Ed. 464.

66. Municipal aid bonds.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Cape Girardeau County Court v. Hill, 118 U. S. 68, 30 L. Ed. 73. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID.

67. Withdrawal of right to tax to pay public debt.—Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Board of Liquidation v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 622, 45 L. Ed. 347. See ante, "Funding State Debts," III. D, 3, a.

The state of Louisiana having provided for the funding of the debt of the consolidated city of New Orleans and pledged the levying of an annual tax for the purpose of paying the principal and interest of the bonds, a subsequent statute repealing the tax and providing for

(4) Mandamus.—If a city or town, after incurring indebtedness, refuses to levy a tax to discharge such indebtedness, any creditor may sue out a writ of mandamus directing a levy to pay the debt.[68] And if such remedy is taken away by a subsequent statute, leaving the creditor with no other complete and adequate remedy, this constitutes an impairment of the contract.[69]

e. Change in Subjects of Taxation.—But there is no contract between the state and a city or township, that will prevent the legislature in its discretion, after a debt has been incurred by such city or town, from changing or enlarging the subjects of taxation. It is competent for the legislature at any time to make provision for such obligation to be met by taxation upon any kind of property within the township or city that is subject to taxation for public purposes.[70]

f. Rule Where Municipal Corporation Is Abolished or Destroyed by Statute —(1) In General.—Where a municipal corporation has incurred indebtedness, and afterwards its municipal organization is destroyed and its territory added to other municipalities or counties, the court will find some means of levying a tax to discharge the debt, although under the constitution and laws of the state, the the issuance of "premium bonds" to be paid at a time to be determined by chance in a lottery, is unconstitutional and void. Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

That the bondholders have for some years acquiesced without objection in the raising of the stipulated interest by other means is also immaterial and does not justify the state in repealing the special tax provision. Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

The special tax which the state pledges itself to levy, or to cause to be levied, and upon the faith of which the bonds are issued, is a security possessed by the bond holders which cannot afterwards be severed from their contract without violating its stipulations any more than a mortgage executed as security for a loan could be repudiated as forming no part of the transaction. Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 288, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

That the special tax pledged was to be levied upon the slaves and real estate, and that the slaves have been freed, is immaterial and does not justify the repeal of the tax. Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

68. Mandamus to compel levy of tax.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 28 L. Ed. 574; Cape Girardeau County Court v. Hill, 118 U. S. 68, 30 L. Ed. 73. See the title MANDAMUS.

It is the duty of the corporation to impose and collect the taxes in all respects as if the second statute had not been passed. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403, approved in Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 301, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

If it does not perform this duty, a mandamus will lie to compel it. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403.

69. If at the time when bonds are issued by a city, a writ of mandamus was the usual and only effective means to compel the city authorities to levy a tax for the payment of interest and principal on such bonds, in case of their failure to provide in other ways the required funds, and there is no other complete and adequate remedy, a statute prohibiting the state courts to issue a mandamus for the levy of a tax for the payment of interest or principal of any bonds except those issued under the premium-bond plan, is a clear impairment of the means for the enforcement of the contract with the holders of the bond. "The only ground on which a change of remedy existing when a contract was made is permissible without impairment of the contract, is that a new and adequate and efficacious remedy be substituted for that which is superseded. Here no remedy whatever is substituted for that of mandamus. The holders are denied all remedy. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 207, 26 L. Ed. 132." Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 301, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

70. Subjects of taxation.—Where at the time a city is authorized to issue bonds to facilitate the construction of a railroad, the state statute only required a tax to be levied on real estate, it was not beyond the power of the legislature by subsequent enactment, after the bonds were issued, to subject any property other than real estate to taxation for the purpose of meeting this liability of the township. Accordingly, legislation which authorizes a tax to be made on personal property also, is not in violation of the contract clause of the federal constitution. The township being a part of the civil government of the state to establish for public purposes, the powers conferred upon it were at all times subject to legislative control or modification; at least, to such as were not inconsistent with the contract rights of a third party. Cape Girardeau County Court v. Hill, 118 U. S. 68, 73, 30 L. Ed. 73.

tax can be levied and assessed only by the corporate authorities of the city or town.[71]

(2) Liability of Reorganized Corporation for Debts of Old.—The state's plenary power over its municipal corporations to change their organization, to modify their method of internal government, or to abolish them altogether, is not restricted by contracts entered into by the municipality with its creditors or with private parties. An absolute repeal of a municipal charter is therefore effectual so far as it abolishes the old corporate organization; but when the same or substantially the same inhabitants are erected into a new corporation, whether with extended or restricted territorial limits, such new corporation is treated as in law the successor of the old one, entitled to its property rights, and subject to its liabilities.[72] Hence, if at the time debts are created by a municipality a new corporation formed by reincorporation of the old one would have been liable for the debts of the old without any vote of the taxpayers in favor of assuming the debt of the old corporation before the new can be held therefor, but a subsequent act with regard to the reincorporation of cities and towns is construed as requiring such vote, this will be regarded as impairing the obligation of pre-existing contracts.[73]

6. MUNICIPAL PROPERTY—a. In General.—It is true a municipal corporation can own private property, not of a public or governmental nature, which may be entitled to constitutional protection. Property which is held by these corporations upon conditions or terms contained in a grant and for a special use, may not be diverted by the legislature.[74] But such protection will not be accorded to the mere right of a city to compel a street railroad company to continue to pave and repair between its tracks,[75] nor to the right of a city to continue to hold its public property exempt from taxation.[76] In like manner, it

71. Rule where debtor city is abolished and annexed to another political subdivision.—Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464, citing and approving Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. Ed. 620; Shapleigh v. San Angelo, 167 U. S. 646, 42 L. Ed. 310. But see Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. Ed. 197, and the attempts to distinguish it in Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 368, 26 L. Ed. 395, and Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464.

Where township is destroyed and annexed to other towns or counties.—The power of a state to alter or destroy its corporations is not greater than the power of a state to repeal its legislation, the exercise of which latter power has been repeatedly held ineffectual to impair the obligation of contract. Hence, where a municipality has been destroyed, but a tax has been provided for the payment of a debt, and there are state officers to collect it, the courts will compel its collection and payment. Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. Ed. 464, approving Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. 705, 18 L. Ed. 560; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. Ed. 620; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 30 L. Ed. 1161; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699, but distinguishing Heine v. Levee Comm'rs, 19 Wall. 655, 22 L. Ed. 223; Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. Ed. 197.

72. Liability of reorganized corporation for debts of old.—Shapleigh v. San Angelo, 167 U. S. 646, 654, 42 L. Ed. 310, citing Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 23 L. Ed. 896; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. Ed. 699; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. Ed. 620, cited and approved in Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 254, 50 L. Ed. 464.

73. New corporation formed by reincorporation of old.—Shapleigh v. San Angelo, 167 U. S. 646, 42 L. Ed. 310, approved in Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 254, 50 L. Ed. 464.

74. How far municipal property protected.—Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. Ed. 591, citing Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. Ed. 822. See, generally, the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

75. Duty of street railroads to repair and pave.—A right asserted by a municipal corporation to demand the continuance of the obligation of a street railroad company to pave and repair its streets, as contained in the orders or decrees of its council or board of aldermen, does not amount to property held by the corporation, which the legislature is unable to touch, either by way of limitation or extinguishment. Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 49 L. Ed. 591. See the title STREET RAILWAYS.

76. Exemption of public property from taxation.—A municipal corporation is a has been held that the grant of a right to a city to maintain a ferry may be repealed by subsequent legislative enactment.[77] Nor does a statute which revokes the right of a city to erect and maintain wharves within its limits and to collect wharfage, granting such right to another, violate the contract clause of the federal constitution, if no property rights of the municipality acquired from the legislature are thereby impaired or destroyed.[78] So, also, a grant by the legislature to a county of a sum forfeited may be dispensed with by the legislature afterwards, as it is made for public, not private purposes, and to a public public instrumentality established to aid in the administration of the affairs of the state. Neither its charter nor any legislative act regulating the use of property held by it for governmental or public purposes, is a contract within the meaning of the constitution of the United States. If the legislature choose to subject to taxation public property held by a municipal corporation of the state for public purposes, the validity of such legislation, so far as the national constitution is concerned, could not be questioned. Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 241, 43 L. Ed. 679.

An act of a state legislature which provides that the waterworks of a city shall be and remain forever exempt from state, county and city tax, does not tie the hands of the legislature so that it cannot by legislation withdraw such exemption and subject the property in question to taxation, when there is a pre-existing statute reserving to the legislature the right to amend or repeal at will a statute, unless the contrary intent shall be therein plainly expressed. Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 43 L. Ed. 679.

77. Revocation of ferry franchise.—East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 13 L. Ed. 518, approved in Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 196 U. S. 539, 549, 49 L. Ed. 591. See the title FERRIES, ante, p. 274.

The right or privilege conferred upon a municipal corporation to establish and maintain a ferry across a public navigable river is not to be considered as a contract between legislation and the corporation. The act of the legislature establishing the ferry must be considered rather as a public law than as a contract, such acts relate to public interests, and are subject to be changed as the public interest demanded. "The grantees, likewise, the towns, being mere organizations for public purposes, were liable to have their public powers, rights and duties modified or abolished at any moment by the legislature." East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 534, 13 L. Ed. 518.

And where, in such case, the legislature has reserved the right to revoke the franchise, or where the right to maintain the ferry is granted only during the pleasure of the legislature, there can, of course, be no violation of a contract by the legislative revocation thereof. East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 534, 13 L. Ed. 518.

From the year 1681 to 1783 the franchise in the ferry over the Connecticut River belonged to the town of Hartford, situated on the west bank of the river. In 1783, the legislature incorporated the town of East Hartford and granted to it one-half of the ferry during the pleasure of the general assembly. Held, that there was no contract between the state and the town of East Hartford, by which the latter could claim a permanent right to the ferry; that the nature of the subject matter of the grant, and the character of the parties to it, both show that it is not such a contract as is beyond the interference of the legislature; and that an act of the legislature discontinuing the ferry is not an impairment of the obligation of contract. Besides, the town of East Hartford only held the ferry during the pleasure of the general assembly. East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 13 L. Ed. 518, approved in Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 588, 52 L. Ed. 710.

78. Right of city to erect and maintain wharves.—In Railroad Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 166, 172, 26 L. Ed. 1015, which involved the right of the city of New Orleans to erect and maintain wharves within its limits and to collect wharfage under its charter and the statutes of Louisiana, it was held that no right of the city was infringed by a subsequent enactment of the general assembly of that state granting to a railroad company the authority to enclose and occupy for its purposes and uses a specifically described portion of the levee and batture and maintain the wharf it had therefore erected upon its property within those limits, and exempting it from the supervision and control which the municipal authorities exercised in a matter of public wharves. And Mr. Justice Matthews, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Neither would this be in derogation of any vested right of the city. Whatever power the municipal body rightfully enjoys over the subject is derived from the legislature. They are merely administrative and may be revoked at any time, not touching, of course, any property of the city actually acquired in the course of administration." Followed in Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 342, 35 L. Ed. 446; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co., 125 U. S. 18, 32, 31 L. Ed. 607. See the title WHARVES AND WHARFINGERS.

body.[79] But a distinction exists between regulation and appropriation, and the legislative power is not so transcendent that it may at its will do that which amounts to an arbitrary divestiture of the private property of a municipal corporation.[80]

b. Restitution of Taxes to Taxpayers.—Unless restrained by provisions of its constitution, the legislature of a state possesses the power to direct a restitution to taxpayers of a county, or other municipal corporation, of property exacted from them by taxation, into whatever form the property may be changed, so long as it remains in possession of the municipality. The exercise of this power infringes upon no provision of the federal constitution.[81]

7. CHANGE OF GOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES.—Where a legislative act merely changed the mode of paying municipal warrants and certificates and vested that power in another branch of the government, this does not impair the obligation of any contract between the holders of such securities and the city.[82]

VII. Remedies.[83]

A. In General.—In placing the obligation of contracts under the protection of the constitution, its framers looked to the essentials of the contract more than to the forms and modes of proceeding by which it was to be carried into execution; annulling all state legislation which impaired the obligation, it was

79. Grants of forfeited money to counties.—Maryland v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 How. 534, 551, 11 L. Ed. 714, followed and approved in East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. 511, 535, 13 L. Ed. 518; Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 35 L. Ed. 446. See the title COUNTIES, vol. 4, p. 825.

80. Distinction between regulation and appropriation.—Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 35 L. Ed. 446.

81. Restitution of taxes to taxpayers.—Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. Ed. 822, cited and approved in Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 343, 35 L. Ed. 446.

Right to swap ownership of property.—"Any attempt by the legislature to take private property from its grantee, and restore it to its grantor, would be in conflict with the constitutional inhibition against impairing the obligation of contracts." Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 114, 23 L. Ed. 822.

"But between the state and municipal corporations, such as cities, counties, and towns, the relation is different from that between the state and the individual. Municipal corporations are mere instrumentalities of the state, for the convenient administration of government; and their powers may be qualified, enlarged or withdrawn, at the pleasure of the legislature. Their tenure of property, derived from the state for specific public purposes, or obtained for such purposes through means which the state alone can authorize—that is, taxation—is so far subject to the control of the legislature, that the property may be applied to other public uses of the municipality than those originally designated. This follows from the nature of such bodies, and the dependent characters of their existence." Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 114, 23 L. Ed. 822.

"But property, derived by them from other sources, is often held, by the terms of its grant, for special uses, from which it cannot be diverted by the legislature. In such cases, the property is protected by all the guards against legislative interference possessed by individuals and private corporations for their property." Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 115, 23 L. Ed. 822.

Municipal aid.—Thus, where a county or other subdivision, acting under legislative authority, has subscribed to stock in aid of a railroad company, it is competent for the legislature by subsequent statute to direct the stock to be issued to the individual taxpayers in exchange for receipts which they received upon payment of the tax levied to pay such subscription. Board of Comm'rs v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. Ed. 822.

82. Change of governmental agencies.—No one has a vested right in a rule of law. The act of the state of Louisiana, abolishing the police organization established in 1868, and vesting in the city of New Orleans the function of maintaining its own police force, was essentially a mere change of an instrumentality of municipal government. In making the change no obligation rested upon the state to create an independent successor of the police board or to provide for the payment of its debts—existing laws were ample for this purpose. This legislation was in the exercise of the state's power and is not in contravention of the constitution of the United States. New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 38 L. Ed. 764.

83. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 442.

left to the states to prescribe and shape the remedy to enforce it.[84] Accordingly, the rule is well settled that the forms of action and modes of proceeding for the enforcement of a contract existing at the time of making the contract, are so far within the control of the state, that they may be changed, modified, or abrogated altogether without impairing the obligation of the contract, provided another and equally adequate and efficacious remedy for the enforcement of the obligation remains, or is substituted for the one taken away.[85] And although a new remedy may be deemed less convenient than the old one, and may in some

84. Remedy may be shaped by the states.—McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. Ed. 397.

85. Statutes changing, modifying or abrogating remedies generally valid.—Young v. Bank, 4 Cranch 384, 2 L. Ed. 655; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 200, 4 L. Ed. 529; Bank v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235, 245, 4 L. Ed. 559; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 85, 5 L. Ed. 547; Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 6 L. Ed. 660; Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. Ed. 190; Briscoe v. Bank, 11 Pet. 257, 328o, 9 L. Ed. 709; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 317, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397; Gantly v. Ewing, 3 How. 707, 717, 11 L. Ed. 794; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447, following Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Bank v. Dalton, 9 How. 522, 13 L. Ed. 242; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 553, 18 L. Ed. 403; Drehman v. Stifle, 8 Wall. 595, 19 L. Ed. 508; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 611, 21 L. Ed. 212; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 317, 21 L. Ed. 357; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. Ed. 77; Railroad Co. v. Hecht, 95 U. S. 168, 170, 24 L. Ed. 423; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 633, 24 L. Ed. 365; Ten-432, 438, 24 L. Ed. 760; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. Ed. 793; Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 637, 24 L. Ed. 858; Memphis v. United States, 97 U. nessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 73, 74, 24 L. Ed. 610; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. S. 293, 24 L. Ed. 920; South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433, 437, 25 L. Ed. 937; Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714, 720, 26 L. Ed. 602; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 775, 27 L. Ed. 468; Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 64, 27 L. Ed. 648; Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 518, 27 L. Ed. 808; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 755, 30 L. Ed. 825; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 295, 30 L. Ed. 1161; Hill v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 134 U. S. 515, 527, 33 L. Ed. 994; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 685, 693, 34 L. Ed. 304; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Louisiana, 157 U. S. 219, 224, 39 L. Ed. 679; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 104, 43 L. Ed. 382; Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 46 L. Ed. 612; Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 187 U. S. 437, 439, 47 L. Ed. 249; Waggoner v. Flack, 188 U. S. 595, 603, 47 L. Ed. 609; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 530, 51 L. Ed. 1163.

"The state has full power over remedies and procedure in its own courts, and can make any order it pleases in respect thereto, provided that substance of right is secured without unreasonable burden to parties and litigants. Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. Ed. 468." York v. Texas, 137 U. S. 15, 20, 34 L. Ed. 604; Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Pinkney, 149 U. S. 194, 204, 37 L. Ed. 699.

The rule seems to be that in modes of proceeding and of forms to enforce the contract, the legislature has the control, and may enlarge, limit, or alter them, provided that it does not deny a remedy, or so embarrass it with conditions and restrictions as seriously to impair the value of the right. Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 74, 24 L. Ed. 610.

It is true that the remedy for the enforcement of a contract sometimes enters into the contract itself, but that is where an endeavor has been made to so change the existing remedy that there is no effective and enforceable one left, or the remedy is so far impaired that the party desirous of enforcing the contract is left practically without any efficient means of doing so; but in the case of an alteration of a remedy, if one is left or provided which is fairly sufficient, the obligations of a contract are not impaired, although the remedies existing at the time it was entered into are taken away. Waggoner v. Flack, 188 U. S. 595, 602, 47 L. Ed. 609.

Changing remedies an act of sovereignty.—The principle was clearly enunciated in Waggoner v. Flack, 188 U. S. 595, 603, 47 L. Ed. 609, in which Mr. Justice Peckham, speaking for the court, said: "To enact laws providing remedies for a violation of contracts, to alter or enlarge those remedies from time to time as to the legislature may seem appropriate, is an exercise of sovereignty, and it cannot be supposed that the state, in a case like this, contracts in a public act of its legislature to limit its power in the future, even if it could do so, with or without consideration, unless the language of the act is so absolutely plain and unambiguous as to leave no room for doubt that its true meaning amounts to a contract by it to part with its power to increase the effectiveness of existing remedies." See, also, Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, degree render the recovery of debts more tardy and difficult, yet it will not follow that the law is unconstitutional. Whatever belongs merely to the remedy may be altered according to the will of the state, provided the alteration does not impair the obligation of the contract.[86] Moreover, the court has nothing to do with the motives of the legislature, if what they do is within the scope of their powers under the constitution.[87]

B. Limitations of General Rule.—On the other hand, the rule is well settled that the laws which prescribe the mode of enforcing a contract, which are in existence when it is made, are so far a part of the contract, that if subsequent laws seriously interfere with its enforcement, as by qualifying and restraining the remedy by conditions and restrictions so as to render it useless or impractical to pursue it, and more especially if such laws take away all remedy for enforcing the right, they will be deemed void under the contract clause.[88]

46 S. E. 612; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Louisiana, 157 U. S. 219, 39 L. Ed. 679; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 530, 51 L. Ed. 1163.

This principle was stated by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529, as follows: "The distinction between the obligation of a contract and a remedy given by the legislature to enforce that obligation exists in the nature of things, and, without impairing the obligation of the contract, the remedy may certainly be modified as the wisdom of the nation may direct." Approved in Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 530, 51 L. Ed. 1163; Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 416, 46 L. Ed. 612.

86. That the new remedy is less convenient no test.—Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 316, 11 L. Ed. 143.

87. Motives of legislature immaterial.—Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 775, 27 L. Ed. 468.

88. Statutes operating on the remedy may impair its obligation.—Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 75, 5 L. Ed. 547; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 217, 327, 6 L. Ed. 606; Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 290, 7 L. Ed. 679; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 317, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. Ed. 397, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93; Maryland v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 How. 534, 549, 11 L. Ed. 714; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 12 L. Ed. 447, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 76, 5 L. Ed. 547; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 319, 14 L. Ed. 705; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. Ed. 403; Clark v. Reyburn, 8 Wall. 318, 19 L. Ed. 354, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 126, 41 L. Ed. 93; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 583, 19 L. Ed. 490, followed in United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495; White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 653, 20 L. Ed. 685; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 622, 623, 21 L. Ed. 212; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 317, 318, 21 L. Ed. 357; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 143, 24 L. Ed. 77; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 607, 24 L. Ed. 793; Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 637, 24 L. Ed. 858; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 26 L. Ed. 132; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. Ed. 395; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090; Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221, 27 L. Ed. 506; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 303, 29 L. Ed. 185; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 294, 30 L. Ed. 1161; United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; 2 Madison Papers, 1239, 1581.

The obligation of a contract, without an effective remedy to enforce it would be a "name," and not a "thing;" the word obligation would be an "empty sound" and the protection of the constitution a solemn mockery. Opinion of Baldwin, J., in Briscoe v. Bank, 11 Pet. 257, 328p, 9 L. Ed. 709.

"The decisions of this court are numerous in which it has been held that the laws which prescribe the mode of enforcing a contract, which are in existence when it is made, are so far a part of the contract that no changes in these laws which seriously interfere with that enforcement are valid, because they impair its obligation within the meaning of the constitution of the United States." Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 122, 41 L. Ed. 93.

Statutes which so change the nature and extent of existing remedies as to materially impair the rights and interests of the owner of property, are just as much a violation of his rights under a contract as if they overturned his rights and interests. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 17, 92, 5 L. Ed. 547, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 315, 11 L. Ed. 143; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 551, 18 L. Ed. 403; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. Ed. 793.

It is an acknowledged principle that a creditor by contract has a vested right to the remedies for the recovery of the debt which existed at law when the contract was made, and that the legislature of a state cannot take them away without impairing the obligation of the contract, though it may modify them, and even substitute others, if a sufficient remedy be left, or another sufficient one be provided. The law is in effect a part of the contract. Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 295, 24 L. Ed. 920.

In all such cases the question becomes, therefore, one of reasonableness, and of

"It is also settled that the laws which subsist at the time and place of the making of a contract, and where it is to be performed, enter into and form a part of it, as if they were expressly referred to or incorporated in its terms. This principle embraces alike those which affect its validity, construction, discharge and enforcement." Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 550, 18 L. Ed. 403, followed in Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. Ed. 793; White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 646, 653, 20 L. Ed. 685; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 317, 21 L. Ed. 357.

The existing law defines the rights and duties of the parties to a contract, and compels one party to perform the thing contracted for, and gives the other a right to enforce the performance by the remedies then in force. If, therefore, any subsequent law operates to diminish the duty or to impair the right, it necessarily bears on the obligation of the contract in favor of one party, to the injury of the other; hence, any law, which in its operation amounts to a denial or obstruction of the rights accruing by a contract, though professing to act only on the remedy, is directly obnoxious to the prohibition of the constitution. McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. Ed. 397, following Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143, approved in Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 423, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

"The obligation of a contract is impaired in the sense of the constituion, by any act which prevents its enforcement, or which materially abridges the remedy for enforcing it, which existed at the time it was contracted, and does not supply an alternative remedy equally adequate and efficacious." Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383; Howard v. Bugbee, 24 How. 461, 16 L. Ed. 753; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. Ed. 370; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 21 L. Ed. 357; Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. Ed. 610; Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 24 L. Ed. 920; Memphis v. Brown, 97 U. S. 300, 24 L. Ed. 924; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 693, 34 L. Ed. 304.

"Illustrations of this proposition are found, in the obligation of the debtor to pay interest after the maturity of the debt, where the contract is silent; in the liability of the drawer of a protested bill to pay exchange and damages, and in the right of the drawer and indorser to require proof of demand and notice. These are as much incidents and conditions of the contract as if they rested upon the basis of a distinct agreement." Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 550, 18 L. Ed. 403.

It is difficult, perhaps, to draw a line that would be applicable in all cases between legitimate alterations of the remedy and provisions which, in the form of remedy, impair the right. But it is manifest that the obligation of the contract, and the rights of a party under it, may, in effect, be destroyed by denying a remedy altogether; or may be seriously impaired by burdening the proceedings with new conditions and restrictions, so as to make the remedy hardly worth pursuing. Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 317, 11 L. Ed. 143, approved in Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 294, 30 L. Ed. 1161.

Entire scheme of statute looked to.—"When we are asked to put this case within the rule of those cases in which we have held that it is competent for the states to change the form of the remedy, or to modify it otherwise, as they may see fit, provided no substantial right secured by the contract is thereby impaired, we are bound to consider the entire scheme of the new statute, and to have regard to its probable effect on the rights of the parties." Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 131, 41 L. Ed. 93.

Imposing or dispensing with conditions.—"The obligation of a contract depends upon its terms and the means which the law in existence at the time affords for its enforcement. A law which alters the terms of a contract by imposing new conditions, or dispensing with those expressed, is a law which impairs its obligation, for, as stated on another occasion, such a law relieves the parties from the moral duty of performing the original stipulations of the contract, and it prevents their legal enforcement." Case of the State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 320, 21 L. Ed. 179.

Statutes lessening efficacy of remedy.—"The obligation of a contract, in the constitutional sense, is the means provided by law by which it can be enforced—by which the parties can be obliged to perform it. Whatever legislation lessens the efficacy of these means, impairs the obligation. If it tend to postpone or retard the enforcement of the contract, the obligation of the latter is to that extent weakened." Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 295, 30 L. Ed. 1161; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 206, 26 L. Ed. 132; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 798, 27 L. Ed. 468.

The only ground on which a change of remedy existing when a contract was made is permissible without impairment of the contract is that a new and adequate and efficacious remedy be substituted for that the legislature is primarily the judge.[89] And the test is not the extent of the violation of the contract, but the fact that in truth its obligation is lessened, in however small a particular, and not merely altering or regulating the remedy alone.[90] Since legislation of a state thus impairing the obligation of contracts is null and void, the courts in enforcing the contracts will pursue the same course and apply the same remedies as though such invalid legislation had never existed.[91]

Statutes Operating Prospectively.—But a creditor must take notice of statutes which are in existence at the time the debt is contracted, and if all the remedies are preserved to him which were in existence at that time, he has no cause of complaint.[92] And when a new remedy is authorized after a contract has been made, that remedy may be wholly taken away by the legislature, before any vested rights have been acquired under it. In such a case the parties did not contract with reference to it, and it did not enter into their agreement. It had nothing to do with the obligations they assumed.[93]

C. Right to Take Away Remedy by Judicial Decisions.—When the remedy is taken away not by a subsequent repeal but by subsequent judicial decisions, the effect upon the contract is the same as if the provisions of the Code had been repealed, and this is so even though there has been no previous decision upon the subject.[94]

D. Additional Remedies.—A law simply giving an additional remedy to the party entitled to performance, without impairing any substantial right of the other party, does not impair the obligation of the contract sought to be enforced.[95] that which is superseded. Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 301, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

Legislation of a state thus impairing the obligation of contracts made under its authority is null and void, and the courts in enforcing the contracts will pursue the same course and apply the same remedies as though such invalid legislation had never existed. Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 302, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

The remedies for the collection of a debt are essential parts of the contract of indebtedness, and those in existence at the time it is incurred must be substantially preserved to the creditor. Thus a statute prohibiting the exercise of its taxing power by the city to raise money for the payment of these bonds would be void. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. Ed. 403. But it is otherwise of statutes which are in existence at the time the debt is contracted. Of these the creditor must take notice, and if all the remedies are preserved to him which were in existence when his debt was contracted he has no cause of complaint. Cooley, Constitutional Limitations, 285, 287. Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 120, 22 L. Ed. 72.

89. Reasonableness of change is test.—Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. Ed. 365; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 775, 27 L. Ed. 468.

90. The test is not the extent of violation.—Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. Ed. 397; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 330, 12 L. Ed. 447.

91. Method to be pursued by the courts in such cases.—Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. Ed. 1090.

92. Statutes operating prospectively on the remedy.—Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 22 L. Ed. 72.

93. Rule where no rights have vested under the contract.—Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 295, 24 L. Ed. 920.

94. Remedy cannot be impaired by judicial decisions.—Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 584, 19 L. Ed. 490; United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495, approved in Pine Grove Tp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 678, 22 L. Ed. 227. See ante, "Judicial Decisions," II, F.

Mandamus to compel levy of tax.—Where under the statute in force when a contract between a municipal corporation and its bond holders is made, the bond holders were entitled to a remedy by mandamus to compel the levy of a tax sufficient to pay the judgment recovered upon the bonds, such right can no more be taken away by subsequent judicial decisions than by subsequent legislation. It is as much within the sphere of the power of the United States supreme court to protect the contract from the former as from the latter, and it is no more concluded by one than by the other. Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 584, 19 L. Ed. 490; United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495.

95. Statutes giving additional remedies are valid.—New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Louisiana, 157 U. S. 219, 225, 39 L. Ed. 679; Red River Valley Bank v. Craig, 181 U. S. 548, 45 L. Ed. 994.

"Much more may the state give an addi-

E. Defenses—1. USURY.—A statute which repeals existing usury laws, and destroys defenses to existing contracts on the ground of usury, does not deprive parties of vested rights nor impair the obligation of contracts.[96]

2. SET-OFFS.—When the rights of third persons do not interfere, a state legislature may provide even as to existing contracts, that mutual obligations may be set off one against another, because this involves a mere change in the form of the remedy,[97] and such a statute is not invalid because one of such ex-tional and more efficacious remedy for the enforcement of contracts in the performance of which the public health and the public safety are involved; provided always, that the new remedy is consistent with the nature of the obligation to be enforced, and does not impair any substantial right given by the contract. One who engages by contract to do a certain thing cannot claim that the obligation he has assumed is impaired by legislation that is designed only to enforce performance of his obligation." New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Louisiana, 157 U. S. 219, 224, 39 L. Ed. 679.

Additional remedies to municipalities.—The Louisiana act of July 12, 1888, providing a remedy by way of mandamus to compel corporations to fulfill their contracts with municipal corporation with reference to the paving, grading, repairing and care of streets, highways, bridges, culverts, levees, canals, etc., simply gave an additional remedy to the party entitled to the performance without impairing any substantial right of the other party, and did not impair the obligation of the contracts sought to be enforced. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Louisiana, 157 U. S. 219, 225, 39 L. Ed. 679.

96. Laws abolishing defense of usury—Penalties and forfeitures, etc.—"The effect of the usury statute of Texas was to enable the party sued to resist a recovery against him of the interest which he had contracted to pay, and it was, in its nature, a penal statute inflicting upon the lender a loss and forfeiture to that extent. Such has been the general, if not uniform, construction placed upon such statutes. And it has been quite as generally decided that the repeal of such laws, without a saving clause, operated retrospectively, so as to cut off the defense for the future, even in actions upon contracts previously made. And such laws, operating with that effect, have been upheld, as against all objections on the ground that they deprived parties of vested rights, or impaired the obligation of contracts." Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 150, 27 L. Ed. 682.

"The right of a defendant to avoid his contract is given to him by statute, for purposes of its own, and not because it affects the merits of his obligation; and * * * whatever the statute gives, under such circumstances, as long as it remains in fieri, and not realized by having passed into a completed transaction, may, by a subsequent statute, be taken away. It is a privilege that belongs to the remedy, and forms no element in the rights that inhere in the contract. The benefit which he has received as the consideration of the contract, which, contrary to law, he actually made, is just ground for imposing upon him, by subsequent legislation, the liability which he intended to incur." Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 151, 27 L. Ed. 682; Read v. Plattsmouth, 107 U. S. 568, 27 L. Ed. 414; Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. Ed. 876; Gross v. United States Mortgage Co., 108 U. S. 477, 489, 27 L. Ed. 795. See the title USURY.

97. Right of set-off may be changed at will of legislature.—Blount v. Windley, 95 U. S. 173, 24 L. Ed. 424. See the title SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT AND COUNTERCLAIM.

"The legal and equitable right in a general way of a debtor to procure the obligations of his creditor and use them as a set-off for his own debt, will hardly be denied when the law of the state authorizes it, and such a law can be liable to no impeachment as divesting vested rights or impairing the obligation of contracts. Blount v. Windley, 95 U. S. 173, 24 L. Ed. 424." Amy v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 114 U. S. 387, 393, 29 L. Ed. 172.

Set-off against claim of city for back taxes.—A state law which authorizes persons indebted to a municipal corporation for back taxes to procure certain classes of its outstanding obligations and set them off against the claim of the municipality against him for such taxes, does not impair the contract rights of the general creditors of the city who have no lien upon such taxes, nor deprive them of any vested right. Amy v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 114 U. S. 387, 29 L. Ed. 172.

Set-off by municipality of taxes against debts due by it.—The right of a municipal corporation to pay for its water supply in taxes, that is, by using its demand against the company for taxes as an offset against the demand of the company for water dues, if property at all, is not such a vested right as to be beyond the control of the legislature. New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 90, 35 L. Ed. 943.

Set-off by holder of public land grants.—Where certificates which a railroad company has located upon public lands are void because the state legislature was constitutionally forbidden to grant the lands isting obligations happens to be a judgment which, otherwise, would be collectible in coin or currency.[98] But the rule is different when, as in many cases of equitable set-off, the right inheres in the transaction, or arises out of the relations of the parties; and it may in any case be made the subject of contract between the parties. When this is done, it stands upon the footing of every other lawful contract upon a valuable consideration, the obligation of which cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation.[99]

3. Defenses to Actions on Insurance Policies.—It has never yet been decided whether a statute, depriving an insurance company of the right to set up the defense of suicide to an action on a policy of insurance, would be objectionable as impairing the obligation of pre-existing contracts.[1]

F. Various Particular Remedies Considered—1. Remedies for Enforcement of Judgments.—The remedies for the enforcement of a judgment, existing at the time it was recovered, cannot be taken away either by direct legislation, or indirectly, by repealing the law which gave those remedies. Whether the judgment be considered as a contract of record or not, it confers vested rights which are secure against legislative invasion.[2] And that the remedy did not exist at the time of the execution of the contract, but was created by statute between the time of the execution of the contract and the recovery of the judgment, is immaterial.[3]

2. Remedies of Holders of Municipal and State Securities—a. In General.—It has been uniformly held that remedies given by statutes prescribing the means whereby bond holders are entitled to enforce their claims in the event of default by the city of state, are within the protection of the constitution of the United States, and that any state law which substantially impairs them is as and issue the certificates, the company is not deprived of any vested right because, in a suit by the state to recover the lands so located, it is denied the right to use other valid certificates by way of counterclaim or set-off, and which it cannot locate upon other lands by reason of the public lands within the state having become exhausted. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 226, 242, 42 L. Ed. 1017.

98. Effect where obligation is a judgment.—A statute, therefore, as that of North Carolina, passed after the bank or its commissioner had obtained a judgment, which authorizes the defendant to set off against it the circulating notes of the bank which he procured after the judgment, is, as between him and the bank or its commissioner, valid, and does not impair the obligation of the contract sued on, or of the judgment. Blount v. Windley, 95 U. S. 173, 24 L. E. 424.

But if the rights of either creditors of the bank, or other parties interested in the judgment, were such that they could exact payment of the judgment in lawful money, the case would be different. Blount v. Windley, 95 U. S. 173, 24 L. Ed. 424.

99. When the right of set-off is not subject to legislative change.—"Ordinarily, it is true, the right to set off mutual independent debts, by way of compensation and satisfaction, is dependent on the general law, does not enter into the contract, although it may be the lex loci contractus, and is dependent for its enforcement upon the lex fori, when suit is brought, and consequently may be changed by the legislature without impairing vested rights. But in such cases the right is entirely dependent upon the general law, and changes with it. It is different, when, as in many cases of equitable set-off, it inheres in the transaction, or arises out of the relations of the parties; and it may in any case, as it was in this, be made the subject of contract between parties. When this is done, it stands upon the footing of every other lawful contract, upon valuable consideration, the obligation of which cannot be impaired by sebsequent legislation." Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185.

1. Statute taking away defense of suicide to action on policy.—The Missouri statute providing that in all suits upon policies of life insurance hereafter issued by any company, suicide shall be no defense, was held to apply only to policies thereafter issued. The court refused to express an opinion whether, if the act were plainly applicable upon its face to antecedent policies, it would be open to the imputation of impairing the obligation of contracts previously entered into between the insurance company and their insured. Knights Templars', etc., Indemnity Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197, 47 L. Ed. 139. See the title INSURANCE.

2. Remedies to enforce judgments cannot be taken away.—Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 296, 24 L. Ed. 920. See the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

3. Time when remedy to enforce judgment created immaterial.—Memphis v.

much prohibited by that instrument as legislation which impairs otherwise the obligation of the contract.[4]

b. Levy and Collection of Taxes.—Hence laws for the collection of the requisite taxes, existing when the bonds were issued, but subsequently repealed, still subsist for the purposes of the contract, and a writ of mandamus may issue from the circuit court to enforce them.[5]

United States, 97 U. S. 293, 296, 24 L. Ed. 924.

Thus, where, between the time of the entering into a paving contract by a municipal corporation and the recovery of a judgment thereon, the legislature provided for the levy of a special tax for the payment of the indebtedness so incurred, which statute was in force when judgment was recovered upon such contract, the subsequent repeal of the act was invalid and inoperative as against the judgment creditor. Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 296, 24 L. Ed. 920.

4. Remedies of purchasers of municipal bonds.—McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. Ed. 490; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 30 L. Ed. 1161; United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 93; Shapleigh v. San Angelo, 167 U. S. 646, 42 L. Ed. 310, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES.

State statutes in force at the time of the issuance of municipal securities and providing a remedy for their enforcement by compulsory taxation for their payment, enter into and form a part of the obligation of the contract of the parties. They prescribe the remedy to which the bond holders are entitled to in the event of the default of the city; and neither by subsequent appeal nor by judicial construction can the bond holders be deprived of such remedy. Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 583, 19 L. Ed. 490, followed in United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 555, 18 L. Ed. 403.

The Iowa act of 1862, and the provisions of the code which were in force at that time, respecting the duty of municipal authorities to levy taxes sufficient to pay judgments recovered against the city enters into and form a part of the contract of the parties. They prescribe one of the remedies to which the bond holders were entitled in the event of the default by the city. Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. Ed. 490; United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495.

A statute providing a special tax for the payment of township bonds, enacted after the bonds were issued, is subject to repeal or alteration at any time before judgment recovered upon the bonds; but if judgment be recovered while the act remains in force, the judgment plaintiff thereby acquires a vested right to have the tax levied pursuant to the statute, which right cannot be affected by a subsequent repeal of the statute. Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 291, 30 L. Ed. 1161; Cape Girardeau County Court v. Hill, 118 U. S. 68, 30 L. Ed. 73.

Virginia coupon cases—Provisions requiring payment in money and action to recover same, not equivalent remedy.—The receivability feature of the Virginia funding act of March 30, 1871, whereby coupons issued under that act were made receivable and a legal tender in payment of all debts, taxes and demands due the state, was designed to provide, and did provide in the hands of the holders of these coupons, a remedy whereby they were unable to collect the same, or to enforce payment thereof, without legal process. The remedy provided by the act of January 14, 1882, and the amendment of March 13, 1884, namely, to pay the taxes in money and thus prosecute an action for its recovery, was not substantially equivalent to this remedy. These acts were unconstitutional therefore as impairing the obligation of the contract between the state and the holders of the coupons. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185.

5. Laws for collection of taxes.—Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 555, 18 L. Ed. 403; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 584, 19 L. Ed. 490; United States v. Burlington, 154 U. S., appx., 568, 19 L. Ed. 495.

By the second section of the Missouri act of March 23, 1868, under which the municipal obligations of the relator which had passed into judgment were issued, it was provided that to pay the interest and principal on any bond which might be issued under the authority thereof, the county court should from time to time levy and cause to be collected, in the same manner as county taxes, a special tax upon all real estate lying within the township issuing the bonds, for the purpose of paying the principal and interest, etc. Held, that this statute entered into and became a material part of the plaintiff's contract; that this provision did not entitle the plaintiff to have a special tax for his benefit collected in the same manner in which county taxes were collectible at the date of his contract, but that it gave him the right to have a special tax levied and collected in the same manner in which county taxes were levied and collected

c. Mandamus.—If, when the contract was made, mandamus was the usual and effective remedy to coerce the city authorities to do their duty, it is an impairment of the means of enforcement possessed by the bond holders to take it away.[6] But a statute which merely attaches conditions and restrictions to the issuance of the writ, as in the Virginia coupon cases, by requiring the holders of the securities to prove the genuineness of the coupons offered for taxes, does not impair the obligation of any contract.[7] at the time when he applied for payment; that his contract not only required that he should have as good a remedy as that provided by the terms of the contract when made, but that his remedy should be by means of a tax, to be levied and collected after the manner provided by the state for the benefit of its counties, without discrimination against him. Held, further, that a subsequent statute, which provided, in substance, that the special tax should be levied only after the county court, being satisfied of the necessity therefor, had requested the county attorney to petition the circuit court of the county or the judge thereof, for an order to levy and collect the same, and that court being satisfied of the necessity for such special tax, and that it would not be in conflict with the constitution and laws of the state, had ordered the same to be levied and collected, does not provide a remedy as efficacious or equivalent as that provided by the statute of 1868 under which the bonds were issued; that it impaired the obligation of the relator's contract and was void; and that as to his contract the former act continued in full force for the purpose of levying and collecting the special tax necessary to pay the judgment entered upon the bond. Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 295, 298, 300, 30 L. Ed. 1161.

6. Mandamus to compel levy of tax.—"The inhibition upon the courts of the state to issue a mandamus for the levy of a tax for the payment of interest or principal of any bonds except those issued under the premium-bond plan was a clear impairment of the means for the enforcement of the contract with the holders of the consolidated bonds. When the contract was made, the writ was the usual and the only effective means to compel the city authorities to do their duty in the premises, in case of their failure to provide in other ways the required funds. There was no other complete and adequate remedy." Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 301, 26 L. Ed. 1090, citing Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 26 L. Ed. 132.

7. Virginia coupon cases.—On the 30th day of March, 1871, the general assembly of Virginia enacted a statute providing for the funding and payment of the public debt by which two-thirds of the amount due on the old bonds might be funded in new bonds with interest coupons attached "receivable at and after maturity for all taxes, debts, dues, and demands due the state." Under the law of the state as construed by the highest state court at and after the enactment of this statute, the holders of the coupons, upon the failure of the tax collectors to accept coupons when offered in payment of taxes, were entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel acceptance. Bonds and coupons having been extensively counterfeited and money of spurious bonds and coupons being in circulation, the general assembly on the 14th of January, 1882, enacted the statute wherein it was provided, among other things, that when a mandamus was asked to compel a collection to receive coupons in payment of taxes, he was required by the law to make a return of the alternative writ that he was ready to receive state coupons as soon as they have been legally ascertained to be genuine. Upon this return having been made, the court was required to decree that the petitioner paid his taxes, which being done the coupons which had been tendered were forwarded to the county court of the county or the hustings court of the city where the taxes were payable, with directions to that court to frame an issue between the petitioner as plaintiff and the commissioners as defendant as to whether the coupons were the genuine coupons legally receivable for taxes. Upon this issue the holder of the coupons was required to prove their genuineness, and both parties were entitled to take exceptions and carry the case on appeal to the circuit court and to the supreme court of appeals. If the decision was in favor of the petition a mandamus was to issue compelling the acceptance of the coupons and the money he had paid was to be returned to him out of the first money in the treasury in preference to all other claims. It was held that the remedy provided by this act was substantially equivalent to the remedy possessed by the holders of coupons under the law as it stood at the time of the enactment of the act of March 30th, 1871, and the issuance of the bonds; that these provisions of the act of January 14th, 1882, did not operate to impair the obligation of the contract between the state and the holders of the coupons. Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. Ed. 468.

Subsequently on the 7th day of April, 1882, the general assembly passed another statute which the plaintiff claimed took away all remedy by mandamus to compel acceptance of coupons. Without deciding whether or not the provisions of the act

3. Remedies for Mesne Profits and Improvements.—If owners of lands, granted without conditions or restrictions, are deprived by the legislature of their usual remedy for mesne profits, or compelled to pay for certain kinds of improvements for which they were not otherwise liable, this is an impairment of the obligation of a contract.[8]

4. Remedy for Resisting Illegal Taxes.—An act of a state legislature which merely alters the mode of resisting the collection of an alleged illegal tax, is unobjectionable, provided it does not deny a remedy, or so embarrass it with conditions and restrictions as seriously to impair the value of the right.[9]

5. Mandamus.—In accordance with the general rule that the legislature may change modes of proceeding and forms of enforcing contracts provided it does not deny a remedy, or so embarrass it with conditions and restrictions as seriously of January 14th, 1882, provided for a mandamus to compel acceptance of the coupons after their genuineness had been established as therein prescribed, was repealed by the act of April 7th, 1882, the court held that even such were the case, the remedy provided in §§ 1, 2, and 3 of the first act, and which, confessedly, were not repealed by the second act, was fully equivalent to the remedy by mandamus as it existed when the bonds were issued, and therefore there was no impairment of the obligations of the state contract. By these sections (1, 2 and 3), of act of January 14, 1882, it was provided in substance that the collector should take coupons tendered in payment, and receipt for them for the purpose of identification and verification. He was then to require payment of the taxes in money, and, after marking the coupons with the initials of the name of the owner, deliver them to the judge of the county court of the county or hustings court of the city where the taxes were payable. The taxpayer might then file his petition in the county or hustings court against the commonwealth to have a jury impaneled to determine the genuineness of the coupons. The commonwealth might be brought into court by service of a summons on the commonwealth's attorney, and a trial by jury with ample privileges to all parties of exception and appeal. If the suit was finally determined in favor of the taxpayer he was to have the amount paid by him for the taxes refunded out of the first money in the treasury, in preference to all other claims. As stated it was held that this remedy was fully equivalent to the remedy by mandamus existing when the bonds were issued. Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 780, 27 L. Ed. 468.

There is a distinction between the provision of a statute to provide a remedy equivalent to the remedy by mandamus to compel the acceptance of the coupons when tendered, and the provision which takes away the remedy, which taxpayer had at the time of the contract for the wrongful seizure of his property after a tender had been made and refused. In the first case the coupon holder was the actor seeking to compel the acceptance of the coupons, and the remedy provided by the statute being fairly equivalent to the remedy by mandamus, there was no impairment of the obligation. In the second case the coupon holder was acting upon the defense. Under his contract a tender of the coupons was equivalent to a tender in money, and entitled him to go hence without molestation from a taxing officer either in his person or estate, and, in the event that he was so molested, to maintain an action of detinue, trespass, or trespass on the case against the officer so acting without authority of law. The remedy provided for this case by the acts of 1882 and the amendment of 1884, namely, to pay the tax in money and prosecute an action for the recovery thereof, was not equivalent to the former remedy by action of detinue, trespass or trespass on the case, and therefore impair the obligation of the contract between the state and the holder of the coupons. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185.

8. Right to mesne profits and improvements cannot be impaired.—Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 12 L. Ed. 447; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547. See the titles EJECTMENT, vol. 5, p. 717; IMPROVEMENTS.

9. Remedy by which to resist collection of illegal tax.—The act of the legislature of Tennessee, providing that there shall be no other remedy in any case of the collection of revenue, or attempt to collect revenue illegally, or attempt to collect revenue in funds only receivable by a collector of taxes under the law, the same being other or different funds than such as the taxpayer may tender or claim the right to pay, than by paying the tax under protest, and within thirty days thereafter suing the collector to recover it, the judgment, if for the taxpayer, to be paid in preference to other claims on the treasury, does not leave a party without an adequate remedy for asserting his right to pay his state taxes in certain bills, made receivable therefor under the charter granted to the Bank of Tennessee in the year 1838, but which bills the collector refused to accept. Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. Ed. 610.

to impair the value of the right, it is held that a suit at law to recover money unlawfully exacted may be substituted for a pre-existing remedy by mandamus, especially as the former remedy is more simple and equally as effective as the latter.[10]

6. Statutes Barring Actions Ex Delicto.—A provision in a state constitution that nobody shall be liable in a civil action for acts done by virtue of military authority during the late Civil War, is not unconstitutional as depriving a party of a remedy and thus impairing the obligation of a contract, on the ground that it bars an action of forcible entry and detainer, because such remedy does not enter into a contract between the lessor and lessee, but stands on the same footing with any other action ex delicto.[11]

7. Remedies for Review in Appellate Courts.—The grant of a new remedy by way of review has been often sustained under particular circumstances.[12]

G. Changing Rules of Evidence.—Mere rules of evidence do not form a part of contracts entered into while they are in force, and it is competent for the legislature from time to time, to change the rules of evidence, and to make such change applicable to existing causes of action.[13] Thus, a statute which merely prescribes a new method of authenticating or proving the genuineness of bank bills tendered in payment of taxes, does not impair any contract obligations. It only provides a new way of enforcing an old one.[14]

10. Action at law may be substituted for mandamus.—Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. Ed. 610. See the title MANDAMUS.

11. Statutes affecting actions ex delicto.—Section 4 of the constitution of Missouri ordains that "no person shall be prosecuted in any civil action for or on account of any act by him done, performed or executed, after the 1st of January, 1861, by virtue of military authority vested in him by the government of the United States, or that of this state, to do such act, or in pursuance to orders received by him from any person vested with such authority; and if any action or proceeding shall have heretofore been, or shall hereafter be, instituted against any person for the doing of any such act, the defendant may plead this section in bar thereof." It was held that this section did not impair the obligation of a contract, within the meaning of the constitution, because, in the case of a contract relating to real property (as, for example, a landlord's covenant that he will keep his tenant in possession) its effect is to prevent a determination under particular state statutes of a party's mere right of possession, irrespective of the merits of title, and where the same result might have confessedly been lawfully brought about by the state legislature, by a repeal of the particular statute and without impairing the obligation of a contract. Drehman v. Stifle, 8 Wall. 595, 19 L. Ed. 508.

12. Remedies for appellate review.—Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. Ed. 1041, citing Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. Ed. 648; Sampeyreac v. United States, 7 Pet. 222, 8 L. Ed. 665; Freeborn v. Smith, 2 Wall. 160, 17 L. Ed. 922; Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 22 L. Ed. 612; Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 33 L. Ed. 193; Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 35 L. Ed. 446.

13. Changing rules of evidence.—Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 181, 37 L. Ed. 410. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 448. See ante, "Virginia Coupon Cases," III, D, 3, a, (2).

14. Proof of genuineness of bank bills offered to pay taxes.—Where under the charter of a bank its bills are receivable for taxes, a subsequent statute enacted after all of its bills so receivable are outstanding, and providing a new mode of proving the bills of the bank when tendered for taxes, creates no contract between the state and bill holders and gives them no vested right in such remedy, they not having received the bills in reliance thereon. Moreover, even if it were otherwise, all remedies being under the control of the state, it would have been competent for the legislature to have changed or modified it at its pleasure, so long as it left or provided other substantial and fairly equivalent means of enforcement. South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433, 25 L. Ed. 937.

The act of the general assembly of South Carolina, passed June 9, 1877, entitled: "An act to provide the mode of proving bills of the bank of the state tendered for taxes, and the rules of evidence applicable thereto," created no new contract between the state and the taxpayer or bill holder, but merely provided a new remedy which formed no part of the contract created by the charter of the bank. After that act was repealed, a party could not institute a proceeding to avail himself of the remedy which it furnished, and all suits then pending thereunder terminated, there being no saving clause as to them. South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433, 25 L. Ed. 937.

H. Exemptions from Execution—1. In General.—Statutes limiting the right of the creditor to enforce his claims against the property of the debtor, which are in existence at the time the contracts are made, are not void, but are within the legislative power of the states where the property and the debtor are to be found.[15] But state statutes which exempt any material portion of a debtor's property from execution will be held to impair the obligation of pre-existing contracts.[16] It is to be understood, however, that the encroachment thus

See the title DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 464.

15. Exemption laws valid as to future contracts.—Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 494, 32 L. Ed. 491. See ante, "Pre-existing Statutes Unobjectionable," II, J. See the titles EXECUTIONS, ante, p. 84; HOMESTEAD EXEMPTIONS, ante, p. 693.

"The established construction of the constitution of the United States against impairing the obligation of contracts requires that statutes of this class shall be construed to be parts of all contracts made when they are in existence, and therefore cannot be held to impair their obligation." Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 495, 32 L. Ed. 491.

It is believed that every state in the Union has passed statutes by which a part of the property of the debtor is exempt from seizure on execution or other process of the courts; in short, is not by law liable to the payment of his debts. This exemption varies in its extent and nature in the different states. In some it extends only to the merest implements of household necessity; in others it includes the library of the professional man, however extensive, and the tools of the mechanic; and in many it embraces the homestead in which the family resides. This has come to be considered in this country as a wise, as it certainly may be called a settled, policy in all the states. To property so exempted the creditor has no right to look, and does not look, as a means of payment when his debt is created; and while this court has steadily held, under the constitutional provision against impairing the obligations of contracts by state laws, that such exemption laws, when first enacted, were invalid as to debts then in existence, it has always held, that, as to contracts made thereafter, the exemptions were valid. Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716, 726, 24 L. Ed. 254.

16. Exemption laws held void as to pre-existing contracts.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793, approving Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 622, 21 L. Ed. 212.

A statute forbidding the sale of any of the debtor's property, under a judgment upon a contract, would relate to the remedy, and there can be no doubt that such a law passed by a state would be declared void as impairing the obligation of pre-existing contracts. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. Ed. 403; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793.

State insolvent laws which exempt future acquisitions of property from the debts of the owner and extend to discharge the debt or contract itself, must not apply to past contracts, or they will be unconstitutional as impairing their obligations. Congress alone can do this as to prior contracts by means of an express permission in the constitution to pass uniform laws upon the subject of bankruptcy. Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 328, 12 L. Ed. 447, citing Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. 295, 316, 12 L. Ed. 159; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed. 606; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529.

Homestead exemptions.—A state law, whether in the form of a statute or embodied in the state constitution, which materially increases the homestead or other exemptions which a debtor may claim, is unconstitutional in so far as it is sought to be applied retrospectively to existing contracts. Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 604, 24 L. Ed. 793.

An exemption law of Georgia, passed several years ago, exempted from execution in favor of each head of a family, "fifty acres of land, and five additional ones for each of his children under the age of 16 years, the land to include the dwelling house and improvements if the same do not exceed $200," and exempted many other things, chiefly household furniture, wearing apparel, books, family portraits, etc.; the value of which was not limited, and which might vary with different debtors and their families. With that law in force A obtained a judgment for $531 against B, who had 272½ acres of land, worth $1,300, and had no other property but land worth $100, from which the judgment could be satisfied. In this state of things Georgia having passed an "ordinance of secession," withdrew her senators and representatives from the congress of the United States, and went into the rebellion. The rebellion being suppressed, but Georgia not being allowed by congress yet to send senators and representatives to its sessions, congress passed what was known as the reconstruction act. This act reciting that "no legal state government or adequate protection for life or property now existed in the rebel state of Georgia," authorized the said state to make a constitution, which being denounced must be material. If it be not material, it will be regarded as of no account.[17]

2. Continuing Exemptions to Converted Property.—Where by existing statutes the property of a municipality was not subject to sale for enforcement of the contract, a subsequent statute authorizing the property to be converted into shares of stock, and continuing the exemption in favor of such stock, does not impair the obligation of existing contracts.[18] submitted to congress and approved by it, the state was to be entitled to representation. The people of the state did accordingly make a new constitution and submit it to congress. This new constitution provided that "each head of a family should be entitled to a homestead of realty to the value of $2,000 in specie, and personal property to the value of $1,000 in specie, to be valued at the time they are set apart;" and ordained further that: "No court or ministerial officer in the state shall ever have jurisdiction or authority to enforce any judgment, decree, or execution against said property so set apart, including such improvement as may be made thereon from time to time, except for taxes, money borrowed or expended in the improvement of the homestead, or for the purchase money of the same, and for labor done thereon, or material furnished therefor, or removal of encumbrances thereon." The constitution with this exemption and these provisions in it was submitted to congress, which approved part of it and disapproved of other parts; enacting only that after certain changes were made the state should be entitled to representation. No objection was made to the clauses of exemption or the provisions above quoted. The state of Georgia complied with the requirements of congress, and a constitution satisfactory to that body being made —these clauses of exemption and the accompanying provisions, being in it—the state was declared entitled to representation. Held, that as respected a creditor who has obtained by his judgment a lien on the land which the old exemption secured to him while the new one destroyed it, the law creating the new exemption impaired the obligation of a contract, and was unconstitutional and void. Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. Ed. 212, cited in Fink v. O'Neil, 106 U. S. 272, 276, 27 L. Ed. 196, and criticised in Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 170, 36 L. Ed. 925.

The fact that the constitution had been made under the special circumstances and in the special way above mentioned; and under the eye of congress, did not change the case. Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. Ed. 212, distinguished in Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 U. S. 162, 170, 36 L. Ed. 925.

Exemption of real property of bank.—A law which withdraws from the reach of legal process the real property of a bank which at the time of the execution of the contract, was liable to be subjected to the satisfaction of such contract, and which provided no substitute remedy, thereby reducing the creditors of the bank to a condition in which their rights "live but in grace, and their remedy is entreaty only," impairs the obligation of their contracts, and is therefore invalid. Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 320, 14 L. Ed. 705, reaffirmed in Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 21, 17 L. Ed. 776.

Dangerous dictum.—"The state may, if it thinks proper, direct that the necessary implements of agriculture, or the tools of the mechanic, or articles of necessity in household furniture, shall, like wearing apparel, not be liable to execution on judgments. Regulations of this description have always been considered, in every civilized community, as properly belonging to the remedy, to be exercised or not by every sovereignty, according to its own views of policy and humanity." Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 315, 11 L. Ed. 143. This dictum is criticised in Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 603, 24 L. Ed. 793, and the court said that the chief justice seems to have had in his mind the maxim "de minimis," etc. Upon no other ground can any exemption be justified. Policy and humanity are dangerous guides in the discussion of a legal proposition.

The states may also exempt from sale, under execution, the necessary implements of agriculture, the tools of a mechanic, and articles of necessity in household furniture. "Regulations of this description have always been considered in every civilized community as properly belonging to the remedy, to be exercised by every sovereignty according to its own views of policy and humanity." Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 553, 18 L. Ed. 403. (Obiter dicta.)

17. Exemption must be material to avoid the law.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793.

18. Statute authorizing a change in the form of property previously exempted from execution at the hands of municipal creditors.—A legislative enactment which authorizes a municipal corporation to change the form of its investment in public property and which declares that the property in its changed form, or that property received in exchange therefor, shall not be liable to execution for the city's indebtedness, does not impair the obligation of the contract between the city and its

I. Insolvency Laws[19]—1. STATUTES REGULATING PRIORITY BETWEEN CREDITORS.—The question which classes of creditors are entitled to priority in payment of debts on the distribution of funds, forms no part of the contract itself. It is extrinsic, and is rather a personal privilege, dependent on the law of the place where the property lies, and where the court sits which is to decide the case.[20]

2. STATUTES DEALING WITH ASSIGNMENTS FOR CREDITORS.—A statute allowing a debtor to make an assignment of all his property for the equal benefit of all his creditors, and thereafter to be fully discharged from all further liability upon his debts, does not impair the obligation of any contract entered into subsequent to its enactment.[21] Nor is it any impairment of the obligation of contracts entered into after the enactment of the statute, that the statute provides that, upon the debtor's making an assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors, any surplus left, after paying in full those creditors entering into the composition, shall be paid over to the debtor free from the demands of those of his creditors who did not enter into the composition.[22]

3. STATUTES ABOLISHING IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.—It is well settled by repeated decisions of the federal supreme court that the abolition of imprisonment for debt by the statute of a state is not of itself such a change in the remedy as impairs the obligation either of pre-existing or future contracts. And this for the reason that imprisonment is no part of the contract; and simply to release the prisoner does not impair its obligation.[23] creditors. New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 600, 26 L. Ed. 1184.

Thus municipal waterworks are not subject to be taken on execution for the satisfaction of the city's indebtedness. The statute of Louisiana, therefore, which authorized the city of New Orleans to sell its waterworks, and which provided that the bonds and stock received by the city in exchange therefor should not be subject to execution at the hands of the city's creditors, was not invalid as impairing the obligation of the contract. New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 600, 26 L. Ed. 1184.

Cases distinguished.—In New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 600, 603, 26 L. Ed. 1184, Mr. Justice Miller delivering the opinion of the court distinguished Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. Ed. 547; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397, in the following language: "They simply hold that an act of the legislature, passed after a contract is made, which withdraws property then liable to be seized and sold, in enforcement of that contract, from the power of the courts to seize and sell it, impairs the obligation of the contract. But it has never been held, so far as we are advised, that a statute dealing with property not subject to sale for enforcement of the contract, cannot, in providing for a change of the form of the title by which the debtor holds it, continue the exemption from forced sale of that which represents in the hands of the same owner the property so exempt. That is the case before us."

19. See the titles BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, pp. 804, 806; CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1082; INSOLVENCY.

20. Statutes providing for priorities between creditors.—Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch 289, 298, 3 L. Ed. 104, distinguished in Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 330, 12 L. Ed. 447; Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679.

21. While a state may not discharge a debt as against a citizen of another state than that where the court is sitting, who does not appear and is not otherwise brought within the jurisdiction of the court, yet the power of the state to regulate remedies as to property within the state, so far as it does not impair the obligation of contracts, is conceded; and a Minnesota statute which allows a voluntary assignment after attachment, does not work such impairment merely because the attaching creditor happens to be a citizen of another state. Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. Ed. 491. See Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 382, 20 L. Ed. 414. See the title INSOLVENCY.

22. Provisions as to surplus money.—Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 496, 32 L. Ed. 491.

23. Statutes abolishing imprisonment for debt are valid.—Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529; Beers v. Haughton, 9 Pet. 329, 9 L. Ed. 145; Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 6 L. Ed. 660; Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 553, 18 L. Ed. 403; Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. Ed. 610; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 602, 24 L. Ed. 793; Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714, 26 L. Ed. 602. See, generally, the title IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

"The right to imprison for debt is not a part of the contract. It is regarded as penal rather than remedial. The states

The reason for this rule was given as follows by Mr. Justice Swayne in Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793: "Imprisonment for debt is a relic of ancient barbarism. Cooper's Justinian, 658; 12 Tables, Tab. 3. It has descended with the stream of time. It is a punishment rather than a remedy. It is right for fraud, but wrong for misfortune. It breaks the spirit of the honest debtor, destroys his credit, which is a form of capital, and dooms him, while it lasts, to helpless idleness. Where there is no fraud, it is the opposite of a remedy. Every right-minded man must rejoice when such a blot is removed from the statute book." But a statute which not only provides for the liberation of persons in prison for debt, but also discharges the person so liberated from all liability for previously contracted debts, is a direct impairment of the obligation, and is unconstitutional and void.[24]

4. ARRANGEMENTS BETWEEN CORPORATE BOND HOLDERS.—In the United States, statutory provisions binding the minority bond holders in a corporation in a reasonable way by the will of the majority, would come within the inhibition of the contract clause as to existing obligations. But in the Dominion of Canada may abolish it whenever they think proper." Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 200, 4 L. Ed. 529; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 230, 6 L. Ed. 606; Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 373, 6 L. Ed. 660; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 553, 18 L. Ed. 403, citing Beers v. Haughton, 9 Pet. 329, 359, 9 L. Ed. 145.

Imprisonment for debt constitutes no part of the obligation of a contract, and a statute providing therefor may be repealed at any time, regardless of whether the contract was entered into or the judgment recovered before or after the enactment of the repealing act. Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714, 26 L. Ed. 602; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 200, 4 L. Ed. 529; Beers v. Haughton, 9 Pet. 329, 9 L. Ed. 145.

The states have a right to legislate or abolish imprisonment for debt, as a part of the remedy for enforcing the performance of contracts, and to make such laws apply to existing contracts, and to the cases of persons already imprisoned. Such laws act merely upon the remedies, and they are part only. They do not take away the entire remedy but only so far as imprisonment forms a part of such remedy. Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 6 L. Ed. 660, following Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 200, 4 L. Ed. 529.

Confinement of the debtor may be a punishment for not performing his contract, or may be allowed as a means of inducing him to perform it. But the state may refuse to inflict this punishment, or may withhold this means and leave the contract in full force. Imprisonment is no part of the contract, and simply to release the prisoner, does not impair its obligation. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 200, 201, 4 L. Ed. 529, approved in Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 6 L. Ed. 660.

A doubt expressed.—But upon the power of a state, even in this class of cases, see the strong dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Washington, in Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 6 L. Ed. 660; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 602, 24 L. Ed. 793.

Illustrative cases.—Where the condition of a bond for the jail limits, in Rhode Island, required the party to remain a true prisoner, in the custody of the keeper of the prison, and within the limits of the prison, "until he shall be lawfully discharged, without committing any manner of escape or escapes during the time of restrains, then this obligation to be void, or else to remain in full force and virtue;" held, that a discharge, under the insolvent laws of the state, obtained from the proper court, in pursuance of a resolution of the legislature, and discharging the party from all his debts, etc., "from all imprisonment, arrest and restraint of his person therefor"—was a lawful discharge, and that his going at large under it, was no breach of the condition of the bond. Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 6 L. Ed. 660.

In the absence of constitutional prohibitions the state may by special statute apply the remedy to individual cases. Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 378, 6 L. Ed. 660.

A statute of a state, enacted to define and limit the mode of enforcing the liability of stockholders for the debts of corporations, which provides that no person shall hereafter be imprisoned, or be continued in prison, nor shall the property of any such person be attached, upon an execution issued upon a judgment obtained against a corporation of which such person is or was a stockholder, is constitutional and valid even as applied to debts contracted by the corporation before its enactment. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. Ed. 825, citing Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed. 606; Webb v. Den, 17 How. 576, 15 L. Ed. 35; Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 17 L. Ed. 776; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513; Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. Ed. 610; Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714, 26 L. Ed. 602.

24. When statutes abolishing imprisonment for debt are void.—Sturges v.

such a provision may be passed in respect to existing as well as prospective obligations.[25] On the other hand, where a railroad company has become pecuniarily embarrassed, and seeks to devise a plan for the settlement of its affairs and liabilities, a statute passed in furtherance of this plan, which makes the failure of a bond holder of the company to signify his refusal to concur in the agreement of settlement within a specified time, equivalent to an express assent in writing, does not impair the obligation of his contract.[26]

J. Right to Sue—1. In General.—The mere right to sue without any means of enforcing judgments recovered is not such a remedy as forms a part of the obligation of a contract. Such a right or remedy may, therefore, be repealed at the pleasure of the state. A right to petition, or entreat, is not a means of enforcement, and where the sole remedy extended to judgment creditors against the state is the right to petition the legislature to satisfy the judgment recovered, such creditor cannot be said to have a remedy which is within the protection of the contract clause of the constitution.[27]

2. Right to Sue the State.—A law providing that the state may be sued is not a contract, but an ordinary act of the legislature prescribing the conditions upon which the state consents to waive the privilege of sovereignty. Accordingly, such law may be repealed altogether, either by putting an end to the jurisdiction of their courts in suits against the state, or by prescribing new conditions upon which the suits might still be allowed to proceed; and in exercising this power, the state violates no contract with the parties.[28]

Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529.

25. Arrangements between railroad bondholders.—Canada Southern R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527, 27 L. Ed. 1020. See the title RAILROADS.

26. Settlement of embarrassed railroad corporations.—Gilfillan v. Union Canal Co., 109 U. S. 401, 27 L. Ed. 977.

27. Mere right to sue may be withdrawn.—Railroad Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337, 25 L. Ed. 960; Railroad Co. v. Alabama, 101 U. S. 832, 25 L. Ed. 973; both these cases approved in Baltzer v. North Carolina, No. 1, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed. 684.

"The remedy, which is protected by the contract clause of the constitution, is something more than the privilege of having a claim adjudicated. Mere judicial inquiry into the rights of parties is not enough. There must be the power to enforce the results of such an inquiry before there can be said to be a remedy which the constitution deems part of a contract. Inquiry is one thing; remedy another. Adjudication is of no value as a remedy unless enforcement follows. It is of no practical importance that a right has been established if the right is no more available afterwards than before. The constitution preserves only such remedies as are required to enforce a contract." Railroad Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337, 339, 25 L. Ed. 960, approved in Baltzer v. North Carolina, No. 1, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed. 684.

Thus where the state provides a method for suing upon claims against the state, but leaves the satisfaction of any judgment recovered to the discretion of the legislature and without any means to the plaintiff of compelling satisfaction, such remedy is not a part of the obligation of a contract, and may be repealed at pleasure. Railroad Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337, 25 L. Ed. 960; Railroad Co. v. Alabama, 101 U. S. 832, 25 L. Ed. 973, approved in Baltzer v. North Carolina, No. 1, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed. 684.

28. Statute permitting suits against state not a contract.—A statute permitting suits against the state is not a contract between the state and persons holding claims against the state. Such statute may be repealed at the will of the legislature. Railroad Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337, 339, 25 L. Ed. 960; Railroad Co. v. Alabama, 101 U. S. 832, 25 L. Ed 973; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 505, 31 L. Ed. 216; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 17, 33 L. Ed. 842, approved in Baltzer v. North Carolina, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed 684. See Bank No. 1 v. Arkansas, 20 How 530, 15 L. Ed. 993. See the title STATES

Privilege of suing state not a contract —Under the constitution of the state of Arkansas, the legislature passed a law allowing the state to be sued. According to this law, a suit was brought upon some of the state bonds; and whilst the suit was going on, the legislature passed another law, requiring the bonds to be filed in court, or the suit to be dismissed. The suitor refusing to file his bonds, the suit was dismissed; and the case was carried to the supreme court of the state, where the judgment was affirmed. The case being brought to the federal supreme court under the twenty-fifth section of the judiciary act, must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. The permission to bring the suit was not a contract whose obligations were impaired by the passage

3. Annexing Conditions to Right to Sue.—A statute passed after a contract has been made and entered into, prescribing conditions to its enforcement of such a nature that substantial rights secured thereby are impaired, is to that extent void. The states are no more permitted to impair the efficacy of a contract in this way than to attack its validity in any other manner.[29] But the requirement that a claim or demand against a city should be presented to the common council and be disallowed, in whole or in part, before the city can be subjected to suit upon it, and that failure to act upon it for sixty days shall be deemed a disallowance thereof, is a reasonable regulation for the protection of the city against the cost of unnecessary litigation, and works no impairment as to existing contracts.[30]

K. Statutory Liabilities—1. In General.—A statutory liability is as much the subject of remedial legislation as a liability by contract, unless the remedy enters into and forms a part of the obligation which the statute creates.[31]

2. Liability of Stockholders—a. In General.—The obligation of the contract existing between the stockholder and the state is not violated by a change in the character and nature of the remedy against him.[32] of the subsequent law. Beers v. Arkansas, 20 How. 527, 15 L. Ed. 991.

Where the statute of Alabama subjecting her to suit in her courts was in force at the time when a contract with her was made, and a suit thereon brought, but their functions were essentially those of a board of audit, and the plaintiff had no means of enforcing the payment of a judgment or a decree in his favor, held, that the repeal of the statute deprives the court of jurisdiction to proceed, and is not in violation of the contract clause of the constitution of the United States. Railroad Co. v. Alabama, 101 U. S. 832, 25 L. Ed. 973, approved in Baltzer v. North Carolina, No. 1, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed. 684.

The constitution of Tennessee, in force in 1838, declares that "suits may be brought against the state in such manner and in such courts as the legislature may by law direct." The statute of 1855 providing that actions might be instituted against the state under the same rules and regulations that govern those between private citizens, but conferring no power on the courts to execute their judgments, was repealed in 1865. No other law was enacted prescribing the manner or the courts in which the state could be sued. In a suit subsequently brought by the state in 1872 against the Bank of Tennessee and certain of its creditors, A, who was admitted a defendant, filed a cross bill, setting up that while the first statute was in force the bank became indebted to him, and, praying that under the indemnity clause of its charter a decree be rendered against the state for the amount of the debt. The cross bill was dismissed solely upon the ground that the state could not be sued in her own courts. Held, that the repealing statute of 1865 did not impair the obligation of a contract, within the meaning of the contract clause of the constitution of the United States. Railroad Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337, 25 L. Ed. 960, approved in Baltzer v. North Carolina, No. 1, 161 U. S. 240, 40 L. Ed. 684; Railroad Co. v. Alabama, 101 U. S. 832, 834, 25 L. Ed. 973.

29. Requiring payment of taxes as condition precedent to action.—Held, accordingly, when, on the 1st of January, 1870, suit was brought on a promissory note given in March, 1864, payable in March, 1865, that a law passed in October, 1870, which enacted (by one section) that in all suits pending on any contract made before June 1st, 1865, it should not be lawful for the plaintiff to have a verdict unless he made it appear that all taxes chargeable by law on the same had "been duly paid for each year since the making of the same;" and enacted (by another section) that it should be a condition precedent to such recovery that "the said debt has been regularly given in for taxes and the taxes paid," and (by other sections) made other retrospective enactments, impaired the obligation of a contract, and was accordingly unconstitutional. Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 21 L. Ed. 357.

30. Conditions may be annexed to right to sue.—Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 187 U. S. 437, 47 L. Ed. 249.

31. Statutory liability may be regulated.—Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. Ed. 365.

32. Character and nature of remedy against stockholders may be changed.—Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. Ed. 1163. See the title STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

A statute of a state, enacted to define and limit the mode of enforcing the liability of stockholders for the debts of the corporation, which provides that all proceedings to enforce the liability of a stockholder for the debts of the corporation shall be either by suit in equity, conducted according to the practice and

So also, the legislature may give additional remedies to make the obligation of the stockholder effectual, so long as his original undertaking is not enlarged.[33] Therefore, a statute which provides for a new method of collecting unpaid stock, in addition to and in lieu of that specially provided for in the company's charter, does not violate the obligation of any contract existing between the state and corporation, where the statute restricts any judgment against him to the amount he originally assumed to pay.[34] But a statute which repeals a former statute, by which the stock and stockholders in a chartered company were liable for the corporation's debts, is, as respects creditors of the corporation existing at the time of the repeal, a law impairing the obligation of contracts, and void, since it not only modifies the remedy afforded by such security, but wholly course of equity, or by an action of debt upon a judgment obtained against such corporation, and in any such suit or action, such stockholder may contest the validity of the claim upon which the judgment against such corporation was obtained, upon any ground upon which such corporation could have contested the same in the action in which such judgment was recovered, since it does not undertake to annul the liability of the stockholders for the debts of the corporation, but only modifies the form of remedy and the rules of evidence, it is not doubted that it is a constitutional exercise of the power of the legislature, even as applied to debts contracted by the corporation before its enactment. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. Ed. 825, citing Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed. 606; Webb v. Den, 17 How. 576, 15 L. Ed. 35; Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 17 L. Ed. 776; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513; Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. Ed. 610; Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714, 26 L. Ed. 602.

Statute giving direct remedy against individual stockholder.—The unpaid balance due upon stock subscription may be recovered by a bill in equity at the suit of the corporation or of its creditors. But a stockholder has no vested right to be sued for such unpaid balance in this form of action and no other. It is competent, therefore, for the legislature to provide that a judgment creditor of the corporation may, upon the return of an execution unsatisfied, cause to be issued against a stockholder an execution to be levied upon his property to the extent of the unpaid balance due on the stock by him or her owned. Hill v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 134 U. S. 515, 525, 33 L. Ed. 994, approved in Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 530, 51 L. Ed. 1163.

33. Additional remedies against stockholders may be given.—Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. Ed. 1163. See ante, "Additional Remedies," VII, D.

Under a constitutional provision as to single liability of stockholders, the obligation of a stockholder's contract binds him to pay to the creditors of a corporation an amount sufficient to pay its debts, not exceeding the amount of the stock held by him. Hence a Minnesota act of 1899, doing away with personal service in the court's discretion, and including in assessments upon stockholders the expenses of collection, does not impair any contract. "There is a broad distinction between laws impairing the obligation of contracts and those which simply undertake to give a more efficient remedy to enforce a contract already made." Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529; Hill v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 134 U. S. 515, 33 L. Ed. 994. Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. Ed. 1163.

"The obligation of this contract binds the stockholder to pay to the creditors of the corporation an amount sufficient to pay the debts of the corporation which its assets will not pay, up to an amount equal to the stock held by each shareholder. That is his contract, and the duty which the statute imposes, and that is his obligation. Any statute which took away the benefit of such contract or obligation would be void as to the creditor, and any attempt to increase the obligation beyond that incurred by the stockholder would fall within the prohibition of the constitution. But there was nothing in the laws of Minnesota undertaking to make effectual the constitutional provision to which we have referred, to preventing the legislature from giving additional remedies to make the obligation of the stockholder effectual, so long as his original undertaking was not enlarged." Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 530, 51 L. Ed. 1163.

34. New method of collecting unpaid stock.—Hill v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 134 U. S. 515, 33 L. Ed. 994.

Although under the original charter of a corporation, the liability of a stockholder could only be enforced by a suit in equity, yet a statute subsequently passed which gives power to a judgment creditor of a corporation, when execution on a judgment against a corporation was returned unsatisfied, to summon in a stockholder who has not fully paid the subscription to his stock and upon judgment have execution against him for the amount so paid, does not violate the obligation of any contract that may exist between the state and the corporation and its stockholders, because neither the company or its stockholders has any vested abolishes it.[35] And this is so, even though the liability of the stock is in some respects conditional only; and though the stockholder was not made, by the statute repealed, liable, in any way, in his person or property generally, for the corporation's debts.[36]

b. Stockholders of Foreign Corporations.—When a corporation is formed in one state, and by the express terms of the charter it is created for doing business in another state, and business is done in that state, the law existing in the latter state with regard to the individual liability of stockholders to creditors will be applied, rather than the law of the state in which the company was incorporated.[37]

L. Right to Grant New Trials and Make New Tribunals.—A state may grant new trials, and make new tribunals to review, in order to detect fraudulent grants or reverse fraudulent judgments, without impairing the obligation of any contract.[38]

M. Stay Laws.—Stay laws change a term of the contract by postponing the time of payment. This impairs its obligation by making it less valuable to the creditor. Such laws are therefore unconstitutional as applied to existing contracts.[39]

N. Forfeiture of Land for Nonpayment of Purchase Money.—A statute of a state which provides for the forfeiture of a contract of purchase, in event of default in the payment of annual interest without judicial ascertainment or proceedings, does not violate the obligation of a contract which was right in that particular remedy. Hill v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 134 U. S. 515, 33 L. Ed. 994.

35. Liability of stock for corporate debts constitutes a contract.—Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 23, 17 L. Ed. 776, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. Ed. 383; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304, 14 L. Ed. 705.

36. Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 17 L. Ed. 776.

37. What law determines such liability in case of foreign corporations.—Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. Ed. 125.

38. Statutes granting new trials are valid.—League v. De Young, 11 How. 185, 203, 13 L. Ed. 657; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. 79, 14 L. Ed. 334. See the title NEW TRIALS.

Right to set aside inquisition and order a new one.—The state of Maryland granted a charter to a railroad company, in which provision was made for the condemnation of land to the following effect; namely, that a jury should be summoned to assess the damages, which award should be confirmed by the county court, unless cause to the contrary was shown. The charter further provided that the payment, or tender of payment, of such valuation should entitle the company to the estate as fully as if it had been conveyed. In 1836, there was an inquisition by a jury, condemning certain lands, which was ratified and confirmed by the county court. In 1841, the legislature passed an act directing the county court to set aside the inquisition and order a new one. On the 18th of April, 1844, the railroad company tendered the amount of the damages with interest, to the owner of the land, which offer was refused; and on the 26th of April, 1844, the owner applied to the county court to set aside the inquisition, and order a new one, which the court directed to be done. The law of 1841 was not a law impairing the obligation of a contract. It neither changed the contract between the company and the state, nor did it divest the company of a vested title to the land. The charter provided, that, upon tendering the damages to the owner, the title to the land should become vested in the company. There having been no such tender when the act of 1841 was passed, five years after the inquisition, that act only left the parties in the situation where the charter placed them, and no title was divested out of the company, because they had acquired none. The states have a right to direct a rehearing of cases decided in their own courts. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. 395, 13 L. Ed. 469, approved in Essex Public Road Board v. Skinkle, 140 U. S. 334, 35 L. Ed. 446.

39. Stay laws impair the obligation of the contract.—Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 601, 24 L. Ed. 793.

Statute staying executions and sales under trust deeds.—The Virginia statute of April 13, 1861, suspending the enforcement of executions and prohibiting sales under deeds of trusts without the consent of the parties interested, upon the debtor's executing bonds with security to pay the debt, interest and costs, or where no such bond was given, requiring the return of the property without lien where it would not sell for its appraised value, was clearly in conflict with the contract clause of the federal constitution and was therefore invalid. Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U.

made and entered into at the time the statute required a judicial proceeding.[40] Nor does a law subsequently passed, which provides for the forfeiture of public lands for the nonpayment of installments due from purchasers, violate the contract clause of the federal constitution, although at the time the contract was entered into the state had no such right under the existing statutes.[41]

O. Laws Relating to the Process[42]—1. KINDS OF PROCESS.—It has been said that laws which relate only to the kind of process do not violate the obligation of a contract, because such laws only relate to the modes of proceeding in courts.[43]

2. MANNER OF SERVING PROCESS.—Nor does a statute which prescribes a mode of serving process upon railroad companies different from that provided for in a charter previously granted to a particular company, impair the obligation of the contract between such company and the state.[44]

P. Statutes Changing the Rules as to Parties to Actions.—Statutes changing the rules as to the parties in whose name an action should be brought, are valid as to prior as well as subsequent contracts.[45]

S. 415, 419, 26 L. Ed. 187, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793.

40. Forfeiture of contracts of purchase for nonpayment of purchase money.—The Texas act of July 8, 1879, § 12, provided for the forfeiture of contracts of purchase, in event of default in payment of annual interest, by a judicial proceeding. The act of March 25, 1897, authorizes the commissioner of the general land office, when any portion of the interest due by purchasers has not been paid, to declare a forfeiture without judicial aid, but gives such purchasers the right, at any time within six months of such forfeiture, to institute a suit contesting the same. Held, that no contract rights of a purchaser under the act of 1879 were impaired by the provisions of the subsequent act of 1897; that the twelfth section of the act of 1879 was not, in legal contemplation, a stipulation by the state that the only remedy which might be resorted to was the one therein provided for; and that the legislature may prescribe a different remedy without impairing the obligation of a contract. Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 46 L. Ed. 612, cited and approved in Waggoner v. Flack, 188 U. S. 595, 603, 47 L. Ed. 609. See the title VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

41. Forfeiture of contract to purchase public lands.—The Texas laws of 1883 provided for the sale of the public lands, and for the payment of installments of principal and interest on maturity. They also provided for forfeiture, without judicial inquiry, for nonpayment; which provision was repealed in 1885, re-enacted in 1887, and amended in 1897 so as to enable the original purchaser to contest such forfeiture before the courts within six months. Held; that there was no contract on the part of the state not to enlarge or change the remedy; and that there was no impairment of the obligation of contract as to a purchaser during the period when there was no forfeiture clause, but whose land was forfeited by virtue of such subsequent legislation. Waggoner v. Flack, 188 U. S. 595, 47 L. Ed. 609, following Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 46 L. Ed. 612.

"We cannot see any difference in principle between a case where an act was in existence when a contract was made, providing a certain remedy for a violation of the contract, and then after the contract is entered into, the legislature passes another act, giving an altogether different remedy, and a case where an act which denied the remedy of forfeiture when the contract was made, was repealed by a subsequent enactment which provided a forfeiture as a remedy. In both cases there is a plain alteration of remedy, while in neither is there any contract springing from the passage of the first act that no other remedy more effective should be given as against one who purchased land during the existence of the statute." Waggoner v. Flack, 188 U. S. 595, 604, 47 L. Ed. 609, citing Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 46 L. Ed. 612. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

42. See the title SUMMONS AND PROCESS.

43. Laws relating to the kind of process are valid.—Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 330, 12 L. Ed. 447; distinguishing United States v. Robeson, 9 Pet. 319, 9 L. Ed. 142; United States Bank v. Halstead, 10 Wheat. 51, 6 L. Ed. 264.

44. Statutes prescribing different modes of serving process.—Railroad Co. v. Hecht, 95 U. S. 168, 24 L. Ed. 423.

45. Statutes changing rules as to parties.—A statute of the state of Alabama, directing that promissory notes given to the cashier of a bank may be sued and collected in the name of the bank, is a law which affects the remedy only, and, although passed after the note was executed, does not impair the obligation of the contract. "The law is strictly remedial. It in no respect affects the obligation of the contract. Neither the manner

Q. Statutes Interfering with Liens and Other Securities—1. DIVESTING OR POSTPONING EXISTING LIENS.—An existing lien or other security for the enforcement of a right, cannot be divested or postponed by a subsequent act of a state legislature.[46]

2. CHANGE OF SECURITY.—But a state statute, which merely changes the security and does not take it away, is unobjectionable.[47]

3. MORTGAGES[48]—a. In General.—The law existing when a mortgage is made enters into and becomes a part of the contract.[49] But where it is claimed that a law subsequently passed by a state legislature has impaired the obligation of the contract between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, it must appear that its value has been diminished. The laws with reference to which the parties must be assumed to have contracted when the mortgage was executed, are those which in their direct and necessary legal operation control or affect the obligation of such contract.[50]

b. Redemption—(1) Right of Redemption.—A statute which authorizes the redemption of property sold upon foreclosure of a mortgage, where no right of redemption previously existed, cannot constitutionally apply to a sale under a mortgage executed before its passage.[51] And the mere fact that the right to redeem granted by the new statute only operates on the purchaser and not on the mortgagee as such, will not save its constitutionality.[52] So, also, the right nor the time of payment is changed. The bank, being the holder of the note, and having the beneficial interest in it, is authorized by the statute to sue in its own name. This is nothing more than carrying out the contract according to its original intendment." Crawford v. Branch Bank, 7 How. 279, 282, 12 L. Ed. 700. See, generally, the title PARTIES.

46. Statute postponing or divesting mortgage lien.—Where the legislature of a state authorized commissioners to borrow money to be used in making a canal, and for the redemption of the loan pledged the canal itself, its tolls, rents and lands, the lien of a lender under such act cannot be divested or postponed by a subsequent act of the legislature. Wabash, etc., Canal Co. v. Beers, 2 Black 448, 17 L. Ed. 327, cited with approval in French v. Gapen, 105 U. S. 509, 522, 26 L. Ed. 951.

Statute postponing or divesting mortgage lien.—The holder of bonds given for money advanced under such a law has a security for his debt which is protected by that provision in the constitution of the United States which forbids a state to pass any law impairing the obligation of a contract. Wabash, etc., Canal Co. v. Beers, 2 Black 448, 17 L. Ed. 327.

47. Change in security.—Although by the general law of Louisiana a father's guardianship of his minor children imports a mortgage on his immovable property in their favor, yet this mortgage does not make such a contract between the guardian and the minor as that the legislature may not, by special statute, authorize the father to sell his property divested of the tacit mortgage, especially where the proceeds are still preserved to the minors by an investment which the statute prescribes. Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 19 L. Ed. 694. See the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

48. See the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

49. Validity of subsequent laws affecting mortgages.—Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397; Gantly v. Ewing, 3 How. 707, 11 L. Ed. 794; Howard v. Bugbee, 24 How. 461, 16 L. Ed. 753; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 420, 48 L. Ed. 1046, following Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. Ed. 648, and distinguishing Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 93.

The right, and a remedy substantially in accordance with the right, are equally parts of the contract, secured by the laws of the state where it was made; and a change of these laws, imposing conditions and restrictions on the mortgagee, in the enforcement of his contract, and which affect its substance, impair the obligation, and cannot prevail; as an act directly prohibited, could not be done indirectly. Gantly v. Ewing, 3 How. 707, 717, 11 L. Ed. 794, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 319, 11 L. Ed. 143.

50. Subsequent law must have diminished value of mortgage.—Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. Ed. 648, followed in Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 420, 426, 48 L. Ed. 1046; and commented on in Bradley v. Lightcap, 195 U. S. 1, 21, 49 L. Ed. 65, and distinguished in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 128, 41 L. Ed. 93.

51. Giving right of redemption when no right existed before.—Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 129, 41 L. Ed. 93.

52. Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 93, following Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143.

of a mortgagor to redeem after a sale under a decree of foreclosure, guaranteed by the law as it existed at the time of the execution of the mortgage, is a right of which the mortgagor cannot be deprived either by subsequent legislation or by the forms of practice prevailing in the federal courts of chancery.[53]

(2) Extension of Time for Redemption.—A statute extending the time for redemption beyond that previously accorded impairs the obligation of mortgage contracts executed before its enactment.[54]

c. Purchasers at Foreclosure Sales—(1) In General.—The purchaser at a foreclosure sale must found his rights upon the law as it existed when he purchased. An alteration after he has purchased, to his prejudice, would be a different thing.[55] Thus, where, at the time a mortgage was made and entered into, there was no statute in the state limiting the time within which a deed must be taken out by the purchaser at the foreclosure sale, a statute subsequently passed which provides that if the mortgagee, being in possession, bids in the mortgaged premises at the foreclosure sale for less than the amount due on the mortgage, and the mortgagor does not redeem, the legal title of the mortgagee

53. Taking away pre-existing right of redemption.—Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 639, 24 L. Ed. 858, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 126, 41 L. Ed. 93; Clark v. Reyburn, 8 Wall. 318, 322, 19 L. Ed. 354.

Thus the mortgagor's right of redemption upon a sale under a decree of foreclosure, as it existed under the law at the time of the execution of the mortgage, cannot be taken away or impaired by a subsequent act; nor by the mode of procedure prevailing in the chancery practice of the federal courts. Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 629, 639, 24 L. Ed. 858, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93.

54. Extension of time for redemption.—Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 93.

A state law, enacted subsequently to the execution of a mortgage which declares that the equitable estate of the mortgagor shall not be extinguished for twelve months after a sale under a decree in chancery, is in violation of the constitutional provisions prohibiting any state from enacting any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143, approved in Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. Ed. 397; Gantly v. Ewing, 3 How. 707, 716, 11 L. Ed. 794, distinguished from Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 422, 48 L. Ed. 1046; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 143, 24 L. Ed. 77; Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 637, 24 L. Ed. 858.

"Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 316, 11 L. Ed. 143, holds that a state law, passed subsequently to the execution of a mortgage, which declares that the equitable estate of the mortgagor shall not be extinguished for twelve months after a sale under a decree in chancery, and which prevents any sale unless two-thirds of the amount at which the property has been valued by appraisers shall be bid therefor, is within the clause of the constitution of the United States which prohibits a state from passing a law impairing the obligation of contracts. In this case, the court dealt with the contention, usually made on these occasions and which is relied on by the defendants in error in the present case, that the law was a regulation of the remedy and did not directly affect the contract." Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 122, 41 L. Ed. 93.

A statute of the state of Alabama, authorizing a redemption of mortgaged property in two years after the sale under a decree by bona fide creditors of the mortgagor, is unconstitutional and void as to sales made under mortgages executed prior to the date of its enactment, as impairing the obligation of the contract. Howard v. Bugbee, 24 How. 461, 16 L. Ed. 753, following Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 425, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

"In Howard v. Bugbee, 24 How. 461, 16 L. Ed. 753, a statute of the state of Alabama, authorizing a redemption of mortgaged property in two years after the sale under a decree, by bona fide creditors of the mortgagor, was held unconstitutional and void as to sales made under mortgages executed prior to the enactment. It was contended that the law did not affect the mortgage contract, but only enlarged the time at the completion of which the purchaser at the mortgage sale would acquire an indefeasible title, and that the new law only operated as between the purchaser and bona fide creditors of the mortgagor. But this court, through Mr. Justice Nelson, recognized the cases of Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143, and McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397, as applicable to and decisive of the case." Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 126, 41 L. Ed. 93.

55. Rights of purchasers at foreclosure sales.—Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 48 and his right of possession shall be forfeited by failure to obtain a deed within the time prescribed to the mortgagor, materially impairs the obligation of pre-existing contracts.[56]

(2) Conditions Annexed to and Restrictions upon Sale.—A state statute passed subsequently to the execution of a mortgage, which prohibits any sale of the mortgaged property unless one-half[57] or two-thirds[58] of its appraised value is bid, is unconstitutional and void as to contracts existing at the time of its enactment.

4. STATUTES AFFECTING MEANS OF ENFORCING LIENS.—But a statute creating a new method of foreclosing liens upon real estate, or providing a means of foreclosing such liens where no means of foreclosure previously existed, and making it applicable to existing liens, does not impair the obligation of the contract.[59]

L. Ed. 1046, citing Cooley on Const. Limitations.

56. Time for obtaining deed.—Bradley v. Lightcap, 195 U. S. 1, 49 L. Ed. 65, citing and discussing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; Brine v. Insurance Co., 96 U. S. 627, 24 L. Ed. 858; Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. Ed. 648; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 93; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

57. Sale restricted to certain amount.—A statute providing that property sold to satisfy a mortgage or other debt, shall not be sold for less than one-half their appraised valuation, is unconstitutional and void in so far as it applies to existing mortgages and contracts. "If the legislature could make this alteration in the contract, and in the decree enforcing it, so it could declare the property should bring its entire value, or that it should not be sold at all; thereby impairing, or defeating the obligation under the disguise of regulating the remedy." Gantly v. Ewing, 3 How. 707, 717, 11 L. Ed. 794, cited and approved in Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 423, 48 L. Ed. 1046, following Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 319, 11 L. Ed. 143.

58. Statute requiring two-thirds value to be bid at sale.—A state law passed subsequently to the execution of a mortgage, and which prevents any sale of the mortgaged property unless two-thirds of the amount at which the property has been valued by appraisers shall be bid therefor, is in violation of the constitutional provision which prohibits a state from passing any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 122, 41 L. Ed. 93; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447, distinguished from Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 422, 48 L. Ed. 1046; Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 23, 17 L. Ed. 776.

A law of the state of Illinois, providing that a sale shall not be made of property levied on under an execution, unless it will bring two-thirds of its valuation, according to the opinion of three householders, is unconstitutional and void as to contracts existing at the time of its enactment. (Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143, reviewed and confirmed). McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397, approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93.

In the case of McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 613, 614, 11 L. Ed. 397, the court says that the right of the plaintiff under the law as it existed at the time of the execution of the contract to recover damages for the breach thereof and to have the property of the defendant sold at a judicial sale for such price as shall be bid for it at a fair public sale with reasonable notice, was as much a part of the obligation of the contract as though it had been expressly incorporated therein; and if any subsequent law which denied, obstructed or impaired this right, by superadding a condition that there shall be no sale for any sum less than the value of the property levied on, to be ascertained by appraisment, or any other mode of valuation than a public sale, impaired the obligation of a contract. Approved in Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 123, 41 L. Ed. 93, and distinguished from Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 423, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

59. Statutes affecting means of enforcing liens.—Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 549, 8 L. Ed. 751.

"The lien of a judgment, of a mortgage, or any other lien, is a very different idea from that of the means by which the lien is to be enforced; the one is the right, the other is the remedy; the one constitutes the contract, and the other the remedy afforded by the policy of the country, where it is not provided by the terms of the contract, for enforcing or effecting the execution of it. The first is unchangeable, without a violation of right; the other may be subject to change, at the will of the government." Johnson, J., delivering the opinion in Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 550, 8 L. Ed. 751.

Remedy for enforcing mortgage liens.—A state law which does nothing more than change the remedy for the enforcement of contracts, mortgage liens, etc., is open

R. Curative Acts—1. In General.—It is well settled that a retrospective law which gives validity to a void contract cannot be said to impair the obligation of that contract.[60]

2. Acts Curing Defective Conveyances.—Therefore, a statute which merely cures defective conveyances is not void under the contract clause of the federal constitution.[61] Thus, a law which merely makes deeds by femes to no constitutional objection; or a state may regulate at pleasure the modes of proceedings in its courts in relation to past contracts as well as future ones. Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 315, 11 L. Ed. 143.

Lien for arrearages due the state by public officers.—A provision in a statute creating a lien upon lands for arrearages due the state by public officers, that they shall be liens "in the same manner as if judgment had been given in the supreme court," is not a contract that such liens shall be enforced only in the manner in which judgments of the supreme court are enforced; but the state may by special provision provide a special procedure for the foreclosure of such lien. Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 549, 8 L. Ed. 751.

The confession of judgment by a public officer for arrearages due the estate does not imply an obligation upon the part of the state that such judgment shall be enforced only by ordinary judicial process. The necessity of resorting to certain means of enforcing the judgment is not an obligation arising out of the contract, but pertains to the remedy, and it is competent for the state to provide a new and specific means of enforcing it. Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 550, 8 L. Ed. 751.

J. N., sometime comptroller general of the state of Pennsylvania, having been found upon an accounting to be largely in arrears to the state, and such indebtedness under the laws of Pennsylvania constituting a lien upon all of his real estate, and there being no provision under the law for the enforcement of such lien, it was held that the creation of a commission investing him with the specific power of selling such land for the satisfaction of the indebtedness and a foreclosure of the lien, was not an impairment of the obligation of the original grant of the land to J. N. Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 550, 8 L. Ed. 751. See the titles PUBLIC OFFICERS; STATES.

Remedy for enforcing mechanic's lien.—A mortgage was given on real estate to secure the payment of a debt, subject to a mechanic's lien. The old legislative act gave the holder of the lien the right to sell the building and the purchaser the right to remove it. After the foreclosure of the mortgage and sale of the property, a new provision was added to the act, altering and enlarging the remedy for enforcing the mechanic's lien, by permitting the court, for the best interests of all the parties, to sell the land and the improvements together, and distribute the proceeds of the sale so as to secure to the prior mortgage or other lien priority upon the land, and to the mechanic's lien priority upon the building. Held, this provision did not impair the obligation of the contract with the mortgagee or purchaser on foreclosure. Red River Valley Bank v. Craig, 181 U. S. 548, 553, 45 L. Ed. 994. See the title MECHANICS' LIENS.

60. Curative acts do not impair contract obligations.—Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458; Beloit v. Morgan, 7 Wall. 619, 19 L. Ed. 205; Gross v. United States Mortgage Co., 108 U. S. 477, 488, 27 L. Ed. 795. See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 542; DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499.

There is nothing in the constitution of the United States which prohibits the legislature of a state from passing an act which divests rights vested by law, provided its effect be not to impair the obligation of a contract. Contracts are not impaired but confirmed by curative statutes. Randall v. Kreiger, 23 Wall. 137, 147, 23 L. Ed. 124, following Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 110, 8 L. Ed. 876.

Railroad aid bonds.—Any irregularity in taking the votes of the electors or otherwise in issuing bonds to aid in the construction of railroads, may be remedied by curative acts. Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. 395, 13 L. Ed. 469; White Water Valley Canal Co. v. Vallette, 21 How. 414, 425, 16 L. Ed. 154; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. Ed. 520, citing Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 627, 7 L. Ed. 542; Beloit v. Morgan, 7 Wall. 619, 19 L. Ed. 205. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID.

Mistakes and irregularities in the proceedings of municipal corporations are of frequent occurrence, and the state legislatures have often had occasion to pass laws to obviate such difficulties. Such laws, when they do not impair any contract, or injuriously affect the rights of third persons, are generally regarded as unobjectionable, and certainly are within the competency of the legislative authority. Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 24 How. 287, 295, 16 L. Ed. 664, citing Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 111, 8 L. Ed. 876; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 627, 661, 7 L. Ed. 542; St. Joseph Tp. v. Rogers, 16 Wall. 644, 664, 21 L. Ed. 328.

61. Acts curing defective conveyances.—Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 covert good when bona fide, though not acknowledged in a particular form, does not violate the obligation of any contract either in its terms or its principles; because it confirms rather than impairs their deeds, and carries out the original intent of the parties.[62]

3. Statutes Taking Away the Right to Avoid a Contract.—Where the right which a curative or repealing act takes away is the right in the party to avoid his contract, a naked legal right which it is usually unjust to insist upon,

L. Ed. 458; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. Ed. 876; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447; Gross v. United States Mortgage Co., 108 U. S. 477, 27 L. Ed. 795; McFaddin v. Evans-Snider Buel Co., 185 U. S. 505, 46 L. Ed. 1012.

The power of a legislature to pass laws giving validity to past deeds which were before ineffectual is well settled. McFaddin v. Evans-Snider Buel Co., 185 U. S. 505, 513, 46 L. Ed. 1012.

S. and M. held land in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, in common, under a Connecticut title; a division of the land was made between them, and S. became the tenant of M. of his part of the land thus set off in severalty, under a lease, to be terminated on a notice of one year; S. afterwards obtained a Pennsylvania title to the land leased to him by M., and on a trial in an ejectment for the land, brought by M. against S., the court of common pleas of Bradford county, Pennsylvania, held that S., having held the land as tenant of M., could not set up a title against his landlord; upon a writ of error to the supreme court of Pennsylvania, in 1825, it was held that, "the relation between landlord and tenant could not exist between persons holding under a Connecticut title." The legislature of Pennsylvania, on the 8th of April, 1826, passed an act, declaring that "the relation of landlord and tenant should exist and be held as fully and effectually between Connecticut settlers and Pennsylvania claimants, as between citizens of the commonwealth." The case came again before the supreme court of Pennsylvania, and the judgment of the court of common pleas of Bradford county, in favor of M., the landlord, was affirmed; that court having decided, that the act of assembly of the 8th of April, 1826, was a constitutional act, and did not impair the validity of any contract; S. brought a writ of error to this court, claiming that the act of the assembly of Pennsylvania, of the 8th of April, 1826, was unconstitutional. Held, that the act was constitutional. Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458, followed in Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. Ed. 876.

Curative act validating power of attorney.—A. and wife, residents of the state of New York, executed a power of attorney to B. to sell lands in Minnesota territory of which A., the husband, was seized. The power was executed and acknowledged by both parties, the wife undergoing such separate examination as by the laws of New York makes valid the execution of deeds by a feme covert. At the time when this power of attorney was given there was no law of the territory authorizing such an instrument to be executed by the wife or the attorney to convey under it. B., professing to act for the two parties, sold and conveyed a piece of the land, then worth $3,000, with general warranty, to C., for that sum, and A. received the money. The legislature of Minnesota subsequently passed an act by which it was enacted that "all deeds of conveyance of any lands in the territory, whether heretofore or hereafter made, under a joint power of attorney from the husband and wife, shall be as binding and have the same effect as if made by the original parties." The husband and wife afterwards revoked the power. The husband died leaving a large estate composed entirely of personalty, the whole of which he gave to his wife. The wife now brough suit for dower in the land sold by B. as attorney for her husband and herself. Held, that the power of attorney was validated by the curative act, which the court, adverting to the fact that the husband had received the purchase money for the tract, and that it had become part of his estate, and that the whole of it on his death passed to the wife, declares had a strong natural equity at its root, and accomplished that which a court of equity would have failed to decree against the wife, only because it would be prevented by the unbending law as to feme coverts in such cases. Randall v. Kreiger, 23 Wall. 137, 23 L. Ed. 124, following Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 100, 8 L. Ed. 876. These cases are approved in McFaddin v. Evans-Snider Buel Co., 185 U. S. 505, 513, 46 L. Ed. 1012; Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 79, 42 L. Ed. 658.

62. Acts curing defective acknowledgments by married women.—Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. Ed. 876; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447; Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 79, 42 L. Ed. 658.

In 1785, M. and wife executed a deed conveying certain lands of the wife to T., who immediately reconveyed them to M.; the object of the conveyance was to vest the lands of the wife in the husband. The deed of M. and wife to T. was not acknowledged according to the forms established by the law of Pennsylvania of February 20th, 1770, to pass the estates of femes covert; and after the death of the such law does not impair the obligation of a contract, because no constitutional provision was ever designed to protect such a right.[63]

S. Recording Acts[64]—1. In General.—A statute which provides that deeds, mortgages, patents and judgments shall be recorded within a limited time, in order to be valid as against creditors and subsequent purchasers, is not a law impairing the obligation of a contract.[65] For example, statutes requiring judgments[66] deeds[67] and mortgages to be recorded have been held valid as to prior as well as subsequent contracts.[68] And it is immaterial in the latter case that the mortgagee was a minor at the time the statute went into operation, as it is within the constitutional competency of the legislature to make exceptions wife of M., the land was recovered in an ejectment from the heirs of M., in a suit instituted against him by the heirs of the wife of M. In 1826, after the recovery in ejectment, the legislature of Pennsylvania passed an act, the object of which was to cure all defective acknowledgments of this sort, and to give them the same efficacy as if they had been originally taken in the proper form. The act of 1826 does not violate the obligation of any contract, either in its terms or its principles; it does not even effect to touch any title acquired by a patent or any other grant; it supposes the title of the femes covert to be good, however acquired; and even provides that deeds of conveyance made by them shall not be void, because there is a defective acknowledgment of the deeds, by which they have sought to transfer their title. So far, then, as it has any legal operation, it goes to confirm and not to impair the contract of the femes covert; it gives the very effect to their acts and contracts which they intended to give; and which, from mistake or accident, has not been effected. Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. Ed. 876, following Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458, which fully recognizes this doctrine; cited and approved in McFaddin v. Evans-Snider Buel Co., 185 U. S. 505, 513, 46 L. Ed. 1012, and Randall v. Kreiger, 23 Wall. 137, 23 L. Ed. 124.

63. Right to avoid contracts.—Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. Ed. 458; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. Ed. 876; Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 151, 27 L. Ed. 682, citing Cooley, Constitutional Limitations, 378.

64. See the title RECORDING ACTS.

65. Recording acts held valid.—Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 70, 20 L. Ed. 513; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 26 L. Ed. 132; Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. Ed. 808.

Somewhat akin to statutes changing the period of limitation of actions are acts which require deeds and mortgages to be recorded within a given time which, under the law as it existed at the time of their execution, were not required to be recorded. Such statutes were, if afforded a reasonable time for recordation usually held to be valid. Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. Ed. 808; Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513.

It has been often decided by the federal supreme court that the prohibition of the constitution now under consideration by which state legislatures are restrained from passing any "law impairing the obligation of contracts," does not extend to all legislation about contracts. They may pass recording acts, by which an elder grantee shall be postponed to a younger, if the prior deed be not recorded within a limited time; and this whether the deed be dated before or after the act. Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 168, 12 L. Ed. 1030.

66. Statute requiring judgments upon existing contracts against city to be registered before instituting enforcement proceedings.—A statute applicable to judgments recovered upon existing contracts, and which deprives the judgment creditors of a particular municipality in the state of the right to enforce their judgments by fieri facias, and requires them, before resorting to other means of enforcement, to register their judgments with the comptroller or auditing officer of the city and receive from him a warrant for the amount thereof, to be paid out of a certain fund, or out of the next moneys appropriated for such purpose, does not impair the obligation of any contract. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 26 L. Ed. 132, cited and approved in Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 520, 27 L. Ed. 808.

67. Recordation of deeds.—It is within the undoubted powers of state legislatures to pass recording acts, by which the elder grantee shall be postponed to a younger, if the prior deed be not recorded within a limited time; and the power is the same, whether the deed is dated before or after the recording act; though the effect of such a deed is to render the prior deed fraudulent and void against a subsequent purchaser, it is not a law violating the obligation of contracts. Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679, approved in Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 521, 27 L. Ed. 808; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 613, 11 L. Ed. 397; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 71, 20 L. Ed. 513; Gilfillan v. Union Canal Co., 109 U. S. 401, 407, 27 L. Ed. 977.

68. Recordation of mortgages.—Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. Ed. 808, ap-and savings in favor of minors or not, as it may see fit.[69] Nor does a statute which requires county bonds issued to aid railroads to be registered, expressly providing that it shall only apply to contracts thereafter entered into, impair the obligation of the contract between the holder of the bond and the county.[70]

2. CHANGE IN METHOD OF RECORDING.—A state statute which merely changes the mode of recording deeds, does not impair the obligation of a contract.[71]

T. Statutes of Limitation.[72]—1. STATUTES OPERATING PROSPECTIVELY.—Statutes of limitation operating prospectively do not impair vested rights or the obligation of contracts. Reasons of sound policy have led to the adoption of limitation laws, both by congress and the states, and, if not unreasonable in their terms, their validity cannot be questioned.[73]

2. RETROSPECTIVE STATUTES OF LIMITATION—a. In General.—But a statute of limitations may undoubtedly have effect upon actions which have already accrued as well as upon actions which accrue after its passage. Whether it does so or not will depend upon the language of the act, and the apparent intent of the legislature to be gathered therefrom.[74]

b. Statutes Limiting Time for Bringing Suits and Actions—(1) Power of States to Enact—aa. In General.—In regard to the states, which are expressly forbidden to impair by legislation the obligation of contracts, it has been repeatedly held that a statute of limitation, which reduces materially the time within which suit may be commenced, though passed after the contract was made, is not void if a reasonable time is left for the enforcement of the contract by suit before the statute bars that right. The sole question in such cases is whether the time is so unreasonably short as to amount to a destruction of the right itself, and so impair the obligation of the contract.[75] And it is the proved in Gilfillan v. Union Canal Co., 109 U. S. 401, 406, 27 L. Ed. 977.

69. Effect where mortgagee is a minor.—Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. Ed. 808.

Thus under the statute of Louisiana it was provided that the appointment of a tutor should operate to create a tacit mortgage of all its property in favor of the minor for whom he was appointed. It was held that a subsequent act requiring the recordation of all tacit mortgages did not impair the obligation of the mortgage in favor of the infant; and that it was immaterial that the infant was still a minor when the statute went into operation and that it contained no savings or exceptions in favor of minors. Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. Ed. 808.

70. Registration of county aid bonds.—Hoff v. Jasper County, 110 U. S. 53, 28 L. Ed. 68, citing Anthony v. County of Jasper, 101 U. S. 693, 25 L. Ed. 1005. See the title MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID.

71. Change in method of recording.—Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. Ed. 190; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447, following Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679.

72. See the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

73. Statutes of limitation operating prospectively are valid.—Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 300, 18 L. Ed. 475.

Reasons of sound policy have led to the general adoption of laws of this description, and their validity cannot be questioned; the time and manner of their operation, the exceptions to them, and the acts from which the time limited shall begin to run, will generally depend on the sound discretion of the legislature, according to the nature of the titles, the situation of the country, and the emergency which leads to their enactment. Cases may occur where the provisions of a law on these subjects may be so unreasonable as to amount to a denial of a right, and to call for the interposition of the federal supreme court. Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679.

74. Statute may operate retrospectively.—Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 599, 21 L. Ed. 737.

75. Reasonableness determines the validity of statutes of limitation.—Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529; Bell v. Morrison, 1 Pet. 351, 7 L. Ed. 174; Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. Ed. 190; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 448, 9 L. Ed. 1137; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 315, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. Ed. 397; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. 301, 331, 12 L. Ed. 447; Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 12 L. Ed. 1030; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black 599, 606, 17 L. Ed. 261; Cooley on Limitations, 6th Ed., 44; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 300, 18 L. Ed. 475, citing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 315, 11 L. Ed. 143; Angell on Limitations, 18; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513; Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 599, 21 L. Ed. 737; settled doctrine that the legislature may prescribe a limitation for the bringing of suits where none previously existed, as well as shorten the time in which

Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 632, 24 L. Ed. 365; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 603, 24 L. Ed. 793; Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. Ed. 886; Chapman v. Douglas County, 107 U. S. 348, 27 L. Ed. 378; Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 521, 27 L. Ed. 808; Gilfillan v. Union Canal Co., 109 U. S. 401, 404, 27 L. Ed. 977; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 643, 28 L. Ed. 279; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 705, 34 L. Ed. 304 (citing Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. Ed. 365; Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. Ed. 886); Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 258, 34 L. Ed. 659; McFarland v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 258, 34 L. Ed. 664; Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610, 615, 39 L. Ed. 280; Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 63, 46 L. Ed. 804.

"The exertion of this power is, subject to the fundamental condition that a reasonable time, taking all the circumstances into consideration, be given by the new law for the commencement of an action before the bar takes effect. Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. Ed. 365; Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. Ed. 190; Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. Ed. 737; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 18 L. Ed. 475; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529." Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 675, 26 L. Ed. 886, approved in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 706, 34 L. Ed. 304.

Statutes of limitations relate to the remedies which are furnished in the courts. They rather establish that certain circumstances shall amount to evidence that a contract has been performed, than dispense with its performance. Therefore, a law providing a period of limitation as to the enforcement of existing contracts, does not impair the obligation provided it leaves a remedy with which to enforce the same. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 207, 4 L. Ed. 529.

"Statutes of limitations are statutes of repose. They are necessary to the welfare of society. The lapse of time constantly carries with it the means of proof. The public as well as individuals are interested in the principle upon which they proceed. They do not impair the remedy, but only require its application within the time specified." Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. Ed. 793. See, also, the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 446; DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499.

A statute going into effect July 1st, 1895, and giving the plaintiff until September 22, 1896, in which to bring suit, does not unreasonably shorten the time in which to sue. Davis v. Mills, 194 U. S. 451, 456, 48 L. Ed. 1067.

Limiting time for testing genuineness of land certificates.—Judgments as well as grants obtained by fraud or collusion are void, and confer no vested title; and where numerous false, fictitious and forged certificates entitling the holders of grants to public lands have been granted circulation in a state, the state may justly require those who claim that their grants are not of this character to make proof of their genuineness in some proper tribunal within a limited time prescribed by the statute, without impairing the obligation of any contract between the states and the holders of genuine certificates. League v. De Young, 11 How. 185, 203, 13 L. Ed. 657; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. 79, 14 L. Ed. 334.

A certificate entitling the holder of a grant to public lands is not in the nature of a judicial decision vesting title in the holder, whether forged or fraudulent. Therefore the statute requiring the holders of such certificates to institute proceedings to test their genuineness, on or before a certain date, is not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of the contract. League v. De Young, 11 How. 185, 202, 13 L. Ed. 657; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. 79, 14 L. Ed. 334.

In 1843 the state of Texas, then an independent republic, enacted a statute requiring the holders of land certificates to institute proceedings to test their genuineness on or before the first day of January, 1844, or otherwise be barred. The 11th article of the state constitution, adopted upon the admission of Texas into the Union in 1845, removed this bar, and allowed the holders of such certificates to institute proceedings to test their genuineness at any time prior to the first day of July, 1847, at the same time declaring that all fictitious, false and forged certificates, and all locations and surveys thereof, should be held null and void from the beginning. Held, that the said 11th article of the Texas constitution annuls no vested rights and impairs the obligation of no contract, but, on the contrary, extends the time within which valid certificates might be established, and confers a right which had been lost and forfeited by the laches of the party. League v. De Young, 11 How. 185, 203, 13 L. Ed. 657; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. 79, 14 L. Ed. 334. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

Charges affecting rights of purchasers at tax sales.—The contract rights of purchasers at sales for taxes, assessments, or water rates, in the city of Brooklyn, were not impaired, nor were such purchasers deprived of their property without due process of law by § 15 of the act of June 6, 1885 (laws of New York 1885, ch. 405, § 15, p. 702), which provided among other things as follows: "No action or special suits to enforce existing causes of action may be commenced, provided, in each case, a reasonable time, taking all the circumstances into consideration, be given proceeding shall hereafter be brought or maintained against the city of Brooklyn, or the registrar of arrears of said city, to compel the execution or delivery of a lease upon any sale for taxes, assessments or water rates, made more than eight years prior to the passage of this act, unless such action or special proceeding is commenced within six months after the passage of this act, and notice thereof filed in the office of registrar of arrears, but this provision shall not operate to extend any statute of limitations now applicable in such cases. And after the expiration of six months from the passage of this act, it shall be the duty of the registrar of arrears, to cancel in his office all such sales made more than eight years prior to the passage of this act, upon which no lease shall have been given, and no action commenced, and notice thereof filed as aforesaid, within the period hereinbefore limited therefor, and thereupon the lien of all such certificates of sale shall cease and determine." Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 252, 34 L. Ed. 659.

A statute of a state which provides that the right of the entry of a party who claims under a treasurer's deed lands sold for the nonpayment of taxes, is barred, if, within five years after the deed has been executed and recorded, he neither sues for nor takes possession of the land, does not impair the obligation of a contract of purchase. Barrett v. Holmes, 102 U. S. 651, 26 L. Ed. 291, citing Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. Ed. 513. See, also, the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 447.

Actions to recover land.—Acts of limitation giving peace and confidence to the actual possessor of the soil and refusing the aid of courts of justice in the enforcement of contracts, after a certain time, are not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts. Such acts may be said to effect a complete divesture, or even transfer of right, yet, as reasons of sound policy have led to their adoption, their validity cannot be questioned. Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 168, 12 L. Ed. 1030.

Recovery of ground rents.—The Pennsylvania act of April 27, 1855, § 7, provides that in all cases where no payment, claim or demand shall have been made on account of any ground rent, annuity, or other charge upon real estate for twenty-one years, and no acknowledgment made during such period, a release or extinguishment thereof shall be conclusively presumed: which section is not to take effect until three years from the passage of the act. Such an act is a statute of limitation, removing the remedy which would otherwise be furnished by the courts, and is clearly within the legislative power of government. Allowing as it does a reasonable time in which to bring suit upon existing causes of action, it in no wise impairs the obligation of contracts guaranteed by the constitution. Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 46 L. Ed. 804. See, also, the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 447.

Actions on foreign judgments.—It is a settled doctrine in the United States supreme court that the legislation of congress, so far as it has gone, does not prevent a state from passing acts of limitation to bar suits on judgments rendered in another state. Bank v. Dalton, 9 How. 522, 528, 13 L. Ed. 242, following McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 10 L. Ed. 177. See the title FOREIGN JUDGMENTS, RECORDS AND JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS, ante, p. 335.

A state law declaring that all judgments which have been obtained in any other state prior to the passage of the law shall be barred unless suit is brought therein within two years after the passage of the act, is within the power of the state, and not inconsistent with the constitution of the United States or any act of congress. Bank v. Dalton, 9 How. 522, 13 L. Ed. 242; Dulles v. Jones, 9 How. 530, 13 L. Ed. 245.

And this is true although the person against whom the judgment was given removed from the state in which it was rendered and became a citizen of the state in which the said statute was enacted upon the very day on which he was sued. The legislature having made no exception, the courts can make none. Bank v. Dalton, 9 How. 522, 13 L. Ed. 242; Dulles v. Jones, 9 How. 530, 13 L. Ed. 245.

Time within which license or privilege may be exercised.—An act which prescribes a limitation of the time within which a certain privilege or license, limited in its very nature and purpose, may be exercised, is not void on the ground that it impairs the obligation of contracts. If reasons of sound policy justify legislative interference with contracts of individuals, much more will it justify the limitation of licenses injurious to public morals. Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 168, 12 L. Ed. 1030.

Limitation of time for lottery drawing.—In 1829, the legislature of Virginia passed an act appointing five commissioners to raise by way of lottery or lotteries the sum of $30,000 for the benefit of the Fauquier and Alexandria Turnpike Road Company. Two of the commissioners declined to act, and the remaining three took no steps to execute the power for a long time. On the 25th of February, 1834, the legislature passed an act for the suppression of lotteries, which prohibited all lotteries and sale of lottery tickets by the new law for the commencement of suit before the bar takes effect.[76] But a statute of limitations which takes away a present existing right,[77] or makes an unreasonable reduction of the time for bringing suits, is unconstitutional.[78] And a fortiori if the statute so reduces the period of limitation that the time will already have run against the particular cause of action, this will be tantamount to an entire extinguishment of the limitation, and therefore unconstitutional.[79]

bb. Construction as to Operation of Statute.—When a statute declares generally that no action, or no action of a certain class, shall be brought, except within a certain limited time after it shall have accrued, the language of the statute would make it apply to past actions as well as to those arising in the after the 1st of January, 1837, saving, however, contracts already made which were by their terms to extend beyond the 1st of January, 1837, or contracts hereafter to be made under any existing law, which were to extend beyond that day. These were permitted to go on until the 1st of January, 1840. On the 11th of March, 1834, the legislature passed an act appointing two commissioners in the place of the two who had declined to act. On the 19th of December, 1839, these commissioners entered into a contract with certain persons, authorizing these persons to draw as many lotteries as they might think proper, without limitation as to time, upon the payment of a certain sum per annum to the commissioners. Held, that it may be doubted whether the right to draw lotteries under the act of 1829 constituted a contract at all; but that if it was a contract, it was not unlimited as to time; and that the act of 1834, allowing the grant to continue for a certain time, stood upon the same ground as acts of limitation and recording acts, which the federal supreme court has said a state has the right to pass. Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 12 L. Ed. 1030.

The privilege granted by the act of 1829 had become obsolete from nonuser, and the act of 1834, appointing two commissioners, did not fully revive it, because the two acts of 1834, must be taken together; and the limitation contained in one must apply to the other. Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 12 L. Ed. 1030.

76. Doctrine applies where no limitation previously existed.—Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 675, 26 L. Ed. 886; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 643, 28 L. Ed. 279; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 701, 705, 706, 707, 34 L. Ed. 304; Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 255, 34 L. Ed. 659, citing Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 632, 24 L. Ed. 365.

The parties to a contract have no more a vested interest in a particular limitation which has been fixed, than they have in an unrestricted right to sue. They have no more a vested interest in the time for the commencement of an action than they have in the form of the action to be commenced; and as to the forms of action or modes of remedy, it is well settled that the legislature may change them at its discretion, provided adequate means of enforcing the right remain. Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 633, 24 L. Ed. 365.

77. Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. Ed. 679; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. 488, 14 L. Ed. 510.

78. Statute unreasonably reducing time is void.—Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 599, 21 L. Ed. 737; Chapman v. Douglas County, 107 U. S. 348, 27 L. Ed. 378. See, also, the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 447.

But it is not believed that any court would hold that a state legislature could not, constitutionally, reduce limitation from twenty to six years as to existing causes of action. Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. E. 886, distinguished in Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 671, 683, 38 L. Ed. 861.

Illustrations.—Under the Georgia act approved March 16, 1869, and providing that suits for the enforcement of rights accruing prior to June 1st, 1865, should be brought by the 1st of January, 1870, or be forever barred, parties suing on such claims had nine months and seventeen days in which to bring suit. Held, that, under the circumstances which led to the enactment of this statute, this period was not so short or unreasonable as to render it unconstitutional. Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 633, 24 L. Ed. 365, cited in Mills v. Scott, 99 U. S. 25, 27, 25 L. Ed. 294; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 775, 27 L. Ed. 468; Gilfillan v. Union Canal Co., 109 U. S. 401, 404, 27 L. Ed. 977; McFaddin v. Evans-Snider Buen Co., 185 U. S. 505, 514, 46 L. Ed. 1012.

Requiring presentment of tax receivable coupons within one year.—A statute of limitations giving to the holders thereof but a single year for the presentation in payment of taxes of the coupons then in their possession, perhaps never severed from the bonds to which they were attached, and comprising all the coupons which had been originally attached thereto, under all the circumstances of the case, and the peculiar condition of the securities in question, was an unreasonable law and materially impairs the obligation of the contract. McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 708, 34 L. Ed. 304.

79. Chapman v. Douglas County, 107 U. S. 348, 27 L. Ed. 378.

future. But if an action accrued more than the limited time before the statute was passed, a literal interpretation of the statute would have the effect of absolutely barring such action at once. It will be presumed that such was not the intent of the legislature. Such an intent would be unconstitutional.[80]

cc. Partial and Total Invalidity.—Although a statute of limitation subsequently passed may be obnoxious to the objection that it does not allow sufficient time within which to sue before the bar takes effect, and is, therefore, unconstitutional, as impairing the obligation of a contract, yet it does not follow that the entire act would for this reason fall and become inoperative. The result would be that the holders of the contract held to be barred by the unconstitutional statute, would have a reasonable time after its passage within which to sue.[81]

dd. Determination as to Reasonableness of Time.—No one rule as to the length of time which will be deemed reasonable can be laid down for the government of all cases alike. Different circumstances will often require a different rule. What would be reasonable in one class of cases would be entirely unreasonable in another.[82] But as statutes of limitation have for their object, and are deemed necessary to, the repose and security of society, the determination of the legislative department should not be interfered with by the courts, unless the time allowed to bring suits upon existing causes of action is, in view of all the circumstances, so short as not to give parties affected by it a reasonable opportunity to protect their rights under the new law.[83] The courts cannot overrule the decision of that department of the government, unless a palpable error has been committed.[84]

(2) Power of Congress to Enact.—But it is no answer to the power of congress to enact statutes of limitation to say that it interferes with the validity of contracts, for no provision of the constitution prohibits congress from doing this, as it does the states; and where the question of the power of congress arises, as in the legal tender cases, and in bankruptcy cases, it does not depend upon the incidental effect of its exercise on contracts, but on the existence of the power itself.[85]

c. Statutes Limiting the Time for Review.—Statutes regulating the time for 80. Construction as to operation of statute.—Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 599, 21 L. Ed. 737.

To avoid holding the statute unconstitutional, and to give it a construction which will enable it to stand, it must, so far as it affects rights of action in existence when it is passed, be held, in the absence of contrary provision, to begin when the existing cause of action is first subjected to its operation; that is to say, if the statute should prescribe a limitation of five years, existing causes of action would not be barred until the expiration of the full five years from the date of the taking effect of the statute, unless the statutes, as to them, find some other reasonable limitation. Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. Ed. 737, distinguishing Murray v. Gibson, 15 How. 421, 14 L. Ed. 755. Accord: Ross v. Duval, 13 Pet. 45, 62, 10 L. Ed. 51; Lewis v. Lewis, 7 How. 776, 778, 12 L. Ed. 909.

Hence, when a right of action accrued in 1854, and a statute of limitations passed in 1859 barred all actions of its kind not "commenced within two years next after the cause or right of such action shall have accrued," it was held that the cause of action began to run from the date of the statute, and that suit might have been brought at any time within two years from that date, and, accordingly, that the statute had not summarily cut off existing rights, thus making itself unconstitutional. Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. Ed. 737.

81. Such a statute may be valid in part.—Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. Ed. 886. See, generally, the title STATUTES.

82. No one certain rule as to reasonableness.—McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 707, 34 L. Ed. 304.

83. Legislature primarily the judge as to reasonableness.—Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 256, 34 L. Ed. 659.

84. Statute invalidated only in clear cases.—Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. Ed. 365; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 42 L. Ed. 392; Saranac Land, etc., Co. v. Comptroller, 177 U. S. 318, 44 L. Ed. 786; Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 63, 46 L. Ed. 804.

85. Statutes limiting time for bringing action; power of congress to enact.—Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 643, 28 L. Ed. 279. See ante "Laws of Congress," II, D.

taking appeals are valid, if the limitation is reasonable.[86]

VIII. Who May Complain of Impairment.

A. Persons Interested.—The parties to a contract are the ones to complain of a breach, and if they are satisfied with the disposition which has been made of it and of all claims under it, a third party has no right to insist that it has been broken, nor invoke the constitutional provision as to impairment of obligation of contracts.[87] In other words, a person who has no interest in the contract, as by being a party to it, cannot complain of a law alleged to impair its obligation.[88]

B. Complainant Must Show Possibility of Injury.—In accordance with the general rule that one who does not belong to the class that might be injured by a statute cannot raise the question of its invalidity,[89] it is held that a party insisting upon the invalidity of a statute, as violating the contract clause of the federal constitution, must show that he may be injured by the unconstitutional law before the courts will listen to his complaint.[90] If, instead of showing any injury, the plaintiff shows that he cannot possibly be injured, he cannot, of course, ask the interference of the court.[91]

86. Time for taking an appeal.—The clause of a revised charter making the disallowance of a claim, in whole or in part, by the city council, final and conclusive, unless an appeal be taken to the circuit court of the county within twenty days, is a wholesome regulation, and the time reasonable, and such clause does not impair the obligation of existing contracts. Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 187 U. S. 437, 47 L. Ed. 249. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 129.

87. Parties to contracts are proper complainants.—Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 309, 42 L. Ed. 1047.

88. Uninterested parties cannot complain.—Williamson v. Suydam, 6 Wall. 723, 18 L. Ed. 967; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist., No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. Ed. 569; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 42 L. Ed. 1047.

Impairment of swamp land contract between state and United States.—"The objection that the law of California authorizing an assessment for the reclamation of swamp lands impairs the obligation of a contract created between the United States and the state by the act of congress of September 28th, 1850, commonly known as the Arkansas Swamp Act, is founded upon a misapprehension of its provisions. 9 Stat. 519, ch. 84. It is true the act granted to the state all the swamp and overflowed lands within its limits, on condition that the proceeds of the lands, 'whether from sale or by direct appropriation in kind,' should be applied, as far as necessary, in reclaiming the land by means of levees and drains. Hence, the contention of counsel is that the state is bound to carry out this condition, and apply the proceeds to the reclamation, or provide for their application to that end, and that its legislation imposing an assessment upon other lands to raise the necessary funds for that purpose, is in violation of this contract, and therefore void. The answer to this position is twofold. In the first place, if a contract was created by the Arkansas act, when the state accepted its benefits, it is for the United States to complain of the breach if there be any. The plaintiff is not a party to the contract, and is in no position to invoke its protection. But, in the second place, the appropriation of the proceeds rests solely in the good faith of the state. Its discretion in disposing of them is not controlled by that condition, as neither a contract nor a trust following the lands was thereby created. This was distinctly held after elaborate consideration in the recent case of Mills County v. Railroad Companies, 107 U. S. 557, 566, 27 L. Ed. 578." Hagar v. Reclamation Dist., No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 712, 28 L. Ed. 569, approved in United States v. Louisiana, 127 U. S. 182, 190, 32 L. Ed. 66.

89. Only persons injured can complain.—Supervisors v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 26 L. Ed. 1044; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 118, 44 L. Ed. 392; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 283, 45 L. Ed. 527. Red River Valley Bank v. Craig, 181 U. S. 548, 558, 45 L. Ed. 994.

90. Tyler v. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. Ed. 252; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 60, 47 L. Ed. 70; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 419, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

91. Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 419, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

Mortgagee.—"If the mortgage had been foreclosed and the mortgagee had thereby realized his debt, principal and interest in full, upon the sale, there can be no doubt that he would not have been heard to assert the invalidity of the subsequent legislation, nor would an independent purchaser at the sale have been heard to make the same complaint. Of course, this does not include the case of a mortgagee who purchases at the foreclosure sale and bids a price sufficient to pay his mortgage debt in full with interest, and

C. Repeal of Corporate Charters.—But where the legislature of a state has repealed the charter of a street railroad company and transferred its franchise and track to another, and the corporation refuses to seek a remedy in the courts, a stockholder of the company will have a standing in a court of equity who asks an injunction on the ground that the repealing statute impairs the obligation of a contract.[92]

D. Purchasers at Mortgage Foreclosures.—An independent purchaser at a foreclosure sale, having no connection whatever with the mortgage, except as he becomes such purchaser at the foreclosure sale, cannot raise the question in his own behalf in relation to the validity of legislation as to redemption and the rate of interest which existed at the time he made his purchase.[93] But many of the earlier cases declare the invalidity of subsequent laws in regard to redemption of land sold under execution, which altered the law existing when a mortgage was made, and some of them, it would seem, have declared the laws unconstitutional, even at the suit of a purchaser at the sale.[94]

E. Estoppel.—A municipal corporation is estopped to set up the impairment of the obligation of a contract by subsequent legislation, where the city has repudiated its contract and the subsequent legislation is rendered necessary by, or is the natural outgrowth of, such repudiation.[95] For example, a city cannot claim that its contract with a waterworks company has been impaired by subsequent legislation when the city has repudiated its contract by bringing suit against the company, and thereby estopped itself to claim that the obligation of such contract was impaired by subsequent legislation.[96] an action thereafter is commenced against him to set aside the sale because it was made in violation of legislation subsequent to the mortgage. In such case we suppose there can be no doubt of the right of the mortgagee to assert, as a defense to the action, the unconstitutionality of the subsequent legislation as an impairment of his contract contained in the mortgage. But it may be said that where the legal or equitable rights of a party are not in any way touched and he is in no way injured, he cannot be heard to complain of the impairment of the obligation of his contract, as a mere abstract proposition." Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 422, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

92. Stockholder may complain of repeal of corporate charter.—Greenwood v. Freight Co., 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. Ed. 961. See the title STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

93. Purchasers at mortgage foreclosures cannot complain.—Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 48 L. Ed. 1046, following Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. Ed. 648, and distinguishing Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 93. See, generally, the title MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST.

Where it is contended that several alterations of the law as it existed at the time when the mortgage was executed, regarding the time of redemption and the amount of interest payable to the purchaser at the foreclosure sale in order to redeem the land sold, impair the obligation of a contract as to all mortgages in existence before the alterations were made, but neither the mortgagee nor his assignee was the purchaser at the sale, and neither was in any manner injured by the alterations of the law in the respect mentioned, neither can complain of an impairment, even conceding an abstract impairment of the obligation of the contract. "Therefore, if the mortgagee, or his assignee, were himself the plaintiff, and complaining that the obligation of his contract had been impaired by subsequent legislation, it is plain his complaint would be dismissed when it appeared that, notwithstanding the alleged subsequent illegal legislation, he suffered no injury, because he had proceeded with the foreclosure of his mortgage and had been paid the full amount of his contract debt, interest and costs. Under such circumstances the question becomes a moot one, and courts do not sit to decide that character of question." Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 419, 48 L. Ed. 1046.

94. Early cases distinguished.—Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 422, 48 L. Ed. 1046, reviewing Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. Ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. Ed. 397; Gantley v. Ewing, 3 How. 707, 11 L. Ed. 794; Howard v. Bugbee, 24 How. 461, 16 L. Ed. 753; Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. Ed. 648; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 93.

95. Estoppel to set up invalidity of contract.—New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co., 142 U. S. 79, 88, 35 L. Ed. 943. See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

96. City estopped to invoke contract clause.—New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterwork Co., 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. Ed. 943.

IX. How Relief Obtained in Case of Impairment.

Article 1, § 10, which forbids any state to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts, so far as it can be said to confer upon, or secure to, any person, any individual rights, does so only indirectly and incidentally. It forbids the passage by the states of laws such as are described. If any such are nevertheless passed by the legislature of a state, they are unconstitutional, null and void. In any judicial proceeding necessary to vindicate his rights under a contract, affected by such legislation, the individual has a right to have a judicial determination, declaring the nullity of the attempt to impair its obligation. This is the only right secured to him by that clause of the consitution.[97]

IMPARTIAL JURY.—As to what constitutes an impartial juror, see the title JURY.

IMPEACHMENT.—See the titles JUDGMENTS AND DECREES; PUBLIC OFFICERS; STATUTES; UNITED STATES.

IMPEACHMENT AND CORROBORATION OF WITNESSES.—See the title WITNESSES.

97. How relief obtained in case of impairment.—Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 317, 322, 29 L. Ed. 185.

Right not a "civil right."—Contractual rights protected by section ten of article one of the federal constitution are not "civil rights" within the meaning of the Revised Statutes, §§ 1979, 563, subdivision 12, and 629, subdivision 16, conferring jurisdiction upon the federal circuit courts without regard to the sum or value in controversy. The only mode in which the security, afforded by the constitution to such rights, takes effect is by judicial process to invalidate the unconstitutional legislation of the state when it is set up against the enforcement of the rights under the contract. The mode in which congress has legislated in aid of the rights secured by the contract clause of the constitution, is, as was pointed out in the opinion of the court in the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 12, 27 L. Ed. 836, by providing for a review on writ of error to the judgments of the state courts, in cases where they have failed properly to give it effect, and by conferring jurisdiction upon the circuit courts, by the acts of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, 18 Stats. 470, and now by the act of August 13, 1888, 25 Stats. 433, ch. 866, of all cases arising under the constitution and laws of the United States where the sum or value in dispute exceeds $2,000. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 317, 322, 29 L. Ed. 185; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 12, 27 L. Ed. 836; Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co., 176 U. S. 68, 72, 44 L. Ed. 374.

Error to state court.—The only mode in which that constitutional security takes effect is by judicial process to invalidate the unconstitutional legislation of the state, when it is set up against the enforcement of his rights under his contract. The mode in which congress has legislated in aid of the rights secured by that clause of the constitution, is, as is pointed out with clearness and fullness in the opinion of the court in the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 12, 27 L. Ed. 836, by providing for a review on writ of error to the judgments of the state courts, in cases where they have failed properly to give it effect, and by conferring jurisdiction upon the circuit courts by the act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, 18 Stat. 470, of all cases arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, where the sum or value in dispute exceeds $500. Congress has provided no other remedy for the enforcement of this right. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 317, 322, 29 L. Ed. 185.

Virginia coupon cases.—Section 1979 of the Revised Statutes which gives a right of action against every person depriving another of any constitutional right or privilege under color of authority of any state law, regulation or custody and § 629 of the Revised Statutes authorizing the aggrieved party to perfect his action in the federal circuit courts, without regard to the amounts involved, whenever it has been deprived of any constitutional right or privilege under color of any state law, ordinance or regulation, had not extended to an action brought by a holder of coupons issued under the Virginia funding act of March 30, 1871, against a tax collector in that state, for attempting to enforce a collection of the tax by a sale of the plaintiff's personal property after having rejected a tender of the coupons. Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 317, 29 L. Ed. 185.

IMPERFECT OBLIGATION.—"The obligation of a contract includes everything within its obligatory scope. Among these elements nothing is more important than the means of enforcement. This is the breath of its vital existence. Without it, the contract, as such, in the view of the law, ceases to be, and falls into the class of those 'imperfect obligations,' as they are termed, which depend for their fulfillment upon the will and conscience of those upon whom they rest."[1]

IMPERFECT WAR.—As to what constitutes an imperfect war, see the title WAR.

IMPERTINENCE IN PLEADINGS.—See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 851; PLEADING.

IMPLICATION.—See note 2.

IMPLIED CONTRACTS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the title EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746.

As to when a contract is implied in general, see the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 636. As to contracts void under statute of frauds, see the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 651. As to when the law implies a promise to pay, see the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 639. As to void parol contracts wholly or partly executed, see the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 640. As to persons who receive prize money in a lottery, see the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 645. As to implication of mutuality, see the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 563. As to jurisdiction of court of claims and forms of pleading therein, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, pp. 1021, 1048. As to private property taken for public use, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1029. As to claims for use of patents by United States, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1030. As to rules of construction of an act authorizing the erection of a bridge across a navigable water way, see the title BRIDGES, vol. 3, p. 520. As to implied payment, see the title PAYMENT. As to implied contracts of afreightment, see the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING. As to demand by United States for the proceeds of Indian trust bonds unlawfully converted, see the title TROVER AND CONVERSION. As to goods sold and delivered, work and labor done and materials furnished, see the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 650. As to contracts between master and servant and principal and agent, see the titles MASTER AND SERVANT; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

Definition.—"A great mass of human transactions, depend upon implied contracts; upon contracts which are not written, but which grow out of the acts of the parties. In such cases, the parties are supposed to have made those stipulations, which, as honest, fair and just men, they ought to have made. When the law assumes that they have made these stipulations, it does not vary their contract, or introduce new terms into it, but declares that certain acts, unexplained by compact, impose certain duties, and that the parties had stipulated for their performance."[3]

Necessity for Legal Obligation.—The law implies a contract only to do that which the party is legally bound to perform.[3a]

Object Must Be in Contemplation.—"A contract cannot arise by implica-

1. Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 600, 24 L. Ed. 793.

2. Implication.—"What is implied in a contract, deed, will, or statute is as effectual as what is expressed. United States v. Babbit, 1 Black 55, 61, 17 L. Ed. 94. Human affairs are largely conducted upon the principle of implications." Bulkley v. United States, 19 Wall. 37, 40, 22 L. Ed. 62. See the titles CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552; DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 245; STATUTES; UNITED STATES; WILLS.

3. Dissenting opinion of Marshall, C. J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 341, 6 L. Ed. 606.

3a. Necessity for legal obligation.—Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 497, 29 L. Ed. 703.

tion of law under circumstances the occurrence of which neither of the parties ever had in contemplation."[3]

Inference from Acts and Conduct.—A contract may be inferred from the acts and conduct of the parties.[4]

Taking Private Property for Public Use.—Where the government, in emergencies, takes private property into its use, a contract to reimburse the owner is implied.[5]

Implied Contract to Pay for Service.—A bank or other corporation may be bound by an implied contract in the same manner as an individual may. But, in any case, the mere fact that valuable services are rendered for the benefit of a corporation does not make him liable upon an implied promise to pay for them. To render it liable as a debtor under an implied promise, it must be shown, not only that the services were valuable, but also that they were rendered under such circumstances as to raise the fair presumption that the parties intended and understood that they were to be paid for; or, at least, that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man, in the same situation with the person who receives and is benefited by them, would and ought to understand that compensation was to be paid for them.[6]

Implied Contracts in an Invalid Law.—Although a law is found to be unconstitutional, a party who has received the full benefit under it, may be compelled to pay for that benefit according to the terms of the law. This is upon the theory of an implied contract, the terms of which may be sought in the invalid law, and which arises when the full consideration has been received by the party against whom the contract is sought to be forced.[7]

Transacting Business at the Request of Another.—The law implies a

3. Object must be in contemplation.—Carpenter v. United States, 17 Wall. 489, 494, 21 L. Ed. 680.

4. Inference from acts and conduct.—Eldred v. Bell Telephone Co., 119 U. S. 513, 519, 39 L. Ed. 496. See ante, "Definition."

"The implied contract relied upon by the plaintiff in this case is of that class in which the promise of the defendant is to be inferred from the acts and conduct of the parties. The contract assumed to be thus proven is, that, in consideration of 250 shares of its capital stock owned by the plaintiff and advanced by him to the defendant, at its instance and request, to be used for its benefit and advantage, and accepted by the defendant and so used, the defendant undertook and promised to pay the reasonable value thereof. The facts and circumstances relied on to justify this assumption do not seem to us to warrant it." Eldred v. Bell Telephone Co., 119 U. S. 513, 519, 39 L. Ed. 496.

Where no objection made to delay in delivery.—When, under a written contract, made by a person to deliver such supplies, as, ex. gr., corn at one time fixed, the quartermaster in charge receives part of the corn from such person for the government, and then, at a later date, no objection being made to the delay, receives the rest, and gives a receipt and voucher for the amount and the price, and the government uses such part of it as it wants, and suffers the remainder to decay by exposure and neglect, there is an implied contract to pay the value of such corn, which value may, in the absence of other testimony, be presumed to be the price fixed in the voucher by the quartermaster. Salomon v. United States, 19 Wall. 17, 22 L. Ed. 46.

Contract founded upon obligation to refund money.—The contract which the laws raises between one who has fraudulently obtained money on a lottery ticket and the holders of the lottery, is not founded on the drawing of the lottery, but on the obligation to refund the money which has been received by falsehood and fraud, by the assertion of a drawing which never took place. Catts v. Phalen, 2 How. 376, 11 L. Ed. 306. See the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 645.

Demand for the proceeds of Indian trust bonds.—A demand by the United States for the proceeds of Indian trust bonds, unlawfully converted to their own use by persons who had illegally procured and sold them, and had afterwards become wholly insolvent, is a demand arising upon an implied contract, or one which may be so treated by a waiver of the alleged fraud in the conversion of the bonds. Allen v. United States, 17 Wall. 207, 21 L. Ed. 553

5. Taking private property for public use.—United States v. Russell, 13 Wall. 623, 20 L. Ed. 474. See, generally, the title EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746.

6. Implied contract to pay for services.—Fitzgerald, etc., Const. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 137 U. S. 98, 111, 34 L. Ed. 608.

7. Implied contract on an invalid law.—O'Brien v. Wheelock, 184 U. S. 450, 491, 46 L. Ed. 636.

contract between every man who transacts business for another, at the request of that other, and the person for whom it is transacted.[8]

IMPLIED COVENANTS.—See the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 7.

IMPLIED TRUSTS.—See the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

IMPLIED WARRANTIES.—See the title WARRANTY.

IMPORTATION.—"To constitute an importation so as to attach the right to duties, it is necessary, not only that there should be an arrival within the limits of the United States, and of a collection district, but also within the limits of some port of entry."[1]

IMPORTED.—See ARISE, vol. 2, p. 492. And see ante, EXPORTS AND IMPORTS, pp. 210, 211.

IMPORTER.—See note 2.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.—See EXPORTS AND IMPORTS, ante, pp. 210, 211.

IMPOST.—See the titles REVENUE LAWS; TAXATION. And see EXPORTS AND IMPORTS, ante, pp. 210, 211. "An impost, in its enlarged sense, means any tax or tribute imposed by authority, and applies as well to a tax on persons as to a tax on merchandise."[3]

8. Transacting business at the request of another.—Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch 148, 161, 3 L. Ed. 181.

1. Arnold v. United States, 9 Cranch 104, 120, 3 L. Ed. 671. See United States v. Vowell, 5 Cranch 368, 3 L. Ed. 128; Marriott v. Brune, 9 How. 619, 632, 13 L. Ed. 282; Lowder v. Stone, 187 U. S. 281, 283, 47 L. Ed. 178. See the title REVENUE LAWS. And see EXPORTS AND IMPORTS, ante, pp. 210, 211.

2. Importer.—In a commercial sense, an importer is a person engaged in foreign commerce. And it appears that in the acts of congress which regulate foreign commerce, he is spoken of in that light. License Cases, 5 How. 504, 594, 12 L. Ed. 256.

The Bay of Mobile being included within the statutory definition of the port of Mobile, contracts for the purchase of cargoes of foreign merchandise before or after the arrival of the vessel in the said bay, where the goods, by the terms of the contract, are not to be at the risk of the purchaser until delivered to him in said bay, do not constitute the purchaser an importer, and the goods so purchased and sold by him, though in the original packages, may be properly subjected to taxation by the state. Waring v. The Mayor, 8 Wall. 110, 19 L. Ed. 342. See, generally, the titles INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE; REVENUE LAWS. And see EXPORTS AND IMPORTS, ante, pp. 210, 211.

3. Impost.—Mr. Justice McLean's opinion in Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 407, 12 L. Ed. 702.

In Pollock v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 158 U. S. 601, 622, 39 L. Ed. 1108, the court say: "Cooley (On Taxation, p. 3) says that the word 'duty' ordinarily 'means an indirect tax imposed on the importation, exportation or consumption of goods;' having 'a broader meaning than custom, which is a duty imposed on imports or exports;' that 'the term impost also signifies any tax, tribute or duty, but it is seldom applied to any but the indirect taxes. An excise duty is an inland impost, levied upon articles of manufacture or sale, and also upon licenses to pursue certain trades or to deal in certain commodities.'"

"Impost is a duty on imported goods and merchandise. In a larger sense, it is any tax or imposition. Story's Const. Abr., § 474. Cowell says it is distinguished from custom, 'because custom is rather the profit which the prince makes on goods shipped out.' Cowell's Interpreter, title 'Impost.' Mr. Madison considered the terms 'duties' and imposts in these clauses as synonymous. 1 Story's Constitution, 669, note. Judge Tucker thought 'they were probably intended to comprehend every species of tax or contribution not included under the ordinary terms, "taxes and excises."'" Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 445, 19 L. Ed. 95.

In The Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 535, 12 L. Ed. 702, it was said: "An impost is usually an ad valorem or specific duty, and not a fixed fee like this for allowing a particular act, or a poll tax like this—a fixed sum per head." This case involved a statute imposing taxes upon alien passengers arriving in part of the state.

In The Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 477, 12 L. Ed. 702, Mr. Chief Justice Taney defined the term imposts, as follows: "I think it may be safely affirmed, that, both in England and this country, the words imports and importation, in statutes, in statistical tables, in official reports, and in public debates, have uniformly been applied to articles of property, and never to passengers voluntarily coming to the country in ships; and in the debates of the convention itself, the words are constantly so used."

IMPRESSION.—See note 1.

IMPRISONMENT.—See, generally, the title SENTENCE AND PUNISHMENT. See, also, the titles treating the specific offenses.

"An impost or duty on imports, is a custom or a tax levied on articles brought into a country, and is most usually secured, before the importer is allowed to exercise his rights of ownership over them, because evasions of the law can be prevented more certainly by executing it while the articles are in its custody. It would not, however, be less an impost or duty on the articles, if it were to be levied on them, after they were landed. * * * 'A duty on imports,' then, is not merely a duty on the act of importation, but is a duty on the thing imported. It is not, taken in its literal sense, confined to a duty levied while the article is entering the country, but extends to a duty levied after it has entered the country." Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 437, 6 L. Ed. 678. See, also, Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 131, 19 L. Ed. 382.

Navigation.—The ordinance of 1787 provides that the navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and the St. Lawrence, shall be common highways and forever free, without any tax, impost, or duty therefor. The provision of the ordinance has reference to the navigation of the waters in their natural state. It did not contemplate that such navigation might not be improved by artificial means; and for outlays caused by such works the state making them may exact reasonable toll. By the terms tax, impost, and duty, mentioned in the ordinance, is meant a charge for the use of the government, not compensation for improvements. The fact that if any surplus remains from the tolls, over what is used to keep the locks in repair, and for their collection, it is to be paid into the state treasury as a part of the revenue of the state, does not change the character of the toll or impost. Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 549, 30 L. Ed. 487. See, also, Sands v. Manistee River Imp. Co., 123 U. S. 288, 31 L. Ed. 149; Ouachita, Packet Co. v. Aiken, 121 U. S. 444, 30 L. Ed. 976.

1. Impression.—"It is contended by the defendant's counsel, that the affidavit is defective, not being sufficiently certain or positive, as to the loss of the original writing. The affiant only states his impression that he tore it up; and if he did not tear it up, it has become lost or mislaid; that this is in the alternative, and not certain or positive. We do not concur in this reasoning. An impression is an image fixed in the mind, it is belief; and believing the paper in question was destroyed has been deemed sufficient to let in the secondary evidence." Riggs v. Tayloe, 9 Wheat. 483, 486, 6 L. Ed. 140.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

BY S. B. FISHER.

I. Scope of Title, 892.

II. Statutory Provisions Regulating or Abolishing Imprisonment for Debt, 892.

A. Act of Congress Relating to Debtors Imprisoned under Federal Process, 892.

B. Validity of State Laws Relating to Imprisonment for Debt, 893.

III. Who Entitled to Relief under Federal Act of 1800 for the Relief of Persons Imprisoned for Debt, 893.

IV. Procedure to Obtain Discharge, 893.

A. Notice to Creditor, 893.

B. Time of Application for Discharge, 893.

C. Disclosure and Schedule of Property and Surrender of Same, 894.

D. Oath, 894.

E. Release of Debtor from Custody on Bond Conditioned to Apply for Discharge, 894.

V. The Discharge, 894.

A. Right of Debtor to Discharge, 894.

B. By Whom Granted, 894.

1. In General, 894.

2. Incompetency of Tribunal as Invalidating Discharge, 895.

C. Effect of Discharge, 895.

1. In General, 895.

2. Effect as Discharging from Conditions of Prison Limits Bonds, 895.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 599; BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 792; ESCAPE, vol. 5, p. 893; EXECUTION AGAINST THE BODY AND ARREST IN CIVIL CASES, vol. 6, p. 80; FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394; IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS, ante, p. 758; INSOLVENCY; JUDGES; LIMITATIONS OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION; PERJURY; PRISONS AND PRISONERS; SHERIFFS AND CONSTABLES.

I. Scope of Title.

This title will be confined to a treatment of the decisions under the federal and state statutes regulating or abolishing imprisonment for debt, or "poor debtor acts," as they are often termed. While these acts are often referred to as insolvency acts or laws, there is a wide distinction between them and state insolvency laws properly so termed, and federal bankrupt acts. Such distinction is especially apparent in considering the effect of the discharge under a poor debtor act, and under the various national bankrupt acts and state insolvency laws, amounting, in effect, to state bankrupt laws. It is intended in this title to treat generally of the validity and effect of the state and federal statutes for the relief of poor debtors, who are entitled to relief thereunder, manner of obtaining such relief, and the effect of a discharge under such acts.

II. Statutory Provisions Regulating or Abolishing Imprisonment for Debt.

A. Act of Congress Relating to Debtors Imprisoned under Federal Process.—The act of congress passed in 1800, provides for the mode of discharging insolvent debtors committed under process from the courts of the United States, and the cases in which this may be done.[1] This act is obligatory on the sheriffs in every county of the states acceding to the resolution passed by congress in 1789, relating to the use of state jails for the confinement of persons committed by virtue of legal process issued by the United States courts, and no discharge under any state law not adopted by congress, or a rule of court, can exonerate the officer.[2]

B. Validity of State Laws Relating to Imprisonment for Debt.—See the title IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS, ante, p. 758.[3]

III. Who Entitled to Relief Under Federal Act of 1800 for the Relief of Persons Imprisoned for Debt.

In General.—The provisions of the act of congress of January 6, 1800, for the relief of persons imprisoned for debt, apply not only to persons confined under execution, but also to persons in confinement, against whom judgment is obtained but no execution issued.[4]

IV. Procedure to Obtain Discharge.

A. Notice to Creditor.—In General.—Under the various acts, both state and federal, for the relief of persons imprisoned for debt, notice is usually required to be served upon the person at whose suit the debtor is confined, of the debtor's intention to claim his discharge.[5]

Right of Creditor to Waive Thirty Days' Imprisonment of Debtor after Notice.—Although the federal act of 1800 provides that notice may be served upon the person at whose suit the debtor is confined, and that at the end of thirty days he may be discharged, it has been held that the object of imprisonment being to give the plaintiff an opportunity to ascertain the situation of the defendant, he may dispense with it, when satisfied that the application is an honest one, and that delay would discover nothing that he is not already acquainted with.[6]

B. Time of Application for Discharge.—Under the Pennsylvania act of 1729, for the relief of insolvent debtors, the practice was that only those should

1. Act of congress of 1800 as to debtors imprisoned under federal process.—McNutt v. Bland, 2 How. 9, 11 L. Ed. 159; United States Bank v. Tyler, 4 Pet. 366, 7 L. Ed. 888; United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441.

2. State laws inapplicable to persons in custody under federal process.—Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139, followed in McNutt v. Bland, 2 How. 9, 11 L. Ed. 159.

"Congress, however, did not intend to defeat the execution of judgments rendered in the courts of the United States; but meant they should have full effect by force of the state laws adopted: and therefore all state laws regulating proceedings affecting insolvent persons, or that are addressed to state courts, or magistrates in other respects, which confer peculiar powers on such courts and magistrates, do not bind the federal courts, because they have no power to execute such laws." Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139.

An insolvent debtor who has received a certificate of discharge from arrest and imprisonment, under a state insolvent law, is not entitled to be discharged from execution at the suit of the United States. United States v. Wilson, 8 Wheat. 253, 5 L. Ed. 610.

In McNutt v. Bland, 2 How. 9, 11 L. Ed. 159, it was held that the Mississippi act of 1822, providing for the discharge of the prisoner by the sheriff in default of the plaintiff in the execution, in paying the prison fees due, could not apply to persons committed on executions from the courts of the United States.

3. As to the effect of this constitutional provision as to impairment of the obligation of contracts, upon the validity of national bankrupt laws, and of state insolvency laws, properly so called, see the titles BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, pp. 805, 806; INSOLVENCY.

4. Persons entitled to relief under the act of congress of January 6, 1800.—United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441.

5. Notice to person at whose suit debtor confined.—United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441; United States Bank v. Tyler, 4 Pet. 366, 7 L. Ed. 888; Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139.

6. Right of creditor to waive thirty days' imprisonment of debtor after notice.—United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441.

be discharged who made their application within the first three days of the term.[7]

C. Disclosure and Schedule of Property and Surrender of Same.—In order to obtain his discharge under a poor debtor act, the applicant is usually required to disclose all his property,[8] and to deliver a schedule of such property to the tribunal constituted for that purpose;[9] which property is, according to some statutes, to be vested in the sheriff for the benefit of the creditors at whose suit the debtor is in execution.[10]

D. Oath.—A form of oath is usually prescribed by the various acts for the relief of imprisoned debtors, which must be taken by the applicant for discharge before such discharge can be granted,[11] and a false oath will subject the applicant to prosecution for perjury.[12]

E. Release of Debtor from Custody on Bond Conditioned to Apply for Discharge.—By the laws of some states the debtor whose body is in execution may give bond and security, when the process issues from a state court, to the sheriff to appear at the return term of the writ and comply with the requirements of the statute prerequisite to his discharge, such as giving in schedule, taking the poor debtor's oath, etc.[13]

V. The Discharge.

A. Right of Debtor to Discharge.—Where the debtor, whose body is in execution, honestly complies with the provisions of a statute for the relief of such persons, he is entitled to his certificate of discharge.[14]

B. By Whom Granted—1. IN GENERAL.—Under the Virginia insolvent law the certificate of discharge might be granted either by the court, sitting in its ordinary character for the transaction of judicial business, or by two magistrates, who were constituted by law an extraordinary court for this particular purpose.[15] Whether granted in one mode or the other, it is of equal validity.

7. Time of application under Pennsylvania act of 1729.—Henderson v. Allen (Pa. Ct. of Com. Pl.), 1 Dall. 149, 1 L. Ed. 76.

Application too late after adjournment.—In Mifflin v. Gasqui (Pa. Ct. Com. Pl.), 1 Dall. 142, 1 L. Ed. 73, a debtor in confinement under a magistrate's execution, petitioned for his discharge under the insolvent law. He was, however, remanded, because he had not applied before adjournment, the court observing that it was already easy enough for debtors to get out of jail.

8. Necessity for disclosure of property.—United States Bank v. Tyler, 4 Pet. 366, 7 L. Ed. 888.

9. Delivery of schedule of property.—Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139; Simms v. Slacum, 3 Cranch 300, 2 L. Ed. 446; Slacum v. Simms, 5 Cranch 363, 3 L. Ed. 126; Bowie v. Henderson, 6 Wheat. 514, 5 L. Ed. 319.

Under the Virginia statute it would seem that such schedule is required to be on oath. See Simms v. Slacum, 3 Cranch 300, 2 L. Ed. 446.

Effect of including debt in schedule.—It has been held that the including of a demand in the schedule of the insolvent's debts, is sufficient evidence to sustain an issue on a replication of a new promise to the plea of the statute of limitations, if the period of limitations has not elapsed after the date of the schedule. Bowie v. Henderson, 6 Wheat. 514, 5 L. Ed. 319. See, generally, the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

10. Vesting of scheduled property in sheriff for benefit of execution creditors.—Simms v. Slacum, 3 Cranch 300, 2 L. Ed. 446; Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139. And see Rockhill v. Hanna, 15 How. 189, 14 L. Ed. 656.

11. Necessity for oath by debtor.—United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441; United States Bank v. Tyler, 4 Pet. 366, 7 L. Ed. 888; Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139.

12. False oath as subjecting to prosecution for perjury.—See the cases cited in preceding note. And see, generally, the title PERJURY.

"The coercive means of the law are to be found in the searching oath to be administered, and in the fear of prosecution for perjury, and recommitment in the same action." United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441.

13. Release on bond conditioned to apply for discharge.—Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 11 L. Ed. 139.

14. Right of debtor to discharge upon compliance with statutory requirements.—Simms v. Slacum, 3 Cranch 300, 2 L. Ed. 446.

15. Granted by court, or by extraordinary tribunal of magistrates.—Simms v. Slacum, 3 Cranch 300, 2 L. Ed. 446.

In either case, the judgment of discharge is the judgment of a court, and, as such, is of complete obligation.[16]

2. Incompetency of Tribunal as Invalidating Discharge.—A discharge granted by an incompetent tribunal is wholly void;[17] as, for instance, where a magistrate was disqualified to sit in the discharge of the debtor.[18]

C. Effect of Discharge—1. In General.—A discharge under an act for the relief of persons imprisoned for debt, is confined in its effects altogether to the particular cause, and even as to that, does not exempt the debtor's personal effects, or future acquisitions, from the process of the law,[19] but only discharges the person of the debtor.[20] Nor is his person exempt from confinement for the same debt, should he be detected in a fraud upon his creditor.[21]

2. Effect as Discharging from Conditions of Prison Limits Bonds.—A discharge from imprisonment under an act for the relief of poor debtors, is a lawful discharge, and it is no breach of the conditions of a prison limits bond, for the prisoner to go at large under such discharge.[22] This has been held to be the case though the discharge was obtained by fraud or perjury, where such discharge was the act of a court of competent jurisdiction.[23]

IMPROBABILITY.—See the title Evidence, vol. 5, p. 1048.

16. Discharge by either tribunal equally valid.—Simms v. Slacum, 3 Cranch 300, 2 L. Ed. 446.

17. Discharge by incompetent tribunal void.—Slacum v. Simms, 5 Cranch 363, 3 L. Ed. 126.

18. Discharge by disqualified magistrate invalid.—Slacum v. Simms, 5 Cranch 363, 3 L. Ed. 126, in which case it was held that a magistrate who has received a deed of trust from an insolvent debtor, which deed is fraudulent in law as to creditors, is incompetent to sit as a magistrate in the discharge of the debtor, under the insolvent law of Virginia, and that the discharge so obtained is not a discharge in due course of law.

Generally, as to effect of disqualification of judges, see the title JUDGES.

19. Effect confined to particular cause, etc.—United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441; Bowie v. Henderson, 6 Wheat. 514, 5 L. Ed. 319; King v. Riddle, 7 Cranch 168, 3 L. Ed. 304.

Leaves contract in full force against property of debtor.—See ante, "Validity of State Laws Relating to Imprisonment for Debt," II.

"A discharge under the insolvent laws, while it exempts the person from future molestation, leaves the effects of the defendant forever liable to the demands of his creditors." Primer v. Kuhn, 1 Dall. 452, 1 L. Ed. 219, reversing 1 Dall. 225, 1 L. Ed. 11. See, also, Rockhill v. Hanna, 15 How. 189, 14 L. Ed. 656.

As to discharge as satisfaction of judgment, or destroying judgment lien, see the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

20. Only discharges person of debtor.—King v. Riddle, 7 Cranch 168, 3 L. Ed. 304.

21. Liability to reimprisonment for fraud upon creditor.—United States Bank v. Weisiger, 2 Pet. 331, 7 L. Ed. 441.

22. Effect as discharging from conditions of prison limits bond.—Where the condition of a bond for the jail limits, in Rhode Island, required the party to remain a true prisoner, in the custody of the keeper of the prison, and within the limits of the prison, "until he shall be lawfully discharged, without committing any manner of escape or escapes during the time of restraint, then this obligation to be void, or else to remain in full force and virtue;" held, that a discharge, under the insolvent laws of the state, obtained from the proper court, in pursuance of a resolution of the legislature, and discharging the party from all his debts, etc., "and from all imprisonment, arrest and restraint of his person therefor"—was a lawful discharge, and that his going at large under it, was no breach of the condition of the bond. Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. 370, 6 L. Ed. 660.

23. Rule applicable though discharge obtained by fraud or perjury.—A discharge from the prison rules, under the insolvent act of Virginia, although obtained by fraud, is a discharge in due course of law; and upon such discharge, no action can be sustained upon the prison-bounds bond. Slacum v. Simms, 1 Cranch C. C. 242, reversed. Simms v. Slacum, 3 Cranch 300, 2 L. Ed. 446.

Under the laws of Rhode Island, a discharge, according to the act for the relief of poor prisoners for debt, although obtained by fraud and perjury, is a lawful discharge, and not an escape; and upon such a discharge no action can be maintained upon a bond for the liberty of the prison yard. Ammidon v. Smith, 1 Wheat. 447, 4 L. Ed. 132.

IMPROVEMENTS.

BY ERNEST P. STEINHAUER.

I. Persons Entitled to Compensation, 896.
- A. Bona Fide Possessor, 896.
- B. Person Lawfully in Possession under Defective Title, 897.
- C Improvements Made because of Promise to Convey, 897.
- D. One Who Obtained Conveyance by Undue Influence, 897.

II. Right to Compensation Denied, 898.
- A. To Occupant without Title, 898.
- B. Purchaser of Mortgage with Notice, 898.
- C. Compensation for Improvements Made after Purchase, 890.

III. Where Statutes Conflict with Treaties, 890.

IV. Statute of Limitations, 890.

V. Determination of Value by Jury, 890.

VI. Dismissal of Bill, 890.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles EJECTMENT, vol. 5, p. 695; INDIANS; LANDLORD AND TENANT; PUBLIC LANDS; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

As to recovery by tenant of buildings on landlord's property, see the title LANDLORD AND TENANT. As to improvements taking a contract out of the statute of frauds, see the title FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, ante, p. 451. As to annual expenditures of labor and improvements to be made on mining claims, see the title MINES AND MINERALS. As to taxation, see the title TAXATION.

I. Persons Entitled to Compensation.

A. Bona Fide Possessor.—The civil law recognized the principle of reimbursing to the bona fide possessor[1] the expense of his improvements if he was removed from his possession by the legal owner, by allowing him the increase in the value of the land created thereby. And the betterment laws of the several states proceed upon that equitable view.[2] The right of recovery, where the occupant in good faith believes himself to be the owner, is declared to stand upon a principle of natural justice and equity, and such laws are held not to be unconstitutional as impairing vested rights, since they adjust the equities of the parties as nearly as possible according to natural justice.[3]

1. Bona fide possessor.—Searl v. School District, No. 2, 133 U. S. 553, 561, 33 L. Ed. 740.

A bona fide possessor is one who supposes himself to be the true proprietor of the land, and is ignorant that his title is contested by some other person claiming a better right to it. But this character cannot be maintained after the occupant has notice of an adverse claim, especially if that be followed up by a suit to recover the possession. After this, he becomes a mala fide possessor. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 78, 5 L. Ed. 547. See, also, Canal Bank v. Hudson, 111 U. S. 66, 81, 28 L. Ed. 354.

2. Searl v. School District, No. 2, 133 U. S. 553, 561, 33 L. Ed. 740.

The statutes of Texas making provision for an allowance for improvements in actions of trespass to try title intended to effect the following: To secure to the possessor in good faith compensation for his improvements, either by direct payment therefor by the owner of the land, or by giving him an opportunity to take the land at its assessed value when the plaintiff elected not to pay for the improvements and keep the land, but not to give the possessor the right to an excution for the assessed value of the improvements at the end of one year. Cox v. Hart, 145 U. S. 376, 36 L. Ed. 741.

3. Do not impair vested rights.—Searl v. School District, No. 2, 133 U. S. 553, 561, 33 L. Ed. 740.

Thus where a municipality after investigation and acting upon the advice of

B. Person Lawfully in Possession under Defective Title.—Where a party lawfully in possession under a defective title makes permanent improvements, if relief is asked in equity by the true owner, he will be compelled to allow for such improvements.[4]

C. Improvements Made because of Promise to Convey.—Where one expends large sums of money in improving certain property upon the strength of a promise that the property is to be conveyed to his wife, he has a lien upon such property, which is superior to the claims of the creditors.[5]

D. One Who Obtained Conveyance by Undue Influence.—In a suit in equity brought by heirs at law to set aside a conveyance obtained from their counsel purchased a tract of land in good faith, from one of two rival claimants, and erected a costly public school building thereon, it was held, upon the land afterwards being recovered by the other claimant in ejectment, that to allow the city the value of the improvements placed thereon did not deprive him of any vested right. Searl v. School District, No. 2, 133 U. S. 553, 561, 33 L. Ed. 740.

4. Canal Bank v. Hudson, 111 U. S. 66, 82, 28 L. Ed. 354.

Purchaser at judicial sale.—Where a defective title is acquired at a judicial sale, by one exercising good faith, he is entitled to recover the value of improvements that he had made upon the land. Canal Bank v. Hudson, 111 U. S. 66, 62, 28 L. Ed 354.

"The present case has an analogy to that of a purchaser at a foreclosure sale, who makes valuable improvements in the belief that he has acquired an absolute title. He is entitled to be paid for them if the premises are redeemed. 2 Jones on Mortgages, § 428." Canal Bank v. Hudson, 111 U. S. 66, 82, 28 L. Ed. 354.

Lands awarded by a commission.—Where lands were awarded to a person by a commission, and patents were given by the government under the award, and he remained in possession upon the belief that he had a good title, he should, when ousted by the holder of a superior title, be credited for the amounts paid to the government and with the value of improvements, and no increased rent should be allowed against him on account of the improvements. Goode v. Gaines, 145 U. S. 141, 155, 36 L. Ed. 654.

Land held by a trustee.—In a court of equity, when the complainant asserts his right to land and claims to recover both the title and possession from his trustee, he should pay the value of the improvements which that trustee had placed upon it. Case v. Kelly, 133 U. S. 21, 29, 33 L. Ed. 513.

5. Improvements made because of promise to convey.—A bill was filed claiming specific performance of an alleged contract to convey a house and lot for the benefit of the wife of the complainant, the latter having expended a large sum of money in improving the property, in the expectation that it would be conveyed as required by the bill. The court not considering that sufficient evidence of an agreement to convey the property was given, ordered that it should be sold, and out of the proceeds that the advances made by the complainant should be repaid; the property sold for a sum far less than the amount expended. Held, that the balance unpaid, after the sale, was not a debt due by the estate of the father of the wife, and could be claimed of his representatives. King v. Thompson, 13 Pet. 128, 10 L. Ed. 91.

A few days after the marriage of J. Thompson with the daughter of George King, in 1812, the latter, residing in Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, and having a large active capital, and a large real estate there, proposed to grant to J. T. a house and lot in Georgetown, then much out of repair, and untenantable, provided he would repair the same, so as to make it a comfortable residence; and saying that he intended the property for his daughter; this proposition was accepted by J. T., who repaired the property, expending upwards of $4,000 on the same; and he, with his wife, resided on it about four years. Before his removal from it, a correspondence on the subject of the conveyance of the property to J. T., or to J. T. and his wife, took place, which ended in propositions to convey the property, on certain terms, beneficial to J. T. and wife, in pursuance of, and intended to be in execution of, the original offer of G. K. to J. T., made immediately after the marriage; no conveyance was made. J. T. and wife removed from Georgetown, and G. K. collected and paid to J. T. the rents of the property, for some time after their removal; G. K. died in 1820, insolvent; his debts amounted to $36,000, and his whole estate, both real and personal, when sold, did not pay thirty-nine per cent of his debts; the property claimed by J. T. and wife, in this case, was sold for $1,600, by a trustee, under a decree in chancery, obtained by the creditors of G. K., but the sale had not been ratified. The terms of the contract not being sufficiently established by the evidence, the court decreed that the property should be sold, and the proceeds of the sale should be first applied to the payment of the money expended by Thompson in making improvements on the property; and the balance, if any, paid ancestor by undue influence, improvements and repairs which enhanced the value of the estate may be recovered by that grantee.[6]

II. Right to Compensation Denied.

A. To Occupant without Title.—An occupant without title is not recognized as entitled to compensation.[7]

One Who Knows He Has No Title.—The principle that one should be estopped from asserting a right to property, upon which he has, by his conduct, misled another, who supposed himself to be the owner, to make expenditures, cannot be invoked by one who, at the time the improvements were made, was acquainted with the true character of his own title, or with the fact that he had none.[8]

B. Purchaser of Mortgage with Notice.—A bona fide purchaser under the mortgagor, with actual notice of the mortgage, or constructive notice by means of a registry, is not entitled to have the value of the improvements made by him, deducted from the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises.[9] over for the benefits of the creditors of George King—Thompson not to be charged with rent of the premises, while he occupied them, nor with the rent collected and paid to him, after he removed. King v. Thompson, 9 Pet. 204, 9 L. Ed. 102.

6. One who obtained conveyance by undue influence.—Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 103, 6 L. Ed. 429.

7. Occupant without title.—Jackson v. Ludeling, 99 U. S. 513, 537, 25 L. Ed. 460, dissenting opinion.

Mortgagees of person putting on improvements.—Certain land was in the possession of the true owners, their title having been established by an ejectment suit. During the pendency of the ejectment suit the land had been in possession of one claiming title who had erected improvements on the land with money borrowed upon a deed of trust on the land. The mortgagees now sought to subject the land in the hands of the true owners to their equitable lien for the value of the improvements, but the court held that the true owners had been under no obligation to try to find out from whence came the money for the improvements and on what security they were given, since the mortgagees, even if they were not aware of the ejectment actions pending, were aware of a suit in equity questioning the mortgagor's title to the property which had been begun and then dismissed for want of prosecution and without prejudice. Armstrong v. Ashley, 204 U. S. 272, 279, 51 L. Ed. 482.

Trespasser.—"If the entry upon land is a naked trespass, buildings permanently attached to the soil become the property of the owner of the latter. The trespasser can acquire no rights by his tortious acts." Searl v. School District, No. 2, 133 U. S. 553, 561, 33 L. Ed. 740.

In Louisiana.—It seems to be held in Louisiana, contrary to former decisions, that compensation will not be allowed to the possessor in bad faith for inseparable improvements to land, such as clearing and ditching. Jackson v. Ludeling, 99 U. S. 513, 25 L. Ed. 460.

8. One who knows he has no title.—Steel v. Smelting Co., 106 U. S. 447, 456, 27 L. Ed. 226.

In Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. Ed. 423, it was held that a person who makes improvements upon public land, knowing that he has no title, and that the land is open to exploration and sale for its minerals, and makes no effort to secure the title to it as such land under the laws of congress, or a right of possession under the local customs and rules of miners, has no claim to compensation for his improvements as an adverse holder in good faith when such sale is made to another and the title is passed to him by a patent of the United States. Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408, 413, 29 L. Ed. 428.

9. Purchase of mortgage with notice.—Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489, 6 L. Ed. 142.

"If, by means of these improvements, the value of the land has been increased, the mortgagor, or purchasers, are permitted to enjoy all the benefit of such increase, by paying the debt charged upon the land. If he will not do this, but submits rather to a sale of the property, he has all the benefit of its increased value, by receiving the overplus raised by the sale, after the debt is discharged. His improvements were made upon property which he knew was pledged for the payment of his debt, and he made them solely with a view to his own interest. The land was, in reality, his own, subject only to the lien; so much his own, that he is not accountable to the mortgagee for the rents and profits received by him, during the continuance of his possession, even although the land, when sold, should be insufficient to pay the debt. Neither is the purchaser accountable for any part of the debt, beyond the amount for which the land may be sold, although it should have been deteriorated by waste, dilapidation or other mismanagement. The

C. Compensation for Improvements Made after Purchase.—In an early Pennsylvania case it was held that a recovery in an action of covenant cannot be maintained so far as to include compensation for improvements made after the purchase.[10]

III. Where Statutes Conflict with Treaties.

Statutes providing for recovery of compensation for improvements will not be enforced where they conflict with treaties made with foreign countries.[11]

IV. Statute of Limitations.

The lapse of time, six years, before bringing suit to cancel a conveyance obtained from a woman of doubtful sanity, cannot avail the defendant where he has had posession of the land, and a reasonable rent therefor is equal to the value of his improvements thereon, and there has been no loss of evidence preventing a full presentation of the case.[12]

V. Determination of Value by Jury.

Where the determination of the compensation, due to the one who has made the improvements, is to be in a common-law court, it should be made by a jury.[13]

VI. Dismissal of Bill.

The dismissal of a bill brought to quiet title, will, when there is no examination claim, therefore, of a purchaser with notice, to have the value of the improvements which may have been made from the fruits of the property itself deducted from the price at which the property may be sold, seems to the court too unreasonable, to admit of a serious argument in its support." Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489, 500, 6 L. Ed. 142.

10. Compensation for improvements made after purchase.—Bender v. Fromberger, 4 Dall. (Pa. Sup. Ct.) 436, 442, 1 L. Ed. 898.

11. When statutes conflict with treaties.—The act of the legislature of New York, of May 1st, 1786, gave to the purchasers of forfeited estates the like remedy, in case of eviction, for obtaining compensation for the value of their improvements, as is directed in the act of the 12th of May, 1784; the latter act declares, that the person or persons having obtained judgments against such purchasers, shall not have any writ of possession, nor obtain possession of such land, etc., until he shall have paid to the purchaser of such lands, or person holding title under him, the value of all improvements made thereon, after the passing of the act. Held, that claims of compensation for improvements made under the authority of these acts of the legislature of New York, are inconsistent with the provisions of the treaty of peace with Great Britain of 1783, and should be rejected. Carver v. Astor, 4 Pet. 1, 7 L. Ed. 761. See, generally, the title TREATIES.

12. Statute of limitations.—Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506, 24 L. Ed. 260. See, generally, the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

13. Determination of value by jury.—The occupant-claimant law of Ohio, which declares that an occupying-claimant shall not be turned out of possession, until he shall be paid for lasting and valuable improvements made by him, and directs the courts, in a suit at law, to appoint commissioners to value the same, is repugnant to the 7th amendment of the constitution of the United States, which declares, that "in suits at common law, where the value of controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved;" the compensation for improvements is a suit at common law, and must be submitted to a jury. Bank v. Dudley, 2 Pet. 492, 7 L. Ed. 496.

Admitting, that the legislature of Ohio can give an occupant-claimant a right to the value of his improvements, and authorize him to retain possession of the land he has improved, until he shall have received that value; and assuming that they may annex conditions to the change of possession, which, so far as they are constitutional, must be respected in all courts; still, the legislature cannot change radically the mode of proceeding prescribed for the courts of the United States, or direct those courts, in a trial at common law, to appoint commissioners for the decision of questions which a court of common law must submit to a jury. Bank v. Dudley, 2 Pet. 492, 7 L. Ed. 496.

The inability of the court of the United States to proceed in suits at common law, in the mode prescribed by the occupant law of Ohio, does not deprive the occupant of the benefit intended him; the modes of proceeding which belong to courts of chancery are adapted to the execution of the law; and to the equity side of the court he may apply for relief; sitting in chancery, it can appoint commissioners to estimate improvements, as well as rents and profits, and can enjoin the execution of the judgment at law.

made to the merits, be without prejudice to any remedy of the complainant for compensation for improvements on the land made in good faith.[14]

IMPUTABLE NEGLIGENCE.—See the title NEGLIGENCE.

IN.—See note 1.

Actually in Session.—See ACTUAL, vol. 1, p. 116.

INADEQUACY OF REMEDY AT LAW.—See the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 821.

INADEQUATE CONSIDERATION.—See the titles FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394; RESCISSION, CANCELLATION AND REFORMATION.

INADEQUATE DAMAGES.—See the title NEW TRIALS.

INCEST.—See the titles DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 341; PARENT AND CHILD.

INCHOATE DOWER.—See the title DOWER, vol. 5, p. 488.

until its decree shall be complied with. If any part of the act be unconstitutional, the provisions of that party may be disregarded; while full effect will be given to such as are not repugnant to the constitution of the state, or the ordinance of 1787; the question whether any of its provisions be of this description, will properly arise in the suit brought to carry them into effect. Bank v. Dudley, 2 Pet. 492, 7 L. Ed. 496.

14. Dismissal of bill.—Miles v. Caldwell, 2 Wall. 35, 45, 17 L. Ed. 755.

1. In actual use.—See ACTUAL, vol. 1, p. 115.

In and to.—As to a conveyance of all right, title and interest "in and to" lands granted by a contract of sale, operating as an assignment, see the title ASSIGNMENTS, vol. 2, p. 553.

In collision.—As to the meaning of the term "in collision" when applied to a vessel, see the titles COLLISION, vol. 3, p. 870; MARINE INSURANCE.

In place of.—Section 596 of the Revised Statutes provides that: "It shall be the duty of every circuit judge, whenever in his judgment the public interest so requires, to designate and appoint, * * * the district judge of any judicial district within his circuit to hold a district or circuit court in the place or in aid of any other district judge within the same circuit." The court said: "While 'in aid of' naturally imply some existing judge to be aided, the words 'in the place of' do not necessarily carry the same implication. * * * They may, without doing violence to language, be construed to mean that the designated judge is to take temporarily the place which is or has been filled by a regular judge." McDowell v. United States, 159 U. S. 596, 599, 40 L. Ed. 271.

In pursuance of.—See PURSUANCE.

In service.—The direction in the prize act of June 30, 1864, to make distribution among inferior officers and men "according to their respective rates of pay in the service" naturally implies the rates of their pay at the time of the capture, by relation to which the subsequent distribution is made; and not those rates as affected by promotions after the capture and before decree or distribution, although such promotions, so far as affects rank, and possibly ordinary pay, date from the day of the capture. United States v. Steever, 113 U. S. 747, 754, 28 L. Ed. 1133.

In session.—Section 829 of the Revised Statutes provides for a certain compensation to be paid to a United States marshal for attending the circuit and district courts, when both are in session, or either of them when only one is in session. It was held that when the court is open, by its order, for the transaction of business, it is in session within the meaning of this section. If the court by its own order, is closed for all purposes of business for an entire day, or for any given number of days, it is not in session on that day, or during those days, although the current term has not expired. McMullen v. United States, 146 U. S. 360, 361, 36 L. Ed. 1007. See United States v. Pitman, 147 U. S. 669, 671, 37 L. Ed. 324. And see, also, ACTUAL, vol. 1, p. 115.

In solido.—In Henderson v. Wadsworth, 115 U. S. 264, 280, 29 L. Ed. 377, a case arising under the laws of Louisiana, the court says: "Pothier, in his treatise on Obligations, says: 'An obligation is contracted in solido on the part of the debtors when each of them is obliged for the whole, but so that a payment by one liberates them all.'"

In specie.—See SPECIE.

In the state.—As to what constitutes doing business in a state within the meaning of the taxation laws, see DOING BUSINESS, vol. 5, p. 471.

In common.—A statute requiring a certain amount of labor or improvements to be expended annually on mining claims, provides that when claims are held in common, such expenditures may be made on any one claim. But the claims so held in common must be contiguous, so that each claim thus associated may in some way be benefited by the work done on one of them. Chambers v. Harrington, 111 U. S. 350, 353, 28 L. Ed. 452. See, generally, the title MINES AND MINING.

INCIDENTAL.—As to incidental powers necessary to carry on a banking business, see the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 74. See note 1.

INCOME.—See GAINS, ante, p. 537.

INCOME TAX.—See the title REVENUE LAWS.

INCOMPETENT PERSONS.—See the titles CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 60; HUSBAND AND WIFE, ante, p. 716; INFANTS; INSANITY; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; WITNESSES.

INCONSISTENT CONDUCT.—See the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1005.

INCORPORATED COMPANY.—"An incorporated company is an association of individuals acting as a single person, and by their corporate name."[2]

INCORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS.—See the title EASEMENTS, vol. 5, p. 690.

INCREASED VALUE.—See note 3.

INCRIMINATION OF SELF.—See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 504; WITNESSES.

INCUMBRANCES.—As to covenant against incumbrances, see the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 13. As to warranty in fire insurance concerning incumbrances, see the title INSURANCE. See note 4.

INCUR.—As to the use of contracted in the sense of incurred, see DEBT, vol. 5, p. 203.

IN CUSTODIA LEGIS.—See the titles ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, pp. 674, 695; CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 537.

INDEBITATUS ASSUMPSIT.—See the title ASSUMPSIT, vol. 2, p. 636.

INDEBTEDNESS.—See DEBT, vol. 5, p. 203. And see note 5.

1. Incidental.—A city contracted to issue bonds to raise money to aid a railroad company in completing its unfinished road, and by the contract the railroad company was to pay "all and any expense incidental to the issue of any of the bonds." Subsequently congress passed an excise law levying an income tax of three per cent. on all sums due for interest by railroad companies. It was held that the contract of the railroad company to pay "all and any expense incidental to the issue of any of the bonds," did not oblige it to pay this tax out of its own money, and so to pay the full interest to the city discharged of the tax; and that the tax was not incidental to the issue of the bond. The court said: "To carry out the arrangement between the parties required a considerable expenditure of money for printing, clerk hire, stationary, advertising, and similar matters. These expenses were incidental to the issue of the bonds, and it was right and proper that the railroad company—the party to be benefited by the transaction—should pay them. And it agreed to do so; but this agreement cannot be extended to cover the tax in question, for in no sense is it an expense incidental to the issue of the bonds." Baltimore v. Baltimore Railroad, 10 Wall. 543, 551, 19 L. Ed. 1043.

2. United States v. Trinidad Coal, etc., Co., 137 U. S. 160, 169, 34 L. Ed. 640. See, generally, the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 621.

3. Increased value.—See Boylan v. United States, 10 Wall. 58, 19 L. Ed. 859. And see, generally, the title REVENUE LAWS.

4. Incumbrances.—Real estate, covered by several mortgages, was granted "subject, however, to certain incumbrances now resting thereon, payment of which is assumed by said party of the second part," and the deed contained covenants by the grantor of warranty against all persons claiming from, under or through him, and for further assurance. In construing the provision as to incumbrances, the court said: "The clause in question, by the words 'certain incumbrances now resting thereon,' designates and comprehends all those mortgages and taxes, as clearly as if the words used had been 'the incumbrances,' or 'all incumbrances,' or had particularly described each mortgage and each tax. * * * It was argued that, because the deed contains a covenant of special warranty against all persons claiming under the grantor, the words 'certain incumbrances' cannot include the mortgages made by the grantor, but must be limited to the unpaid taxes which, it is said, would not come within the covenant of special warranty. But the answer to this argument is that any person claiming title by virtue of a lien created by taxes assessed against the grantor would claim under the grantor, equally with one claiming by a mortgage from him; and incumbrances expressly assumed by the grantee are necessarily excluded from the covenants of the grantor." Keller v. Ashford, 133 U. S. 610, 619, 33 L. Ed. 667. See, generally, the title VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

5. Indebtedness.—"There is a distinction between a debt and a contract for a future indebtedness to be incurred, pro-

INDECENT PUBLICATION.—See note 6.
INDEFEASIBLE.—See note 7.

INDEMNITY.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 792; CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1020; CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552; CONTRIBUTION AND EXONERATION, vol. 4, p. 595; COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 5; DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 171; FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, ante, p. 451; ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, ante, p. 737; INSURANCE; MARINE INSURANCE; PUBLIC LANDS.

As to a promise to indemnify a surety for performing an illegal contract, see the title ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, ante, p. 737. As to contracts of insurance being contracts of indemnity, see the titles INSURANCE; MARINE INSURANCE. As to contribution between wrongdoers, see the title CONTRIBUTION AND EXONERATION, vol. 4, p. 595. As to indemnity lands, see the title PUBLIC LANDS. As to when plea of non damnificatus is proper, see the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 19. As to the distinction between contracts to pay and contracts of indemnity, see the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 171. As to recovery of damages occurring after institution of suit, see the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 168. As to indemnity for loss occasioned by breach of contract, see the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 169. As to right of guarantee to indemnity fund provided for guarantor, see the title GUARANTY, ante, p. 580. As to the rule as to collateral facts in evidence, see the title GUARANTY, ante, p. 580.

Definition.—An agreement to save a person harmless from any and all liability by reason of certain contracts is an agreement to indemnify.[1]

Agreement to Indemnify and Agreement to Sell Distinguished.—There is a well-settled distinction between an agreement to indemnify and an agreement to pay. In the latter case, a recovery may be had as soon as there is a breach of the contract, and the measure of the damages is the full amount agreed to be paid.[2]

Right of Obligor to Convey Property for Indemnity of Surety.—The obligor in a bond has a right to convey property for the purpose of indemnifying his surety, provided it be done bona fide and there is no lien upon the prop-vided the contracting party perform the agreement out of which the debt may arise. There is also a distinction between the latter case and one where an absolute debt is created at once, as by the issue of railway bonds, or for the erection of a public improvement, though such debt be payable in the future by installments. In the one case the indebtedness is not created until the consideration has been furnished; in the other the debt is created at once, the time of payment being only postponed." Walla Walla City v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 20, 43 L. Ed. 341.

6. Indecent publications.—In Dunlop v. United States, 165 U. S. 486, 500, 41 L. Ed. 799, the following instruction embodying a definition of indecent publications was held not to be erroneous: "Now, what is (are) obscene, lascivious, lewd or indecent publications is largely a question of your own conscience and your own opinion; but it must come—before it can be said of such literature or publication—it must come up to this point; that it must be calculated with the ordinary reader to deprave him, deprave his morals, or lead to impure purposes." See, generally, the titles OBSCENITY; POSTAL LAWS.

7. Indefeasible estate in fee simple.—A covenant that the grantor is "seized of an indefeasible estate in fee simple" is a covenant for a perfect title. Douglass v. Lewis, 131 U. S. 75, 85, 33 L. Ed. 53. See the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 5.

1. What constitutes contract of indemnity.—D. and P. agreed to purchase a contract from M. with the agreement and understanding that they will and shall save M. from any and all liability by reason of certain contracts. It was held that this contract was not merely one to indemnify M. from damage arising out of his liability, but was an agreement to assume his contracts and to discharge him from his liability. Mills v. Dow, 133 U. S. 423, 432, 33 L. Ed. 717.

2. Agreement to indemnify and agreement to sell distinguished.—Wicker v. Hoppock, 6 Wall. 94, 99, 18 L. Ed. 752. See the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 171.

erty of the obligor.[3] To a certain extent, even the creditor whose claim the surety has under the terms of his obligation been compelled to satisfy, may be required to co-operate in effecting the indemnity of the latter.[4]

Measure of Damages for Illegally Refusing to Award.—An indemnity agreed upon as the amount to be paid for cancelling a contract, must afford the measure of damages for illegally refusing to award it.[5]

Bond of Indemnity Creating Joint Trespassers.—A bond of indemnity given by a plaintiff in an attachment to induce the officer to hold, after levy, property not subject to the writ, makes such plaintiff a joint trespasser with the officer as to all that is done with the property afterwards.[6]

Indemnitor Concluded by Judgment against Officer.—A plaintiff in attachment who indemnifies the attaching officer, and afterwards takes upon himself the defense when that officer is sued, is concluded by the judgment against that officer where such plaintiff is afterwards sued for the same trespass.[7]

INDEMNITY INSURANCE.—See the titles INDEMNITY, ante, p. 902; INSURANCE. See, also, the title BONDS, vol. 3, p. 408.

INDEMNITY LANDS.—See the title PUBLIC LANDS. See note 1.

INDENTURES.—See the title DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 250.

3. Leggett v. Humphreys, 21 How. 66, 16 L. Ed. 50.

Bona fide attempt to protect surety.—Whilst it may be conceded that a fraudulent combination between the officer and his surety, for the purpose of shielding the property of both or either from just responsibility, and in contemplation of delinquency in the former, would have the effect of vitiating any compact or instrument made with such a design, it is undeniable that an open and honest effort of a principal to protect his surety against casualties incident to a responsibility about to be assumed for him, cannot be obnoxious to objection; and it is equally clear, that the simple fact of the existence of such an effort, unattended by any known indicium of fraud, and unassailed by plain or probable direct proofs, can warrant no just impeachment of such an effort, which may be praiseworthy and just with reference to its object, and calculated to promote the performance of services to the public which otherwise could not be undertaken. The practice of providing such an indemnity for sureties is known to be usual and frequent, and it would be difficult to imagine an objection, either legal or moral, to its application to the extent to which the surety had been made answerable upon his bond. Leggett v. Humphreys, 21 How. 66, 77, 16 L. Ed. 50. See, generally, the title PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

4. Indemnity of surety by creditor.—Leggett v. Humphreys, 21 How. 66, 75, 16 L. Ed. 50.

5. Measure of damages for illegally refusing to award.—Garfielde v. United States, 93 U. S. 242, 246, 247, 23 L. Ed. 779.

As to illegal refusal of government officer to award contract, see the title DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 175.

6. Bond of indemnity creating joint trespassers.—Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 1, 18 L. Ed. 129. See the title ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, p. 690.

7. Indemnitor concluded by judgment against officer.—Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 1, 18 L. Ed. 129.

1. Indemnity lands.—In the construction of land grant acts in aid of railroads, "granted lands" are held to be those falling within the limits specially designated, the title to which attaches when the lands are located by an approved and accepted survey of the line, filed in the land department, as of the date of the act of congress; while indemnity lands are those selected in lieu of parcels previously disposed of or reserved, the title to which accrues only from their selection. Barney v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 117 U. S. 228, 29 L. Ed. 858.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles MASTER AND SERVANT; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; NEGLIGENCE; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT; WORKING CONTRACTS.

Definition.—One who, exercising an independent employment, contracts to do a piece of work according to his own methods and without being subject to the control of his employer, except as to the result of the work, and has the right to employ and control the action of the workmen, is an independent contractor.[1]

Liability.—Where an obstruction or defect which occasions an injury results directly from the acts which an independent contractor agreed and was authorized to do, the person who employs the contractor and authorizes him to do those acts is liable to the injured party;[2] but where the obstruction or defect caused or created is purely collateral to the work contracted to be done, and is

1. Definition.—Bouvier's Law Dictionary, vol. 1, p. 1011.

A person agreeing to build piers for a railroad bridge according to his employer's specifications to furnish the material and prepare proper warnings against danger, is an independent contractor. Casement v. Brown, 148 U. S. 615, 37 L. Ed. 582.

2. Employer liable if injury results from work as authorized to be done.—Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657, 679, 18 L. Ed. 427; Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 566, 576, 21 L. Ed. 485; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Steam Towboat Co., 23 How. 209, 16 L. Ed. 433.

If a nuisance necessarily occurs in the ordinary mode of doing work, the employer is liable. Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black 418, 17 L. Ed. 298.

An employer cannot refrain from directing his contractor in the execution of the work so as to avoid making the nuisance. Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black 418, 426, 17 L. Ed. 298.

The principle, which is well settled in the federal courts, is that where a person or corporation is engaged in a work in the ordinary doing of which a nuisance necessarily occurs, the party is liable for any injury that may result to third parties from carelessness or negligence, even though the work may be done by a contractor. Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 566, 579, 21 L. Ed. 485.

Illustrative cases.—Where an incorporated company undertook to lay water pipes in a city, agreeing that it would "protect all persons against damages by reason of excavations made by them in laying pipes, and to be responsible for all damages which may occur by reason of the neglect of their employees on the premises;" held, on the company's having let the work out to a subcontractor, through the negligence of whose servants injury occurred to a person passing over the street, that the company could be properly sued for damages. Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 566, 21 L. Ed. 485.

Where work done on a public highway necessarily constitutes an obstruction or defect in the highway which renders it dangerous as a way for travel and transportation unless properly guarded or shut out from public use, in such a case a principal for whom the work was done cannot defeat the just claim of a municipal corporation which has had to pay damages, or of a private party who has suffered injury, by proving that the work which constituted the obstruction or defect was done by an independent contractor. Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657, 18 L. Ed. 427, affirming Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black 418, 17 L. Ed. 298.

Where a railroad company employs contractors to build a bridge, and for that purpose to drive piles in a river, and, owing to the abandonment of the contract, the piles are left in the river, in such a condition as to injure a vessel when sailing on her course, the railroad company is liable for the injury. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Steam Towboat Co., 23 How. 209, 16 L. Ed. 433.

A hole cannot be dug in the sidewalk of a large city and left without guards and lights at night, without great danger to life and limb, and he who orders it dug, and makes no provision for its safety, is chargeable, if injury is suffered. Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black 418, 426, 17 L. Ed. 298.

An act of the general assembly of the state of Louisiana, referring to a certain railroad corporation, enacted that the said corporation should not be liable for any injury "to person or property caused by the act or omission of the persons so contracting with it." Held, that this was a convenient form of declaring the common-law rights of the company, and conferred no exemption on it. Railroad Co.

entirely the result of the wrongful acts af the contractor or his workmen, the rule is that the employer is not liable;[3] and in such case the contractor will be liable for his own negligent acts.[4]

INDEPENDENT COVENANTS.—See the title COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 10.

INDEXING.—See the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES. As to fees of clerk for indexing, see the title CLERKS OF COURT, vol. 3, p. 857. As to fees of chief supervisor of elections for indexing, see the title ELECTIONS, vol. 5, p. 725.

v. Hanning, 15 Wall. 649, 21 L. Ed. 220.

Municipality's liability as employer.—Cases arise where improvements are constructed by contractors, in which the municipality is not responsible at all, as where the improvement is of such a character that a prudent man would not find it necessary to incumber or obstruct the street in any respect or for any purpose, as in that case it would be clear that the defect or want of repair which occasioned the injury was solely the result of neglect and carelessness on the part of the contractor, and not of any culpable fault of the officers of the municipality. Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 566, 576, 21 L. Ed. 485.

3. Where injury results from work collateral to work authorized, contractor alone is liable.—Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black 418, 17 L. Ed. 298; Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 566, 576, 21 L. Ed. 485.

4. A contractor to construct piers for a railroad bridge will be liable for injuries resulting from his failure to replace a buoy and light, washed away by a flood, it being the contractor's duty by contract to keep in place buoys and lights to warn against danger. Casement v. Brown, 148 U. S. 615, 37 L. Ed. 582.

Contractors with a municipal corporation may or may not be responsible to a third party. Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 566, 577, 21 L. Ed. 485.

INDIANS.

BY J. N. CLAYBROOK.

I. Definitions and General Considerations, 910.
- A. Who Are Indians, 910.
  - 1. In General, 910.
  - 2. Adoption into Tribe or Nation, 910.
- B. What Constitutes a "Nation," "Tribe," or "Band," 911.
  - 1. Nation, 911.
  - 2. Tribe, 911.
  - 3. Band, 911.
- C. What Constitutes Indian Country, 912.
- D. Status of Nations or Tribes, 913.

II. Citizenship of Indians, 916.
- A. Indians as Citizens of United States, 916.
  - 1. In General, 916.
  - 2. Mode of Becoming Citizen, 916.
    - a. In General, 916.
    - b. Allotment of Lands, 917.
  - 3. Effect of Agreement Superseding Treaty Providing for Citizenship, 917.
- B. Tribal Citizenship, 918.
  - 1. Determination of Tribal Citizenship, 918.
    - a. Power of Congress, 918.
    - b. Choctaw and Chickasaw Citizenship Court, 918.
  - 2. Withdrawal of Tribal Citizenship, 919.

III. Property Rights, 919.
- A. Property Rights of Nations or Tribes, 919.
  - 1. Nature of Indian Title, 919.
    - a. Right of Discoverers as against Indians, 919.
    - b. Succession of United States to Rights of European Nations, 919.
      - (1) Succession to Rights of Great Britain, 919.
      - (2) Succession to Rights of Spain upon Acquisition of Florida, 920.
    - c. Present Nature of Indian Title, 920.
      - (1) General Rule, 920.
      - (2) Reservations, 921.
      - (3) Hunting Grounds, 921.
    - d. Common Right of Members of Tribe in Tribal Property, 921.
  - 2. Mode of Extinguishing Indian Title, 921.
    - a. In General, 921.
    - b. Cession to Government, 921.
    - c. Abandonment of Occupancy, 922.
    - d. Authorized Sale, 922.
  - 3. Sale of Land by Indians, 922.
    - a. General Rule, 922.
    - b. Sale by Florida Indians Prior to Cession to United States, 922.
      - (1) Grant Confirmed by Spanish Authorities, 922.
      - (2) Construction of Confirmation, 922.
      - (3) Proof of Confirmation, 923.
  - 4. Grants by United States to Indians, 923.
    - a. Right of Indians to Purchase, 923.

b. Construction of Grant, 923.
c. Forfeiture of Lands by Indians for Breach of Conditions, 924.
5. Cession of Lands by Indians to United States, 924.
a. Property Passing, 924.
b. Whether Cession Absolute or in Trust, 924.
c. Cession in Trust to Sell for Benefit of Indians, 925.
(1) Validity of Cession and Sale, 925.
(2) Mode and Sufficiency of Sale, 925.
d. Right of Indians to Compensation for Lands Ceded in Excess of Those Allotted, 926.
e. Effect of Cession on Rights of Individual Indians, 926.
f. Actions by Indians with Respect to Ceded Lands, 926.
(1) Consent of United States to Be Sued, 926.
(2) Decree in Action for Compensation for Lands, 926.
6. Reservations to Indians, 926.
a. Mode of Creating Reservation, 926.
b. Effect of Reservation of "Hunting Grounds," 927.
c. Reservation as Notice to Third Persons, 927.
7. Timber Rights, 927.
a. Growing Timber on Indian Lands, 927.
(1) Right to Cut, 927.
(a) For Purpose of Improving Land, 927.
(b) For Purpose of Sale, 927.
(2) Action for Timber Unlawfully Cut, 927.
b. Dead Timber on Indian Reservations, 928.
(1) In General, 928.
(2) Contract for Cutting and Sale, 928.
(a) Necessity for Contract and Approval by Government, 928.
(b) Construction of Contract, 928.
aa. Contracts for Certain Amount, "More or Less," 928.
bb. Construction of Contract by Parties as Binding Government, 928.
(3) Damages against Purchaser, Where Excess Cut, 929.
8. Who May Share in Tribal Property, 929.
a. Bands or Tribes Entitled to Share, 929.
(1) Property of Cherokees, 929.
(a) Lands and Common Property, 929.
(b) Funds Allowed for Removal of Cherokees, 930.
(2) Annuities Granted to Tribe Which Has Separated, 930.
b. Individuals Entitled to Share in Tribal Funds, 930.
9. Mineral and Oil Lands, 930.
10. Intrusion on Indian Lands, 931.
B. Individual Property Rights, 931.
1. Power of Indians to Acquire and Hold Property, 931.
2. Allotment of Lands to Indians, 932.
a. Persons Entitled to Allotments, 932.
(1) Power of Congress to Provide for Ascertaining, 932.
(2) White Persons Married to Indians, 932.
(3) White Members of Tribe or Nation, 933.
(4) Indians Adopted into Tribe or Nation, 933.
(5) Negroes Living within, but Not Adopted by, Indian Nation, 934.
(6) Necessity for Allottee to Reside on Reservation, 934.
(7) Finality of Decision as to Right of Allotment, 935.

(8) Whether Right to First Selection Lost by Making Second, 935.
b. Right of Allottee to Timber on Allotted Lands, 935.
c. Sale of Allotment, 936.
(1) Right to Sell, 936.
(a) In Absence of Restriction, 936.
(b) Restrictions on Sale, 936.
aa. Postponement of Right to Sell, 936.
bb. Lands Held in Trust for Indians, 936.
cc. Lands of Minor Allottees, 936.
(2) Mode of Sale, 936.
(a) Compliance with Statute, 936.
(b) Approval by President or Secretary, 936.
(3) Rights and Title of Purchaser, 937.
d. List or Census of Allottees as Evidence, 938.
e. Actions with Respect to Allotments, 938.
(1) Jurisdiction, 938.
(a) Prior to Act of 1894, 938.
(b) Under Act of 1894, 938.
(2) Parties, 938.
(3) Limitations, 938.
3. Reservations to Individuals by Treaty of Cession, 939.
a. Who May Select Where Reservation Is to "Head of Family," 939.
b. On What Lands Reservation May Be Located, 939.
c. When Title Becomes Complete, 939.
d. Necessity for Patent, 939.
e. Conflict between Reservees as to Locations, 939.
f. Title or Interest of Reservees, 940.
(1) Nature of Estate or Interest, 940.
(2) School Lands within Reservation, 940.
g. Sale or Conveyance by Reservee, 941.
4. Descent and Distribution, 942.
5. Right to Hunt on Lands of United States, 942.
6. Right of Fishery, 942.

IV. Government of Indians and Indian Country, 943.

A. Power of United States, 943.
1. In General, 943.
2. Regulation of Trade or Commerce with Indians, 943.
3. Mode of Governing Indians, 943.
a. Formerly Governed by Treaties, 943.
b. Now Governed by Act of Congress, 944.
4. Control and Investment of Indian Funds, 944.
5. Removal of Indians, 944.
B. Power of States, 945.
C. Self-Government, 945.
1. Power of Indians to Govern Themselves, 945.
2. Effect of Indian Laws, 946.

V. Jurisdiction over Indians and Indian Country, 947.

A. Criminal Jurisdiction, 947.
1. Crimes by Indians, 947.
a. Crimes on Indian Reservation, 947.
(1) Indian Reservation within State, 947.
(a) State Courts, 947.
(b) United States Courts, 947.
aa. General Rule, 947.

bb. Crimes against Other Indians, 947.
cc. Where Indian Has Been Punished by Tribal Court, 948.
dd. Jurisdiction Secured to Tribal Courts by Treaty, 948.
(c) Tribal Courts, 948.
aa. Prior to Act of March 3, 1885, 948.
bb. Under Act of March 3, 1885, 949.
cc. Under Act of May 2, 1890, 949.
(2) Indian Reservation within Territory, 950.
(a) United States Courts, 950.
aa. General Rule, 950.
bb. Offenses by Indians against Indian Agents, Policemen, Marshals, etc., 951.
cc. Crimes against Other Indians, 951.
dd. Where Indian Has Been Punished by Tribal Court, 951.
ee. Jurisdiction Secured to Tribal Courts by Treaty, 951.
(b) Territorial Courts, 951.
b. Crimes Outside of Reservation, 952.
(1) Crimes within State, 952.
(2) Crimes within Territory, 952.
2. Crimes by Persons Other than Indians, 952.
a. On Indian Reservation within State, 952.
b. On Indian Reservation within Territory, 952.
c. Selling Liquor to Indians, 952.
3. Averment and Proof of Jurisdictional Facts, 953.
a. Indictment, 953.
b. Evidence, 953.
(1) Burden of Proof, 953.
(2) Admissibility, 953.
(3) Weight and Sufficiency, 953.
(4) Questions of Law and Fact, 954.
B. Civil Jurisdiction, 954.
1. Indian Reservations Excepted from State or Territory, 954.
2. Suits between Indians, 954.
3. Suits against Indian by Citizen of United States Residing in Indian Country, 954.
4. Suits between Indians and Railroad in Indian Country, 954.

VI. Taxation, 955.
A. Indian Property, 955.
B. Non-Indian Property within Reservation, 956.
1. Taxation by States or Territories, 956.
2. Taxation by Indian Nations, 957.
C. Internal Revenue Laws as Extending to Reservations, 957.

VII. Indian Officers or Agent, 958.
A. Powers, 958.
B. Liability of United States for Default of Agent, 958.
C. Personal Liability of Agent, 958.
D. Compensation and Fees, 958.

VIII. Claims by Indians against United States, 959.
A. Liability of Government, 959.
1. Account Rendered by Government and Accepted by Indians, 959.
2. Lands Taken by Mistake, 959.
3. Interest on Funds Due Indians, 959.

B. Enforcement, 959.
1. Arbitration, 959.
2. Action in Court of Claims, 959.
a. Jurisdiction, 959.
b. Power of Court to Convert Annuities, 959.
3. Set-Off and Counterclaim, 960.
4. Costs, 960.
5. Attorney's Fees, 960.

IX. Depredations by or against Indians, 960.

X. Treaties with Indians, 960.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ALIENS, vol. 1, p. 210; ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 2, p. 703; CITIZENSHIP, vol. 3, p. 788; COSTS, vol. 4, p. 802; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 861; CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43; INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE; INTOXICATING LIQUORS; LACHES; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION; PUBLIC LANDS; PUBLIC OFFICERS; TAXATION; TREATIES; TREES AND TIMBER; UNITED STATES.

As to power of United States to exercise power of eminent domain within Indian country, see the title EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746. As to power of congress to grant right of way to railroad through Indian country, see the title INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE. As to commerce with the Indian tribes, see the title INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE. As to sale of liquor to Indians, or introduction of liquor into the Indian country, see the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS. As to parol evidence to explain contracts between Indians, see the title PAROL EVIDENCE. As to right of Indians to pre-empt or locate on public lands, see the title PUBLIC LANDS. As to location of Indian or half-breed scrip, see the title PUBLIC LANDS.

I. Definitions and General Considerations.

A. Who Are Indians—1. IN GENERAL.—The illegitimate child of a Choctaw Indian, by a colored woman, who was not his wife, but a slave in the Cherokee Nation, is a negro and not an Indian,[1] and one by blood an Indian, but who has become a citizen by receiving an allotment of land, is not an Indian within the meaning of a statute prohibiting the sale of liquor to Indians.[2]

2. ADOPTION INTO TRIBE OR NATION.—Persons not Indians by blood may become members of a tribe or nation by adoption.[3] Freedmen within the Cherokee[4] and Choctaw Nations[5] have become members of those tribes by adoption under treaties providing therefor, but the Chickasaw Nation has never adopted into the nation freedmen residing therein.[6] Whatever obligations a person may have taken upon himself by becoming a member of an Indian nation by adoption, his responsibility to the laws of the United States remained unchanged and undiminished.[7] While persons adopted by a tribe or nation are members of the tribe, they are not "Indians."[8] It seems that a regulation of the department

1. Who are Indians.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

2. Allottee not an Indian within act of congress.—Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. Ed. 848.

3. Adoption of non-Indians by tribes or nations.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282; Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 222, 42 L. Ed. 442; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 573, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

4. Cherokee freedmen adopted into nation.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

5. Choctaw freedmen adopted into nation.—Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282.

6. Chickasaw freedmen not adopted.—United States v. Choctaw Nation, 193 U. S. 115, 48 L. Ed. 640.

7. Effect of adoption into tribe on status as citizens of United States.—Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 222, 42 L. Ed. 442; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 573, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

8. Persons adopted into tribe not "Indians."—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

making the adoption of a person into an Indian tribe dependent on the approval of the Indian office is not invalid.[9]

B. What Constitutes a "Nation," "Tribe," or "Band"—1. NATION.—Strictly speaking the word "nation" cannot be applied to a body of Indians within the United States. The word when used, with respect to the Indians, as is frequently the case, indicates little more than a large tribe or group of affiliated tribes possessing a common government, language, or racial origin, and acting for the time being in concert.[10]

2. TRIBE.—A tribe is a body of the same or similar race, united in a community under one leadership or government, and inhabiting a particular though sometimes ill-defined territory.[11] Whether any particular class of Indians are still to be regarded as a tribe, or have ceased to hold the tribal relation, is primarily a question for the political departments of the government, and if they have decided it, the courts will follow their lead.[12]

3. BAND.—A band is a company of Indians not necessarily, though often, of the same race or tribe, united under the same leadership in a common design.[13] It is not necessary that the Indians composing it be a separate political entity, recognized as such, inhabiting a particular territory, and with whom treaties had

Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 39 L. Ed. 255.

Slaves adopted into nation.—The ninth article of the treaty of 1866 (14 Stat. 799, 801), by which the Cherokee Nation agreed to abolish slavery, and further agreed "that all freedmen who have been liberated by voluntary act of their former owners or by law, as well as all free colored persons who were in the country at the commencement of the rebellion and are now residents therein or who may return within six months, and their descendants, shall have all the rights of native Cherokees," gave a freedman the rights of a native Cherokee, but did not, standing alone, make him an Indian, within the meaning of Rev. Stat., § 2146, or absolve him from responsibility to the criminal laws of the United States. Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

One who married a freed woman of the Cherokee Nation must be treated as a member of the Cherokee Nation, but not an Indian. Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

9. Approval of adoption by Indian officer.—United States v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. Ed. 718 (where it was held that such authority was probably conferred by §§ 441, 463, of the Revised Statutes which provide that the commissioner of Indian affairs shall, under the direction of the secretary of the interior and agreeably to such regulations as the president may prescribe, have the management of all Indian affairs, and of all matters arising out of Indian relations).

10. Meaning of nation.—Montoya v. United States, 180 U. S. 261, 45 L. Ed. 521.

11. Meaning of tribe.—Montoya v. United States, 180 U. S. 261, 45 L. Ed. 521.

The Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, are not an Indian tribe within the meaning of the statute prohibiting intrusion on the lands of an Indian tribe. United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 24 L. Ed. 295.

The Old Settlers or Western Cherokees were described in the 4th article of the treaty of 1846, as "all those Cherokees west of the Mississippi, who emigrated prior to the treaty of 1835," and they may be held to include those now living who so emigrated, together with the descendants of those who have died, the succession to be determined by the Cherokee law. United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 427, 37 L. Ed. 509. See, also, United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 124, 50 L. Ed. 949.

12. Whether body or tribe a political question.—United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 18 L. Ed. 182; The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667.

If the tribal organization of Indian bands is recognized by the political department of the national government as existing; that is to say, if the national government makes treaties with, and has its Indian agent among them, paying annuities, and dealing otherwise with "head men" in its behalf, the fact that the primitive habits and customs of the tribe, when in a savage state, have been largely broken into by their intercourse with the whites—in the midst of whom, by the advance of civilization, they have come to find themselves—does not authorize a state government to regard the tribal organization as gone, and the Indians as citizens of the state where they are, and subject to its laws. The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667.

13. Meaning of band.—Montoya v. United States, 180 U. S. 261, 45 L. Ed. 521. See BAND, vol. 2, p. 791. And see the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1038.

A "band" means a company of persons, perhaps a company of armed persons. Stuart v. United States, 18 Wall. 84, 87, 21 L. Ed. 816.

been or might be made. These peculiarities would rather give them the character of tribes. The word "band" implies an inferior and less permanent organization, though it must be of sufficient strength to be capable of initiating hostile proceedings.[14]

C. What Constitutes Indian Country.—Since many of the statutes of the United States are expressly limited in their application to the Indian country, the question as to what is the Indian country often becomes an important one. The first definition of the Indian country was contained in the act of March 30, 1802,[15] but this act was superseded by the act of June 30, 1834, which provided that all that part of the United States west of the Mississippi, and not within the states of Missouri and Louisiana, or the territory of Arkansas, and also that part of the United States east of the Mississippi, and not within any state, to which the Indian title had not been extinguished, should be taken and deemed to be Indian country.[16] While the act of 1834 was not re-enacted in the Revised Statutes, and consequently was repealed by § 5596 of the revision,[17] still it has been held in several cases that it may be referred to in connection with the provision of the original context which remains in force, and may be considered in connection with the changes which have taken place in our situation, with a view of determining from time to time what must be regarded as Indian country where it is spoken of in the Revised Statutes.[18] The Indian country now embraces all the country to which the Indian title has not been extinguished within the limits of the United States, even when not within a reservation expressly set apart for the exclusive occupancy of Indians, although much of it has been acquired since the passage of the act of 1834, and notwithstanding the formal definition in that act has been dropped from the statutes, excluding, however, any territory embraced within the exterior geographical limits of a state, not excepted from its jurisdiction by treaty or by statute, at the time of its admission into the Union, but saving, even in respect to territory not thus excepted and actually in the ex-

14. Conners v. United States, 180 U. S. 271, 275, 45 L. Ed. 525.

15. Act of March 30, 1802.—Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 206, 24 L. Ed. 471.

The first section of the act of March 30, 1802, describes a boundary, the description occupying over a page of the statute book, and declares that this shall be distinctly marked under orders of the president, and considered as the line of the Indian territory, or Indian country as it is called indifferently in several sections of the act. The country west of the Mississippi then belonged to France or Spain. The boundary above mentioned, commencing at the mouth of the Cayahoga River, on Lake Erie, now Cleveland, runs in a wonderfully tortuous course through the country northwest of the Ohio River to the falls of that river, now Louisville, then down that river to a point between the mouth of the Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers, and thence through Kentucky, Tennessee, and Georgia, to the St. Mary's River, pursuing all the way the lines represented by treaties with various Indian tribes. Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 206, 24 L. Ed. 471.

16. Act of June 30, 1834.—Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. Ed. 471; United States v. Le Bris, 121 U. S. 278, 280, 30 L. Ed. 946; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. Ed. 1030; United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. Ed. 846.

17. Act of 1834 not re-enacted in Revised Statutes.—United States v. Le Bris, 121 U. S. 278, 280, 30 L. Ed. 946; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

18. Act of 1834, though repealed, may be considered.—Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. Ed. 1030; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 207, 24 L. Ed. 471; United States v. Le Bris, 121 U. S. 278, 280, 30 L. Ed. 946.

Notwithstanding the immense changes which have since taken place in the vast region covered by the act of 1834, by the extinguishment of Indian titles, the creation of states and the formation of territorial governments, congress has not thought it necessary to make any new definition of Indian country. Yet during all this time a large body of laws has been in existence, whose operation was confined to the Indian country, whatever that may be. And the men have been punished by death, by fine, and by imprisonment, of which the courts who so punished them had no jurisdiction, if the offenses were not committed in the Indian country as established by law. These facts afford the strongest presumption that the congress of the United States, and the judges who administered those laws, must have found in the definition of Indian country, in the act of 1834, such an adaptability to the altered circumstances of what was then Indian country clusive occupancy of Indians, the authority of congress over it, under the constitutional power to regulate commerce with the Indian tribes, and under any treaty made in pursuance of it.[19] It is competent for the United States to provide by treaty that Indian country ceded to the United States shall remain subject to the laws of the United States regulating the sale and introduction of spirituous liquors into the Indian country.[20]

D. Status of Nations or Tribes.—While the Indian nations, having the right of self-government, are in a limited sense states,[21] they are not sovereign as to enable them to ascertain what it was at any time since then. Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 207, 24 L. Ed. 471.

19. Present definition of Indian country.—Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. Ed. 1030, citing United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 26 L. Ed. 869; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 207, 24 L. Ed. 471; United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. Ed. 846; American Fur Co. v. United States, 2 Pet. 358, 7 L. Ed. 450; In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 578, 35 L. Ed. 513.

This definition, though not now expressed in the Revised Statutes, is implied in all those provisions, most of which were originally connected with it when first enacted, and which still refer to it. It would be otherwise impossible to explain these references, or give effect to many of the most important provisions of existing legislation for the government of Indian country. Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 562, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

Where an act of congress admitting a state into the Union, or organizing a territorial government, provides, in accordance with a treaty stipulation, that the lands in the possession of an Indian tribe shall not be a part of such state or territory, the new government has no jurisdiction over them. Harkness v. Hyde, 98 U. S. 476, 25 L. Ed. 237, qualified and explained in Langford v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 145, 26 L. Ed. 53.

Dependent on extinguishment of Indian title.—The simple criterion is that as to all the lands described by the act of 1834 it was Indian country whenever the Indian title had not been extinguished, and it continued to be Indian country so long as the Indians had title to it, and no longer. As soon as they parted with the title, it ceased to be Indian country, without any further act of congress, unless by the treaty by which the Indians parted with their title, or by some act of congress, a different rule was made applicable to the case. Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 208, 24 L. Ed. 471; United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. Ed. 846; American Fur Co. v. United States, 2 Pet. 358, 7 L. Ed. 450.

The reservation of the Red Lake and Pembina Indians in Polk County, Minnesota, is Indian country, within the meaning of § 2139 of the Revised Statutes of the United States? United States v. Le Bris, 121 U. S. 278, 279, 30 L. Ed. 946; United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. Ed. 846; United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 108 U. S. 491, 27 L. Ed. 803.

The White Mountain Indian reservation in Arizona is a part of the Indian country within the meaning of § 2145 of the Revised Statutes extending to the Indian country the general laws of the United States, as to the punishment of crimes committed in any place within the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, except as to crimes, the punishment of which is otherwise expressly provided for. In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 578, 35 L. Ed. 513.

That portion of the Cherokee Outlet not embraced within the boundaries of the territory of Oklahoma, but attached thereto for judicial purposes, was Indian country within the provisions of the act of February 15, 1888, and the offense of horse stealing committed therein was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the district court of the first judicial district of Oklahoma Territory, sitting as a court of the United States. United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 58, 38 L. Ed. 631.

20. Continuation in force of laws as to Indian country upon cession to United States.—United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. Ed. 846. See the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Such a stipulation operates proprio vigore, and is binding upon the courts, although the ceded territory is situate within an organized county of a state. United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. Ed. 846.

21. Indian nations as states.—Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25; Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 242, 21 L. Ed. 523; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 299; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 581, 8 L. Ed. 483; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 382, 30 L. Ed. 228.

In a certain domestic sense, and for certain municipal purposes, Indian nations are states, and have been uniformly so treated since the settlement of our country and throughout its history, and numerous treaties made with them recognize them as a people capable of maintaining the relations of peace and war, of being responsible, in their political char-states in the sense that the United States, or the states, are sovereign,[22] nor foreign states within the meaning of the constitution.[23] The recognized relations between the government and the Indians is that of superior and inferior, the latter being under the care and control of the former.[24] They are wards of the nation,[25]

acter, for any violation of their engagements, or for any aggression committed on the citizens of the United States by any individual of their community. Laws have been enacted by congress in the spirit of those treaties, and the acts of our government, both in the executive and legislative departments, plainly recognize such tribes or nations as states, and the courts of the United States are bound by those acts. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 242, 21 L. Ed. 523.

In the management of their internal concerns, they are dependent on no power. They punish offenses, under their own laws, and in doing so, they are responsible to no earthly tribunal. They make war, and form treaties of peace. The exercise of these and other powers, gives to them a distinct character as a people, and constitutes them, in some respects, a state, although they may not be admitted to possess the right of soil. Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 581, 8 L. Ed. 483.

The Cherokees are a state; they have been uniformly treated as a state, since the settlement of our country; the numerous treaties made with them by the United States recognize them as a people capable of maintaining the relations of peace and war; of being responsible in their political character for any violation of their engagements, or for any aggression committed on the citizens of the United States by any individual of their community; laws have been enacted in the spirit of these treaties; the acts of our government plainly recognize the Cherokee nation as a state; and the courts are bound by those acts. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 299.

22. Indian nations not a sovereign state.—Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 653, 34 L. Ed. 295; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 306, 47 L. Ed. 183.

23. Indian nations not foreign states.—Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 299; Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 437, 41 L. Ed. 770; Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 242, 21 L. Ed. 523; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 99, 28 L. Ed. 643; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. Ed. 1041; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 10, 44 L. Ed. 49; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 581, 8 L. Ed. 483; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 379, 30 L. Ed. 228.

Indian tribes are not foreign states, or states of the United States, within the meaning of the second section of the third article of the constitution, which extends the judicial power to controversies between two or more states, between a state and citizens of another state, between citizens of different states, and between a state or the citizens thereof and foreign states, citizens, or subjects. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 242, 21 L. Ed. 523; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25.

On a motion for an injunction to prevent the execution of certain acts of the legislature of the state of Georgia, in the territory of the Cherokee Nation of Indians, on behalf of the Cherokee Nation; they claiming to proceed in the supreme court of the United States, as a foreign state, against the state of Georgia, under the provision of the constitution of the United States which gives to the court jurisdiction in controversies in which a state of the United States or the citizens thereof, and a foreign state, citizens or subjects thereof, are parties, it was held that the supreme court had no jurisdiction. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25.

24. Relation that of superior and inferior.—Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 28, 30 L. Ed. 306; Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 498, 49 L. Ed. 848; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 443, 47 L. Ed. 532; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 396, 46 L. Ed. 954.

"The recognized relation between the parties to this controversy, therefore, is that between a superior and an inferior, whereby the latter is placed under the care and control of the former, and which, while it authorizes the adoption on the part of the United States of such policy as their own public interests may dictate, recognizes, on the other hand, such an interpretation of their acts and promises as justice and reason demand in all cases where power is exerted by the strong over those to whom they owe care and protection. The parties are not on an equal footing, and that inequality is to be made good by the superior justice which looks only to the substance of the right, without regard to technical rules framed under a system of municipal jurisprudence, formulating the rights and obligations of private persons, equally subject to the same laws." Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 28, 30 L. Ed. 306; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 396, 46 L. Ed. 954; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 443, 47 L. Ed. 532.

25. Wards of nation.—Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041; United States v. Kagama, in a state of pupilage,[26] and may be said to be dependent political communities holding such relations to the general government that they and their country are considered by foreign nations, as well as by ourselves, as being so completely under the sovereignty and dominion of the United States, that any attempt to acquire their lands, or to form any political connection with them, would be considered by all as an invasion of our territory and an act of hostility.[27]

118 U. S. 375, 383, 30 L. Ed. 228; Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 27, 30 L. Ed. 306; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 567, 47 L. Ed. 299; United States v. Thomas, 151 U. S. 577, 38 L. Ed. 276; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 653, 34 L. Ed. 295; Dunbar v. Green, 198 U. S. 166, 168, 49 L. Ed. 998; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 17, 8 L. Ed. 25; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 99, 28 L. Ed. 643; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 10, 44 L. Ed. 49; United States v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 85, 51 L. Ed. 718.

"These Indian tribes are the wards of the nation. They are communities dependent on the United States. Dependent largely for their daily food. Dependent for their political rights. They owe no allegiance to the states, and receive from them no protection. Because of the local ill-feeling, the people of the states where they are found are often their deadliest enemies. From their very weakness and helplessness, so largely due to the course of dealing of the federal government with them and the treaties in which it has been promised, there arises the duty of protection, and with it the power. This has always been recognized by the executive and by congress, and by this court, whenever the question has arisen." United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 383, 30 L. Ed. 228; United States v. Thomas, 151 U. S. 577, 38 L. Ed. 276; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 567, 47 L. Ed. 299; Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 27, 30 L. Ed. 306.

"Chief Justice Marshall's description, that 'they are in a state of pupilage,' and 'their relation to the United States resembles that of a ward to his guardian,' has become more and more appropriate as they have grown less powerful and more dependent. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 17, 8 L. Ed. 25; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 99, 28 L. Ed. 643; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 382, 384, 30 L. Ed. 228; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041." Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 10, 44 L. Ed. 49.

It is for congress to determine when and how the relationship of guardianship shall be abandoned. It is not within the power of the courts to overrule the judgment of congress. It is true there may be a presumption that no radical departure is intended, and courts may wisely insist that the purpose of congress be made clear by its legislation, but when that purpose is made clear the question is at an end. Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 499, 49 L. Ed. 848.

26. Indians in a state of pupilage.—Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 653, 34 L. Ed. 295; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041; Taylor v. Brown, 147 U. S. 640, 37 L. Ed. 313; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 442, 47 L. Ed. 532; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 10, 44 L. Ed. 49; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 99, 28 L. Ed. 643; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 17, 8 L. Ed. 25; Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 404, 15 L. Ed. 691; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 306, 47 L. Ed. 183; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. Ed. 295.

Indians as a race are treated as in a state of pupilage and entitled to special protection. Taylor v. Brown, 147 U. S. 640, 37 L. Ed. 313, citing Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317, 330, 36 L. Ed. 719; Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. Ed. 716.

The relation existing between the United States and the Indians, is not a relation simply of contract, each party to which is capable of guarding his own interests, but the Indians are in a state of dependency and pupilage, entitled to the care and protection of the government. When they shall be let out of that state is for the United States to determine without interference by the courts or by any state. The government would not adequately discharge its duty to these people if it placed its engagements with them upon the basis merely of contract and failed to exercise any power it possessed to protect them in the possession of such improvements and personal property as were necessary to the enjoyment of the land held in trust for them. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 442, 47 L. Ed. 532.

27. Indian nations are dependent political communities.—Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 17, 8 L. Ed. 25; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 653, 34 L. Ed. 295; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041; The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 29 L. Ed. 880; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 384, 41 L. Ed. 196.

"The condition of the Indians and Indian tribes within the limits of the United States is anomalous. The tribes, though

II. Citizenship of Indians.

A. Indians as Citizens of United States—1. In General.—The mere fact that an Indian is born within the United States does not make him a citizen thereof.[28] And an Indian does not become a citizen by separating himself from his tribe and residing within a state.[29]

2. Mode of Becoming Citizen—a. In General.—In order for an Indian to become a citizen he must either be naturalized under the acts of congress passed in certain respects regarded as possessing the attributes of nationality, are held to be not foreign, but domestic dependent nations. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. Ed. 483; Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 306; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. Ed. 295." Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 221, 42 L. Ed. 442.

In all our intercourse with foreign nations, in our commercial regulations, in any attempt at intercourse between Indians and foreign nations, they are considered as within the jurisdictional limits of the United States, subject to many of those restraints which are imposed upon our own citizens. They acknowledge themselves, in their treaties, to be under the protection of the United States; they admit that the United States shall have the sole and exclusive right of regulating the trade with them, and managing all their affairs as they think proper. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 17, 8 L. Ed. 25.

"They were, and always have been, regarded as having a semi-independent position when they preserved their tribal relations; not as states, not as nations, not as possessed of the full attributes of sovereignty, but as a separate people, with the power of regulating their internal and social relations, and thus far not brought under the laws of the Union, or of the state within whose limits they resided." United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 381, 30 L. Ed. 228; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. Ed. 295; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041.

The Old Settlers or Western Cherokees are not a governmental body politic, nor have they a corporate existence, nor any capacity to act collectively. United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 427, 37 L. Ed. 509.

28. Indians born in United States not citizens.—Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 28 L. Ed. 643; Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 162, 36 L. Ed. 103; Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. Ed. 727.

Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States, members of, and owing immediate allegiance to, one of the Indian tribes (an alien, though dependent, power), although in a geographical sense born in the United States, are no more "born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof," within the meaning of the first section of the fourteenth amendment, than the children of subjects of any foreign government born within the domain of that government, or the children born within the United States, of ambassadors or other public ministers of foreign nations. Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 102, 28 L. Ed. 643.

Right of Indian to vote.—One by blood an Indian is not entitled to vote, unless he has become a citizen of the United States. Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 28 L. Ed. 643.

29. Indian separated from tribe and residing in state.—Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 28 L. Ed. 643; Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67.

An Indian, born a member of one of the Indian tribes within the United States, which still exists and is recognized as a tribe by the government of the United States, who has voluntarily severed himself from his tribe, and taken up his residence among the white citizens of a state, but who has not been naturalized, taxed, or recognized as a citizen, either by the state or by the United States, is not a citizen of the United States within the fourteenth amendment of the constitution. Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 28 L. Ed. 643, quoted in Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67.

A petition stating that the plaintiff is an Indian, and was born in the United States, and has severed his tribal relation to the Indian tribes, and fully and completely surrendered himself to the jurisdiction of the United States, and still continues to be subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and is a bona fide resident of the state of Nebraska and city of Omaha, does not show that the plaintiff is a citizen of the United States within the fourteenth amendment. Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 98, 28 L. Ed. 643.

Temporary residence in a state by an Indian, the length of his residence not being shown, nor that he had done anything to indicate his intention to sever his tribal relations, is certainly not sufficient to make him a citizen. Famous Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67.

for that purpose,[30] or become a citizen by virtue of statutes or treaties providing for his admission, or the admission of a part or the whole of the tribe of which he belongs, to citizenship.[31] The mere fact that a citizen of the United States has become a member of an Indian tribe by adoption does not necessarily cancel his citizenship.[32]

b. Allotment of Lands.—An Indian by blood, born within the United States, to whom land has been alotted, under the act of February 8, 1887, is no longer an Indian, but is a citizen of the United States and of the state or territory in which he resides,[33] and is not subject to acts of congress relating to Indians.[34] Citizenship accrues when the allotment is made, and is not postponed until the issuance of the final patent.[35]

3. Effect of Agreement Superseding Treaty Providing for Citizenship.—A treaty providing that Indians shall become citizens at the expiration of five 30. Naturalization of Indians.—Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 103, 28 L. Ed. 643; Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 222, 42 L. Ed. 442.

Indians may, without doubt, like the subjects of any other foreign government, be naturalized by the authority of congress, and become citizens of a state, and of the United States. Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 404, 15 L. Ed. 691.

By § 43 of the act of May 2, 1890, c. 182, 26 Stat. 99, provision is made for the naturalization of members of the Indian tribes in the Indian territory, with a proviso "that the Indians who become citizens of the United States under the provisions of this act do not forfeit or lose any rights or privileges they enjoy or are entitled to as members of the tribe or nation to which they belong." Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 222, 42 L. Ed. 442.

31. Admission of Indians to citizenship by statutes or treaties.—Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 162, 36 L. Ed. 103; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 28 L. Ed. 643; Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. Ed. 727; Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 503, 49 L. Ed. 848.

By the treaty of December 29, 1835, such individuals and families of the Cherokees as were averse to a removal west of the Mississippi and desirous to become citizens of the states where they resided, were allowed to do so. Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 162, 36 L. Ed. 103.

By the treaty of September 27, 1830, provision was made for such heads of families of the Choctaws as desired it, to remain and become citizens of the United States. 7 Stat. 335. Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 162, 36 L. Ed. 103.

By the act of congress of March 3, 1843, it was provided that on the completion of certain arrangements for the partition of the lands of the tribe among its members, "the said Stockbridge tribe of Indians, and each and every one of them, shall then be deemed to be, and from that time forth are hereby declared to be, citizens of the United States, to all intents and purposes, and shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities of such citizens." 5 Stat. 647, c. 101, § 7. Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 162, 36 L. Ed. 103.

By the act of March 3, 1839, 5 Stat. c. 83, pp. 349, 351, relating to the Brothertown Indians of Wisconsin, the members of that tribe were made citizens of the United States. Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 162, 36 L. Ed. 103.

The act of congress approved February 8, 1887, 24 Stat. 388, by its terms made every Indian situated as therein referred to, a citizen of the United States. Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 503, 49 L. Ed. 848; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 162, 36 L. Ed. 103.

32. Loss of citizenship by joining Indian tribe.—Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 222, 42 L. Ed. 422; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 573, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

33. Effect of allotment on status of Indian.—Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. Ed. 848.

The limitation of citizenship to allottees born within the territorial limits of the United States was obviously intended to exclude from that privilege such allottees, if any there should be, who had recently come into this country from the Dominion of Canada or elsewhere. Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 503, 49 L. Ed. 848.

The fact that the land is not subject to alienation by the allottee does not affect the above rule. Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. Ed. 848.

34. Allottee not subject to statutes as to Indians.—Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. Ed. 848.

Selling liquor to an allottee, under act of February 8, 1887, is not a crime within the meaning of the act of January 30, 1897, prohibiting sales of liquor to Indians. Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. Ed. 848. See the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

35. When allottee becomes citizen.—Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 502, 49 L. Ed. 848.

Citizenship is conferred upon the allottee and not upon the patentee, while at the same time securing to him his right years from its date, does not operate to make them citizens, where, before that time, the Indians submit a proposition to the United States for the continuance of their tribal organization and dependent position, which is accepted by the United States, although the acceptance is not made until after the expiration of five years from the date of the treaty. When the acceptance is made, it relates back to the date on which the proposition was submitted.[36]

B. Tribal Citizenship—1. DETERMINATION OF TRIBAL CITIZENSHIP—a. Power of Congress.—The power of congress over the matter of citizenship in Indian tribes is plenary, and it may adopt any reasonable means to ascertain who are entitled to its privileges, and if the result of one measure is not satisfactory it may try another.[37]

b. Choctaw and Chickasaw Citizenship Court.—Congress has power to create a court for Choctaw and Chickasaw nations, and give it power to decide the question as to who are citizens of tribes, and annul the judgments of a territory upon that question, the parties to the suit including every class to be affected by the decision, and the decision to be binding on the classes represented.[38] to tribal or other property. So far as his political status is concerned the allottee is declared to be a citizen—not that he will be a citizen after twenty-five years have passed and a second patent shall have been issued. Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 503, 49 L. Ed. 848.

The act of 1887, providing that Indians to whom allotments shall have been made shall have the benefit of and be subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the state or territory in which they may reside, and no territory shall pass or enforce any law denying any such Indian within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law, becomes operative as soon as the allotment is made, and is not postponed until the issuance of the final patent. Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 502, 49 L. Ed. 848.

36. Agreement superseding treaty providing for citizenship.—Wiggan v. Connolly, 163 U. S. 56, 60, 41 L. Ed. 69.

There was a treaty made between the United States and the Ottawa Indians in July 16, 1862, providing that at the expiration of five years from the date of its ratification, that is, on July 16, 1867, the Ottawas should become citizens of the United States, and the tribal organization and relations with the United States should be dissolved. In February, 1867, the Ottawas proposed to change the treaty of 1862, and continue the tribal organization and relations with the United States. This proposition, after some slight amendments, was accepted by the United States in October, 1868. It was held, that though the proposition was not accepted by the United States until after July 16, 1867, the date fixed for the dissolution of the tribe, yet, when accepted, the acceptance related back to the date of the proposition; hence, the treaty of 1867 was valid and determined the status and rights of the Indians politically and in respect to their property. Wiggan v. Connolly, 163 U. S. 56, 60, 41 L. Ed. 69.

37. Power of congress to adopt means to determine tribal citizenship.—Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 423, 51 L. Ed. 547; Ex parte Joins, 191 U. S. 93, 102, 48 L. Ed. 110; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. Ed. 1041.

The fact that the first provision was by an inquiry in a territorial court does not exhaust the power of congress or preclude further investigation. The functions of the territorial courts in this respect are but little more than those of a commission. Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 423, 51 L. Ed. 547.

In view of the paramount authority of congress over the Indian tribes, and of the duties imposed on the government by their condition of dependency, it cannot be said that congress cannot empower the Dawes Commission to determine, in the manner provided, who were entitled to citizenship in each of the tribes and make out correct rolls of such citizens, an essential preliminary to effective action in promotion of the best interests of the tribes. And the constitutionality of these acts in respect of the determination of citizenship cannot be successfully assailed on the ground of the impairment or destruction of vested rights. The lands and moneys of these tribes are public lands and public moneys, and are not held in individual ownership, and the assertion by any particular applicant that his right therein is so vested as to preclude inquiry into his status involves a contradiction in terms. Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. Ed. 1041. See, also, Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 302, 47 L. Ed. 183.

38. Choctaw and Chickasaw citizenship court.—Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 421, 51 L. Ed. 547; Ex parte Joins, 191 U. S. 93, 102, 48 L. Ed. 110.

On March 21, 1902, an agreement was made between the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations, which was confirmed by act of congress, July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. 641. This agreement and act were substantially that a court known as the Choctaw and Chickasaw citizen-

2. Withdrawal of Tribal Citizenship.—The Choctaw Nation having power to confer tribal citizenship on one not a member of the tribe, may withdraw it, provided the legislation for that purpose does not conflict with the constitution or laws of the United States,[39] and all personal rights founded on the mere status created by the prior act fall when that status is destroyed.[40]

III. Property Rights.

A. Property Rights of Nations or Tribes—1. Nature of Indian Title—a. Right of Discoverers as against Indians.—Upon the discovery and settlement of American by the European nations the Indian tribes were regarded as mere temporary occupants of the soil, the absolute right of property and dominion being in the European nations by which any particular portion of the country was first discovered. Subject to the Indian's right of occupancy, the ultimate absolute fee, jurisdiction and sovereignty was vested in the governments, and grants from the governments vested soil and dominion, and the power of government, whether the land granted was vacant or occupied by Indians.[41]

b. Succession of United States to Rights of European Nations—(1) Succession of Rights of Great Britain.—By the Declaration of Independence and the treaty of peace concluded upon the termination of the Revolution, the United States succeeded to all the rights of Great Britain, including the rights formerly possessed by Great Britain with respect to lands occupied by the Indians.[42] ship court should be created, and that court should have power in a suit in equity brought by either or both of these tribes against any ten persons who had been admitted to citizenship or enrollment by the terms of the judgments of the several United States courts in the Indian territory, as representatives of all persons similarly situated, to determine whether the judgments of those courts should be annulled on account of certain alleged irregularities. Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 420, 51 L. Ed. 547.

The agreement and act also provided that in case the citizenship courts should decide that those judgments should be annulled, the papers in any action in those courts, wherein such a judgment had been rendered, should, upon seasonable application of either party, be transferred to the citizenship court, which should proceed to a hearing and determination of the question of citizenship. Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. Ed. 547.

The act of congress of July 1, 1902, creating the Choctaw and Chickasaw citizenship court, and giving to it power to examine the judgment of the Indian territory courts and determine whether they should not be annulled on account of irregularities was a valid exercise of power. Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 425, 51 L. Ed. 547.

Prohibition against citizenship court.—The question whether the Choctaws and Chickasaw citizenship court was subject to prohibition was left undecided in Ex parte Joins, 191 U. S. 93, 102, 48 L. Ed. 110. See, generally, the title PROHIBITION.

39. Power of Chickasaw Nation to withdraw tribal citizenship.—Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 222, 42 L. Ed. 442.

40. Effect of act taking away tribal citizenship.—Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 223, 42 L. Ed. 442.

Where, by intermarriage with one who was at the time by legislative act a Chickasaw citizen, a person acquired the rights and privileges of a member of that tribe or nation, when that which was the foundation upon which such acquisition rested was taken away by act of the nation, then all those rights and privileges ceased. The tie which bound him to the nation was his wife's citizenship, and when that tie the nation destroyed, it released him. That such was the effect of this legislative act is established by the conduct of the Chickasaw government and all its officials, for they have refused to recognize plaintiff as any longer a member of the Chickasaw Nation, and the courts of that nation have declined to entertain jurisdiction of any suits brought by him against a Chickasaw. Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 222, 42 L. Ed. 442.

41. Right of discoverers as against Indians.—Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 409, 10 L. Ed. 997; Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 713, 9 L. Ed. 283; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 520, 8 L. Ed. 483; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 588, 5 L. Ed. 681; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 48, 8 L. Ed. 25. See United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

Friendly Indians were protected in the possession of the lands they occupied, and were considered as owning them by a perpetual right of possession in the tribe or nation inhabiting them, as their common property, from generation to generation, not as the right of the individuals located on particular spots. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 713, 9 L. Ed. 283.

42. Succession of United States to rights of European nations.—Cherokee

(2) Succession to Rights of Spain upon Acquisition of Florida.—By the acquisition of Florida by the United States, the United States succeeded to the rights of the governments formerly owning that territory, including their rights to property occupied by Indians,[43] except that the United States could not interfere with the rights of property of the Indians guaranteed to them by treaties of the governments from which the United States obtained that territory.[44]

c. Present Nature of Indian Title—(1) General Rule.—Undoubtedly, the right of the Indian nations or tribes to their lands within the United States at present, is a right of possession or occupancy only, the ultimate title in fee in those lands being in the United States.[45] The Indian title as against the United States is merely a title and right to the perpetual occupancy of the land with the privilege of using it in such mode as they see fit until such right of occupation

Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 48, 8 L. Ed. 25; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 516, 8 L. Ed. 483; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 584, 5 L. Ed. 681.

43. Effect of cession of Florida.—Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 713, 9 L. Ed. 283.

44. Acquisition subject to existing rights of Indians.—Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 713, 9 L. Ed. 283.

The Indians who claimed lands in Florida had, under the government of Great Britain and Spain, a right of property in them, which could not be impaired, without a violation of the laws of both, and the sanctity of repeated treaties. These rights, continued to the time of the cession, are guaranteed by the treaty and acts of congress in relation to the Floridas, in perfect conformity with its stipulations and faith, unless the Indians had previously made a binding transfer. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 713, 9 L. Ed. 283.

Spain did not consider the Indian right to be that of mere occupancy and perpetual possession, but a right of property in the lands they held under the guarantee of treaties, which was so highly respected that the government could not acquire it from the Indians except by purchase or by permission of the Indians. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 713, 9 L. Ed. 283.

When the United States acquired and took possession of the Floridas, the treaties which had been made with the Indian tribes, before the acquisition of the territory by Spain and Great Britain, remained in force over all the ceded territory as the laws which regulated the relations with all the Indians who were parties to them, and were binding on the United States, by the obligation they had assumed by the Louisiana treaty, as a supreme law of the land, which was inviolable by the power of congress. They were also binding as the fundamental law of Indian rights, acknowledged by royal orders, and municipal regulations of the province, as the laws and ordinances of Spain in the ceded provinces, which were declared to continue in force, by the proclamation of the governor in taking possession of the provinces; and by the acts of congress, which assured all the inhabitants of protection in their property. It would be an unwarranted construction of these treaties, laws, ordinances and municipal regulations, to decide that the Indians were not to be maintained in the enjoyment of all the rights which they could have enjoyed under either, had the provinces remained under the dominion of Spain; it would be rather a perversion of their spirit, meaning and terms, contrary to the injunction of the law under which the court acts, which makes the stipulations of any treaty, the laws and ordinances of Spain, and these acts of congress, so far as either apply to this case, the standard rules for its decision. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 714, 9 L. Ed. 283.

The treaties with Spain and England, before the acquisition of Florida by the United States, which guaranteed to the Seminole Indians their lands, according to the right of property with which they possessed them, were adopted by the United States; who thus became the protectors of all the rights they had previously enjoyed, or could of right enjoy under Great Britain or Spain, as individuals or nations, by any treaty, to which the United States thus became parties, in 1803. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 714, 9 L. Ed. 283.

Power of alienation by Indians in Florida.—See post, "Sale of Land by Indians," III, A, 3.

45. Nature of Indian title.—Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 8, 44 L. Ed. 49; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 5 L. Ed. 681; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. Ed. 483; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 381, 30 L. Ed. 228; Buttz v. Northern Pac. Railroad, 119 U. S. 55, 67, 30 L. Ed. 330; Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 403, 40 L. Ed. 469; Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 713, 9 L. Ed. 283; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 409, 10 L. Ed. 997; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. Ed. 634; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United has been surrendered to the government.[46] But the right of the Indians to their occupancy is as sacred as that of the United States to the fee.[47]

(2) Reservations.—The rule that Indians have only a right of occupancy in lands in their possession is applicable to land within reservations made expressly for their benefit, as well as to other land in their possession.[48]

(3) Hunting Grounds.—Indian possession or occupation is considered with reference to their habits and modes of life. Hence, their hunting grounds are as much in their actual possession as the cleared fields of the whites, and their right to its exclusive enjoyment in their own way, and for their own purposes, as much respected, until they abandon them, make a cession to the government, or an authorized sale to individuals.[49]

d. Common Right of Members of Tribe in Tribal Property.—The Indian title is in the tribe as a tribe, for the common use and equal benefit of all its members, and not in the individual members.[50]

2. Mode of Extinguishing Indian Title—a. In General.—The Indian title can only be extinguished by the United States with the consent of the Indians.[51]

b. Cession to Government.—The Indian title may be extinguished by a cession of the lands by the Indians to the government.[52]

States, 92 U. S. 760, 23 L. Ed. 645; Doe v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 463, 16 L. Ed. 584; Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 244, 21 L. Ed. 523.

46. Right of use until occupancy surrendered.—Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 403, 40 L. Ed. 469.

47. Right to occupancy as sacred as right of government to fee.—Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517, 526, 24 L. Ed. 440; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 398, 46 L. Ed. 954; Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 742, 23 L. Ed. 634; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 760, 23 L. Ed. 645; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 574, 5 L. Ed. 681; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 48, 8 L. Ed. 25; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 581, 8 L. Ed. 483; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 564, 47 L. Ed. 299.

48. Nature of Indian title within reservations.—Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 403, 40 L. Ed. 469.

When Indian reservations were created, either by treaty or executive order, the Indians held the land by the same character of title, to wit, the right to possess and occupy the lands for the uses and purposes designated. Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 403, 40 L. Ed. 469.

The nature of the Indian title to lands within the state of Georgia, under the reservation for the use of the Indians contained in the proclamation of 1763, was not such as to be absolutely repugnant to seisin in fee upon the part of the state. Such reservation appears to have been a temporary arrangement, suspending for a time the settlement of a county reserved, but did not amount to an alteration of the boundaries of the colony. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 142, 3 L. Ed. 162.

49. Title to hunting grounds.—Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 746, 9 L. Ed. 283.

50. Indian title is in tribe not individuals.—Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 307, 47 L. Ed. 183; Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 207, 39 L. Ed. 120; The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 308, 29 L. Ed. 880; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 48, 8 L. Ed. 25; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 136, 48 L. Ed. 646.

The lands of the Cherokee Nation are not held in individual ownership, but are public lands, though held for the equal benefit of all the members. Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. Ed. 1041; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. Ed. 183; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 136, 48 L. Ed. 646; Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. Ed. 120; The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 308, 29 L. Ed. 880.

Under a patent issued to the Cherokees for their lands, whatever title conveyed was to the Cherokees as a nation, and no title was vested in severalty in any of the Cherokees. Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 207, 39 L. Ed. 120; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 136, 48 L. Ed. 646.

51. Extinguishment of Indian title.—Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 519, 8 L. Ed. 483; Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 742, 23 L. Ed. 634; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 760, 23 L. Ed. 645.

52. Cession to government defeats Indian title.—Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 746, 9 L. Ed. 283; Hot Springs Cases, 92 U. S. 698, 23 L. Ed. 690; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25.

By the treaty of August 24, 1818, the Indian title to the Hot Springs of Arkansas Territory, together with four sec-

c. Abandonment of Occupancy.—The possession, when abandoned by the Indians, attaches itself to the fee without further grant.[53]

b. Authorized Sale.—The Indian title is extinguished upon an authorized sale made by Indians to an individual. Thus, in Florida, prior to its cession to the United States, a sale by Indians of lands occupied by them, which sale was confirmed in the manner required by the Spanish laws, extinguished the Indian title.[54]

3. SALE OF LAND BY INDIANS—a. General Rule.—While Indians may sell their right of occupancy to the United States, which has the fee,[55] it is well settled that they cannot convey their lands to other nations or to private individuals without the consent of the government.[56]

b. Sale by Florida Indians Prior to Cession to United States—(1) Grant Confirmed by Spanish Authorities.—In Florida, prior to its cession to the United States, the Indians could convey their lands but only in the manner pointed out by the Spanish laws, which made it necessary that the deed be presented to the governor for confirmation.[57]

(2) Construction of Confirmation.—The confirmation is not to be construed tions of land including said springs, was extinguished by cession to the United States by the Quapaws. Hot Springs Cases, 92 U. S. 698, 23 L. Ed. 690.

53. Effect of abandonment of occupancy.—Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517, 526, 24 L. E. 440; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 398, 46 L. Ed. 954; Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 746, 9 L. Ed. 283; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 8 L. Ed. 547; Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. 87, 15 L. Ed. 279.

In the case of the United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 8 L. Ed. 547, the lands granted had been in the possession and occupation of the Alachua Indians, and the centre of the tract was an Indian town of that name; but the land had been abandoned, and before any grant was made by the intendant, a report was made by the attorney and surveyor general, on a reference to them, finding the fact of abandonment; on which, it was decreed, that the land had reverted to and become annexed to the royal domain. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 9 L. Ed. 283.

Under the act of March 3, 1817, which was passed to carry into effect the treaty of August 9, 1814, with the Creek Indians, and which provided in the 6th section that no land reserved to a Creek warrior should be offered for sale by the register of the land office, unless specially directed by the secretary of the treasury, the secretary was authorized to decide whether or not the Indian had abandoned the land. If abandoned, it became forfeited to the United States. Hence, where such a reservation was offered for sale, and a patent isued for it, the presumption is that the secretary had decided the fact of abandonment, and issued the order for the sale. Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. 87, 15 L. Ed. 279.

54. Authorized sale to individuals defeats Indian title.—Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 746, 9 L. Ed. 283.

55. Power of Indians to sell to United States.—Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 244, 21 L. Ed. 523; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 381, 30 L. Ed. 228; Doe v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 463, 16 L. Ed. 584; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 603, 5 L. Ed. 681.

Originally the Indians could sell to the government of the discoverer, but they could not sell to any other governments or their subjects, as the government of the discoverer acquired, by virtue of their discovery, the exclusive pre-emption right to purchase, and the right to exclude the subjects of all other governments, and even their own, from acquiring title to the lands. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 244, 21 L. Ed. 523.

56. Sale to individuals.—Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 603, 5 L. Ed. 681; Doe v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 463, 16 L. Ed. 584; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 381, 30 L. Ed. 228; Libby v. Clark, 118 U. S. 250, 30 L. Ed. 133; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 48, 8 L. Ed. 25; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 544, 8 L. Ed. 483; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 381, 30 L. Ed. 228; Buttz v. Northern Pac. Railroad, 119 U. S. 55, 67, 30 L. Ed. 330; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 8, 44 L. Ed. 49.

A title to lands, under grant to private individuals, made by Indian tribes or nations northwest of the river Ohio, in 1773 and 1775, cannot be recognized in the courts of the United States. Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 5 L. Ed. 681.

57. Conveyance by Florida Indians prior to cession.—Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 9 L. Ed. 283; Chouteau v. Molony, 16 How. 203, 14 L. Ed. 905; United States v. Rillieux, 14 How. 189, 14 L. Ed. 381; United States v. Gusman, 14 How. 193, 14 L. Ed. 340; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 28 L. Ed. 321.

A claim to lands in East Florida, the title to which was derived from grants by the Creek and Seminole Indians, ratified as giving greater rights than those intended to be conveyed by the Indians.[58]

(3) Proof of Confirmation.—The confirmation may be shown by a copy of the deed of the governor,[59] or may be presumed to have been made, from the facts established in the case.[60]

4. GRANTS BY UNITED STATES TO INDIANS—a. Right of Indians to Purchase.—The Indian tribes are capable of taking as owners in fee simple lands by purchase where the United States in form, and for a valuable and adequate consideration, so sell them to them. Such sale is properly made by a treaty.[61]

b. Construction of Grant.—A treaty ceding to the United States all the right, title and interest of the Indians in certain lands, and by which the government agrees to set apart a tract of land described by metes and bounds for the use by the local authorities of Spain, before the cession of Florida by Spain to the United States, confirmed. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 9 L. Ed. 283.

58. Confirmation not to be construed as broader than grant.—Chouteau v. Molony, 16 How. 203, 14 L. Ed. 905.

A purchase from the Indians, whilst the province was under French authority, conveyed no title unless sanctioned by that authority. United States v. Rillieux, 14 How. 189, 14 L. Ed. 381; United States v. Gusman, 14 How. 193, 14 L. Ed. 340.

Where a mining privilege had been granted by the Indians and confirmed by the Spanish authorities, it was held that the grant was not a complete title, making the land private property, and therefore excepting it from what was conveyed to the United States by the treaty of Paris of April 30, 1803, as the Spanish governor intended only to confirm such rights as had been previously received from the Indians, and the words of the grant from the Indians did not show any intention to sell more than a mining privilege, especially as the grant, if construed as contended for by the grantee, included a large Indian village, which it was unreasonable to suppose that the Indians intended to sell. Chouteau v. Molony, 16 How. 203, 14 L. Ed. 905.

Where Indians sold their lands to an individual, and the Spanish governor of the province approved the sale, and granted the land, but directed the purchaser to apply to him in order that a complete title might be issued to him, it was held that the words "a complete title" referred only to the instruments which constituted evidence of title, and not to the estate or interest thereby conveyed. Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 416, 28 L. Ed. 321.

59. Copy of confirmation as evidence.—Where it was objected by the United States that the original acts of the confirmation of the Indian sales were not produced, and that the copies in evidence were not legal proof of such acts, it was held that the objection was not well founded in fact or law, where the original Indian deeds were produced by the agent of the United States, from the public archives, and were before the court, and the deeds of confirmation were made according to the rules of the civil law, adopted by Spain, and in force in Florida and Cuba. The original is a record, and preserved in the office, which cannot be taken out; a testimonio or copy is delivered to the party, which is deemed to be, and is certified as, an original paper, having all the effect of one, in all countries governed by the civil law. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 732, 9 L. Ed. 283.

60. Presumption of confirmation.—Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 715, 9 L. Ed. 283.

Where an Indian sale was confirmed, with more than usual solemnity and publicity at a public council and convention of the Indians, comformable to treaties, to which the king was a party, and which the United States adopted, and the grant was known to both parties to the treaty of cession, and the United States were not deceived by the purchase, which they knew was subject to the claim of the plaintiff, or those from whom he purchased, it was held that even if there could be a doubt that the evidence in the record did not establish the fact of a royal license or assent to the purchase, as a matter of specific and judicial belief, it would be presumed as a matter of law, arising from the facts and circumstances of the case, which were admitted or unquestioned. Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 715, 9 L. Ed. 283.

61. Right of Indians to take by purchase from government.—Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

The treaty of the 29th of December, 1835, between the United States and the Cherokee Indians, was not made in virtue of the act of 28th of May, 1830, authorizing an "exchange" of lands west of the Mississippi, for the territory claimed or occupied by any tribe of Indians within the limits of any state or territory, but was made under the treaty-making power vested by the constitution in the president and senate. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

The treaty of December 29, 1835, between the United States and the Cherokee Indians made a sale in fee simple to the Cherokee Indians of the lands west of the Mississippi, known as "the Cherokee neutral lands," and the fact and validity of the sale have been recognized by con-of the Indians as a permanent home for them, in fee simple, patents to be issued by the government, operates as a present grant of land to the Indians.[62]

c. Forfeiture of Lands by Indians for Breach of Conditions.—The lands granted may be forfeited to the United States for breach of a condition subsequent to the removal of the Indians thereto within a certain time.[63] But the cession of the lands by the Indians to the United States to be sold by the government for the benefit of the Indians does not amount to an "abandonment" of the lands,[64] and even if it does, the acceptance of the lands by the United States in trust, to sell them for the benefit of the Indians, condones the breach.[65] The United States alone can take advantage of the breach of condition in a grant to the Indians.[66] While the government may declare a forfeiture for breach of condition subsequent, it has no power by simple executive action to re-enter, take possession of the lands and sell them.[67]

5. Cession of Lands by Indians to United States—a. Property Passing.—Where a cession of lands by Indians purports to "reserve" to the United States a tract of land outside of the limits of that ceded to the United States, the word "reserve" will be construed as equivalent to "set apart" and the cession will not be limited to its general boundaries but will be extended so as to embrace such special tract.[68]

b. Whether Cession Absolute or in Trust.—In order for a cession of lands to amount to a trust, the purpose to create the trust must be definite and clear.[69]

gress through appropriation made in execution of the treaty. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

62. Grant by United States to Indian tribes.—New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 927.

The treaty of 1830 with the Choctaws provided for a grant of land whose boundaries should conform to the treaty of 1825, so far as such land should lie within the limits of the United States. The Choctaw Nation, by accepting the grant made in pursuance of the treaty, was estopped to claim, under the treaty of 1825, territory not within the United States. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

63. Preach of condition as to removal of Indians to land granted.—New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 927.

64. Abandonment by Indians.—Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

The question cannot be raised whether the lands reverted to the United States in pursuance of a condition inserted in the patent, that the lands should revert to the government, if the Cherokees abandoned them; assuming that such a condition was lawful and of any effect, a matter not conceded. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

65. Condonation of breach of conditions.—Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

66. Who may take advantage of breach of condition.—Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

67. Mode of declaring and enforcing forfeiture.—New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 927.

Where land is conveyed to Indians by treaty with a condition subsequent forfeiting the grant in case the Indians fail to remove thereto within five years, in order to justify a forfeiture it must appear that the repudiation or refusal to remove was as formal, broad and unequivocal as the acceptance. The government should make a formal tender of performance and give notice to the Indians that if they refuse to emigrate they will lose their rights under the treaty. New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 927.

Rights of Indians to claim lands conveyed to them by treaty containing a condition subsequent is not lost by abondonment where it appears that the government did not consider a claim abandoned and the Indians intended no abandonment. New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 927.

68. Property passing.—In the treaty of the 25th of October, 1805, by which the Cherokees ceded to the United States certain lands, on the north bank of the Tennessee River above the mouth of the Highwassee, and in which there was a stipulation reserving "three other square miles * * * on the north bank of the Tennessee, opposite to and below the mouth of the Highwassee," for a garrison, the reservation for a garrison means what it says, and the land reserved for that purpose lies below and not above the mouth of the Highwassee, where the United States have placed the garrison. Meigs v. McClung, 9 Cranch 11, 3 L. Ed. 639.

69. Purpose of creating trust to be clear.—United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

The fact that the representatives of the United States present when an Indian treaty was made stated to the Indians that a portion of their lands would be set apart for the settlement of friendly tribes, and that no white person would be permitted to reside thereon, does not show

Thus, a cession is not to be held to create a trust for the purpose of settling Indians on the ceded lands, because cessions from other Indians have been held to create a trust,[70] or because of a recital in a subsequent act of congress that it had that effect, where a still later act saves the right of the government to show that there was no trust,[71] or merely because if no trust is held to have been created the government will acquire the lands at less than their full value.[72]

c. Cession in Trust to Sell for Benefit of Indians—(1) Validity of Cession and Sale.—The Indians, owning lands in fee simple by purchase from the government, may cede it to the United States in trust that the latter may sell them and hold the proceeds in trust for the Indians,[73] and a sale by the government in pursuance of the treaty of cession is valid.[74]

(2) Mode and Sufficiency of Sale.—Where the government, having entered into a treaty stipulation to sell at public auction certain lands for the benefit of the resident Indians, sells such lands at a private sale, it is guilty of a violation of its trust; but, if such lands are sold at the statutory price, it will be inferred, in the absence of proof of the value of the land, that the Indians in reality suffered no damage by such action.[75] that a treaty from the Indians to the United States made at that time, purporting to cede lands absolutely to the United States, in fact ceded them in trust for the settlement of Indians. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

The cession by the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations by the treaty of April 28, 1866, of the lands known as the leased district to the United States in consideration of a sum of money paid to them by the government, passed an absolute title to the United States, and the claim of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians that the United States took the lease in trust to be used only for the settlement of Indians, and that on the abandonment of the trust, lands reverted to them, is without foundation. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

70. Where other cessions have been held to create trusts.—United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

The fact that the interpretation placed by the government upon a treaty with the Indians, if adopted, would result in a less liberal policy to the Indians with whom it is made, than with other tribes with which the government has concluded treaties, does not authorize the court to give the treaty a construction other than that justified by its plain words. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

71. Recital in subsequent act of congress as to trust.—United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

The fact that an act of congress appropriating money for the Indians recites that a cession of land by the Indians to the government was in trust for the purpose of settling Indians thereon, does not prevent the government from showing that the cession was absolute, especially where a subsequent act of congress provided that nothing in the original act or in that, shall prevent the government from showing that the cession was absolute and not in trust. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

72. Where government would acquire lands at less than value.—United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

The fact that the interpretation of the treaty claimed by the government to be the correct one would, if adopted, put the government in the position of having acquired lands at a price far below their real value, does not authorize the court to depart from the plain words of the treaty. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

73. Cession by Indians to United States for benefit of Indians.—Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

The cession to the United States by the Cherokees, in the treaty of June 19th, 1866, of the said neutral lands owned by them as aforesaid, in trust that the United States should sell them and hold the proceeds for the benefit of the said Indians, was a lawful cession and trust, and in accordance with the policy and practice of the government. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

74. Sale of Indian lands, by government acting as trustee.—Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

The supplemental article of April 27th, 1868, to the already mentioned treaty of June 19th, 1866, was valid; and a sale and patent made pursuant to its purpose passed a good title, though the treaty did not convey, proprio vigore, the lands meant to be sold, though it required officers of the United States to do certain acts before the sale could be consummated, and though the contract of sale was signed before the treaty was promulgated. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523.

75. Mode and sufficiency of sale.—United States v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 180, 39 L. Ed. 114.

d. Right of Indians to Compensation for Lands Ceded in Excess of Those Allotted.—Indian tribes ceding land to the United States, upon an agreement by the latter to allot each member of tribes or bands a certain quantity of land out of that ceded, are entitled to compensation for the land ceded in excess of that allotted.[76]

e. Effect of Cession on Rights of Individual Indians.—Treaties of cession from an Indian nation to the United States conveys not only the common property of the nation, but the interest therein of each of its members.[77]

f. Actions by Indians with Respect to Ceded Lands—(1) Consent of United States to Be Sued.—A suit by or on behalf of an Indian tribe against the United States controls the disposition, and for an account of the proceeds of the sales of, lands conveyed by the Indians to the United States under the act of January 14, 1889, cannot be maintained, where the United States has not consented to be sued with respect thereto.[78]

(2) Decree in Action for Compensation for Lands.—In an action by a tribe of Indians against the United States to recover compensation for land ceded to the government in excess of that allotted to the tribes, upon the cession, the decree should not fix the amount of the price to be recovered per acre,[79] nor require a release by the tribe of their claim to all lands within the United States.[80]

6. RESERVATIONS TO INDIANS—a. Mode of Creating Reservation.—In order to create a reservation it is not necessary that there should be a formal cession or a formal act setting apart a particular tract. It is enough that from what has been done there results a certain defined tract appropriated to certain purposes.[81]

76. Compensation for land ceded in excess of that allotted.—United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

The Wichita and Affiliated Bands of Indians who ceded their lands to the United States, the latter agreeing to allot to each member of the tribe or band 160 acres of the land, are entitled to compensation from the government for the land in excess of that required to be allotted by the agreement. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

77. Effect of cession by Indian tribe on individual property rights.—The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 308, 29 L. Ed. 880.

78. Indian tribes cannot sue United States without consent.—Naganab v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 473, 50 L. Ed. 1113, distinguishing Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 46 L. Ed. 954. See, also, Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. Ed. 935. Generally, as to suits against the United States, see the title UNITED STATES.

79. Decree in action for lands in excess of those allotted should not fix price per acre.—In an action by the Wichita and Affiliated Bands of Indians against the United States, in order to determine their rights under the treaty ceding their lands to the government, the decree should declare that they are entitled to compensation in money for such of the lands as are not needed in making the allotment of 160 acres to each member of the tribes, as required by the act of March 2, 1885, leaving the amount to be fixed upon such evidence as may be adduced by the parties, but not in any event to exceed the limitation of $1.25 per acre as prescribed by congress. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

80. Condition of decree requiring tribe to release all claims.—In an action by the Wichita and Affiliated Bands of Indians, to determine their rights with respect to lands ceded to the government and to compensation on account of such lands as are not needed to make the allotment of 160 acres of lands to each member of the tribe or band, it would be improper to make it a condition of the decree, recognizing the rights of the Indians to compensation for the surplus lands, that they execute a release to the United States of all right, title, interest and claim of every nature whatsoever in and to any lands within the limits of the United States, except those allotted to them, as the court of claims could not make any decree in reference to claims not referred to it by congress. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. Ed. 291.

81. Mode of creating reservations.—Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 390, 46 L. Ed. 954; Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 40 L. Ed. 469.

Where the Indian occupation is confined by the treaty to a certain specified tract, that becomes in effect, an Indian reservation. Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 40 L. Ed. 469; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 390, 46 L. Ed. 954.

"If the reservation was free from objection by the government, it was as effectual as though the particular tract to be used was specially designated by boundaries in the treaty itself. The reservation thus created stood precisely in

b. Effect of Reservation of "Hunting Grounds."—Where hunting grounds was reserved to Indians by a treaty of cession, at a period when the principal occupation of the Indians, and their land was more used for that purpose than for any other, it could not, nevertheless, be supposed that any intention existed of restricting the full use of the lands they reserved. To the United States, it could be a matter of no concern, whether their whole territory was devoted to hunting grounds, or whether an occasional village and an occasional cornfield interrupted, and gave some variety to the scene.[82]

c. Reservation as Notice to Third Persons.—A treaty reserving to a tribe of Indians so much of a tract of land as they have been accustomed to use and frequent is notice that a part would be retained by the government, and that the whole might be, for the use of the Indians, and this purpose and stipulation of the United States could not be defeated by the action of any officer of the land department.[83]

7. TIMBER RIGHTS—a. Growing Timber on Indian Lands—(1) Right to Cut—(a) For Purpose of Improving Land.—Indians may cut timber standing upon land occupied by them for the purpose of improving or cultivating the land.[84]

(b) For Purpose of Sale.—But timber on Indian lands cannot be cut by them for the purposes of sale. The Indians having only the right of occupancy, the presumption is against their authority to cut and sell the timber.[85]

(2) Action for Timber Unlawfully Cut.—Property in timber unlawfully cut does not pass from the United States by severance, and they may maintain an action of replevin against the purchaser for unlawful cutting and carrying it away,[86] and in such case the burden of proof as to whether the cutting was the same category as other Indian reservations, whether established for general or limited uses, and whether made by the direct authority of congress in the ratification of a treaty or indirectly through the medium of a duly-authorized executive officer." Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 390, 46 L. Ed. 954; Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 40 L. Ed. 469.

82. Reservation of hunting grounds.—Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 518, 8 L. Ed. 483.

83. Reservation as notice.—United States v. Carpenter, 111 U. S. 347, 28 L. Ed. 451.

84. Cutting timber to improve land.—United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; United States v. Loughrey, 172 U. S. 206, 215, 43 L. Ed. 420; Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 498, 40 L. Ed. 231; Wooden-Ware Co. v. United States, 106 U. S. 432, 27 L. Ed. 230; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis, 162 U. S. 366, 376, 40 L. Ed. 1002.

Timber standing on lands occupied by the Indians cannot be cut by them for the purpose of sale alone; though when it is in their possession having been cut for the purpose of improving the land—that is to say, better adapting it to convenient occupation—in other words, when the timber has been cut incidentally to the improvement, and not cut for the purpose of getting and selling it—there is no restriction on the sale of it. United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210.

This right of use and occupancy by the Indians is unlimited. They may exercise it at their discretion. If the lands in a state of nature are not in a condition for profitable use, they may be made so. If desired for the purposes of agriculture, they may be cleared of their timber to such an extent as may be reasonable under the circumstances. The timber taken off by the Indians in such clearing may be sold by them. But to justify any cutting of the timber, except for use upon the premises, as timber or its product, it must be done in good faith for the improvement of the land. The improvement must be the principal thing, and the cutting of the timber the incident only. Any cutting beyond this would be waste and unauthorized. United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 593, 22 L. Ed. 210.

85. Cutting timber for purposes of sale.—United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; United States v. Loughrey, 172 U. S. 206, 215, 43 L. Ed. 420; Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 498, 40 L. Ed. 231; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis, 162 U. S. 366, 376, 40 L. Ed. 1002; Wooden-Ware Co. v. United States, 106 U. S. 432, 27 L. Ed. 230; Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 284, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

86. Action by United States for unlawfully cutting.—United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210; United States v. Loughrey, 172 U. S. 206, 215, 43 L. Ed. 420; Wooden-Ware Co. v. United States, 106 U. S. 432, 27 L. Ed. 230; Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 498, 40 L. Ed. 231; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis, 162 U. S. 366, 376, 40 L. Ed. 1002; Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517, 526, 24 L. Ed. 440; United States v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 191 U. S. 84, 91, 48 L. Ed. 106.

The United States may maintain an action for unlawfully cutting and carrying lawful is on the purchaser.[87]

b. Dead Timber on Indian Reservations—(1) In General.—By statute, Indians residing on reservations or allotments may be authorized to cut, remove, sell or otherwise dispose of dead timber, standing or fallen, on such reservation or allotment, for the sole benefit of such Indians.[88]

(2) Contract for Cutting and Sale—(a) Necessity for Contract and Approval by Government.—Under this statute, dead timber can only be cut and sold by Indians in pursuance of contracts entered into with the Indians for that purpose and approved by the United States.[89]

(b) Construction of Contract—aa. Contract for Certain Amount, "More or Less."—A contract approved by the government for cutting a certain amount of timber "more or less" will be given a narrow construction, and will be held to authorize only such accidental or immaterial variations in quantity from that specified therein, as might naturally occur in connection with the transaction.[90]

bb. Construction of Contract by Parties as Binding Government.—The fact that the parties contracting for the cutting and the government agents who superintended the cutting construed the contract as authorizing the cutting of an away timber from the public lands. United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210.

The Indians having only a right of occupancy in the lands, the presumption is against their authority to cut and sell the timber. Every purchaser from them is charged with notice of this presumption. To maintain his title it is incumbent on him to show that the timber was rightfully severed from the land. United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. Ed. 210.

87. Burden of proof as to right to cut timber.—United States v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 191 U. S. 84, 91, 48 L. Ed. 106.

88. Dead timber on Indian reservation.—Act of Feburary 16, 1899; Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

The act of congress passed February 16, 1889, 25 Stat. 673, provides: "That the president of the United States may from year to year in his discretion, under such regulations as he may prescribe, authorize the Indians residing on reservations or allotments, the fee to which remains in the United States, to fell, cut, remove, sell or otherwise dispose of the dead timber standing or fallen, on such reservation or allotment, for the sole benefit of such Indian or Indians. But whenever there is reasonable cause to believe that such timber has been killed, burned, girdled or otherwise injured for the purpose of securing its sale under this act, then in that case such authority shall not be granted." Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 284, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

No general authority is given to Indians to cut timber upon their reservations. The act contemplates that the authority shall be temporary only, "from year to year," and it is further limited to "dead timber standing or fallen," and that it shall be disposed of solely for the benefit of the Indian or Indians to whom the authority is given. Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 284, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

The object of the statute, as interpreted by the regulations, was evidently to permit deserving Indians, who had no other sufficient means of support, to cut for a single season a limited quantity of dead and down timber under the superintendence of a properly qualified white man, and to use the proceeds for their support in exact proportion to the scale of logs banked by each, provided that ten per cent of the gross proceeds should go to the stumpage or poor fund of the tribe, from which the old, sick and otherwise helpless might be supported. Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 285, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

The rights of the government to the unimpaired value of the land and to the standing timber were carefully guarded by the proviso that no green or growing timber should be cut, and no live trees damaged, so as to cause them to die, that they might be marketed under the provisions of the act. Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 286, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

There was no intention on the part of congress or the president to authorize promiscuous logging operations, or the felling of live standing timber, or that a few Indians should be permitted to monopolize the proceeds, but that they should be divided among the individuals of the tribe in proportion to the scale of the logs banked by each. Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 286, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

89. Contracts for cutting approved by government.—Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

90. Effect of contract authorizing cutting of certain amount more or less.—Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 46 L. Ed. 1164. See the title VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

Evidence to show the amount of dead timber on the reservation is immaterial in an action for cutting more than the amount largely in excess of that called for by the contract is not binding upon the government.[91]

(3) Damages against Purchaser, Where Excess Cut.—Where the timber is cut in excess of the amount called for by the contracts approved by the government, the measure of damages is the value to the government of the timber after it was cut and banked upon the water near where it is cut,[92] without deduction of the part of the original price paid by the purchaser to the Indian department for the purpose of creating a fund for helpless Indians.[93]

8. WHO MAY SHARE IN TRIBAL PROPERTY—a. Bands or Tribes Entitled to Share—(1) Property of Cherokees—(a) Lands and Common Property.—The members of the Cherokee Nation, whether east or west of the Mississippi, are entitled to share in the lands of the Cherokee Nation west of the Mississippi.[94] But the Cherokees of North Carolina who dissolved their connection with other nations and refused to remove with the other members of the Cherokee tribe, to the lands ceded to the nation west of the Mississippi, are not entitled to an interest in the common property or funds of the Cherokee Nation.[95] Thus they contracts approved by the government authorized to be cut. Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

91. Government not bound by construction of contract by parties.—Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

"It is unnecessary to inquire what excuses may be made by these officers for thus indirectly approving the construction put upon the contracts by the parties interested, since they could not bind the government in this particular. With the contracts before them they had but one duty, and that was to see that they were honestly and faithfully carried out according to their spirit and letter. No authority had been given them to extend the contracts either as to the quantity or quality of timber to be cut. In fact, they were placed in charge of the operations for the express purpose of seeing that there should be no violation of the contracts in these particulars. They, as well as the parties thereto, were equally bound by its provisions. No discretion had been given them to waive or alter the contracts in any particular. No conduct of theirs can estop the government from asserting its rights to recover for timber cut beyond the quantity and quality specified in the contract." Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 291, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

92. Measure of damages.—Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 46 L. Ed. 1164; Wooden-Ware Co. v. United States, 106 U. S. 432, 27 L. Ed. 230.

93. Right to deduct amount paid to fund for helpless Indians.—This is as much a part of the original price as that paid the Indians for cutting, and neither is to be deducted. Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 299, 46 L. Ed. 1164.

94. Who entitled to share in Western Cherokee lands.—United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 427, 37 L. Ed. 509.

The ownership of land west of the Mississippi by the Western Cherokees was put at rest by the treaty of 1846, which provided that such lands were for the use of the whole Cherokee Nation, including the Eastern as well as the Western Cherokees. United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 427, 37 L. Ed. 509.

95. Right to share in property or funds of Cherokees.—The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 308, 29 L. Ed. 880.

The Cherokees in North Carolina dissolved their connection with their nation when they refused to accompany the body of it on its removal, and they have had no separate political organization since. Whatever union they have had among themselves has been merely a social or business one. Nor is the band, organized as it now is, the successor of any organization recognized by any treaty or law of the United States. The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 309, 29 L. Ed. 880.

If Indians in that state or in any other state east of the Mississippi wish to enjoy the benefits of the common property of the Cherokee Nation, in whatever form it may exist, they must, as held by the court of claims, comply with the constitution and laws of the Cherokee Nation and be readmitted to citizenship as there provided. They cannot live out of its territory, evade the obligations and burdens of citizenship, and at the same time enjoy the benefits of the funds and common property of the nation. Those funds and that property were dedicated by the constitution of the Cherokees, and were intended by the treaties with the United States, for the benefit of the united nation, and not in any respect for those who had separated from it and become aliens to their nation. The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 311, 29 L. Ed. 880.

are not entitled to share in the commuted annuity fund of the Cherokee Nation,[96] nor to share in the proceeds of the sale of western lands.[97]

(b) Fund Allowed for Removal of Cherokees.—The Eastern Cherokees,[98] and the eastern band of Cherokees residing in North Carolina,[99] are entitled to share in the fund allowed by the United States to the Cherokee Nation for the express purpose of removing to lands set apart for the nation west of the Mississippi. But the Old Settlers or Western Cherokees were not entitled to share therein.[1]

(2) Annuities Granted to Tribe Which Has Separated.—Where an annuity was granted to an Indian tribe which had separated, it was held that both bands were entitled to share therein in proportion to their respective numbers.[2]

b. Individuals Entitled to Share in Tribal Funds.—The question as to what individual Indians are entitled to share in a fund allowed by the court of claims to a tribe or band is one to be dealt with by the authorities or the government in distributing the fund and not by the court of claims.[3]

9. Mineral and Oil Lands.—The act of June 28, 1898, providing for the

96. Right to share in commuted annuity fund.—The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 308, 29 L. Ed. 880.

97. Right to share in proceeds of western lands.—The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 308, 29 L. Ed. 880.

The claim by the Cherokees of North Carolina to a share of the commuted annuity fund of $214,000, and of the fund created by sales of lands west of the Mississippi ceded to the Cherokee Nation, resting, as it does, upon the designation in the treaties of the lands originally possessed by the Cherokees and ceded to the United States, or subsequently acquired by them from the United States, as "the common property of the nation," or as held for the "common use and benefit," of the Cherokee people, has no substantial foundation. The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 308, 29 L. Ed. 880.

98. Right of Eastern Cherokees to share in funds awarded Cherokees as expense of removal.—United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. Ed. 949.

99. Right of eastern band of Cherokees to share in removal fund.—United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. Ed. 949.

Under the acts of July 1, 1902, and March 3, 1903, which confer jurisdiction on the court of claims to adjudicate any claim the Cherokee tribe, or any bond thereof, may have against the United States, arising out of treaties, the Eastern and Emigrant Cherokees, numbering about 4,500 persons, more or less, all Eastern Emigrant Cherokees, residing in North Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee, together with about 1,500 emigrants, portions of their various families, gone west, nearly all of whom have been recognized as citizens, and who compose a large portion of those persons heretofore known as the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians of North Carolina, and others of the same class, whose names, or those of whose ancestors, may be found on the rolls of 1835 and 1838, are only entitled to receive the per capita payment with the Eastern Cherokees out of the fund awarded the Indians for the removal of the Eastern Cherokees west of the Mississippi. United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 132, 50 L. Ed. 949.

1. Right of Western Cherokees to share in fund allowed for removal of Indians.—United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. Ed. 949.

2. Annuities granted to tribe which has separated.—The annuity of $2,000 for twenty years granted by the last clause of the supplementary treaty of September 27, 1833, with the Pottawatomie Indians, is distributable between the Indians who went west under the provision of the main treaty and those who remained in Michigan under the supplementary treaty, in proportion to their respective numbers. Phineas Pam-To-Pee v. United States, 148 U. S. 691, 37 L. Ed. 613.

The treaty of September 26, 1833, with the Pottawatomie Indians and the supplementary treaty of September 27, 1833, are substantially one, and the annuity given thereby to the Indians is distributable among both classes, those remaining east and those removing west, a just proportion thereof to each. Phineas Pam-To-Pee v. United States, 148 U. S. 691, 37 L. Ed. 613.

3. Individuals entitled to share in fund awarded by court of claims.—Phineas Pam-To-Pee v. United States, 148 U. S. 691, 37 L. Ed. 613; Pam-To-Pee v. United States, 187 U. S. 371, 382, 47 L. Ed. 221.

The question as to the individual Indians who are entitled to participate in the fund allowed by the court of claims to the Pottawatomie Indians of Michigan and Indiana for their just proportion of the amount due the Indians under the treaty of September 26, 1833, and the supplementary treaty thereto of September 27, 1833, is one to be dealt with by the authorities of the government when they come to distribute the fund, and cannot be passed upon by the court of claims.

allotments of Indian lands among the members of the tribe and providing that oil, coal, asphalt and mineral deposits on the lands of any tribe are reserved to the tribe, and authorizing the secretary of the interior to provide for the leasing of such lands, the rents and royalties to be paid into the United States treasury for the benefit of the tribe, is valid.[4] Parties desiring to lease oil and mineral lands are not necessarily parties to a suit by the Cherokee Nation against the secretary of the interior to enjoin him from making the lease.[5]

10. Intrusion on Indian Lands.—It is competent for a state to prohibit and make unlawful, the settlement of any persons other than Indians on lands of Indian tribes within the state.[6] Congress has made it unlawful for any person, not an Indian, to settle on land belonging, secured, or granted by treaty, to an Indian tribe.[7] The pueblo Indians in New Mexico are not an "Indian tribe" within the meaning of the act.[8]

B. Individual Property Rights—1. Power of Indians to Acquire and Hold Property.—In Mexico, Indians are competent to take and hold real property.[9]

Phineas Pam-To-Pee v. United States, 148 U. S. 691, 37 L. Ed. 613.

The 5th article of the treaty of 1846 with the Cherokees provided that the per capita allowance to be given to the Western Cherokees should be held in trust by the United States, the individuals entitled thereto to be ascertained by a committee of five appointed by the president from the Western Cherokees, and an agent of the United States. It was held that under the act of February 25, 1889, conferring jurisdiction upon the court of claims to ascertain the amount due to the Western Cherokees, this clause of the treaty should be followed in making the per capita distribution. United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 427, 37 L. Ed. 509.

Jurisdiction of court of claims to determine whether judgment in favor of tribe has been properly executed. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1034.

4. Mineral and oil lands.—Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. Ed. 183. See the title MINES AND MINERALS.

The court is not concerned with the question whether the act of June 28, 1898, and the proposed action thereunder, which is complained of, is or is not wise, and calculated to operate beneficially to the interests of the Cherokees. The power existing in congress to administer upon and guard the tribal property, and the power being political and administrative in its nature, the manner of its exercise is a question within the province of the legislative branch to determine, and is not one for the courts. Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 308, 47 L. Ed. 183.

5. Parties to suit to enjoin lease.—Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. Ed. 183. See the title PARTIES.

6. Power of state to prohibit settlement on Indian lands.—State of New York v. Dibble, 21 How. 366, 16 L. Ed. 149.

As to forfeiture under Indian laws, of buildings erected within Indian country, see post, "Effect of Indian Laws," IV, C, 2.

A statute of the state of New York, making it unlawful for any persons other than Indians to settle or reside upon any lands belonging to or occupied by any nation or tribe of Indians within that state, and providing for the summary ejectment of such persons, is not in conflict with the constitution of the United States, or any treaty, or act of congress, and the proceedings under it did not deprive the persons thus removed of property or rights secured to them by any treaty or act of congress. State of New York v. Dibble, 21 How. 366, 16 L. Ed. 149.

7. Act of congress prohibits settlement on Indian lands.—United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 24 L. Ed. 295; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 519, 8 L. Ed. 483.

Citizens of the United States are not permitted to encroach on the Cherokee country, and intruders thereon are subject to punishment. Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 519, 8 L. Ed. 483.

8. Land of pueblo Indians not lands of "Indian tribe."—A settled upon land belonging to the Indians of the village or pueblo of Toas, in New Mexico. Held: 1. That he was not liable under the acts of congress which prohibit a settlement by any person on land belonging, secured, or granted by treaty with the United States, to any Indian tribe. 2. That they have a complete title to their land, and are not an Indian tribe within the meaning of those acts. United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 24 L. Ed. 295.

9. Power of Indians to hold lands in Mexico.—United States v. Ritchie, 17 How. 525, 15 L. Ed. 236.

The plan of Iguala, adopted by the revolutionary government of Mexico, in 1821, and all the successive public documents and decrees of that country, recognized an equality amongst all the inhabitants, whether Europeans, Africans, or Indians; and the decree of 1824, providing for colonization, recognized the citizenship of the Indians, and their right

2. Allotment of Lands to Indians—a. Persons Entitled to Allotments—(1) Power of Congress to Provide for Ascertaining.—Congress has power to provide a method for determining membership in the five civilized tribes, and for ascertaining the citizenship thereof preliminary to a division of the property of the tribe among its members.[10]

(2) White Persons Married to Indians.—White person residing in the Cherokee Nation, who became Cherokee citizens by intermarriage with Cherokees by blood, prior to November 1, 1875, are equally interested in and have equal per capita rights with Cherokee Indians by blood in the lands constituting the public domain of the Cherokee Nation, and are entitled to be enrolled in order that they may share in the allotment.[11] But white persons who intermarried with Cherokees subsequent to the passage of the Cherokee act of November 1, 1875, which provided that intermarriage with Cherokees should not give a right in the lands or funds of the Indians,[12] or white persons intermarrying with the Delaware or Shawnee citizens of the Cherokee Nation, whether married prior or subsequent to November 1, 1875,[13] or white men who have married Cherokee women, and abandoned them,[14] or white persons who intermarried with Cherokees by blood and who subsequently, being left a widow or widower by the death of the Cherokee wife or husband, intermarried with persons not of Cherokee blood,[15] have no part or share in the Cherokee lands or funds, and are not entitled to be enrolled for participation in the allotment thereof.

to hold land. United States v. Ritchie, 17 How. 525, 15 L. Ed. 236.

10. Power of congress to provide for ascertainment of persons entitled to share.—Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 307, 47 L. Ed. 183; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. Ed. 1041.

"The constitutionality of these acts in respect of the determination of citizenship cannot be successfully assailed on the ground of the impairment or destruction of vested rights. The lands and moneys of these tribes are public lands and public moneys, and are not held in individual ownership, and the assertion by any particular applicant that his right therein is so vested as to preclude inquiry into his status involves a contradiction in terms." Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 306, 47 L. Ed. 183; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. Ed. 1041.

11. White persons married to Cherokees prior to 1875.—Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. Ed. 96.

To what property interest attaches.—White persons residing in the Cherokee Nation, who became Cherokee citizens under the Cherokee laws by intermarriage with the Cherokees by blood prior to the 1st of November, 1875, acquired no rights and had no interest or share in any funds belonging to the Cherokee Nation except where such funds were derived by lease, sale or otherwise from the lands of the Cherokee Nation conveyed to it by the United States by the patent of December, 1838. Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 79, 51 L. Ed. 96.

12. White persons marrying Cherokees after 1875.—Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. Ed. 96.

It is a settled rule of construction that, as between the whites and the Indians, the laws are to be construed most favorably to the latter; hence, the fact that the act of congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at Large 716, ch. 1375), containing the following provision: "No white person who has intermarried with a Cherokee citizen since December 16, 1895, shall be entitled to enrollment or to participate in the distribution of the tribal property of the Cherokee Nation," was ratified by the Cherokee Nation, August 7, 1902, does not make the said act of congress a treaty, nor does it amount to a grant of property rights to white persons who intermarried with Indians prior to the date of December 16, 1895. The doctrine that the denial of a right is the grant of a right is a poor basis for a grant of land. Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. Ed. 96.

13. White persons married to adopted members of Cherokee nation.—Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. Ed. 96.

White persons who intermarried with the Delaware or Shawnee citizens of the Cherokee Nation, either prior or subsequent to November 1, 1875, did not thereby become citizens of the Cherokee Nation, and hence have no part or share in the Cherokee property, and are not entitled to participate in the allotment of the lands or distribution of the funds of the Cherokee Nation, and are not entitled to be enrolled for such purposes. Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. Ed. 96.

14. White men abandoning Cherokee wives.—Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. Ed. 96.

15. White persons remarrying after death of Cherokee wife or husband.—

(3) White Members of Tribe or Nation.—The provision of the amendment of Cherokee constitution to the effect that white persons legally members of the nation are to be deemed citizens of the Cherokee Nation, did not amount to a grant of property rights to such persons, but only related to the eligibility of such persons to membership in the national council.[16]

(4) Indians Adopted into Tribe or Nation.—Where Indians of one tribe or nation are adopted into another by treaty between the latter and the United States, by which it is agreed that, upon compliance with the terms of the treaty, the Indians adopted shall be entitled to the rights, privileges and immunities of native citizens of the adopting tribe or nation, members of the adopted tribe are entitled to share in the distribution of the common property of the adopting tribe, equally with those who are members thereof by blood.[17]

Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. Ed. 96.

16. White members of Indian tribes or nations.—The amendment, made in 1866, to the Cherokee constitution of 1839, must be taken as a whole, and when so taken it is found that it related to eligibility to a seat in the national council—to civil and political rights, and not to property rights. The contention that the words "citizens of the Cherokee Nation" should be construed as relating to the constitutional provision of 1839, that the lands of the nation should be common property, is without merit in view of the provisions themselves. Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 86, 51 L. Ed. 96.

17. Indians adopted into tribe or nation.—Cherokee Nation v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 218, 39 L. Ed. 126; Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. Ed. 120; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 143, 48 L. Ed. 646.

Rights of Delawares in property of Cherokees.—By the fifteenth article of the treaty of July 19, 1866, made between the United States and the Cherokee Nation, contemplating the settlement of other Indians within the limits of the Cherokee country, and the agreement of April 8, 1867, between the Cherokees and Delawares, the purpose of which agreement was "a location of the Delawares upon the Cherokee lands and their consolidation with the Cherokee Nation," the Delawares, who as to the sums to be paid to the Cherokees, complied with the terms of that treaty and removed to the Cherokee settlement, became incorporated into, and a part of, the Cherokee Nation on equal terms in every respect with native Cherokees, and as such entitled to equal rights with native Cherokees in the public lands of the Cherokee Nation. Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. Ed. 120.

In the agreement between the Delaware Indians and the Cherokee Nation, made April 7, 1867, incorporating certain Delawares into the Cherokee Nation, the said Cherokee Nation agreed to sell to the said Delawares certain lands "for occupancy," each registered Delaware to have 160 acres, the ownership and occupancy of said lands by the Delawares being subject to the same conditions and restrictions as are, by the laws of the Cherokee Nation, imposed upon the native citizens thereof. It was further provided that in case of allotment of the Cherokee lands each registered Delaware would be entitled to 160 acres. The lands which were thus conveyed for occupancy are described as "Cherokee lands." Construing these terms of the agreement, the court held that the registered Delawares acquired in these lands only the right of occupancy during life, with a right upon allotment of the lands, to not less than 160 acres together with their improvements, and the children and descendants of such Delawares took only the rights of other citizens of the Cherokee Nation as the same are regulated by its laws. Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 143, 48 L. Ed. 646.

Right of Shawnees in property of Cherokees.—Where, in pursuance of the treaty of July 19, 1866, made between the United States and the Cherokee Nation, the Shawnees and the Cherokee Nation entered into an agreement on June 7, 1869, containing the following stipulation: "That the said Shawnees shall be incorporated into and ever after remain a part of the Cherokee Nation on equal terms in every respect, and with all the privileges and immunities of native citizens of said Cherokee Nation," it is held that the said stipulation secured to the Shawnees equal rights with the Cherokees in that which was the common property of the Cherokee Nation, to wit, the reservation and the outlet as well as all profits and proceeds thereof. Cherokee Nation v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 218, 39 L. Ed. 126.

By the 25th section of the act of June 28, 1898, authorizing the Delaware Indians residing in the Cherokee Nation to bring suit in the court of claims of the United States against the Cherokee Nation, for the purpose of determining the rights of said Delaware Indians in and to the lands and funds of said nation under their contract of agreement with the Cherokee Nation of April 8, 1867, it was not intended to authorize inquiry into the administration of the political affairs of the Cherokee Nation with a view to set-

(5) Negroes Living within, But Not Adopted by, Indian Nation.—Chickasaw and Choctaw freedmen living within the Chickasaw and Choctaw country, without having been adopted by those nations, are not entitled to share in the allotment of Chickasaw and Choctaw property or funds.[18] Nor are they entitled to participate in the funds agreed to be paid by the United States to freedmen who were willing to remove from the Indian country, and who were removed therefrom by congress.[19]

(6) Necessity for Allottee to Reside on Reservation.—An act providing for the allotment of lands to bands of Indians residing on an Indian reservation relates to the residence of the bands upon the reservation as bands, and the fact that a member of the band resides off a reservation does not defeat his right to an allotment.[20]

ting aside the adoption of the constitutional amendments and the revision of political action in admitting persons to citizenship in the nation under authority of its constitution. Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 144, 48 L. Ed. 646.

18. Negroes living within, but not adopted by, Indian nation.—United States v. Choctaw Nation, 193 U. S. 115, 126, 48 L. Ed. 640.

A treaty was concluded between the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians on January 10, 1873, relating to freed persons of African descent. In 1873 the Chickasaw legislature in conformity with article 3 of said treaty passed an act adopting such freed persons as members of their tribe upon certain conditions, but the act was only to have force and effect "from and after the approval by the proper authority of the United States." This act was not approved by the United States until 1894. In the meantime in 1876 the Chickasaws passed an act by which it was declared to be the unanimous consent of the Chickasaw legislature that the United States exercise the right given to it for the benefit of American freedmen by the treaty of 1866 and remove said freedmen from the Chickasaw territory. In 1885 the Chickasaw legislature passed another act declaring "that the Chickasaw people hereby refuse to accept or adopt the freedmen as citizens of the Cherokee Nation upon any terms or conditions whatever." Upon this state of facts it was held that the ratification by Congress in 1894 of the Chickasaw act of 1873 did not make the freedmen members of the Chickasaw Nation, and necessarily did not acquire the right dependent upon adoption, for, before said act of Congress was passed, the Chickasaw Nation had withdrawn their consent. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 193 U. S. 115, 126, 48 L. Ed. 640.

19. United States v. Choctaw Nation, 193 U. S. 115, 126, 48 L. Ed. 640.

Chickasaw and Choctaw freedmen, who were not actually removed by congress from the territory of the Chickasaw Nation in accordance with the third article of the treaty of July 10, 1866, even though they expressed a willingness to remove, are not entitled to share in the fund, which was to be paid to the Chickasaw and Choctaw Indians on the adoption of the freedmen aforesaid into the said tribes "with all the rights, privileges and immunities of citizens of said nations," and in default of such adoption to be held by the United States "for the use and benefit of such of said persons of African descent as the United States shall remove from the said territory." United States v. Choctaw Nation, 193 U. S. 115, 126, 48 L. Ed. 640.

20. Residence on reservation as prerequisite.—Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 48 L. Ed. 1039, holding that a member of the Walla Walla tribe of Indians was entitled to an allotment in the Umatilla reservation in the state of Oregon even though not residing on the reservation at the time of the passage of the act of March 3, 1885, providing for the allotment of lands in that reservation to the confederated bands of Cayuse, Walla Walla and Umatilla Indians residing on that reservation.

The purpose of the act would fall very far short of accomplishment were the allotments confined exclusively to those actually residing within the limits of the reservation, while those who were absent therefrom, but still within the old limits of the land, and were members of the band, recognized as such, should be held not entitled to the allotments under the act, simply because of residence outside of the described limits of the reservation. Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 412, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

If the individual were a member of the tribe or band, recognized as such by his chiefs, it was not necessary that such person should be an actual resident of the reservation when the act was passed. Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 413, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

"When such a large percentage of allottees upon this reservation resided as did the appellee, elsewhere than actually upon the reservation at the date of the passage of the act of 1885, it cannot be that the act passed was intended to limit the right to an allotment to those actually residing on the reservation to the ex-

(7) Finality of Decision as to Right of Allotment.—When the question as to who are members of a tribe and entitled to allotments of land, is left to the secretary of interior,[21] or to an Indian agent,[22] this decision is final, and is not subject to control by mandamus.[23]

(8) Whether Right to First Selection Lost by Making Second.—If an Indian entitled to an allotment of lands makes his selection of a tract prior to that of any one else, his right to the allotment is not lost by the selection of other lands, where the tract first selected by him is allotted by the government agents to another Indian upon the ground that the first claimant was not entitled to an allotment.[24]

b. Right of Allottee to Timber on Allotted Lands.—Individual members of an Indian tribe to whom land has been allotted in pursuance of an act of congress, may cut and sell the timber growing upon the land, notwithstanding the fact that the title thereto is held in trust by the United States for the benefit of the Indians.[25] clusion of a majority of the members of the different bands or tribes. The fact of such nonresidence is presumed to have been known by congress, and the act should be construed with reference to that knowledge." Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 413, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

21. Decision of secretary of interior is final.—United States v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. Ed. 718.

By the second article of the agreement of June 4, 1891, with the Wichita and Affiliated Bands of Indians, the United States agreed that there should be allotted to each member of the bands, native and adopted, one hundred and sixty acres of the lands ceded by that agreement to the government, to be selected by the members, the selection to be approved by the secretary of the interior. It was held that it was for the secretary of the interior to decide who were members of the bands entitled to allotments and that his judgment was final. United States v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. Ed. 718.

Sections 441, 463, of the Revised Statutes, the latter of which provides that the commissioner of Indian affairs shall, under the direction of the secretary of the interior, and agreeably to such regulations as the president may prescribe, have the management of all Indian affairs and of all matters arising out of the Indian relations, gives the secretary of the interior authority to decide on whether a person has been adopted into the Indian tribe or not and to determine whether such a person is entitled to an allotment of lands agreed to be given to members of the tribes by the government. United States v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. Ed. 718.

Where the secretary is authorized to pass on the right of a person to Indian lands as a member of the tribe, his jurisdiction does not depend upon his decision being right. The court cannot make an inquisition into his mental processes to see that they are correct. United States v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. Ed. 718.

22. Conclusiveness of decision by Indian agent.—The decision of a special Indian agent identifying Indian half-breeds entitled to participate, and in allotting the portion of each, is, in the absence of fraud, conclusive. Hegler v. Faulkner, 153 U. S. 109, 117, 38 L. Ed. 653; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 511, 10 L. Ed. 264.

23. Mandamus to compel secretary to make allotment.—The decision of the secretary of the interior as to who were members of the tribes and entitled to selections under act of June 4, 1891, with the Wichita and Affiliated Bands of Indians, could not be controlled by mandamus. United States v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. Ed. 718.

24. Selection of other lands as defeating right to first selection.—Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

This is especially true where the government agents advised the Indians that the second selection would not impair his right to insist upon the validity of the first. Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

25. Right to sell timber from allotments held in trust.—United States v. Paine Lumber Co., 206 U. S. 467, 51 L. Ed. 1139, distinguishing United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 592, 22 L. Ed. 210.

"The title is held by the United States, it is true, but it is held 'in trust for individuals and their heirs to whom the same were allotted.' The considerations, therefore, which determined the decision in United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 592, 22 L. Ed. 210, do not exist. The land is not the land of the United States, and the timber when cut did not become the property of the United States. And we cannot extend the restraint upon the alienation of the land to a restraint upon the sale of the timber consistently with a proper and beneficial use of the land by the Indians, a use which can in no way affect any interest of the United States." United States v. Paine Lumber Co., 206 U. S. 467, 51 L. Ed. 1139.

The Indian allottees under the Stockbridge and Munsie treaty of 1856 (11 Stat.

c. Sale of Allotment—(1) Right to Sell—(a) In Absence of Restriction.—When the rights of the nation are extinguished, an individual of the nation who takes as private owner may, unless restricted by treaty stipulations, sell his interest.[26]

(b) Restrictions on Sale—aa. Postponement of Right to Sell.—Where an Indian takes up lands, under the act of March 3, 1875, providing that the land so taken up shall not be aliened by the Indian for five years, the day of the issuance of the patent is to be counted in computing the time when the right to alien accrues.[27]

bb. Lands Held in Trust for Indians.—Lands allotted to Indians under the act of February 8, 1887, and held in trust by the United States for the benefit of the allottee, cannot be sold or conveyed by the allottee.[28]

cc. Lands of Minor Allottees.—Where minor allottees are prohibited from aliening their allotments, a deed by a guardian purporting to convey the lands of his ward, a minor allottee, though made by authority of the probate court, is void.[29]

(2) Mode of Sale—(a) Compliance with Statute.—A statute granting pieces of lands to Indians, and prescribing a specific mode in which they may sell, forbids by implication a sale independently of the mode.[30]

(b) Approval of Deed by President or Secretary.—By statute or treaty deeds by Indians for the sale and transfer of their individual title are sometimes required to be approved by the president,[31] or secretary of the interior.[32] When

663) and the act of congress of 1871 (16 Stat. 404) were vested with sufficient title in their allotments to authorize the cutting of timber, for sale and not by way of improvements, without the approval of the department of the interior. United States v. Paine Lumber Co., 206 U. S. 467, 470, 51 L. Ed. 1139.

26. Right of Indian to sell land.—Doe v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 463, 16 L. Ed. 584.

The Indian title is property, and alienable, unless the treaty had prohibited its sale. Doe v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 463, 16 L. Ed. 584.

27. When right to alien accrues, where time limit fixed.—Taylor v. Brown, 147 U. S. 640, 37 L. Ed. 313 (holding that an Indian to whom a patent issued June 15, 1880, could alien the same by deed dated June 15, 1885). Generally, as to computation of time, see the title TIME. See, also, the title PUBLIC LANDS.

28. Right of allottee to sell and convey allotment.—United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 436, 47 L. Ed. 532.

29. Restriction on alienation by minor allottees held by guardian.—Wiggan v. Conolly, 163 U. S. 56, 41 L. Ed. 69. Compare Dunbar v. Green, 198 U. S. 166, 49 L. Ed. 998.

By the terms of the treaty of 1867 between the United States and the Ottawa Indians, patents were to issue to the heads of families and to all among the allottees coming of age "so that they may sell their lands without restriction;" and this provision in reference to patents must be considered as superseding those of the treaty of 1862 and as introducing a new limitation on the alienability of lands patented to a minor allottee, that is, the limit of minority. And such limit must be applied to sales voluntary and involuntary, and cut off the right of a guardian to dispose of the real estate of his ward; hence, a deed made by a guardian, though under the authority of the probate court of the county of the state in which the lands were situated, conveyed no title. Wiggan v. Conolly, 163 U. S. 56, 61, 41 L. Ed. 69.

30. Compliance with statute as to mode of sale.—Smith v. Stevens, 10 Wall. 321, 19 L. Ed. 933.

31. Approval by president.—Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 21, 44 L. Ed. 49; Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. Ed. 716; Lomax v. Pickering, 173 U. S. 26, 43 L. Ed. 601; Lykins v. McGrath, 184 U. S. 169, 173, 46 L. Ed. 485; Smith v. Stevens, 10 Wall. 321, 19 L. Ed. 933.

In the Treaty of Prairie du Chien of July 29, 1829, between the United States and certain nations of Chippewa, Ottawa and Pottawatomie Indians, article 4 provided that "there shall be granted by the United States" to each of the persons named, being descendants from Indians, sections of land, and that "the tracts of land herein stipulated to be granted shall never be leased or conveyed by the grantees or their heirs to any persons whatever without the permission of the president of the United States." Under this provision, no alienation could be valid without the approval of the president. Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. Ed. 716; Lomax v. Pickering, 173 U. S. 26, 43 L. Ed. 601; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 21, 44 L. Ed. 49.

32. Approval by secretary of interior.—Smith v. Stevens, 10 Wall. 321, 19 L.

this is the case approval subsequent to the execution of the deed, even if after the death of the grantee and the sale of the land by his representatives, is sufficient.[33] The approval need not be recorded in the recorder's office in the state where the land lies.[34] By approval of a deed the title of the grantor is wholly divested, and there is nothing left upon which a subsequent approval can operate.[35]

(3) Rights and Title of Purchaser.—The effect of a warranty deed by an Indian as passing after-acquired title is treated in another title.[36] One claiming title through an Indian, the head of a family, to whom a patent in fee simple has issued from the United States in pursuance of a treaty, is entitled to hold all the land, unaffected with any trust in favor of the Indian's children, even though the treaty contemplated that part of the lands were to be patented to, or for the benefit of, the Indian's children.[37]

Ed. 933; Lykins v. McGrath, 184 U. S. 169, 173, 46 L. Ed. 485.

Under the act of congress of May 26th, 1860, referring to the treaty of June 3d, 1825, between the United States and the nation of Kansas Indians (which reserved certain tracts of land for the benefit of particular half-breed Kansas Indians named), and granting "the title, interest, and estate of the United States," to the reservees mentioned in that treaty, and providing that the secretary of the interior, when requested by any one of the Indians named, "is hereby authorized" to sell the piece reserved for such Indians; the reservees had no authority to sell the lands independently of assent by the secretary of the interior; and any such sale was void. Smith v. Stevens, 10 Wall. 321, 19 L. Ed. 933.

33. Time of approval.—Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. Ed. 716; Lykins v. McGrath, 184 U. S. 169, 173, 46 L. Ed. 485.

Article 4 of the treaty of Prairie du Chien granting certain lands to Indians therein named and prohibiting the grantees from conveying the same except by permission of the president, is satisfied by the president's approval indorsed upon a deed thirteen years after its execution, and after the death of the grantee and the sale of the land by his administrator. Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. Ed. 716.

The approval by the secretary may be retroactive and take effect by way of relation as of the date of the deed, and where it appears from the fact of the approval by the secretary that the Indian grantor received full payment for his land and was in no manner imposed upon in the conveyance, and where the plaintiffs have no equitable rights superior to those of the grantee in that deed, the title conveyed must be upheld. Lykins v. McGrath, 184 U. S. 169, 173, 46 L. Ed. 485.

34. Recording approval.—Lomax v. Pickering, 173 U. S. 26, 29, 43 L. Ed. 601.

Where there is a record of the approval of the president in the department at Washington of the sale of lands held by an Indian under the treaty of Prairie du Chien, that record is notice of all concerned from the time it is made, and the recording laws of the state do not require a copy of that record to be recorded in the recorder's office where the land is located. A record of that character is similar to a patent issued by the president for lands that belong to the government, which is not required to be recorded in the county where the land is located. Lomax v. Pickering, 173 U. S. 26, 29, 43 L. Ed. 601.

35. Approval of deed exhausts power to approve.—Lomax v. Pickering, 173 U. S. 26, 31, 43 L. Ed. 601.

36. Effect of warranty deed by Indian as passing after-acquired title.—See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

37. Right of bona fide purchaser from Indian, to whom excess has been patented.—Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. Ed. 727.

It seem that under the treaty of the United States with the Choctaws, in 1830, by which the United States agreed that each Choctaw head of a family desirous to remain and become a citizen, etc., should be entitled to one section of land; "and in like manner shall be entitled to one-half that quantity for each unmarried child which is living with him over ten years of age, and a quarter section to such child as may be under ten years of age, to adjoin the location of the parent;" no trust was meant to be created in favor of the children. They were named only as measuring the quantity of land that should be assigned to the head of the family. But, however this may be, if under the assumption that no trust was meant to be created, the United States have issued under the treaty a patent to a Choctaw head of a family, individually and in fee simple for all the sections, a purchaser from him bona fide and for value will not be affected with the trust, even though he knew that his vendor was a Choctaw head of a family, and in a general way that he had the land in virtue of the treaty. Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. Ed. 727.

Where it is sought to affect a bona fide purchaser for value with constructive

d. List or Census of Allottees as Evidence.—A census or list filed in the office of Indian affairs, containing the names and ages of half-breeds, who, upon testimony presented to that office, were regarded as entitled to participate in allotments or assignments of lands under the act of July 31, 1854, is not conclusive as to the age of the half-breeds at the time of the allotments, in an action between two persons to each of which he has granted the land.[38]

e. Actions with Respect to Allotments—(1) Jurisdiction—(a) Prior to Act of 1894.—Prior to the act of congress of August 15, 1894, the sole authority for settling disputes as to Indian allotments resided in the secretary of the interior.[39]

(b) Under Act of 1894.—Under the act of congress of August 15, 1894, all persons who are in whole or in part of Indian blood or descent, who are entitled to an allotment of land under any law of congress, or who claim to be so entitled to land under any allotment act or under any grant made by congress, or who claim to have been unlawfully denied or excluded from any allotment or any parcel of land to which they claim to be lawfully entitled by virtue of any act of congress, may commence and prosecute or defend any action, suit or proceeding in relation to their right thereto in the proper circuit court of the United States.[40] The jurisdiction thus conferred on the federal courts is exclusive.[41]

(2) Parties.—To a contest between two Indians claiming the same lands under an allotment, the United States is not a necessary party.[42]

(3) Limitations.—Where the tribal relations are dissolved by allotment of lands, the statute of limitations begins to run against the Indians from that time.[43] Where an Indian who is not competent to be entrusted with his estate, receives an allotment of land, with a restriction against alienation within five years, or even then without the consent of the president, and he conveys in disobedience of the restriction, the statute of limitations commences to run against him and his heirs, and in favor of his grantee, as soon as his incom-notice, the question is not whether he had the means of obtaining, and might by prudent caution have obtained the knowledge in question, but whether his not obtaining it was an act of gross or culpable negligence. Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. Ed. 727.

38. Conclusiveness or recital of age of allottee in list of those entitled to allotment.—Hegler v. Faulkner, 153 U. S. 109, 38 L. Ed. 653.

39. Jurisdiction of claims to allotments prior to 1894.—McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 468, 51 L. Ed. 566; Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 407, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

Prior to the act of congress of 1894, controversies necessarily involving a determination of the title and incidentally of the right to the possession of Indian allotments while the same were held in trust by the United States, were not primarily cognizable by any court, either state or federal. McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 468, 51 L. Ed. 566.

40. Jurisdiction of claims to allotments under act of 1894.—McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 468, 51 L. Ed. 566; Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 407, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

41. Jurisdiction of federal courts exclusive.—The act of congress of 1894, which delegated to the courts of the United States the power to determine such questions, cannot be construed as having conferred upon the state courts the authority to pass upon federal questions over which, prior to the act of 1894, no court had any authority. The purpose of the act of 1894 to continue the exclusive federal control over the subject is manifested by the provision of that act, which commands that a judgment or decree rendered in any such controversy shall be certified by the court to the secretary of the interior. McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 468, 51 L. Ed. 566.

42. United States not a necessary party to action between rival claimants.—Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 48 L. Ed. 1039.

43. Limitations as against allottees.—Schrimpscher v. Stockton, 183 U. S. 290, 297, 46 L. Ed. 203.

"Conceding, but without deciding, that so long as Indians maintain their tribal relations they are not chargeable with laches or failure to assert their claims within the time prescribed by statutes, as to which see Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317, 330, 36 L. Ed. 719, they would lose this immunity when their relations with their tribe were dissolved by accepting allotments of lands in severalty." Schrimpscher v. Stockton, 183 U. S. 290, 297, 46 L. Ed. 203.

petency is removed.[44]

3. Reservations to Individuals by Treaty of Cession—a. Who May Select Where Reservation Is to "Head of Family."—Under a treaty providing that each head of a family may make a selection of one-half section of land, a grandmother, living with her grandchildren, is the head of the family, and entitled to make a selection.[45]

b. On What Lands Reservation May Be Located.—Strictly speaking, of course, Indians in whose favor a reservation to be selected is made by treaty ceding their lands to the United States, can only locate on the lands ceded to the government.[46] But if scrip issued to the Indians as an evidence of the land to which they are entitled under the reservation, is located by them, or by purchasers from them, on lands not a part of the territory ceded by the tribe to the United States, congress may provide that the locators thereof may hold the land located upon the payment to the government of the regular price for public lands.[47]

c. When Title Becomes Complete.—The treaty of May 24th, 1834, with the Chickasaw Indians (7 Stat. at Large 450) confers title to the reservations contemplated by it, which was complete when the locations were made to identify them, and reservees are not obliged, in addition to proving that the locations were made by the proper officers, to prove also that the conditions on which these officers were authorized to act had been observed by them.[48]

d. Necessity for Patent.—A good title to parts of the lands of an Indian tribe may be granted to individuals by a treaty between the United States and the tribe, without any act of congress, or any patent from the executive authority of the United States.[49]

44. Limitation of action for recovery of allotments sold contrary to restriction.—Schrimpscher v. Stockton, 183 U. S. 290, 46 L. Ed. 203.

Under article 4 of the treaty of January 31, 1855, with the Wyandotte Indians, providing for the allotment of certain lands among the tribes, it was stipulated that patents issued to those not competent to be entrusted with the control and management of their affairs and interests should contain an express condition that the lands were not to be sold or alienated for a period of five years, and not then without the consent of the president of the United States. A patent issued under this treaty to one who was incompetent contained a clause stipulating that it "could not be sold without the consent of the secretary of the interior within five years." The patentee sold the land without the consent of the secretary in 1864, and in 1867 another treaty was concluded removing all restrictions on the rights of Indians under the former treaty to convey their interest and providing for the examination of sales made by incompetents in violation of the first treaty and a ratification or disaffirmance of them by the secretary of the interior, as their interests might require. It was held that the statute of limitation commenced to run against the heirs of the patentee as soon as the latter treaty became binding. Schrimpscher v. Stockton, 183 U. S. 290, 46 L. Ed. 203.

45. Who may make selection—Head of family.—Ladiga v. Roland, 2 How. 581, 11 Ed. 387.

46. Fee v. Brown, 162 U. S. 602, 40 L. Ed. 1086.

The reservation for the use of members of the Chippewa tribe of Indians made by the act of December 19, 1854, "to provide for the extinguishment of the title of the Chippewa Indians to the lands owned and claimed by them," can only be made on the territory ceded to the United States, whether made by Indians of pure or mixed blood. Fee v. Brown, 162 U. S. 602, 40 L. Ed. 1086.

47. Fee v. Brown, 162 U. S. 602, 40 L. Ed. 1086.

The act of June 8, 1872, "to perfect certain land titles," was intended to validate locations made by persons who have purchased land scrip from members of the Chippewa tribe, contrary to the provisions of the statute, upon compliance with that act, the substance of which was that the locator was required to pay to the government not less than $1.25 per acre for the land located. Fee v. Brown, 162 U. S. 602, 40 L. Ed. 1086.

48. When title becomes complete.—Best v. Polk, 18 Wall. 112, 21 L. Ed. 805.

49. Grants to individuals by treaty of cession.—Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. Ed. 49; Best v. Polk, 18 Wall. 112, 21 L. Ed. 805; Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black 352, 17 L. Ed. 91; United States v. Brooks, 10 How. 442, 13 L. Ed. 489; Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 9 L. Ed. 283; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat.

e. Conflict between Reservees as to Locations.—Under a treaty giving certain members of an Indian tribe the right to select and locate a certain amount of lands out of lands ceded to the government by the tribe, and giving the president authority to select certain lands for orphan children of the tribe, the president cannot choose lands embraced in the selections made by members of the tribe under the other provisions of the treaty.[50]

f. Title or Interest of Reservees—(1) Nature of Estate or Interest.—A reservation in a treaty ceding Indian lands to the United States, creates a fee simple in the reservee in the absence of words limiting its effect.[51]

(2) School Lands within Reservation.—Where there are reservations, in Indian treaties, of specific tracts of land, which are afterwards found to be the 543, 5 L. Ed. 681; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 927; Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 51 L. Ed. 165. See, also, the title PUBLIC LANDS.

50. Conflict between locations.—By a treaty made between the United States and the Creek tribe of Indians, east of the Mississippi river, on the 24th of March, 1832, it was stipulated: That ninety principal chiefs of the tribe should be allowed to select one section each. That every other head of a Creek family should be allowed to select one-half section each; and that these tracts should be reserved from sale, for their use, for the term of five years, unless sooner disposed of by them. That twenty selections should be made, under the direction of the president, for the orphan children of the Creeks, and divided and retained or sold for their benefit as the president should direct. Held, that in making the selections for the orphan children, the president had no authority, under the treaty, to choose any land embraced by the two preceding clauses. Ladiga v. Roland, 2 How. 581, 11 L. Ed. 387.

51. Estate created by reservation.—Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 21, 44 L. Ed. 49; Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 238, 51 L. Ed. 165; United States v. Brooks, 10 How. 442, 13 L. Ed. 489; Marsh v. Brooks, 8 How. 223, 12 L. Ed. 1056.

When the United States, in a treaty with an Indian tribe, and as part of the consideration for the cession by the tribe of a tract of country to the United States, make a reservation to a chief or other member of the tribe of a specified number of sections of land, whether already identified, or to be surveyed and located in the future, the treaty itself converts the reserved sections into individual property, the reservation, unless accompanied by words limiting its effect, is equivalent to a present grant of a complete title in fee simple. Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 21, 44 L. Ed. 49; Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 238, 51 L. Ed. 165.

The only reasonable construction of all the provisions of the treaty of October 2, 1863, between the United States and the Red Lake and Pembina bands of Chickasaw Indians, taken together, is that the ninth article, by which "there shall be set apart from the tract hereby ceded a reservation of six hundred and forty acres near the mouth of the Thief River for the chief, Moose Dung," and a reservation of a like quantity of land at another place designated for the chief, Red Bear, was intended by the United States, and was understood by the Indians, and took effect, as a present grant to each of these two chiefs of an alienable title in fee in that quantity of land at the designated place, subject only to its selection in due form, and to the definition of its boundaries by survey and patent. Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 23, 44 L. Ed. 49.

A supplementary article to a treaty between the United States and the Caddo Indians, providing that certain persons "shall have their right to the said four leagues of land reserved for them and their heirs and assigns forever. The said lands to be taken out of the lands ceded to the United States by the said Caddo Nation of Indians, as expressed in the treaty to which these articles are supplementary. And the four leagues of land shall be laid off," etc.—gave to the reservees a fee simple to all the rights which the Caddoes had in those lands, as fully as any patent from the government could make one. Nothing further was contemplated by the treaty to perfect the title. United States v. Brooks, 10 How. 442, 13 L. Ed. 489.

The plaintiff in a writ of right produced a patent from the United States, dated in 1839, which contained sundry recitals, referring to titles of anterior date derived from acts of congress for the adjustment of claims to lands. But the patent itself was issued under an act of congress in 1836. The defendant, in order to show an outstanding title, gave in evidence a treaty between the United States and the Sac and Fox Indians, in which this, with other lands, was reserved for the half-breeds, and an act of congress passed in 1834 relinquishing the reversionary interest of the United States to these half-breeds. This was sufficient to show an outstanding title. The recitals in a patent are not enough to show that the title is of an earlier date than the patent itself, although they are evidence for some purposes. Nor was it necessary for the defendant to show that any of the half-breeds were in existence at the time of the trial. Marsh v. Brooks, 8 How. 223, 12 L. Ed. 1056.

sections set apart for school purposes, under a general law, the reservees have the better title. They hold under the original Indian title which the United States confirmed in the treaty.[52]

g. Sale or Conveyance by Reservee.—The title acquired by Indians to land reserved by treaty for them, is alienable by the grantee at his pleasure,[53] unless the United States, by a provision of the treaty, or of an act of congress, have expressly or impliedly prohibited or restricted its alienation.[54] The government cannot defeat the title or the right to alien by a restriction in the patent sub-

52. School lands within reservation.—Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. 356, 13 L. Ed. 172.

"But where the reservee claimed under a float, no specific tract of land being designated for him in the treaty, this court abstains from expressing an opinion, that being the legal question pending in the court below." Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. 356, 13 L. Ed. 172.

53. Right of reservee to alien.—Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 13, 44 L. Ed. 49; Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 238, 51 L. Ed. 165; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black 352, 17 L. Ed. 91.

Where a treaty with an Indian tribe reserves a certain quantity of land, to be afterwards selected by the president, and patented to an individual of the tribe, such reservation creates an equitable estate in the reservee to the land reserved, which he may sell, and upon the selection and patenting of the land, the title will vest in his grantee. This is held to be the rule in a case where the reservee conveyed his interest under the treaty, and died before the issuing of the patent. In a contest between the grantee of the reservee himself under a conveyance before the patent, and the grantee of his heir under a deed made after the land was selected and patented, the title of the former party must prevail. Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black 352, 17 L. Ed. 91; Elwood v. Flannigan, 104 U. S. 562, 26 L. Ed. 842.

In a treaty made with the Pottawatomie Indians in 1832, there were reservations to individual Indians, which should be selected under the direction of the president of the United States, "after the land shall have been surveyed, and the boundaries shall correspond with the public surveys." Before this was done, one of these reservees made a conveyance by a deed in fee simple, with a clause of general warranty. In 1837, patents were issued for the reservations. This deed vested the title of the reservee in the grantee. The former was a tenant in common with the United States, and could sell his reserved interest; and when the United States selected the lands reserved to him, and made partition (of which the patent is conclusive evidence), his grantee took the interest which the reservee would have taken if living. A prayer to the court that the land patented was not the same as that reserved was properly refused, because the recital in the patent was conclusive evidence to the contrary. Doe v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. Ed. 584.

It is no objection to the right of the first grantee that the land finally patented did not lie within the district ceded by the treaty which made the reservation, because the recitals in the patent are conclusive; and, at any rate, third parties have no right to impugn the patent for such a reason. Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black 352, 17 L. Ed. 91.

Under a lease executed by the heir of an Indian, to whom a strip of land had been granted by the United States, title passed for the term of the lease, and the rights of the lessees could not be divested by any subsequent action of the lessor, or of congress, or of the executive department. Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. Ed. 49.

After-acquired title as passing by deed.—See the titles ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913; PUBLIC LANDS.

54. Restriction on right of alienation.—Libby v. Clark, 118 U. S. 250, 30 L. Ed. 133; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 20, 44 L. Ed. 49.

In the treaty of June 24, 1862, between the United States and a tribe of Ottawa Indians, article 3 provided as follows: "It being the wish of said tribe of Ottawas to remunerate several of the chiefs, councilmen and headmen of the tribe for their services to them many years without pay, it is hereby stipulated that five sections of land are reserved and set apart for that purpose, to be apportioned among the said chiefs, councilmen and headmen as the members of the tribe shall in full council determine; and it shall be the duty of the secretary of the interior to issue patents in fee simple of said lands, when located and apportioned, to said Indians." 12 Stat. 1238. In Libby v. Clark, 118 U. S. 250, 30 L. Ed. 133, the federal supreme court, approving and affirming the judgment of the supreme court, of Kansas, delivered by Mr. Justice Brewer, in 14 Kansas 435, held that a deed to a white person from one of those chiefs, of land patented to him pursuant to the treaty, but executed before he had become a citizen of the United States, was void, for the single reason that the treaty itself, as construed by the court, expressly provided, in article 7, that no Indian should alien or encumber the land allotted to him until he had, according to the terms of the treaty, become a citizen of the United sequently issued which prohibits alienation without the consent of the president.[55]

4. Descent and Distribution.—The right of inheritance in the property of a member of an Indian tribe, whose tribal organization is recognized by the government of the United States, is controlled by the laws, usages and customs of the tribe, and not by the law of the state within which the tribe is located, nor by any action of the secretary of the interior.[56]

5. Right to Hunt on Lands of United States.—A treaty giving Indians the right to hunt on the unoccupied lands of the United States, so long as peace subsists between the whites and Indians on the borders of the hunting districts, does not authorize the Indians to hunt on the unoccupied lands of the United States, within a state, contrary to the laws of the state.[57]

6. Right of Fishery.—The right of Indians to fish at the usual and accustomed places within the territory of the United States may be secured to them by treaty,[58] and such a right, when so secured, is binding as well against a state subsequently admitted within which the fishing rights secured by treaty are located, and its grantees, as against the United States and its grantees.[59] Fishing rights thus secured to Indians cannot be defeated by licenses from the state to States. Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 20, 44 L. Ed 49.

55. Effect of restriction in patent on right of alienation.—Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 238, 51 L. Ed. 165.

An alienable title in fee simple passed by the treaty of September 24, 1819, with the Chippawa Indians to the children of Bokowtonden, and the patent issued in 1827, regarding the reservation of 640 acres of land contained in said treaty, only located or made definite the boundaries of the tract reserved to them by the said treaty. It follows that the words in the patent of 1827, "but never to be conveyed by them or their heirs without the consent and permission of the president of the United States," were ineffectual as a restriction upon the power of alienation. The president had no authority, in virtue of his office, to impose any such restriction; certainly not, without the authority of an act of congress, and no such act was ever passed. Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 51 L. Ed. 165.

56. Descent and distribution.—Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 29, 44 L. Ed. 49; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 299.

By the laws, usages and customs of the Chippewa Indians, the eldest son and successor of a chief inherited the land of his father, to the exclusion of other descendants. Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 31, 44 L. Ed. 49.

57. Right to hunt on unoccupied lands of United States within state.—Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. Ed. 244.

Article 4 of the treaty of February 24, 1869, with the Bannock Indians which provides that "they shall have the right to hunt upon the unoccupied lands of the United States so long as game may be found thereon, and so long as peace subsists between the whites and Indians on the borders of the hunting districts" did not confer upon such Indians the right to hunt and kill game upon the unoccupied lands of the United States, within a state, contrary to the municipal laws of the state, but only authorized them to hunt upon the unoccupied lands of the United States which were of the character embraced within what the treaty denominates as hunting districts. Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. Ed. 244.

"Hunting districts" as used in the treaty does not merely signify places where game is to be found. Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. Ed. 244.

58. Right to fish secured by treaty with United States.—United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

59. Right to fish binding against United States and grantees thereof.—United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

The treaty of 1859 between the United States and the Yakima Indians in the territory of Washington reserving to the Indians "the right of taking fish at all usual and accustomed places in common with citizens of the territory, and of erecting temporary places for curing them," was intended to be continuing against the United States and its grantees as well as against the state and its grantees. United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

The right of fishing secured to the Yakima Indians by reservation in the treaty of 1859, in common with the citizens of the territory of Washington, is binding upon the state of Washington when admitted into the Union. United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

Patents for lands in the state of Washington are subject to the rights secured to Indians by the treaty of 1859, securing to them the right of fishing at the usual and accustomed places in common with citizens of the territory. United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

persons other than Indians to erect and maintain fishing wheels, where the use of such device would interfere with the Indians' rights of fishery,[60] and their use, in accordance with the license, may be enforced.[61]

IV. Government of Indians and Indian Country.

A. Power of United States—1. In General.—It is well established that the Indian tribes residing within the territorial limits of the United States are subject to their authority.[62] Thus, the United States may regulate the tribal relations,[63] legislate with respect to tribal lands,[64] provide for the establishment of courts in which Indians may prosecute or defend[65] and provide for the punishment of crimes in the Indian country.[66]

2. Regulation of Trade or Commerce with Indians.—See the title Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3. Mode of Governing Indians—a. Formerly Governed by Treaties.—Prior to the act of March 3, 1871, the customary mode of dealing with Indian 60. Use of fishing wheels by licensee from state excluding Indians.—United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

The clause in the treaty of 1859 with the Yakima Indians securing to them the right to fish in the territory of Washington at the usual and accustomed places, in common with citizens of the territory, would be nullified by the occupation of the usual places by devices known as fish wheels erected and operated by white men, and where such devices are erected and operated, even though under license from the state, Indians are entitled to relief by injunction. United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

A license from a state to white men to maintain a fishing wheel within the state gives no power to them to use it as to exclude Indians from the right of taking fish at the usual and accustomed places, in common with citizens of the territory secured to them by treaty with the United States prior to the admission of the state as such. United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

61. Injunction against fishing wheels interfering with fishing rights.—United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. Ed. 1089.

62. Power of congress.—United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 572, 11 L. Ed. 1105; The Cherokee Tobacco, 11 Wall. 616, 619, 20 L. Ed. 227; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. Ed. 228; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 409, 18 L. Ed. 182; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. Ed. 295; Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 384, 41 L. Ed. 196.

"The Indians and the territory which may have been specially set apart for their use, are subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and congress may pass such laws as it sees fit prescribing the rules governing the intercourse of the Indians with one another and with citizens of the United States, and also the courts in which all controversies to which an Indian may be a party shall be submitted. United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 32 L. Ed. 973; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. Ed. 295." Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 221, 42 L. Ed. 442.

63. Control of tribal relations.—Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 565, 47 L. Ed. 299; Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 498, 49 L. Ed. 848.

In Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 565, 47 L. Ed. 299, it was said: "Plenary authority over the tribal relations of the Indians has been exercised by congress from the beginning, and the power has always been deemed a political one, not subject to be controlled by the judicial department of the government." Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 498, 49 L. Ed. 848.

64. Legislation as to tribal lands.—Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 567, 47 L. Ed. 299; Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 27, 30 L. Ed. 306; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. Ed. 1041.

Indians who have not been fully emancipated from the control and protection of the United States are subject so far as the tribal lands are concerned, to be controlled by direct legislation of congress. Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 27, 30 L. Ed. 306; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 483, 43 L. Ed. 1041; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 567, 47 L. Ed. 299. See ante, "Property Rights of Nations or Tribes," III. A.

65. Establishment of courts.—Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 221, 42 L. Ed. 442. See post, "Jurisdiction over Indians and Indian Country," V.

66. Punishment of crimes in Indian country.—Where the country occupied by Indians is not within the limits of one of the states, congress may, by law, punish any offense committed there, no matter whether the offender be a white man or an Indian. The Cherokee Tobacco, 11 Wall.

tribes was by treaty.[67] The legislation of congress could constitutionally be extended to embrace Indians in the Indian country, by the mere force of a treaty, whenever it operates of itself, without the aid of any legislative provision.[68]

b. Now Governed by Act of Congress.—But the act of March 3, 1871, voiced the intention of congress thereafter to make the Indian tribes amenable directly to the power and authority of the laws of the United States by the immediate exercise of its legislative power over them. The customary mode of dealing with the Indian tribes was by treaty.[69]

4. Control and Investment of Indian Funds.—Congress is vested with authority to adopt measures to make tribal property productive, and secure therefrom an income for the benefit of the tribe.[70] The statute of limitations does not run against the United States as to securities purchased by them with funds belonging to the Indian tribes and held in trust by the government for the use of the Indians.[71]

5. Removal of Indians.—The sole power to enforce the removal of Indians from a state to territory set apart for them is in the United States. A state cannot enforce the removal of Indians from the state, even though the Indians have agreed to remove within a certain time and failed to do so.[72] Under the treaties of May 23, 1836, and August 6, 1846, between the United States and the 616, 619, 20 L. Ed. 227; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 572, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

67. Governed by treaties.—Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 498, 49 L. Ed. 848; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 566, 47 L. Ed. 299; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 305, 47 L. Ed. 183.

68. Extension of laws to Indians or Indian country by treaty.—United States v. Forty-Three Gallons of Whiskey, 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. Ed. 846; Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 523; The Cherokee Tobacco, 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 227; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 567, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

69. Direct legislation for Indians.—Rev. Stat., § 2079; Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 498, 49 L. Ed. 848; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 566, 47 L. Ed. 299; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 305, 47 L. Ed. 183.

"In United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228, speaking of the Indians, the court said: 'After an experience of a hundred years of the treaty-making system of government, congress has determined upon a new departure—to govern them by acts of congress.'" Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 566, 47 L. Ed. 299.

While the government of the United States has recognized in the Indian tribes heretofore a state of semi-independence and pupilage, it has the right and authority, instead of controlling them by treaties, to govern them by acts of congress; they being within the geographical limit of the United States, and being necessarily subject to the laws which congress may enact for their protection and for the protection of the people with whom they come in contact. United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

70. Power of congress to invest Indian funds.—Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 307, 47 L. Ed. 183; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. Ed. 1041.

71. Limitations in action by United States as to Indian trust funds.—United States v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 118 U. S. 120, 30 L. Ed. 81. See the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

72. Enforcing removal of Indians from state.—Fellows v. Blacksmith, 19 How. 366, 15 L. Ed. 684; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. Ed. 228.

The United States made two treaties, one in 1838, and one in 1842, with the Seneca Indians, residing in the state of New York, by which the Indians agreed to remove to the west within five years, and relinquish their possessions to certain assignees of the state of Massachusetts, and the United States agreed that they would appropriate a large sum of money to aid in the removal, and to support the Indians for the first year after their removal to their new residence. But neither treaty made any provision as to the mode or manner in which the removal of the Indians or surrender of the reservations was to take place. The grantees of the land, under the Massachusetts assignment, cannot enter upon it and take forcible possession of a farm occupied by an Indian, but are liable to an action of trespass, quare clausum fregit, if they do so. The removal of tribes of Indians is to be made by the authority and under the care of the government; and a forcible removal, if made at all, must be made under the direction of the United States. Fellows v. Blacksmith, 19 How. 366, 15 L. Ed. 684.

Cherokee Nation, the expense of removing the Eastern Cherokees to the lands west of the Mississippi River was to be borne by the United States.[73]

B. Power of States.—The Indians owe no allegiance to a state within which their reservation may be established, and the state gives them no protection. Hence, the states have no power over them as long as they maintain their tribal relations.[74] Even though Indians have sold their lands within a state, and agreed to remove away, the state cannot, so long as they remain there, extend its laws to them.[75]

C. Self-Government—1. POWER OF INDIANS TO GOVERN THEMSELVES.—The power of self-government has been conferred on many of the Indian nations by statute and treaties providing therefor.[76] The right of self-government is expressly secured to the Cherokees by treaty,[77] and that nation may, subject to the 73. Expense of removal to be borne by United States.—United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. Ed. 949.

74. Power of states as to Indians on reservation.—United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 506, 49 L. Ed. 848; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 520, 8 L. Ed. 483; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 18 L. Ed. 182.

The Cherokee nation is a distinct community, occupying its own territory, with boundaries accurately described, in which the laws of Georgia can have no force, and which the citizens of Georgia have no right to enter, but with the assent of the Cherokees themselves, or in conformity with the treaties, and with the acts of congress; the whole intercourse between the United States and this nation, is, by our constitution and laws, vested in the government of the United States. Hence the act of the state of Georgia, of December 22, 1830, which attempted to interfere with them, was void. Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 520, 8 L. Ed. 483.

The forcible seizure and abduction, under an act of the state legislature, of a person who was residing in the Cherokee Nation, with its permission, and by authority of the president of the United States, is also a violation of the acts which authorize the chief magistrate to exercise this authority, and also in direct hostility with treaties, repeated in a succession of years, which mark out the boundary that separates the Cherokee country from Georgia; guarantee to them all the land within their boundary; solemnly pledge the faith of the United States to restrain their citizens from trespassing on it; and recognize the pre-existing power of the nation to govern itself. Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 520, 8 L. Ed. 483.

Neither the constitution of the state nor any act of its legislature, whatever rights it may confer on Indians or withhold from them, can withdraw them from the influence of an act of congress which that body has the constitutional right to pass concerning them. United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 409, 419, 18 L. Ed. 182.

75. Extension of laws to Indians who fail to remove from state as agreed.—Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. Ed. 483; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. Ed. 228.

Where Indians had by treaty sold their land within that state, and agreed, to remove away, which they had failed to do, it was held that the state could not, while they remained on those lands, extend its laws, criminal and civil, over the tribes; that the duty and power to compel their removal was in the United States, and the tribe was under their protection, and could not be subjected to the laws of the state and the process of its courts. Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. Ed. 483, quoted in United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. Ed. 228.

76. Self-government by Indians.—Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 25; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 382, 30 L. Ed. 228; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 581, 8 L. Ed. 483; The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 29 L. Ed. 880; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 144, 48 L. Ed. 646.

77. Self-government secured to Cherokees by treaty.—Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 519, 8 L. Ed. 483; The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 29 L. Ed. 880; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 144, 48 L. Ed. 646; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 654, 34 L. Ed. 295; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041; Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 437, 41 L. Ed. 770; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 299.

"The Cherokee Nation has many of the rights and privileges of an independent people. They have their own constitution and laws and power to administer their internal affairs. They are recognized as a distinct political community and treaties have been made with them in that character. The Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 29 L. Ed. 880." Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 144, 48 L. Ed. 646.

"In some respects they bear the same relation to the federal government as a territory did in its second grade of government under the ordinance of 1787. Such territory passed its own laws, subject to the approval of congress, and its inhabitants were subject to the constitution and approval of congress, pass their own laws,[78] and establish their own courts with jurisdiction over internal affairs of the tribes or nations.[79] A treaty giving the United States sole and exclusive right of regulating the trade with the Indians, and managing all their affairs, does not amount to a surrender by the tribe of the rights of self-government.[80]

2. Effect of Indian Laws.—Indian tribes possessing the power of self-government may, of course, enact their own laws for the regulation of the internal affairs of the nation.[81] Thus, they may provide for the punishment of crimes by and against Indians in the Indian country,[82] provide for the forfeiture and sale of improvements made by the citizens within the Indian nation,[83] acts of congress. The principal difference consists in the fact that the Cherokees enact their own laws, under the restriction stated, appoint their own officers, and pay their own expenses. This, however, is no reason why the laws and proceedings of the Cherokee territory, so far as relates to rights claimed under them, should not be placed upon the same footing as other territories in the Union. It is not a foreign, but a domestic territory —a territory which originated under our constitution and laws." Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 299; Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 41 L. Ed. 770.

73. Power of Cherokees to legislate.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 437, 41 L. Ed. 770; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 654, 34 L. Ed. 295; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 484, 43 L. Ed. 1041.

The existence of the right in congress to regulate the manner in which the local powers of the Cherokee Nation shall be exercised does not render such local powers federal powers arising from and created by the constitution of the United States. As the powers of local self-government enjoyed by the Cherokee Nation existed prior to the constitution, they are not operated upon by the fifth amendment, which had for its sole object to control the powers conferred by the constitution on the national government. Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 384, 41 L. Ed. 196.

79. Cherokee courts.—See post, "Jurisdiction over Indians and Indian Country," V.

80. Authority of United States to "manage affairs" of Indians as surrender of self-government.—Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 553, 8 L. Ed. 483.

"To construe the expression 'managing all their affairs,' into a surrender of self-government, would be, we think, a perversion of their necessary meaning, and a departure from the construction which has been uniformly put on them. The great subject of the article is the Indian trade; the influence it gave made it desirable that congress should possess it." Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 553, 8 L. Ed. 483.

81. Indian laws.—Walker v. McLoud, 204 U. S. 302, 51 L. Ed. 495; Eddy v. Lafayette, 163 U. S. 456, 465, 41 L. Ed. 225; Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 84, 51 L. Ed. 96; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. Ed. 483; United States v. Choctaw Nation, 193 U. S. 115, 48 L. Ed. 640; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

The treaty of New Echota secures to the national counsels of the Cherokees the right to make and carry into effect such laws as they may deem necessary for the government and protection of the persons and property within their own country, belonging to their people, or such persons as have connected themselves with them, provided that such laws shall not be inconsistent with the constitution of the United States or acts of congress. United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

Laws as to descent and distribution.—See ante, "Descent and Distribution," III, B, 4.

Effect of errors of compiler.—See the title STATUTES.

82. Punishment of crimes by and against Indians in Indian country.—See post, "Jurisdiction over Indians and Indian Country," V.

83. Forfeiture of buildings erected on Indian country.—Walker v. McLoud, 204 U. S. 302, 51 L. Ed. 495 (building erected by railroad company outside of right of way).

Where the laws of the nation provide for a sale of such improvements for cash, a sale on credit passes no title. Walker v. McLoud, 204 U. S. 302, 51 L. Ed. 495.

Where the sale is invalid, an act of the Indian nation ratifying or providing for the enforcement of sales made in accordance with the Indian law is not effective to validate the sale. Walker v. McLoud, 204 U. S. 302, 51 L. Ed. 495.

Thus an act appropriating money to defend suits "in any manner relative to the full and complete execution of the laws of the Choctaw Nation by the sheriffs of each and every county in the confiscation of property of noncitizens who are now occupying lands or buildings, or who may thereafter occupy, not in conformity to the laws of the nation," does not amount to a ratification of a sale by a sheriff of the nation on credit, where the laws of the nation only authorized a sale for cash.

or prohibit the cutting of hay from the tribal lands by noncitizens of the tribe.[84] The court of claims of the United States cannot revise or set aside the laws of a tribe or nation without express authority for that purpose.[85]

V. Jurisdiction over Indians and Indian Country.

A. Criminal Jurisdiction—1. CRIMES BY INDIANS—a. Crimes on Indian Reservation—(1) Indian Reservation within State—(a) State Courts.—The state courts have no jurisdiction of crimes committed by Indians within Indian reservations within a state.[86]

(b) United States Courts—aa. General Rule.—Except where otherwise provided by statute, United States courts have exclusive jurisdiction of crimes committed by Indians upon an Indian reservation within a state.[87] And by the act of March 3, 1885, the United States courts are expressly given exclusive jurisdiction of the crimes of murder, manslaughter, rape, assault with intent to kill, arson, burglary and larceny when committed by Indians within a reservation within a state.[88]

bb. Crimes against Other Indians.—Prior to the act of March 3, 1885, United States courts had no jurisdiction of crimes by Indians against other Indians committed within an Indian reservation.[89] But as to the crimes of murder, Walker v. McLoud, 204 U. S. 302, 51 L. Ed. 495.

84. Prohibiting cutting hay on tribal lands.—Eddy v. Lafayette, 163 U. S. 456, 465, 41 L. Ed. 225.

Where no law of the Creek Nation is shown forbidding a member of the nation from cutting hay on land occupied in common with other members of the nation, a statute of the nation which forbids such action by a noncitizen licensed trader, does not apply to a case where such a trader cuts and cures hay for a member of the Indian nation on shares. Eddy v. Lafayette, 163 U. S. 456, 465, 41 L. Ed. 225.

85. Revision or disregard of laws by court of claims.—Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Indians, 193 U. S. 127, 144, 48 L. Ed. 646.

86. State courts.—Rev. Stat., § 2145; Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 41 L. Ed. 419; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 383, 30 L. Ed. 228; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 536, 8 L. Ed. 483.

"In the case of Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. Ed. 483, it was held that, though the Indians had by treaty sold their land within that state, and agreed to remove away, which they had failed to do, the state could not, while they remained on those lands, extend its laws, criminal and civil, over the tribes; that the duty and power to compel their removal was in the United States, and the tribe was under their protection, and could not be subjected to the laws of the state and the process of its courts. The same thing was decided in the case of Fellows v. Blacksmith, 19 How. 366, 15 L. Ed. 684." United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. Ed. 228.

87. United States courts.—As a general rule the general laws of the United States as to the punishment of crimes committed within the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, except the District of Columbia, extend to the Indian country. Rev. Stat., § 2145; Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282; Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67; Nofire v. United States, 164 U. S. 657, 662, 41 L. Ed. 588; In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 111, 35 L. Ed. 635; United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 26 L. Ed. 869; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 560, 27 L. Ed. 1030; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

88. Under act of 1885.—United States v. Thomas, 151 U. S. 577, 579, 38 L. Ed. 276; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

The act is constitutional.—United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

Murder on school land added to state.—Where the evidence shows that a murder was committed upon section sixteen, in township forty north, of range eight west, in the state of Wisconsin, said section sixteen being within the outside limits of La Court Oreilles, Chippewa Indian reservation, and having been previously, in 1859, settled, platted, and set apart by the United States as a part and parcel of said reservation and ever after occupied by said Indians as such, though claimed and sold by the state of Wisconsin as and for a part of the school land previously ceded to said state by act of congress, such murder was committed within the limits of said reservation within the meaning of § 9 of ch. 341 of the act of congress, approved March 3, 1885, so as to give the federal courts jurisdiction of the offense. United States v. Thomas, 151 U. S. 577, 579, 38 L. Ed. 276.

89. Rule prior to 1885.—Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Westmoreland v. United States, 155 manslaughter, rape, assault with intent to kill, arson, burglary and larceny, the act of March 3, 1885, confers jurisdiction upon the courts of the United States, even when committed by an Indian upon another Indian within an Indian reservation within a state.[90] Under the act of May 2, 1890, the United States courts have no jurisdiction of crimes in which members of an Indian nation by nativity or adoption are the sole and only parties.[91]

cc. Where Indian Has Been Punished by Tribal Court.—It is provided by statute that the jurisdiction of the United States courts shall not extend to crimes committed by an Indian within the Indian country where the Indian has been punished by the local law of the tribe.[92]

dd. Jurisdiction Secured to Tribal Courts by Treaty.—United States courts have no jurisdiction of the crime committed by an Indian within an Indian reservation within a state where jurisdiction over such offenses has been secured to the tribal courts of the Indians by treaty.[93]

(c) Tribal Courts—aa. Prior to Act of March 3, 1885.—Prior to the act of March 3, 1885, courts of the Indian nations or tribes have exclusive jurisdic-

U. S. 545, 547, 39 L. Ed. 255; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

Revised Statutes, § 2146, which excepts "crimes committed by one Indian against the person or property of another Indian," was not repealed by the treaty of 1868 with the Sioux nor by the act of congress of 1877 expressly or by implication. Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 570, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

Persons embraced within exception.—This exception does not embrace the case of a white man who, at mature age, is adopted into an Indian tribe. He is not an "Indian" within the meaning of the law. Hence, a plea set up by a white man, alleging that he has been adapted into an Indian tribe, and is not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States circuit court, is not valid. United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

90. Effect of act of 1885.—United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

The act is constitutional.—United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

The courts of the United States have jurisdiction or authority to try and punish an Indian belonging to an Indian tribe for committing the crime of murder upon another Indian belonging to the same Indian tribe, both sustaining the usual tribal relations, said crime having been committed upon an Indian reservation made and set apart for the use of the Indian tribe to which said Indians both belong. United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 376, 30 L. Ed. 228.

"The provisions of said § 9 (of the act of congress of March 3, 1885), making it a crime for one Indian to commit murder upon another Indian, upon an Indian reservation situated wholly within the limits of a state of the Union, and making such Indian so committing the crime of murder within and upon such Indian reservation 'subject to the same laws' and subject to be 'tried in the same court and in the same manner, and subject to the same penalties as are all other persons' committing the crime of murder 'within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States,' is a constitutional and valid law of the United States." United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 376, 30 L. Ed. 228.

The circuit court of the United States for the district of California has jurisdiction of an indictment against two Indians for murder committed on the Indian reservation of Hoopa Valley, in the state of California, the person murdered being also an Indian of said reservation. United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

91. Under act of May 2, 1890.—See post, "Under Act of May 2, 1890," V, A, 1, a, (1), (c), cc.

92. Crime for which Indian had been punished by tribal court.—Rev. Stat., § 2146; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 547, 39 L. Ed. 255.

This statute (§ 2146 of the Revised Statutes) was not respected by the treaty of 1868 with the Sioux Indians, nor by the act of congress of 1877. Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

93. Jurisdiction secured to tribal courts by treaty.—Rev. Stat., § 2146; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 381, 41 L. Ed. 196.

This statute (§ 2146, Rev. Stat.), was not repealed by the treaty of 1868 with the Sioux Indians, nor by the act of congress of 1877. Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 570, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

Under article 13 of the Cherokee treaty of July 19, 1866, the judicial tribunals of the Cherokee Nation are given exclusive jurisdiction in all civil and criminal cases arising within their country in which members of the country by nativity or adoption, shall be the only parties, or where the cause of action shall arise in the Cherokee Nation except as otherwise provided in the treaty. Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; In tion over crimes committed by Indians against Indians within an Indian reservation within a state.[94]

bb. Under Act of March 3, 1885.—But by that act the United States courts are given jurisdiction as to crimes of murder, manslaughter, rape, assault with intent to kill, arson, burglary and larceny, even when committed by an Indian against another Indian within an Indian reservation within a state.[95]

cc. Under Act of May 2, 1890.—Under the act of congress of May 2, 1890, judicial tribunals of the Indian nations were given exclusive jurisdiction in all civil and criminal cases arising in the country in which members of the nation by nativity or by adoption were the sole and only parties.[96] The words sole and only parties as applied to criminal cases means parties to the crime and not parties to the prosecution.[97] Thus, the courts of the Indian nations have exclusive jurisdiction of the crime of murder of one member of the nation by another,[98] and of the crime of adultery by an Indian with a white woman, com-re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. Ed. 635.

94. Rule prior to act of 1885.—Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

95. Effect of act of 1885.—United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

96. Under act of May 2, 1890.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282; Famous Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67; Nofire v. United States, 164 U. S. 657, 662, 41 L. Ed. 588; Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 381, 41 L. Ed. 196.

The act of May 2, 1890, is entitled an act to provide a temporary government for the territory of Oklahoma and to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States in the Indian territory. Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 502, 40 L. Ed. 1051; In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. Ed. 635; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282.

The general object of these statutes is to vest in the courts of the nation jurisdiction of all controversies between Indians, or where a member of the nation is the only party to the proceeding, and to reserve to the courts of the United States jurisdiction of all actions to which its own citizens are parties on either side. In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 116, 35 L. Ed. 635.

A crime committed by one member of the Cherokee tribe against another is within the jurisdiction of the courts of the nation. Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 53, 38 L. Ed. 67.

The crime of murder committed by one Cherokee Indian upon the person of another within the jurisdiction of the Cherokee Nation is, therefore, clearly not an offense against the United States, but an offense against the local laws of the Cherokee Nation. Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 381, 41 L. Ed. 196.

By treaties and statutes of the United States the right of the Cherokee Nation to exist as an autonomous body, subject always to the paramount authority of the United States, has been recognized. And from this fact there has consequently been conceded to exist in that nation power to make laws defining offenses and providing for the trial and punishment by those who violate them when the offenses are committed by one member of the tribe against another one of its members within the territory of the nation. Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 379, 41 L. Ed. 196.

The statutes of the United States which provide for an indictment by a grand jury, and the number of persons who shall constitute such a body, have no application, for such statutes relate only, if not otherwise specially provided, to grand juries empaneled for the courts of and under the laws of the United States. Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 381, 41 L. Ed. 196.

97. Meaning of "sole and only parties."—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282.

98. Murder of one member of nation by another.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282; Famous Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67; Nofire v. United States, 164 U. S. 657, 662, 41 L. Ed. 588.

"While it is impossible to speak of the deceased in a murder case as a party, in any proper sense, to a criminal prosecution against his assailant, it can scarcely have been the intention of congress to vest jurisdiction in the federal courts of cases in which the accused, an Indian, was guilty of a felonious assault upon a white man, not resulting in death, and deny it in case of a fatal termination, upon the ground that the accused is the only party to the cause." Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 504, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

Where it appears that a white person sought to become a citizen of the Cherokee Nation, took all the steps he supposed necessary therefor, considered himself a citizen, and that the Cherokee Nation in his lifetime recognized him as a citizen

mitted within the Indian country.[99] On the other hand, if in a murder case either the deceased or the accused are not members of the nation, the courts of the nation have no jurisdiction, but jurisdiction is in the United States courts.[1]

(2) Indian Reservation within Territory—(a) United States Courts—aa. General Rule.—Except where otherwise provided by statute or treaty United States courts have exclusive jurisdiction of crimes committed by Indians within an Indian reservation within a territory.[2] and still asserts his citizenship, it must be adjudged that he was a citizen by adoption, and consequently that jurisdiction over the offense of murdering him, the murderers being Cherokee Indians, is, by the laws of the United States and treaties with the Cherokee Nation, vested in the courts of that nation. Nofire v. United States, 164 U. S. 657, 662, 41 L. Ed. 588.

A negro who has been adopted into the Choctaw tribe, and murders a member of the nation, is within the jurisdiction of its tribunals. Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 615, 41 L. Ed. 282.

99. Adultery by Indian with white woman in Indian country.—In re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. Ed. 635.

"In the case of Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. Ed. 635, which was a case of adultery, in which the name of the prosecuting witness did not appear, we held that as there was no adverse party, the woman being a consenting party, the defendant was to be regarded as the sole party to the proceeding." Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 504, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

1. When one party not an Indian.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 614, 41 L. Ed. 282.

In a murder case the defendant, a negro born in slavery, became a citizen of the Cherokee Nation under the ninth article of the treaty of 1866, which gave him the rights of a native Cherokee, but did not make him an Indian within the meaning of § 2146 of the Revised Statutes, or absolve him from responsibility to the criminal laws of the United States. The murdered man was the illegitimate child of a Choctaw Indian, by a colored woman, who was not his wife, but a slave in the Cherokee Nation. It was held that for the purposes of jurisdiction the defendant was a member of the Cherokee Nation, but not an Indian, that the murdered man was a colored citizen of the United States, and that the United States courts and not those of the Indian tribes had jurisdiction. Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

2. Crimes by Indians within Indian reservation in territory.—Rev. Stat., § 2145; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 38 L. Ed. 631; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105; United States v. Dawson, 15 How. 467, 14 L. Ed. 775.

The Indian tribes residing within the territorial limits of the United States are subject to their authority, and where the country occupied by them is not within the limits of any one of the states, congress may, by law, punish any offense committed there, no matter whether the offender be a white man or an Indian. United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

The treaty with the Cherokees, concluded at New Echota, in 1835, allows the Indian Council to make laws for their own people or such persons as have connected themselves with them. But it also provides that such laws shall not be inconsistent with acts of congress. The act of 1844, therefore, controls and explains the treaty. United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

In June, 1844, congress passed an act, by virtue of which the circuit court of the United States for the district of Arkansas, was vested with power to try offenses committed within the Indian country. In July, 1844, it was alleged that a murder was committed in that country. In April, 1845, an indictment was found by a grand jury, in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Arkansas, against a person charged with committing the murder. In March, 1851, congress passed an act erecting nine of the western counties and the Indian country into a new judicial district, directing the judge to hold two terms there, and giving him jurisdiction of all causes, civil or criminal, except appeals and writs of error, which are cognizable before a circuit court of the United States. The residue of the state remained a judicial district to be styled the eastern district of Arkansas. This act of congress did not take away the power and jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district to try the indictment pending. United States v. Dawson, 15 How. 467, 14 L. Ed. 775.

Where an Indian reservation lies wholly within the limits of a territory, the district court of the territory having by law the jurisdiction of district and circuit courts of the United States, has jurisdiction of offenses committed against the laws of the United States by Indians within the limits of their reservations. Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 559, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

"The Sioux reservation is within the geographical limits of the Territory of Dakota, and being excepted out of it only in respect to the territorial government,

bb. Offenses by Indians against Indian Agents, Policemen, Marshals, etc.—Under the act of June 9, 1888, Indians committing offenses against Indian agents, policemen, deputy marshals, etc., in the Indian Territory, are subject to the laws of the United States relating to such crimes, and are to be tried by the district courts of the United States exercising criminal jurisdiction for that territory.[3]

cc. Crimes against Other Indians.—The United States courts have no jurisdiction of crimes committed by an Indian against another Indian within an Indian reservation within a territory, and this rule is not affected by the act of March 3, 1885.[4]

dd. Where Indian Has Been Punished by Tribal Court.—The United States courts have no jurisdiction of crimes committed by Indians within an Indian reservation within a territory, where the Indian committing the crime has been punished by an Indian tribe under the tribal laws.[5]

ee. Jurisdiction Secured to Tribal Courts by Treaty.—The United States courts have no jurisdiction of crimes committed by Indians within an Indian reservation within a territory, where exclusive jurisdiction over such offenses is secured to the tribal courts by treaty.[6]

(b) Territorial Courts.—Prior to the act of March 3, 1885, the territorial court had no jurisdiction of crimes committed by an Indian within an Indian reservation within a territory.[7] But by that act those courts were given jurisdiction of the crimes of murder, manslaughter, rape, assault with intent to kill, arson, burglary and larceny by Indians within an Indian reservation.[8]

the district court of that territory, within the geographical boundaries of whose district it lies, may exercise jurisdiction under the laws of the United States over offenses made punishable by them committed within its limits. United States v. Dawson, 15 How. 467, 14 L. Ed. 775; United States v. Jackalow, 1 Black 484, 17 L. Ed. 225; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105." Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 560, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

Offenses punishable by hard labor.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 88, note 86.

Offense of horse stealing in Cherokee outlet.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 88, note 87.

3. Offenses by Indians against Indian agents, policemen, marshals, etc.—Wright v. United States, 158 U. S. 232, 39 L. Ed. 963.

One acting as a de facto deputy by the authority of the marshal comes within the provision of the statute. Wright v. United States, 158 U. S. 232, 39 L. Ed. 963.

The offense of killing a posse man or guard comes within the jurisdiction of the United States, if the killing occurred when the deceased was not actually engaged in performing services. Wright v. United States, 158 U. S. 232, 39 L. Ed. 963.

In a prosecution for murder under this act it appeared that the accused was a Choctaw Indian and that the deceased, also a member of the Choctaw tribe, was a de facto deputy marshal, and was killed while he was not engaged in performing his duties as a posse man or guard. It was held that the United States courts had jurisdiction. Wright v. United States, 158 U. S. 232, 39 L. Ed. 963.

4. Rule prior to act of 1885.—Rev. Stat., § 2146; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 547, 39 L. Ed. 255; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. Ed. 1105.

5. Crime by Indian who has been punished by tribal court.—Rev. Stat., § 2146; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 547, 39 L. Ed. 255.

6. Jurisdiction secured to tribal courts by treaty.—Rev. Stat., § 2146; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030; Talton v. Mayes, 163 U. S. 376, 381, 41 L. Ed. 196.

7. Rule prior to 1885.—Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 349, 350, 32 L. Ed. 973.

8. Effect of act of 1885.—United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228; Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 32 L. Ed. 973; Ex parte Captain Jack, 130 U. S. 353, 32 L. Ed. 976; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

The statute declares "that the Indians shall be tried by the courts of the territory, and according to its laws, and shall be subject to the penalties which those laws prescribe. They are to be tried in the same manner and in the same courts as are all other persons charged with the commission of said crimes respectively, and the said courts are given jurisdiction in all such cases. It will be observed also that this part of the statute makes no distinction in regard to whether the crime was committed by the Indian on or off an

b. Crimes Outside of Reservation—(1) Crimes within State.—The state courts, of course, have exclusive jurisdiction of crimes committed by Indians within the state outside of the reservation.[9]

(2) Crimes within Territory.—The territorial courts have jurisdiction of crimes by an Indian within the territory and outside of an Indian reservation.[10]

2. CRIMES BY PERSONS OTHER THAN INDIANS—a. On Indian Reservation within State.—The state courts have exclusive jurisdiction over crimes committed on Indian reservations within the limits of the state, by others than Indians or against Indians, unless the enabling act admitting the state into the Union provides otherwise.[11]

b. On Indian Reservation within Territory.—Prior to 1885 the district courts of a territory as a court of the United States, had jurisdiction over the crime of murder, committed by any person other than an Indian, upon an Indian reservation within its territorial limits, and such jurisdiction has not been taken away by the legislation of that year.[12]

c. Selling Liquor to Indians.—The 12th section of the judiciary act of 1789, which gives to the circuit courts concurrent jurisdiction of all crimes and offenses cognizable in the district courts, is prospective, and embraces all of-

Indian reservation." Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 352, 32 L. Ed. 973.

The statute does not even define the crimes of murder, manslaughter, etc., but this must be governed by the laws of the territory, so far as they furnish any definition of the crime. Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 351, 352, 32 L. Ed. 973.

The statute was enacted to transfer to the territorial courts established by the general government, as all courts of general jurisdiction are in the territories, the jurisdiction to try the crimes described in it under the territorial laws, when sitting as and exercising the functions of such territorial court. Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 352, 32 L. Ed. 973; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

The crimes referred to in the act of 1885 committed by Indians in a territory are to be tried in the same manner and in the same courts as are crimes by other persons charged with the commission of such crimes. Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 32 L. Ed. 973; Ex parte Captain Jack, 130 U. S. 353, 32 L. Ed. 976.

Murder.—Under the act of March 3, 1885, where murder is committed by an Indian within the limits of the territorial government, whether on or off an Indian reservation, the territorial courts have jurisdiction when sitting as territorial courts and not while exercising the functions of the district or circuit courts of the United States. Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 32 L. Ed. 973; Ex parte Captain Jack, 130 U. S. 353, 32 L. Ed. 976; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. Ed. 1030.

Constitutionality of act of 1885.—The act of 1885 is constitutional. United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. Ed. 228.

9. Crimes committed by Indians within state outside of reservation.—See Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 32 L. Ed. 973; Ex parte Captain Jack, 130 U. S. 353, 32 L. Ed. 976.

10. Crimes committed by Indians within territory outside of reservation.—Gon-Shay-ee, Petitioner, 130 U. S. 343, 32 L. Ed. 973; Ex parte Captain Jack, 130 U. S. 353, 354, 32 L. Ed. 976 (where the accused, an Indian, was tried for murder committed outside of an Indian reservation).

By the act of March 3, 1885, jurisdiction is given to the territorial courts over the crimes of murder, manslaughter, rape, assault with intent to kill, arson, burglary and larceny, by Indians, and when committed either within or without an Indian reservation. It is immaterial that crimes by an Indian within a territory were not committed in an Indian reservation. Territorial courts have jurisdiction in both cases. Ex parte Captain Jack, 130 U. S. 353, 32 L. Ed. 976.

11. Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 245, 41 L. Ed. 419; United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 622, 26 L. Ed. 869.

In reserving to the United States jurisdiction and control over Indian lands, by the enabling act admitting Montana as a state into the Union, it was not intended to deprive that state of power to punish for crimes committed on a reservation or Indian lands by other than Indians or against Indians. Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 246, 41 L. Ed. 419.

The circuit court of the United States sitting in and for the district of Colorado has no jurisdiction of the crime of murder, committed by a white man upon a white man, within the Ute reservation in said district, and within the geographical limits of the state of Colorado. United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 26 L. Ed. 869.

12. Crimes by persons other than Indians on Indian reservation in territory.—

fenses the jurisdiction of which is vested in the district courts by subsequent statutes. Therefore the circuit courts have jurisdiction of the offense of selling ardent spirits to an Indian, under the act of February 12, 1862, although by that act the jurisdiction is vested only in the district court.[13]

3. Averment and Proof of Jurisdictional Facts—a. Indictment.—Where the jurisdiction of the court is dependent on the status of the accused or the defendant as Indians or otherwise, it should contain an averment showing that their status is such as to give the court jurisdiction.[14] An indictment in the United States courts for the eastern district of Texas, which has jurisdiction over offenses against the laws of the United States committed in certain portion of the Indian Territory for murder, which charges that the defendant and the deceased were not Indians nor citizens of the Indian Territory, is sufficient.[15]

b. Evidence—(1) Burden of Proof.—Where the jurisdiction of the court of a criminal prosecution is dependent on whether the person against whom the offense was committed was a white man or an Indian, the burden of proving that his status is such as to give the court jurisdiction rests on the government.[16]

(2) Admissibility.—Where the jurisdiction of the United States courts is dependent upon the question whether the deceased was an Indian, statements alleged to have been made by him during his lifetime to a witness that he did not belong to the Indian country are inadmissible.[17]

(3) Weight and Sufficiency.—And the evidence adduced to prove the fact

In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. Ed. 513.

13. Selling liquor in Indian country.—United States v. Mayrand, 154 U. S. 552, 18 L. Ed. 699.

Offense of selling liquor to Indians.—United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 18 L. Ed. 182. See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 91, note 4, and p. 94.

14. Indictment must show jurisdiction of parties and crime.—Wheeler v. United States, 159 U. S. 523, 40 L. Ed. 244; Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 39 L. Ed. 255.

15. Sufficiency of indictment.—Wheeler v. United States, 159 U. S. 523, 40 L. Ed. 244; Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 39 L. Ed. 255.

Where it was insisted that article 38 of the treaty with the Choctaws and Chickasaws, of April 28, 1866, 14 Stat. 769, 779, provides that "every white person who, having married a Choctaw or Chickasaw, resides in the said Choctaw or Chickasaw nation, or who has been adopted by the legislative authorities, is to be deemed a member of said nation, and shall be subject to the laws of the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations according to his domicile, and to prosecution and trial before their tribunals, and to punishment according to their laws in all respects as though he was a native Choctaw or Chickasaw;" and that, therefore, the indictment should also negative the conditions of this article, and it was charged that the defendant and the deceased were not "citizens of the Indian Territory," it was held that force must be given to this term in the indictment, and while it may be conceded that it is not the most apt to describe citizenship in an Indian tribe, yet it is not an unreasonable construction to hold that it refers to all citizenship which could possibly be acquired in the Indian Territory, including therein citizenship in any Indian tribe domiciled within such limits. Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 548, 39 L. Ed. 255.

16. Burden of proof that person against whom crime committed was not an Indian.—Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282; Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 38 L. Ed. 67.

That the murdered man was a white man, and not an Indian, was a fact which the government was bound to establish, and if it failed to introduce any evidence upon that point, defendant was entitled to an instruction to that effect. Famous Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67.

Where a member of the Choctaw Indians is indicted in the United States courts for murder, at the Choctaw Nation, in the Indian country, of a person who is alleged in the indictment to have been "a negro and not an Indian," the burden of proof is on the government to sustain the jurisdiction of the court by showing that the deceased was not a member of the Choctaw Nation as there is no presumption that a negro found within the Indian country is not a member of the tribe. Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282.

17. Admissibility of evidence as to status of deceased.—Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 616, 41 L. Ed. 282.

Such a declaration is not one against interest and admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule, upon the ground that had he been an Indian he would have been entitled to benefits and rights as such. Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 616, 41 L. Ed. 282.

must be clear and convincing.[18]

(4) Questions of Law and Fact.—Where the jurisdiction of the United States courts upon an indictment for murder is dependent upon deceased not being an Indian, the status of the deceased is a question of fact to be determined by the evidence.[19]

B. Civil Jurisdiction—1. INDIAN RESERVATIONS EXCEPTED FROM STATE OR TERRITORY.—When, by the act of congress organizing a territorial government, or admitting a state into the Union, lands within an Indian reservation are, in pursuance of a treaty with the Indians, excepted out of the jurisdiction of the government thus brought into existence, they constitute no part of such state or territory, although they are included within its boundaries.[20]

2. SUITS BETWEEN INDIANS.—Under the act of May 2, 1890, the judicial tribunals of the Indian nations were given exclusive jurisdiction in civil as well as in criminal cases arising in the country in which members of the nation by nativity or adoption were the only parties.[21]

3. SUITS AGAINST INDIAN BY CITIZEN OF UNITED STATES RESIDING IN INDIAN COUNTRY.—The right of a citizen of the United States residing in the Chickasaw Nation, but whose citizenship therein is denied by that nation to appeal to the federal courts to take jurisdiction of his claims against one of the Chickasaw Nation, must be sustained, for it cannot be that a citizen of the United States residing in the Chickasaw Nation can be wronged without an opportunity of redress in some judicial tribunal.[22]

4. SUITS BETWEEN INDIANS AND RAILROAD IN INDIAN COUNTRY.—By the act of July 4, 1884, 23 Stat. 73, c. 179, the United States circuit and district courts for the northern district of Texas, the western district of Arkansas, and the district of Kansas, and such other courts as may be authorized by congress, shall have, without reference to the amount in controversy, concurrent jurisdiction over all controversies arising between said Southern Kansas Railway Company and the nations and tribes through whose territory said railway shall be constructed, and also over all controversies arising between the inhabitants of said nations or tribes and said railway company; and the civil jurisdiction of those courts is thereby extended within the limits of the Indian territory, without distinction as to citizenship of the parties, so far as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the act.[23]

18. Sufficiency of evidence.—Famous Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67.

Evidence that a man murdered by an Indian was not permitted to vote in the Canadian district, where the murder was committed, was explained by the fact that he had not resided in the district the six months required by law to entitle him to vote, and by the fact that one of the judges of election told him that he had no doubt that he was an Indian, and the fact that the murdered man said he lived in southern Arkansas, without any evidence showing how he came to live there, under what circumstances, or how long he lived there, did not constitute any evidence of his being a white man, or that, being an Indian, he had severed his tribal relations and become a citizen of the United States. Famous Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 50, 55, 38 L. Ed. 67.

19. Status of deceased a question of fact.—Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 616, 41 L. Ed. 282.

20. Indian reservation excepted from state or territory.—Langford v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 145, 146, 26 L. Ed. 53, explaining Harkness v. Hyde, 98 U. S. 476, 25 L. Ed. 237.

Congress, from which the power to exercise the new jurisdiction emanates, has undoubted authority to exclude therefrom any part of the soil of the United States, or of that whereto the Indians have the possessory title, when, by our solemn treaties with them, a stipulation to that effect has been made. Langford v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 145, 146, 26 L. Ed. 53.

Indian reservations in Idaho are not excepted from the territorial jurisdiction. Langford v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 145, 147, 26 L. Ed. 53, explaining Harkness v. Hyde, 98 U. S. 476, 25 L. Ed. 237.

21. Civil jurisdiction.—Alberty v. United States, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051; Lucas v. United States, 163 U. S. 612, 41 L. Ed. 282.

22. Claims by citizen of United States, residing within nation, against Indians.—Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 219, 223, 42 L. Ed. 442.

23. Suits between Indians and railroad in Indian country.—Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Briscoe, 144 U. S. 133, 134, 36 L. Ed. 377.

VI. Taxation.

A. Indian Property.—As a general rule, property of Indians is not subject to taxation by the state or territory within which they reside.[24] Thus, Indian lands are not, as a general rule, subject to taxation by a state,[25] or subject to sale for taxes,[26] even though the statute provides that their occupancy shall not be disturbed by the tax sale.[27] And treaties exempting Indian lands from levy sale and forfeiture are to be construed as exempting them from levy and sale for nonpayment of taxes.[28] Lands allotted to individual members of Indian tribes patented to them with express restriction that they are not to be sold without the consent of the government,[29] or lands allotted to Indians and held in trust by 24. Indian property not subject to taxation.—The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667; Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 249, 45 L. Ed. 162; Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 506, 49 L. Ed. 848; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 437, 47 L. Ed. 532; The New York Indians, 5 Wall. 761, 18 L. Ed. 708; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 100, 28 L. Ed. 643.

25. Indian lands not subject to taxation.—The New York Indians, 5 Wall. 716, 18 L. Ed. 708; The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667.

Where Indians, under arrangements approved by the United States, agree to sell their lands to private citizens, and to give possession of them at the expiration of a term of years named, a taxation of the lands before the efflux of the term is premature; even though a sale for the nonpayment of the taxes might not take place until after the time when, if they fulfilled their agreements, the Indians would have left the land; and even though any sale would be subject to the proviso named in the preceding paragraph. The New York Indians, 5 Wall. 761, 18 L. Ed. 708.

Lands of Shawnee Indians held in severalty were not subject to state taxation, although in the last treaty with the Shawnees, the one authorizing the allotments, there was no express stipulation for exemption from taxation. The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667.

The state of Kansas has no right to tax lands held in severalty by individual Indians of the Shawnee, Miami, and Wea tribes, under patents issued to them by virtue of the treaties made with those tribes respectively in 1854, and in pursuance of the provisions of the 11th section of the act of June 30th, 1859 (11 Stat. at Large, p. 431). The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667.

Where Indians, being in possession of lands, their ancient and native homes, the enjoyment of which, "without disturbance by the United States," has been secured to them by treaty with the federal government, with the assurance that "the lands shall remain theirs until they choose to sell them," the state in which the lands lie has no power to tax them, either for ordinary town and county purposes or for the special purpose of surveying them and opening roads through them. The case of The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667, approved in The New York Indians, 5 Wall. 761, 18 L. Ed. 708.

Irrepealibility of exemption.—A legislative act, declaring that certain lands which should be purchased for the Indians, should not, thereafter, be subject to any tax, constituted a contract, which could not be rescinded by a subsequent legislative act—such repealing act being void, under that clause of the constitution of the United States, which prohibits a state from passing any law impairing the obligation of contracts. New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch 164, 3 L. Ed. 303.

26. Indian lands not subject to sale for taxes.—The New York Indians, 5 Wall. 761, 18 L. Ed. 708.

A deed of lands owned by Indians under a sale for taxes, and purporting to convey the lands to the purchaser, would, in law, be a disturbance of the Indian tribe. The New York Indians, 5 Wall. 761, 18 L. Ed. 708.

27. Effect of statute providing that tax sale shall not affect right of occupancy.—A statute of a state authorizing a sale of such lands for taxes so laid, is void, even though the statute provide that "no sale, for the purpose of collecting the tax, shall, in any manner, affect the right of the Indians to occupy the land." The New York Indians, 5 Wall. 761, 18 L. Ed. 708.

28. Exemption from levy and sale construed as exemption from taxation.—The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667.

Rules of interpretation favorable to the Indian tribes are to be adopted in construing our treaties with them. Hence, a provision in an Indian treaty which exempts their lands from "levy, sale, and forfeiture," is not, in the absence of expressions so to limit it, to be confined to levy and sale under ordinary judicial proceedings only, but is to be extended to levy and sale by county officers also, for nonpayment of taxes. The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667.

29. Lands patented to Indians but not subject to sale by them.—The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. Ed. 667; Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 249, 45 L. Ed. 162.

the United States for the benefit of the Indians,[30] or improvements on personal property upon Indian allotments held in trust for Indians by the United States,[31] are not subject to taxation by the state within which the allotments are situated. But Indian allotments are subject to sale for taxes after all restrictions or exemptions are removed, and the owner thereof has become a citizen and subject to all the laws of the state or territory in which he resides,[32] and lands patented in fee simple to half breeds or Indians intermarrying with white persons are subject to taxation by the state although the owner thereof still keeps up his relations with the tribe as a member thereof.[33]

B. Non-Indian Property within Reservation—1. TAXATION BY STATES OR TERRITORIES.—Property of persons other than Indians situated within an Indian reservation within the limits of a territory may be taxed by the state or 30. Lands allotted to Indians but held in trust for them by United States.—United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 438, 47 L. Ed. 532. See, also, Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 509, 49 L. Ed. 848.

Where lands are held in trust by the United States in execution of its plans relating to Indians without any right in the Indians to make contracts in reference to them or to do more than occupy and cultivate them, until a regular patent conveying the fee to the several allottees, there is no power in the state in which they are situated to assess and tax lands for state or municipal purposes until the fee is conveyed to the Indians. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 438, 47 L. Ed. 532.

The United States has such interest that it may maintain a suit to restrain the collection of taxes upon Indian allotments, improvements thereon and personal property used by the Indians upon the allotments, the land being held in trust by the government for the Indians and the personal property being in fact property of the United States put in the Indian's hands in execution of a purpose of the government in reference to the Indians. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 438, 47 L. Ed. 532.

The remedy of the United States to prevent the collection of taxes assessed upon Indian allotments, improvements thereon and personal property used by the Indians upon the allotments, is in equity. There is no remedy at law so prompt and efficacious as to deprive the government of the right to resort to equity. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 438, 47 L. Ed. 532.

31. Improvements on personal property on allotments held in trust.—United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 438, 47 L. Ed. 532.

Permanent improvements made upon Indian allotments held in trust for Indians by the United States are not taxable by the taxing officers of the county in which the allotments are situated. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 438, 47 L. Ed. 532.

Personal property consisting of cattle, horses and other property of like character issued to Indians by the United States, and being used by them upon allotments held by the United States in trust for them, is not liable to taxation and assessment by the state in which the allotments are situated. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 438, 47 L. Ed. 532.

32. After removal of restrictions against taxation of allotments.—The original treaty of December 26, 1854, made between the United States and the Tuyallup Indians, provided that the lands allotted to said Indians should be exempt from levy, sale or forfeiture until the legislature of the state within which such lands were located should, with the consent of congress, remove the restriction. The state of Washington passed a statute removing such restriction and granting the power of alienation "in like manner and with like effect as any other person may do under the laws of the United States and of this state, and all restrictions in reference thereto are hereby removed." Congress postponed the operation of this statute for ten years. It was held that after the expiration of the ten years, and after an allottee had become a citizen under the act of congress of February 8, 1887, which subjected allottees who became citizens to the laws, civil and criminal, of the state or territory, wherein they resided, his land was subject to sale for taxes. Goudy v. Meath, 203 U. S. 146, 51 L. Ed. 130.

33. Property deed to half-blood in fee simple.—By article 10 of the treaty of July, 1860, with the Sacs and Foxes, severing the tenure in common by which the lands of such Indians were held, such members of the tribe as were either mixed and half-bloods, or women who had intermarried with white men, were allowed certain lands, and by another treaty with the tribes, ratified in October, 1868, it was provided that persons entitled to selections of land under the treaty of July, 1860, and whose selections had been approved by the secretary of the interior, should be entitled to patents in fee simple, and under this provision a patent was issued to the plaintiff, a member of the tribe of mixed or half-blood, and also a woman who had intermarried with a white man. It was held that her land was subject to taxation, although she still kept up her territory in which the reservation is located,[34] and this is true although the property is owned by nonresidents of the state or territory.[35] Thus, the state or territory in which an Indian reservation is located may tax the property of a railroad within the reservation,[36] or cattle grazing on the reservation with the consent of Indians.[37]

2. Taxation by Indian Nations.—The regulations of the secretary of the interior, and the act of the legislature of the Chickasaw Nation approved by the governor on May 5, 1902, and sanctioned by the president of the United States on May 15, 1902, providing for a tax on all live stock introduced by noncitizens into the Chickasaw Nation, is not the exercise of arbitrary power, and neither the act nor the regulations in any respect violate the constitution of the United States.[38]

C. Internal Revenue Laws as Extending to Reservations.—The internal revenue laws of the United States, imposing taxes, are, of course, in force within the Indian country.[39] relations with the tribe as a member thereof. Pennock v. Commissioners, 103 U. S. 44, 26 L. Ed. 367.

34. Taxation by territory of non-Indian property on reservation.—Maricopa, etc., R. Co. v. Arizona, 156 U. S. 347, 39 L. Ed. 447; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 275, 42 L. Ed. 740; Utah, etc., R. Co. v. Fisher, 116 U. S. 28, 29 L. Ed. 542; Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 591, 42 L. Ed. 1154. See, also, Montana Catholic Missions v. Missoula County, 200 U. S. 118, 50 L. Ed. 398.

Taxing personal property of persons other than Indians, and situated within the reservation, did not impair the rights of person or property pertaining to the Indians. Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 590, 42 L. Ed. 1154; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. Ed. 740.

The territorial legislature may empower the authorities of an organized county to tax personal property situated in a reservation attached to such county for judicial purposes. Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 590, 42 L. Ed. 1154.

35. Property of nonresidents of state or territory.—Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 590, 42 L. Ed. 1154; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 275, 42 L. Ed. 740.

36. Taxation of railroad within Indian reservation.—Utah, etc., R. Co. v. Fisher, 116 U. S. 28, 29 L. Ed. 542; Maricopa, etc., R. Co. v. Arizona, 156 U. S. 347, 39 L. Ed. 447.

The lands and railroad of a railway company within the limits of the Fort Hill Indian reservation in the territory of Idaho was lawfully subject to territorial taxation, which may be enforced within the exterior boundaries of the reservation by proper process. Utah, etc., R. Co. v. Fisher, 116 U. S. 28, 29 L. Ed. 542.

The part of a railroad constructed through an Indian reservation in a territory, in pursuance to a grant of a right of way from congress, is subject to taxation by the territory. Maricopa, etc., R. Co. v. Arizona, 156 U. S. 347, 39 L. Ed. 447.

37. Taxation of cattle grazing within reservation.—Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 275, 42 L. Ed. 740; Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 590, 42 L. Ed. 1154.

Taxation of cattle kept for grazing purposes upon the reservations, under leases duly authorized by act of congress, was not a violation of the rights of the Indians, nor an invasion of the jurisdiction and control of the United States over them and their lands. Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 591, 42 L. Ed. 1154; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. Ed. 740.

The legislative assembly of Oklahoma has power to pass laws taxing property, such as cattle grazing within an Indian reservation, though belonging to a citizen of another state within the limits of the Indian reservations, and belonging to persons not Indians. Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 275, 42 L. Ed. 740; Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 590, 42 L. Ed. 1154.

38. Taxation of property within reservation by Indian nations.—Morris v. Hitchcock, 194 U. S. 384, 48 L. Ed. 1030.

While it is unquestioned that, by the constitution of the United States, congress is vested with paramount power to regulate commerce with the Indian tribes, yet it is also undoubted that in treaties entered into with the Chickasaw Nation, the right of that tribe to control the presence within the territory assigned to it of persons who might otherwise be regarded as intruders has been sanctioned, and the duty of the United States to protect the Indians "from aggression by other Indians and white persons, not subject to their jurisdiction and laws," has also been recognized. Arts. 7 and 14, Treaty June 22, 1855, 11 Stat. 611; Art. 8, Treaty April 28, 1866, 14 Stat. 769. And it is not disputed that under the authority of these treaties the Chickasaw Nation has exercised the power to attach conditions to the presence within its borders of persons who might otherwise not be entitled to remain within the tribal territory. Morris v. Hitchcock, 194 U. S. 384, 48 L. Ed. 1030.

39. Internal revenue laws in force within Indian country.—The 107th sec-

VII. Indian Officers or Agents.

A. Powers.—No officer of the government was authorized to bind the United States by any contract for the subsistance of Indians not based upon appropriations made by congress, and the court of claims has no jurisdiction of an action to enforce such a contract.[40]

B. Liability of United States for Default of Agent.—Even if the United States is liable to an Indian tribe for embezzlement of the funds of Indian orphans by an Indian agent, there can be no recovery unless the amount thereof is shown.[41]

C. Personal Liability of Agent.—An Indian agent is not personally liable on a contract made by him for the government with one who knew of his agency.[42]

D. Compensation and Fees.—While an agent officer of the United States, such as an Indian, is not entitled to extra compensation or commission for acts within the line of his official duty,[43] he may have a right to compensation for tion of the internal revenue act of July 20, 1868, which enacts that "the internal revenue laws imposing taxes on distilled spirits, fermented liquors, tobacco, snuff, and cigars, shall be construed to extend to such articles produced anywhere within the exterior boundaries of the United States, whether the same shall be within a collection district or not," applies to and is in force in the Indian territory embraced within the western district of Arkansas, and occupied by the Cherokee Nation of Indians, notwithstanding the 10th article of the prior treaty of 1866, between the United States and that nation, by which it was agreed that "every Cherokee Indian and freed person residing in the Cherokee Nation shall have the right to sell any products of his farm, including his or her live stock, or any merchandise or manufactured products, and to ship and drive the same to market without restraint, paying any tax thereon which is now or may be levied by the United States on the quantity sold outside of the Indian territory." The Cherokee Tobacco, 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 227.

40. Power of agent to contract for subsistence of Indians.—United States v. McDougall, 121 U. S. 89, 100, 30 L. Ed. 861.

Congress did not intend to invest the president or the head of a department, or any officer of the government, with unrestricted authority in the making of treaties with Indians, or in regulating intercourse with them, to purchase merchandise for them, or to make payments of money or goods to them. It appropriated certain sums to enable the president to hold treaties with the various Indian tribes in California. To the extent of such appropriations the president, through persons designated by him, could purchase merchandise, required in the making of a treaty, and could make payment of money or goods on account of the Indians. United States v. McDougall, 121 U. S. 89, 100, 30 L. Ed. 861.

41. Liability of United States to Indian tribe for embezzlement by agent.—Where there was a certain sum of money to be paid by the government to certain Indian orphans in accordance with the treaty of 1825, and it was paid, in part, to guardians appointed by the Indian council, which part by laches or dishonesty never reached said orphans, and, in part, to a United States Indian superintendent for distribution, and he embezzled it, conceding that the government is justly liable for such portion of this money as was committed to the Indian superintendent (though it clearly is not for the portion paid to the guardians appointed by the Indian council) it is by no means clear that the Indian tribe, as such, is entitled to recover the amount embezzled by said superintendent. But, whether the tribe is so entitled or not, there is nothing in the record of this case to indicate how much of this money was embezzled by the guardians created by the Indian council, and how much by the Indian superintendent, so there is in reality no basis for a decree in favor of the said Indian tribe. United States v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 180, 193, 39 L. Ed. 114.

42. Personal liability of agent on public contract.—Where the United States and the Cherokee Nation agreed that the latter should emigrate across the Mississippi, and the former pay the expenses thereof, and the Cherokees undertook to conduct the movement entirely by their own agents, a person whose wagons had been hired could not hold the agent who had hired them personally responsible. The owner of the wagons knew that the agent was a public officer, and dealt with him as such. Parks v. Ross, 11 How. 362, 13 L. Ed. 730.

43. Extra compensation while acting as Indian agent.—Minis v. United States, 15 Pet. 423, 10 L. Ed. 791; Stewart v. United States, 206 U. S. 185, 51 L. Ed. 1017.

In Stewart v. United States, 206 U. S. 185, 51 L. Ed. 1017, it was held that a register of the land office was not entitled to compensation which would make his salary more than $2,500 for services in selling lands under the treaty of Septem-work or services performed by him outside of the line of his duty.[44] If an Indian agent accepts the amount appropriated by congress for payment of his salary, and gives a receipt in full, he is not entitled to recover anything more, though the amount received is less than the salary fixed by general law for the services rendered by him.[45]

VIII. Claims by Indians against United States.

A. Liability of Government—1. ACCOUNT RENDERED BY GOVERNMENT AND ACCEPTED BY INDIANS.—The United States is liable to an Indian tribe for an amount found due by an officer of the government, who was authorized to make an accounting for that purpose, which account was accepted by the Indians.[46]

2. LANDS TAKEN BY MISTAKE.—The United States is liable to an Indian tribe for lands appropriated by the government, as a part of their public domain by mistake, in surveying and fixing the boundary of a state.[47]

3. INTEREST ON FUNDS DUE INDIANS.—See the title INTEREST.

B. Enforcement—1. ARBITRATION.—As to certainty and conclusiveness of award by senate upon submission to that body of claim by Choctaw Nation against United States, see the title ARBITRATION AND AWARD, vol. 2, p. 482, notes 89, 90.

2. ACTION IN COURT OF CLAIMS—a. Jurisdiction.—See the title COURTS, vol. 4, pp. 1038, 1040.

b. Power of Court to Convert Annuities.—In the absence of express statutory authority, the court of claims has no power to convert perpetual annuities given to Indians into a present fund.[48] ber 29, 1865, with the Osage Indians, as the duty had been imposed upon the various registers prior to the claimant's appointment, and there was no express provision that their compensation should not exceed $2,500.

The passage of an act providing for submission to the court of claims of a claim of the register of the United States land office to extra compensation for the sale of land provided for by the treaty of September 29, 1865, with the Osage Indians was not an admission that anything was due beyond his regular salary which had been paid. Stewart v. United States, 206 U. S. 185, 51 L. Ed. 1017. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1036.

Right of any officer acting as Indian disbursing agent to commissions.—See the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 533, note 23.

44. Services outside of line of duty.—United States v. Brindle, 110 U. S. 688, 695, 28 L. Ed. 286, where a receiver of public land money was held entitled to extra compensation for acting as agent of Indian trust lands under the treaty of 1854 with the Delaware Indians, the duties performed being special in the nature and the treaty expressly providing for payment therefor, although the salary of the agent was thereby made to exceed $2,500 per year.

45. Acceptance in full of less amount appropriated than allowed by general statute.—Belknap v. United States, 150 U. S. 588, 37 L. Ed. 1191.

46. Accounting made by officer of United States and accepted by Indians.—United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. Ed. 949.

By the agreement between the United States and the Cherokee Nation ceding the Cherokee Outlet to the United States, it was agreed that the United States should render to the Cherokee Nation an account of the money due by the United States to the nation under previous treaty stipulations between the two, and that if the amount was accepted by the nation congress was to appropriate the money for such payment. It was held that the United States was liable to the nation for the amount stated to be due in an account submitted to the Indians by the government and accepted by them in accordance with the agreement. United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. Ed. 949.

47. Lands taken by mistake.—Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 2, 30 L. Ed. 306.

Where the court of claims found as a fact, that, in the location of the line which was surveyed under the treaty of the United States, and fixed as the permanent boundary between the state of Arkansas and the Indian country by the act of March 3, 1875, the government made a mistake, whereby they embraced in the territory appropriated by the United States as part of the public lands a portion of the Indian lands, this is a just and valid claim for which the Choctaw Nation is entitled to compensation. Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 2, 30 L. Ed. 306.

48. Power of court to convert annuities.—Phineas Pam-To-Pee v. United States, 148 U. S. 691, 37 L. Ed. 613.

3. Set-Off and Counterclaim.—In an action by an Indian tribe against the United States for a debt due, a set-off cannot be sustained, unless it be shown that the claim on which it is founded is actually due in whole or in part.[49]

4. Costs.—The Cherokee Nation prosecuting a claim against the United States for the amount agreed to be allowed to the nation for the removal of the Eastern Cherokees to the lands set apart for them west of the Mississippi, are entitled to have their counsel fees allowed to them out of the amount found to be due the Eastern Cherokees as expenses of the removal.[50]

5. Attorney's Fees.—The question as to allowance of fees to attorneys prosecuting claims against the United States on behalf of Indians, is treated in another title.[51]

IX. Depredations by or against Indians.

See the title Courts, vol. 4, pp. 1036, 1038.

X. Treaties with Indians.

As to validity, construction and general effect of treaties with Indians, see the title Treaties. The governmental, personal, and property rights of Indians, as well as the control and regulation of Indians or Indian country, as dependent on particular treaties, is treated in this title under heads relating thereto.

INDIA RUBBER.—See note 1.

The court of claims has no power to convert the perpetual annuity given to the Pottawatomie Indians by the treaty of September 26, 1833, and the supplementary treaty thereto of September 27, 1833, into a sum for present payment. Phineas Pam-To-Pee v. United States, 148 U. S. 691, 37 L. Ed. 613.

49. Set-off and counterclaim.—United States v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 180, 39 L. Ed. 114.

When the government, in the treaty of 1825 with the Shawnee Indians, undertook to support and keep a blacksmith for the use of the Indians on the land assigned by said treaty to the Indians, "for the term of five years, or as long as the president may deem it advisable" the finding that the sum of $17,408.73 was paid the Shawnees for blacksmiths from 1825 to 1854 is too indefinite to be made the subject of a set-off in a suit by the Indians to collect a debt due from the United States, unless it is shown how much of this sum was expended during the five years, or the extended period deemed "advisable" by the president. United States v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 180, 39 L. Ed. 114.

50. Costs allowed to one band of Indians for prosecution of claim in behalf of another.—United States v. Cherokee Nation, 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. Ed. 949. See the title COSTS, vol. 4, p. 802.

51. Attorneys' fees.—See the title ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 2, p. 724, note 85. And see Gilfillan v. McKee, 159 U. S. 303, 40 L. Ed. 161; McKee v. Lamon, 159 U. S. 317, 40 L. Ed. 165; McKee v. Latrobe, 159 U. S. 327, 40 L. Ed. 169.

1. India rubber.—See Judge v. Hedden, 146 U. S. 233, 239, 36 L. Ed. 953. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

India rubber shoes.—Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. 785, 12 L. Ed. 914. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS.

BY T. B. BENSON.

I. Accusation in General, 966.
- A. What Constitutes, 966.
- B. The Different Forms of Accusation, 966.
  - 1. Indictment, 966.
  - 2. Presentment, 966.
  - 3. Information, 967.
    - a. In General, 967.
    - b. At Relation of Private Person, 967.
    - c. In Nature of Quo Warranto, 968.
    - d. Libel in Nature of Information, 968.
  - 4. Complaint, 968.
    - a. In General, 968.
    - b. In Extradition Cases, 968.
- C. Object and Purpose, 968.
  - 1. Notice to Accused, 968.
  - 2. Commencement of Prosecution, 968.
- D. Offenses Subject to Accusation, 968.

II. Necessity for Presentment or Indictment, 968.
- A. In General, 968.
- B. In Contempt Cases, 969.
- C. In Extradition Cases, 969.
- D. In Examination of Witnesses by Grand Jury, 969.

III. Finding of Indictment, 969.
- A. Ancient English Practice, 969.
- B. American Practice, 969.
- C. Concurrence of Grand Jurors, 969.
- D. Necessity for Preliminary Examination, 969.
- E. Not Part of Trial, 970.
- F. Effect of Mistake and Misconception, 970.
- G. Effect of Finding—Commencement of Prosecution, 970.

IV. Return of Indictment, 970.

V. Docketing Indictment, 970.

VI. Delivery of Copy of Indictment and List of Witnesses to Accused, 970.

VII. Form and Requisites, 970.
- A. Statutory Provision, 970.
- B. Form Prescribed by Statute, 970.
- C. Caption, 970.
  - 1. Separate from Body of Indictment, 970.
  - 2. Requisites and Sufficiency, 971.
    - a. Names of Court and Parties, 971.
    - b. Finding by Grand Jury, 971.
- D. Conclusion, 971.
- E. Averment of Particular Facts, 971.
  - 1. Concurrence of Grand Jurors, 971
  - 2. Place of Sitting of Grand Jurors, 971.

F. Endorsement, 971.
1. By Foreman of Grand Jury, 971.
a. In General, 971.
b. In England, 972.
c. In United States, 972.
2. By Prosecuting Attorney, 972.
3. Of Names of Witnesses, 972.
G. Of Separate Counts, 972.
H. Of Informations, 973.
1. In Admiralty, 973.
2. Verification, 973.
I. Raising Objection, 973.

VIII. Requisites and Sufficiency of Charge, 973.
A. Charge Defined—What Constitutes, 973.
B. As Affected by Form of Accusation, 973.
1. Indictments and Presentments, 973.
2. Informations, 973.
3. Complaints, 973.
a. In General, 973.
b. Upon Information and Belief, 973.
C. Designation of the Offense, 973.
1. In General, 973.
2. Constitutional Provisions, 974.
3. At Common Law, 974.
4. Under Statute, 975.
5. Manner of Averment, 975.
a. Completeness, 975.
b. Accuracy and Certainty, 977.
(1) Necessity for, 977.
(2) Degree Required, 977.
(a) In General, 977.
(b) Reasonable Certainty, 977.
c. Positiveness, 978.
d. Particularity, 978.
(1) Necessity for, 978.
(2) Degree of Particularity Required, 979.
(3) Effect of Unnecessary Particularity, 979.
(4) Bill of Particulars, 980.
e. Multifariousness, 980.
f. Repugnancy, 980.
g. Duplicity, 980.
h. Alternative Allegations, 980.
i. By Reference, 980.
(1) To Another Part of Same Count, 980.
(2) To Different Count, 980.
j. By Innuendo, 981.
k. Grammar and Etymology, 981.
6. General Rules of Sufficiency, 981.
a. To Show Nature and Cause of Accusation, 981.
(1) In General, 981.
(2) To Inform Court, 981.
(3) To Enable Accused to Prepare Defense, 982.
(4) To Enable Accused to Plead Jeopardy on Subsequent Trial, 982.
b. To Support Conviction, 982.
7. Averment of Particular Matters, 982.
a. Matters of Evidence, 982.

b. Matters of Defense, 982.
c. Matters Unknown, 982.
d. Matters at Conference of Grand Jury, 983.
e. Property, 983.
f. Ownership, 983.
g. Contents of Written Instruments, 983.
(1) In General, 983.
(2) Lost Instruments, 983.
h. Indecent and Obscene Matters, 983.
i. Fact of Commission of Offense, 984.
(1) In Indictment against Accomplices, 984.
(2) Indictment for Cheating, 984.
j. Means of Commission of Offense, 984.
k. Consequence of Criminal Act, 986.
l. Intent or Knowledge, 986.
(1) Intent, 986.
(a) Necessity for Averment, 986.
(b) Sufficiency of Averment, 986.
(c) Averment of Felonious Intent, 986.
aa. In Common-Law Felonies, 986.
bb. In Statutory Felonies, 986.
(2) Knowledge, 987.
m. Included Offenses, 988.
n. Degrees of Crime, 988.
o. Statutory Offenses, 988.
(1) In General, 988.
(2) In Words of Statute, 989.
(a) The General Rule, 989.
(b) Applications of General Rule, 989.
aa. Where Offense Is Described in Technical Terms, 989.
bb. Where All Elements of Offense Are Set Out, 989.
(aa) In General, 989.
(bb) Where Offense Better Defined in Another Section of Statute, 990.
(cc) Misdemeanor Cases, 990.
(c) Exceptions to General Rule, 990.
aa. In General, 990.
bb. Where Offense Is Not Described in Technical Terms, 991.
cc. Where All Elements of Offense Are Not Expressed, 991.
dd. Where Statute Is Not Clear and Certain, 992.
ee. Where Legislative Intent Requires Fuller Statement, 992.
ff. Where Offense Described Disjunctively, 992.
(3) In Words Other than Those of Statute, 992.
(4) Where Statute Punishes Common-Law Offense, 993.
(5) Where Statute Contains Exceptions or Provisos, 993.
(a) Necessity for Negation, 993.
(b) Sufficiency of Negation, 994.
(6) Effect of Avering as Contrary to Statute, 994.
(7) Effect of Averment by Legal Effect of Statute, 994.
(8) Certainty of Averment, 994.
(9) Averment of Matters of Defense, 994.
8. In Felony and Misdemeanor Cases, 995.

D. Designation of Persons, 995.
1. Of Accused, 995.
a. By Name, 995.
b. As Unknown, 995.
c. Descriptions and Additions, 995.
d. Where Accused Resides in Indian Country, 996.
e. Where Accused Indicted on Joint Indictment, 996.
f. Repetition of Description, 996.
2. Of Other Persons, 996.
E. Designation of Time, 996.
F. Designation of Place, 997.
1. Necessity for Averment, 997.
2. Sufficiency of Averment, 997.
a. In General, 997.
b. Within Jurisdiction of Court, 997.
c. Within Particular County or Town, 997.
(1) In General, 997.
(2) English Practice, 997.
(3) American Practice, 998.
3. Where Offense Committed within State by Person Without, 998.
4. Where Offense Committed on High Seas, 998.
G. Determination of Sufficiency, 998.
1. Question of Law, 998.
2. By What Law Determined, 998.
3. Jurisdiction, 998.
a. In General, 998.
b. In Extradition Cases, 999.
4. On What Pleadings Determined, 999.

IX. Duplicity, 999.
A. What Constitutes, 999.
1. Charge of Two or More Distinct Felonies, 999.
2. Charge of Different Modes of Commission of Offense, 999.
B. Effect of Duplicity, 999.
1. In General, 999.
2. When Mere Surplusage, 1000.

X. Joinder of Offenses, 1000.
A. In Same Count, 1000.
B. In Separate Counts, 1000.
1. In General, 1000.
2. Object and Purpose, 1000.
3. Statutory Provision, 1000.
4. In Felony Cases, 1000.
5. In Misdemeanor Cases, 1001.
6. Offenses of Same Nature, 1001.
7. Offenses Arising from Same Transaction, 1001.
8. Offenses Sustainable by Same Evidence, 1002.
9. Offenses Subject to Same Punishment, 1002.
10. Offenses against Same Defendant, 1002.
11. Acts Constituting One Offense, 1002.
12. Same Offense Charged in Different Ways, 1003.
13. Where Defendant Prejudiced, 1003.
14. Where Jury Confused, 1003.
15. Discretion of Court, 1003.

XI. Consolidation of Indictments, 1003.

XII. Election, 1004.
A. Election Defined, 1004.

B. Propriety of Election, 1004.
1. In General, 1004.
2. In Felony Cases, 1004.
3. Discretion of Court, 1004.

XIII. Validity of Accusation, 1004.
A. Presumption of Validity, 1004.
B. Validity of Part of Counts, 1004.

XIV. Construction of Accusation, 1005.

XV. Objections to Accusation, 1005.
A. Right to Be Heard, 1005.
B. Jurisdiction, 1005.
C. Manner of Making Objection, 1005.
1. Motion to Quash, 1005.
a. Who May Make Motion, 1005.
b. Grounds for, 1005.
c. Evidence in Support of Motion, 1005.
(1) Necessity for, 1005.
(a) In General, 1005.
(b) Where Motion Verified, 1006.
(c) Where Motion Not Answered, 1006.
(d) Where Motion Demurred to, 1006.
(2) Admission of, 1006.
(3) Sufficiency of, 1006.
d. Review on Writ of Error, 1006.
2. Demurrer, 1007.
a. Grounds for, 1007.
b. Admissions by, 1007.
3. Plea in Abatement, 1007.
4. Motion in Arrest of Judgment, 1007.
a. For Want of Certainty, 1007.
b. Ror Duplicity, 1007.
c. For Wrongful Consolidation, 1007.
5. Writ of Error, 1007.
6. Writ of Habeas Corpus, 1007.
D. Time of Making Objections, 1007.
1. During Trial, 1007.
2. Before Verdict, 1007.
E. Hearing and Determination, 1008.
F. Waiver and Cure of Objections, 1008.
1. Waiver of Objections, 1008.
2. Cure of Objections, 1008.
a. By Verdict, 1008.
b. By Evidence, 1008.
c. By Statute, 1008.

XVI. Amendment of Accusation, 1009.
A. Time of Amendment, 1009.
B. Of Indictment, 1009.
1. Body of Instrument, 1009.
2. Caption of Instrument, 1009.
C. Of Information, 1009.

XVII. Variance between Accusation and Proof, 1009.
A. In General, 1009.
B. Where There Are Unnecessary Averments, 1009.
C. Where There Are Numerous Averments, 1010.

D. Where Means of Commission of Crime Averred, 1010.
E. In Description of Persons, 1010.
F. In Description of Time, 1010.

XVIII. Accusation as Evidence, 1011.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 1; CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43; GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570.

I. Accusation in General.

A. What Constitutes.—A criminal charge or accusation, strictly speaking, exists only when a formal written complaint has been made against the accused and a prosecution to which he is legally called upon to make answer has been initiated. Mere investigation by prosecuting officers, or even the inquiry and consideration by examining magistrates of the propriety of initiating a prosecution, do not of themselves create a criminal charge.[1]

B. The Different Forms of Accusation—1. INDICTMENT.—An indictment is the charge of the government against the accused, the pleading by which the latter is informed of the fact, nature and scope of the accusation.[2] The word "indictment" is defined technically,[3] and implies the finding of a grand jury.[4] It is peculiar to Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence,[5] and designates a common-law remedy.[6] The indictment referred to in article 5 of the amendments to the constitution, is the presentation to the proper court, under oath, by a grand jury, duly impaneled, of a charge describing an offense against the law for which the party charged may be punished.[7]

2. PRESENTMENT.—A presentment, properly speaking, is a notice taken by a grand jury of any offense from their own knowledge or observation, without any bill of indictment laid before them at the suit of the state or sovereign, upon which the officer of the court must afterwards frame an indictment, before the party presented can be put to answer it.[8] A presentment and indictment are to be considered as one act, the former as amended by and merged in the latter.[9] Presentments have largely fallen into disuse in this country,[10] except for offenses

1. What constitutes legal accusation.—United States v. Patterson, 150 U. S. 65, 68, 37 L. Ed. 999.

Distinction between popular and legal sense of term.—In its popular sense, the term "accusation," is freely used with reference to all accusations, whether oral, in the newspapers, or otherwise; but, in legal phraseology, it is properly limited to such accusations only as have taken shape in a prosecution, to which the accused person is legally bound to make answer. United States v. Patterson, 150 U. S. 65, 68, 37 L. Ed. 999.

2. Indictment.—In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 585, 35 L. Ed. 513.

3. Defined technically.—Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, 192, 47 L. Ed. 130; The Samuel, 1 Wheat. 9, 14, 4 L. Ed. 23.

4. Finding of grand jury.—In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 257, 38 L. Ed. 149; Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, 192, 47 L. Ed. 130; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652.

5. Peculiar to Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence.—A complaint by the Russian government before an extradition commissioner which sets forth that a fugitive from justice has been "indicted" for embezzlement, no indictment having ever been found, uses the word "indicted" in the general sense of charged or accused by legal proceedings, and not in the technical sense of an indictment as understood in our jurisprudence. Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, 192, 47 L. Ed. 130.

6. Common-law remedy.—The Samuel, 1 Wheat. 9, 14, 4 L. Ed. 23.

7. As referred to in United States constitution.—Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 849.

8. Presentment—Blackstone's definition.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 60, 50 L. Ed. 652, quoting IV Blackstone, 301. And see post, "Ancient English Practice," III, A.

9. Presentment and indictment considered as one act.—"In United States v. Hill, 1 Brock. 156, it was indicated by Chief Justice Marshall that a presentment and an indictment are to be considered as one act, the second to be considered only as an amendment to the first, and that the usage of this country has been to pass over, unnoticed, presentments on which the attorney does not think it proper to institute proceedings." Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 60, 50 L. Ed. 652.

10. Fallen into disuse.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 61, 50 L. Ed. 652.

committed in the presence of the grand jury.[11]

3. INFORMATION—a. In General.—An information is a formal charge against the accused of the offense,[12] with such particulars as to time, place, and attendant circumstances as will apprise him of the nature of the charge he is to meet,[13] in the name of the king in England,[14] and of the state or people in America,[15] and signed[16] and presented by the public prosecutor,[17] without the intervention of a grand jury.[18] Informations for the prosecution of minor offenses are said by Blackstone to be as old as the common law itself, and a proceeding before magistrates for the apprehension and commitment of persons charged with crime has been the usual method of procedure since the adoption of the constitution.[19] It is asserted in Story on the Constitution, § 1780, that this process had never been formally put into operation by any positive authority of congress in cases of misdemeanor, and has but rarely been recurred to; though common enough in civil prosecutions for penalties and forfeitures.[20]

b. At Relation of Private Person.—Informations at the relation of private persons are in a great measure private suits. They are drawn, moved for and conducted, not by the officers of the crown, but by counsel employed by such private person, who is known as the prosecutor.[21] The information is filed at leave of court,[22] which will not be granted where the private prosecutor appears to the court unworthy.[23] Pro forma, the attorney general must allow his

11. Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652.

12. Information—Formal charge.—In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 257, 38 L. Ed. 149; Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 239, 18 L. Ed. 47; The Samuel, 1 Wheat. 9, 14, 4 L. Ed. 23.

Departure from prescribed form fatal.—Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 239, 18 L. Ed. 47.

13. In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 257, 38 L. Ed. 149.

14. In name of king.—Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 238, 18 L. Ed. 47; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652; Respublica v. Griffiths, 2 Dall. 112, 113, 1 L. Ed. 311.

"Whether filed by the attorney general or the master of the crown office, and whether it relates to public offenses or to the class of private rights specified in the statute of 9 Anne, ch. 20, * * * it is brought in the name of the king, and the practice is substantially the same in all cases." Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 238, 18 L. Ed. 47.

15. In name of state.—"In this country the proceeding is conducted in the name of the state or of the people, according to the local form in indictments, and a departure from this form is a substantial and fatal defect." Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 239, 18 L. Ed. 47.

16. Signed by prosecutor.—In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 257, 38 L. Ed. 149.

17. In England.—The information may be filed by either the attorney general or the master of the crown office. Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 238, 18 L. Ed. 47.

18. Without action of grand jury—Distinguishing feature.—"In the English courts an information for an offense differs from an indictment, chiefly in the fact that it is presented by the law officer of the crown without the intervention of a grand jury." Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 238, 18 L. Ed. 47.

As used in election laws, Revised Statutes, § 2026.—United States v. Poinier, 140 U. S. 160, 35 L. Ed. 395. See post, INFORMATION.

19. Of ancient origin.—Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 404, 45 L. Ed. 249.

20. Was formerly rarely used in criminal cases.—Informations are principally, if not exclusively, used for the recovery of fines and forfeitures, such as those imposed by the revenue and embargo laws. Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 424, 29 L. Ed. 89.

But within the fifteen years previous to this case, prosecutions by information have greatly increased, and the general current of opinion in the circuit and district courts has been towards sustaining them for any crime, a conviction of which would not at common law have disqualified the convict to be a witness. Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 425, 29 L. Ed. 89.

21. At relation of private person.—Respublica v. Griffiths, 2 Dall. 112, 1 L. Ed. 311. See post, "Who May Make Motion," XV, C, 1, a.

"There is, in England, a known and established distinction, between informations filed by the attorney general, and those filed by him, at the relation of a private person, in the name of the master of the crown office. The former are always filed ex officio; and the court will not, upon motion of the attorney general, give him leave to file an information against any person." Respublica v. Griffiths, 2 Dall. 112, 1 L. Ed. 311.

22. By leave of court.—Respublica v. Griffiths, 2 Dall. 112, 1 L. Ed. 311.

23. When leave refused.—Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 36 L. Ed. 103.

name to be used by the prosecutor, but he can charge no fees for drawing or filing. In many cases the prosecutor is liable for costs.[25]

c. In Nature of Quo Warranto.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere.[26]

d. Libel in Nature of Information.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere.[27]

4. Complaint—a. In General.—An accused person is usually charged with crime by a complaint made before a committing magistrate.[28]

b. In Extradition Cases.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere.[29]

C. Object and Purpose—1. Notice to Accused.—The object of the accusation is, first, to furnish the accused with such a description of the charge against him as will enable him to make his defense, and avail himself of his conviction or acquittal for protection against a further prosecution for the same cause;[30] and, second, to inform the court of the facts alleged, so that it may decide whether they are sufficient in law to support a conviction, if one should be had.[31]

2. Commencement of Prosecution.—Criminal proceedings cannot be said to be brought or instituted until a formal charge is openly made against the accused, either by indictment presented or information filed in court, or, at least, by complaint before a magistrate.[32]

D. Offenses Subject to Accusation.—An information or an indictment cannot be founded on any statute which is not penal in its character.[33] The numerous indictable offenses are to be found treated in the specific criminal law titles in this work.

II. Necessity for Presentment or Indictment.

A. In General.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[34]

25. Prosecutor liable for costs.—Respublica v. Griffiths, 2 Dall. 112, 113, 1 L. Ed. 311.

26. Information in nature of quo warranto.—See the title QUO WARRANTO.

27. Libel in nature of information.—See the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 164. And see post, "In Admiralty," VII, H, 1.

28. Complaint.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652.

29. In extradition cases.—See the titles EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215; HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610.

30. Object and purpose—Notice to accused.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 445, 39 L. Ed. 214; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 545, 38 L. Ed. 545.

"In order that he may decide whether he should present his defense by motion to quash, demurrer, or plea; and the court, that it may determine whether the facts will sustain the indictment." United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 559, 23 L. Ed. 588.

31. To support conviction.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588, quoted in Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 309, 44 L. Ed. 1078; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516. See, also, United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 243, 23 L. Ed. 563, Hunt, J., dissenting.

32. Commencement of prosecution.—Post v. United States, 161 U. S. 583, 587, 40 L. Ed. 816; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 119, 121, 37 L. Ed. 386. See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 96. And see ante, "Indictment," I, B, 1; post, "Effect of Funding—Commencement of Prosecution," III, G.

33. Offenses against penal statutes only.—Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 555, 20 L. Ed. 491, opinion of Field, J., dissenting.

34. Prosecution by United States—Fifth amendment.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 492.

Same—Sixth amendment.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 495. And see post, "Constitutional Provisions," VIII, C, 2.

Prosecution by state—Fifth amendment.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 492.

Same—Sixth amendment.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 495.

Same — Fourteenth amendment.—See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 667. And see post, "Constitutional Provisions," VIII, C, 2.

Prosecution by territory.—Mattox v. United States, 156 U. S. 237, 239, 39 L. Ed. 409. See the title TERRITORIES.

In Hawaiian Islands.—Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. Ed. 1016; Dorr v. United States, 195 U. S. 138, 139, 49 L. Ed. 128; Carter v. Gear, 197 U. S. 348, 354, 49 L. Ed. 787. See, also, Rassmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 516, 521, 49 L.

B. In Contempt Cases.—A proceeding by indictment is not exclusive if the offense of obstructing justice be committed under such circumstances as to bring it within the power of the court.[35]

C. In Extradition Cases.—The finding of an indictment against a fugitive from justice is not a prerequisite to extradition proceedings.[36]

D. In Examination of Witnesses by Grand Jury.—The examination of witnesses by a federal grand jury need not be preceded by a formal indictment or a presentment.[37]

III. Finding of Indictment.

A. Ancient English Practice.—Under the ancient English system, criminal prosecutions were instituted either at the suit of private prosecutors, to which the king lent his name in the interest of the public peace and good order of society, or by the grand jurors upon facts within their own knowledge. In the former case, their action was embodied in an indictment formally laid before them for their consideration; in the latter case, in the form of a presentment.[38]

B. American Practice.—While no case has arisen in the federal supreme court in which the question has been distinctly presented, the authorities in the state courts largely preponderate in favor of the theory that the grand jury may act upon information received by them from the examination of witnesses without a formal indictment, or other charge previously laid before them.[39]

C. Concurrence of Grand Jurors.—An indictment can only be found by a specified number of the grand jury. If not found by that number, the court cannot proceed at all.[40] But the failure of an indictment to show, by express recital that it was found by the concurrence of at least twelve jurors, is a mere formal defect.[41]

D. Necessity for Preliminary Examination.—In the absence of a statutory requirement, a preliminary examination is not indispensable to the finding of an indictment.[42]

Ed. 862. See the title TERRITORIES.

Prosecution by Indian nation.—See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 492; INDIANS, ante, p. 906.

Infamous crimes.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 494.

Offenses by persons in military and naval forces.—See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 493.

35. In contempt cases.—So held in punishment of an offense arising under § 725, Rev. Stat. Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 206, 37 L. Ed. 419; Savin, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 267, 33 L. Ed. 150. See the title CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 539.

36. In extradition cases.—Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 46 L. Ed. 177. See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

37. Prerequisite to examination of witnesses by grand jury.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 65, 50 L. Ed. 652. See the title GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570.

38. Finding of indictment.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 60, 50 L. Ed. 652.

39. American practice.—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 62, 50 L. Ed. 652.

"While the grand jury may not indict upon current rumors or unverified reports, they may act upon knowledge acquired either from their own observations or upon the evidence of witnesses given before them." Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 65, 50 L. Ed. 652.

In Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 39 L. Ed. 657, Mr. Justice Brewer, said: "In this country it is for the grand jury to investigate any alleged crime, no matter how or by whom suggested to them, and after determining that the evidence is sufficient to justify putting the supected party on trial, to direct the preparation of the formal charge or indictment." Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 63, 50 L. Ed. 652.

40. Concurrence of grand jurors.—In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 257, 38 L. Ed. 149.

41. Omission of recital mere formal defect.—Which defect comes within § 1025 of the Revised Statutes, and does not prejudice the accused. Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

Where the record shows that at a term of the district court the grand jurors of the United States in and for said district came into open court, and, through their foreman, presented the bill of indictment, and that the bill was endorsed "a true bill," with the signature of the foreman immediately thereunder. With reference to all these objections it is enough to refer to § 1025 of the Revised Statutes. Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

Need not be set out in the caption.—Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

42. Thiede v. Utah Territory, 159 U. S. 510, 513, 40 L. Ed. 237; Goldsby v. United States, 160 U. S. 70, 40 L. Ed. 343.

E. Not Part of Trial.—The finding of the indictment is no part of the trial.[43]

F. Effect of Mistake and Misconception.—The fact that the indictment was found by the grand jury by mistake and misconception is a proper subject of inquiry in the courts of the state, but affords no ground for interposition by the courts of the United States by writ of habeas corpus.[44]

G. Effect of Finding—Commencement of Prosecution.—The prosecution is begun by the finding of the indictment.[45]

IV. Return of Indictment.

In the United States an indictment is returned into court by the grand jury.[46]

V. Docketing Indictment.

Where several persons are indicted jointly but tried separately on the motion of some of the defendants, the clerk is entitled to fees for docketing the indictments in each separate case.[47]

VI. Delivery of Copy of Indictment and List of Witnesses to Accused.

This subject is treated elsewhere.[48]

VII. Form and Requisites.

A. Statutory Provision.—It is provided by the Revised Statutes that no indictment or presentment shall be deemed insufficient by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form only, which does not prejudice the defendant.[49] This, of course, is not to be construed as permitting the omission of any matter of substance,[50] but is applicable where the only defect complained of is that some element of the offense is stated loosely and without technical accuracy.[51]

B. Form Prescribed by Statute.—Each state has the right to prescribe the forms of pleading and process to be observed in its courts in criminal cases, subject only to those provisions of the national constitution designed for the protection of life, liberty and property in all the states of the Union.[52]

C. Caption—1. SEPARATE FROM BODY OF INDICTMENT.—Although the cap-

43. Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 297, 36 L. Ed. 429.

44. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 243, 40 L. Ed. 406; In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. Ed. 513.

45. Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 37 L. Ed. 386. See the title REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

46. Returned into court.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 163, 39 L. Ed. 657.

47. United States v. Keatley, 204 U. S. 562, 563, 51 L. Ed. 618. See Revised Statutes, § 828.

"We think the order granting separate trials made separate causes, and therefore each was independent of the other. The services rendered were a proper charge under the statute." United States v. Keatley, 204 U. S. 562, 563, 51 L. Ed. 618.

48. Delivery of copy of indictment of list to accused.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, pp. 110, 113.

49. Statutory provision.—Section 1025, Rev. Stat.; Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 637, 40 L. Ed. 1097; Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 40 L. Ed. 441; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 32, 40 L. Ed. 606; Price v. United States, 165 U. S. 311, 315, 41 L. Ed. 727; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390. See post, "In United States," VII, F, 1, c.

Incorrect spelling immaterial.—Faust v. United States, 163 U. S. 452, 454, 41 L. Ed. 224.

In indictments for perjury.—This provision does not dispense with any of the requirements in Revised Statutes, § 5366, in regard to indictments for perjury. Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 40 L. Ed. 441. See the title PERJURY.

50. Does not permit omission of matter of substance.—United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390.

51. Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390.

Invalid because too general.—Moore v. United States, 160 U. S. 268, 276, 40 L. Ed. 422.

52. Form prescribed by statute.—Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. Ed. 250; Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 266, 38 L. Ed. 153; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 658, 39 L. Ed. 845; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 697, 34 L. Ed. 816.

tion and the indictment seem naturally to form but one instrument,[53] the former is no part of the instrument found by the grand jury.[54]

2. Requisites and Sufficiency—a. Names of Court and Parties.—The failure of an indictment in its caption to show the organization of the court or who composed it or who were present as constituent parties thereto when the indictment was returned, is a mere formal defect, and is cured by § 1025 of the Revised Statutes.[55]

b. Finding by Grand Jury.—The failure of the caption to show that an indictment was found by the concurrence of at least twelve grand jurors, does not tend to prejudice the accused and is within § 1025 of the Revised Statutes.[56]

D. Conclusion.—So far as respects the objection that the count does not conclude that the offense charged was "contrary to the form of the statutes in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the United States," it is sufficient to say that such allegation, which is one of a mere conclusion of law, is not of the substance of the charge, and the omission is of a matter of form, which does not tend to the prejudice of the defendant, and is, therefore, within the rule of § 1025, Rev. Stat. and to be disregarded.[57] Though considering that the conclusion may be necessary in some cases,[58] the court had formerly held that where it is inserted at the end of a declaration or indictment, it does not, as a general rule, relate to the last preceding averments alone, but the whole subject matter before alleged to constitute an offense. It is all that misconduct which is contrary to the statute, and not the concluding part of it only, to which the conclusion relates.[59]

E. Averment of Particular Facts—1. Concurrence of Grand Jurors.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere in this title.[60]

2. Place of Sitting of Grand Jurors.—An indictment by a grand jury summoned in a federal district court, need not state at what particular place within such district the grand jury was sitting at the time of finding the indictment.[61]

F. Endorsement—1. By Foreman of Grand Jury—a. In General.—At English common law, the endorsement, "a true bill," by the foreman of the grand jury, is parcel of the indictment and the perfection thereof.[62] But the 53. Separate from body of indictment.—United States v. The Insurgents, 2 Dall. 335, 342, 1 L. Ed. 404.

54. "Where an inferior court," says Starkie's Criminal Pleading, 258, "in obedience to a writ of certiorari from the King's Bench, transmits the indictment to the Crown office, it is accompanied with a formal history of the proceeding, describing the court before which the indictment was found, the jurors by whom it was found, and the time and place where it was found. This instrument, termed a schedule, is annexed to the indictment, and both are sent to the Crown office. The history of the proceedings, as copied or extracted from the schedule, is called the caption, and is entered of record immediately before the indictment." It will be seen that, as thus explained, the caption is no part of the instrument found by the grand jury. Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 7, 30 L. Ed. 849.

55. Requisites—Name of court and parties.—Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

"Clearly, there was nothing in any of these matters which tended to the prejudice of the defendant, or rendered it doubtful by what body he was charged with the crime, in what court he was to be tried, or the exact nature of the offense with which he was charged." Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

Under statute of territory of Utah.—Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 75, 29 L. Ed. 561.

56. Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415. See ante, "Concurrence of Grand Jurors," III, C.

57. Conclusion—Contra forma statute.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 168, 39 L. Ed. 657. See post, "Effect of Averring as Contrary to Statute," VIII, C, 7, o, (6).

58. It was formerly held that the expression, "contrary to the statute" follows the concluding portion of the count, and may be necessary in a penal declaration. Jones v. Van Zandt, 5 How. 215, 229, 12 L. Ed. 122.

59. Conclusion relates to all preceding counts.—Jones v. Van Zandt, 5 How. 215, 229, 12 L. Ed. 122.

60. Averment of concurrence of grand jurors.—See ante, "Concurrence of Grand Jurors," III, C.

61. Place of sitting of grand jurors.—Rosencrans v. United States, 165 U. S. 257, 263, 41 L. Ed. 708. See the title GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570.

62. Indorsement "a true bill."—Frisbie endorsement is no part of the charge.[63]

b. In England.—The necessity for the formal endorsement at ancient English common law grew out of the practice of presenting formal indictments or accusations to the grand jury who either merely approved or disapproved thereof, and indicated their action by the endorsement, which became the evidence, if not the only evidence, of the action of the grand jury.[64]

c. In United States.—But in this country the common practice is for the grand jury to investigate any alleged crime, no matter how or by whom suggested to them, and after determining that the evidence is sufficient to justify putting the party suspected on trial, to direct the preparation of the formal charge or indictment. Thus they return into court only those accusations which they have approved, and the fact that they thus return them into court is evidence of such approval, and the formal endorsement loses its essential character.[65] The omission of the endorsement is a mere formal defect not tending to the prejudice of the accused, and is within § 1025 of the Revised Statutes.[66] There is in the federal statutes no mandatory provision requiring such endorsement or authentication, and the matter must, therefore, be determined on general principles.[67] As it is not an unvarying rule for the grand jury to return into court only the indictments which they have found, it is advisable, at least, that the indictment be endorsed according to the ancient practice, for such endorsement is a short, convenient, and certain method of informing the court of their action.[68]

2. By Prosecuting Attorney.—Under a statute requiring an indictment to be endorsed by "the prosecutor," such endorsement is necessary only in case there is in fact an existing prosecutor.[69] Where an indictment was found by the grand jury, endorsed as a true bill by the foreman, and filed in open court according to law, the fact that it was not signed by the district attorney of the United States is not such error as goes to the jurisdiction of the court.[70] It is not a material defect, prejudicial to the rights of the accused, that an indictment is signed by the assistant United States district attorney instead of by the district attorney himself.[71]

3. Of Names of Witnesses.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[72]

G. Of Separate Counts.—Each count in an indictment is in form a distinct

v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 163, 39 L. Ed. 657.

63. No part of charge.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 165, 39 L. Ed. 657.

64. In England.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 163, 39 L. Ed. 657.

65. In United States generally.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 163, 39 L. Ed. 657.

It has been held by some American courts that this omission is simply an omission of a form only and is immaterial and unimportant, and not necessarily and under all circumstances fatal to the indictment. Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 163, 39 L. Ed. 657; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

In 1 Bish. Crim. Proc., § 700, it is said: "In the absence of a mandatory statute, it is the better view that both the words 'a true bill' and the signature of the foreman may be dispensed with, if the fact of the jury's finding appears in any other form in the record." Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 163, 39 L. Ed. 657.

Does not raise federal question.—The objection that the indictment in a prosecution in a state court was not indorsed a "true bill" does not raise a federal question. Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 243, 40 L. Ed. 406. See the title HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610.

66. Within § 1025, Rev. Stat.—Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

67. In federal courts.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 163, 39 L. Ed. 657.

68. Advisable practice.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 164, 39 L. Ed. 657.

69. By prosecuting attorney.—And as no person in the present case is proved to be active in carrying on the prosecution, the defendant must plead to the indictment, without any indorsement. The defendant was not permitted to prove by his own testimony that there really was a prosecutor. The court held that such proof must be made by indifferent witnesses. King v. Lukens, 1 Dall. 5, 6, 1 L. Ed. 13.

70. Omission not jurisdictional defect.—In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 449, 34 L. Ed. 219.

71. By assistant district attorney.—Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415.

72. Of names of witnesses.—See the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 110.

charge of a separate offense.[73]

H. Of Information—1. In Admiralty.—Rule 22 of the Rules in Admiralty prescribes regulations for the form of informations and libels of information on seizures for the breach of the laws of the United States on land or water.[74]

2. Verification.—The fact that an information for contempt in a proceeding in a state court was not supported by an affidavit until after it had been filed, cannot be reviewed in the federal supreme court.[75]

I. Raising Objection.—It is too late after a demurrer, plea of not guilty, motion for a new trial, and motion in arrest of judgment, to object to an indictment for mere formal matters.[76]

VIII. Requisites and Sufficiency of Charge.

A. Charge Defined—What Constitutes.—A definition of the word "charge" is not easy to furnish. An accused person is usually charged with crime by a complaint made before a committing magistrate, which has fully performed its office when the party is committed or held to bail, and it is quite unnecessary to the finding of an indictment by a grand jury; or by an information of the district attorney, which is of no legal value in prosecutions for felony; or by a presentment usually made, as in this case, for an offense committed in the presence of the jury; or by an indictment which, as often as not, is drawn after the grand jury has acted upon the testimony.[77]

B. As Affected by Form of Accusation—1. Indictments and Presentments.—There is nothing peculiar in regard to the sufficiency of these two forms of accusation aside from the general treatment in this title.

2. Informations.—An information need not be more technical in its language, or specific in its description of the offense, than an indictment.[78]

3. Complaints—a. In General.—The technicalities of an indictment are not requisite in a complaint.[79]

b. Upon Information and Belief.—A complaint, verified on the information and belief of an affiant, must set forth the sources and grounds of the affiant's information and belief.[80]

C. Designation of the Offense—1. In General.—The accused is entitled 73. Of separate courts.—Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 542, 38 L. Ed. 545; Ingraham v. United States, 155 U. S. 434, 436, 39 L. Ed. 213; United States v. The Pirates, 5 Wheat. 184, 5 L. Ed. 64; Selvester v. United States, 170 U. S. 262, 267, 42 L. Ed. 1029; Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 376, 45 L. Ed. 577; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 316, 38 L. Ed. 725; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 449, 39 L. Ed. 481.

The different counts may be considered to be separate indictments. Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 48 L. Ed. 1110.

74. Informations in admiralty.—Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427, 435, 29 L. Ed. 681. See the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 164.

75. Verification.—Patterson v. Colorado, 205 U. S. 454, 460, 51 L. Ed. 879.

76. Raising objection to formal defects.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 165, 39 L. Ed. 657.

The want of an indorsement "a true bill" cannot be so objected to. Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 164, 165, 39 L. Ed. 657.

77. What constitutes "charge."—Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 59, 50 L. Ed. 652.

78. Information need not be more specific than indictment.—United States v. Brig Neurea, 19 How. 92, 94, 15 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 585, 24 L. Ed. 531; The Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall. 92, 104, 22 L. Ed. 320. See the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 164.

79. Complaint.—Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 379, 45 L. Ed. 577.

"It may be conceded that the offense is not stated with the fullness and technical accuracy required in an indictment, but we do not think that the complaint can be treated as an absolute nullity." Southworth v. United States, 151 U. S. 179, 184, 38 L. Ed. 119.

Complaint in extradition.—Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, 47 L. Ed. 130. See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

80. Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 374, 45 L. Ed. 577.

Upon information and belief.—Under the extradition treaty with Great Britain, a complaint before a commissioner, if made solely on information and belief with no attempt to set forth the sources of such information or the grounds that find belief, is insufficient. Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 374, 45 L. Ed. 577.

Complaint in extradition cases.—Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, 186, 47 L. Ed. 130.

to a formal and substantial statement of the grounds upon which he is questioned,[81] but not to such strictness in averment as might defeat the ends of justice.[82] The pleader is at liberty to use any form of expression, provided only that he thereby fully and accurately describes the offense.[83] The true test of the sufficiency of an indictment is, not whether it may be made more certain and full by additional, or different allegations, or so drawn as to be beyond the hypercriticism of astute counsel,[84] but whether it contains every element of the offense intended to be charged, and sufficiently apprises the defendant of what he must be prepared to meet, and, in case any other proceedings are taken against him for a similar offense, whether the record shows with accuracy to what extent he may plead a former acquittal or conviction.[85] And the entire indictment is to be considered in determining whether the offense is fully stated.[86]

2. Constitutional Provisions.—In criminal cases, prosecuted under the laws of the United States, the accused has the constitutional right "to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation."[87] The due process clause requires that the indictment or other process must give full notice of all material facts constituting the offense charged.[88]

3. At Common Law.—At common law, in certain descriptions of offenses, and especially of capital offenses, great nicety and particularity are often necessary.[89]

See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215.

81. Designation of offense.—United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 364, 24 L. Ed. 819; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830.

82. "The particularity required in an indictment or in the statutory description of offenses has at times been extreme, the distinctions almost ridiculous. I cannot but think that in some cases good sense is sacrificed to technical nicety, and a sound principle carried to an extravagant extent." United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 243, 23 L. Ed. 563, Hunt, J., dissenting.

83. Form of expression.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 190, 39 L. Ed. 390.

84. Test of sufficiency.—Cochran v. United States, 157 U. S. 286, 290, 39 L. Ed. 704; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 310, 44 L. Ed. 1078.

85. Cochran v. United States, 157 U. S. 286, 290, 39 L. Ed. 704; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 588, 38 L. Ed. 830; Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 39 L. Ed. 478. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 107.

Where the averments of the indictment were sufficient to enable the defendant to prepare his defense, and in the event of acquittal or conviction, the judgment could have been pleaded in bar of a second prosecution for the same offense, and the accused was informed with reasonable certainty by the indictment of the nature and cause of the accusation against him, he was not entitled to more, nor could he demand that all the special or particular means employed in the commission of the offense should be more fully set out in the indictment. Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. Ed. 1057.

86. Construed as a whole.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 190, 39 L. Ed. 390.

87. Constitutional provision.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 557, 23 L. Ed. 588. See United States Constitution, Amendment, VI.

"In United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142, 8 L. Ed. 636, this was construed to mean, that the indictment must set forth the offense 'with clearness and all necessary certainty, to apprise the accused of the crime with which he stands charged.'" United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588. See, also, Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40, 40 L. Ed. 606.

"And in United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638, that 'every ingredient of which the offense is composed must be accurately and clearly alleged.'" United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588. See, also, Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40, 40 L. Ed. 606; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676, Field, J., dissenting; Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 495.

88. Due process clause.—The authorities abundantly show that whatever process—indictment, information or what not—brings a man into court for trial, it must be one giving him full notice of all the material facts constituting the offense charged. There can be no "due process of law" without this. Caldwell v. Texas, 141 U. S. 209, 210, 35 L. Ed. 718. See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499.

89. Particularity at common law.—United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693.

4. Under Statute.—The common law strictness has been relaxed in many cases by statutes, which the courts are to heed.[90]

5. Manner of Averment—a. Completeness.—Offenses, whether of statutory,[91] or common-law origin, consist of more than one ingredient, and in most cases of many;[92] and the rule is universal, that every ingredient of which the offense is composed must be accurately and clearly alleged in the indictment,[93] to show prima facie the guilt of the accused,[94] and to enable him to prepare his

90. Under statute.—Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 310, 44 L. Ed. 1078.

Utah statute.—Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

"In respect to the description of the offense, an indictment is sufficient, under the laws of Utah, if the act or omission charged as the offense is clearly and distinctly set forth, without repetition, and in such manner as to enable the court to understand what is intended, and to pronounce judgment upon conviction according to the right of the case. Comp. Laws of Utah, vol. 2, § 4938." Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 266, 38 L. Ed. 153.

Oregon statute.—Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 44 L. Ed. 1078. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

91. Completeness—Statutory offenses.—United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 612, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 583, 24 L. Ed. 531. See post, "In General," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (c), aa; "Where All Elements of Offense Are Not Expressed," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (c), cc.

92. Offenses consist of more than one element.—United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 583, 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 225, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting.

A crime is made up of acts and intent; and these must be set forth in the indictments with reasonable particularity of time, place, and circumstances. United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 543, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588.

93. Every essential to be alleged.—United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638; Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 583, 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 225, 232, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 310, 44 L. Ed. 1078; United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. Ed. 979; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 487, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516; The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 392, 3 L. Ed. 380; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 590, 38 L. Ed. 830; Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427, 435, 29 L. Ed. 681; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 667, 27 L. Ed. 520, approved in United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 193, 27 L. Ed. 701; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 610, 42 L. Ed. 1162; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419.

Illustrative case.—"It is not sufficient, for example, to charge in an indictment that the defendant has been guilty of murder, without stating the time and place of the offense, and the name of the person murdered, or, if his name be unknown, giving such a description as to identify him. An indictment without such specification would be merely a collection of pointless words." Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676, Field, J., dissenting.

Facts and circumstances embraced in definition.—The general rule with few exceptions is, that all the material facts and circumstances embraced in the definition of the offense must be stated, or the indictment will be defective. United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. Ed. 419.

Substance of offense.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390; Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 320, 40 L. Ed. 441.

Indictment for perjury.—Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 323, 40 L. Ed. 441. See Rev. Stat., § 5396. And see the title PERJURY.

In conspiracy cases.—Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. Ed. 419; United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. Ed. 539; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 193, 199, 27 L. Ed. 701. See the title CONSPIRACY, vol. 4, p. 1103.

For false entry in bank report under Rev. Stat., §§ 5209, 5211, see Cochran v. United States, 157 U. S. 286, 288, 39 L. Ed. 704. And see the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 118.

Intent.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830. See post, "Necessity for Averment," VIII, C, 7, l, (1), (a).

Under Utah statute.—Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 265, 38 L. Ed. 153; Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 65, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

94. Prima facie case to be alleged.—According to Mr. Bishop, there must be defense,[95] and avail himself of his acquittal or conviction against any further prosecution for the same cause,[96] or the indictment will be bad on demurrer, or it may be quashed on motion, or the judgment may be arrested before sentence, or be reversed on writ of error.[97] An indictment is sufficient if it directly and without ambiguity discloses all the essential elements to the commission of the offense charged.[98] But no essential element of the crime can be omitted without destroying the whole pleading.[99] Such particulars are matters of substance and not of form, and their omission is not admitted on demurrer,[1] aided by averments of particular facts,[2] nor aided or cured by verdict.[3] Nor can such omission be supplied by intendment of implication.[4] Ingredients or elements not set forth in the information or other criminal accusation cannot be incorporated into the charge against the defendant after he is served with process.[5] The constitutional guaranty, that the accused shall be entitled to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him in all criminal cases, has been construed to require that every ingredient of the offense be alleged,[6] and the due process clause requires that the indictment shall give full notice of all material facts constituting the offense charged.[7] such an averment of facts as shows prima facie guilt in the defendant; and if, supposing all the facts set out to be true, there is, because of the possible nonexistence of some fact not mentioned, room to escape from the prima facie conclusion of guilt, the indictment is insufficient. 1 Bishop, Cr. Pro., 2d Ed., § 325. United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 233, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting.

95. To enable accused to make defense.—Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377.

"The information which he is to receive is that which will acquaint him with the essential particulars of the offense, so that he may appear in court prepared to meet every feature of the accusation against him. As said by Chief Justice Gibson of the supreme court of Pennsylvania in Hartmann v. Commonwealth, 5 Penn. St. 60, 66: 'Precision in the description of the offense is of the last importance to the innocent; for it is that which marks the limits of the accusation and fixes the proof of it. It is the only hold he has on the jurors, judges as they are of the fact and the law.'" O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 366, 36 L. Ed. 450.

96. To plead former jeopardy.—Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377.

97. Objections.—United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 583, 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 225, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting.

98. When sufficient.—"If certain facts make out the crime, it is sufficient to charge those facts, and it is obviously unnecessary to state that which is not essential." Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 543, 38 L. Ed. 545; Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. Ed. 1057; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 449, 39 L. Ed. 481.

"The words of the indictment directly and without ambiguity disclosed all the elements essential to the commission of the offense charged, and, therefore, within the meaning of the constitution and according to the rules of pleading, the defendant was informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him." Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. Ed. 1057; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 362, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725.

99. Indictment invalid of any element omitted.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 310, 44 L. Ed. 1078.

"The general, and, with few exceptions, of which the present is not one, the universal rule, on this subject, is, that all the material facts and circumstances embraced in the definition of the offense must be stated, or the indictment will be defective." United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516.

1. Not admitted on demurrer.—United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 225, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting.

2. Not aided by averment of particular facts.—Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 203, 37 L. Ed. 419.

3. Nor cured by verdict.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516.

4. Cannot be supplied by intendment.—Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. Ed. 419. See post, "Positiveness," VIII, C, 5, c.

5. Cannot be incorporated after service of process.—United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 585, 24 L. Ed. 531.

6. Constitutional requirement.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 495.

7. Under due process clause.—Caldwell v. Texas, 141 U. S. 209, 210, 35 L. Ed. 718.

b. Accuracy and Certainty—(1) Necessity for.—In all cases, the offense must be set forth with clearness, and all necessary certainty, to apprise the accused of the crime with which he stands charged.[8] The defendant must be notified exactly of the case he is to meet.[9] An indictment should charge the offense with accuracy and certainty and not by inference.[10] An indictment may be too uncertain on account of duplicity.[11]

(2) Degree Required—(a) In General.—An indictment is good if sufficiently accurate and certain to enable all persons to come to the same conclusion as to its meaning.[12] The description in the indictment does not need to be any more definite and precise than the proof of the crime.[13] A defendant is informed of "the nature and cause of the accusation against him" if the indictment contains such description of the offense charged as will enable him to make his defense and to plead the judgment in bar of any further prosecution for the same crime.[14]

(b) Reasonable Certainty.—It is essential that the indictment apprise the accused, with reasonable certainty, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him.[15] No greater degree of certainty is necessary.[16]

8. Accuracy and certainty.—United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142, 8 L. Ed. 636; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 271, 42 L. Ed. 461; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693; Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 432, 39 L. Ed. 478; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588. See post, "In General," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (c), aa; "Where Statute Is Not Clear and Certain," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (c), dd.

Fully and accurately.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 190, 39 L. Ed. 390.

Offenses against election laws.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516. See the title ELECTIONS, vol. 5, p. 721.

Offenses against banking laws.—United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 662, 27 L. Ed. 520. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, p. 108.

For false entry in banker's report.—Cochran v. United States, 157 U. S. 286, 288, 39 L. Ed. 704. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, p. 118.

That stills and vessels were used for stilling.—United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 363, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 8 L. Ed. 636. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

For disturbance of homestead entry.—United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 78, 28 L. Ed. 673. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

9. Notice of cause to be met on defense.—Caldwell v. Texas, 141 U. S. 209, 211, 35 L. Ed. 718; Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 201, 28 L. Ed. 629; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 265, 38 L. Ed. 153; Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

10. Charge should not be by inference.—Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725.

11. Uncertain from duplicity.—See post, "In General," IX, B, 1.

12. Degree of certainty required.—Price v. United States, 165 U. S. 311, 315, 41 L. Ed. 727; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390.

Where the acts constituting the crime are set forth in the indictment with such clearness and distinctness that both the defendants and the court understood the character of the offense charged, and the court was enabled to pronounce judgment according to the right of the case, such indictment sufficiently charges the crime. Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 269, 38 L. Ed. 153.

13. Allegation need not be more certain than proof.—Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 543, 38 L. Ed. 545.

14. Sufficient certainty.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 34, 40 L. Ed. 606.

15. Reasonable certainty.—Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 362, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516; Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 325, 40 L. Ed. 441; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40, 40 L. Ed. 606; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 445, 39 L. Ed. 214; Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 77, 29 L. Ed. 561; United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 79, 28 L. Ed. 673; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. Ed. 274; Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 191, 39 L. Ed. 667.

"A crime is made up of acts and intent; and these must be set forth in the indictment, with reasonable particularity of time, place, and circumstances." United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588, quoted in United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516.

16. No greater degree required.—Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. Ed. 1057; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40, 40 L. Ed. 606; United States

c. Positiveness.—The charge in an indictment must be made directly and positively,[17] not by way of inference,[18] recital,[19] nor conclusion.[20]

d. Particularity—(1) Necessity for.—It is an elementary principle of criminal pleading, that where the definition of an offense, whether it be at common law or by statute,[21] includes generic terms.[22] It is not sufficient that the indictment shall charge the offense in the same generic terms as in the definition, but it must state the species, it must descend to particulars.[23] But an indictment is

v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 663, 27 L. Ed. 520.

Indictment of senator.—An indictment, under Rev. Stat., § 1781, which makes it a misdemeanor for a senator of the United States to receive compensation for services rendered before any department of the government in any matter in which the United States is a party or interested, avers that the defendant is a senator of the United States and has received compensation for services rendered for inducing a decision of a postoffice department in favor of his client in an order pending before that department, and in which the United States is interested, sufficiently charges an offense under the above-named statute. Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. Ed. 1057. See, also, Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. Ed. 482.

17. Positiveness.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516.

18. Not by inference.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. Ed. 419. See post, "Consequence of Criminal Act," VIII, C, 7, k; "Knowledge," VIII, C, 7, l, (2).

19. Nor recital.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516. See post, "Effect of Averring as Contrary to Statute," VIII, C, 7, o, (6).

20. Nor conclusion.—"Facts are to be stated, not conclusive of law alone." United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 466, 39 L. Ed. 494; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 203, 37 L. Ed. 419. See post, "Effect of Averment by Legal Effect of Statute," VIII, C, 7, o, (7).

Indictment for aiding and abetting crime.—United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 475, 6 L. Ed. 693. See the title ACCOMPLICES AND ACCESSORIES, vol. 1, p. 65.

21. Particularity—Statutory offenses.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 611, 42 L. Ed. 1162; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676, Field, J., dissenting. See post, "Statutory Offenses," VIII, C, 7, o.

22. Offense defined in general terms.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516.

23. Necessity for averment of particulars.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588, quoting 1 Arch. Cr. Pr. & Pl. 291, and quoted in Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676, Field, J., dissenting; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516.

"The indictment should state the particulars, to inform the court as well as the accused." United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 559, 23 L. Ed. 588.

The counts of an indictment which, in general language, charge the defendants with an intent to hinder and prevent citizens of the United States, of African descent, therein named, in the free exercise and enjoyment of the rights, privileges, immunities, and protection, granted and secured to them respectively as citizens of the United States, and of the state of Louisiana, because they were persons of African descent, and with the intent to hinder and prevent them in the several and free exercise and enjoyment of every, each, all, and singular the several rights and privileges granted and secured to them by the constitution and laws of the United States, do not specify any particular right the enjoyment of which the conspirators intended to hinder or prevent, are too vague and general, lack the certainty and precision required by the established rules of criminal pleading, and are therefore not good and sufficient in law. United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. Ed. 588. See the title CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1105.

For offenses against postal laws.—Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 609, 39 L. Ed. 550; Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 315, 40 L. Ed. 709; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 31 L. Ed. 516; Keck v. United States, 172 U. S. 434, 437, 43 L. Ed. 505. See the title POSTAL LAWS.

Offenses against revenue laws.—Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427, 434, 29 L. Ed. 681; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

In bigamy cases.—Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 77, 29 L. Ed. 561. See the title BIGAMY AND POLYGAMY, vol. 3, p. 227.

Facts showing materiality of statement in perjury cases.—Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 323, 40 L. Ed. 441. See the title PERJURY.

Under statute in territory of Utah.—

sufficient if it charges the offense in general words which have a well-understood and definite meaning.[24]

(2) Degree of Particularity Required.—While the rules of criminal pleading require that the accused shall be fully apprised of the charge made against him, it should, after all, be borne in mind that the object of criminal proceedings is to convict the guilty, as well as to shield the innocent, and no impracticable standards of particularity should be set up, whereby the government may be entrapped into making allegations which it would be impossible to prove.[25] It is a well-settled rule that where an offense is made up of a number of minute acts, which cannot be enumerated upon the record, without great prolixity and inconvenience, and the danger of variance, such acts need not be particularly set out in an indictment.[26] Every possible theory consistent with an innocent perpetration of the act need not be negatived.[27]

(3) Effect of Unnecessary Particularity.—It is generally true as claimed that where an indictment is unnecessarily descriptive, even the unnecessary description must be proved as laid.[28] In an indictment for perjury or libel, the sworn statements alleged to be false or the writing alleged to be libelous, must be proved substantially as averred in the indictment.[29] But such is not the case where an indictment, containing all the necessary averments to constitute a statutory offense, also avers unnecessary and immaterial matters.[30]

Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

24. Where words have fixed, legal meaning.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 193, 39 L. Ed. 390; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 473, 6 L. Ed. 693.

It is sufficient to charge a defendant with smuggling without alleging that it was a fraudulent and intentional violation of the revenue laws. Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 193, 39 L. Ed. 390.

"Embezzle."—The word "embezzle" has a fixed meaning in law. Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, 190, 47 L. Ed. 130; Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 459, 39 L. Ed. 478. See the titles BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 108; EMBEZZLEMENT, vol. 5, p. 742.

"Steal, take and carry away."—So do the words "steal, take and carry away." Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 429, 39 L. Ed. 478.

"Willfully misapplied."—But the words "willfully misapplied" have no settled technical meaning. Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 429, 39 L. Ed. 478; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 661, 669, 27 L. Ed. 520; United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327, 332, 334, 30 L. Ed. 664; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 588, 38 L. Ed. 830. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 108.

"Cohabit."—"The word 'cohabit' has, in the statute, a definite meaning, including every element of the offense created, as before defined. The allegation of cohabiting with the two women as wives is not an extrinsic fact, but is covered by the allegation of cohabiting with them." Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 79, 29 L. Ed. 561.

Offenses created by statute.—See post, "Where Offense Is Described in Technical Terms," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (b), aa.

25. Degree of particularity required.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 590, 38 L. Ed. 830.

Unnecessary particularity.—Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 410, 411, 39 L. Ed. 1033.

26. Offense made up of many acts.—In an indictment under the slave-trade act of the 20th of April, 1818, ch. 373, against the owner of the ship, it is not necessary to specify the particulars of the fitting out. The particular preparations are matters of evidence, and not of averment. Every man may well be presumed to know what are the fitments of a vessel for a voyage, without more particularity. The present case is a fit illustration of the rule; the fitting out is a compound of various minute acts, almost incapable of exact specification. United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 473, 475, 6 L. Ed. 693.

27. Need not negative every theory consistent with innocence.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 590, 38 L. Ed. 830.

28. Effect of unnecessary particularity.—Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 445, 39 L. Ed. 214; Hall v. United States, 168 U. S. 632, 639, 42 L. Ed. 607. See post, "Indecent and Obscene Matters," VIII, C, 7, h.

But unnecessary matter of description may be proved otherwise than as it is stated. Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 445, 39 L. Ed. 214.

29. Indictments for perjury and libel.—Hall v. United States, 168 U. S. 632, 639, 42 L. Ed. 607.

30. Statutory offenses.—Hall v. United States, 168 U. S. 632, 639, 42 L. Ed. 607.

(4) Bill of Particulars.—The accused can of right call upon the prosecutor to specify more fully what is claimed to be included under general terms.[31] If an indictment be not demurrable upon its face, it would not become so by the addition of a bill of particulars.[32]

e. Multifariousness.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere in this title.[33]

f. Repugnancy.—Repugnancy in an indictment cannot arise from a contrariety or inconsistency of charges in different counts. It only occurs where the inconsistent charges are within the same count.[34]

g. Duplicity.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere in this title.[35]

h. Alternative Allegations.—Both at common law and under penal statutes, it is the usual practice to allege offenses cumulatively and not alternatively.[36]

i. By Reference—(1) To Another Part of Same Count.—Where every element of an offense is set forth in an earlier part of a count, there is no necessity of repeating it when a particular act is described.[37]

(2) To Different Count.—Though every count should appear upon the face of it to charge the defendant with a distinct offense,[38] yet one count may refer

31. Bill of particulars.—Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 271, 42 L. Ed. 461; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 39 L. Ed. 390; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40 L. Ed. 606; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 468, 39 L. Ed. 494. See the title BILL OF PARTICULARS, vol. 2, p. 243. And see post, "Matters Unknown," VIII, C, 7, c.

"This is analogous to the common counts in assumpsit in civil cases, which grew up under the common law. The defendant in a civil case is entitled to notice of what he is called upon to meet, as much as a respondent in a criminal case, and for the same reasons. Under these common counts it has always been held that the plaintiff might show any number of claims of the class described, and for this reason, that the defendant was entitled, as a matter of right, to a bill of particulars, or specifications, and that such specifications supplied what was lacking by the generality of the count, in regard to the particulars and number of similar claims which the plaintiff would call upon the defendant to litigate." Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 271, 42 L. Ed. 461.

32. Not made demurrable by bill of particulars.—Dunlop v. United States, 165 U. S. 486, 491, 41 L. Ed. 799.

33. Multifariousness.—See post, "Before Verdict," XV, D, 2.

34. Repugnancy.—Where there were two counts in an indictment, the one charging the offenses as committed on the high seas, the other in a haven, basin or bay, a general verdict of guilty could be sustained. No objection can be made on account of repugnancy and inconsistency. Each count is a distinct, substantive charge. Internal repugnancy in any one is a good exception, but non constat as to the whole, taken severally, but each may be for a distinct offense. United States v. The Pirates, 5 Wheat. 184, 5 L. Ed. 64. See ante, "Accuracy and Certainty," VIII, C, 5, b; post, "To Another Part of Same Count," VIII, C, 5, i, (1). And see the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

35. Duplicity.—See post, "Duplicity," IX.

36. Alternative allegations.—As that the defendant published and caused to be published a certain libel; that he forged and caused to be forged a certain document. Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 635, 40 L. Ed. 1097.

"It may be conceded that an indictment or a criminal information which charges the person accused, in the disjunctive, with being guilty of one or of another of several offenses, would be destitute of the necessary certainty, and would be wholly insufficient. It would be so for two reasons. It would not give the accused definite notice of the offense charged, and thus enable him to defend himself, and neither a conviction nor an acquittal could be pleaded in bar to a subsequent prosecution for one of the several offenses." The Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall. 92, 104, 22 L. Ed. 320.

The indictment should allege the offense conjunctively in a single count, although the statute on which founded states the offense disjunctively. Wiborg v. United States, 163 U. S. 632, 647, 41 L. Ed. 289.

Where it is uncertain whether the crime of homicide was committed by shooting or drowning, the indictment may charge the offense conjunctively in one count instead of alternatively in two separate counts. Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 500, 42 L. Ed. 1116.

37. By reference to another part of same count.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 590, 38 L. Ed. 830; St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 146, 38 L. Ed. 936. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

38. To different count.—See ante, "Of Separate Counts," VII, G.

to matter in any other count so as to avoid unnecessary repetitions.[39] But averments in one count cannot aid defects in another,[40] and, by parity of reason, it follows that defects in one count ought not to impair the sufficiency of another.[41] If the previous count be defective or is rejected, that circumstance will not vitiate the remaining counts, if the reference be sufficiently full to incorporate the matter going before with that in the count in which the reference is made.[42] The reference should be sufficiently full to incorporate the matter going before with that in the count in which reference is made.[43]

j. By Innuendo.—If accounts set out in an indictment are unintelligible to persons not accountants, they may be explained by innuendoes.[44]

k. Grammar and Etymology.—A name need not be correctly spelled in an indictment, if substantially the same sound is preserved.[45]

6. General Rules of Sufficiency—a. To Show Nature and Cause of Accusation—(1) In General.—The accused is entitled to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him,[46] and it is essential to a valid indictment that it should set forth the offense, with such particulars of time, place, and person, that the accused may know the nature of the charge.[47]

(2) To Inform Court.—It is necessary to the validity of an indictment that the court may see therein with judicial eyes that the fact, alleged to have been committed, is an offense against the laws, and may also discern the punishment annexed by law to the specific offense.[48]

39. Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 316, 38 L. Ed. 725; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 449, 39 L. Ed. 481; Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 633, 40 L. Ed. 1097; Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 432, 39 L. Ed. 478.

In an indictment for an election offense, where the previous count set out the nature and date of the election, it is permissible, in a subsequent count, to refer to the election as "the said election," instead of again repeating the nature and date of the election; for the election named in the first count is the only one specifically prescribed in the indictment. Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 316, 38 L. Ed. 725.

40. Defects not aided by reference.—Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 376, 45 L. Ed. 577.

41. Sufficiency not impaired by reference.—Thus, an indictment which is void in one count for want of proper verification, is not rendered void in another properly verified count. Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 376, 45 L. Ed. 577.

42. Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 633, 40 L. Ed. 1097; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 317, 38 L. Ed. 725.

"And this reference was not affected by the fact that the first count was defective, or by the fact that judgment upon that count was arrested." Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 633, 40 L. Ed. 1097.

43. Sufficiency of reference.—Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 317, 38 L. Ed. 725.

44. By innuendo.—United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 663, 27 L. Ed. 520.

45. Spelling of name.—Faust v. United States, 163 U. S. 452, 454, 41 L. Ed. 224.

Language in designation of offense.—See ante, "In General," VIII, C, 1.

46. General rules of sufficiency—Nature and cause of accusation to be shown.—Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. Ed. 816; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 495.

General character of crime.—Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 552, 48 L. Ed. 1110; In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 449, 34 L. Ed. 219. See the title RAPE.

"It is the established rule of the common law, which has prevailed in England and in this country since the revolution of 1688, if not for a period anterior to it, that in all criminal prosecutions the accused must be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him. It is the law of every civilized community, and in no case can there be, in criminal proceedings, due process of law where the accused is not thus informed." O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 366, 36 L. Ed. 450, dissenting opinion, Field, J.

Under Utah statute.—Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 265, 38 L. Ed. 153; Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

47. To inform accused.—Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. Ed. 415; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 351, 25 L. Ed. 676, dissenting opinion of Field, J.

To fully apprised accused.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 591, 38 L. Ed. 830.

48. To inform court.—The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 394, 3 L. Ed. 380; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588.

(3) To Enable Accused to Prepare Defense.—It is essential to the validity of an indictment that it should so allege the offense that the accused will be enabled to prepare and direct his defense.[49]

(4) To Enable Accused to Plead Jeopardy on Subsequent Trial.—It is essential to the validity of an indictment that it be of sufficient accuracy, certainty and completeness that, in the event of acquittal or conviction, the judgment rendered thereon can be pleaded in bar of a second prosecution for the same offense.[50]

b. To Support Conviction.—It must be made to appear from the indictment, without going further, that the acts charged will, if proved, support a conviction for the offense alleged.[51]

7. AVERMENT OF PARTICULAR MATTERS—a. Matters of Evidence.—It is never necessary to set forth matters of evidence in an indictment.[52]

b. Matters of Defense.—Neither in criminal nor in civil pleading is it required to anticipate or negative a defense. This must be shown by the accused.[53]

c. Matters Unknown.—If a matter is unknown to the grand jurors, it is proper to be so alleged in the indictment, and, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed to have been in fact, unknown to them.[54] When necessary to avoid prejudicing the case of the accused, the prosecution may be compelled to give a more particular description, in the nature of the specification or bill of particulars.[55]

49. To enable accused to prepare defense.—The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 394, 3 L. Ed. 380; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676, Field, J., dissenting; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390; Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 429, 39 L. Ed. 478; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 445, 39 L. Ed. 214; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693; United States v. Cook, 154 U. S. 555, 18 L. Ed. 835; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 309, 44 L. Ed. 1078; The Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall. 92, 104, 22 L. Ed. 320; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; Southworth v. United States, 151 U. S. 179, 184, 38 L. Ed. 119.

Under postal laws.—Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 314, 40 L. Ed. 709; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390.

Under Utah statute.—Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 75, 29 L. Ed. 561; Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 265, 38 L. Ed. 153.

50. To plead former jeopardy.—Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. Ed. 1057; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693; Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 429, 39 L. Ed. 478; The Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall. 92, 104, 22 L. Ed. 320; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390; In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 448, 34 L. Ed. 219; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 445, 39 L. Ed. 214; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 362, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 310, 44 L. Ed. 1078; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676, Field, J., dissenting.

51. To support conviction.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 559, 23 L. Ed. 588; The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 394, 3 L. Ed. 380; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516; Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 269, 38 L. Ed. 153.

52. Matters of evidence.—Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 469, 39 L. Ed. 494; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 444, 445, 39 L. Ed. 214; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 473, 6 L. Ed. 693; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 363, 24 L. Ed. 819; Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 609, 39 L. Ed. 550. See post, "Means of Commission of Offense," VIII, C, 7, j; "Sufficiency of Averment," VIII, C, 7, l, (1), (b).

53. Matters of defense.—All matters of defense must come from the defendant and need not be anticipated by the prosecution. Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 590, 38 L. Ed. 830; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 173, 21 L. Ed. 638.

54. Matters unknown.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 167, 39 L. Ed. 657; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 451, 39 L. Ed. 481.

Hence, an instruction that an indictment is invalid in the absence of evidence tending to show the facts of want of knowledge in the grand jury, was properly refused. Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 451, 39 L. Ed. 481.

55. Bill of particulars.—Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 452, 39 L. Ed. 481.

d. Matters at Conference of Grand Jury.—The defendant is not entitled to have the indictment inform him of what passed at the conference of the grand jurors.[56]

e. Property.—Indictments for some offenses must describe the property involved therein.[57] Any words of description which make clear to the common understanding the articles in respect to which the offense is alleged are sufficient.[58] An indictment which describes property in general terms, broad enough to conclude more than one specific article, is not invalid where other words are employed, which make clear the property in regard to which the crime was committed.[59]

f. Ownership.—It is necessary in some instances for the indictment to allege ownership or possession of the property involved in the offense.[60]

g. Contents of Written Instruments—(1) In General.—Where a writing is the gist of an offense, it must be set out in the indictment in hæc verba, as in cases of libel and other cases analogous thereto. And where it is not necessary to state the contents of the writing but the indictment attempts to do so, the same rule prevails.[61] An indictment for making false entries in a bank report need not set out the report with technical accuracy.[62]

(2) Lost Instruments.—In describing a lost instrument in an indictment it is sufficient to allege that such instrument has been destroyed and that the grand jury is unable to give any further description thereof.[63]

h. Indecent and Obscene Matters.—The constitutional right of the defendant to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him is not infringed by the omission from the indictment of indecent and obscene matter,[64] alleged sufficiently that it may be discerned as not proper to be spread upon the

56. Matters at conference of grand jury.—"He was not entitled to show, as matter of defense, that the grand jury proceeded on insufficient grounds. He had to meet only the case made by the indictment and by the evidence adduced by the government." Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 35, 40 L. Ed. 606. See the title GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570.

57. Property stolen in indictment for larceny.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516. See the title LARCENY.

Land in land-fraud cases.—Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 543, 38 L. Ed. 545. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

58. Sufficiency of description.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390.

59. In generic terms.—"Thus, an indictment charging the larceny of 'a horse, the property of A B,' is not overthrown by proof that A B is the owner of many horses, any one of which will satisfy the mere words of description. Yet, to make available a judgment on such an indictment in bar of a subsequent prosecution, something beside the record might be required to identify the property mentioned in the two indictments." Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390.

And an indictment charging a defendant with smuggling "prepared opium," under a statute which reads "opium prepared for smoking," and which contains other words which clearly limit any generality in the term "prepared opium," is sufficiently certain. "There can be no doubt that the defendant knew exactly what he was charged with having smuggled, and that the description was so precise and full that he could easily use a judgment under these indictments in bar of any subsequent prosecution. It is true some parol testimony might be required to show the absolute identity of the smuggled goods, but such proof is often requisite to sustain a plea of once in jeopardy." Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390.

60. Ownership—Indictment for larceny.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516. See the title LARCENY.

For receiving stolen goods.—Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 47, 61, 43 L. Ed. 890. See the title RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.

61. Contents of written instruments.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 37, 40 L. Ed. 606. See post, "Indecent and Obscene Matters," VIII, C, 7, h.

62. Banker's report under Rev. Stat., §§ 5209, 5211.—See Cochran v. United States, 157 U. S. 286, 288, 39 L. Ed. 704. And see the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 118.

63. Lost writings.—Rosencrans v. United States, 165 U. S. 257, 263, 41 L. Ed. 708.

64. Indecent and obscene matters.—The omission from the indictment of a description of the pictures of female figures found in the paper was not in violation of the constitutional guaranty that the defendant in a criminal case shall be informed of the nature and cause of the records of the court,[65] provided the crime charged, however general the language used, is yet so described as reasonably to inform the accused of the nature of the charge sought to be established against him.[66] It seems that the omitted matter must be referred to in such manner as to be identified.[67] The accused may apply to the court before the trial is entered upon for a bill of particulars, showing what part of the omitted matter will be relied on by the prosecution, which motion will be granted or refused, as the court, in the exercise of a sound legal discretion, may find necessary to the ends of justice.[68] But, whenever it is necessary to do so, or whenever the indictment undertakes to state the contents, whether necessary or not, the same rule prevails as in the case of libel, that is to say, the alleged obscene publication must be set out in the very words of which it is composed, and the indictment must undertake or profess to do so, by the use of appropriate language. The excepted cases occur whenever a publication of this character is so obscene as to render it improper that it should appear on the record; and, then, the statement of the contents may be omitted altogether, and a description thereof substituted; but, in this case, a reason for the omission must appear in the indictment, by proper averments.[69]

i. Fact of Commission of Offense—(1) In Indictment against Accomplices.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[70]

(2) Indictment for Cheating.—An indictment for a cheat need not allege the actual defrauding of any person.[71]

j. Means of Commission of Offense.—All the special or particular means em-accusation against him. Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 34, 40 L. Ed. 606.

In indictments for the offense of publishing or mailing indecent matters, it is not always necessary that the contents of the publication should be inserted. Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 37, 40 L. Ed. 606.

65. Alleged sufficiently to be discerned.—It is unnecessary to spread the obscene matter in all its filthiness upon the record; it is enough to so far describe it that its obnoxious character may be discerned. Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 45, 40 L. Ed. 606.

"It is unquestioned that the English rule requires, where obscene words are relied upon, that the obscene matter should be set out explicitly in the indictment, and that the averment that is too obscene to be so stated is insufficient to excuse the omission. Regina v. Bradlaugh, 3 Q. B. Div. 621." Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 44, 40 L. Ed. 606, dissenting opinion of White and Shiras, JJ.

"But this is not the doctrine of the American courts." Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 44, 40 L. Ed. 606, dissenting opinion of White and Shiras, JJ.

It is for the court to determine what is fit to be set out in the record. Dunlop v. United States, 165 U. S. 486, 41 L. Ed. 799.

66. Accused must be informed of charge.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40, 40 L. Ed. 606; Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 608, 39 L. Ed. 550.

67. Omitted matter must be identified.—Where the publication or mailing of obscene matter is charged by a grand jury, such matter need not be stated in the indictment, provided in that instrument it be referred to and identified. Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 47, 40 L. Ed. 606, dissenting opinion of White and Shiras, JJ.

"Under the ruling now announced, it seems to us that the exception is made to destroy the rule, and that an indictment is held to be valid even although it makes no reference whatever to the matter relied on to show guilt. Thus the qualification as to the identifying reference by which alone the exception is justified disappears, and the result logically leads to the recognition of the right of a grand jury to present without stating or referring to the facts upon which its presentment is made, and also concedes the power of a prosecuting officer to supply matter in an indictment, and thus make that which is absolutely void a valid instrument." Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 47, 40 L. Ed. 606, dissenting opinion of White and Shiras, JJ.

68. Objections—Bill of particulars.—It is the duty of the defendant to make an objection to such indictment before the trial is entered upon. Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 34, 40, 40 L. Ed. 606.

69. If attempted to be set out must be set out in full.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 37, 40 L. Ed. 606. See ante, "In General," VIII, C, 7, g, (1).

70. Fact of commission of crime.—See the titles ACCOMPLICES AND ACCESSORIES, vol. 1, p. 65; CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1103; POSTAL LAWS.

71. Respublica v. Sweers, 1 Dall. 41, 1 L. Ed. 29.

ployed in the commission of an offense need not be fully set forth in an indictment.[72] But in some offenses it is necessary to set out the special means by which the commission of the offense was effected.[73] This is usually matter of evidence.[74] But it has been held that in states where it is a crime for two or more persons to conspire to cheat and defraud another out of his property, that an indictment for such an offense must contain allegations setting forth the means proposed to be used to accomplish the purpose.[75] Such are the cases of indictments for false pretenses, and sending threatening letters, where the pretenses and the letters are required to be set forth, from the close analogy to indictments for perjury and forgery.[76] The course has been to leave every class of cases to be decided very much upon its own peculiar circumstances.[77]

72. Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. Ed. 1057; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 363, 24 L. Ed. 819; Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 411, 39 L. Ed. 1033; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 448, 39 L. Ed. 481; Coffin v. United States, 162 U. S. 664, 40 L. Ed. 1109; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 6 L. Ed. 693; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 38 L. Ed. 830.

It is not necessary to state, in an indictment for an offense by which the United States was defrauded of a revenue tax, the particular means by which the fraud was committed. United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 363, 24 L. Ed. 819; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

An indictment which alleges that the defendant inflicted a mortal wound upon the deceased of which mortal wound the deceased "did languish and languishing did then and there instantly die," distinctly and unequivocally alleges that the victim died of the mortal wound alleged to have been inflicted by the defendant. United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 663, 41 L. Ed. 300. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

"It is unnecessary to aver that the poison was taken into the stomach of the deceased." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255.

"The indictment need not specify in detail the mode in which the poison affected the body, or the particular organ upon which its operation was had. It is enough to charge that poison was administered, and that such poison, so administered, caused the death." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255.

Land frauds.—Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 544, 38 L. Ed. 545.

"And in endeavors to commit a revolt, which is, by statute, in England, made a capital offense, it has always been deemed sufficient to allege the offense in the words of the statute, without setting forth any particulars of the manner or the means." United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 475, 6 L. Ed. 693.

"So, in cases of solicitation to commit crimes, it has been held sufficient, to state the act of solicitation, without any averment of the special means." United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 475, 6 L. Ed. 693.

"It is laid down as a general rule, that 'in an indictment for soliciting or inciting to the commission of a crime, or for aiding or assisting in the commission of it, it is not necessary to state the particulars of the incitement or solicitation, or of the aid or assistance.' 2 Wharton, § 1281." United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 363, 24 L. Ed. 819. See the title ACCOMPLICES AND ACCESSORIES, vol. 1, p. 65.

73. "The case of treason stands upon a peculiar ground; there, the overt acts must, by statute, be specially laid in the indictment, and must be proved as laid. The very act, and mode of the act, must, therefore, be laid as it is intended to be proved." United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 475, 6 L. Ed. 693.

An indictment for treason charged to have been committed by sending intelligence of the enemy, it is not necessary to set forth the particulars of the intelligence communicated. Respublica v. Carlisle, 1 Dall. 35, 1 L. Ed. 26. See the title TREASON.

74. Usually matter of evidence.—United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 363, 24 L. Ed. 819. See ante, "Matters of Evidence," VIII, C, 7, a.

75. Indictments for frauds and cheats.—United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588.

76. United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693.

"This, because, to make such a purpose criminal, the conspiracy must be to cheat and defraud in a mode made criminal by statute; and as all cheating and defrauding has not been made criminal, it is necessary for the indictment to state the means proposed, in order that the court may see that they are in fact illegal." United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. Ed. 588. See the titles ATTEMPTS AND SOLICITATIONS TO COMMIT CRIME, vol. 2, p. 702; CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1105.

77. In this regard each case determined by particular circumstances. — United

k. Consequence of Criminal Act.—Words charging the doing of a criminal act import the criminal consequence thereto.[78]

l. Intent or Knowledge—(1) Intent—(a) Necessity for Averment.—Where the intent is a material ingredient of the crime, it is necessary to be averred,[79] as in a case of assault with intent to kill.[80]

(b) Sufficiency of Averment.—The averment may always be made in general terms,[81] without the particular means of affecting the criminal intent or the circumstances evincive of the design with which the act was done.[82] These are considered to be matters of evidence to go to the jury to demonstrate the intent, and not necessary to be incorporated in an indictment.[83]

(c) Averment of Felonious Intent—aa. In Common-Law Felonies.—In all felonies at common law, the felonious intent is deemed an essential ingredient in the constitution of the offense, and must be alleged in the indictment. Its omission is a substantial defect, not cured by verdict.[84]

bb. In Statutory Felonies.—Where, in felonies created by statute, the felo-

States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693.

78. Consequences of criminal act.—Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 444, 39 L. Ed. 214.

79. Intent—Necessity for averment.—United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135, distinguished in Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 193, 39 L. Ed. 390; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 448, 39 L. Ed. 481.

Where the gravamen of the offense consists in the evil design with which the act is committed, an indictment failing to allege it to have been done with evil intent is clearly bad. Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830.

Where a statute uses words which are not absolutely inconsistent with an honest purpose, such as was held by the federal supreme court in United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 669, 27 L. Ed. 520, and United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 193, 27 L. Ed. 701, were the words "willfully misapplied," the allegation of an intent to defraud becomes material in the highest degree. In fact, the gravamen of the offense consists in the evil design with which the misapplication is made, and a count which should omit the words "willfully," etc., and "with intent to defraud," would be clearly bad. Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 593, 38 L. Ed. 830; Spurr v. United States, 174 U. S. 728, 735, 43 L. Ed. 1150.

Under postal laws.—Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 609, 39 L. Ed. 550. See the title POSTAL LAWS.

In charging offense against banking laws.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 592, 38 L. Ed. 830; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 193, 27 L. Ed. 701; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 665, 27 L. Ed. 520. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, pp. 117, 118.

Offenses against law of nations.—United States v. Quincy, 6 Pet. 445, 8 L. Ed. 458. See the title INTERNATIONAL LAW.

80. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

81. May be averred in general terms.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830.

82. Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 364, 24 L. Ed. 819, both quoting from 1 Wharton's Cr. Law, § 292.

The intent may be manifested by so many acts upon the part of the accused, covering such a long period of time, as to render it difficult, if not wholly impracticable, to aver, with any degree of certainty, all essential facts from which it may be fairly inferred. Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830.

There is no greater need of setting out the evidence to prove such intent than there would be of averring in detail the evidence of a scienter, or of any other fact material to the offense. Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830.

"It is laid down, that 'when the charge is not the absolute perpetration of an offense, but its primary characteristic lies in the intent, instigation, or motives of the party towards its perpetration, the acts of the accused, important only as developing the mala mens, and not constituting of themselves the crime, need not be spread upon the record.' United States v. Almeida, Whart. Prec. 1061, 1062, note." United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 243, 23 L. Ed. 563, Hunt, J., dissenting.

83. Matters of evidence.—United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 364, 24 L. Ed. 819.

84. Felonious intent—Common-law felonies.—United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979, quoted in Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 466, 39 L. Ed. 494. See note to United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. Ed. 979.

In an indictment for murder, it is necessary to aver that the killing was done "willfully, feloniously, and of malice aforethought." Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830; Davis v. Utah, nious intent is an essential ingredient in the constitution of the offense, the act must be alleged to have been committed feloniously, or with felonious intent;[85] but, in cases where this felonious intent constitutes no part of the crime, that being complete, under the statute, without it, and depending upon another and different criminal intent, the rule can have no application in reason, however it may be upon authority.[86] And it has also been stated, that an indictment for an offense which is not a felony at common law, but made so by statute, need not allege that the offense was committed feloniously.[87]

(2) Knowledge.—Whenever knowledge is an essential ingredient of the offense, it must be alleged, unless it is implied in the statement of the act itself.[88] It has been held that the failure to allege that the accused knew the instrument to be false, forged and counterfeit, in an indictment for the uttering of such instrument, is a substantial defect;[89] but, in an indictment for sending improper matter through the mails which alleges that the defendant deposited such matter in the mails, the failure to allege knowledge of the contents thereof, after verdict, was held to be a defect of form only, coming within the Revised Statutes, § 1025.[90] An indictment which charges the accused with having administered

151 U. S. 262, 270, 38 L. Ed. 153; Respublica v. Honeyman, 2 Dall. 228, 1 L. Ed. 359. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 693.

85. Statutory felonies—Intent essential element of offense.—The rule has been adhered to with great strictness; and properly so, where this intent is a material element of the crime. United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979, and note.

This view accounts for the necessity of the averment of a felonious intent in many felonies by statute; because, if it is used, in the sense of the law, to denote the actual crime itself, the felonious intent becomes an essential ingredient to constitute it. United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 45, 12 L. Ed. 979. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

86. Where intent not element.—United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 45, 12 L. Ed. 979.

"Where the offense is created by statute, and the statute does not use the word 'feloniously,' there is a difference of opinion among state courts whether the word must be put into the indictment. 1 Bish. Crim. Proc., § 535. But under the decision in United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. Ed. 979, we are clearly of the opinion that it need not be done." Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 467, 39 L. Ed. 494.

Where an act of congress declared, that, if any person "shall transmit to, or present at, or cause or procure to be transmitted to, or presented at, any office or officer of the government of the United States, any deed, power of attorney, order, certificate, receipt or other writing, in support of, or in relation to, any account or claim, with intent to defraud the United States, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited; every such person shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony," etc., it was sufficient that the indictment charged the act to have been done "with intent to defraud the United States," without also charging that it was done feloniously, or with a "felonious intent." United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 46, 12 L. Ed. 979; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 466, 39 L. Ed. 494.

Where charge follows statute.—Where the indictment follows the precise words of the statute, neither the word "unlawful" or any other word showing a wrongful intent need be added. United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. Ed. 979.

In an indictment under the slave trade act of the 20th of April, 1818, ch. 373, against the owner of the ship, an averment that the ship was fitted out, etc., "with intent that the said vessel should be employed" in the slave trade, is fatally defective, the words of the statute being, "with intent to employ" the vessel in the slave trade, and exclusively referring to the intent of the party causing the act. United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 6 L. Ed. 693.

87. Common-law offense raised to felony by statute.—"That a conspiracy 'to commit any offense against the United States' is not a felony at common law, is too clear for argument; and even if it were made a felony by statute, the indictment would not necessarily be defective for failing to aver that the act was feloniously done." Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 466, 39 L. Ed. 494.

88. Knowledge.—Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 205, 37 L. Ed. 419.

89. Indictment for uttering forged instrument.—"The omission is of matter of substance, and not a 'defect or imperfection in matter of form only,' within the meaning of § 1025 of the Revised Statutes." United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 613, 26 L. Ed. 1135. See the title FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING, ante, p. 380.

90. For sending improper matter through mails.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 32, 40 L. Ed. 606. See the title POSTAL LAWS.

strychnine and other poisons, and with the unlawful and felonious intent to take the life of the deceased, is sufficient although it does not allege that the accused knew that that which he administered was a deadly poison.[91] The words "knowingly" or "well knowing" will supply the place of a positive averment that the defendant knew the fact subsequently stated.[92]

m. Included Offenses.—It is provided by the Revised Statutes that a party may be found guilty of any offense, the commission of which is necessarily included in that with which he is charged in the indictment, or may be found guilty of an attempt to commit the offense so charged.[93] The minor offense must be an ingredient of the major and substantially included in the charges of the former.[94] The lesser offense may be sufficiently charged although the indictment is insufficient as to the greater.[95]

n. Degrees of Crime.—Where under the law of a state a crime is defined as being of different degrees, the accused may be tried and convicted of the highest degree under an indictment which charged the offense in a general way without distinguishing between the grades of the offense, or specifically charging it in the highest degree.[96]

o. Statutory Offenses—(1) In General.—The general rule is, that the charge must be laid in the indictment so as to bring the case within the description of the offense as given in the statute,[97] alleging every ingredient of which it is constituted,[98] and which would be necessary to a conviction if proved,[99] with such degree of certainty and accuracy as to leave no doubt in the words of the accused and the court of the exact offense charged.[1] Nothing is to be left to

91. For administering poison.—"It matters not whether he knew the exact character of the strychnine or other poisons." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

92. Sufficiency of averment.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390.

93. Included offenses.—Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377; Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 63, 39 L. Ed. 343; Wallace v. United States, 162 U. S. 466, 40 L. Ed. 1039. See Rev. Stat., § 1035. And see the titles ATTEMPTS AND SOLICITATIONS TO COMMIT CRIME, vol. 2, p. 702; VERDICT.

An indictment for a capital offense usually includes an offense less than capital, and the defendant may be convicted of either. For instance, one indicted of murder may be convicted of manslaughter, or of an assault only. Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 307, 36 L. Ed. 429.

94. Union offense must be ingredient of major.—Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 678, 40 L. Ed. 301.

It is a matter for the state courts to determine whether in a given case an indictment is sufficient in that regard. Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 678, 40 L. Ed. 301. See BURGLARY AND HOUSEBREAKING, vol. 3, p. 544.

95. Where major not sufficiently charged.—An indictment which charges an assault with a loaded gun, and the infliction of mortal wounds by the discharge of its contents, of which mortal wounds the victim "did languish and languishing died," is not valid as an indictment for homicide, because it fails to aver either the time or place of the death; but the indictment sufficiently charges an assault. Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 664, 41 L. Ed. 300.

96. Degrees of crime.—Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. Ed. 845; Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 266, 38 L. Ed. 153; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 296, 40 L. Ed. 432; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 679, 40 L. Ed. 301. See BURGLARY AND HOUSEBREAKING, vol. 3, p. 544. And see the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

97. Statutory offenses.—United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 610, 42 L. Ed. 1162; Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 166, 39 L. Ed. 657; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 662, 27 L. Ed. 520; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 586, 24 L. Ed. 531; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 78, 29 L. Ed. 561; Moore v. United States, 160 U. S. 268, 270, 40 L. Ed. 422.

A charge which brings the accused clearly within the scope and requirements of the statute creating the offense, and so identifies the offense as to enable the accused to fully prepare his defense, is sufficient. Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 166, 39 L. Ed. 657.

98. See ante, "Completeness," VIII, C, 5, a.

99. The Samuel, 1 Wheat. 9, 14, 4 L. Ed. 23.

1. See ante, "In General," VIII, C, 5, b, (2), (a).

implication or intendment.[2]

(2) In Words of Statute—(a) The General Rule.—Where an offense is purely statutory, having no relation to the common law, it is, as a general rule, sufficient in an indictment thereon to charge the defendant with acts coming fully within the statutory description, in the substantial words of the statute,[3] without any further expansion of the matter.[4]

(b) Applications of General Rule—aa. Where Offense Is Described in Technical Terms.—It is sufficient in charging a statutory offense to use the terms of the statute, where such terms have a settled, technical and well understood meaning;[5] and, where words or terms of art are used in the description, that have a technical meaning at common law, these should be followed, being the only terms to express in apt and legal language the nature and character of the crime.[6] While all offenses of which the courts of the United States have jurisdiction are created by the constitution, laws or treaties of the United States, the common law is to be resorted to for the definitions of the terms by which such offenses are designated.[7]

bb. Where All Elements of Offense Are Set Out—(aa) In General.—Where the words of the statute themselves fully, directly, and expressly, without any uncertainty or ambiguity, set forth all the elements necessary to constitute the offense intended to be punished, a charge in the words of such statute is sufficient,[8] and it need not be made more complete by specifying particulars else-

2. Nothing to be left to implication.—United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979.

3. In words of statute.—Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 609, 42 L. Ed. 1162; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 362, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 661, 27 L. Ed. 520; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 444, 39 L. Ed. 214; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 612, 26 L. Ed. 1135; United States v. Quincy, 6 Pet. 445, 8 L. Ed. 458; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 193, 199, 27 L. Ed. 701; United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327, 330, 30 L. Ed. 664; Claassen v. United States, 142 U. S. 140, 35 L. Ed. 966; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 589, 38 L. Ed. 830; Pounds v. United States, 171 U. S. 35, 38, 43 L. Ed. 62; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 473, 6 L. Ed. 693; United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979; Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 315, 40 L. Ed. 709; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 270, 42 L. Ed. 461; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516.

"As a general rule, an indictment for a statute offense is sufficient, if it describe the offense in the very words of the statute." United States v. Brig Neurea, 19 How. 92, 94, 15 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693.

In indictments it is often sufficient to state the offense in the very terms of the prohibitory statute. The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, 13, 6 L. Ed. 531.

In an indictment under the slave trade act of the 20th of April, 1818, ch. 373, against the owner of the ship, it is not necessary to specify the particulars of the fitting out; it is sufficient to allege the offense in the words of the statute. United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 6 L. Ed. 693. See the title ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, pp. 163, 164.

4. United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 362, 24 L. Ed. 819, quoted in United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 661, 27 L. Ed. 520; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516; Pounds v. United States, 171 U. S. 35, 38, 43 L. Ed. 62.

Rule not affected by exceptions thereto.—Notwithstanding the cases making exceptions to it, the general rule still holds good that upon an indictment for a statutory offense, the offense may be described in the words of the statute. Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 611, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

Averment of felonious intent.—See ante, "In Statutory Felonies," VIII, C, 7, l, (1), (c), bb.

5. Where terms have technical meaning.—United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 671, 27 L. Ed. 520; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 545, 38 L. Ed. 545. See post, "Where Offense Is Not Described in Technical Terms," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (c), bb.

6. Terms of art.—United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979.

7. Common-law definition of statutory terms.—Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 203, 37 L. Ed. 419. See the title COMMON LAW, vol. 3, p. 975.

8. Where all elements of offense set out.—Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327, 334, 30 L. Ed. 664; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 21 L. Ed. 638; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 665, 27 L. Ed. 520.

where obtained.[9]

(bb) Where Offense Better Defined in Another Section of Statute.—An indictment under one section of a statute which fully sets forth all essentials of the offense is sufficient if it follows the words of such section, although there is another section of the statute which defines the offense more fully.[10]

(cc) Misdemeanor Cases.—A rule of criminal pleading, which at one time obtained in some of the circuits, and perhaps received a qualified sanction from the federal supreme court,[11] that an indictment for a statutory misdemeanor is sufficient, if the offense be charged in the words of the statute, must, under more recent decisions, be limited to cases where the words of the statute themselves, fully, directly, and expressly, without any uncertainty or ambiguity, set forth all the elements necessary to constitute the offense intended to be punished.[12]

(c) Exceptions to General Rule—aa. In General.—The exceptions to the above rule are firmly settled and well recognized.[13] These exceptions arise either from the obvious intention of the legislature,[14] or from the application of known principles of law.[15] Most of the exceptions result from the rule that every ingredient of the offense must be accurately and certainly expressed.[16]

9. Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 612, 42 L. Ed. 1162; United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979. See post, "Where All Elements of Offense Are Not Expressed," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (c), cc.

10. Where offense better defined in another section of statute.—United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 611, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

11. In misdemeanor cases—Former rule.—"In United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142, 8 L. Ed. 636, it was said by this court: 'The general rule is, that, in indictments for misdemeanors created by statute, it is sufficient to charge the offense in the words of the statute. * * * But in all cases the offense must be set forth with clearness, and all necessary certainty to apprise the accused of the crime with which he stands charged.'" Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 78, 29 L. Ed. 561.

"There is not that technical nicety required as to form which seems to have been adopted and sanctioned by long practice in cases of felony, and with respect to some crimes, where particular words must be used, and no other words, however synonymous they may seem, can be substituted." United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 661, 27 L. Ed. 520; United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142, 8 L. Ed. 636.

12. Present rule.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 38 L. Ed. 830.

"Even in the cases of misdemeanors, the indictment must be free from all ambiguity, and leave no doubt in the minds of the accused and the court of the exact offense intended to be charged, not only that the former may know what he is called upon to meet, but that, upon a plea of former acquittal or conviction, the record may show with accuracy the exact offense to which the plea relates." Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 38 L. Ed. 830; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 610, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

13. Exceptions to general rule.—United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 585, 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 444, 39 L. Ed. 214.

"Examples of the kind, where it has been held that it is not sufficient to follow the words of the statute, are quite numerous, and they show that many of the exceptions are as extensively recognized and as firmly settled as any other rule of pleading in such cases." United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 586, 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 233, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting.

14. Result from intention of legislature.—United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693.

15. Or from rules of law.—United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693.

The exceptions to this rule are, where the offenses created by statute are analogous to certain common-law felonies or misdemeanors, where the precedents require certain technical language, or where special averments are necessary in the description of the particular offense, in order that the defendant may afterwards protect himself under the plea of autrefois, acquit or convict. United States v. Brig Neurea, 19 How. 92, 94, 15 L. Ed. 531.

16. Result from certainty and completeness rules.—Most of the exceptions result from another rule of criminal pleading, which, in framing indictments founded upon statutes, is paramount to all others, and is one of universal aplication—that every ingredient of the offense must be accurately and clearly expressed; or, in other words, that the indictment must contain an allegation of every fact

bb. Where Offense Is Not Described in Technical Terms.—It is not sufficient to charge an offense in the words of a statute, where the words have no settled technical meaning.[17]

cc. Where All Elements of Offense Are Not Expressed.—In an indictment upon a statute, it is not sufficient to set forth the offense in the words of the statute, unless those words of themselves fully, directly and expressly, without any uncertainty or ambiguity, set forth all the elements necessary to constitute the offense intended to be punished;[18] and the fact that the statute in question, read in the light of the common law, and of other statutes on the like matter, enables the court to infer the intent of the legislature, does not dispense with the necessity of alleging in the indictment all the facts necessary to bring the

which is legally essential to the punishment to be inflicted. United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 232, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting, citing United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638. See ante, "Completeness," VIII, C, 5, a; "Accuracy and Certainty," VIII, C, 5, b.

17. Where offense not described in technical terms.—United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 699, 27 L. Ed. 520; United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327, 334, 30 L. Ed. 664. See ante, "Where Offense Described in Technical Terms," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (b), aa.

The words "willfully misapplied" found in § 5209 Rev. Stat. are new in statutes creating offenses, and they are not used in describing any offense at common law. They have no settled technical meaning like the word "embezzle" as used in the statutes, or the words "steal, take and carry away," as used at common law. They do not, therefore, of themselves fully and clearly set forth every element of the offense charged. It would not be sufficient simply to aver that the defendant "willfully misapplied" the funds of the association. There must be averments to show how the application was made and that it was an unlawful one. United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 669, 27 L. Ed. 520; Batchelor v. United States, 156 U. S. 426, 429, 39 L. Ed. 478; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 446, 39 L. Ed. 214; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 38 L. Ed. 830. See the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 108.

"Abstract."—"Unlike the word 'misapply,' as used in the same section, the word 'abstract' (in the same section) is not ambiguous, because it does not appear from other parts of the statute that there are two or more kinds of abstracting, both unlawful, but only one described as a criminal offense. The word 'abstract,' as used in the statute, therefore, has but one meaning, being that which is attached to it in its ordinary and popular use. It is to be accepted with that meaning in framing an indictment under the section, which is not required, in order to be sufficient, to contain more than those allegations which are necessary, when added to the allegation of abstracting, to complete the description of the offense intended by the statute." United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327, 334, 30 L. Ed. 664. See ABSTRACT, vol. 1, p. 50.

18. Elements not expressed.—United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 612, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 610, 42 L. Ed. 1162; Moore v. United States, 160 U. S. 268, 270, 40 L. Ed. 422; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 38 L. Ed. 830; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 586, 24 L. Ed. 531. See ante, "Where All Elements of Offense Are Set Out," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (b), bb.

"Offenses created by statute as well as offenses at common law consist, with rare exceptions, of more than one ingredient; and the rule is universal, that every ingredient of which the offense is composed must be accurately and clearly expressed in the indictment or information, or the pleading will be held bad on demurrer." United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 583, 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 21 L. Ed. 638.

This exception obtains in cases where the statute is elliptical, or where by necessary implication other constituents are component parts of the offense. United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 583, 24 L. Ed. 531.

"The cases wherein it is held that an indictment in the exact language of the statute is not sufficient are those wherein the statute does not contain all the elements of the offense." Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 611, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

Where statute omits intent.—An indictment on § 5431 of the Revised Statutes, alleging, in the words of the statute, that the defendant feloniously, and with intent to defraud, did pass, utter, and publish a falsely made, forged, counterfeited, and altered obligation of the United States, but not further alleging that the defendant knew it to be false, forged, counterfeited, and altered, is insufficient, even after verdict. United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 204, 37 L. Ed. 419.

case within that intent.[19] If the statute upon which the indictment is founded only describes the general nature of the offense prohibited, the indictment, in repeating its language without averments disclosing the particulars of the alleged offense, states no matters upon which issue could be formed for submission to a jury.[20] Where the general terms used in the statute refer to some other statutory provisions for the essentials of the offense, an indictment in such terms is insufficient.[21] It is for the defendant to show that greater particularity is required by reason of the omission from the statute of some element of the offense.[22]

dd. Where Statute Is Not Clear and Certain.—To the general rule there is the qualification that the accused must be apprised by the indictment, with reasonable certainty, of the nature of the accusation against him.[23] Offenses created by statute, as well as offenses at common law, must be accurately and clearly described in an indictment.[24] If the offense cannot be so described without expanding the allegations beyond the mere words of the statute, then it is clear that the allegations of the accusation must be expanded to that extent.[25]

ee. Where Legislative Intent Requires Fuller Statement.—The fact that the statute in question, read in the light of the common law and of other statutes on the like matter, enables the court to infer the intent of the legislature, does not dispense with the necessity of alleging in the indictment all the facts necessary to bring the case within that intent.[26]

ff. Where Offense Described Disjunctively.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere in this title.[27]

(3) In Words Other than Those of Statute.—In charging a statutory offense the exact words of the statute need not necessarily be used. The pleader is at liberty to use any form of expression, provided he thereby fully and exactly describes the offense.[28]

19. United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 612, 26 L. Ed. 1135; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. Ed. 588; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 661, 27 L. Ed. 520; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 204, 37 L. Ed. 419.

20. Description in general terms.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516; Keck v. United States, 172 U. S. 434, 437, 43 L. Ed. 505.

"Undoubtedly the language of the statute may be used in the general description of an offense, but it must be accompanied with such a statement of the facts and circumstances as will inform the accused of the specific offense, coming under the general description, with which he is charged." United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 487, 31 L. Ed. 516.

21. Reference to other statute.—Keck v. United States, 172 U. S. 434, 437, 43 L. Ed. 505.

22. Defendant must show necessity for greater particularity.—Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 612, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

23. Where statute not clear and certain.—United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 362, 24 L. Ed. 819, quoted in United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 661, 27 L. Ed. 520, in Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725, and in United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 31 L. Ed. 516; United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142, 8 L. Ed. 636; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 610, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

24. United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638. See ante, "Necessity for," VIII, C, 5, b, (1).

25. It is universally true that no pleading in such a case can be sufficient which does not accurately and clearly allege all the ingredients of which the charge is composed, so as to bring the accused within the true intent and meaning of the statute defining the accusation. United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 585, 24 L. Ed. 531.

26. Where legislative intent requires fuller statement.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 38 L. Ed. 830; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 612, 26 L. Ed. 1135; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 661, 27 L. Ed. 520; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 586, 24 L. Ed. 531.

27. Where offense described distinctively.—See ante, "Alternative Allegations," VIII, C, 5, h.

28. Words other than those of statute.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 190, 39 L. Ed. 390; United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. Ed. 979; Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 265, 38 L. Ed. 153; Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

Thus, where other words are used which make the indictment sufficiently clear to be well understood, it is sufficient though it charge the defendant with smuggling "prepared opium," though it be founded upon a statute which reads "opium prepared for smoking." Dunbar v. United

(4) Where Statute Punishes Common-Law Offense.—Statutes sometimes merely prescribe a punishment of a common-law crime without defining it. In such cases it is well held that the common-law requirements in charging it must be met.[29]

(5) Where Statute Contains Exceptions or Provisos—(a) Necessity for Negation.—If the exception is so incorporated with the substance of the clause defining the offense as to constitute a material part of the description of the acts, omissions, or other ingredients which constitute the offense, and constitutes a material part of the definition of the offense, it cannot be omitted in the pleading.[30] But if the language of the section defining the offense is so entirely separable from the exception that the ingredients constituting the of-

States, 156 U. S. 185, 190, 39 L. Ed. 390. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

This decision was rendered under § 1025 of the Revised Statutes, and distinguished from United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135. Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390.

Where a statute reads, "to effect the object of the conspiracy," and the indictment charges the act to have done "according to and in pursuance of said conspiracy, it is sufficient." Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 546, 38 L. Ed. 545.

29. Where statute prescribes punishment of common-law offense.—Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 270, 42 L. Ed. 461.

30. Where statute contains exceptions and provisos.—United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 176, 21 L. Ed. 638; 200 Chests of Tea, 9 Wheat. 430, 436, 6 L. Ed. 128.

Results from completeness and certainty rules.—"Offenses created by statute, as well as offenses at common law, must be accurately and clearly described in an indictment, and if they cannot be, in any case, without an allegation that the accused is not within an exception contained in the statute defining the offense, it is clear that no indictment founded upon the statute can be a good one which does not contain such an allegation, as it is universally true that no indictment is sufficient if it does not accurately and clearly allege all the ingredients of which the offense is composed." United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638.

Exception in enacting clause.—"Where a statute defining an offense contains an exception, in the enacting clause of the statute, which is so incorporated with the language defining the offense that the ingredients of the offense cannot be accurately and clearly described if the exception is omitted, the rules of good pleading require that an indictment founded upon the statute must allege enough to show that the accused is not within the exception." United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 173, 21 L. Ed. 638.

In subsequent clause.—"Text-writers and courts of justice have sometimes said, that if the exception is in the enacting clause, the party pleading must show that the accused is not within the exception, but where the exception is in a subsequent section or statute, that the matter contained in the exception is matter of defense and must be shown by the accused. Undoubtedly that rule will frequently hold good, and in many cases prove to be a safe guide in pleading, but it is clear that it is not a universal criterion, as the words of the statute defining the offense may be so entirely separable from the exception that all the ingredients constituting the offense may be accurately and clearly alleged without any reference to the exception." United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638.

"Cases have also arisen, and others may readily be supposed, where the exception, though in a subsequent clause or section, or even in a subsequent statute, is nevertheless clothed in such language, and is so incorporated as an amendment with the words antecedently employed to define the offense that it would be impossible to frame the actual statutory charge in the form of an indictment with accuracy, and the required certainty, without an allegation showing that the accused was not within the exception contained in the subsequent clause, section, or statute. Obviously such an exception must be pleaded, as otherwise the indictment would not present the actual statutory accusation, and would also be defective for the want of clearness and certainty." United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. Ed. 638.

Where the exception itself is incorporated in the general clause, as is supposed in the alternative rule there laid down, then it is correct to say, that unless the exception in the general clause is negatived in pleading the clause, no offense will appear in the indictment when compared with the statute or contract, but when the exception or proviso is in a subsequent substantive clause, the case contemplated in the enacting or general clause may be fully stated without negativing the exception or proviso, as a prima facie case is stated, and it is for the party for whom matter of excuse is furnished by the statute or contract to bring it forward in his defense. United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 175, 21 L. Ed. 638.

An indictment under Revised Statutes, § 5201 which declares that no banking asfense may be accurately and clearly defined without any reference to the exception, the pleader may safely omit any such reference.[31] It has been held to be a general rule, that while the pleader is not bound to negative a proviso, he is bound to aver that the defendant is not within any of the exceptions contained in the enacting clause of the statute.[32]

(b) Sufficiency of Negation.—An indictment under Rev. Stat., § 2146, which confers jurisdiction upon United States courts, but contains the exception that such jurisdiction does not "extend to crimes committed by one Indian against the person or property of another Indian," etc., and which also provides that no indictment can be held sufficient which does not expressly negative this exception, is sufficient where the defendant and deceased are described as "white persons, and not Indians, nor citizens of the Indian Territory."[33]

(6) Effect of Averring as Contrary to Statute.—The allegation that the act charged was committed in violation of law, or of the provisions of a particular statute, forms no part of the description of the offense.[34]

(7) Effect of Averment by Legal Effect of Statute.—The pleader should regard the substance and legal effect of the enactment.[35]

(8) Certainty of Averment.—In certain classes of statutes, the rule of very strict certainty has sometimes been applied, where the common law furnished a close and appropriate analogy.[36]

(9) Averment of Matters of Defense.—The indictment need not, by way of negative, introduce matter of defense when it is drawn on a statute any sociation shall be a purchaser of its own shares, and contains the exception, "unless such purchaser shall be necessary to prevent the loss of a debt previously contracted in good faith," should negative the offense coming within the exception. United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 671, 27 L. Ed. 520.

31. When negation not necessary.—United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 173, 21 L. Ed. 638.

32. Distinction between exceptions and provisos.—Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 611, 42 L. Ed. 1162; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 21 L. Ed. 638; Maxwell Land Grant Co. v. Dawson, 151 U. S. 586, 604, 38 L. Ed. 279.

"Doubtless there is a technical distinction between an exception and a proviso, as an exception ought to be of that which would otherwise be included in the category from which it is excepted, and the office of a proviso is either to except something from the enacting clause or to qualify or restrain its generality, or to exclude some ground of misinterpretation of it, as extending to cases not intended to be brought within its operation, but there are a great many examples where the distinction is disregarded and where the words are used as if they were of the same signification." United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 177, 21 L. Ed. 638.

"Where an exception is incorporated in the body of the clause, he who pleads the clause ought also to plead the exception, but when there is a clause for the benefit of the pleader, and afterwards follows a proviso which is against him, he shall plead the clause and leave it to the adversary to show the proviso." United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 177, 21 L. Ed. 638.

33. Sufficiency of negation.—Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 548, 39 L. Ed. 255; Wheeler v. United States, 159 U. S. 523, 524, 40 L. Ed. 244.

"At least, as no challenge was made of the indictment prior to the trial, and the question as only raised by motion in arrest, and as, further, that which was intended is obvious, it is fair to rule that any merely technical defect in this language was cured by the verdict." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 548, 39 L. Ed 255. See the title INDIANS, ante, p. 906.

34. Effect of averring as contrary to statute.—The reference to the statute may direct the attention of the court, and of the accused, to the particular statute by which the prosecution is to be sustained, but forms no part of the description of the offense. The importance of this principle to a fair administration of justice to that certainty introduced and demanded by the free genius of our institutions in all prosecutions for offenses against the laws, is too apparent to require elucidation, and the principle itself is too familiar not to suggest itself to every gentleman of the profession. The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 393, 3 L. Ed. 380. See, also, Keck v. United States, 172 U. S. 434, 437, 43 L. Ed. 505.

35. Averment of legal effect.—United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 44, 12 L. Ed. 979.

36. Certainty of averments.—United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693. See ante, "Accuracy and Certainty," VIII, C, 5, b; "Where Statute Is more than when it is at common law.[37]

8. In Felony and Misdemeanor Cases.—There is not that technical nicety required as to form, which seems to have been adopted and sanctioned by long practice, in cases of felony, and with respect to some crimes, where particular words must be used, and no other words, however synonymous they may seem, can be substituted, in cases of misdemeanors.[38] At the common law, in certain descriptions of offenses, and especially of capital offenses, great nicety and particularity are often necessary.[39]

D. Designation of Persons—1. Of Accused—a. By Name.—If known to the grand jurors, the name of the defendant must be averred.[40] A name need not be correctly spelled in an indictment, if substantially the same sound is preserved.[41]

b. As Unknown.—Where the name of the accused or of any other person involved in the description of the offense is unknown, it is sufficient to describe such person as unknown.[42] An allegation that such person is unknown to the grand jurors, is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, presumed to be true.[43]

c. Descriptions and Additions.—Under a statute which reads "agent, attorney, or other person engaged in preparing," etc., it is sufficient to describe the defendant as a "lawyer."[44] An indictment for an offense which can be committed only by a male person is not insufficient for not alleging defendant is a male person, after plea in bar.[45] Under an old Pennsylvania statute of additions, in

Not Clear and Certain," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (c), dd.

37. Matters of defense.—Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 590, 38 L. Ed. 830. See, also, United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 173, 21 L. Ed. 638.

38. In felony and misdemeanor cases.—United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142, 8 L. Ed. 636. See ante, "Misdemeanor Cases," VIII, C, 7, o, (2), (b), bb, (cc).

"Even in cases of misdemeanors, the indictment must be free from all ambiguity, and leave no doubt in the minds of the accused and the court of the exact offense intended to be charged, not only that the former may know what he is called upon to meet, but that, upon a plea of former acquittal or conviction, the record may show with accuracy the exact offense to which the plea relates." Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 587, 38 L. Ed. 830; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 31 L. Ed. 516; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419.

39. United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 474, 6 L. Ed. 693. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

40. Designation of defendant—By name.—An indictment under § 3266 of the Revised Statutes, charging the defendant with causing or procuring some other person to use a still, boiler, or other vessel, for the purpose of distilling, within the intent and meaning of the internal revenue laws of the United States, is bad, unless it states the name of such person or avers that the same is unknown. United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819.

41. Incorrect spelling.—In the indictment the defendant was described as W. J. Faust. He filed a plea of misnomer, in which he averred that he had been baptized in the name of W. J. Foust, and that he had always been known and called by that name, and prayed that the indictment might be quashed. This plea was overruled, as was likewise a motion to quash the indictment on the ground that defendant's name was W. J. Foust, and not W. J. Faust, as it appeared in the indictment. Held, not to be error. Faust v. United States, 163 U. S. 452, 454, 41 L. Ed. 224.

42. As unknown.—Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 451, 39 L. Ed. 481.

This has always been the correct procedure at common law. Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 270, 42 L. Ed. 461; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819.

In territory of Utah.—Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

43. Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 434, 451, 39 L. Ed. 481.

44. Descriptions and additions.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 166, 39 L. Ed. 657.

45. "The defendant, having pleaded to the indictment and not demurred, must be held to have understood distinctly that the charge was against a male person, as guilty of the offense complained of, the offense being one which only a male person could commit; and the omission from the indictment of the allegation that he was a male person could not have prejudiced him, or tended to his prejudice, in respect to a substantial right." Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 77, 29 L. Ed. 561.

an indictment for outlawry, the addition must extend to the town or hamlet, the name, degree or mystery. But a description of either the name, degree or mystery is alone sufficient.[46]

d. Where Accused Resides in Indian Country.—An indictment for an offense committed within the territory of the Indian tribes which describes the defendant and the deceased as "white persons, and not Indians, nor citizens of the Indian Territory," is sufficient to show that such persons are nonresidents.[47]

e. Where Accused Indicted on Joint Indictment.—An indictment against several persons, charging them with the commission of an offense jointly, need not show which one or more of the defendants actually committed the offense, where the offense was one which in its nature might be committed by any one or more of the defendants.[48]

f. Repetition of Description.—In an indictment containing more than one count, a defendant, in all counts after the first, need not be specifically designated by words therein, but reference may be had back to the first count.[49]

2. Of Other Persons.—A description of persons other than the accused is necessary where its omission would work him an injustice or deprive him of a substantial right.[50] If the victim in a murder case is unknown, the indictment should describe him so that he can be identified.[51]

E. Designation of Time.—By the common law, the time of the commission of an offense is required to be alleged in the indictment.[52] And good pleading, undoubtedly, requires an allegation that the offense was committed on a particular day, month and year, but it does not necessarily follow that the omission to state a particular day is necessarily fatal.[53] The time of the of-

46. Respublica v. Steele, 2 Dall. 92, 93, 1 L. Ed. 303.

47. "The term 'Indian' in § 2146 (Rev. Stat.) is one descriptive of race, and therefore the defendant, described as a white man and not an Indian, is shown to be outside the first two clauses of § 2146." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 548, 39 L. Ed. 255. See the title INDIANS, ante, p. 906.

48. On joint indictment.—St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 145, 38 L. Ed. 936. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

49. Repetition of description.—In all the subsequent counts the defendants may be designated as, "the said A B." Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725.

50. Of other persons.—Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 47, 64, 43 L. Ed. 890.

Owner of stolen goods—Larceny.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 486, 31 L. Ed. 516. See the title LARCENY.

Same—Receiving stolen goods.—Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 47, 64, 43 L. Ed. 890; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 452, 39 L. Ed. 481; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 35, 40 L. Ed. 606. See the title RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.

Person to whom intoxicating liquors is sold.—See the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Persons defrauded. — Respublica v. Sweers, 1 Dall. 41, 1 L. Ed. 29.

Persons to whom mail addressed under postal laws.—Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 314, 40 L. Ed. 709; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 191, 39 L. Ed. 390. See the title POSTAL LAWS.

Woman in bigamy cases.—Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 26 L. Ed. 481. See the title BIGAMY AND POLYGAMY, vol. 2, p. 227.

Accomplices and accessories.—See the title ACCOMPLICES AND ACCESSORIES, vol. 1, p. 65.

51. Victim in homicide case.—Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 352, 25 L. Ed. 676.

52. Designation by time.—Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 133, 35 L. Ed. 377; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 664, 41 L. Ed. 300.

53. "Neither is it necessary to prove that the offense was committed upon the day alleged, unless a particular day be made material by the statute creating the offense. Ordinarily, proof of any day before the finding of the indictment, and within the statute of limitations, will be sufficient." Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 612, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

"In the case under consideration the indictment was found on the 28th day of April, 1896, and the allegation is that the crime was committed 'on the —— day of April, 1896,' which must necessarily have been a day preceding the finding of the indictment. Under such circumstances, the defendant could not possibly have been misled by the allegation, particularly in view of the fact that the carrying on of a business is in the nature of a continuing offense; and while it is true that a business can be carried on only for a single day, the ordinary inference would be that it was carried on for a longer period. It would seem illogical to hold that, if the offense had been charged to have been committed upon a particular

fense should be alleged as previous to the finding of the indictment and during the time within which such offense may be prosecuted.[54] Where the act must be committed at a particular time in order to constitute a criminal offense, time is material and must be accurately averred.[55] An indictment, which alleges that the defendant inflicted a mortal wound upon the victim and that the latter did then instantly die, sufficiently alleges the time of death.[56] Time may be stated under a videlicet in an indictment.[57]

F. Designation of Place—1. NECESSITY FOR AVERMENT.—By the common law, it is necessary to allege the place of the commission of a crime.[58]

2. SUFFICIENCY OF AVERMENT—a. In General.—An indictment which alleges that the defendant inflicted a mortal wound upon the deceased of which mortal wound the deceased "did languish and languishing did then and there instantly die," distinctly and unequivocally alleges that the deceased died at the place at which the mortal wound was inflicted.[59]

b. Within Jurisdiction of Court.—An averment of the place of the commission of a crime as within the jurisdiction of the court is sufficient.[60]

c. Within Particular County or Town—(1) In General.—Properly speaking, the indictment should state not only the county, but the township, city or other municipality within which the crime is alleged to have been committed.[61] But the authorities in this particular are much less rigid than formerly.[62]

(2) English Practice.—Under the early English law, where the jurymen were day in April, evidence could have been given of any day within the statute of limitations, and yet to hold that the defendant could be misled by an averment that the offense was committed on the —— day of the month in which the indictment was found." Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 612, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

54. Previous to finding of indictment.—Hardy v. United States, 186 U. S. 224, 46 L. Ed. 1137; Matthews v. United States, 161 U. S. 500, 40 L. Ed. 786.

It was necessary at common law to allege in homicide cases that the death transpired within a year and a day. Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 133, 35 L. Ed. 377. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

55. Where time material.—An averment that a still, boiler, or other vessel, for the purpose of distilling were used "in a certain building and on certain premises where vinegar was manufactured and produced" is not sufficient, as it does not state that vinegar was manufactured or produced there at the time the still and other vessels were used for the purpose of distilling. United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819.

56. Sufficiency of allegation.—United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 663, 41 L. Ed. 300. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

57. Under videlicet.—Matthews v. United States, 161 U. S. 500, 502, 40 L. Ed. 786.

58. Designation of place.—Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 133, 35 L. Ed. 377; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 664, 41 L. Ed. 300.

In homicide cases it is essentially necessary to allege the place of death. Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 664, 41 L. Ed. 300.

59. Sufficiency of averment.—An indictment alleging that the defendants, in Pickens county in the Indian Territory, on June 26, 1889, by shooting with a loaded gun, inflicted upon the body of Box "a mortal wound, of which mortal wound the said William T. Box did languish, and languishing did then and there instantly die," distinctly and unequivocally alleges that Box died of the mortal wound alleged to have been inflicted by the defendants, and that he died at the time and place at which the mortal wound was inflicted. United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 673, 41 L. Ed. 300.

But where the indictment charges an assault by the defendant upon one William T. Box with a loaded gun, and the infliction of mortal wounds by the discharge of its contents, "of which mortal wounds the said William T. Box did languish, and languishing died," this fails to aver either the time or place of the death. Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 136, 35 L. Ed. 377.

60. Within jurisdiction of court.—Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 614, 42 L. Ed. 1162; Respublica v. Steele, 2 Dall. 92, 93, 1 L. Ed. 303.

In an indictment under the slave trade act of the 20th of April, 1818, ch. 373, against the owner of the ship, it is necessary, that the indictment should aver, that the vessel was built, fitted out, etc., or caused to sail, or be sent away, within the jurisdiction of the United States. United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 6 L. Ed. 693.

61. Within particular county, etc.—Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 613, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

62. Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 613, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

also witnesses and were summoned from the vicinage, it was necessary that the locality of the crime should be stated with great particularity in order that the sheriff might be informed from what vicinage he should summon the jury.[63] But this requirement was long since abolished in England by statute, and it is not now necessary there to state any venue in the body of any indictment, but the county, city or other jurisdiction named in the margin thereof shall be taken to be the venue for all the facts stated in the body of such indictment.[64]

(3) American Practice.—While in this country it is usual to state the town as well as the county, it has not been generally deemed necessary to do so, and most of the authorities assume that an allegation is sufficient after verdict which shows that the act was done within the jurisdiction of the court.[65] Indeed, an indictment charging the offense to have been committed in one town is supported by proof that it was committed in a different town within the same county, and within the jurisdiction of the court.[66]

3. Where Offense Committed within State by Person Without.—If a person while without a state does any act which results in the accomplishment of a crime within it, the indictment may aver place as within such state.[67]

4. Where Offense Committed on High Seas.—The doctrine of venue in indictments at the common law is inapplicable to cases of this sort.[68] An indictment for an offense committed upon the high seas need not allege on what part of the high seas it was committed; but is sufficient, if it alleges that the offense was committed on board of an American vessel, within the jurisdiction of the court and within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, and not within the jurisdiction of any particular state.[69]

G. Determination of Sufficiency—1. Question of Law.—Whether the indictment sets forth, in comprehensive terms, the offense which the statute describes and forbids, and for which it prescribes a punishment, is in every case a question of law, which must necessarily be decided by the court in which the case originates.[70]

2. By What Law Determined.—The sufficiency of an indictment is to be determined by the law in force at the time of its return.[71]

3. Jurisdiction—a. In General.—The determination of the sufficiency of an indictment is within the jurisdiction of the court in which the prosecution originates.[72] Whether an indictment in a state court sufficiently charges the offense is for that court to determine, and its decision in that respect presents

63. English practice—Ancient.—Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 613, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

64. Modern.—Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 613, 42 L. Ed. 1162. See 1 Bish. Crim. Proc., § 368.

65. American practice.—The averment of place was simply "in the county of Appanoose, in the southern district of Iowa, and within the jurisdiction of this court." The court said: "We do not wish to be understood as approving the practice that was pursued in this case, or even as holding that this indictment might not have been open to special demurrer for insufficiency as to the allegations of time and place, but upon motion in arrest of judgment we think it is sufficient." Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 613, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

66. Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 614, 42 L. Ed. 1162.

67. Where offense committed within state of person without.—Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 546, 38 L. Ed. 545. See the title CONSPIRACY, vol. 3, p. 1103.

68. Offenses committed on high seas.—"The reason of the common law for laying the venue so particularly in offenses on land does not in any manner apply to offenses on the high seas; for no jury ever did or could come from visne or visinage on the high seas to try the cause; and no summons could issue for such a purpose." United States v. Gibert, 2 Sumner 19, 86; St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 145, 38 L. Ed. 936.

69. Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 490, 42 L. Ed. 1116; St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 144, 38 L. Ed. 936. See the title PIRACY.

70. Determination of sufficiency.—Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 654, 28 L. Ed. 274. See post, "Objections to Accusation," XV.

71. By what law determined.—Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 216, 38 L. Ed. 415.

72. Jurisdiction.—Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 654, 28 L. Ed. 274.

no federal question.[73]

b. In Extradition Cases.—In extradition cases, the determination of the sufficiency of the indictment lies within the jurisdiction of the demanding state.[74]

4. On What Pleading Determined.—The question of the sufficiency of an indictment may, in the discretion of the court, be decided during the trial before the jury; but, generally speaking, it ought regularly to be determined only upon a motion to quash the indictment,[75] motion in arrest of judgment,[76] demurrer,[77] or plea in abatement.[78] Nor should it be determined when raised for the first time on a writ of error,[79] or habeas corpus.[80]

IX. Duplicity.

A. What Constitutes—1. Charge of Two or More Distinct Felonies.—It has been said that a count which charges separate and distinct felonies is defective within the rule, that two such offenses cannot be charged in the same count.[81]

2. Charge of Different Modes of Commission of Offense.—Where a statute, directed against certain defined modes of accomplishing a general object, declares that the doing of either one of certain specified things, each having reference to that object, shall be a punishable offense, the doing of the prohibited thing in each and all of the prohibited modes may be charged in one count so that there may be a verdict of guilty upon proof that the accused had done any one of the things constituting a substantive crime under the statute.[82] A count in an indictment which charges the transaction as continuous and the employment co-operatively of two lethal means by the accused to accomplish a crime, is not invalid for duplicity or repugnancy. It is not necessary to make the charge alternatively in two separate counts.[83]

B. Effect of Duplicity—1. In General.—An indictment may be invalid on the ground of duplicity.[84] Where a statute defines an offense disjunctively, the

73. Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 678, 40 L. Ed. 301; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. Ed. 816; Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 135, 48 L. Ed. 121; Barrington v. Missouri, 205 U. S. 483, 487, 51 L. Ed. 890; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 656, 39 L. Ed. 845.

The constitution of Texas secures to the accused the right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, and it is within the province of the state court to determine that this demand was satisfied by the indictment in question. Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. Ed. 816. See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 499.

74. In extradition cases.—Pearce v. Texas, 155 U. S. 311, 39 L. Ed. 164. See the title EXTRADITION, ante, p. 219; HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610.

75. On what pleadings determined.—United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 6 L. Ed. 693. See post, "Motion to Quash," XV, C, 1; "Time of Making Objections," XV, D.

76. Motion in arrest.—See post, "Motion in Arrest of Judgment," XV, C, 4.

77. Demurrer.—See post, "Demurrer," XV, C, 2.

78. Plea in abatement.—See post, "Plea in Abatement," XV, C, 3.

79. On writ of error.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, pp. 91, 118, 263.

On certificate of division of opinion.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 42.

80. On habeas corpus.—See the title HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610.

81. Duplicity—Two or more felonies.—Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 634, 40 L. Ed. 1097.

82. Charge of different modes of commission of crime.—In this case the objection was sought to be raised on motion in arrest of judgment. Some stress was laid upon this fact. Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 635, 40 L. Ed. 1097.

"And this is a view altogether favorable to an accused, who pleads not guilty to the charge contained in a single count; for a judgment on a general verdict of guilty upon that count will be a bar to any further prosecution in respect of any of the matters embraced by it." Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 636, 40 L. Ed. 1097.

83. The defendant may be charged with the commission of homicide by shooting and drowning, as the means employed are not inconsistent and of the same species. Andersen v. United States, 170 U. S. 481, 492, 42 L. Ed. 1116, following St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 144, 38 L. Ed. 936. See, also, United States v. Holmes, 5 Wheat. 412, 5 L. Ed. 122. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

84. Effect of duplicity.—Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 315, 38 L. Ed. 725.

indictment charges the offense conjunctively and the defendant does not seek to compel an election or otherwise raise the question of duplicity, and the trial judge instructs the jury that the evidence would not justify a conviction of more than one of the statutory offenses, the appellate court will not disturb the verdict on the ground that more than one offense was included in the same count of the indictment.[85]

2. When Mere Surplusage.—Where the duplicitous description is matter of surplusage, it may be rejected and the count be good.[86]

X. Joinder of Offenses.

A. In Same Count.—This subject is treated elsewhere in this title.[87]

B. In Separate Counts—1. In General.—While conceding that regularity or usually an indictment should not include more than one felony, the authorities concur in holding that a joinder in one indictment, in separate counts, of different felonies, at least of the same class or grade, provable by the same evidence, and subject to the same punishment, is not necessarily fatal to the indictment upon demurrer, or upon motion to quash, or on motion in arrest of judgment, and does not, in every case, by reason alone of such joinder, make it the duty of the court, upon motion of the accused, to compel the prosecutor to elect, before the trial has commenced.[88] And after the trial has progressed the court still exercises a discretion whether or not to proceed upon the indictment.[89]

2. Object and Purpose.—It is familiar law that separate counts are united in one indictment, either because entirely separate and distinct offenses are intended to be charged, or because the pleader, having in mind but a single offense, varies the statement in the several counts as to the manner or means of its commission in order to avoid at the trial an acquittal by reason of any foreseen lack of harmony between the allegations and the proofs.[90]

3. Statutory Provision.—Section 1024 of the Revised Statutes is as follows: "When there are several charges against any person for the same act or transaction, or for two or more acts or transactions connected together, or for two or more acts or transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses, which may be properly joined, instead of having several indictments, the whole may be joined in one indictment in separate counts; and if two or more indictments are found in such cases, the court may order them to be consolidated."[91] This statute does not determine the propriety of joinder or consolidation in every particular case, but permits the trial court to exercise the discretion.[92]

4. In Felony Cases.—Ordinarily, an indictment should not include more than one felony,[93] and at common law, in such cases, no more than one distinct offense or criminal transaction at one time can be regularly charged upon the

85. Offense charged conjunctively.—Wiborg v. United States, 163 U. S. 632, 647, 41 L. Ed. 289; Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. Ed. 1097.

86. When mere surplusage.—In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 448, 34 L. Ed. 219. See the title RAPE.

87. Joinder—In same count.—See ante, "Duplicity," IX.

88. In separate counts.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 404, 38 L. Ed. 208.

The general rule is that counts for several felonies of the same general nature, requiring the same mode of trial and punishment, may be joined in the same indictment, subject to the power of the court to quash the indictment or to compel an election. McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 81, 41 L. Ed. 355.

89. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 404, 38 L. Ed. 208.

90. Purpose of joinder.—Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 542, 38 L. Ed. 545, quoting 1 Bishop on Criminal Procedure, § 422.

91. Statutory provision.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 77, 41 L. Ed. 355; Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 400, 38 L. Ed. 208; Williams v. United States, 168 U. S. 382, 390, 42 L. Ed. 509; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 296, 36 L. Ed. 429.

92. Statute does not inhibit exercise of discretion.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 400, 38 L. Ed. 208.

93. Joinder of felonies.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208.

prisoner in one indictment, lest it should confound or prejudice the prisoner in his defense.[94]

5. In Misdemeanor Cases.—The practice of not permitting a joinder of two or more crimes or transactions in the same indictment has not been extended to misdemeanors.[95]

6. Offenses of Same Nature.—Charges against a person for two or more acts or transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses may be joined in the same indictment.[96] Under the Revised Statutes, § 5511, making it a crime to interfere at elections for members of congress, a count in an indictment, which charges the accused with having unlawfully and with force and arms seized, carried away, and secreted the ballot box containing the ballots cast at the election named, may be joined with one charging him with having aided and assisted in the forcible and unlawful seizure, carrying away and secreting of such ballot box, and with one time having counselled, advised and procured the seizure, carrying away and secreting of the ballots at said election.[97] Substantive offenses, separate and distinct, complete in themselves and independent of each other, committed at different times and not provable by the same evidence, are not of the same class of crimes or offenses.[98]

7. Offenses Arising from Same Transaction.—Two or more offenses

94. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 401, 38 L. Ed. 208.

"In (all) cases of felony, the multiplication of distinct charges has been considered so objectionable as tending to confound the accused in his defense, or to prejudice him as to his challenges, in the matter of being held out to be habitually criminal, in the distraction of the attention of the jury, or otherwise, that it is the settled rule in England and in many of our states, to confine the indictment to one distinct offense or restrict the evidence to one transaction." McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 80, 41 L. Ed. 355.

95. Joinder of misdemeanors.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 402, 38 L. Ed. 208.

96. Offenses of same nature.—In re Henry, 123 U. S. 372, 374, 31 L. Ed. 174; Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 400, 38 L. Ed. 208; Ingraham v. United States, 155 U. S. 434, 436, 39 L. Ed. 213; Williams v. United States, 168 U. S. 382, 390, 42 L. Ed. 509, citing Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 400, 38 L. Ed. 208, and distinguishing McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 41 L. Ed. 355. See Rev. Stat. § 1024.

Under the third clause of § 1024, Rev. Stat., relating to several charges "for two or more acts or transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses," it is only when they "may be properly joined" that the joinder is permitted, the statute thus leaving it for the court to determine whether in any given case a joinder of two or more offenses in one indictment against the same person "is consistent with the settled principles of criminal law." McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 80, 41 L. Ed. 355.

In the first count of an indictment, the defendant was charged with the murder of V. by "cutting," etc.; in the second with the murder of B. with "beating," etc.; in the third with the murder of B. on the same day and by the same means as with the murder of V.; the fourth count differed from the third only as the second from the first. The defendant moved to quash the indictment on the ground that it charged two distinct felonies. The two murders in question are alleged to have been committed by the defendant on the same day, and in the county and district, but it does not appear that they were the result of one transaction or that they were connected together. But the offenses are in the same class or grade of crimes and subject to the same punishment. The court held that where two murders are committed at the same place, on the same occasion, and under such circumstances, that the proof in respect of one necessarily threw light upon the other, there is such a close connection between the two killings in respect to time, place, occasion, and means of proof, that it is clear that the accused will not be confounded in his defense, nor prejudiced by the refusal to compel the prosecutor to elect, and that the accused may be tried on the indictment. And that the trial court was justified in refusing, at the beginning of the trial, and before the disclosure of the facts to compel an election. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 404, 38 L. Ed. 208.

In its general effect, § 5480 of Revised Statutes punishing offenses against postal laws is not materially different from that of § 1024 of the Revised Statutes, which allows the joinder in one indictment of charges against a person "for two or more acts or transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses," and the consolidation of two or more indictments found in such cases. In re Henry, 123 U. S. 372, 374, 31 L. Ed. 174.

97. Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 410, 39 L. Ed. 1033.

98. Distinct substantive offenses.—Mc-arising out of the same transaction may be charged in one indictment.[99] But offenses committed at different times and unconnected with each other cannot be joined in the same indictment.[1]

8. Offenses Sustainable by Same Evidence.—Where two or more offenses were committed on the same occasion, and under such circumstances that the proof in respect of one necessarily throws light upon the other, the two offenses may be set out in the same indictment.[2]

9. Offenses Subject to Same Punishment.—There may be a joinder in one indictment, in separate counts, of different felonies, of the same class or grade, and subject to the same punishment.[3]

10. Offenses against Same Defendant.—While the general rule is that counts for several felonies of the same general nature, requiring the same mode of trial and punishment, may be joined in the same indictment, such joinder cannot be sustained where the parties are not the same. Counts against a number of defendants cannot be coupled with another count against only a part of them, and the offenses charged to have been committed by all at one time cannot be joined with another and distinct offense committed by part of them at a different time.[4] It cannot be said in such case that all the defendants may not have been embarrassed and prejudiced in their defense, or that the attention of the jury may not have been distracted to their injury in passing upon distinct and independent transactions.[5]

11. Acts Constituting One Offense.—A defendant may in the same indictment be charged with violation of a statute in receiving a certain compensation prohibited therein, and for agreeing to receive the same. The two acts constitute but one offense.[6]

Elroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 79, 41 L. Ed. 355.

99. Arising from same transaction.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 79, 41 L. Ed. 355; Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 420, 38 L. Ed. 208; Bucklin v. United States, No. 2, 159 U. S. 682, 40 L. Ed. 305.

"As the charges against the defendants, respectively, grew out of the same transaction, both the court and the defendants may have deemed it convenient to have all the cases tried at the same time and by the same jury." Bucklin v. United States, No. 2, 159 U. S. 682, 685, 40 L. Ed. 305.

1. McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 79, 41 L. Ed. 355; In re Henry, 123 U. S. 372, 375, 31 L. Ed. 174.

2. Sustainable by same evidence.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 78, 41 L. Ed. 355; Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208; Williams v. United States, 168 U. S. 382, 390, 42 L. Ed. 509.

3. Subject to same punishment.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208; McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 78, 41 L. Ed. 355; In re Henry, 123 U. S. 372, 375, 31 L. Ed. 174.

4. Several defendants.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 79, 41 L. Ed. 355, distinguishing Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208. See, also, Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 296, 36 L. Ed. 429; Ingraham v. United States, 155 U. S. 434, 436, 39 L. Ed. 213.

"It is clear that the statute does not authorize the consolidation of indictments in such a way that some of the defendants may be tried at the same time with other defendants charged with a crime different from that for which all are tried." McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 80, 41 L. Ed. 355.

A, B, C, D, E, and F were indicted for assault with intent to kill G on April 16, in one indictment; also with intent to kill H on the same day in a second indictment; also for arson of dwelling house of I on May 1st. Three of the defendants, A, B, and C, were also indicted for arson of the dwelling house of J on April 16. F was never tried. The court ordered the four indictments consolidated for trial, to which each of the other five defendants duly excepted, the trial was then had and resulted in separate verdicts finding the defendants guilty. The court held in consequence of this order the defendants D and C were tried on indictments against him and three other defendants, consolidated with indictments against the other defendants for an offense with which D and C were not charged. Therefore, the court held that the consolidation was not authorized under § 1024, Rev. Stat. McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 41 L. Ed. 355. See Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 296, 36 L. Ed. 429.

5. McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 81, 41 L. Ed. 355. See the title SEPARATE TRIALS.

6. Acts constituting one offense.—Under the Revised Statutes, § 1782, making

12. Same Offense Charged in Different Ways.—Where two counts of an indictment differ from each other only in the manner of stating how the offense was committed, the question whether the prosecution shall be compelled to elect is purely a matter within the discretion of the court.[7]

13. Where Defendant Prejudiced.—Where the defendant will be prejudiced thereby, two or more charges will not be joined in the same indictment.[8]

14. Where Jury Confused.—Joinder will not be permitted in cases where it would result in a confusion of the jury in passing upon a multiplicity of distinct and independent transactions.[9]

15. Discretion of Court.—At common law,[10] and under the federal statute,[11] the trial court possesses a discretion, to determine whether in a given case a joinder of two or more offenses in one indictment against the same person is consistent with the settled principles of criminal law,[12] and to quash the indictment, or to compel an election between two or more transactions charged in one indictment, at the beginning of the trial and before introduction of evidence, and after beginning of the trial and during progress thereof.[13]

XI. Consolidation of Indictments.

It is provided by statute that, when two or more offenses joined in different counts in the same indictment are charged in two or more indictments, the court may in its discretion order such indictments consolidated.[14] An order of a court it unlawful for a United States senator to receive or to agree to receive any compensation for services rendered in relation to any proceeding or matter in which the United States is interested before any department of the government, a defendant may be charged in one count with agreeing to receive such compensation and in another count for receiving it. Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 377, 50 L. Ed. 1057.

7. Different charges of some offense.—Pierce v. United States, 160 U. S. 355, 356, 40 L. Ed. 454; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 213, 38 L. Ed. 415.

8. Where defendant prejudiced.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 79, 41 L. Ed. 355; Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208; Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 411, 39 L. Ed. 1033; Bucklin v. United States, 159 U. S. 682, 40 L. Ed. 305; Williams v. United States, 168 U. S. 382, 391, 42 L. Ed. 509.

It is a fundamental principle of criminal law that the court must not permit the defendant to be embarrassed in his defense by a multiplicity of charges embraced in one indictment. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208.

9. Confusion of jury.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 81, 41 L. Ed. 355.

10. Discretion of court.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208.

11. The discretion possessed by the judge under the common law has not been taken away by § 1024 of the Revised Statutes. On the contrary, that section is consistent with the settled rule that the court, in its discretion, may compel an election when it appears from the indictment, or from the evidence, that the prisoner may be embarrassed in his defense, if that course be not pursued. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208.

If the common-law principles permit the joinder of two or more felonies in the same indictment, in separate counts, then the joinder in question here was proper. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 400, 38 L. Ed. 208.

12. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 400, 402, 38 L. Ed. 208; Lewis v. United States, 146 U. S. 370, 36 L. Ed. 1011; Pierce v. United States, 160 U. S. 355, 356, 40 L. Ed. 454; Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 411, 39 L. Ed. 1033.

13. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 404, 38 L. Ed. 208.

"The court is invested with such discretion as enables it to do justice between the government and the accused. If it be discovered at any time during a trial that the substantial rights of the accused may be prejudiced by a submission to the same jury of more than one distinct charge of felony among two or more of the same class, the court, according to the established principles of criminal law, can compel an election by the prosecutor." Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 403, 38 L. Ed. 208; McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 77, 41 L. Ed. 355.

14. Consolidation of indictments.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 404, 38 L. Ed. 208. See Rev. Stat., § 1024.

"If the offenses could be joined in one indictment, it would follow, under the statute, that separate indictments could, in the discretion of the court, be consolidated and tried at the same time and before the same jury, where nothing in the record shows that the consolidation for the consolidation of charges in several indictments, puts each of the indictments in the same category as if they were separate counts of one indictment.[15]

XII. Election.

A. Election Defined.—By what is technically termed "putting the prosecutor to his election," is meant that the trial judge, in his discretion, in felony cases, may require the counsel for the prosecution to select one of the several felonies charged in the indictment, and confine himself to that.[16]

B. Propriety of Election—1. In General.—The question of the propriety of compelling an election between distinct charges has always seemed to depend upon the special circumstances of the case in which it has arisen.[17]

2. In Felony Cases.—If several felonies or misdemeanors are charged in the same indictment in several counts, no objection can be made on that account in point of law; but, in felony cases, the judge may exercise his discretion to require the prosecutor to proceed with the trial on one of the charges only.[18]

3. Discretion of Court.—A motion to compel an election is made to the discretion of the trial judge, founded on the supposition that the case extends to more than one charge, and may tend to embarrass or prejudice the defendant in his defense.[19]

XIII. Validity of Accusation.

A. Presumption of Validity.—An indictment is presumed to be valid.[20]

B. Validity of Part of Counts.—Each count in an indictment or information is a substantive charge; and, if the verdict of the jury conforms to any one of the counts, which, in itself, will support the verdict, a general verdict will be sustained, and judgment may be given thereon, although all other counts in the indictment are invalid.[21] In the absence of anything in the record to show the of these cases worked or could work any prejudice to the defendant." Williams v. United States, 168 U. S. 382, 391, 42 L. Ed. 509.

As to the offenses that may be joined in the same indictment, see ante, "Joinder of Offenses," X.

15. Effect of consolidation.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 77, 41 L. Ed. 355.

16. Election — Defined.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 402, 38 L. Ed. 208.

17. Property of election.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 402, 38 L. Ed. 208.

18. In felony cases.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 402, 38 L. Ed. 208. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

19. Discretion of court.—Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 402, 38 L. Ed. 208; Pierce v. United States, 160 U. S. 355, 356, 40 L. Ed. 454.

Where a defendant was charged in one count with having seized, carried away, and secreted a ballot box, and for having assisted and procured others to do so, at an election for members of congress, the trial judge may at his discretion compel the prosecutor to elect which of the distinct offenses he will proceed under. Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 411, 39 L. Ed. 1033.

20. Presumption of validity.—Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 520, 47 L. Ed. 572; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 451, 39 L. Ed. 481. See the title GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570. And see ante, "As Unknown," VIII, D, 1, b.

21. Validity of part of counts.—United States v. The Pirates, 5 Wheat. 184, 5 L. Ed. 64; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390; Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427, 435, 29 L. Ed. 681; Clifton v. United States, 4 How. 242, 250, 11 L. Ed. 957; Snyder v. United States, 112 U. S. 216, 217, 28 L. Ed. 697; United States v. Sixty-Seven Packages, 17 How. 85, 94, 15 L. Ed. 54; Goode v. United States, 159 U. S. 663, 669, 40 L. Ed. 297; Claassen v. United States, 142 U. S. 140, 35 L. Ed. 966; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 38 L. Ed. 830; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 421, 29 L. Ed. 89; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 256, 23 L. Ed. 563, Hunt, J., dissenting; Friedenstein v. United States, 125 U. S. 224, 231, 31 L. Ed. 736; Ingraham v. United States, 155 U. S. 434, 436, 39 L. Ed. 213; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 542, 38 L. Ed. 545. See the title VERDICT.

"A general verdict of guilty was rendered upon all the counts of this indictment upon which a nolle prosequi was not entered, and as such verdict should stand if any one of the counts is good, it will not be necessary to consider them in any further detail." Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 594, 595, 38 L. Ed. 830.

Informations in revenue cases.—"It has been adjudged by this court, that informa-contrary, the presumption of law is that the court awarded sentence on the good count only.[22]

XIV. Construction of Accusation.

The words used in an indictment are to be construed according to their usual acceptation in common language,[23] except such words and phrases as are defined by law, and they are to be construed according to their legal meaning.[24] The entire indictment is to be considered in determining whether the offense is fully stated.[25] Clauses connected by "and" are to be construed together.[26]

XV. Objections to Accusation.

A. Right to Be Heard.—The constitutional guaranty, that he be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him, entitles the defendant to object to the indictment by demurrer, motion to quash or on motion in arrest of judgment.[27] But the defendant has no right to insist that such objections should be discussed or decided, during the trial of the facts by the jury.[28]

B. Jurisdiction.—Rulings in respect of the sufficiency of an indictment present no federal question.[29]

C. Manner of Making Objection—1. Motion to Quash—a. Who May Make Motion.—An information at the relation of a private person cannot be quashed on his motion.[30]

b. Grounds for.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere in this title.[31]

c. Evidence in Support of Motion—(1) Necessity for—(a) In General.—The grounds assigned for quashing an indictment should be sustained by distinct evidence introduced, or offered to be introduced, by the accused.[32]

tions under the revenue laws for the forfeiture of goods, which seek no judgment of fine or imprisonment against any person, though civil actions are not strictly criminal cases, are so far in the nature of criminal proceedings as to come within the rule, that a general verdict, upon several counts, seeking in different forms one object, must be upheld if one count is good." Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427, 433, 29 L. Ed. 681.

22. Presumed to be rendered on valid count.—Claassen v. United States, 142 U. S. 140, 146, 35 L. Ed. 966.

23. Construction — Ordinary words.—Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 548, 39 L. Ed. 255; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 444, 39 L. Ed 214; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 545, 38 L. Ed. 545.

24. Technical wards.—Davis v. Utah, 151 U. S. 262, 265, 38 L. Ed. 153; Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 55, 76, 29 L. Ed. 561.

25. Construed as whole.—Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 190, 39 L. Ed. 390; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 449, 39 L. Ed. 481.

26. Clauses connected by "and."—St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 146, 38 L. Ed. 936. See the title HOMICIDE, ante, p. 695.

27. Objections—Right to be heard.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40, 40 L. Ed. 606.

28. United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 478, 6 L. Ed. 693.

29. Jurisdiction.—Barrington v. Missouri, 205 U. S. 483, 487, 51 L. Ed. 890; Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 135, 48 L. Ed. 121. See ante, "Jurisdiction," VIII, G, 3.

30. Motion to quash.—Respublica v. Griffiths, 2 Dall. 112, 1 L. Ed. 311.

31. Grounds for.—See ante, "Raising Objections," VII, I; "Determination of Sufficiency," VIII, G, "Effect or Duplicity," IX, B.

32. Evidence in support of motion.—Smith v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 600, 601, 40 L. Ed. 1082; Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 320, 50 L. Ed. 497. To the same effect, see Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 521, 47 L. Ed. 572; Brownfield v. South Carolina, 189 U. S. 426, 428, 47 L. Ed. 882; Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839; Williams v. Mississippi, 170 U. S. 213, 42 L. Ed. 1012.

"It is suggested that the allegations of the motion to quash not having been controverted and having been supported by the affidavit of the defendant, must be taken to be true. But a motion, although reduced to writing, is not a pleading, and does no require a written answer. It appears from the grounds on which the judge decided it, apart from anything else, that the allegations were controverted, and under such circumstances it was necessary for the defendant to make an attempt to introduce evidence." Brownfield v. South Carolina, 189 U. S. 426, 428, 47 L. Ed. 882.

It is error of the trial court to deny a defendant the right to introduce evidence in support of the allegations in his motion to quash the indictment, for unlawful discrimination against him in the selection of the grand jury. Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 44 L. Ed. 839; Tar-

(b) Where Motion Verified.—The accused cannot, of right, insist that the facts stated in a motion to quash an indictment should be taken as true, simply because the motion is verified by his affidavit,[33] except with the consent of the state prosecutor,[34] or by order of the trial court.[35]

(c) Where Motion Not Answered.—The facts set forth in a motion to quash are not admitted, simply because not formally answered.[36]

(b) Where Motion Demurred to.—Where the prosecution demurs to the defendant's motion to quash an indictment, the allegations therein are admitted, and the defendant is relieved of the burden of introducing evidence in support thereof.[37] But a motion to strike out a motion to quash is not equivalent to a demurrer, and does not relieve the defendant of the burden to introduce evidence in support of the latter motion.[38]

(2) Admission of.—It is the duty of the trial court to admit valid evidence in support of a motion to quash an indictment.[39]

(3) Sufficiency of.—Whether or not a defendant has introduced sufficient evidence, in support of a motion to quash, on the ground that the indictment is invalid under the United States constitution, is a federal question.[40]

d. Review on Writ of Error.—A motion to quash an indictment, being addressed to the discretion of the court, the refusal thereof is not generally assignable for error.[41] To be availed of in an appellate court, the grounds for a rance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 521, 47 L. Ed. 572.

Offer to introduce.—Brownfield v. South Carolina, 189 U. S. 426, 428, 47 L. Ed. 882.

33. Where motion verified.—"The grounds assigned for quashing the indictment should have been sustained by distinct evidence introduced or offered to be introduced by the accused. He could not, of right, insist that the facts stated in the motion to quash should be taken as true simply because his motion was verified by his affidavit. The motion to quash was, therefore, unsupported by any competent evidence; consequently, it cannot be held to have been erroneously denied." Smith v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 600, 601, 40 L. Ed. 1082.

Facts set out in a motion for removal of a cause into a federal court under the Revised Statutes, § 641, verified by the affidavit of the defendant that the facts therein stated are true to the best of his knowledge and belief, is not evidence of such facts in support of a motion to quash the indictment. Smith v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 601, 40 L. Ed. 1082.

Where an accused person of African descent has been indicted by a grand jury upon which no persons of his race sat, on a motion to quash an indictment, he must offer evidence of discrimination in the selection of the grand jury on account of race, color, etc., other than the verified statements in the motion, to bring his case within the rule of Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 447, 44 L. Ed. 839; Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 319, 50 L. Ed. 497; Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 521, 47 L. Ed. 572.

34. Consent of prosecutor.—Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 520, 47 L. Ed. 572; Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 319, 50 L. Ed. 497.

In Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. Ed. 567, the court held that an agreement by the attorney general, appearing for the state, was to be regarded as an admission of the truth of the facts stated in the motion and therefore waived the necessity for further evidence. Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 522, 47 L. Ed. 572; Smith v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 600, 40 L. Ed. 1082.

Agreement of counsel.—Brownfield v. South Carolina, 189 U. S. 426, 428, 47 L. Ed. 882.

35. Order of court.—Smith v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 600, 601, 40 L. Ed. 1082; Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 320, 50 L. Ed. 497.

36. Where motion not answered.—"The formal words of the motion were not enough." Brownfield v. South Carolina, 189 U. S. 426, 428, 47 L. Ed. 882; Smith v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 601, 40 L. Ed. 1082.

37. Where motion demurred to.—Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 521, 522, 47 L. Ed. 572, distinguishing Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. Ed. 567; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 28 L. Ed. 279.

38. Motion to strike out.—Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 521, 47 L. Ed. 572.

39. Admission of evidence.—Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 521, 47 L. Ed. 572.

40. Sufficiency of.—Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 448, 44 L. Ed. 839.

41. Review on writ of error.—Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 314, 40 L. Ed. 709; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 282, 36 L. Ed. 429; United States v. Avery, 13 Wall. 251, 20 L. Ed. 610; United States v. Canda, 154 U. S., appx., 674, 26 L. Ed. 1069; United States v. Rosenburgh, 7 Wall. 580, 19 L. Ed. 263; motion to quash an indictment must appear of record.[42]

2. Demurrer—a. Grounds for.—Any defect in the structure of an information may be taken advantage of by demurrer.[43]

b. Admissions by.—Matters not alleged in the information cannot be regarded as confessed by the defendant, as the demurrer only admits what is well pleaded.[44]

3. Plea in Abatement.—Such plea must be pleaded with strict exactness.[45]

4. Motion in Arrest of Judgment—a. For Want of Certainty.—A charge in an indictment which is inaccurate or imperfect, but does not amount to an omission of an essential averment, is cured by verdict and cannot be taken advantage of on motion in arrest of judgment.[46]

b. For Duplicity.—Duplicity in an indictment may furnish ground for a motion in arrest of judgment.[47] But it has been held that it is too late after verdict to object to an indictment on the ground that more than one offense is charged in the same count, by motion in arrest of judgment.[48]

c. For Wrongful Consolidation.—Wrongful consolidation of several indictments not excepted to at the time, cannot be objected to after verdict.[49]

5. Writ of Error.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[50]

6. Writ of Habeas Corpus.—This subject is treated elsewhere.[51]

D. Time of Making Objections—1. During Trial.—Objections to the form and sufficiency of the indictment may, in the discretion of the court, be discussed and decided, during the trial before the jury; but, generally speaking, they ought regularly to be considered only upon a motion to quash the indictment, or in arrest of judgment, or on demurrer.[52]

2. Before Verdict.—An objection to an indictment on the ground of multifariousness must be made before verdict.[53]

United States v. Hamilton, 109 U. S. 63, 27 L. Ed. 857.

The federal supreme court cannot take cognizance, under the judiciary act of 1802, of a division of opinion between the judges of the circuit court, upon a motion to quash an indictment. United States v. Rosenburgh, 7 Wall. 580, 19 L. Ed. 263, followed in United States v. Canda, 154 U. S., appx., 674, 26 L. Ed. 1069.

It is in the discretion of the trial court to hear motion and to quash upon the affidavit of the accused. Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 394, 26 L. Ed. 567.

42. Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 411, 39 L. Ed. 1033.

43. Grounds for demurrer.—Territory v. Lockwood, 3 Wall. 236, 238, 18 L. Ed. 47; United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 583. 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 21 L. Ed. 638.

After bill of particulars filed.—See ante, "Bill of Particulars," VIII, C, 5, d, (4).

44. Admissions by.—United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 584, 24 L. Ed. 531; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 178, 21 L. Ed. 638; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 225, 23 L. Ed. 563, Clifford, J., dissenting.

45. Plea in abatement.—Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. Ed. 624. See the title GRAND JURY, ante, p. 570.

46. Motion in arrest—For want of certainty.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 32, 40 L. Ed. 606.

47. Duplicity.—Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 316, 38 L. Ed. 725.

48. Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 411, 39 L. Ed. 1033.

Same — In Massachusetts. — Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 635, 40 L. Ed. 1097.

49. For wrongful consolidation.—Bucklin v. United States, 159 U. S. 682, 40 L. Ed. 305.

50. Writ of error.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, pp. 91, 118, 263.

51. Writ of habeas corpus.—See the title HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610.

52. Time of making—During trial.—"It would be very inconvenient and embarrassing, to allow a discussion of such topics, during the progress of the cause before the jury, and introduce much confusion into the administration of public justice." United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 479, 6 L. Ed. 693.

"But, we think, it is not wholly incompetent for the court to entertain such questions, during the trial, in the exercise of a sound discretion. It should, however, be rarely done, and only under circumstances of an extraordinary nature. The circuit court, in the present case, did allow the introduction and discussion of these questions, during the trial, and were divided upon the propriety of the practice. We can only certify that the court possessed the authority, but that it ought not to be exercised except on very urgent occasions." United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 479, 6 L. Ed. 693.

53. Before verdict.—Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 315, 40 L. Ed. 709.

E. Hearing and Determination.—For treatment of this subject, see elsewhere in this title.[54]

F. Waiver and Cure of Objections—1. Waiver of Objections.—A defect which does not go to the substance of the charge, but only to the form in which it is presented, is waived if no objection is made in the first instance and before trial.[55] Any defect in the information which could have been availed of by demurrer, or by exception, or by a motion to dismiss at the trial, made on the ground of such defect, or by a motion in arrest of judgment but was not, must be regarded as having been waived, or as having been cured by the verdict.[56] If the defendant demurs to the indictment on the ground of insufficiency, he waives all questions of form and challenges only the substance.[57] And the very fact of the defendant's pleading to an indictment admits its genuineness as a record.[58]

2. Cure of Objections—a. By Verdict.—An inaccurate or imperfect statement of a fact in an indictment, which does not amount to an omission of an essential averment,[59] is cured by verdict,[60] and cannot be taken advantage of on motion in arrest of judgment.[61] Any merely technical defect in the language of an indictment negativing the application of a statutory exception is cured by verdict.[62]

b. By Evidence.—A defective information is not cured by evidence of the essential facts omitted to be averred.[63]

c. By Statute.—See elsewhere in this title.[64]

54. Hearing and determination.—See ante, "Determination of Sufficiency," VIII, G.

55. Waiver of objections.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 164, 39 L. Ed. 657.

"While it may be true that a defendant by waiting until that time does not waive the objection that some substantial element of the crime is omitted, yet he does waive all objections which run to the mere form in which the various elements of the crime are stated, or to the fact that the indictment is inartificially drawn." Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390.

"If, for instance, the description of the property does not so clearly identify it as to enable him to prepare his defense, he should raise the question by some preliminary motion, or perhaps by a demand for a bill of particulars; otherwise it may properly be assumed as against him that he is fully informed of the precise property in respect to which he is charged to have violated the law." Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. Ed. 390.

"When the indictment is presented, * * * the accused has two courses of procedure open to him. He may question the propriety of the accusation, the manner in which it has been presented, the source from which it proceeds, and have these matters promptly and properly determined; or, waiving them, he may put in issue the truth of the accusation and demand the judgment of his peers on the merits of the charge. If he omits the former and chooses the latter, he ought not, when defeated on the latter, when found guilty of the crime charged, to be permitted to go back to the former and inquire as to the manner and means by which the charge was presented." In re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 585, 35 L. Ed. 513.

56. Friedenstein v. United States, 125 U. S. 224, 230, 31 L. Ed. 736.

57. By dumurrer.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 165, 39 L. Ed. 657. See ante, "Raising Objections," VII, I.

58. By plea.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 165, 39 L. Ed. 657; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. Ed. 857.

59. Cure of defects by verdict.—Defects in matters of substance are not thus cured. United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 31 L. Ed. 516; Friedenstein v. United States, 125 U. S. 224, 235, 31 L. Ed. 736, dissenting opinion of Field, and Harlan, JJ. See ante, "In Common-Law Felonies," VIII, C, 7, l, (1), (c), aa.

60. Friedenstein v. United States, 125 U. S. 224, 230, 31 L. Ed. 736. See ante, "Waiver of Objections," XV, F, 1.

61. Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 32, 40 L. Ed. 606; Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 26 L. Ed. 481.

62. Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255.

Not cured where allegation too general.—Moore v. United States, 160 U. S. 268, 276, 40 L. Ed. 422. See ante, "Completeness," VIII, C, 5, a.

63. By evidence.—The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 3 L. Ed. 380. See ante, "Completeness," VIII, C, 5, a.

64. By statute.—See ante, "Statutory Provision," VII, A; "In United States," VII, F, 1, c; "Completeness," VIII, C, 5, a.

XVI. Amendment of Accusation.

A. Time of Amendment.—Ingredients or elements of the offense charged, not set forth in the information or other criminal accusation, cannot be incorporated therein against the defendant after he is served with process.[65]

B. Of Indictment—1. Body of Instrument.—At common law it is beyond question that,[66] when an indictment is filed with the court, no change can be made in the body of the instrument by order of the court, or by the prosecuting attorney, without a resubmission of the case to the grand jury,[67] and the fact that the court may deem the change immaterial, as striking out of surplus words, makes no difference. The instrument, as thus changed, is no longer the indictment of the grand jury which presented it.[68] This is the uniform ruling of the American courts, except where statutes prescribe a different rule, and it is the imperative requirement of the provision of the United States constitution, which would be of little avail if an indictment once found can be changed by the prosecuting officer, with consent of the court, to conform to their views of the necessity of the case.[69] According to principles long settled in the federal supreme court the prisoner, who stands sentenced to the penitentiary on such trial, is entitled to his discharge by writ of habeas corpus.[70] Indictments are not within the statutes of jeofails.[71]

2. Caption of Instrument.—There are several cases in which it has been decided that the caption of an indictment may be amended.[72]

C. Of Information.—There is a great difference between amending indictments and amending informations. The latter are declarations in the government's suit. As the prosecuting officer has the right of framing them originally, he may, with leave, amend in like manner, as any plaintiff may do.[73]

XVII. Variance between Accusation and Proof.

A. In General.—It is a positive rule of criminal procedure that the accused shall not be charged with one crime, and convicted of another.[74] This rule may sometimes cover real guilt, but its observance is essential to the preservation of innocence.[75]

B. Where There Are Unnecessary Averments.—Where an unnecessary

65. Amendment — Time of.—United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 585, 24 L. Ed. 531.

66. Indictments—Body of.—Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 6, 30 L. Ed. 849.

67. "No authority has been cited to us in the American courts which sustains the right of a court to amend any part of the body of an indictment without reassembling the grand jury, unless by virtue of a statute." Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 8, 30 L. Ed. 849.

68. Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 849.

69. Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 849.

Upon an indictment so changed, the court can proceed no farther. There is nothing (in the language of the constitution) which the prisoner can "be held to answer." A trial on such indictment is void. There is nothing to try. Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 849. See Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 51, 40 L. Ed. 606, dissenting opinion of White and Shiras, JJ.

70. Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. Ed. 849.

71. Statutes of jeofails.—"Nor are indictments within the operation of the statutes of jeofails, and cannot therefore be amended; being the finding of a jury upon oath, the court cannot amend without the concurrence of the grand jury by whom the bill is found." Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 9, 30 L. Ed. 849.

72. Caption of indictment.—Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 7, 30 L. Ed. 849.

73. Of informations.—Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 6, 30 L. Ed. 849.

Under revenue laws.—Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427, 434, 29 L. Ed. 681.

74. Variance.—The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 394, 3 L. Ed. 380.

"It is only a modification of this rule, that the accusation on which the prosecution is founded should state the crime which is to be proved, and state such a crime as will justify the judgment to be pronounced." The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 394, 3 L. Ed. 380.

Proof and averment must correspond. Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 448, 39 L. Ed. 481; United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327, 333, 30 L. Ed. 664.

75. The Hoppet, 7 Cranch 389, 394, 3 L. Ed. 380.

amount of description of an article to be identified thereby is contained in an indictment, it has been sometimes held that the description must be proved as laid, because it goes to the identification of the article described;[76] and, in an indictment of perjury or for libel, the sworn statement alleged to be false or the article alleged to be libelous must be proved substantially as averred in the indictment;[77] but, where an indictment, which contains all the necessary averments to constitute an offense created by a statute, also contains an averment wholly unnecessary and entirely immaterial to be added, the prosecution need not prove such unnecessary averment. It is sufficient to prove every fact constituting the offense provided by statute.[78]

C. Where There Are Numerous Averments.—Where an indictment charges that a defendant did, and caused to be done, a particular act, it is sufficient to prove either that the defendant did the act or caused it to be done.[79]

D. Where Means of Commission of Crime Averred.—While it was necessary at common law to allege means employed in the commission of the offense, nevertheless proof of the use of a different means was regarded as an immaterial variance.[80]

E. In Description of Persons.—The text writers state the rule to be, that where the name of a third person is used in an indictment it must be proved as laid;[81] but, where the variance is not in an integral part of the name and the name as stated in the indictment is commonly understood and cannot mislead the defendant, or fail to convey to his mind the person intended, such variance does not render the indictment void.[82]

F. In Description of Time.—Where time is not of the essence of the offense, variance between its allegation and proof is not material.[83]

76. Unnecessary averments.—Hall v. United States, 168 U. S. 632, 639, 42 L. Ed. 607.

77. In cases of perjury and libel.—Hall v. United States, 168 U. S. 632, 639, 42 L. Ed. 607.

78. Unnecessary and immaterial matter.—Thus under the postal laws of the United States, Rev. Stat., § 5467, where it is unnecessarily alleged that a decoy letter sent through mail for the purpose of entrapping the accused was "intended to be delivered by a letter carrier," the averment quoted is immaterial and unnecessary, and the prosecution need not introduce evidence in regard thereto. Hall v. United States, 168 U. S. 632, 639, 42 L. Ed. 607. See the title POSTAL LAWS.

79. Numerous averments.—Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 634, 40 L. Ed. 1097. See the title FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING, ante, p. 380.

80. Means of commission of crime.—"'If A. be indicted for poisoning of B., it must allege the kind of poison, but if he poisoned B. with another kind of poisoning, yet it maintains the indictment, for the kind of death is the same.' 2 Hale P. C. 185." Westmoreland v. United States, 155 U. S. 545, 549, 39 L. Ed. 255. See ante, "Means of Commission of Offense," VIII, C, 7, j.

81. Description of persons.—Putnam v. United States, 162 U. S. 687, 690, 40 L. Ed. 1118.

82. Putnam v. United States, 162 U. S. 687, 691, 40 L. Ed. 1118; Faust v. United States, 163 U. S. 452, 454, 41 L. Ed. 224.

An indictment against its president for defrauding a bank, in which the bank is described "as the National Granite State Bank," and which was "then and there acting and carrying on a national banking business by the city of Exeter," is not invalid for variance between the indictment and proof, where the evidence showed that the authorized name of the bank was "the National Granite State Bank of Exeter," although the indictment omitted the words "of Exeter." The variance was held not to be material because the bank carried on its business and was as well known by the one name as the other, and that the variance was not in an integral part of the name proper. Putnam v. United States, 162 U. S. 687, 690, 40 L. Ed. 1118. See ante, "Designation of Persons," VIII, D.

83. Of time.—See ante, "Designation of The Offense," VIII, E.

The only difference between the allegation in the indictment and the proof in the case is that during this trial, which occupied several days, the plaintiff in error swore on the 6th of June instead of on the 7th, as alleged in the indictment, to the matter which was alleged to be false. The date upon which the evidence was given, which was alleged to have been false, appeared by the stenographer's minutes, who took the evidence on the trial, to have been the 6th of June. Such a variance as appears in this case is not material. Matthews v. United States, 161 U. S. 500, 502, 40 L. Ed. 786. See the title PERJURY.

XVIII. Accusation as Evidence.

Though not conclusive evidence of probable cause,[84] an indictment, found by the proper grand jury, should be accepted as prima facie evidence thereof,[85] and sufficient basis for the removal of the cause from the district where the person is held in custody to the district where he stands indicted.[86]

INDIRECT TAX.—"All taxes on expenses of consumption are indirect taxes; a tax on carriages is of this kind, and of course, is not a direct tax. Indirect taxes are circuitous modes of reaching the revenue of individuals, who generally live according to their income."[1]

INDISPENSABLE PARTIES.—As to indispensable parties in equity and at law, see the title PARTIES.

INDIVIDUAL.—See As, vol. 2, p. 545. See note 2.

INDORSEMENT.—See the titles BILL OF LADING, vol. 3, p. 240; BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 340.

INEBRIATES.—See the title DRUNKENNESS, vol. 5, p. 496.

INEVITABLE ACCIDENT.—See ACT OF GOD, vol. 1, p. 115. As to inevitable accident as used in connection with collisions of vessels, see the title COLLISION, vol. 3, p. 879. See note 3.

INFAMOUS CRIME.—See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 455; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 494; WITNESSES.

INFAMY.—"There are two kinds of infamy; the one founded in the opinions of the people respecting the mode of punishment; the other in the construction of law respecting the future credibility of the delinquent."[4]

84. Accusation as evidence.—"It was held in Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 48 L. Ed. 882; Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. Ed. 919; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. Ed. 90, as well as Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 46 L. Ed. 177, that an indictment constituted prima facie evidence of probable cause, but not that it was conclusive." Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 31, 51 L. Ed. 689.

"We regard that question as specifically presented in the present case and we hold that the indictment cannot be treated as conclusive under § 1014, Rev. Stat., providing for removal of a defendant from one federal court to another." Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 31, 51 L. Ed. 689.

85. Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 258, 46 L. Ed. 177; Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 48 L. Ed. 882; Munsey v. Clough, 196 U. S. 364, 373, 49 L. Ed. 515.

86. "The indictment alone was, as we have seen, a showing of probable cause sufficient to justify the issue of a warrant." Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 87, 48 L. Ed. 882. See the titles EXTRADITION, ante, p. 215; HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610; REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

1. Indirect tax.—Hylton v. United States, 3 Dall. 171, 180, 1 L. Ed. 556.

In Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586, 602, 26 L. Ed. 253, it was said: "Mr. Justice Story says all taxes are usually divided into two classes—those which are direct and those which are indirect—and that 'under the former denomination are included taxes on land or real property, and, under the latter, taxes on consumption.'" See the titles REVENUE LAWS; TAXATION.

2. Individual expenses.—The articles of copartnership of a firm provided that each party thereto should pay his own individual expenses. It was held that the provision was manifestly intended to apply to private or family expenses, not connected with the business of the partnership, and that it would be an unjust and forced construction of the stipulation, to extend it to extra expenses, incurred when abroad on the business of the partnership. Withers v. Withers, 8 Pet. 355, 358, 8 L. Ed. 972.

3. Inevitable accident.—As to inevitable accident in the law of carriers embracing losses by the act of God and the public enemy, see New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchant's Bank, 6 How. 344, 381, 12 L. Ed. 465. And see the title CARRIERS, vol. 3, p. 556.

4. Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 422, 29 L. Ed. 89. See, generally, the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 494; WITNESSES.

INFANTS.

BY ERNEST P. STEINHAUER.

I. Capacities, 1013.
- A. To Commit Crime, 1013.
- B. To Act as Trustee, 1013.
- C. Contractual Capacity and Liability Thereon, 1013.
  - 1. Binding Contracts, 1013.
    - a. For Necessaries, 1013.
    - b. Doing What Law Will Compel Him to Do, 1013.
  - 2. Void and Voidable Contracts, 1013.
    - a. General Rule, 1013.
    - b. Sealed Instruments, 1013.
    - c. Power of Attorney, 1014.
  - 3. Ratification and Disaffirmance, 1014.
    - a. Ratification, 1014.
      - (1) In General, 1014.
      - (2) Question of Law and Fact, 1014.
    - b. Disaffirmance, 1014.
      - (1) In General, 1014.
      - (2) Purpose of Privilege, 1015.
      - (3) Time of Avoidance, 1015.
        - (a) During Minority, 1015.
        - (b) After Majority, 1015.
      - (4) Return of Consideration, 1016.
      - (5) Estoppel to Disaffirm, 1016.

II. Liabilities, 1016.
- A. For Tortious Conversion, 1016.
- B. To Taxation, 1016.

III. Property of Infant, 1016.
- A. Power of Legislature Over, 1016.
- B. Equity Jurisdiction, 1017.
- C. Sale of Infant's Property, 1017.
  - 1. Must Be for Benefit of Infant, 1017.
  - 2. Effect of Irregularity in Proceedings, 1017.
  - 3. Ratification, 1017.

IV. Suits by and against Infants, 1018.
- A. Duty of Courts, 1018.
- B. Guardian Ad Litem or Next Friend, 1018.
  - 1. In General, 1018.
  - 2. Necessity to Show Authority, 1018.
  - 3. Filing Bonds for Costs, 1018.
  - 4. Duties, 1019.
- C. Service of Process, 1019.
- D. Effect of Appearance by Infant, 1019.
- E. Pleading, 1019.
- F. Evidence, 1019.
- G. Statute of Limitations, 1019.
- H. Judgments and Decrees, 1019.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles BASTARDY, vol. 3, p. 204; GUARDIAN AND WARD, ante, p. 599; HUSBAND AND WIFE, ante, p. 716; PARENT AND CHILD.

As to infancy as a defense to a charge of desertion, see the title ARMY AND NAVY, vol. 2, p. 528. As to what law governs the property of infants, see the title CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 1021. As to sale of lands in District of Columbia, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1166. As to distribution of infant's land who dies intestate, see the title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 335. As to posthumous children, see the title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 335. As to questions of the domicile of an infant, see the title DOMICILE, vol. 5, p. 473. As to injuries received by infant from negligence of master, see the titles FELLOW SERVANTS, ante, p. 245; MASTER AND SERVANT. As to power of guardian to bind out an infant as a servant, see the title GUARDIAN AND WARD, ante, p. 599. As to appointment of guardian for infant, see the title GUARDIAN AND WARD, ante, p. 599. As to jurisdiction of a district court to issue a writ of habeas corpus to restore an infant to the custody of a father, see the title HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610. As to effect of the naturalization of parents upon citizenship of children, see the title NATURALIZATION. As to recovery by infant for injuries received from turntables, see the title NEGLIGENCE. As to contributory negligence of infants, see the title NEGLIGENCE.

I. Capacities.

A. To Commit Crime.—As to capacity of an infant to commit crime, see the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 60.

B. To Act as Trustee.—An infant may be a trustee, and be compelled to execute his trust.[1]

C. Contractual Capacity and Liability Thereon—1. BINDING CONTRACTS—a. For Necessaries.—A single bill, under seal, given by an infant for necessaries, is absolutely binding upon him.[2]

b. Doing What Law Will Compel Him to Do.—The act of an infant is valid, where he did what he was bound to do and would be compelled to do by a court of equity.[3]

2. VOID AND VOIDABLE CONTRACTS—a. General Rule.—The contracts of an infant are generally held to be voidable.[4]

b. Sealed Instruments.—The instruments under seal of an infant are generally held to be voidable, and not void;[5] unless they appear on their face to be to his prejudice, in which case they are deemed void.[6]

1. To act as trustee.—"An infant may undoubtedly be a trustee, and be compelled to execute his trust. Especially, if after he came of age, he affirms the trust and ratifies the acts which he did in accordance with the trust, will it be out of his power to deny that any trust ever existed." Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 617, 629, 19 L. Ed. 800. See the title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

2. For necessaries.—Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 66, 9 L. Ed. 345.

3. Doing what the law will compel him to do.—Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 67, 9 L. Ed. 345.

4. General rule.—Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 21, 21 L. Ed. 73.

The result of the American decisions has been correctly stated by Mr. Chancellor Kent, in his learned commentaries (2 Com. Lect. 31), to be, that they are in favor of construing the acts and contracts of infants generally to be voidable only and not void, and subject to their election, when they become of age, either to affirm or disallow them. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 71, 9 L. Ed. 345.

5. Sealed instruments.—Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 66, 9 L. Ed. 345; MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 698, 42 L. Ed. 326. See, generally, the title SEALS AND SEALED INSTRUMENTS.

A lease reserving rent is voidable only. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 66, 9 L. Ed. 345.

"While infants cannot make grants, they may accept them. A grant to an infant is voidable, not void." Palmer v. Low, 98 U. S. 1, 16, 25 L. Ed. 60.

The deed of an infant purporting to convey lands operates to transmit the title, and is voidable only, not void. Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 617, 19 L. Ed 800.

"The person who takes a deed from an infant feme covert knows that she is not sui juris, and that she will be under the control of her husband while the coverture lasts. He is bound to know, also, that she has the disability of infancy. He assumes, therefore, the risk attending both those disabilities." Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 311, 26 L. Ed. 87.

6. MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 698, 42 L. Ed. 326.

Thus, an infant's bond with a penalty for necessaries is void, as apparently to

c. Power of Attorney.—"It has repeatedly been determined that a power of attorney made by an infant is void."[7]

3. RATIFICATION AND DISAFFIRMANCE—a. Ratification—(1) In General.—Any voluntary[8] ratification or affirmance by an infant of a clear and unequivocal character, showing an intention to affirm his contract, is sufficient;[9] and it is not necessary to the affirmance that there be an act of affirmance by him, after he comes of age, as solemn in character as the original act.[10] But the mere recognition of the fact that a conveyance has been made is not, per se, proof of a confirmation of it.[11]

(2) Question of Law and Fact.—Where there is evidence tending to show an affirmance of an infant's deed, it is a question for the jury, and not for the court, to decide as to its sufficiency.[12]

b. Disaffirmance—(1) In General.—An infant may avoid his act, deed or contract, by different means, according to the nature of the act, or the circumstances of the case,[13] but the general result is that where the act of the infant his prejudice. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 66, 9 L. Ed. 345.

"It is apparent, then, upon the English authorities, that however true it may be that an infant may so far bind himself by deed in certain cases as that in consequence of the solemity of the instrument, it is avoidable only and not void; yet that the instrument, however solemn, is held to be void, if upon its face it is apparent that it is to the prejudice of the infant." Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 70, 9 L. Ed. 345.

The American decisions seem generally to hold that the deed of an infant conveying lands is voidable only and not void; unless, perhaps, the deed should manifestly appear on the face of it to be the prejudice of the infant; and this upon the nature and solemnity as well as the operation of the instrument. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 71, 9 L. Ed. 345.

7. Power of attorney.—Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 26, 21 L. Ed. 73.

8. Ratification in general.—"And those confirmatory acts must be voluntary. As we have said, one who is under a disability to make a contract cannot confirm one that is voidable, or, what is the same thing, cannot disaffirm it. An affirmance or a disaffirmance is in its nature a mental assent, and necessarily implies the action of a free mind, exempt from all constraint or disability." Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 312, 26 L. Ed. 87.

9. Any ratification or affirmance of a clear and unequivocal character, showing an intention to affirm the deed, is enough. Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 617, 19 L. Ed. 800.

The acquiescence of an infant, after coming of age, to an investment of his property in stock, effectually precludes him from maintaining a bill for an account. Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 636, 26 L. Ed. 585.

10. All the authorities recognize the doctrine that acts which would be insufficient to avoid an infant's deed may amount to an affirmance of it. Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 617, 627, 19 L. Ed. 800.

11. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 75, 9 L. Ed. 345.

To assume, as a matter of law, that a voluntary and deliberate recognition by a person, after his arrival at age, of an actual conveyance of his right during his nonage, amounts to a confirmation of such conveyance; or to assume that a mere acquiescence in the same conveyance, without objection, for several months after his arrival at age is also a confirmation of it, are not maintainable; the mere recognition of the fact that a conveyance has been made is not, per se, proof of a confirmation of it. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 9 L. Ed. 345.

Although it is not necessary to the affirmation of an infant's voidable deed that there be an act of affirmance by him, after he comes of age, as solemn in character as the original act itself, still mere acquiescence without anything else, is not generally sufficient evidence of affirmance. Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 617, 19 L. Ed. 800.

Sale of infant's property.—See post, "Ratification," III, C, 3.

12. Questions of law and fact.—Where the infant, having come of age and entered into partnership with third persons, took a lease for his firm of one part of the property which as an infant he had conveyed, from the person to whom he had so conveyed that part with other parts, the lease is proper to go to the jury, on a suit by the infant for these other parts alone, to show an affirmance of his deed for the whole; and with such evidence before the jury a court rightly refused to charge that the evidence showed no affirmance. Whether it did show an affirmance or not was, with this lease before them, matter for the jury to decide. Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 617, 19 L. Ed. 800.

13. Disaffirmance in general.—There is no doubt that an infant may avoid his act, deed or contract, by different means, according to the nature of the act, or the circumstances of the case; he may sometimes avoid it by matters in pais, as in is by matter of record, he must avoid it by some act of record during his minority,[14] or if the act is a matter in pais, it may be avoided by an act in pais of equal solemnity or notoriety.[15] In short, the nature of the original act or conveyance of the infant generally governs, as to the nature of the act required to be done in the disaffirmance of it; if the latter be of as high and solemn a nature as the former, it amounts to a valid avoidance of it.[16]

(2) Purpose of Privilege.—Infants are regarded as under the protection of the law, as they are presumed to lack sufficient discretion;[17] and it is for the purpose of protecting him from the effects of his folly, rashness and misconduct that the law allows him to avoid his contracts, though it may work a fraud upon the other party.[18]

(3) Time of Avoidance—(a) During Minority.—It is settled that an infant cannot disaffirm his deed while his infancy continues. The reason is that a disaffirmance works a reinvestiture of the estate in the infant, and he is presumed not to have sufficient discretion for that.[19]

(b) After Majority.—The general rule is that the infant must avoid his contract within a reasonable time after obtaining his majority.[20] What is a reasonable time depends upon the circumstances of each case.[21] And while the decisions are not agreed as to the effect of mere silence,[22] the preponderance of authority case of a feoffment, by an entry, if his entry is not tolled; sometimes by plea, as when he is sued upon his bond or other contract; sometime by suit, as when he disaffirms a contract made for the sale of his chattels, and sues for the chattels; sometimes by a writ of error, as when he has levied a fine during his nonage; sometimes by a writ of audita querela, as when he has acknowledged a recognizance, or statute staple, or merchant; sometimes, as in the case of an alienation of his estate, by a writ of entry, dum fuit infra ætatem, after his arrival at age. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 9 L. Ed. 345.

14. "When the act of the infant is by matter of record, he must avoid it by some act of record (as, for instances, by a writ of error or an audita querela), during his minority." Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 72, 9 L. Ed. 345.

15. "If the act of the infant is a matter in pais, it may be avoided by an act in pais, of equal solemnity or notoriety; and this, according to some authority, either during his nonage or afterwards; and according to others, at all events, after his arrival of age." Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 72, 9 L. Ed. 345.

16. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 72, 9 L. Ed. 345.

"We do not mean to say that, in all cases, the act of disaffirmance should be of the same, or of as high and solemn a nature as the original act; for a deed may be avoided by a plea. But we mean only to say that if the act of disaffirmance be of as high and solemn a nature, there is no ground to impeach its sufficiency." Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 72, 9 L. Ed. 345.

Where a deed of land contains a warranty of title against all persons claiming under the grantor, and a covenant that he had good right and title to convey the same, it is a positive disaffirmance of a former deed, made during infancy to another person. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 76, 9 L. Ed. 345.

17. Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 25, 21 L. Ed. 73.

18. In many cases the disaffirmance of a deed during infancy is a fraud upon the other party; but this has never been held to be sufficient to avoid the disaffirmance, for it would otherwise take away the very protection which the law intends to throw around him to guard him from the effects of his folly, rashness and misconduct. Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 9 L. Ed. 345.

19. Avoidance during minority.—Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 309, 26 L. Ed. 87.

20. Avoidance after majority.—Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 311, 26 L. Ed. 87; MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 689, 42 L. Ed. 326; Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 617, 19 L. Ed. 800.

21. What is a reasonable time for a disaffirmance of a deed by an infant is nowhere determined in such a manner as to furnish a rule applicable to all cases. The question must always be answered in view of the peculiar circumstances of each case. Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 309, 26 L. Ed. 87.

"It must be admitted that generally the disaffirmance must be within the period limited by the statute of limitations for bringing an action of ejectment. A much less time has in some cases been held unreasonable. It is obvious that delay in some cases could have no justification, while in others it would be quite reasonable." Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 310, 26 L. Ed. 87.

22. "The decisions respecting the disaffirmance of an infant's deed are not in entire harmony with each other. While it is generally agreed that the infant to is that, in deeds executed by infants, mere inertness or silence, continued for a period less than that prescribed by the statute of limitations, unless accompanied by affirmative acts, manifesting an intention to assent to the conveyance, will not bar the infant's right to avoid the deed.[23]

(4) Return of Consideration.—The general rule is that to give effect to a disaffirmance of an infant's deed it is not necessary that the infant should first place the other party in statu quo;[24] but if the consideration can be restored, in whole or in part, the infant is treated as a trustee of the other party, and must give it up.[25]

(5) Estoppel to Disaffirm.—See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 999.

II. Liabilities.

A. For Tortious Conversion.—See the title TROVER AND CONVERSION.

B. To Taxation.—"Children have privileges and protection, but they are not assessed, unless they have goods or property separate from the heads of families."[26]

III. Property of Infant.

A. Power of Legislature Over.—The legislature possesses the power to determine by law the manner in which the estates of infants shall be preserved.

avoid it must disaffirm it within a reasonable time after his majority is attained, they differ as to what constitutes disaffirmance and as to the effect of mere silence." Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 311, 26 L. Ed. 87.

23. Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 312, 26 L. Ed. 87.

24. Return of consideration.—Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. 58, 73, 9 L. Ed. 345.

"It is well settled that it is not a condition of the disaffirmance by an infant of a contract made during infancy that he shall return the consideration received by him, if, prior to such disaffirmance and during infancy, the specific thing received has been disposed of, wasted or consumed and cannot be returned." MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 698, 42 L. Ed. 326.

"Upon the disaffirmance of a deed made during infancy, the infant is entitled to recover the property conveyed by him, and the adult to recover such of the consideration paid by him as may remain in the hands of the infant at the time of disaffirmance." MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 702, 42 L. Ed. 326.

"It is the settled law of Texas that if an infant convey, and after coming of age choose to rescind, he must, as a general rule, restore what he has received, before he will be permitted to recover." Slaughter v. Glenn, 98 U. S. 242, 245, 25 L. Ed. 122.

25. "If the infant disaffirm an executed contract, and the specific consideration can be restored, in whole or in part, the infant is treated as a trustee of the other party, and must give it up; but where the articles received by him are consumed or the money spent, the party advancing them is without a remedy." MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 699, 42 L. Ed. 326.

"A court of equity will look at the real transaction, and will do justice to the adult if it can be done without disregarding or impairing the principle that allows an infant, upon arriving at majority, to disaffirm his contracts made during infancy." MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 700, 42 L. Ed. 326.

In MacGreal v. Taylor, 167 U. S. 688, 702, 42 L. Ed. 326, an infant borrowed money to pay off liens and make improvements upon a lot and gave a deed of trust on the lot as security. When she arrived at age she disaffirmed her contract and deed of trust. Held, that as the money was used to improve the property, it should be deemed as property within the rule entitling the adult party to recover the consideration remaining in an infant's hands; and that a decree of a sale of the land was proper; but a decree for the sale of the land was improper, which entitled the lender to have his entire debts first paid, even if all the proceeds of sale were required for the purpose. The decree should have directed that the proceeds be applied, first, in repaying the lender, with interest, the sums used to discharge the prior liens and taxes; second, in paying the infant an amount equal to the value of the lot at the institution of the suit (less such prior liens) without interest on that amount, and without taking into consideration the value of the improvements placed on the lot; and third, in paying to the lender such of the proceeds of sale as may have remained, not exceeding the balance due on the loan. This last sum would represent, as far as may be, the value of the improvements put upon the lot with the lender's money. Any other decree would make the disaffirmance by the infant ineffectual, if the property, upon being sold did not bring more than the debt attempted to be secured. If the property, in its improved condition, did not pay the whole debt due, the lender will be without remedy for the deficiency. Any balance left after satisfying the above claims would belong to the infant.

26. To taxation.—Dobbins v. Erie and to say what kind of security shall be given by those who are intrusted with their management, and, as a necessary consequence, it has the power of altering the law on the subject, whenever in its judgment the interest of the minors or the public good requires that it should be done.[27]

B. Equity Jurisdiction.—Courts of equity have general authority over the estates of an infant, and upon proper application it will be exerted for their protection.[28]

C. Sale of Infant's Property—1. MUST BE FOR BENEFIT OF INFANT.—Before a court will order a sale of infant's lands, it must appear that the sale would be for the infant's benefit.[29]

2. EFFECT OF IRREGULARITY IN PROCEEDINGS.—Where the proceedings for the sale of an infant's lands are irregular, they should be set aside.[30]

3. RATIFICATION.—Long acquiescence of the minor, after he becomes of age, in partition proceedings had for the sale of his property, is equivalent to an express affirmance of them, even though they were affected with such irregularities as, upon his prompt application after becoming of age, would have justified the court in setting them aside.[31]

County, 16 Pet. 435, 446, 10 L. Ed. 1022. See, generally, the title TAXATION.

27. Power of legislature over infant's property.—Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 296, 19 L. Ed. 694.

"The principle which allows a change of security at all, necessarily leaves the legislative power over the whole subject unabridged, and there is no right of complaint if the legislature, in varying the nature and extent of the security, takes care that the property is preserved." Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. 295, 297, 19 L. Ed. 694.

The legislature has the power of parens patriæ in regard to infants. Morman Church v. United States, 136 U. S. 1, 34 L. Ed. 481.

28. Equity jurisdiction.—Insurance Co. v. Bangs, 103 U. S. 435, 438, 26 L. Ed. 580.

The statute of Maryland, 1785, providing that the chancellor may authorize the sale of an infant's lands, is construed as an enlargement of jurisdiction, and decrees for selling the lands of minors, in the cases prescribed by it, are treated as the exercise of other equity powers. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 143, 8 L. Ed. 890.

29. Sale must be for benefit of infant.—The devisee of one of the lots devised to him forever, which the court held was subject to the right to one-third in the wife of the devisor, and one-third after her decease, in fee to the son of the devisor, cannot by a proceeding in chancery compel a sale of the property devised, or a partition; unless the court are satisfied it would be for the benefit of the infant son to make such sale, and without the consent of all the other parties interested in the property. Walker v. Parker, 13 Pet. 166, 10 L. Ed. 109.

30. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 146, 8 L. Ed. 890.

Where a trustee exceeds his authority, given under a decree, in making a conveyance of an infant's lands, and without receiving a cent therefor, the conveyance should be set aside. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 145, 146, 8 L. Ed. 890.

Under a statute which requires that all sales of lands descending to minors, to pay the debts of the decedent, made by authority of the chancellor, shall be notified to and confirmed by the chancellor, before any conveyance of the property shall be made, a decree is erroneous that directs the conveyance to be made on the payment of the purchase money. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 145, 8 L. Ed. 890.

A decree ordering the sale of an infant's lands to pay the debts of a decedent is erroneous, if made before the amount of the debt has been judicially determined by the creditor's report. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 145, 8 L. Ed. 890.

The unsworn answer of a guardian, consenting to a decree for the sale of an infant's lands, to pay a decedent's debts, is insufficient, without other evidence, under a statute which authorizes a sale only when the personal estate is insufficient to pay the established debts, and when, upon consideration of all the circumstances, it appears to the chancellor to be just and proper that such sale should be made. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 143, 8 L. Ed. 890.

31. Ratification.—Brazee v. Schofield, 124 U. S. 495, 505, 31 L. Ed. 484. See ante, "Ratification," I, C, 3, a.

"For many years after they came of age no objection was made by the heirs, who were minors at the time, to any of the proceedings in partition. On the contrary, they proceeded at once, after the partition, to exercise control by themselves or guardians appointed by the probate court, over the several parts allotted to them; and some of the heirs sold and conveyed to others their respective portions. The court below expressly finds that the heirs, who were minors in 1856, after becoming of full

IV. Suits by and against Infants.

A. Duty of Courts.—The duty of watching over the interests of infants devolves, in a considerable degree, upon the courts[32] of both law and equity.[33]

B. Guardian Ad Litem or Next Friend—1. In General.—Infants are represented by guardians, appointed by the court,[34] who is usually the nearest relation, not concerned, in point of interest in the matter in question.[35] The suit must be brought in the name of the infant, and not in that of the next friend.[36]

2. Necessity to Show Authority.—It is not necessary to the jurisdiction of the court that the prochein ami should exhibit with the bill evidence of special authority to bring it as next friend.[37]

3. Filing Bond for Costs.—In Illinois it is not necessary for jurisdiction that a bond for costs be filed by the guardian ad litem although, according to the letter of the statute, the next friend may be required to give such a bond before the suit proceeds to final judgment and execution.[38] age adopted the partition as made and assented to by their guardians in that year. The minor, Grant H. Short, whose property was sold to one of the defendants, received the benefit of the moneys obtained upon the sale; they were used to pay some just debts incurred for him, and to furnish him the necessaries of life. For eleven years after he became of age he made no objection to the proceedings, or by any act indicated his intention to disaffirm the sale or deed made by his guardian; and then, in 1878, he gave to the grantors of the appellant a deed of his interest in the donation claim. In the meantime the property had greatly increased in value by the improvements put upon it by the purchaser and his grantee, Mary Schofield." Brazee v. Schofield, 124 U. S. 495, 504, 31 L. Ed. 484.

32. Duty of courts.—United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 143, 8 L. Ed. 890.

It is the duty of the court to protect the interests of minors. Coulson v. Walton, 9 Pet. 62, 9 L. Ed. 51.

33. "An infant is confessedly under the protection of courts of law as well as courts of equity." Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 21, 21 L. Ed. 73.

Court of equity have general authority over the persons and estates of infants; it may be exerted, upon proper application, for the protection of both. Insurance Co. v. Bangs, 103 U. S. 435, 438, 26 L. Ed. 580.

"The jurisdiction in the English courts of chancery is supposed to have originated in the prerogative of the crown, arising from its general duty as parens patriæ to protect persons who have no other rightful protector." Insurance Co. v. Bangs, 103 U. S. 435, 438, 26 L. Ed. 580.

34. Infants defend by guardian; to be appointed by the court.—United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 143, 8 L. Ed. 890.

In Illinois, where an infant is so young as to be incapable of making a selection of a person to represent him, the court will, in favor of such infant, permit any person to institute suits in the infant's behalf, exercising, however, a very large discretion to facilitate the proper exercise of the right. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 679, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

Though not error, it is a mark of inexcusable attention to appoint, on the motion of counsel for the plaintiffs, a guardian ad litem for an infant, without bringing the infant into court, or issuing a commission for the purpose of making the appointment. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 143, 8 L. Ed. 890.

35. United States Bank v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128, 143, 8 L. Ed. 890.

Sections 372 and 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure of California, which require the appointment of a guardian, has reference to civil actions as distinguished from "special proceedings," and do not forbid the appointment of an attorney to represent infants in a probate court. Robinson v. Fair, 128 U. S. 53, 55, 89, 32 L. Ed. 415.

In Colt v. Colt, 111 U. S. 566, 578, 28 L. Ed. 520, an infant was properly served with notice in a state court, but was defended by a general guardian instead of a guardian ad litem in accordance with the general practice of the state, for which he brought as error before the supreme court. Held, that the question was one of local jurisdiction, and that the failure to appoint a guardian ad litem at most was error merely and did not defeat the jurisdiction.

36. Morgan v. Potter, 157 U. S. 195, 198. 39 L. Ed. 670.

"It is the infant, and not the next friend, who is the real and proper party. The next friend, by whom the suit is brought on behalf of the infant, is neither technically nor substantially the party, but resembles an attorney, or a guardian ad litem, by whom a suit is brought or defended in behalf of another." Morgan v. Potter, 157 U. S. 195, 198, 39 L. Ed. 670.

37. Necessity to show authority.—Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 679, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

38. Filing bonds for costs.—Kingsbury

4. Duties.—The next friend or guardian ad litem must exercise good faith in carrying out his duties,[39] and should not surrender the rights of the infant.[40]

C. Service of Process.—See the title Summons and Process.

D. Effect of Appearance by Infant.—See the title Appearances, vol. 2, p. 431.

E. Pleading.—Where one was present at the time his guardian ad litem swore to an answer, he cannot afterward repudiate it in a collateral proceeding on the ground that he was over age at the time the answer was made.[41]

F. Evidence.—See the title Evidence, vol. 5, p. 1004.

G. Statute of Limitations.—See the title Limitation of Actions and Adverse Possession.

H. Judgments and Decrees.—See the title Judgments and Decrees.

INFECTIOUS.—See Contagious, vol. 4, p. 530.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.—See the titles Animals, vol. 1, p. 324; Health, ante p. 681.

INFERIOR COURTS.—See the title Courts, vol. 4, pp. 885, 889.

INFIRMITIES.—See the title Accident Insurance, vol. 1, p. 60.

IN FORMA PAUPERIS.—See the titles Appeal and Error, vol. 2, p. 425; Costs, vol. 4, p. 823.

v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 678, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

39. In Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 686, 33 L. Ed. 1047, it was held that fraud could not be imputed to a guardian ad litem on the grounds that he waived the benefit of a statutory provision requiring ten days notice for the suing out of a commission to take depositions.

Fraud will not be imputed to a guardian ad litem because he did not, after his appointment by the court, file cross interrogatories, where such cross interrogatories were already filed by his partner, and were of the most searching character. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 686, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

Fraud and collusion, by a guardian ad litem, is not shown by the fact that he did not call the attention of the court to various theories against a deed of trust; nor does absence from the opinion of that court of any reference to it prove that the guardian ad litem and next friend failed to make the point, or that he purposely avoided allusion to it. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 683, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

The mere failure of the guardian ad litem and next friend to apply for a rehearing will not raise any presumption of infidelity to his trust. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 687, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

40. A next friend or guardian ad litem of an infant cannot, by admissions or stipulations, in a suit in equity, surrender the rights of the infant. But this rule does not prevent a guardian ad litem or prochein ami from assenting to such arrangements as will facilitate the determination of the case in which the rights of the infant are involved. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 680, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

A prochein ami cannot, during the minority of the heirs, authorize any release to be taken, which does not conform to a decree in their favor, so as to make it binding upon them. Morris v. Harmer, 7 Pet. 554, 563, 8 L. Ed. 781.

A consent by the next friend or guardian ad litem that a case be heard in a particular division of the supreme court of Illinois cannot possibly prejudice the substantial rights of an infant, even though in the absence of consent, the supreme court, sitting in one grand division, cannot take cognizance of a case from another grand division. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 681, 33 L. Ed. 1047.

Ignorance.—Where a consent decree was rendered against an infant, it cannot be objected on the ground that his guardian ad litem was a woman ignorant and unfamiliar with business or her duties, if there was no fraud, imposition or error entered into the transaction or brought about the settlement, and her interests were looked after by her brother-in-law and counsel. Thompson v. Maxwell Land Grant, etc., Co., 168 U. S. 451, 466, 42 L. Ed. 539.

41. Pleading.—Manson v. Duncanson, 166 U. S. 533, 542, 41 L. Ed. 1105.

The Pennsylvania court has held that infancy may be given in evidence under the plea of non assumpsit, and that the jury could decide whether the evidence is a sufficient discharge. Stansbury v. Marks, 4 Dall. (Pa. Sup. Ct.) 130, 1 L. Ed. 771. See the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004.

INFORMATION.—See the title INDICTMENTS, INFORMATIONS, PRESENTMENTS AND COMPLAINTS. See note 1.

INFORMATION AND BELIEF.—See the title ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, p. 677.

INFORMATIONS IN EQUITY.—To cancel land patents, see the title PUBLIC LANDS; against a corporation, see the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 764.

INFORMERS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the title PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.

As to power of attorney general to dismiss suit against objection of informer, see the title ATTORNEY GENERAL, vol. 2, p. 741. As to right to give information, see the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 486. As to right of informers of gambling, see the title GAMING, ante, p. 544. As to competency of informer as witness, see the title WITNESSES.

Rights and Interest of Informer—Government May Give Whole of Forfeiture to Informer.—The government has the right to give the whole instead of a moiety of the forfeit to the informer.[1a]

Under Revenue Laws.—Legislation giving an interest in the forfeiture to a common informer has been frequent in congressional legislation relating to revenue cases.[2]

Under Confiscation Act.—An informer does not acquire a right to a moiety under the confiscation act of August 6th, 1861, in regard to land informed against, after a complete title to the property has been acquired by the government, by conquest.[3] And in prosecutions under the act, which subjects to confiscation, upon libel filed, property whose owner used or consented to its use in aiding the rebellion, the informer has no vested interest in the subject matter of the suits.[4]

Divesting of Informer's Share by Repeal of Statute.—The repeal of the act of July 13, 1866, allowing a share to an informer, only upon condition the fine or penalty was fixed and the amounts thereof was paid, by the act of July 6, 1872, leaves nothing to the informer, if before the repeal the fine or penalty was not fixed by judgment or compromise;[5] but if the penalty was com-

1. Information.—See United States v. Poinier, 140 U. S. 160, 161, 35 L. Ed. 395.

Information in the nature of quo warranto.—See the title QUO WARRANTO.

1a. Government may give whole of forfeiture to informer.—Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 226, 50 L. Ed. 151.

2. Under revenue laws.—Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 225, 50 L. Ed. 151. See the title REVENUE LAWS.

3. Interest of informer under confiscation act.—Titus v. United States, 20 Wall. 475, 22 L. Ed. 400.

The government is not estopped from denying an informer's claim to a moiety in such a case (a) by the fact that its direct attorney has allowed proceedings in confiscation to be carried on under the act and the land to be sold, and the purchase money to be received; (b) or by the fact that the commissioner of the freedom's bureau, to whom, as agent of the United States, congress gives the control and management of all captured and abandoned land, never claimed the land itself, but after it had been sold and the price paid into court, and a moiety adjudged to the informer, has taken the other moiety without question. Titus v. United States, 20 Wall. 475, 22 L. Ed. 400.

The case of an informer in such a case stands on a very different footing, and is to be judged of by very different principles of estoppel, from that of a purchaser of the land, who has paid his money to the United States in consequence of their offer to sell under the act. Titus v. United States, 20 Wall. 475, 22 L. Ed. 400.

4. Confiscation Cases, 7 Wall. 454, 19 L. Ed. 196. See the titles STATES; TREASON; WAR.

Who may claim informer's share.—The right to recover the penalty or forfeiture granted by statute is frequently given to the first common informer who brings the action, although he has no interest in the matter whatever except as such informer. Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 225, 50 L. Ed. 151.

In 1861, in 12 Stat. 292, 296, § 11, one moiety of the forfeiture is given "to him who shall first sue for the same." Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 226, 50 L. Ed. 151.

5. United States v. Connor, 138 U. S. 61, 34 L. Ed. 860.

promised and paid, the act of 1872 did not take away the power to make the payment to such informer.[6]

Remission of Penalty as Affecting Right of Informer.—All rights granted to informers by the Revised Statutes, § 5294, are subject to the secretary of treasury's power of remission, except in cases where the claim of any informer to a share of any penalty has been determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, prior to the application for the remission of the penalty.[7]

Action by Informer.—Statutes providing for actions by a common informer, who himself had no interest whatever in the controversy other than that given by statute, have been in existence for hundreds of years in England, and in this country ever since the foundation of our government.[8]

Limitation of Actions.—A suit commenced by an informer twelve years after an adjudication of the claim has been determined against the informer, is barred by the statute of limitation.[9]

INFRINGEMENT.—See the titles COPYRIGHT, vol. 4, p. 614; PATENTS; TRADEMARKS, TRADENAMES AND UNFAIR COMPETITION.

INHABITANT.—See the titles ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, p. 671; CITIZENSHIP, vol. 3, p. 789; DOMICILE, vol. 4, p. 475. As to the use of the term "inhabitants" as affecting corporations, see the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 646. See note 1.

INHERITANCE.—See the title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, vol. 5, p. 335. As to inheritance tax, see the title SUCCESSION TAXES, and references given.

INHERITED.—See note 2.

INITIALS.—See, generally, the title NAMES. As to signing bill of exceptions by initials, see the title EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF, AND STATEMENT OF FACTS OF APPEAL, vol. 6, p. 38.

6. An informer gave notice that a railroad company had violated the revenue law. The penalty therefor was paid by the company. The informer applied for payment of his share under the act of July 13, 1866. It was held by a divided court that the power to make payment was not taken away by the act of June 6, 1872, and he was entitled to his claim. United States v. Ramsay, 120 U. S. 214, 30 L. Ed. 582.

7. Remission of penalty as affecting right of informer.—The Laura, 114 U. S. 411, 413, 29 L. Ed. 147; United States v. Morris, 10 Wheat. 246, 6 L. Ed. 314.

8. Action by informer.—Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 225. L. Ed. 151.

Although, under the act of August 6th, 1861, "to confiscate property used for insurrectionary purposes," an informer may file an information along with the attorney general, and so make the proceeding enure, under the act, to his own benefit equally as to the benefit of the United States, yet, after the proceeding has been instituted by the attorney general alone, and wholly for the benefit of the United States, and after issue has been joined and proofs furnished by other parties, no person can come in asserting himself to have been the informer, and so share the benefit of the proceeding. Francis v. United States, 5 Wall. 338, 18 L. Ed. 603.

9. Limitation to right to maintain action.—United States v. Connor, 138 U. S. 61, 34 L. Ed. 860. See the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS AND ADVERSE POSSESSION.

1. Inhabitant.—As to the use of the word inhabitant in the sense of "legal voters," see Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683, 694, 26 L. Ed. 526. As to distinction between the words inhabitant and "resident," see Barney v. Oelrichs, 138 U. S. 529, 533, 34 L. Ed. 1037; Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co., 145 U. S. 444, 447, 36 L. Ed. 768; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Gonzales, 151 U. S. 496, 500, 38 L. Ed. 248. And see RESIDENCE.

2. Inherited.—A testator provided that after the decease of all of his children, and when and as soon as his youngest grandchild should arrive at the age of twenty-one years, the lands should be "inheited and equally divided" among his grandchildren. In construing the will, the court said: "The word inherited (which is applied to the real estate only) implies taking immediately from the testator upon his death, as heirs take immediately from their ancestor upon his death." McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 380, 28 L. Ed. 1015.

INJUNCTIONS.

BY R. C. WALKER.

I. Scope of Title, 1026.

II. Definition and Classification, 1026.
- A. Definition, 1026.
- B. Prohibitory and Mandatory, 1026.
- C. Interlocutory or Temporary and Perpetual, 1026.

III. Nature, Object and Operation, 1027.
- A. Nature and Object, 1027.
- B. Operation, 1027.

IV. Jurisdiction, 1027.
- A. In General, 1027.
- B. As Affected by Parties and Subject Matter, 1027.
- C. Over Particular Parties and Subject Matter, 1027.
  1. United States Government, 1027.
  2. State Government, 1027.
  3. Public Officers, 1028.
     a. Injunction against, 1028.
        (1) Officers of United States, 1028.
        (2) Officers of States, 1028.
     b. Appointment or Removal of Public Officers, 1028.
  4. Legislative Bodies, 1028.
  5. Proceedings in Federal and State Courts, 1029.
     a. Proceedings in State Courts, 1029.
     b. Proceedings in Federal Courts, 1030.
  6. Enjoining Commission of Crime, 1030.
  7. Enjoining Prosecution and Punishment of Crime, 1030.
  8. Public Nuisances, 1031.
  9. Circuit Court Granting Injunctions Outside of Circuit, 1031.
- D. Waiver or Failure to Raise Jurisdictional Question, 1031.

V. Right to Relief, 1031.
- A. Rules and Principles Governing Issuance, 1031.
  1. In General, 1031.
     a. Discretion of Court, 1031.
     b. Applicant Must Come Clearly within Rules, 1031.
     c. Injunctions against Public Policy, 1031.
     d. Interest of Defendant to Be Considered, 1032.
  2. As Dependent on Right, Title or Interest of Plaintiff, 1032.
     a. In General, 1032.
        (1) Right Must Be Clear, 1032.
        (2) Sufficiency of Right, Title or Interest, 1032.
           (a) In General, 1032.
           (b) Interest Too Remote, 1034.
           (c) Sufficiency of Interest of United States, 1034.
           (d) Sufficiency of Interest of State, 1034.
     b. Prior Establishment of Right or Title, 1034.
        (1) In General, 1034.
        (2) Temporary Injunctions—Preservation of Property, 1035.
        (3) Injunction Following as of Course, 1035.
  3. Grounds of Equitable Jurisdiction, 1035.

a. Inadequacy of Other Remedies, 1035.
(1) In General, 1035.
(2) What Constitutes Adequate Remedy, 1038.
(3) In Cases of Illegal Taxation, 1039.
(4) Interstate Commerce Cases, 1039.
b. Multiplicity of Suits, 1040.
c. Nature of Injury Giving Equity Jurisdiction, 1040.
(1) Reasonable Apprehension of Injury, 1040.
(2) Irreparable Injury—Not Compensated in Damages, 1041.
(3) Where Act Sought to Be Enjoined Completed, 1044.
d. Fraud, Accident or Mistake, 1044.
e. Cloud on Title, 1045.
f. Unconstitutionality of Statute, 1045.
4. Conduct of Plaintiff as Affecting Right, 1046.
a. In General, 1046.
b. Offer to Do Equity, 1046.
c. Laches and Negligence, 1046.
(1) In General, 1046.
(2) Government and Officials, 1048.
B. In Particular Instances, 1048.
1. In General, 1048.
2. Against Actions at Law and Other Legal Proceedings, 1048.
a. Actions at Law, 1048.
(1) In Whose Favor it May Issue, 1048.
(2) Grounds of Jurisdiction, 1048.
(a) Inadequacy of Legal Remedy, 1048.
(b) Equitable Defenses in General, 1049.
(c) Multiplicity of Suits, 1049.
(d) Fraud, 1050.
(e) Former Suit Pending in Equity in Foreign Jurisdiction, 1050.
b. Restraining Interposition of Inequitable Defenses, 1050.
c. Ancillary Jurisdiction, 1050.
d. Courts Having Concurrent Jurisdiction, 1050.
e. Inferior Boards or Tribunals of Special Jurisdiction, 1051.
f. Enjoining Proceedings in Other States, 1051.
g. Proceedings in Federal and State Courts, 1051.
h. Prosecution and Punishment of Crime, 1051.
3. Trade Secrets, 1051.

VI. Procedure to Obtain, 1051.

A. Jurisdiction, 1051.
B. Parties, 1051.
1. In General, 1051.
2. Parties Plaintiff, 1052.
3. Parties Defendant, 1052.
a. Proper and Necessary Parties, 1052.
b. Retaining Jurisdiction until Conflicting Rights Litigated, 1053.
C. Notice, 1053.
D. Pleading, 1054.
1. Bill or Complaint—Form and Requisites, 1054.
a. Allegations as to Grounds of Application, 1054.
(1) Certainty and Clearness, 1054.
(2) Allegation of Facts—Sufficiency of Allegation, 1054.
(a) In General, 1054.
(b) Particular Allegations, 1055.
aa. Allegations as to Right or Title of Complainant, 1055.

bb. Averment of Inadequacy of Other Remedies, 1055.
cc. Averment of Facts Constituting Injury, 1055.
dd. Fraud, 1055.
ee. Offer to Do Equity, 1055.
b. Prayer, 1056.
c. Verification, 1056.
2. Effect of Filing Bill, 1056.
3. Defendants' Pleading, 1056.
a. Answer, 1056.
(1) Necessity for Answer by All Defendants—Perpetual Injunction, 1056.
(2) Verification, 1056.
(3) Operation and Effect, 1056.
b. Demurrer, 1057.
E. Discretion of Court, 1057.
1. In General, 1057.
2. Imposition of Terms, 1057.
a. In General, 1057.
b. Relief from Conditions, 1057.
F. Evidence, 1057.
1. Presumptions and Burden of Proof, 1057.
2. Weight and Sufficiency, 1058.
G. Dismissal of Bill, 1058.
1. In General—Grounds for Dismissal, 1058.
2. Operation and Effect, 1058.
H. Trial and Hearing, 1058.
I. Writ or Order, 1058.
1. In General, 1058.
2. Operation and Effect, 1058.
a. In General, 1058.
b. Void Order, 1059.
J. Dissolution, Continuance and Modification of Preliminary Injunction, 1059.
K. Final Decree, 1059.
1. Against Whom Entered, 1059.
2. Scope of Restraint, 1059.
a. Dependent on Bill or Complaint, 1059.
b. Limitation of Decree to Relief Sought, 1059.
(1) In General, 1059.
(2) In Particular Cases, 1060.
(a) Against Carriers, 1060.
(b) Abatement of Nuisances, 1060.
(c) Illegal Taxation or Assessment, 1060.
(d) Injunction against Unreasonable Rates, 1060.
3. Alternative Relief, 1061.
L. Expiration of Injunction, 1061.
M. Injunction on Final Decree, 1061.

VII. Dissolution and Continuance, 1061.
A. Continuance or Expiration, 1061.
B. Dissolution of Injunction, 1062.
1. Power to Dissolve—Discretion of Court, 1062.
2. Grounds for Dissolution, 1062.
3. Dissolution on Bill, 1062.
4. Dissolution upon Coming in of Answer, 1062.

VIII. Modification or Suspension Pending Appeal, 1062.

IX. Reinstatement, Revival or Renewal, 1062.

X. Bond, 1063.
A. Right to Require, 1063.
B. Necessity for, 1063.
C. Conditions and Penalties, 1063.
1. Condition, 1063.
2. Penalty, 1064.
D. Construction of Bond, 1064.
E. Liability on Bond, 1064.
1. In General, 1064.
2. Joint and Several Obligors, 1064.
3. Raising Question of Illegality, 1064.
4. When Liability Accrues, 1064.
F. Procedure on Bond, 1064.
G. Damages, 1065.
1. In General, 1065.
2. Items Covered by Bond, 1066.

XI. Remedies for Wrongful Injunction, 1066.
A. Assessment of Damages on Bond, 1066.
B. Action on Bond, 1066.
C. Remedies Other than on Bond, 1066.

XII. Violation of Injunction, 1066.
A. In General, 1066.
1. What Constitutes, 1066.
2. Power to Punish, 1066.
3. Not an Execution of Criminal Laws, 1066.
B. Knowledge or Notice, 1067.
C. Defense, Justification or Excuse, 1067.
1. In General, 1067.
2. Statutory Authority for Performance of Act, 1067.
3. Violation of Void Writ, 1067.
D. Procedure and Punishment, 1067.
1. In General, 1067.
2. Service of Order to Show Cause, 1067.
3. Punishment—Object of, 1068.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles ABATEMENT, REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL, vol. 1, p. 12; AMENDMENTS, vol. 1, p. 288; APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 333; ASSIGNMENT FOR THE BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 2, p. 599; ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT, vol. 2, p. 660; BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 257; BONDS, vol. 3, p. 382; CLERKS OF COURT, vol. 3, p. 849; CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 531; CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552; COSTS, vol. 4, p. 802; COUNTIES, vol. 4, p. 825; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 861; CROSS BILLS, vol. 5, p. 133; DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 157; DEMURRERS, vol. 5, p. 293; DISMISSAL, DISCONTINUANCE AND NONSUIT, vol. 5, p. 356; EASEMENTS, vol. 5, p. 690; ELECTION OF REMEDIES, vol. 5, p. 719; ELECTIONS, vol. 5, p. 721; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746; EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; EXECUTIONS, ante, p. 84; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, ante, p. 119; EXEMPLARY DAMAGES, ante, p. 193; FOREIGN JUDGMENTS, RECORDS AND JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS, ante, p. 335; FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394; FRAUDULENT AND VOLUNTARY CONVEYANCES, ante, p. 472; ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, ante, p. 737; INDEMNITY, ante, p. 902; JUDGMENTS AND DECREES; LIS PENDENS; MANDAMUS; MISTAKE AND ACCIDENT; MORTGAGES AND DEEDS OF TRUST; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL AID; MUNICIPAL, COUNTY, STATE AND FEDERAL SECURITIES; NAVIGABLE WATERS; NUISANCES; OFFICERS AND AGENTS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS; PARTIES; PARTNERSHIP; PATENTS; PLEADING; PUBLIC OFFICERS; RECEIVERS; RES ADJUDICATA; SHERIFFS', CONSTABLES' AND MARSHALS' SALES; SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE; STREETS AND HIGHWAYS; TAXATION; TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONES; TRADEMARKS, TRADENAMES AND UNFAIR COMPETITION; TRESPASS; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; VENDOR AND PURCHASER; VENUE; WASTE; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES; WORKING CONTRACTS.

I. Scope of Title.

The scope of this title is limited to the definition, nature and office of the remedy; the general rules under which such remedy is available; injunctions against actions at law and other proceedings; the procedure in obtaining, dissolving, modifying and reinstating; the securities given to obtain, dissolve, etc., the injunction, liabilities thereon, and enforcement of such liabilities; violation of injunctions and punishment. As to injunction in particular instances, see the particular titles throughout this work, and see the table of cross references following the analysis of this title.

II. Definition and Classification.

A. Definition.—An injunction in its ordinary sense is a command, and this command may be either to do or to refrain from doing some particular thing.[1]

B. Prohibitory and Mandatory.—Injunctions are prohibitory or mandatory in their character.[2] It is generally a preventive, not an affirmative remedy.[3] While the function of an injunction is to afford preventive relief, not to redress alleged wrongs which have been committed already,[4] yet a court of equity, is not always limited to the restraint of a contemplated or threatened action; it may require affirmative action, where the circumstances of the case demand it.[5] The court having jurisdiction in personam has power to require the defendant to do or to refrain from doing anything beyond the limits of its territorial jurisdiction which it might have required to be done or omitted within the limits of such territory.[6]

C. Interlocutory or Temporary and Perpetual.—Injunctions are also classified as interlocutory or temporary,[7] and perpetual.[8]

1. Definition.—Bisph. Eq. 519. See French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 250, 252, 22 L. Ed. 857.

2. Prohibitory or mandatory.—In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 556, 41 L. Ed. 1110; Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 361, 44 L. Ed. 801. See, also, Potts v. Hollen, 177 U. S. 365, 44 L. Ed. 808.

In In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 556, 41 L. Ed. 1110, the court says: "Perhaps, to a certain extent, the injunction may be termed mandatory, although its object was to continue the existing state of things, and to prevent an arbitrary breaking off of the current business connections between the roads."

3. Remedy usually preventive.—Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. 481, 483, 18 L. Ed. 930; Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 15 How. 233, 242, 14 L. Ed. 674.

4. Function of injunction.—Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 124, 36 L. Ed. 363; Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 361, 44 L. Ed. 801. In the case first cited, it was held that the injunction was not subject to the objection that it is an attempt to compel performance of a personal contract by employees of a railroad company.

The injunction is a prohibitory writ, to restrain a party from doing a wrong or injury to the rights of another. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 77, 8 L. Ed. 25. (Dissenting opinion.)

"An injunction will not be used to take property out of the possession of one party and put it into that of another." Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 124, 36 L. Ed. 363.

5. Affirmative relief.—In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 556, 41 L. Ed. 1110; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 673, 31 L. Ed. 205.

"It is sometimes used in the latter character, but this is in cases where it is used by the court to carry into effect its own decrees—as in putting the purchaser under a decree of foreclosure of a mortgage into the possession of the premises." Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. 481, 483, 18 L. Ed. 930.

6. Equity has jurisdiction in personam.—French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 250, 252, 22 L. Ed. 857. See Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 77, 8 L. Ed. 25. (Dissenting opinion.)

7. Interlocutory.—Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 402, 406, 408, 1 L. Ed. 433; United States v. Chicago, 7 How. 185, 191, 12 L. Ed. 660.

8. Perpetual.—Bisphams Eq., p. 525 (6th Ed.); Kerr on Inj., chap. 2. See Wickliffe v. Owings, 17 How. 47, 49, 15 L. Ed. 44.

III. Nature, Object and Operation.

A. Nature and Object.—The injunction is a beneficial process for the protection of rights, and is favorably viewed by courts of chancery, as its object is to prevent rather than redress injuries.[9] A suit for an injunction is an equitable proceeding.[10]

B. Operation.—The writ does not operate in rem but in personam.[11] An injunction issues only to the parties before the court and not to the court.[12]

IV. Jurisdiction.

A. In General.—There must be some interference, actual or threatened, with property or rights of a pecuniary nature, to give chancery jurisdiction to exercise the injunctive powers of the court.[13]

B. As Affected by Parties and Subject Matter.—Courts having jurisdiction of the parties may grant and enforce injunctions, regardless of the situation of the subject matter affected by the injunction.[14]

C. Over Particular Parties and Subject Matter—1. UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.—No injunction can be granted against the United States unless expressly permitted by act of congress.[15]

2. STATE GOVERNMENT.—By the constitution of the United States, the states

9. Nature and object.—Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 77, 8 L. Ed. 25. (Dissenting opinion.)

10. An equitable proceeding.—Wilson v. Shaw, 204 U. S. 24, 31, 51 L. Ed. 351. See, generally, the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

11. Operates in personam.—French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 250, 252, 22 L. Ed. 857; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 25 L. Ed. 473.

If the party is within the jurisdiction of the court, it is all that is necessary to give full effect and operation to the injunction; and it is immaterial where the subject matter of the suit, which is only affected consequentially, is situated. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 77, 8 L. Ed. 25. (Dissenting opinion.)

This principle is recognized in Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch 148, 157, 3 L. Ed. 181, where it is laid down that in case of fraud, of trust or of contract, the jurisdiction of a court of chancery is sustainable wherever the party may be found, although lands not within the jurisdiction may be affected by the decree. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 77, 8 L. Ed. 25. (Dissenting opinion.)

12. Issues only to parties and not to court.—Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 463, 42 L. Ed. 807; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. Ed. 841.

13. Jurisdiction—Interference actual or threatened.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 583, 39 L. Ed. 1092. See post, "Nature of Injury Giving Equity Jurisdiction," V, A, 3, c.

14. Court having jurisdiction of the parties.—Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 25 L. Ed. 473; French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 250, 252, 22 L. Ed. 857; Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch 148, 3 L. Ed. 181; Cherokee Nat. v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 77, 8 L. Ed. 25. See ante, "Operation," III, B.

15. Injunction against United States.—Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 17, 40 L. Ed. 599; United States v. McLemore, 4 How. 286, 11 L. Ed. 977; Hill v. United States, 9 How. 386, 13 L. Ed. 185; Case v. Terrell, 11 Wall. 199, 20 L. Ed. 134. See the title UNITED STATES.

Where the United States, as indorsees of a promissory note, recovered judgment against the makers thereof, who thereupon filed a bill upon the equity side of the court, and obtained an injunction to stay proceedings, this injunction was improvidently allowed. The United States were made directly parties defendants; process was prayed immediately against them, and they were called upon to answer the several allegations in the bill. This course of proceeding falls within the principle that the government is not liable to be sued, except by its own consent, given by law. The bill must therefore be dismissed. Hill v. United States, 9 How. 386, 13 L. Ed. 185.

Suit virtually against government.—Complainant as the owner of letters patent for a canceling and postmarking machine brought suit against a postmaster to restrain him from using infringing machines which were in his post office used exclusively by his subordinates, employees of the United States, such use being in the service of the United States, the machines having been hired by the post office department for a term not yet expired from the manufacturer at an agreed rental payable on the order of the department by whose order they were placed and used in the post office. Held, that the suit was virtually one against the United States and the circuit court of the United States has not the power to grant an injunction against the defendant restraining the use of the machines pending the leased period. International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce, 194 U. S. 601, 48 L. Ed. 1134.

are as exempt from injunction, as is the United States government.[16]

3. Public Officers—a. Injunction against—(1) Officers of United States.—The supreme court has no jurisdiction of a bill to enjoin the president in the performance of his official duties; and no such bill ought to be received.[17] No state court can, by injunction or otherwise, prevent federal officers from collecting federal taxes. The government of the United States, within its sphere, is independent of state action; and certainly it would be a strange thing if a state court by its action could relieve property subject to federal taxation from liability to pay the taxes when they are due.[18]

(2) Officers of States.—In a suit to which the state is neither formally nor really a party, its officers, although acting by its order and for its benefit, may be restrained by injunction, when the remedy at law is inadequate, from doing positive acts, for which they are personally and individually liable, taking or injuring the plaintiff's property, contrary to a plain official duty requiring no exercise of discretion, and in violation of the constitution or laws of the United States.[19]

Where State Is Necessary Party.—But no injunction can be issued against officers of a state, to restrain or control the use of property already in the possession of the state, or money in its treasury, when the suit is commenced; or to compel the state to perform its obligations; or where the state has otherwise such an interest in the object of the suit as to be a necessary party.[20]

Officer Proceeding Unconstitutionally.—Injunctions against officers proceeding unconstitutionally under color of their office are well known.[21]

b. Appointment or Removal of Public Officers.—A court of equity has no jurisdiction over the appointment and removal of public officers, and to sustain a bill in equity to restrain or relieve against proceedings for the removal of public officers would invade the domain of the courts of common law, or of the executive and administrative departments of the government.[22]

4. Legislative Bodies.—The courts must not assume to control the discretion with which municipal assemblies are invested, when deliberating upon the

16. State government.—Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 18, 40 L. Ed. 599; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 33 L. Ed. 842. See the title STATES.

17. Public officers—President.—Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 475, 501, 18 L. Ed. 437. See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 277; PUBLIC OFFICERS. As to injunctions against land officers, see the title PUBLIC LANDS.

18. State enjoining federal officers.—Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441, 443, 25 L. Ed. 327. See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 130, 186, 191; TAXATION.

19. Public officers of states.—Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 18, 40 L. Ed. 599; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 868, 871, 6 L. Ed. 204; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 541, 23 L. Ed. 623; Allen v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 311, 29 L. Ed. 200; Pennover v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. Ed. 363. See the title PUBLIC OFFICERS.

"The extent to which officers or agents of the government may be restrained by injunction from doing unlawful acts to the prejudice of private rights is illustrated by the decisions of this court regarding injunctions from the courts of the United States to officers and agents of a state, which, by the Constitution of the United States, is as exempt as the United States are from private suit. Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 33 L. Ed. 842." Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 18, 40 L. Ed. 599.

20. Where state is necessary party.—Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 18, 40 L. Ed. 599; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 720, 728, 27 L. Ed. 448; Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 446, 454, 457, 27 L. Ed. 992; Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52, 70, 29 L. Ed. 805; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. Ed. 216; North Carolina v. Temple, 134 U. S. 22, 33 L. Ed. 849; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 684, 34 L. Ed. 304.

21. Officer proceeding unconstitutionally.—Chandler v. Dix, 194 U. S. 590, 592, 48 L. Ed. 1129, citing Pennover v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. Ed. 363; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. Ed. 761.

22. Appointment or removal of public officers.—White v. Berry, 171 U. S. 366, 376, 43 L. Ed. 199; White v. Butler, 171 U. S. 379, 43 L. Ed. 204; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 223, 31 L. Ed. 402. See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; PUBLIC OFFICERS.

The power of a court of equity to restrain by injunction the removal of a municipal officer is denied. In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 212, 31 L. Ed. 402.

adoption or rejection of ordinances proposed for their adoption.[23]

5. Proceedings in Federal and State Courts—a. Proceedings in State Courts.—A court of the United States cannot enjoin a party from proceeding in a state court,[24] except in bankruptcy cases.[25] But where the federal court has acquired jurisdiction of a cause, it may enjoin actions in state courts, in order to protect its jurisdiction or as ancillary thereto.[26]

23. Legislative bodies.—See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 274; EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

The mischievous consequences that may result from the attempt of courts of equity to control the proceedings of municipal bodies when engaged in the consideration of matters entirely legislative in their character, are too apparent to permit such judicial action as this suit contemplates. When the city council shall pass an ordinance that infringes the rights of the plaintiff, and is unconstitutional and void as impairing the obligation of its contract with the state, it will be time enough for equity to interfere, and by injunction prevent the execution of such ordinance. If the ordinances already passed are in derogation of the plaintiff's contract rights, their enforcement can be prevented by appropriate proceedings instituted directly against the parties who seek to have the benefit of them. New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 471, 482, 41 L. Ed. 518.

A court has no authority to issue a mandatory injunction requiring a city to construct a sewer, irrespective of the exercise of discretion vested by law in the municipal authorities to determine the practicability of the sewer ordered, the availability of taxation for the purpose, and the like matters; "we think that the exercise of this authority is primarily vested in the municipality and not in the courts." Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 472, 50 L. Ed. 1102.

24. Proceedings in state courts.—Dial v. Reynolds, 96 U. S. 340, 24 L. Ed. 644; Hunt v. New York Cotton Exchange, 205 U. S. 322, 338, 51 L. Ed. 821; Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 29 L. Ed. 83; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 268, 38 L. Ed. 981; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. Ed. 807; United States v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co., 176 U. S. 317, 320, 44 L. Ed. 485; Diggs v. Wolcott, 4 Cranch 179, 2 L. Ed. 587; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 625, 12 L. Ed. 841; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 719, 20 L. Ed. 666; Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 254, 23 L. Ed. 345; Dial v. Reynolds, 96 U. S. 340, 24 L. Ed. 644; Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 348, 29 L. Ed. 412; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 219, 31 L. Ed. 402; United States v. Council, 6 Wall. 514, 18 L. Ed. 933; S. C., 6 Wall. 518, 18 L. Ed. 918; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 166, 195, 18 L. Ed. 768, followed in Weber v. Lee County, 6 Wall. 210, 18 L. Ed. 781; Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. Ed. 525; Leadville Coal Co. v. McCreery, 141 U. S. 475, 478, 35 L. Ed. 824; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Phelps, 190 U. S. 147, 159, 47 L. Ed. 987; Colby v. Ledden, 7 How. 626, 12 L. Ed. 847; Lawrence v. Morgan's R., etc., Co., 121 U. S. 634, 637, 30 L. Ed. 1018. See Parcher v. Cuddy, 110 U. S. 742, 743, 28 L. Ed. 313.

"In Bondurant v. Watson, 103 U. S. 281, 288, 26 L. Ed. 447, which was a suit removed from a state court on the application of the defendant after an injunction staying proceedings in the state court for his benefit had been granted, it was said: 'If W. had filed his petition for injunction in the state court, and before it was allowed had petitioned for a removal of the cause to the circuit court, with the design of applying to that court for his injunction, the objection to the right of removal would have force. That would have been an evasion of the statute.'" Lawrence v. Morgan's R., etc., Co., 121 U. S. 634, 636, 30 L. Ed. 1018.

Railroad commission not a court.—The commission (to supervise and to some extent control the acts of railroads in that state) is, however, not a court, and is a mere administrative agency of the state, as held by the Mississippi court. Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 203 U. S. 332, 341, 51 L. Ed. 209.

Staying criminal proceedings in state court.—The circuit court of the United States sitting in equity, in the administration of civil remedies, has no jurisdiction to stay by injunction proceedings pending in a state court in the name of the state to enforce the criminal laws of the state. Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. Ed. 535; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 170, 43 L. Ed. 399.

25. Bankruptcy cases.—See the title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 2, p. 450.

26. Ancillary jurisdiction.—French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 250, 22 L. Ed. 857; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204; Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 29 L. Ed. 406; Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co., 196 U. S. 239, 245, 49 L. Ed. 462. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 982, et seq.

In Dietzsch v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 494, 26 L. Ed. 497, a plaintiff in a replevin suit brought in a state court had properly removed it to the federal court and obtained a judgment there in his favor, but the state court proceeded to try the cause and render judgment against the plaintiff, notwithstanding the removal, and an action was then brought in the state court upon the replevin bond. It was

b. Proceedings in Federal Courts.—A state court has not jurisdiction to enjoin proceedings in the courts of the United States.[27]

6. Enjoining Commission of Crime.—That it is outside of the jurisdiction of a court of equity to enjoin the commission of crimes, is, as a general proposition, unquestioned. A chancellor has no criminal jurisdiction. But when interferences with property or rights of a pecuniary nature appear, the jurisdiction of a court of equity arises, and is not destroyed by the fact that they are accompanied by or are themselves violations of the criminal law.[28] For treatment of injunctions against commission of crime, see the title Equity, vol. 5, pp. 835, 837.

7. Enjoining Prosecution and Punishment of Crime.—A court of equity has no general power to enjoin or stay criminal proceedings,[29] unless they are instituted by a party to a suit already pending before it, and to try the same right that is in issue there,[30] or to prohibit the invasion of the rights of property held that the court of the United States might enjoin the prosecution of such action, the relief being merely ancillary to the jurisdiction already acquired and necessary to give effect to its own judgment.

27. State court enjoining federal court.—McKim v. Voorhies, 7 Cranch 279, 3 L. Ed. 342; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. Ed. 981; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. Ed. 660; Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. 301, 306, 11 L. Ed. 139; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 625, 12 L. Ed. 841; United States v. Council, 6 Wall. 514, 18 L. Ed. 933; S. C., 6 Wall. 518, 18 L. Ed. 918; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 460, 42 L. Ed. 807; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. Ed. 749; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. Ed. 257; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Gomila, 132 U. S. 478, 33 L. Ed. 400. See the title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 189.

The injunction of a state court is inoperative to control, or in any manner to affect the process or proceedings of a circuit court of the United States, not on account of any paramount jurisdiction in the latter courts, but because, in their sphere of action, circuit courts are wholly independent of the state tribunals. Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 166, 196, 18 L. Ed. 768, followed in Weber v. Lee County, 6 Wall. 210, 18 L. Ed. 781.

Mandamus from a federal court to officers of a county in a state, to levy a tax to pay interest on bonds issued by the county on which a relator has obtained judgment, and has no means of obtaining satisfaction but by the levy of a tax, cannot be, in any way, controlled by an injunction from a state court to those officers against a levy. Supervisors v. Durant, 9 Wall. 415, 19 L. Ed. 732.

It makes no difference whether the relator have been made a defendant to the proceeding in the state court for an injunction or not; nor whether the injunction have issued before or after his suit in the federal court was begun. Supervisors v. Durant, 9 Wall. 415, 19 L. Ed. 732.

An injunction from a state court against a city's levying a tax to pay certain bonds of the city, cannot be set up to prevent a mandamus from the federal courts ordering the city to levy a tax to pay a judgment obtained against it on those same bonds. Mayor v. Lord, 9 Wall. 409, 19 L. Ed. 704.

28. Enjoining the commission of crime.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 593, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

29. Enjoining prosecution and punishment of crime.—Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 217, 47 L. Ed. 782; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 209, 31 L. Ed. 402.

Thus, the enforcement of an ordinance by criminal proceedings may not be enjoined. Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 217, 47 L. Ed. 782.

The rule that a circuit court of the United States, sitting as a court of equity, cannot stay by injunction proceedings pending in a state court to enforce the criminal laws of such state, was applied in Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 43 L. Ed. 399, to a case where the plaintiff sought to enjoin proceedings against him for the embezzlement of the assets of a bank; and in Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. Ed. 535, to a suit brought by the receiver of a railroad against the attorney general of the state to restrain him from instituting or prosecuting criminal proceedings to enforce against the plaintiff the provisions of a state law reducing the tolls, which had been exacted of the public by the railroad, of which the plaintiff was receiver. This was held to be in reality a suit against the state to enjoin the institution of criminal proceedings, and hence within the general rule. Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 217, 47 L. Ed. 782. See, also, Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 47 L. Ed. 584.

30. Proceedings instituted by party already before court of equity.—Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 217, 47 L. Ed 782; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. Ed. 402.

Quære: "Even had he been made a by the enforcement of an unconstitutional law.[31]

8. Public Nuisances.—The jurisdiction of courts of equity to redress the grievance of public nuisances by injunction is undoubted and clearly established.[32]

9. Circuit Court Granting Injunctions Outside of Circuit.—It seems that circuit courts have no authority to grant injunction, in invitum, outside of their respective circuits.[33]

D. Waiver or Failure to Raise Jurisdictional Question.—In the cases where equity has interfered, although there existed an adequate remedy at law, it will be found, upon examination, that the question of jurisdiction was not raised, or was waived.[34]

V. Right to Relief.

A. Rules and Principles Governing Issuance—1. In General—a. Discretion of Court.—The granting or refusal of an injunction, either temporary or permanent, rests in the sound discretion of the court under the circumstances of the particular case.[35]

b. Applicant Must Come Clearly within Rules.—The remedy by injunction may and does sometimes become very far-reaching and oppressive, as well as speedy and effective, and should only be granted by courts of equity in cases where the applicants therefor bring themselves clearly within the well-defined and established rules authorizing its issuance.[36]

c. Injunctions against Public Policy.—If it appears that an injunction would be against public policy, the court properly may refuse to be made an instrument party, would equity entertain a bill to restrain criminal prosecutions? In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. Ed. 402; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 43 L. Ed. 399; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. Ed. 535." Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. United States, 187 U. S. 447, 452, 47 L. Ed. 253.

31. Enforcement of unconstitutional law restrained.—Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 217, 47 L. Ed. 782; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. Ed. 402.

It would seem that, if there were jurisdiction in a court of equity to enjoin the invasion of property rights through the instrumentality of an unconstitutional law, that jurisdiction would not be ousted by the fact that the state had chosen to assert its power to enforce such law by indictment or other criminal proceeding. Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 218, 47 L. Ed. 782.

Prosecution and void ordinance restrained.—Where property rights will be destroyed, unlawful interference by criminal proceedings under a void law or ordinance may be reached and controlled by a decree of a court of equity. Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 218, 47 L. Ed. 782; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 241, 49 L. Ed. 169, followed in Daly v. Elton, 195 U. S. 242, 49 L. Ed. 177.

32. Public nuisances.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 591, 39 L. Ed. 1092. See the title NUISANCES.

The jurisdiction of the court of chancery with regard to public nuisances is founded on the irreparable damage to individuals, or the great public injury which is likely to ensue. In no well-considered case has the power of a court of equity to interfere by injunction in cases of public nuisance been denied, the only denial ever being that of a necessity for the exercise of that jurisdiction under the circumstances of the particular case. In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 592, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

33. Circuit court granting injunction outside of circuit.—"We must not be understood as intimating an opinion that a circuit judge has power to grant injunctions, appoint receivers or enter orders or decrees, in invitum, outside of his circuit." In re Tampa Suburban R. Co., 168 U. S. 583, 588, 42 L. Ed. 589.

34. Waiver or failure to raise jurisdictional questions.—Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 110, 20 L. Ed. 65; Milwaukee v. Koeffiler, 116 U. S. 219, 223, 29 L. Ed. 612.

Whether or not a court of equity will grant an injunction to restrain the infringement of a patent which is about to expire, is a matter of discretion. Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 322, 30 L. Ed. 392. See the title PATENTS.

35. Discretion of court.—Buffington v. Harvey, 95 U. S. 99, 24 L. Ed. 381.

36. Applicant must come clearly within rules.—Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 124, 36 L. Ed. 368; Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 361, 44 L. Ed. 801, followed in Potts v. Hollen, 177 U. S. 365, 44 L. Ed. 808.

The writ of injunction should issue only in a clear case; it is an extraordinary process and should be used sparingly. Irwin v. Dixion, 9 How. 10, 13 L. Ed. 25.

for such a result, whatever the pleadings.[37]

d. Interest of Defendant to Be Considered.—A suit for an injunction being an equitable proceeding, the interests of the defendant are to be considered as well as those of the plaintiff.[38]

2. As Dependent on Right, Title or Interest of Plaintiff—a. In General—(1) Right Must Be Clear.—In order to obtain an injunction, complainant's right must, in general, be clear.[39] An injunction will not issue to enforce a right that is doubtful.[40] The bill should set forth a case of probable right.[41]

(2) Sufficiency of Right, Title or Interest—(a) In General.—The complainant must show an interest, right or title,[42] in the subject matter of the controversy before equity will interpose in his behalf. For illustrative cases, wherein the sufficiency of the right, title or interest of complainant was passed upon, see note.[43] When a plain official duty, requiring no exercise of discretion is threatened to be violated by some positive official act, any person who will sustain personal injury thereby, for which adequate compensation cannot be had at law, may

37. Injunctions against public policy.—In Beasley v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 191 U. S. 492, 498, 48 L. Ed. 274, the court say: "The defendant may desire the relief to be granted. It is suggested that it does. But the very meaning of public policy is the interest of others than the parties and that interest is not to be at the mercy of the defendant alone. See Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Dustin, 142 U. S. 492, 509, 35 L. Ed. 1092." See, also, Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192, 12 L. Ed. 111; Sample v. Barnes, 14 How. 70, 14 L. Ed. 330.

38. Interest of defendant to be considered.—Wilson v. Shaw, 204 U. S. 24, 31, 51 L. Ed. 351. See post, "Injunction Following as of Course," V, A, 2, b, (3).

"If one person is induced to do an act prejudicial to himself in consequence of the acts or declarations of another, on which he had a right to rely, equity will enjoin the latter from asserting his legal rights against the tenor of such acts or declarations. But, then, the person charged has an opportunity of explaining, and equity will decree according to the justice of the entire case." Branson v. Wirth, 17 Wall. 32, 42, 21 L. Ed. 566.

39. Right must be clear.—Truly v. Wanzer, 5 How. 141, 12 L. Ed. 88; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 536, 23 L. Ed. 623; Hunnewell v. Cass County, 22 Wall. 464, 22 L. Ed. 752.

40. Doubtful rights.—Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333; Consolidated Canal Co. v. Mesa Canal Co., 177 U. S. 296, 302, 44 L. Ed. 777; Parcher v. Cuddy, 110 U. S. 742, 743, 28 L. Ed. 313. See Irwin v. Dixion, 9 How. 10, 13 L. Ed. 25.

Injunction to stay proceedings in action at law.—In Parcher v. Cuddy, 110 U. S. 742, 28 L. Ed. 313, relief by injunction was denied where the right of complainant was doubtful and had in fact been twice denied in lower courts. See the title SUPERSEDEAS AND STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

41. Probable right.—Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 402, 1 L. Ed. 433.

In Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 402, 1 L. Ed. 433, the marshal was restrained from paying over money paid in satisfaction of an execution, until the rights of the plaintiff were determined, such rights not being determinable in the original suit.

A mortgage was executed by a debtor to his creditor for an unascertained balance of accounts, which sum named in the mortgage was supposed to be sufficient to cover. It did not prove to be sufficient, and the creditor obtained a judgment against the debtor for the residue. It was held that the payment of the sum named in the mortgage was no reason for an injunction to stay proceedings on the judgment. Gear v. Parish, 5 How. 168, 12 L. Ed. 100.

42. Right, title or interest.—Selz v. Unna, 6 Wall. 327, 18 L. Ed. 799. McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 679, 34 L. Ed. 304; Mayre v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 325, 29 L. Ed. 205; Zabriskie v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 23 How. 381, 16 L. Ed. 488; Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 221, 47 L. Ed. 782.

Equity will not grant relief where the allegations of the complainant show that he has no title nor interest in the subject matter of the dispute. Selz v. Unna, 6 Wall. 327, 18 L. Ed. 799.

43. A national bank may, on behalf of its stockholders, maintain a suit to enjoin the collection of a tax which has been unlawfully assessed on their shares by the state authorities. This was established by the cases of Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. Ed. 903; Pelton v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. Ed. 901. Hills v. Exchange Bank, 105 U. S. 319, 26 L. Ed. 1052.

The money received by the collector of taxes in payment of the special tax ordered by the county court to be collected for the payment of the judgment of the plaintiff and other judgment creditors, would, when collected, constitute a separate fund in the county treasury, applicable to this purpose, and if the special have an injunction to prevent it.[44] As a corporation cannot be said to have life or health or senses, the only ground on which it can obtain either damages or an injunction is injury to its property.[45] tax had been collected, the plaintiff would have had such an interest therein that a court of equity would at his instance enjoin its diversion to any purpose save that for which it had been levied and collected, and compel its payment to the satisfaction of the judgment of the plaintiff. Findlay v. McAllister, 113 U. S. 104, 110, 28 L. Ed. 930, citing Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 514, 515, 26 L. Ed. 197; Attorney General v. Dublin, 1 Bligh N. S. 312. And see Davies v. Corbin, 112 U. S. 36, 28 L. Ed. 627.

Chancery will not interfere to prevent an insolvent debtor from alienating his property to avoid an existing or prospective debt, even when there is a suit pending to establish it. Adler v. Fenton, 24 How. 407, 411, 16 L. Ed. 696.

Those only who have a clear, legal, and equitable title to land, connected with possession, have a right to claim the interference of a court of equity, to give them peace or dissipate a cloud on the title. Therefore, where the complainant was the volunteer purchaser of a litigious claim; was the assignee of a secret equity for apparently a mere nominal consideration, and of the bare legal title for a like consideration, and this legal title assigned to him during the pendency of a suit in chancery in a state court, to ascertain the person justly entitled to it, it was error in the court below to grant to such complainant a perpetual injunction. Orton v. Smith, 18 How. 263, 15 L. Ed. 393.

The plaintiff never had any real ownership or actual control or any lawful right to the bonds in suit, and an injunction to prevent the sale thereof was refused. Matthews v. Warner, 112 U. S. 600, 603, 28 L. Ed. 851.

A party as assignee of a city has no legal interest which entitles him to enjoin a railroad company from using its wharf as a public wharf beyond the limits of such use, as defined by a joint resolution of the general assembly. "If he alleges that the railroad company is acting beyond the warrant of the law, the answer is, that a violation of its charter does not of itself injuriously affect any of his rights. The company is not shown to owe him any duty which it has not performed. This was the principle on which this court proceeded in the case of Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. 91, 9 L. Ed. 1012." Railroad Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 166, 173, 174, 26 L. Ed. 1015.

In Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 362, 393, 38 L. Ed. 1014, it was held that the trustee of the bond holders of a railway corporation could maintain a suit against the state railway commission to restrain the enforcement of unreasonable and unjust rates, upon the express ground that the bond holders were the equitable and the beneficial owners of the property of the corporation, and in that capacity might "invoke the judgment of the federal courts as to whether the contract rights created by the charter, and of which it is thus the beneficial owner, are violated by subsequent acts of the state in limitation of the right to collect tolls." In that case the bond holders were not only the beneficial owners of the property, but a reduction of the tolls might have resulted in the practical destruction of their securities, and unless the bill were maintained they were practically remediless. Cited in Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 220, 47 L. Ed. 782.

In Zabriskie v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 23 How. 381, 16 L. Ed. 488, a bill by a stockholder, to restrain a railroad company from paying interest on bonds of another company and from using its effects to redeem the bonds, in pursuance of an ultra vires contract of guarantee, confirmed over the dissent of a stockholder, was sustained.

Sufficiency of interest to enjoin taxes.—See the title TAXATION.

Virginia coupon holders.—A bill for an injunction to compel tax collectors to receive Virginia coupons in payment of taxes could only be maintained by one who alleges himself to be a taxpayer; the contract right of coupon holders, under the act (Va.) of March 30, 1871, could only be exercised by a taxpayer. Mayre v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 325, 29 L. Ed. 205. See the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 76; TAXATION.

Shareholder in corporation.—A shareholder may maintain a suit for an injunction to prevent a disaster, where the corporation peremptorily refuses to move in the matter. Hawes v. Oakland, 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. Ed. 827; Greenwood v. Freight Co., 105 U. S. 13, 16, 26 L. Ed. 961. See the title STOCKS AND STOCKHOLDERS.

44. Violation of official duty threatening personal injury.—Noble v. Union River, etc., R. Co., 147 U. S. 165, 172, 37 L. Ed. 123; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 541, 23 L. Ed. 623.

45. Corporation—Injury to property.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Whalen, 149 U. S. 157, 163, 37 L. Ed. 686. This case construes Wash. Terr. Code, § 2050, which gives an action against the seller of liquor or the owner of the place where it is sold, to recover damages suffered on account of sales to particular persons, to wit, employees.

"But the usual, and at the suit of a cor-

Employer's Interest in Workmen.—No employer has such a property in his workmen, or in their services, that he can, under the ordinary jurisdiction of a court of chancery, maintain a suit, as for a nuisance, against the keeper of a house at which they voluntarily buy intoxicating liquors, and thereby get so drunk as to be unfit for work.[46]

(b) Interest Too Remote.—A person whose interest is too remote has no standing in a court of equity.[47]

(c) Sufficiency of Interest of United States.—Where the government is obstructed in the exercise of its duties and powers, it being interested in the promotion of general welfare, it has a right to become a party complainant to its courts for assistance by the way of injunction.[48] The government has sufficient property rights in the mails to sue for an injunction to prevent interference therewith.[49]

(d) Sufficiency of Interest of State.—As to sufficiency of interest of a state to maintain bill for injunction against citizen of another state for maintaining a nuisance or for obstructing navigable waters, see the titles COURTS, vol. 4, p. 1016; NUISANCES; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

b. Prior Establishment of Right or Title—(1) In General.—In general, injunction should not issue to protect a doubtful right or disputed title until such doubt is removed or dispute settled by appropriate proceedings.[50] The ordinary rule is that courts of equity will not act where there is a dispute about the title or the extent of the legal rights of the parties, until there has been a trial at law.[51] There are cases in which a court of equity will take jurisdiction and give a complete remedy without the previous intervention of a court of law, poration the only ground on which, independently of express statute, a court of equity will grant an injunction in a private action for a nuisance, is special injury to the plaintiff's property. 3 Bl. Com. 216; Robinson v. Kilvert, 41 Ch. D. 88; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. 91, 99, 9 L. Ed. 1012." Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Whalen, 149 U. S. 157, 162, 37 L. Ed. 686.

46. Sufficiency of employer's interest.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Whalen, 149 U. S. 157, 162, 37 L. Ed. 686.

47. Interest to remote.—Where a person is neither a citizen nor a taxpayer, but is a citizen of another state, and presents himself simply in the character of a creditor of the state, the courts would hardly be justified in interfering on his behalf to prevent a supposed violation of the state constitution by an increase of the state debt. His interest is too remote to give him a standing in court for any such purpose. Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 536, 23 L. Ed. 623. See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; PARTIES.

48. Sufficiency of interest of government.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. Ed. 1092; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 14 L. Ed. 249; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. 91, 9 L. Ed. 1012; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. Ed. 532; Matter of Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 509, 49 L. Ed. 848. See the title INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE.

Interference with plans with reference to Indians.—In view of the relation of the United States to the real and personal property, as well as to these dependent Indians still under national control, and in view of the injurious effect of the assessment and taxation complained of upon the plans of the government with reference to the Indians, it is clear that the United States is entitled to maintain this suit for an injunction against the collection of the tax. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 444, 47 L. Ed. 532. See the title INDIANS, ante, p. 906.

49. Interest in mails.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. Ed. 1092. See Searight v. Stokes, 3 How. 151, 169, 11 L. Ed. 537.

50. Prior establishment of right or title.—"The general principles of equity jurisprudence, as administered both in this country and in England, permit a bill to quiet title to be filed only by a party in possession against a defendant, who has been ineffectually seeking to establish a legal title by repeated actions of ejectment, and as a prerequisite to such bill it was necessary that the title of the plaintiff should have been established by at least one successful trial at law. Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence, §§ 253, 1394, and 1396." Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 321, 39 L. Ed. 167.

51. Necessity for trial at law.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Transp. Co., 155 U. S. 585, 39 L. Ed. 271; Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 36 L. Ed. 368.

"It was formerly the doctrine of equity, in cases of alleged trespass on land, not to restrain the use and enjoyment of the premises by the defendant when the title was in dispute, but to leave the complaining party to his remedy at law. A controversy as to the title was deemed but the case must be one of "strong and imperious necessity."[52] Where it appears that careless and wanton injury may be inflicted upon property by the defendants, a court of equity will not refuse relief by injunction until there has been a trial at law.[53]

(2) Temporary Injunctions—Preservation of Property.—Where the title or right of the complainant is disputed, a temporary injunction may issue at once without waiting until a trial at law be had,[54] and it is now common practice in cases where irremediable mischief is being done or threatened, going to the destruction of the substance of the estate, to issue an injunction, though the title to the premises be in litigation. The authority of the court is exercised in such cases, through its preventive writ, to preserve the property from destruction pending legal proceedings for the determination of the title.[55]

(3) Injunction Following as of Course.—However, after the right has been established at law, a court of chancery will not, as of course, interpose by injunction. It will consider all the circumstances, the consequences of such action, and the real equity of the case.[56]

3. Grounds of Equitable Jurisdiction—a. Inadequacy of Other Remedies—(1) In General.—The general rule is that where a complainant has unquestioned rights which are not adequately protected by legal remedies, he is entitled to the aid of equity,[57] but an injunction will not issue to protect the com-sufficient to exclude the jurisdiction of the court." Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 537, 538, 28 L. Ed. 1113.

52. Exceptions to rule.—Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333.

"The patent having been issued fifteen months before the bill was filed, and having nearly sixteen years then to run, and the bill alleging that the public have generally acknowledged and acquiesced in the validity of the patent, and that the invention has been put in practice by the plaintiff, and has been of great utility, it was not necessary to show a recovery at law, to warrant jurisdiction in equity, for an injunction and an account. Root v. Railway Co., 105 U. S. 189, 205, 26 L. Ed. 975." McCoy v. Nelson, 121 U. S. 484, 487, 30 L. Ed. 1017. See the title PATENTS.

53. Injunction for preservation of property.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Transp. Co., 155 U. S. 585, 589, 39 L. Ed. 271. In this case the relief sought was to restrain defendants from taking too long tow barges through the draws of a railroad bridge.

54. Temporary injunction—Right disputed.—Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 537, 28 L. Ed. 1113; Irwin v. Dixion, 9 How. 10, 13 L. Ed. 25; Clark v. Clark, 17 How. 315, 15 L. Ed. 77. In the case last cited, an injunction issued to secure the money, arising from certain claims of a bankrupt against the Mexican government, until the right thereto could be settled.

"Where an injunction is granted without a trial at law, it is usually upon the principle of preserving the property, until a trial at law can be had. A strong prima facie case of right must be shown, and there must have been no improper delay. The court will consider all the circumstances and exercise a careful discretion." Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333.

Until the rights of the parties are settled at law, only a temporary injunction is issued, to prevent irreparable injury. Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333.

Laches—Dissolution of injunction.—Where an injunction in such a case has been granted, and the complainant fails to proceed with diligence in his action at law, the injunction will be dissolved. "A delay of three years or more has been frequently held to be such laches as will preclude a party from relief in equity until he has vindicated his right at law." Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333.

55. Preservations of property pending litigation.—Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 537, 539, 28 L. Ed. 1113; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 17 L. Ed. 333; Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 36 L. Ed. 368.

56. Injunction following as of course.—Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333. See ante, "Interest of Defendant to Be Considered," V, A, 1, d.

57. Want of other adequate remedy—In general.—Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 109, 20 L. Ed. 65; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 284, 34 L. Ed. 936; National Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. Ed. 469; Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 15 How. 233, 242, 14 L. Ed. 674; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. Ed. 231; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Min. Co., 187 U. S. 455, 47 L.

Ed. 256; Milwaukee v. Kœffler, 116 U. S. 219, 29 L. Ed. 612; Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. United States, 187 U. S. 447, 47 L. Ed. 253; Deweese v. Reinhard, 165 U. S. 386, 390, 41 L. Ed. 757; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. Ed. 273; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 658, 35 L. Ed. 303; Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 373, 376, 21 L. Ed. 174; Robb v. Vos, 155 U. S. 13, 39 L. Ed. 52; American School v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 110, 47 L. Ed. 90; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 567, 36 L. Ed. 537; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 141 U. S. 696, 700, 35 L. Ed. 906; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 547, 33 L. Ed. 1016; Johnson v. Christian, 128 U. S. 374, 381, 32 L. Ed. 412; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co., 174 U. S. 552, 567, 43 L. Ed. 1081; Scottish Union, etc., Ins. Co. v. Bowland, 196 U. S. 611, 49 L. Ed. 619; Ewing v. St. Louis, 5 Wall. 413, 418, 18 L. Ed. 657; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 673, 31 L. Ed. 205; Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 244, 45 L. Ed. 497; Leeds v. Marine Ins. Co., 6 Wheat. 565, 5 L. Ed. 332; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362, 23 L. Ed. 483; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. Ed. 346; Knox County v. Harshman, 133 U. S. 152, 33 L. Ed. 586; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. Ed. 870; North Chicago Rolling Mills Co. v. St. Louis Ore, etc., Co., 152 U. S. 596, 615, 38 L. Ed. 565; Railway Co. v. McShane, 22 Wall. 444, 22 L. Ed. 747; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 444, 47 L. Ed. 532; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 503, 48 L. Ed. 761; Metcalf v. Williams, 104 U. S. 93, 96, 26 L. Ed. 665; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 65, 25 L. Ed. 93; Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 200 U. S. 273, 292, 50 L. Ed. 477; Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192, 12 L. Ed. 111; Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584, 14 L. Ed. 552; Brown v. County of Buena Vista, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. Ed. 422; Pacific Express Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035; Pittsburgh, etc., Railway v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 43 L. Ed. 354; Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 44 L. Ed. 377; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Kœhne, 188 U. S. 681, 47 L. Ed. 651; Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch 332, 336, 3 L. Ed. 362; Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 445, 15 L. Ed. 124; Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652, 24 L. Ed. 216; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 665, 675, 29 L. Ed. 1013; Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 157, 25 L. Ed. 903; Pelton v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. Ed. 901; Boyce v. Grundy, 3 Pet. 210, 7 L. Ed. 655; Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 221, 47 L. Ed. 782; Peirsoll v. Elliott, 6 Pet. 95, 98, 8 L. Ed. 332; Arkansas Bldg., etc., Ass'n v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 272, 44 L. Ed. 159; Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 239, 42 L. Ed. 444; Wilson v. Lambert, 168 U. S. 611, 613, 42 L. Ed. 599; Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 361, 44 L. Ed. 801; Potts v. Hollen, 177 U. S. 365, 44 L. Ed. 808; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 17 L. Ed. 333; Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. Ed. 580; White v. Crow, 110 U. S. 183, 187, 28 L. Ed. 113; Allen v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 311, 29 L. Ed. 200; Francis v. Flinn, 118 U. S. 385, 388, 30 L. Ed. 165; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 447, 22 L. Ed. 623; Stanley v. Supervisors, 121 U. S. 535, 30 L. Ed. 1000; Weyerhaueser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 558, 44 L. Ed. 583; Wilson v. Shaw, 204 U. S. 24, 31, 51 L. Ed. 351; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 223, 31 L. Ed. 402; White v. Berry, 171 U. S. 366, 376, 43 L. Ed. 199; Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U. S. 285, 290, 51 L. Ed. 1065; Bank v. Cooper, 20 Wall. 171, 176, 22 L. Ed. 273; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 564, 14 L. Ed. 249; Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 20, 40 L. Ed. 599; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 269, 29 L. Ed. 185; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. Ed. 1014; Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 49, 34 L. Ed. 843; Brent v. Bank, 10 Pet. 596, 613, 9 L. Ed. 547; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 615, 9 L. Ed. 1181.

The court affirms the doctrine announced in Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 15 L. Ed. 124, that a court of equity will not enjoin a judgment at law, unless the proof clearly shows that the defendant had a just defense, of which he could not avail himself at law, or to which, if available, he was prevented from resorting, by fraud or unavoidable accident, unmixed with any fault or negligence in himself or his agents. Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652, 24 L. Ed. 216.

Where a party has no adequate remedy elsewhere, a court of equity will not refuse to restrain another from interferring with his rights. Franklin Tele. Co. v. Harrison, 145 U. S. 459, 36 L. Ed. 776.

Injunction to quiet title and preserve burying ground.—In Beatty v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. 566, 584, 7 L. Ed. 521, it is said: "It cannot be that such acts are to be redressed by the ordinary process of law. The remedy must be sought, if at all, in the protecting power of a court of chancery, operating by its injunction to preserve the repose of the ashes of the dead, and the religious sensibilities of the living."

Effect of abolition of distinction between law and equity.—"A court of a territory authorized, as Oklahoma was, to pass laws not inconsistent with the constitution of the United States, 26 Stat. 81, 84, c. 182, § 6, could not proceed in a 'common law' action as if it were a suit in equity and determine by mandatory injunction rights for the protection or enforcement of which there was a plain and adequate remedy at law according to the established distinctions between law and equity. And this evidently is in accordance with the statutes of Oklahoma providing that while the court must try plainant's rights, where he has an adequate legal remedy.[58] Although an injunction may issue as ancillary to the original proceedings, notwithstanding the issues of law, unless referred in the mode prescribed, 'issues of fact arising in actions for the recovery of money or of specific real or personal property, shall be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived or a reference be ordered.' Stat. Okla. 1893, 809, § 4156." Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 363, 44 L. Ed. 801, followed in Potts v. Hollen, 177 U. S. 365, 44 L. Ed. 808.

58. Where adequate remedy exists.—Allen v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 311, 29 L. Ed. 200; In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 591, 39 L. Ed. 1092; Wilson v. Shaw, 204 U. S. 24, 31, 51 L. Ed. 351; Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 124, 36 L. Ed. 368; Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. Ed. 782; Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Pittsburgh, etc., Railway v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 45, 43 L. Ed. 354; Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 49, 34 L. Ed. 843; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Marshall, 136 U. S. 393, 34 L. Ed. 385; New York Guaranty Co. v. Memphis Water Co., 107 U. S. 205, 214, 27 L. Ed. 484; Francis v. Flinn, 118 U. S. 385, 30 L. Ed. 165; Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 80, 44 L. Ed. 377; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. Ed. 623; Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 137, 9 L. Ed. 373; Bend v. Hoyt, 13 Pet. 263, 10 L. Ed. 154; Philadelphia v. Collector, 5 Wall. 720, 731, 18 L. Ed. 614; Swift Co. v. United States, 111 U. S. 22, 28 L. Ed. 341; McChord v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 183 U. S. 483, 46 L. Ed. 289; Arkansas Bldg., etc., Ass'n v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 272, 44 L. Ed. 159. See the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

The question arising in each individual case is whether or not the remedy at law is adequate. Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. Ed. 580.

Conspiracy to destroy plaintiff's business.—An injunction will not issue to prevent a conspiracy to destroy plaintiff's business, where upon the allegations of the bill it appears that an adequate remedy at law exists. Francis v. Flinn, 118 U. S. 385, 30 L. Ed. 165.

Cause of action "a purely legal demand."—Courts of equity unquestionably have jurisdiction of fraud, misrepresentation and fraudulent suppression of material facts in matters of contract, but where the cause of action is "a purely legal demand" and nothing appears to show that the defense at law may not be as perfect and complete as in equity, a suit in equity will not be sustained in a federal court. "It is clear that a case, under such circumstances, is controlled by the sixteenth section of the judiciary act." Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501.

Good defense at law to "a purely legal demand."—Where a party, if his theory of the controversy is correct, has a good defense at law to "a purely legal demand," he should be left to that means of defense, unless he is prepared to allege and prove some special circumstances to show that he may suffer irreparable injury if he is denied a preventive remedy. Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501.

Enforcing municipal corporation to levy tax.—After judgment at law for a sum of money against a municipal corporation, and execution returned unsatisfied, mandamus, not a bill in equity for an injunction, is the proper mode to compel the levy of a tax which the corporation was bound to levy to pay the judgment. Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 930.

Absence of one of the counsel employed to conduct his defense in a suit at law does not furnish ground for equitable relief, where it appears that the defendant, had he been present at the trial, might have employed other counsel equally competent; nor does the fact that a witness upon whom he relied was so sick during his examination as to impair his recollection of facts within his knowledge. Having failed to ask a postponement or a continuance, he cannot go into equity and claim to have the judgment enjoined. Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652, 24 L. Ed. 216.

Recovery back of taxes paid.—"The remedy of a suit to recover back the tax after it is paid is provided by statute, and a suit to restrain its collection is forbidden. The remedy so given is exclusive, and no other remedy can be substituted for it. Such has been the current of decisions in the circuit courts of the United States, and we are satisfied it is a correct view of the law. In Cheatham v. United States, 92 U. S. 85, 88, 23 L. Ed. 561, and again in State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 613, 23 L. Ed. 663, it was said by this court, that the system prescribed by the United States in regard to both customs duties and internal revenue taxes, of stringent measures, not judicial, to collect them, with appeals to specified tribunals, and suits to recover back moneys illegally exacted, was a system of corrective justice intended to be complete, and enacted under the right belonging to the government to prescribe the conditions on which it would subject itself to the judgment of the courts in the collection of its revenues. In the exercise of that right, it declares, by § 3224, that its officers shall not be enjoined from collecting a tax claimed to have been unjustly assessed, when those officers, in the course of general jurisdiction over the subject matter in question, have made the assignment and existence of an adequate remedy at law.[59] Where the choice is between the ordinary and the extraordinary processes of law, and the former are sufficient, the rule will not permit the use of the latter.[60] But it must clearly appear that complainant's remedy at law is adequate and efficient.[61]

(2) What Constitutes Adequate Remedy.[62]—The remedy at law, in order to exclude a concurrent remedy at equity, must be as complete, as practical and as efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration, as the remedy in equity.[63] Inadequacy of remedy at law exists where the case made demands preventive relief, as, for instance, the prevention of multiplicity of suits, or the prevention of irreparable injury.[64]

Remedy in Foreign Jurisdiction.—Where complainant is compelled to seek his remedy in some foreign court, it may not be considered adequate and efficient.[65]

Act Subject to Criminal Prosecution.—The fact that an act sought to be claim that it is valid." Snyder v. Marks, 109 U. S. 189, 193, 27 L. Ed. 901. See the title TAXATION.

Enjoining obligee in bond.—A municipal corporation, obligors in a bond, cannot ask relief in equity that the obligee be enjoined from proceeding at law, and that the bond be surrendered, when his bill alleges that the bond was issued without authority, in violation of law and in fraud of the town; that the obligee knew this when he took it; that the obligee's possession is merely colorable, and that he gave no value for it, and never had any right title to the bond. Such allegations show a complete defense to the bond at law; and a judgment against the obligee at law would give as full protection every way to the obligor as a decree in equity. Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 373, 21 L. Ed. 174.

59. Injunction as ancillary proceedings.—Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 200 U. S. 273, 50 L. Ed. 477. See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 982.

60. Ordinary and extraordinary process.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 583, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

61. Adequacy of remedy must clearly appear.—Where it appears uncertain whether the complainants in a bill in equity for an injunction can avail themselves in the action at law of the defense asserted in the bill, and admitted by the demurrer to be true, the demurrer should have been overruled, and the defendant required to answer. Drexel v. Berney, 122 U. S. 241, 255, 30 L. Ed. 1219.

62. What constitutes adequate remedy.—See the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

63. Practical and efficient remedy.—Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. Ed. 580; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. 91, 9 L. Ed. 1012; Boyce v. Grundy, 3 Pet. 210, 7 L. Ed. 655; Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 621, 20 L. Ed. 501; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 514, 32 L. Ed. 1005; Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 95, 36 L. Ed. 82; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 12, 43 L. Ed. 341; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 592, 16 L. Ed. 226.

Suits at law, from time to time, to recover damages for the refusal of a telegraph company to transmit the messages of complainant over his wire, would not have given the relief necessary to secure their rights under the contract, and such a remedy would not be complete, nor an adequate substitute for an injunction. Franklin Tel. Co. v. Harrison, 145 U. S. 459, 474, 36 L. Ed. 776.

Where the agreement complained of is perpetual in its nature, the only effectual relief against it, if the keeping of it on foot is a fraud against parties, is the annulment of it. This cannot be decreed by a court of law, but can by a court of equity. Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 369, 19 L. Ed. 734.

Equitable estoppel.—"But it does not follow, because equitable estoppels may originate legal, as distinguished from equitable rights, that it may not be necessary in particular cases to resort to a court of equity in order to make them available. All that can properly be said is, that in order to justify a resort to a court of equity, it is necessary to show some ground of equity other than the estoppel itself, whereby the party entitled to the benefit of it is prevented from making it available in a court of law. In other words, the case shown must be one where the forms of the law are used to defeat that which, in equity, constitutes the right. Such a case is one for equitable interposition." Drexel v. Berney, 122 U. S. 241, 253, 30 L. Ed. 1219. See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

64. Where preventive relief demanded.—Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 81, 44 L. Ed. 377; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 517, 42 L. Ed. 819; Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. Ed. 580.

65. Remedy in foreign jurisdiction.—See Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. Ed. 819, where it was held the federal courts may enjoin the enforcement of a void freight rate law, although the state in passing the law provided a remedy to be pursued in the courts of that state.

enjoined may have been the subject of a criminal prosecution, does not prevent the issuance of an injunction where such prosecution is not an efficient remedy to prevent or give satisfaction for the injury.[66]

Right of Party to Redress Own Wrongs.—Although a party may have the right to redress his own grievances, he will not be compelled to do so;[67] the right of the complainant to use force to protect his property and rights does not exclude the right of appeal to the courts for a judicial determination and for the exercise of all their powers of prevention.[68]

(3) In Cases of Illegal Taxation.—It must be presumed that the law affords an adequate, efficient and prompt remedy for mere illegal taxation.[69] While the court does not lay down any absolute rule limiting the powers of a court of equity in restraining the collection of taxes, it declares that it is essential that every case be brought within some of the recognized rules of equity jurisdiction, and that neither illegality or irregularity in the proceedings, nor error or excess in the valuation, nor the hardship or injustice of the law, provided it be constitutional, nor any grievance which can be remedied by a suit at law, either before or after the payment of the tax, will authorize an injunction against its collection.[70] As to what grounds will afford equitable relief, see reference in note.[71]

(4) Interstate Commerce Cases.—Congress having the control of interstate commerce, has also the duty of protecting it, and it is entirely competent for that body to give the remedy by injunction as more efficient than any other civil remedy.[72]

66. Act subject to criminal prosecution.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

67. Existence of remedy outside the courts.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

68. Right to resort to court for remedy.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 583, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

In some cases of trespass the law permits an individual to abate the one and prevent the other by force, because such permission is necessary to the complete protection of property and person. When the choice is between redress or prevention of injury by force and by peaceful process, the law is well pleased if the individual will consent to waive his right to the use of force and await its action. Therefore, as between force and the extraordinary writ of injunction, the rule will permit the latter. In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 583, 39 L. Ed. 1092. See the titles NUISANCES; TRESPASS.

69. Mere illegality of taxation.—Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177, 187, 32 L. Ed. 899; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 525, 28 L. Ed. 1098.

70. When equity will entertain.—Arkansas Bldg., etc., Ass'n v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 274, 44 L. Ed. 159; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 525, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177, 187, 32 L. Ed. 899; Milwaukee v. Kœffler, 116 U. S. 219, 224, 29 L. Ed. 612; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 548, 21 L. Ed. 231; Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 157, 25 L. Ed. 903; Pelton v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. Ed. 901.

A bill to restrain the collection of a tax cannot be maintained on the sole ground of the illegality of the tax. There must be an allegation of fraud; that it creates a cloud upon the title; that there is apprehension of multiplicity of suits, or the allegation of some cause presenting a case of equity jurisdiction. There exists no such cloud upon the title as justified the interference of a court of equity, where the proceedings are void upon their face. Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 109, 20 L. Ed. 65; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. Ed. 231.

This rule is founded on the principle that the levy of taxes is a legislative and not a judicial function, and the court can neither make nor cause to be made a new assessment if the one complained of be erroneous, and also in the necessity that the taxes, without which the state could not exist, should be regularly and promptly paid into its treasury. State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663.

Quære: Whether the same rigid rule against equitable relief would apply to taxes levied solely by municipal corporations for corporate purposes as that here applied to state taxes. Probably not. State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663.

71. Equitable grounds affording relief.—See post, "Multiplicity of Suits," V, A, 3, b; "Irreparable Injury—Not Compensated in Damages," V, A, 3, c, (2), "Cloud on Title," V, A, 3, e; "Offer to Do Equity," V, A, 4, b.

For a full and comprehensive treatment of injunctions against illegal taxation, see the title TAXATION.

72. Interstate commerce cases.—United

b. Multiplicity of Suits.—It is universally admitted that an injunction will issue to suppress oppressive or interminable litigation or to prevent multiplicity of suits.[73] This is one of the special grounds of equity jurisdiction.[74] A party is entitled to an injunction where the consummation of an act may result in many actions at law against him; his remedy at law, in such case is wholly inadequate.[75]

Act Doing Common Injury.—Although many persons may be allowed to unite in a bill to restrain the commission of an act which would injure them all in a similar way, an injunction will be refused where no common right or title is involved and where there is no community of interest in the subject matter.[76]

c. Nature of Injury Giving Equity Jurisdiction—(1) Reasonable Apprehension of Injury.—The anticipation and prevention of threatened injury is a valuable feature of equity jurisdiction.[77] However, equity does not interfere simply to restrain a possible future violation of law;[78] the injury must be impending States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 343, 41 L. Ed. 1007.

The subject is fully and ably discussed in the case of In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. Ed. 1092. See, also, Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940. See the title INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE.

73. Multiplicity of suits.—Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 109, 20 L. Ed. 65; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; National Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. Ed. 469; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. Ed. 231; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Min. Co., 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. Ed. 256; Milwaukee v. Kœffler, 116 U. S. 219, 29 L. Ed. 612; Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. United States, 187 U. S. 447, 47 L. Ed. 253; Pittsburgh, etc., Railway v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 43 L. Ed. 354; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. Ed. 273; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 658, 35 L. Ed. 303; Pacific Express Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035; Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 44 L. Ed. 377; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Kœhne, 188 U. S. 681, 47 L. Ed. 651; Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 45 L. Ed. 497; Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 156, 25 L. Ed. 903; Pelton v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. Ed. 901; Arkansas Bldg., etc., Ass'n v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 272, 44 L. Ed. 159; Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 239, 42 L. Ed. 444; Ewing v. St. Louis, 5 Wall. 413, 418, 18 L. Ed. 657; McChord v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 183 U. S. 483, 46 L. Ed. 289; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 673, 31 L. Ed. 205; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 503, 48 L. Ed. 761; Equator Co. v. Hall, 106 U. S. 86, 87, 27 L. Ed. 114; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 17 L. Ed. 333; Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U. S. 285, 289, 51 L. Ed. 1065; Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501.

74. Special head of equity jurisdiction.—Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 110, 20 L. Ed. 65. See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; MULTIPLICITY OF SUITS.

75. Consummation of act resulting in many suits.—See Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. Ed. 592; Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co., 194 U. S. 517, 48 L. Ed. 1102, where the enforcement of an ordinance reducing rates of fare was restrained.

And so a court of equity may restrain the enforcement of an unconstitutional freight rate law. Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. Ed. 819.

Where the case is one of a continuing trespass, involving injury of a permanent nature, a suit at law can only determine the particular wrong occurring on a particular occasion, and will not reach other wrongs of like character that will occur almost every hour of each day. A court of equity is alone competent to meet such an unusual emergency, and by a comprehensive decree determine finally and once for all the entire controversy between the parties—thus avoiding a multiplicity of suits and conserving the public interests. No remedy at law would be so complete or efficacious as a suit in equity in such a case as this one. Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co., 199 U. S. 279, 304, 50 L. Ed. 192; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 36 L. Ed. 537; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 517, 42 L. Ed. 819. See the title TRESPASS.

76. Act doing common injury.—Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. Ed. 698; Beatty v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. 566, 585, 7 L. Ed. 521.

77. Anticipation and prevention of injury.—Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. Ed. 1102; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. Ed. 808; Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 42 L. Ed. 626; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333.

78. Future violation.—United States v.

and threatened, so as to be averted only by the issuance of preventive process.[79]

(2) Irreparable Injury—Not Compensated in Damages.—It may be stated as a general rule that in order that a threatened injury to one's rights may furnish ground for equitable interference by injunction, such injury must be one which in its nature is irreparable and not susceptible of compensation by damages, recoverable at law.[80] When irreparable injury is spoken of, it is not meant that the injury is beyond the possibility of repair, or beyond the possibility of com-

Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 309, 41 L. Ed. 1007. See Adler v. Fenton, 24 How. 407, 16 L. Ed. 696.

The legislature of Virginia incorporated the stockholders of the Richmond, Fredericksburg, and Potomac Railroad Company, and in the charter pledged itself not to allow any other railroad to be constructed between those places, or any portion of that distance; the probable effect would be to diminish the number of passengers traveling between the one city and the other upon the railroad authorized by that act, or to compel the said company, in order to retain such passengers, to reduce the passage money. Afterwards the legislature incorporated the Louisa Railroad Company, whose road came from the west and struck the first-named company's track nearly at right angles, at some distance from Richmond; and the legislature authorized the Louisa Railroad Company to cross the track of the other, and continue their road to Richmond. In this latter grant, the obligation of the contract with the first company is not impaired within the meaning of the constitution of the United States. In the first charter, there was an implied reservation of the power to incorporate companies to transport other articles than passengers; and if the Louisa Railroad Company should infringe upon the rights of the Richmond company, there would be a remedy at law, but the apprehension of it will not justify an injunction to prevent them from building their road. Richmond, etc., R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co., 13 How. 71, 14 L. Ed. 55. See Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelley, 1 Black 436, 446, 17 L. Ed. 173.

If the proper officer gives a permit for the erection of certain specially described buildings in Washington city, a clear case of danger to the public safety, or of departure from the permit, must be made before the party acting under it can be arrested midway in the construction of them, and required to remove them. Dainese v. Cooke, 91 U. S. 580, 23 L. Ed. 251.

79. Injury impending and threatened.—Truly v. Wanzer, 5 How. 141, 12 L. Ed. 88; Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 248, 45 L. Ed. 497; McChord v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 183 U. S. 483, 46 L. Ed. 289; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. Ed. 636; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 471, 472, 41 L. Ed. 518.

An injunction will be granted where irreparable injury is threatened or impending. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. Ed. 808; Peik v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. Ed. 97.

In order to support a motion for an injunction the bill should set forth a case of probable danger to plaintiff's rights, without the special interposition of the court. Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 402, 1 L. Ed. 433; Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 415, 1 L. Ed. 438.

80. Irreparable injury.—Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 109, 20 L. Ed. 65; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 14 L. Ed. 249; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; National Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. Ed. 469; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. Ed. 231; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Min. Co., 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. Ed. 256; Milwaukee v. Koeffler, 116 U. S. 219, 29 L. Ed. 612; Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. United States, 187 U. S. 447, 47 L. Ed. 253; Pittsburgh, etc., Railway v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 43 L. Ed. 354; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. Ed. 273; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 658, 35 L. Ed. 303; Pacific Express Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035; Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 44 L. Ed. 377; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Koehne, 188 U. S. 681, 47 L. Ed. 651; Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 45 L. Ed. 497; American School v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 110, 47 L. Ed. 90; Arkansas Bldg., etc., Ass'n v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 272, 44 L. Ed. 159; Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 239, 42 L. Ed. 444; Ewing v. St. Louis, 5 Wall. 413, 418, 18 L. Ed. 657; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 673, 31 L. Ed. 205; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 551, 17 L. Ed. 333; McChord v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 183 U. S. 483, 46 L. Ed. 289; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 503, 48 L. Ed. 761; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 537, 538, 28 L. Ed. 1113; Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 446, 454, 27 L. Ed. 992; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 12, 43 L. Ed. 341; Lockhart v. Leeds, 195 U. S. 427, 438, 49 L. Ed. 263; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 82, 46 L. Ed. 808; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204; Griffing v. Gibb, 2 Black 519, 17

pensation in damages, but it must be of such constant and frequent recurrence

L. Ed. 353; Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. Ed. 698; Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Dainese v. Cooke, 91 U. S. 580, 23 L. Ed. 251.

If injuries are threatened, and a court of equity can be satisfied that irreparable injuries may be occasioned by careless or wanton action on the part of defendants, a remedy by injunction can be had. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Transp. Co., 155 U. S. 585, 589, 31 L. Ed. 271.

Whether, upon a petition or bill asserting that the prior rights of the first appropriator have been invaded, a court of equity will interfere to restrain the acts of the party complained of, will depend upon the character and extent of the injury alleged, whether it be irremediable in its nature, whether an action at law would afford adequate remedy, whether the parties are able to respond for the damages resulting from the injury, and other considerations which ordinarily govern a court of equity in the exercise of its preventive process of injunction. Atchison v. Peterson, 20 Wall. 507, 22 L. Ed. 414.

Deterioration and destruction of water-flow.—Where a prior appropriation of water for mining purposes filed a bill to restrain other parties above him, subsequently appropriating the water, who it is alleged have deteriorated the water and destroyed the flow, it was held that as the deterioration was very slight, not rendering the water less useful for the purposes, and as no additional labor was imposed on complainant on account of such deterioration, no injunction should be granted. Atchison v. Peterson, 20 Wall. 507, 22 L. Ed. 414.

A bill was filed by Kansas to enjoin Colorado from diminishing the flow of the Arkansas River by appropriating its waters for irrigation purposes. Kansas had recognized the right to appropriate the waters of a stream to such use, subject to the condition of an equitable division between riparian proprietors. It was held that complainant was not entitled to an injunction in view of the fact that the act of the defendant has resulted in the reclamation of vast areas of arid land within her borders, while on the other hand the injury, though perceptible as to some parts of the land, has worked little or no injury to the great body of the land within complainant's borders. Kansas v. Colorado, 206 U. S. 46, 51 L. Ed. 956.

Transfer of specific property.—A court of equity will interpose by injunction, to prevent the transfer of a specific thing, which, if transferred, will be irretrievably lost to the owner; such as negotiable securities and stocks. Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 725, 27 L. Ed. 448.

Prevention of destruction of corporate franchise.—An injunction will be granted, to prevent the franchise of a corporation from being destroyed, as well as to restrain a party from violating it, by attempting to participate in its exclusive privileges. Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204. See the title CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 621.

The injury done, by denying to the corporation the exercise of its franchise, is as difficult to calculate as an injury done by participating in an exclusive privilege. The single act of levying the tax, in the first instance, is the cause of an action at law; but that affords a remedy only for the single act, and is not equal to the remedy in chancery, which prevents its repetition, and protects the privilege. Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 841, 6 L. Ed. 204.

"The appropriation of private property to public use, under color of law, but in fact without authority, is such an invasion of private rights as may be assumed to be essentially irremediable, if indeed, relief may not be awarded ex debito justitiæ." Osborne v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 147 U. S. 248, 258, 37 L. Ed. 155.

Osborne v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 147 U. S. 248, 37 L. Ed. 155, was an action to enjoin the construction of a track along a public street, because of irreparable damage to be thereby inflicted on the plaintiff. The court, following the decision in McElroy v. Kansas City, 21 Fed. Rep. 257, said: "If the defendant had an ultimate right to do the act sought to be restrained, but only upon some condition precedent, and compliance with the condition was within the power of the defendant, the injunction would almost universally be granted until the condition was complied with; but if the means of complying with the condition were not at defendant's command, then the court would adjust its order so as to give complainants substantial benefit of the condition, while not restraining defendant from the exercise of his ultimate rights." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 195 U. S. 540, 578, 49 L. Ed. 312.

Digging lead ore from the lead mines upon the public lands in the United States, is such a waste as entitles the United States to a writ of injunction to restrain it. United States v. Gear, 3 How. 120, 11 L. Ed. 523, cited in Cotton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 232, 13 L. Ed. 675.

Injury fugitive and temporary.—In Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. Ed. 698, the injury was held to be of so fugitive and temporary a character as to lack such elements of irreparable injury as would furnish the basis for equity interposition.

The establishment of general harbor lines, of itself, takes or injures no one's property, and cannot, consistently with that no fair or reasonable redress can be had therefor in a court of law.[81] An injunction will not issue to restrain an act, the injurious consequences of which are merely trifling.[82] Where money damages will constitute an adequate compensation for the injury impending or inflicted, an injunction will not issue.[83] A diminution of the value of the premises without irreparable injury is no ground for interference.[84]

Collateral and Consequential Damages.—Although legal compensation may be recoverable for actual injury done to property, yet an injunction may issue to prevent collateral and consequential damages not referred by such compensation.[85]

the interests of the public, or with the principles of equity, be restrained by injunction. Prosser v. Northern Pac. Railroad, 152 U. S. 59, 65, 38 L. Ed. 352.

Restraining lessor from ousting lessee.—Where a railroad company entered upon the use and occupation of land under a lease with a view to its purchase when it could properly be effected, the lessor having no general or absolute power of sale, it is held that such railroad company is entitled to an injunction restraining the lessor from any attempt to oust it from the land, for a reasonable period, in order to permit condemnation proceedings to be instituted and prosecuted. Winslow v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 188 U. S. 646, 47 L. Ed. 635. See the titles EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 5, p. 746; LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Public nuisance.—Wherever a public nuisance is productive of a specific injury to an individual, he may make it the foundation of an action at law, and if the injury would be irreparable, a court of equity will interpose by injunction. Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 722, 18 L. Ed. 96; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 14 L. Ed. 249. See the title NUISANCES.

Improvement of highways.—The public having control over a highway may determine the manner in which it shall be improved, and, as a general rule, such improvement cannot be enjoined by an abutting lot or landowner, whatever may be his right to compensation growing out of the injury which such manner of improvement may bring to his property. This being true of ordinary highways, a fortiori is it true in respect to property which was not reserved for a highway alone, but for other public uses. Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 165 U. S. 370, 372, 41 L. Ed. 749.

81. Meaning of "irreparable injury."—Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co., 199 U. S. 279, 305, 50 L. Ed. 192.

82. Trifling injury.—Consolidated Canal Co. v. Mesa Canal Co., 177 U. S. 296, 302, 44 L. Ed. 777; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333.

83. Money damages.—Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 44 L. Ed. 377; Manigault v. Springs, 199 U. S. 473, 486, 50 L. Ed. 274. See Otis Co. v. Ludlow Mfg. Co., 201 U. S. 140, 154, 50 L. Ed. 696.

Where there is no direct taking of the estate itself, in whole or in part, and the injury complained of is the infliction of damage in respect to the complete enjoyment thereof, a court of equity must be satisfied that the threatened damage is substantial and the remedy at law in fact inadequate before restraint will be laid upon the progress of a public work. And if the case made discloses only a legal right to recover damages rather than to demand compensation, the court will decline to interfere. Osborne v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 147 U. S. 248, 249, 37 L. Ed. 155.

In Manigault v. Springs, 199 U. S. 473, 486, 50 L. Ed. 274, where a bill was filed to enjoin the erection of a dam until damages were paid, the court say: "In view of the incidental character of the damage probably resulting to plaintiff's land from the erection of this dam, and the careful provision of the act that the defendants shall be liable for such damage, we do not think, at least in the absence of an allegation that the defendants are financially irresponsible, that a court of equity would be authorized to enjoin the erection until the damages, which, if they exist at all, must be very difficult of ascertainment, shall be paid."

84. Diminution of value of premises.—Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 552, 17 L. Ed. 333.

85. Collateral and consequential damages.—Loss of trade, destruction of credit, and failure of business prospects, are collateral or consequential damages, which it is claimed would result from the trespass, but for which compensation cannot be awarded in a trial at law. To prevent a consequence like this, a court of equity steps in, arrests the proceedings in limine; brings the parties before it; hears their allegations and proofs, and decrees either that the proceedings shall be unrestrained, or else perpetually enjoined. The absence of a plain and adequate remedy at law affords the only test of equity jurisdiction, and the application of this principle to a particular case must depend altogether upon the character of the case, as disclosed in the pleadings. Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 79, 18 L. Ed. 580; North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 281, 34 L.

Continuing or Permanent Injury.—An injunction will be granted where injury from its continuance or permanent mischief will occasion constantly recurring grievance, which cannot be removed or corrected otherwise than by such a preventive remedy.[86]

(3) Where Act Sought to Be Enjoined Completed.—In its general nature, an injunction is a preventive remedy. The general rule is that an injunction will not issue for the correction of wrongs already perpetrated, but that the complainant must go elsewhere for redress.[87]

d. Fraud, Accident or Mistake.—Equity has always had jurisdiction of fraud, misrepresentation, and concealment; and it does not depend on discovery.[88] A party is clearly entitled to an injunction in case of accident, fraud or mistake, injuring his rights.[89] An injunction will issue to prevent an inequitable inter-

Ed. 936; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 12, 43 L. Ed. 341.

Where a creditor of A. levied on goods, a miscellaneous stock in retail trade, suitable for the then current season, and intended to be paid for out of the sales—in the possession of B., a young man recently established in trade and doing a profitable business, alleging that they had been conveyed to B. by A. to defeat his creditors—the court, upon being satisfied that they had not been so conveyed, held that the execution had been rightly enjoined; that as at law the measure of damages, if the property were not sold, could not extend beyond the injury done to it, or, if sold, to the value of it when taken, with interest from the time of the taking down to the trial—loss of trade, destruction of credit, and failure of business prospects—commercial ruin, in short—collateral or consequential damages, which might nevertherless ensue, would not be compensated for at law, but were properly prevented in equity. Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. Ed. 580.

A court of equity will interfere when the injury by the wrongful act of the adverse party will be irreparable, as where the loss of health, the loss of trade, the destruction of the means of subsistence, or the ruin of the property must ensue. Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 551, 17 L. Ed. 333.

86. Continuing or permanent injury.—Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 551, 17 L. Ed. 333; Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co., 199 U. S. 279, 50 L. Ed. 192.

87. Correction of wrongs perpetrated.—Northern Indian R. Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 15 How. 233, 242, 14 L. Ed. 674; Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 124, 36 L. Ed. 368. See ante, "Prohibitory and Mandatory," II, B.

88. Fraud, misrepresentation, etc.—Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 369, 19 L. Ed. 734.

Any authorized attempt by one partner to oust the other from the position and rights assigned to him by the contract was, therefore, not only a breach of their agreement, but a fraud upon the relation they had assumed to each other. Such a wrong it is the province of the court of equity to prevent. A chancellor will interfere by injunction to restrain one partner from violating the rights of his copartner, even when dissolution of the partnership is not necessarily contemplated. Marble Co. v. Ripley, 10 Wall. 339, 351, 19 L. Ed. 955.

Where an agreement against which a complainant in equity asks to have relief is perpetual in its nature, and the keeping of it on foot is a fraud against the party complaining, so that the only effectual relief against it is to have it annulled, the case is one for equity, not for law. Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. Ed. 734.

89. Right to injunctive process.—Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 20 L. Ed. 65; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; National Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. Ed. 469; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. Ed. 231; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Min. Co., 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. Ed. 256; Milwaukee v. Kœffler, 116 U. S. 219, 29 L. Ed. 612; Lockhardt v. Leeds, 195 U. S. 427, 49 L. Ed. 263; Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. United States, 187 U. S. 447, 47 L. Ed. 253; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. Ed. 273; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 658, 35 L. Ed. 303; Pacific Express Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035; Pittsburg, etc., Railway v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 43 L. Ed. 354; Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 44 L. Ed. 377; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Kœhne, 188 U. S. 681, 47 L. Ed. 651; Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652, 653, 24 L. Ed. 216; Davis v. Tileston, 6 How. 114, 12 L. Ed. 366; Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Cage v. Cassidy, 23 How. 109, 16 L. Ed. 430; Streitwolf v. Streitwolf, 181 U. S. 179, 182, 45 L. Ed. 807.

Bills of exchange or promissory notes fraudulently procured may be enjoined and practically divested of their negotiability. Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Hungerford v. Sigerson, 20 How. 156, 161, 15 L. Ed. 869.

Judgment obtained by fraud.—A judgment obtained without proper and sufficient notice, is fraudulent and will be enjoined by a court of equity. Earle v.

ference with and a fraud upon plaintiff's rights by the defendant.[90]

e. Cloud on Title.—Equity will interfere by injunction to prevent a cloud on complainant's title.[91] Equity will enjoin written instruments, procured by false representation or by fraudulent suppression of the truth, where they operate as a cloud upon the title of the opposite party,[92] and where the enforcement of an illegal tax would throw a cloud on complainant's title, the aid of equity can be invoked.[93] The issuance of patents by the governor and the commission of the general land office, will be enjoined where such acts would place a cloud upon the title of the complainant.[94]

f. Unconstitutionality of Statute.—It is settled that the mere fact that a law is unconstitutional does not entitle a party to relief by injunction against proceedings in compliance therewith, but it must appear that he has no adequate McVeigh, 91 U. S. 503, 23 L. Ed. 398; Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 15 L. Ed. 124; Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652, 24 L. Ed. 216.

A court of equity will enjoin a judgment at law where it is shown that the complainant was prevented from resorting to a legal defense by fraud or unavoidable accident, without any fault or negligence on his part. Johnson v. Christian, 128 U. S. 374, 381, 32 L. Ed. 412; Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch 332, 336, 3 L. Ed. 362; Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 445, 15 L. Ed. 124; Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652, 24 L. Ed. 216; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 665, 675, 29 L. Ed. 1013; Knox County v. Harshman, 133 U. S. 152, 154, 33 L. Ed. 586; Leeds v. Marine Ins. Co., 6 Wheat. 565, 5 L. Ed. 332; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362, 23 L. Ed. 483; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. Ed. 346; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. Ed. 870; North Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v. St. Louis Ore, etc., Co., 152 U. S. 596, 615, 38 L. Ed. 565; Brown v. County of Buena Vista, 95 U. S. 157, 159, 24 L. Ed. 422. See, also, United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 65, 25 L. Ed. 93.

Where a bill in equity sought to enjoin a judgment, and charged that the complainant had a good defense which he did not know of at the time when judgment at law was rendered against him, and charged also that he was entitled to pay the debt in the depreciated notes of a particular bank, of which advantage it was attempted to deprive him by fraud and collusion, and this bill was demurred to, it was error in the court below to sustain the demurrer. Davis v. Tileston, 6 How. 114, 12 L. Ed. 366. See the titles FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394; JUDGMENTS AND DECREES; MISTAKE AND ACCIDENT.

90. Inequitable interference.—In Florida v. Anderson, 91 U. S. 667, 23 L. Ed. 290, an interference by holders of railway bonds was enjoined at the instance of the state, where the trustees of the internal improvement fund to secure the payment of the railway bonds had sold the road and were pursuing their lawful remedies to subject the road to the payment of the purchase money.

91. Cloud on title.—Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 20 L. Ed. 65; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; National Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. Ed. 469; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. Ed. 231; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Min. Co., 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. Ed. 256; Wickliffe v. Owings, 17 How. 47, 15 L. Ed. 44; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. Ed. 273; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 658, 35 L. Ed. 303; Pacific Express Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035; Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 44 L. Ed. 377; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Koehne, 188 U. S. 681, 47 L. Ed. 651; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. Ed. 592; In re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. Ed. 689; Rouse v. Letcher, 156 U. S. 47, 31 L. Ed. 341; White v. Ewing, 159 U. S. 36, 40 L. Ed. 67; Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 239, 42 L. Ed. 444; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 449, 50 L. Ed. 801. See the title QUIETING TITLE.

92. Written instrument operating as cloud.—Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501.

93. Illegal tax.—Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 20 L. Ed. 65; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516, 525, 28 L. Ed. 1098; Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177, 187, 32 L. Ed. 899. See the title TAXATION.

94. Issuance of patents enjoined.—"In Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. Ed. 447, the receiver of a land-grant railroad obtained an injunction against the governor and the commissioner of the general land office of Texas to restrain them from encumbering, by patents to others, lands which had been contracted to the railroad company. The legal title was in the state, but the equitable title in the company. The specific tracts in dispute were, by the contract which had been made, segregated from the public domain and set apart for the company. The case rests on the same principle it would if patents had been actually issued to the company, and the state, through its officers, was attempting to place a cloud on the title by granting subsequent patents to others." Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 725, 27 remedy by the ordinary processes of the law or that the case falls under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction.[95]

4. Conduct of Plaintiff as Affecting Right—a. In General.—The right, whatever it may be and from what source derived, must be not only one not protected by legal title, but in and of itself appealing to the conscience of a chancellor. A court of equity acts only when and as conscience commands, and if the conduct of the plaintiff be offensive to the dictates of natural justice, then, whatever may be the rights he possesses and whatever use he may make of them in a court of law, he will be held remediless in a court of equity.[96]

b. Offer to Do Equity.—The rule that he who seeks the aid of equity must do equity, applies as well to an applicant for an injunction as to any other person.[97]

Taxation—Tender of Amount Justly Due.—As to necessity for tender as a condition precedent to maintaining suit to enjoin the collection of a tax, in whole or in part, see the title Taxation.

c. Laches and Negligence—(1) In General.—Where a party has failed to make a proper defense through negligence, a court of equity will not enjoin the

L. Ed. 448. See the title PUBLIC LANDS.

95. Unconstitutionality of statute.—Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 80, 44 L. Ed. 377; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. Ed. 273; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 658, 35 L. Ed. 303; Pacific Express Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035; Pittsburg, etc., Railway v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 43 L. Ed. 354; Arkansas Bldg., etc., Ass'n v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 44 L. Ed. 159.

"In Noble v. Union River, etc., R. Co., 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. Ed. 123, the jurisdiction was sustained, but the government raised no point as to the form of the remedy, and deprivation of a vested legal right of property, acquired before any suggestion that it could be taken away, was there threatened. And it appeared that the only remedy was through equity interposition. New Orleans v. Paine, 147 U. S. 261, 264, 37 L. Ed. 162. But we are unwilling to extend that precedent." Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 80, 44 L. Ed. 377.

96. Conduct of complainant.—Deweese v. Reinhard, 165 U. S. 386, 390, 41 L. Ed. 757. See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; MAXIMS.

Where, for the purpose of evading the payment of a tax on his money on deposit, which the law of a state required to be listed for taxation March 1 in each year, a party withdrew it February 28 from a bank where it was subject to his check, converted it into notes of the United States, and deposited them to his general credit March 3, and the state court passed a decree dismissing the bill in equity by him filed to restrain the collection of the tax thereon, held, that the decree was correct; and that, although such notes were exempt from taxation by or under state or municipal authority, a court of equity would not use its extraordinary powers to promote such a scheme devised for the purpose of enabling a party to escape his proportionate share of the burdens of taxation. Mitchell v. Board of Comm'rs, 91 U. S. 206, 23 L. Ed. 302; Shotwell v. Moore, 129 U. S. 590, 597, 32 L. Ed. 827.

"It is well settled that if a person wishes his trademark property to be protected by a court of equity, he must come into court with clean hands, and if it appears that the trademark for which he seeks protection is itself a misrepresentation to the public, and has acquired a value with the public by fraudulent misrepresentation in advertisements, all relief will be denied to him. This is the doctrine of the highest court of England, and no court has laid it down with any greater stringency than the supreme court of the United States. Manhattan Medicine Co. v. Wood, 108 U. S. 218, 27 L. Ed. 706." Worden v. California Fig Syrup Co., 187 U. S. 516, 535, 47 L. Ed. 282. See the title TRADEMARKS, TRADENAMES, AND UNFAIR COMPETITION.

97. Offer to do equity.—In Stanley v. Gadsby, 10 Pet. 521, 9 L. Ed. 518, it was held that a person seeking an injunction to the end that he might be delivered from usury, must do equity by paying the principal and legal interest. Whenever a complainant does not comply with the rule, by averring in his bill that he is ready and willing to pay the principal and interest, he can have no standing in a court of equity. See the titles EQUITY; vol. 5, p. 803; MAXIMS.

Where, in a lease of a water power, the lease provides in a plain way and with a specification of the rates for an abatement of rent for every failure of water, the tenant cannot, on a bill by him to enjoin a writ of possession by the landlord, after a recovery by him at law for forfeiture of the estate for nonpayment of rent reserved, set up a counterclaim for repairs to the water channel made necessary by the landlord's gross negligence.

judgment;[98] and the same rule applies where he voluntarily abstained from using the defense in the trial at law.[99] Even though a complainant were guilty of such delay in seeking relief upon infringement of his patent as to preclude him from obtaining an account of gains and profits, yet, if he were otherwise so entitled, an injunction against future infringement might properly be awarded.[1]

He is confined to the remedy specified in the lease; a covenant that a lessor will make repairs not being to be implied. In such a case, before he can ask relief from a forfeiture, he should at least tender the difference between the amount of rents due, and the amount which he could rightly claim by way of reduction for failure of water. Sheets v. Selden, 7 Wall. 416, 19 L. Ed. 166. See the titles COVENANTS, vol. 5, p. 5; LANDLORD AND TENANT.

If the requirements of the law had been complied with, or if the appellant had enforced the forfeiture by a recovery in ejectment, upon tender of the amount due with interest and costs at the proper time, relief would have been given; in the former case in equity by injunction, and in the latter by motion and stay of execution. Where it is necessary to take an account between the parties, no tender need be made before bringing the bill. This subject was fully examined in Sheets v. Selden, 7 Wall. 416, 420, 19 L. Ed. 166. Prout v. Roby, 15 Wall. 471, 477, 21 L. Ed. 58. See the title TENDER.

98. Laches—Failure to make defense at law.—Hungerford v. Sigerson, 20 How. 156, 161, 15 L. Ed. 869; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 665, 675, 29 L. Ed. 1013; Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192, 12 L. Ed. 111; Sample v. Barnes, 17 How. 70, 14 L. Ed. 330; Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652, 653, 24 L. Ed. 216; Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 445, 15 L. Ed. 124; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 11, 27 L. Ed. 346; Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584, 14 L. Ed. 552; Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch 332, 3 L. Ed. 362; Cragin v. Lovell, 109 U. S. 194, 198, 27 L. Ed. 903; Jones v. League, 18 How. 76, 15 L. Ed. 263; Life Ins. Co. v. Bangs, 103 U. S. 780, 782, 26 L. Ed. 608.

A court of equity will not relieve against a judgment at law where the party seeking its aid has been guilty of laches or fault. Brown v. County of Buena Vista, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. Ed. 422. See the titles JUDGMENT AND DECREES; LACHES.

Where the defendants in a suit at law had an opportunity to make their defense there, and failed to make it, they cannot be heard in a court of equity. It was adjudged in the case of Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192, 204, 12 L. Ed. 111, that whenever a competent defense shall have existed at law, the party who may have neglected to use it will never be permitted to supply the omission and set it up by bill in chancery. "This court has never departed from the foregoing rule, nor allowed the circuit courts to depart from it in cases brought here. Nor can we do so without violating the sixteenth section of the judiciary act of 1789, in its true sense. Apparent aberrations may be found, but they are only apparent." Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584, 586, 14 L. Ed. 552.

99. Waiver of defense at law.—Certain claims of set-off existed which defendant purposely abstained from using in the trial at law. It was held if he voluntarily waived this defense, relying upon a separate action, he has no right now to ask a court of equity to interfere. Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 15 L. Ed. 124.

1. Infringement of patent—Effect of delay.—Menendez v. Holt, 128 U. S. 514, 523, 32 L. Ed. 526. See the title PATENTS.

"In McLean v. Fleming, 96 U. S. 245, 24 L. Ed. 828, there had been apparently a delay of about twenty years in instituting proceedings, but the court observed that 'equity courts will not, in general, refuse an injunction on account of delay in seeking relief, where the proof of infringement is clear, even though the delay may be such as to preclude the party from any right to an account for past profits.' An injunction was granted in this case, but it was held that by reason of inexcusable laches, the complainant was not entitled to an account of gains or profits." Saxlehner v. Eisner, etc., Co., 179 U. S. 19, 39, 45 L. Ed. 60.

"An effort was made in Menendez v. Holt, 128 U. S. 514, 32 L. Ed. 526, to obtain a reconsideration of the principle of McLean v. Fleming, so far as it was therein held that an injunction might be awarded, though the complainant were precluded by his delay from obtaining an account of gains and profits. But the chief justice observed: 'The intentional use of another's trademark is a fraud; and when the excuse is that the owner permitted such use, that excuse is disposed of by affirmative action to put a stop to it. Persistence then in the use is not innocent, and the wrong is a continuing one, demanding restraint by judicial interposition when properly invoked. Mere delay or acquiescence cannot defeat the remedy by injunction in support of the legal right, unless it has been continued so long and under such circumstances as to defeat the right itself, * * * nor will the issue of an injunction against the infringement of a trademark be denied on the ground that mere procrastination in seeking redress for depredations had deprived the true proprietor of his legal right.'" Saxlehner v. Eisner, etc., Co., Question for Court.—Whether the time which has elapsed since the discovery of the fraud, set up as the ground of relief, be sufficient to bar the remedy, is a question to be determined by the sound discretion of the court.[2]

(2) Government and Officials.—The principle of laches has no application to the government and its officials.[3]

B. In Particular Instances—1. In General.—It would be difficult to enumerate the many instances in which the injunctive power will be exercised, for in the endless variety of cases in which a plaintiff is entitled to equitable relief, if that relief consists in restraining the commission or continuance of acts of defendants, a court of equity administers it by means of a writ of injunction.[4]

2. Against Actions at Law and Other Legal Proceedings—a. Actions at Law—(1) In Whose Favor It May Issue.—An action at law will not as a rule be enjoined at the instance of one not a party thereto,[5] and this is especially so where such complainant is not interested in the decision of suit.[6]

(2) Grounds of Jurisdiction—(a) Inadequacy of Legal Remedy.—Equity will restrain proceedings at law in order to afford a more complete, plain and adequate remedy for the wrong complained of than the party can have at law.[7] But there can be no reason or propriety in appealing to a court of equity to restrain proceedings that are being conducted in other courts, competent to construe the statutes under which they act, and to decide every question that may arise in the course of the proceeding.[8]

Where a court is proceeding without jurisdiction, such proceeding is void at law as well as in equity and the law affords a complete and adequate remedy; consequently, an injunction will not, in the absence of special circumstances, issue.[9]

179 U. S. 19, 39, 45 L. Ed. 60. See, on this, Keyes v. Eureka Min. Co., 158 U. S. 150, 153, 39 L. Ed. 929

2. Question for court.—Brown v. County of Buena Vista, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. Ed. 422. See the title QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT.

3. Laches—Government and officials.—United States v. Kirkpatrick, 9 Wheat. 720, 6 L. Ed. 199. See Georgia v. Tennessee Copper Co., 206 U. S. 230, 51 L. Ed. 1038. See the titles LACHES; STATES; UNITED STATES.

4. Right to relief in particular instances.—As to the right to relief by injunctions, in particular instances, see the appropriate titles throughout this work. For instance, injunctions against executions, see the title EXECUTIONS, ante, p. 84; injunctions against judgments, see the title JUDGMENTS AND DECREES; injunctions against nuisances, see the title NUISANCES; injunctions against illegal and erroneous taxation, see the title TAXATION, etc.

5. Who may obtain.—New York v. Connecticut, 4 Dall. 1, 1 L. Ed. 715.

6. Person not interested in decision.—New York v. Connecticut, 4 Dall. 1, 1 L. Ed. 715.

7. Grounds of jurisdiction—Adequacy of remedy.—Crampton v. Zabriskie, 101 U. S. 601, 25 L. Ed. 1070. See ante, "Inadequacy of Other Remedies," V, A, 3, a.

Where a married woman became a trustee of land for the benefit of her son-in-law, and executed a deed (without joining her husband) to a bona fide purchaser, who had paid the purchase money to the cestui que use, it was not necessary, under the circumstances of the case, for her husband to join in the deed. These circumstances were, that by executing the deed she did not defeat an estate to which her husband was entitled, nor did he claim adversely to the deed, but it was within the scope of her authority as trustee, and therefore will be sustained by a court of equity against her heirs. Her children, who were her heirs at law, having brought a suit at law to recover the land from the bona fide purchaser, a court of equity will interpose to restrain their proceedings. The alleged illegality of the consideration of the deed of trust—viz, that it was intended to protect the property of her son-in-law, who was insolvent—was not sufficient to destroy the independent equity of the bona fide purchaser, nor was it necessary to make the son-in-law a party when the bona fide purchaser sought relief in a court of equity against the title of the heirs. Gridley v. Wynant, 23 How. 500, 16 L. Ed. 411.

8. Proceedings before competent tribunal.—Wilson v. Lambert, 168 U. S. 611, 618, 42 L. Ed. 599; Parcher v. Cuddy, 110 U. S. 742, 743, 28 L. Ed. 313; Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 373, 21 L. Ed. 174; Hapgood v. Hewitt, 119 U. S. 226, 234, 30 L. Ed. 369.

9. Court proceeding without jurisdiction.—Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584, 14 L. Ed. 552.

(b) Equitable Defenses in General.—Bills in equity to restrain actions at law are not infrequently brought by defendants in such actions to enable them to avail themselves of defenses which would not be valid at law.[10] But an injunction will not issue for matters of defense of which the complainant can avail himself in an action at law.[11] And where an equitable estoppel can be set at law, equally as well as in equity, an injunction should be disallowed.[12]

(c) Multiplicity of Suits.—A bill to restrain the prosecution of a suit will be sustained in order to prevent a multiplicity of suits.[13]

10. Equitable defenses not available at law.—Branson v. Wirth, 17 Wall. 32, 21 L. Ed. 566; Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 686, 39 L. Ed. 578. See ante, "Inadequacy of Other Remedies," V, A, 3, a.

Equitable estoppel.—In Drexel v. Berney, 122 U. S. 241, 30 L. Ed. 1219, a bill was sustained by a defendant in an action at law, to enjoin the plaintiff in such action from setting up certain facts, of which it was claimed she was equitably estopped to avail herself in such action.

In Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 39 L. Ed. 167, a bill was sustained by a defendant in ejectment, to enjoin the plaintiff from availing himself of a deed, against the use of which he was held to be equitably estopped. See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

"Analogous cases are those in which bills have been sustained to enable a defendant to make use of an equitable setoff. North Chicago Rolling Mills Co. v. St. Louis Ore, etc., Co., 152 U. S. 596, 38 L. Ed. 565." Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 686, 39 L. Ed. 578.

Mistake as to extent of liability on bond.—In Griswold v. Hazard, 141 U. S. 260, 35 L. Ed. 678, a suit on ne exeat bond, against surety thereon, was restrained. There was a mistake and misunderstanding of parties as to the extent and nature of the bond, rendering reformation of the bond necessary. The death of the defendant in the suit in which the bond was given rendered a decree of reformation inappropriate, hence an injunction against any suit on the bond was rendered.

Restraining collection of purchase money.—A court of equity may restrain the collection of the purchase money, where the title to the property sold fails and the vendee has been disturbed in his possession by a paramount title, and the vendor is insolvent. Wanzer v. Truly, 17 How. 584, 15 L. Ed. 216, cited in McCullough v. Roots, 19 How. 349, 354, 15 L. Ed. 681.

11. Defenses available at law.—Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 373, 21 L. Ed. 174; Deweese v. Reinhard, 165 U. S. 386, 41 L. Ed. 757. Hapgood v. Hewitt, 119 U. S. 226, 30 L. Ed. 369; Scottish Union, etc., Ins. Co. v. Bowland, 196 U. S. 611, 49 L. Ed. 619.

An action of ejectment having been commenced to recover possession, a bill in equity was filed by the defendant to enjoin the further prosecution of that action and to quiet his title. The plaintiff in the injunction case contended that, notwithstanding the action of the department of the interior in certifying the land in controversy to the state of Nebraska and the subsequent conveyances in the chain of title from that state to the appellees, such apparent legal title was absolutely void, because, by the acts of congress the land was not subject to selection by the state, it being within the limits of the land grant to the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad Company, and reserved for homestead and pre-emption, but not for private entry. All the facts upon which that contention rested were matters of statute and record, and any defense to the apparent legal title created by them was available in an action at law to recover possession. Held, that, without deciding whether the selection and certification of these lands were absolutely void or simply voidable at the election of the government, or were valid and beyond any right of challenge of the government, or any one else, a case was not presented for the interference of a court of equity. Deweese v. Reinhard, 165 U. S. 386, 388, 41 L. Ed. 757.

In Scottish Union, etc., Ins. Co. v. Bowland, 196 U. S. 611, 49 L. Ed. 619, equity refused to enjoin the prosecution of civil suits against a foreign corporation, for the recovery of certain taxes on property within the state on the ground that the corporation was not personally liable, as such defense could be set up by answer at law.

12. Equitable estoppel available at law.—Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 39 L. Ed. 167. See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

13. Multiplicity of suits.—Dietzsch v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 494, 497, 26 L. Ed. 497. See, also, Equator Co. v. Hall, 106 U. S. 86, 27 L. Ed. 114; Root v. Woolworth, 150 U. S. 401, 411, 37 L. Ed. 1123. See the title MULTIPLICITY OF SUITS.

Enjoining relitigation of decided question.—In order to prevent a relitigation of question once decided as between the same parties, a court of equity will, in the protection of its own judgments and decrees, award an injunction. Root v. Woolworth, 150 U. S. 401, 37 L. Ed. 1123.

Enjoining new trials in ejectment.—Where a party has, at common law, recovered judgment in ejectment, equity

(d) Fraud.—Where any contract, obligation or evidence of indebtedness is founded in fraud, the general rule is that defendant can make a good defense at law, and an injunction will not issue.[14] And of course where the facts proven do not amount to fraud, no injunction will issue.[15]

(e) Former Suit Pending in Equity in Foreign Jurisdiction.—The plea of a former suit pending in equity in a foreign jurisdiction will not authorize an injunction against prosecuting an action at law for the same cause.[16]

b. Restraining Interposition of Inequitable Defenses.—An injunction will issue to restrain a defendant in an action at law from interposing an inequitable defense or one which he is estopped to assert, where such defense, if recognized, would work injury to the plaintiff.[17]

c. Ancillary Jurisdiction.—See the title COURTS, vol. 4, p. 982.

d. Courts Having Concurrent Jurisdiction.—No injunction ever goes to the court having a concurrent jurisdiction of the question.[18] It is a rule absolutely necessary to be observed by courts who have a concurrent jurisdiction, that in all cases "where the jurisdiction of a court and the right of a plaintiff to prosecute his suit in it have once attached, that right cannot be arrested or taken away by proceedings in another court. This rule, it is said, "has its foundation not merely in comity, but in necessity. If one may enjoin, the other may retort by injunction, and thus the parties be without remedy."[19] But courts for the purpose of protecting their jurisdiction over persons and subject matter may enjoin parties who are amenable to their process and subject to their will enjoin the unsuccessful party from further litigating the title, there being no limit to the possible number of new trials in ejectment at common law. Equator Co. v. Hall, 106 U. S. 86, 27 L. Ed. 114. See the title EJECTMENT, vol. 5, p. 695.

14. Fraud.—Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501; Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 373, 21 L. Ed. 174. See the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394.

Where for some reason the party liable cannot present the defense fully and completely in a court of law as he can in equity, equity will enjoin proceedings at law. Insurance Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. Ed. 501. See ante, "Equitable Defenses in General," V, B, 2, a, (2), (b).

15. Facts not constituting fraud.—Where a bill seeks an injunction against an ejectment suit on the ground that the plaintiffs in ejectment had obtained their patents through fraud, if the facts proven do not establish the fraud the bill will be dismissed and the parties remitted to the trial at law. Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. 356, 13 L. Ed. 172. See post, "Dismissal of Bill," VI, G. See the title DISMISSAL, DISCONTINUANCE AND NONSUIT, vol. 5, p. 356.

16. Former suit pending in foreign jurisdiction.—Insurance Co. v. Brune, 96 U. S. 588, 24 L. Ed. 737.

If a bill in equity pending in a foreign jurisdiction has no effect upon an action at law for the same cause in a domestic forum, even when pleaded in abatement; if, still more, it has no effect when pleaded to another bill in equity, as the authorities show, it is impossible to see how it can be a basis for an injunction against prosecuting a suit at law. Insurance Co. v. Brune, 96 U. S. 588, 593, 24 L. Ed. 737.

17. Interposition of inequitable defenses.—Bernards Tp. v. Stebbins, 109 U. S. 341, 27 L. Ed. 956; Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 39 L. Ed. 578; Streitwolf v. Streitwolf, 181 U. S. 179, 45 L. Ed. 807. See Michels v. Olmstead, 157 U. S. 198, 201, 39 L. Ed. 671.

In Streitwolf v. Streitwolf, 181 U. S. 179, 45 L. Ed. 807, it was held that an injunction would issue against setting up, in bar of divorce proceedings, a judgment fraudulent obtained in another state.

A bill may be sustained in favor of a plaintiff in a proposed action at law, to enjoin the defendant from setting up a threatened defense, upon the ground that he is equitably estopped from so doing, unless his remedy at law be plain, adequate, and complete. Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 686, 39 L. Ed. 578. See, also, ante, "Equitable Defenses in General," V. B. 2, a, (2), (b). See the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 913.

18. Courts having concurrent jurisdiction.—Orton v. Smith, 18 How. 263, 265, 15 L. Ed. 393.

19. Necessity for rule.—Orton v. Smith, 18 How. 263, 265, 15 L. Ed. 393. See Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 625, 12 L. Ed. 841.

"The doctrine is firmly established that where the jurisdiction of a court, and the right of a plaintiff to prosecute his suit in it, have once attached, that right cannot be arrested or taken away by proceedings in another court, and that where property is actually in the possession of one court of competent jurisdiction, such possession cannot be disturbed by process out of another court of con-jurisdiction from interference with them in respect of property in their possession or identical controversies therein pending, by subsequent proceedings as to the same parties and subject matter in other courts of concurrent jurisdiction.[20]

e. Inferior Boards or Tribunals of Special Jurisdiction.—Courts of equity will not interfere with the proceedings and determinations of inferior boards or tribunals of special jurisdiction unless it should become necessary to prevent a multiplicity of suits or irreparable injury, or unless the proceeding sought to be annulled or corrected is valid upon its face, and the alleged invalidity consists in matters to be established by extrinsic evidence.[21]

f. Enjoining Proceedings in Other States.—The courts of one state are, in proper cases, permitted to enjoin persons within their jurisdiction from instituting legal proceedings in other states, or from further proceeding in actions already begun.[22]

g. Proceedings in Federal and State Courts.—See ante, "Proceedings in Federal and State Courts," IV, C, 5.

h. Prosecution and Punishment of Crime.—See ante, "Prosecution and Punishment of Crime," IV, C, 7.

3. Trade Secrets.—A trade secret is entitled to the protection of the law. The plaintiff has the right to keep the work which it has done or paid for doing to itself. The fact that others might do similar work, does not authorize them to steal plaintiff's.[23] The plaintiff does not lose its rights by communicating the result to persons, even if many, in confidential relations to itself, under a contract not to make it public, and strangers to the trust will be restrained from getting at the knowledge by inducing a breach of trust and using knowledge obtained by such a breach.[24]

VI. Procedure to Obtain.

A. Jurisdiction.—See ante, "Jurisdiction," IV. See, also, the titles Equity, vol. 5, p. 803; Jurisdiction.

B. Parties—1. In General.—It is a general rule of equity that every person who is interested in the subject matter, or in the event of the suit, should be made a party, plaintiff or defendant.[25] In equity a final decree cannot be pronounced until all parties interested are brought before the court.[26] This is current jurisdiction. Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. Ed. 981." In re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 460, 41 L. Ed. 782.

20. For protection of jurisdiction.—Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 273, 38 L. Ed. 981.

21. Tribunals of special jurisdiction.—Ewing v. St. Louis, 5 Wall. 413, 418, 18 L. Ed. 657.

22. Enjoining proceedings in other states.—Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 268, 38 L. Ed. 981.

Enjoining attachment in another state.—A creditor, who is a citizen and resident of the same state as his debtor, against whom insolvent proceedings have been instituted in such state, is bound by the assignment of the debtor's property in such proceedings, and if he attempts to seize or attach the personal property of the debtor situated in another state, and embraced in the assignment, he may be restrained by injunction by the courts of the state in which he and the debtor reside. Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. Ed. 538; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 272, 38 L. Ed. 981.

But a creditor who is not a citizen or resident of the same state with his debtor may proceed in another state against property there, unaffected by insolvency proceedings in the state of the debtor's residence, if in accordance with the law of such other state. Reynolds v. Adden, 136 U. S. 348, 36 L. Ed. 360; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 272, 38 L. Ed. 981.

23. Trade secrets.—Board of Trade v. Christie Grain, etc., Co., 198 U. S. 236, 250, 49 L. Ed. 1031. Compare Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co., 188 U. S. 239, 249, 250, 47 L. Ed. 460. See, also, American Colortype Co. v. Continental Colortype Co., 188 U. S. 104, 47 L. Ed. 404.

24. Effect of communicating results to others.—Board of Trade v. Christie Grain, etc., Co., 198 U. S. 236, 250, 49 L. Ed. 1031.

25. Parties—In general.—See the title PARTIES.

26. Interested parties must be before court.—Marshall v. Beverley, 5 Wheat. 313, 5 L. Ed. 97; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204; Mallow v. Hinde, 12 Wheat. 193, 6 L. Ed. 599.

certainly true where it is in the power of the plaintiff to make them parties.[27] Where an injunction suit is brought which relates to rights in corporations, private or municipal, all persons whose interests, either legal or equitable, will be affected by the decree prayed for, should be made parties.[28] It is not necessary, in a court of limited jurisdiction to certain persons parties, to a bill to enjoin a judgment, it not being considered an original bill, if their introduction would render the jurisdiction of the court doubtful.[29]

2. PARTIES PLAINTIFF.—Equity will not grant relief where the allegations of the complainant show that he has no title nor interest in the subject matter of the dispute.[30]

One or More Suing for All.—One or more of those who have a common interest in the subject of the suit may sue in behalf of all of them, where such parties are numerous and widely scattered.[31]

3. PARTIES DEFENDANT—a. Proper and Necessary Parties.—In a suit for an injunction, all persons not parties plaintiff, whose presence is necessary to a complete adjudication of and who are interested in the controversy, should be made defendants.[32]

27. Ability of plaintiff to make parties defendant.—Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204.

28. Suits against corporations.—Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co., 184 U. S. 199, 46 L. Ed. 499. In this case, a corporation which held a majority of the stock in two other corporations was made a party; the court held that this fact did not dispense with the necessity of making the other corporations and their stockholders parties.

29. Introduction of parties rendering jurisdiction doubtful.—Simms v. Guthrie, 9 Cranch 19, 3 L. Ed. 642; Dunn v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 1, 8 L. Ed. 845; Webb v. Barnwall, 116 U. S. 193, 196, 29 L. Ed. 595. See Jones v. Andrews, 10 Wall. 327, 19 L. Ed. 935; Christmas v. Russell, 14 Wall. 69, 81, 20 L. Ed. 762.

30. Interest of plaintiff.—See ante, "Sufficiency of Right, Title or Interest," V, A, 2, a, (2). See the title PARTIES.

31. Parties numerous and widely scattered.—Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 41 L. Ed. 648. See the title PARTIES.

Enforcement of liquor law.—Importers of liquor for their individual consumption are held not to have sufficient interest to permit them to sue in behalf of all. Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 41 L. Ed. 648.

32. Defendants—In general.—Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co., 184 U. S. 199, 46 L. Ed. 499; Litchfield v. Register & Receiver, 9 Wall. 575, 19 L. Ed. 681.

In a suit to restrain the levy of an attachment upon certain property, it was held that the sheriff was the necessary party defendant and that the plaintiffs in the writs of attachment were not necessary parties as it did not appear that they had directed the seizure. North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 34 L. Ed. 936.

Bill assailing power of secretary of interior to execute leases.—Where a bill assailed generally the want of power in the secretary of the interior to execute leases affecting lands owned by a particular Indian tribe, and referred to an application pending for a lease made by the Cherokee Oil & Gas Company, as manifesting but a particular instance in which it was charged that the secretary of the interior might exercise the power conferred by the statute, the corporation named was not an indispensable party to the bill. "Clearly, all the persons with whom the secretary might contract, if he exercised the discretion vested in him by the statute, were not indispensable parties to the determination of the question whether the statute had lawfully conferred such discretionary power upon the official in question." Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 300, 47 L. Ed. 183.

State as necessary party to suit against a corporation.—Suit was brought against the defendant corporation alone, to obtain, among other things, a decree enjoining the company and its officers from acting as a corporation on the ground that its alleged charter was a nullity. It was also brought to forfeit the charter in case it should be held that it had been legally organized, and such forfeiture was prayed on the ground that the company had violated the law by not receiving cash on payment of its shares. It is now claimed that the company defendant could not properly have been made a sole defendant in an action to declare null its charter to be a corporation, and that therefore a decree in such suit declaring the company not to be a corporation (while making no decree upon the question of a violation of the charter by not taking payment for its stock in cash) condemns the corporators and takes away their property without a hearing from them and is not due process of law, they claiming that the franchise to be a corporation was their property exclusively and did not belong to the corporation as such. The court say: "We are of opinion that for the purpose of obtaining a decree declaring the charter void and restraining the officers from acting as a corporation, the state through its attorney general was

Person against Whom No Relief Is Prayed.—A person may be properly made a party defendant to an injunction suit, though no relief is prayed for against him, but rather relief in his favor.[33]

Injunction against Agent.—As a general rule, an injunction will not be allowed against an agent where the principal is not made a party to the suit;[34] however, if the principal is not subject to the jurisdiction of the court the rule may be dispensed with.[35]

Necessity for Coming in of Answers.—As to the necessity for the coming in of the answers of all parties defendant, see post, "Necessity for Answer by All Defendants—Perpetual Injunction," VI, D, 2, a, (1).

b. Retaining Jurisdiction until Conflicting Rights Litigated.—The court may in a proper case retain jurisdiction of a cause on an injunction bill, as between the parties before it, until the conflicting rights of the plaintiff and third persons not parties, may be properly determined before a competent tribunal.[36]

C. Notice.—Injunctions will only be granted on reasonable notice to the adverse party or his attorney of the application.[37] The design and effect of injunctions must render a shorter notice reasonable in the case of an application to a court than would be so construed in most cases of an application to a single judge.[38] And until a general rule be settled, the particular circumstances of each case must be regarded.[39]

a proper party to bring the action, and for the reasons stated it was well brought against the corporation alone and the final injunction was properly issued." New Orleans Debenture, etc., Co v. Louisiana, 180 U. S. 320, 326, 45 L. Ed. 550.

Where an injunction suit is brought against an officer who has exceeded his authority, under writs of execution or attachment, to restrain the continued wrongdoing, it is not essential that the plaintiffs in the writs be joined as parties defendant, where it does not appear, either from the pleadings or the proofs, that they advised or directed the sheriff to seize the particular property, as the property of their judgment debtor. North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 284, 34 L. Ed. 930.

33. Person against whom no relief is prayed.—Where a bill is filed by stockholders to enjoin the setting up of a claim for purchase money, against the lands of a company whose capital stock is divided into shares, the ground of the bill being that the party now setting up the claim, induced the complainants to buy their shares by fraudulently representing that the property sold to the company was unencumbered, and that he had no interest in it—the agents of the company also joining in such misrepresentations—the company may be properly made a defendant, though no relief is prayed for against it, but rather relief in its favor. Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. Ed. 734.

34. Injunctions against agent.—Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204.

35. Principal not subject to jurisdictions.—Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204. In this case the principal was a sovereign state.

36. Retention of case until rights litigated.—If it be shown to the circuit court, that from the incapacity of that court to bring all the necessary parties before it, that court cannot decide finally the rights in contest, the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, may retain the cause, and the injunction, on the application of the complainants, until they have reasonable time to litigate the matters of controversy between them, and third parties, in the courts of the state, or such other courts as have jurisdiction over them; and if then it is made to appear by the judgment of a competent tribunal, that the complainants are equitably invested with the rights of such parties, the circuit court can proceed to decree upon the merits. Such a proceeding would seem to be justified, in order to prevent a failure of justice; and the cause will remain under the control of the circuit court, so as to enable it to prevent unreasonable delay, by the negligence or design of the parties, in litigating their rights before some competent tribunal. Mallow v. Hinde, 12 Wheat. 193, 194, 198, 6 L. Ed. 599. See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; PARTIES.

37. Notice.—The prohibition contained in the statute (1 U. S. Stat. 334-5, § 5), that writs of injunction shall not be granted, without reasonable notice to the adverse party or his attorney, extends to injunctions granted by the supreme or circuit court as well as to those granted by a single judge. New York v. Connecticut, 4 Dall. 1, 1 L. Ed. 715. See the title SUMMONS AND PROCESS.

38. Time of notice.—New York v. Connecticut, 4 Dall. 1, 1 L. Ed. 715.

39. Particular circumstances considered.—New York v. Connecticut, 4 Dall. 1, 1 L. Ed. 715.

D. Pleading—1. Bill or Complaint—Form and Requisites—a. Allegations as to Grounds of Application—(1) Certainty and Clearness.—The allegations of the complaint must be definite and certain.[40] A charge, though general, is sufficiently certain where it sets forth the essential ultimate facts upon which the plaintiff rests his claim for relief. All the minute circumstances which may be proven in support of the general allegation need not be set forth.[41]

(2) Allegation of Facts—Sufficiency of Allegation—(a) In General.—A bill in equity for an injunction must set forth the facts and circumstances which give rise to his right to ask for equitable relief.[42] A bill for an injunction, the allegation of which covers the entire equity of the case, is sufficient on demurrer.[43]

40. Pleading—Allegation definite and certain.—St. Louis v. Knapp Co., 104 U. S. 658, 26 L. Ed. 883. See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; PLEADING.

41. General charge sufficient.—A bill for an injunction averred what the defendant proposed to do, and that averment was accompanied by a general charge or statement as to the ultimate effect of defendant's proposed acts, to wit; a diversion of the river from its natural course and the creating of a deposit of mud and sediment in the river, thereby rendering it impossible for boats and vessels engaged in navigation to approach or land at certain designated places. The court held that this was a sufficiently certain, though general, statement of the essential ultimate facts upon which the complainant rested his claim for relief. It was not necessary to aver all the minute circumstances which may be proven in support of the general allegations. The allegations might have been more extended, without departing from correct rules of pleading, but they distinctly apprised the defense of the proposed case it was required to meet and are sufficient. St. Louis v. Knapp Co., 104 U. S. 658, 26 L. Ed. 883.

42. Allegation of facts—In general.—Where a bill in chancery was filed for the purpose of enjoining a judgment at law, obtained upon a promissory note, and the bill did not allege that adequate relief could not be had at law, and did not contain any charges of fraud; neither did it aver that it was owing to the contrivance or unfairness of the defendant that an adequate remedy could not be had at law, nor did it show the necessity of interference by a court of equity to obtain a discovery, the bill must be dismissed. Hungerford v. Sigerson, 20 How. 156, 15 L. Ed. 869.

A bill based upon general allegations of the absence of an adequate remedy at law, the necessity of relief to avoid a multiplicity of suits and to prevent the casting of a cloud upon the title of the nation to its said lands, the claim that irreparable injury would be caused and wrong and oppression result, and that there would be a deprivation of property rights of the complainants and of other citizens of the Cherokee Nation, prayed an injunction against further action by the secretary of the interior in the premises. It was held that the statements in the bill were sufficient to show that the jurisdiction of a court of equity was properly invoked. Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 300, 47 L. Ed. 183.

A bill which calls for a decree declaring merely an abstract right, and does not set any other ground for relief, should be dismissed. Mayre v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 325, 29 L. Ed. 205.

43. Allegations covering entire equity of case.—Atkins v. Dick, 14 Pet. 114, 10 L. Ed. 378.

A bill for an injunction was filed, alleging that the parties who had obtained a judgment at law for the amount of a bill of exchange, of which the complainant was an endorser, had, before the suit was instituted, obtained payment of the bill from a subsequent endorser, out of funds of the drawer of the bill, obtained by the subsequent endorser from one of the drawers. A demurrer was filed on the ground that neither the amount nor value, nor nature of the effects charged to have been paid, was specified, and that it was not stated what portion of the debt was discharged nor whether any of such effects proved to be productive. It was held that the demurrer was untenable, in that the allegation covers the whole equity of the case; it asserts that there was a payment, and that payment was of the money mentioned in the bill, that is, the whole amount of the bill. Atkins v. Dick, 14 Pet. 114, 10 L. Ed. 378.

A bill was filed in the circuit court to enjoin the infringement of letters patent. The bill alleges that the plaintiff is the original and first inventor of a new and useful improvement and invention; that he applied for and obtained a patent, of which is given a full, clear and exact description; that he was and is the owner of the patent; that he has invested and expended a large sum of money for the purpose of carrying on the business of making and selling the invention. On the other hand it alleges that the defendant had manufactured, used and vended to others an article containing and embracing the invention, without a license from the plaintiff, in violation of his rights and in infringement of the patent, with full

(b) Particular Allegations—aa. Allegations as to Right or Title of Complainant.—The complaint must sufficiently set forth the right, title or interest of the complainant.[44]

bb. Averment of Inadequacy of Other Remedies.—A bill praying an injunction must set forth facts from which the court can determine the inadequacy of the legal remedies.[45]

cc. Averment of Facts Constituting Injury.—The complaint must set forth the facts constituting the injury; it is not sufficient to merely allege injury.[46]

dd. Fraud.—Relief cannot be given on the ground of fraud unless it be made a distinct allegation to the bill, so that it may be put in issue in the pleadings.[47] In stating the facts which constitute a fraud, where relief is sought in a bill in equity, the evidence which may be adduced to prove that fraud need not be recited in the bill. It is sufficient if the main facts or incidents which constitute the fraud against which relief is desired shall be fairly stated, so as to put the defendant upon his guard and apprise him of what answer may be required of him.[48]

ee. Offer to Do Equity.—The complaint must allege that the complainant has done or is willing to do everything necessary to entitle him to the relief sought.[49] In some cases payment or tender of payment of the sum conceded to be due is a condition precedent to invoking equitable relief as against the balance claimed by defendant,[50] and, of course, a compliance with such condition must be set forth in the complaint.[51] knowledge of those rights and to the plaintiff's injury; that he has made and sold large quantities, is still engaged in selling the same and has a large quantity thereof on hand which he is offering for sale. It was held that the bill is entirely sufficient to put the defendant upon his answer. McCoy v. Nelson, 121 U. S. 484, 30 L. Ed. 1017.

44. Right or title of plaintiff.—Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 341; Mayre v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 325, 29 L. Ed. 205; Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 402, 1 L. Ed. 433.

A sufficient interest in the stock of a company will be inferred, where the bill expressly states that the complainant purchased on his own account and in trust for other parties a large number of shares, and paid therefor upwards of $25,000; and then afterwards states that the defendant threatened to bring an action against the company to enforce the pretended claim, whereby the stock of the company, which the complainant alleges he purchased in good faith, and which he still held, was liable to become greatly depreciated in value; this statement being nowhere denied in the answer—the defendant averring only his ignorance on the subject—and the allegation being fully corroborated by the proof, at least so far as relates to the purchase of stock by the complainant; and no question having been made on the examination as to the complainant's still holding the stock. Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. Ed. 734.

45. Averment of inadequacy of other remedies.—Pollock v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. Ed. 759.

46. Allegation of facts constituting injury.—Griffing v. Gibb, 2 Black 519, 17 L. Ed. 353; Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 81, 44 L. Ed. 377; Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 402, 1 L. Ed. 433.

A general averment that to enforce the tax by distraint and sale of complainant's property would result in irreparable injury, is not sufficient, where there are no facts stated from which it could be inferred that irreparable injury would be likely to result from such enforcement, and where a plain and adequate remedy to recover the amount is given by statute; no such irreparable injury can be inferred. Some averment of specific facts must be made from which the court can see that irreparable injury would be a natural and probable result. Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Kœhne, 188 U. S. 681, 690, 47 L. Ed. 651. See the title TAXATION.

47. Allegation of fraud.—Patton v. Taylor, 7 How. 132, 12 L. Ed. 637.

48. Stating evidence to be adduced.—United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 128 U. S. 315, 356, 32 L. Ed. 450; Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 103, 6 L. Ed. 429; St. Louis v. Knapp Co., 104 U. S. 658, 26 L. Ed. 883.

49. Offer to do equity.—Stanley v. Gadsby, 10 Pet. 521, 9 L. Ed. 518. See, generally, the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

50. Payment or tender of payment.—See ante, "Offer to Do Equity," V. A, 4, b. For treatment of this point in general, see the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; MAXIMS. For treatment with reference to illegal taxation, see the title TAXATION.

51. Allegation of payment or tender.—See the titles EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803; TAXATION; TENDER.

b. Prayer.—The general rule seems to be that an injunction will not be granted unless the relief desired is expressly prayed for.[52]

c. Verification.—An affidavit to the contents of a bill is not the only foundation for an injunction.[53]

2. Effect of Filing Bill.—If a defendant, after notice of the filing of a bill in equity for an injunction to restrain the building of a structure, persists in completing the building, the court nevertheless is not deprived of the authority, whenever in its opinion justice requires it, to deal with the rights of the parties as they stood at the commencement of the suit, and to compel the defendant to undo what he has wrongfully done since that time, or to answer in damages.[54] But if the intervening event is owing either to the plaintiff's own act or to a power beyond the control of either party, the court will stay its hand.[55]

3. Defendants' Pleading—a. Answer—(1) Necessity for Answer by All Defendants—Perpetual Injunction.—A perpetual injunction should not be decreed until the answers of all defendants have come in.[56]

(2) Verification.—The weight of an answer is very much lessened, if not entirely destroyed, if it is put in unaccompanied by an oath.[57] That an answer not under oath is to be considered merely as a denial of the allegations in the bill, analogous to the general issue at law, so as to put the complainant to the proof of such allegations, has been adopted as a general rule in some cases.[58]

(3) Operation and Effect.—Where motion for an injunction is made on bill and answer, sworn statements in the answer, where responsive to the allegations in the bill, are taken as true.[59]

52. Prayer for relief.—Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. 50, 77, 18 L. Ed. 721. See the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

53. Affidavit to bill.—Schermerhorn v. L'Espenasse, 2 Dall. 360, 1 L. Ed. 415.

In Schermerhorn v. L'Espenasse, 2 Dall. 360, 1 L. Ed. 415, it was held that an affidavit was not the only foundation for the issuance of an injunction and that other proof should be allowed. In this case the court say: "In the very case now before the court, the power of attorney, operating effectually as a transfer of the property, is certainly stronger evidence than an affidavit of the interested party."

54. Effect of filing bill—Defendant proceeds at his own risk.—Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 654, 40 L. Ed. 293.

55. Intervening event beyond defendant's control.—"For example, appeals have been dismissed by this court when the plaintiff had executed a release of his right to appeal; Elwell v. Fosdick, 134 U. S. 500, 33 L. Ed. 998; or when the rights of both parties had come under the control of the same persons; Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 251, 12 L. Ed. 1067; Cleveland v. Chamberlain, 1 Black 419, 17 L. Ed. 93; Wood-Paper Co. v. Heft, 8 Wall. 333, 19 L. Ed. 378; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Southern Tel. Co., 125 U. S. 695, 31 L. Ed. 853; South Spring, etc., Min. Co. v. Amador, etc., Min. Co., 145 U. S. 300, 36 L. Ed. 712; or when the matter had been comprised and settled between the parties; Dakota County v. Glidden, 113 U. S. 222, 28 L. Ed. 981; or when, pending a suit concerning the validity of the assessment of a tax, the tax was paid; San Mateo County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 116 U. S. 138, 29 L. Ed. 589; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 547, 33 L. Ed. 1016; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 141 U. S. 696, 35 L. Ed. 906; or the amount of the tax was tendered, and deposited in a bank, which by statute had the same effect as actual payment and receipt of the money; California v. San Pablo, etc., R. Co., 149 U. S. 308, 37 L. Ed. 747." Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 654, 40 L. Ed. 293.

56. Answers must have come in.—Marshall v. Beverley, 5 Wheat. 313, 5 L. Ed. 97. See ante, "Parties Defendant," VI, B, 3.

Where a bill was filed for a perpetual injunction, on judgments obtained on certain bills of exchange, drawn by the plaintiff, and negotiated to the defendant, and which had subsequently passed from the latter into the hands of third persons, by whom the judgments were obtained; held, that the injunction could not be decreed, until their answers had come in, although the bill stated, and the defendant admitted, that he had paid the judgments, and was then the only person interested in them; because such statement and admission might be made by collusion. Marshall v. Beverley, 5 Wheat. 313, 5 L. Ed. 97.

57. Verification of answer.—It was so held in Union Bank v. Geary, 5 Pet. 99, 8 L. Ed. 60, where an injunction bill was filed, upon the oath of the complainant, against a corporation and the answer was put in, under their common seal, unaccompanied by an oath.

58. Considered merely as denial of allegations.—Union Bank v. Geary, 5 Pet. 99, 8 L. Ed. 60.

59. Operation and effect of answer—Sworn statements.—Monroe Cattle Co. v.

b. Demurrer.—Where the defendant demurs to the injunction bill, the court, in considering the case, are to take all the allegations in the bill as true.[60]

E. Discretion of Court—1. In General.—See ante, "Discretion of Court," V, A, 1, a.

2. Imposition of Terms—a. In General.—The discretion of imposing terms upon a party, as a condition of granting or withholding an injunction, is an inherent power of the court, exercised for the purpose of effecting justice between the parties.[61] The condition of the suit at law may be a reason for imposing terms on the party who applies for an injunction, but can be no reason for refusing it.[62]

b. Relief from Conditions.—It would seem to follow that, in the absence of an imperative statute to the contrary, the court should have the power to mitigate the terms imposed, or to relieve from them altogether, whenever in the course of the proceedings it appears that it would be inequitable or oppressive to continue them.[63]

F. Evidence—1. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—Fraud is not to be presumed and the burden is upon the complainant to establish it; and failing to do so, ground for equitable relief fails also, and the parties should be left to a settlement of their rights in an action at law.[64]

Becker, 147 U. S. 47, 37 L. Ed. 72. See ante, "Verification," VI, D, 2, a, (2).

60. Demurrer.—Atkins v. Dick, 14 Pet. 114, 10 L. Ed. 378. See the title DEMURRERS, vol. 5, p. 293.

61. Imposition of terms.—Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 437, 26 L. Ed. 1060; Parker v. Circuit Court, 12 Wheat. 561, 6 L. Ed. 729; Mechanics' Bank v. Lynn, 1 Pet. 376, 7 L. Ed. 185; Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 214, 30 L. Ed. 642.

The power to impose such conditions is founded upon, and arises from, the discretion which the court has in such cases, to grant, or not to grant, the injunction applied for. It is a power inherent in the court, as a court of equity, and has been exercised from time immemorial. Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 445, 26 L. Ed. 1060. In this case the court say: "We are inclined to think that the court has this power; and that it is an inherent power, which does not depend on any provision in the bond that the party shall abide by such order as the court may make as to damages (which is the usual formula in England); nor on the existence of an express law or rule of court (as adopted in some of the states) that the damages may be ascertained by reference or otherwise, as the court may direct; this being a mere appendage to the principal provision requiring a bond to be taken, and not conferring the power to take one, or to deal with it after it has been taken."

"Mr. Kerr, in his treaties on Injunctions, says: 'In balancing the comparative convenience or inconvenience from granting or withholding an injunction, the court will take into consideration what means it has of putting the party who may be ultimately successful in the position he would have stood if his legal rights had not been interfered with. The court may often by imposing terms on the one party, as the condition of either granting or withholding the injunction, secure the other party from damage in the event of his proving ultimately to have the legal right. * * * The defendant may be required to do such acts, or execute such works, or otherwise deal with the same as the court shall direct; or to enter into an undertaking to refrain from doing in the meantime the acts complained of by the bill, or to abide the order the court may make as to damages or otherwise, in the event of the legal right being determined in favor of the plaintiff. * * * So, on the other hand, as a condition of granting an injunction (the court may), require the plaintiff to enter into an undertaking as to damages in the event of the right at law being determined in favor of the defendant, and the injunction proving to have been wrongly granted.' Kerr, Injunctions, 212. Again, in another place, he says: 'In doubtful cases where damage may be occasioned to the defendant in the event of an injunction or interim restraining order proving to have been wrongly granted, the court will require the plaintiff, as a condition of its interference in his favor, to enter into an undertaking to abide by any order it may make as to damages.' Kerr, 622." Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 437, 26 L. Ed. 1060.

62. Condition of suit at law.—Parker v. Circuit Court, 12 Wheat. 561, 6 L. Ed. 729.

63. Relief from conditions.—Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 437, 26 L. Ed. 1060.

64. Presumption and burden of proof.—While an ejectment suit was pending to try the legal title to a tract of land in Mississippi, the defendants filed a bill on the equity side of the court, praying a perpetual injunction, upon the ground that the plaintiffs had obtained a patent from the United States by fraud and misrepre-

2. Weight and Sufficiency.—An injunction will issue only upon determinate and satisfactory evidence; if the evidence be conflicting and the injury be doubtful, that conflict and doubt will be a ground for withholding an injunction.[65] The question as to what constitutes a preponderance of the evidence is one for the court trying the case.[66] It is a well-settled rule that in a bill praying relief, when the facts charged in the bill as the ground for the decree are clearly and positively denied by a verified answer, and proved only by a single witness, the court will not decree against the defendant.[67] But it is equally well settled that when the witness on the part of the complainant is supported and corroborated by the circumstances sufficient to outweigh the denial in the answer, the rule does not apply.[68]

G. Dismissal of Bill[69]—1. In General—Grounds for Dismissal.—Where the complainant, though he had a right to an injunction at the filing of his bill, has, by a change of circumstances lost it, his bill must be dismissed.[70] A bill to enjoin an action at law should be dismissed, where it appears that the grounds upon which it is based is the result of error.[71]

Where a public officer has retired from office, an action to enjoin the enforcement of liens for taxes, in which he is made defendant, must be dismissed.[72]

2. Operation and Effect.—A dismissal of a bill for an injunction, because of want of jurisdiction, is not res adjudicata.[73]

H. Trial and Hearing.—All parties whose interests are affected by an injunction suit have a right to be heard and a court of equity will not make a decree for a perpetual injunction without giving them an opportunity.[74]

I. Writ or Order—1. In General.—In the absence of some statute or decision authorizing it, the signing of an order for an injunction, by the clerk of a state court, in the absence of the judge, is void and an injunction cannot be considered as having issued.[75]

2. Operation and Effect—a. In General.—Where an action at law is restrained, the subpœna and injunction act on the person to whom they are di-sentation. The fraud was not established by the evidence and it was held that the bill must be dismissed, and the parties remitted to a trial at law. Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. 356, 13 L. Ed. 172. See the titles FRAUD AND DECEIT, ante, p. 394; PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

65. Weight and sufficiency.—Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 248, 45 L. Ed. 497. See the title EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004.

66. Question of preponderance of evidence.—Matthews v. Warner, 112 U. S. 600, 28 L. Ed. 851; Walsh v. Preston, 109 U. S. 297, 27 L. Ed. 940.

67. Single witness uncorroborated.—Union Bank v. Geary, 5 Pet. 99, 8 L. Ed. 60.

68. Single witness corroborated by circumstances.—Union Bank v. Geary, 5 Pet. 99, 8 L. Ed. 60.

69. See, generally, the title DISMISSAL, DISCONTINUANCE AND NONSUIT, vol. 5, p. 356.

70. Right lost by change of circumstances.—Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 18 How. 421, 15 L. Ed. 435. In this case, the act sought to be enjoined had become legalized.

Where nearly four years have elapsed since the filing of the bill, and the exigency, which was made the principal foundation of the bill, has long since passed away, to entertain the bill would be to deal with a state of affairs no longer existing, and which possibly may never recur, and the decree dismissing the bill and dissolving the restraining order was correct. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Transp. Co., 155 U. S. 585, 589, 39 L. Ed. 271.

71. Accounts erroneously adjusted.—A decree of perpetual injunction on suits instituted on the common-law side of the circuit court of the District of Columbia, was reversed and the bill dismissed where the accounts between the parties had been so erroneously adjusted in the circuit court as to make it appear that an equitable set-off existed in favor of the complainant. Nixdorff v. Smith, 16 Pet. 132, 10 L. Ed. 913.

72. Officer retired from office.—Chandler v. Dix, 194 U. S. 590, 592, 48 L. Ed. 1129.

73. Operation and effect.—Smith v. McNeal, 109 U. S. 426, 27 L. Ed. 986; Walden v. Bodley, 14 Pet. 156, 10 L. Ed. 398. See the title RES ADJUDICATA.

74. Right of parties to be heard.—Marshall v. Beverley, 5 Wheat. 313, 5 L. Ed. 97. See ante, "Parties," VI, B.

75. Signing order.—Lawrence v. Morgan's R., etc., Co., 121 U. S. 634, 30 L. Ed. 1018.

rected, not on the record, and it can be of no consequence where the record is.[76] An injunction does not, in general, bind or affect those who were not parties to the suit in which the injunction was obtained or in privity with the parties thereto.[77]

b. Void Order.—A restraining order issued by a court of equity, which was without jurisdiction to entertain the bill, is void and without effect.[78]

J. Dissolution, Continuance and Modification of Preliminary Injunction.—See post, "Dissolution and Continuance," VII; "Modification or Suspension Pending Appeal," VIII.

K. Final Decree—1. AGAINST WHOM ENTERED.—A decree is objectionable which enjoins persons not parties to the suit,[79] unless, perhaps, it is a case wherein the defendants named represent those not named,[80] or where there is a conspiracy between the parties defendant, and unknown parties.[81] An injunction may be granted against some defendants who have been properly summoned, although there are other defendants who are not subject to the court.[82] Where an injunction suit is filed against a public officer, the successor in office may be substituted in his stead and thereby became subjected to the preliminary and final decrees.[83]

2. SCOPE OF RESTRAINT—a. Dependent on Bill or Complaint.—As to relief granted under prayer in bill, see the title EQUITY, vol. 5, p. 803.

b. Limitation of Decree to Relief Sought—(1) In General.—A final decree of injunction should be no broader than the necessities of the case require,[84]

76. Writ or order—Operation and effect.—Parker v. Circuit Court, 12 Wheat. 561, 6 L. Ed. 729.

77. Upon whom binding.—Hawley v. Fairbanks, 108 U. S. 543, 551, 27 L. Ed. 820; Carroll County v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. Ed. 517. See the titles JUDGMENTS AND DECREES; RES ADJUDICATA.

"An injunction against the officers before the judgment against the town was rendered cannot stand in the way of the enforcement of the tax by the circuit court to carry its judgment into execution." Hawley v. Fairbanks, 108 U. S. 543, 552, 27 L. Ed. 820.

78. Void restraining order.—In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 221, 31 L. Ed. 402. See post, "Violation of Void Writ," XII, C, 3.

79. Against whom entered.—In Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 117, 41 L. Ed. 648, the court say: "We do not think it comports with well-settled principles of equity procedure to include them in an injunction in a suit in which they were not heard or represented, or to subject them to penalties for contempt in disregarding such an injunction."

80. Defendants represented.—Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 117, 41 L. Ed. 648.

81. Where the complaint charges no conspiracy on the part of the defendants with others, the decree of injunction should be limited in its operation to the parties to the suit. Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 117, 41 L. Ed. 648.

82. Part of defendants not subject to court.—Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. Ed. 204. In this case, an agent was restrained, though his principal was not subject to the jurisdiction of the court.

83. Successor in office substituted.—"On the face of the record in the Pegues case, the nominal defendants were the treasurers of the counties of Chesterfield and Darlington, in which counties the property of the railroad was situated. Those now holding the office of treasurer in each of the named counties are among the parties on this record, with the addition of the treasurer of Florence County, which county, as we have stated, consists of territory embraced in Chesterfield or Darlington County at the time of the entry of the Pegues decree. That under these circumstances the defendant treasurers, as the successors in office of the officials who were parties to the Pegues case, are privies to that decree, is established. Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 544, 47 L. Ed. 584." Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 200 U. S. 273, 283, 50 L. Ed. 477.

"The object of the supplemental bill was to restrain the present appellant, as successor to Smyth, from attempting to transfer the very matters that stood for judgment in the federal court to the state court by filing a bill in the latter. Such a course might bring about a conflict between those courts, and create the confusion so often deprecated by this court. Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 625, 12 L. Ed. 841; Chittenden v. Brewster, 2 Wall. 191, 17 L. Ed. 839; Orton v. Smith, 18 How. 263, 15 L. Ed. 393." Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 544, 47 L. Ed. 584. See the title PUBLIC OFFICERS.

84. Limitation of decree to relief sought.—McNeill v. Southern R. Co., 202 U. S. 543, 563, 50 L. Ed. 1142.

and should be considered as limited to the subject of the suit.[85] An injunction should not be so broad as to prevent the defendant from exercising his rights.[86]

(2) In Particular Cases—(a) Against Carriers.—Whenever a carrier has been adjudged to have violated the act to regulate commerce in any particular, the court may enjoin the carrier from further like violations, but should not command it in general terms not to violate the act in the future in any particular.[87]

(b) Abatement of Nuisances.—Where there is a power to abate a nuisance, the abatement must be limited by its necessity, and no wanton or unnecessary injury can be committed to the property or rights of individuals.[88]

(c) Illegal Taxation or Assessment.—Where a special assessment is in itself an illegal one, because it rests upon a basis that excludes any consideration of benefits, a decree enjoining the whole assessment is the only appropriate one.[89] While in some case it is proper to enjoin merely the collection of the illegal excess.[90]

(d) Injunction against Unreasonable Rates.—A decree enjoining the enforcement of rates, fixed by a legislature of a railroad commission, as unjust and un-

85. Limited to subject of suit.—Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black 603, 17 L. Ed. 191. Although it be admitted that a board of education erred in supposing that its duty was to provide educational facilities for a great number of colored children who were without an opportunity of primary schools, rather than to maintain a school for the benefit of a few colored children who wish to attend a high school, that was not an error which a court of equity should attempt to remedy by an injunction that would compel the board to withhold all assistance from high schools maintained for white children. Cumming v. Richmond County Board of Education, 175 U. S. 528, 44 L. Ed. 262. See the title SCHOOLS.

86. Injunction preventing exercise of rights.—To the extent that a decree includes in its scope the enjoining defendants from combining in regard to contracts for selling their goods in their own state, it is too broad and will be modified, and limited to that portion of the agreement which is interstate in its character. Addyston Pipe, etc., Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. Ed. 136.

By the laws of Louisiana where there has been a judicial sale of the succession by a probate judge, a judgment creditor of the estate cannot levy an execution upon the property on the ground that the sale was fraudulent and void, and where a purchaser under a judicial sale filed a bill and obtained an injunction against the creditor to stay the execution, it was held that although it was an irregular mode of raising the question of fraud for the creditor to file an answer and set it forth, and allege the sale to be void upon that ground, yet if the court below should perpetuate the injunction upon the defendant's refusal to answer further, the injunction should be free from doubt, in leaving the creditor to pursue other property under his judgment, and also at liberty to file a cross bill. If the injunction priate relief against a tax wrongfully as- the creditor, it goes too far, and the judgment of the court will be reversed. Ford v. Douglas, 5 How. 143, 12 L. Ed. 89.

87. Injunction against common carrier.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515. See the title INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE.

"The requirement of the act to regulate commerce that a court shall enforce an observance of the statute against a carrier who has been adjudged to have violated its provisions, in no way gives countenance to the assumption that congress intended that a court should issue an injunction of such a general character as would be violative of the most elementary principles of justice. The injunction which was granted in the case of In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. Ed. 1092, was not open to such an objection, as its terms were no broader than the conspiracy which it was the purpose of the proceeding to restrain. To accede to the doctrine relied upon would compel us, under the guise of protecting freedom of commerce, to announce a rule which would be destructive of the fundamental liberties of the citizen." New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 404, 50 L. Ed. 515.

88. Abatement of nuisances.—"Thus, if the nuisance consists in the use to which a building is put, the remedy is to stop such use, not to tear down or to demolish the building itself, or to destroy property found within it." Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 678, 31 L. Ed. 205.

89. Illegal assessment.—Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 291, 43 L. Ed. 443. See the titles SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS; TAXATION.

90. Enjoining illegal excess.—In Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. Ed. 903, it was held that the aprossessed on the shares of a bank, is to endoes not clearly reserve these rights to reasonable, should not undertake to enjoin the establishment of other rates.[91]

3. Alternative Relief.—It seems that a court of equity has power to ascertain and order the payment of damages by decree of injunction in the alternative.[92] It is said that a court of equity will not exercise such power where the defendant has committed a permanent injury without authority of law and without pretense of right to take and retain the property.[93] But, however true that proposition may be generally when invoked at the inception and before any work has been done, it is not applicable when the plaintiffs have waited until the work has been progressing for two years and the defendant has expended a large sum of money thereon.[94]

L. Expiration of Injunction.—The act which authorized the district judges in December, 1852, to grant writs of injunction provided, "that the same shall not, unless so ordered by the circuit court, continue longer than to the circuit court next ensuing."[95]

M. Injunction on Final Decree.—The granting of a permanent injunction is part of the final decree and abides the fate of the decree.[96] Where an injunction is issued as part of the judgment, simply a means of carrying out what the court decrees, whether an injunction prior thereto and preliminary in its nature had been granted ex parte or not is immaterial. The final injunction is part of the relief sought by the action, and when the court decides such action in favor of the plaintiff, the injunction is to follow as matter of course.[97]

VII. Dissolution and Continuance.

A. Continuance or Expiration.—Where a bill is dismissed because the complainant has an adequate remedy at law, the injunction may, in the discretion of the court, be continued till the complainant has time to institute a suit at law.[98]

Expiration as of Course.—As to expiration of injunction as a matter of join the collection of the excess upon the payment of the amount justly due.

91. Injunction against unreasonable rates.—Courts of equity are not authorized to revise or change the body of rates imposed on a railroad by a legislature or a commission; they do not determine whether one rate is preferable to another, or what under all circumstances would be fair and reasonable as between the carriers and the shippers; they do not engage in any mere administrative work; but still there can be no doubt of their power and duty to inquire whether a body of rates prescribed by a legislature or a commission is unjust and unreasonable, and such as to work a practical destruction to rights of property, and if found so to be, to restrain its operation. Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 362, 397, 38 L. Ed. 1014, followed in Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 420, 38 L. Ed. 1031.

92. Alternative relief.—New York City v. Pine, 185 U. S. 93, 108, 46 L. Ed. 820. The court in this case said: "The decrees of the circuit court of appeals and the circuit court will be reversed and the case remanded to the latter court, with instructions to set aside its decree and to enter one providing for an ascertainment, in the way courts of equity are accustomed to proceed, of the damages, if any, which the plaintiffs will suffer by the construction of the dam and the appropriation of the water, and for which the defendant is legally responsible, a proposition upon which we express no opinion, and fixing a time within which the defendant will be required to pay such sum, and that upon the failure to make such payment an injunction will issue as prayed for; and, on the other hand, that upon payment a decree will be entered in favor of the defendant. If the plaintiffs shall prefer to have their damages assessed by a jury, leave may be given to dismiss the bill without prejudice to an action at law." Cited with approval in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 195 U. S. 540, 578, 49 L. Ed. 312. And see Osborne v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 147 U. S. 248, 37 L. Ed. 155.

93. Permanent injury without pretense of right.—New York City v. Pine, 185 U. S. 93, 108, 46 L. Ed. 820.

94 When rule not applicable.—New York City v. Pine, 185 U. S. 93, 99, 46 L. Ed. 820.

95. Expiration of injunction.—Parker v. Circuit Court, 12 Wheat. 561, 6 L. Ed. 729.

96. Injunction on final decree.—Buffington v. Harvey, 95 U. S. 99, 24 L. Ed. 381.

97. Injunction follows decree as of course.—New Orleans Debenture, etc., Co. v. Louisiana, 180 U. S. 320, 330, 45 L. Ed. 550.

98. Continuance.—Horsburg v. Baker, 1 Pet. 232, 7 L. Ed. 125. In this case the course, see ante, "Expiration of Injunction," VI, L.

As to effect of appeal upon decree granting, refusing or dissolving an injunction, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, pp. 277, 278.

B. Dissolution of Injunction—1. POWER TO DISSOLVE—DISCRETION OF COURT.—It seems that a court which issues an injunction has inherent power to suspend or dissolve it, where the impropriety of the order is made to appear.[99] The dissolution of a temporary injunction, rests in the sound discretion of the court.[1]

Mandamus does not lie to compel an inferior court to dissolve an injunction.[2]

2. GROUNDS FOR DISSOLUTION.—Where the complainant is guilty of unreasonable delay in prosecuting his action or suit for the determination of his right, his preliminary injunction will be dissolved.[3] An injunction will not be dissolved because of delay in bringing the suit to a decision under it, which appears to have happened through inadvertance and mistake and not procrastination.[4]

3. DISSOLUTION ON BILL.—Where it appears from the bill that the injunction should not have issued in the first instance, the injunction will be dissolved.[5]

4. DISSOLUTION UPON COMING IN OF ANSWER.—Upon the coming in of the answer, the defendant can ask for a dissolution of the injunction upon so much of his answer as is responsive to the bill. But matter in avoidance cannot be relied upon in support of the motion to dissolve.[6] Upon a question of dissolution of an injunction, if the answer neither admits nor denies the allegations of the bill, they are to be taken as true.[7]

VIII. Modification or Suspension Pending Appeal.

The supreme court has power to modify an injunction granted by a decree below, in advance of a final hearing of an appeal on its merits, but it has deemed it advisable to rest the discretion to suspend the writ pending appeal, with the trial judge.[8]

IX. Reinstatement, Revival or Renewal.

Revival after Dissolution.—When an injunction has been dissolved, it cannot be revived except by a new exercise of judicial power, and no appeal by the dissatisfied party can of itself revive it.[9]

Reinstatement or Renewal.—If, in point of law, the injunction ceased to exist, the court could reinstate it at will.[10] The denial of several successive mo-bill was originally for a discovery, but subsequently became a bill for relief. The relief prayed for was a forfeiture, which might have been enforced at law. The bill was remanded for dismissal but the injunction was to be continued, in the discretion of the court, till such proceeding could be instituted.

99. Inherent power to dissolve.—Barnard v. Gibson, 7 How. 650, 12 L. Ed. 857.

1. Dissolution rests in discretion of court.—Buffington v. Harvey, 95 U. S. 99, 24 L. Ed. 381. See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 333.

2. Mandamus.—Ex parte Schwab, 98 U. S. 240, 25 L. Ed. 105, citing Ex parte Loring, 94 U. S. 418, 24 L. Ed. 165; Ex parte Flippin, 94 U. S. 348, 350, 24 L. Ed. 194.

3. Grounds for dissolution—Delay and laches.—Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton, etc., Co., 2 Black 545, 17 L. Ed. 333.

4. Inadvertence and mistake.—Schermerhorn v. L'Espenasse, 2 Dall. 360, 1 L. Ed. 415.

5. Dissolution on bill.—Barnard v. Gibson, 7 How. 650, 12 L. Ed. 857.

6. Dissolution upon coming in of answer.—Young v. Grundy, 6 Cranch 51, 3 L. Ed. 149; Leeds v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Wheat. 380, 383, 4 L. Ed. 266.

7. When allegations of bill to be taken as true.—Young v. Grundy, 6 Cranch 51, 3 L. Ed. 149.

8. Modification or suspension pending appeal.—See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 278.

9. Revival after dissolution.—Knox County v. Harshman, 132 U. S. 14, 16, 33 L. Ed. 249. It is said: "A fortiori, the mere prosecution of an appeal cannot operate as an injunction where none has been granted." See the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 2, p. 277.

10. Reinstatement.—Parker v. Circuit Court, 12 Wheat. 561, 564, 6 L. Ed. 729.

tions to dissolve an injunction, may, under certain circumstances be considered as equivalent to an order renewing it.[11]

X. Bond.

A. Right to Require.—The power to take bond with security as indemnity to the opposite party, and as a substitute for a deposit of money in court, has for a long time been exercised by a court of chancery.[12]

B. Necessity for.—In some jurisdictions, and this is so in the United States courts, without a bond for the payment of damages or other obligation of like effect, a party against whom an injunction wrongfully issues, can recover nothing but costs, unless he can make out a case of malicious prosecution. It is only by reason of the bond, and upon the bond, that he can recover anything.[13] While in other jurisdictions damages may be recovered for suing out an injunction without just cause, independently of a bond.[14]

C. Conditions and Penalties—1. CONDITIONS.—Where a bond was given in order to obtain an injunction to suspend proceedings, under an order of seizure and sale, and the condition was that the principal and sureties "would pay to the plaintiff, in the case of seizure and sale, all such damages as he may recover against us, in case it should be decided that the said injunction was wrongfully obtained," this bond was irregular.[15] The proper condition of an injunction

11. Renewal.—Parker v. Circuit Court, 12 Wheat. 561, 6 L. Ed. 729.

Denial of successive motions to dissolve.—"The judges acted obviously on the opinion, that the injunction still continued, and ought to continue. Two successive motions to dissolve it were overruled. The same view of the case which induced the court thus to continue the injunction, must have induced a reinstatement of it, had it been supposed to be discontinued, by the omission to make an order in it, at the term to which the subpœna was returnable. If, upon the ground of this omission, the mandamus should be awarded, it might be rendered useless by granting a new injunction. It ought to be granted, as the case, as it now appears, shows that the plaintiff in equity is entitled to relief. It must be supposed that, in the opinion of the court, he is so entitled, or the injunction would have been dissolved on motion. The continuance of the injunction is, in substance, equivalent to a renewal of it." Parker v. Circuit Court, 12 Wheat. 561, 562, 564, 6 L. Ed. 729.

12. Bond—Right to require.—Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 211, 30 L. Ed. 642. See Lockhart v. Leeds, 195 U. S. 427, 438, 49 L. Ed. 263.

By express provision of the Revised Statutes (§ 617), proceedings of the courts of the United States in equity causes are "subject to regulation by this court, with power to modify and change such rules." Rule No. 90, promulgated under the authority thus conferred, provides as follows: "In all cases where the rules prescribed by this court or by the circuit court do not apply, the practice of the circuit court shall be regulated by the present practice of the high court of chancery in England, so far as the same may be reasonably applied consistently with the local circumstances and local conveniences of the district where the court is held, not as positive rules, but as furnishing just analogies to regulate the practice." "It is by the force and effect of this rule that the equity courts of the United States exercise their power with respect to the exaction of security when granting writs of injunction. Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 26 L. Ed. 1060." Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 510, 46 L. Ed. 657.

13. Necessity for security.—Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 211, 30 L. Ed. 642; Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. Ed. 939.

Where no bond or undertaking has been required, the court has no power to award damages sustained by either party in consequence of the litigation, except by making such a decree in reference to the costs of the suit as it may deem equitable and just. Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 437, 26 L. Ed. 1060.

14. Damages independent of bond.—Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 211, 30 L. Ed. 642. This is so in Louisiana, 3 La. 291.

15. Conditions.—Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. Ed. 939.

It conformed to the Louisiana practice, by which, if an injunction be dissolved, judgment is at once given for the debt, interest, and damages, against the principal and sureties in the injunction bond. Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. Ed. 939.

But the equity practice in the courts of the United States is regulated by the laws of congress, and the rules of this court, made under the authority of an act of congress; and one of those rules is, that, when not otherwise directed, the practice in the high court of chancery, in England, shall be followed. According to these rules, a court of equity cannot, when it dissolves an injunction, give judg-bond is "to answer all damages which the defendant may sustain in consequence of the injunction being granted."[16]

2. PENALTY.—It is the practice of all courts, in taking injunction bonds, to prescribe a penalty more than enough to cover all possible damages which the respondent may sustain by reason of the injunction.[17]

D. Construction of Bond.—A bond given in pursuance of a law of the United States was governed, as to its construction, not by the local law of a particular state, but by the principles of law as determined by the federal supreme court, and operative throughout the courts of the United States.[18]

E. Liability on Bond—1. IN GENERAL.—It would be against the well-established rule of the chancery court to extend the liability of the surety, by any equitable construction, beyond the terms of his contract. And, in a proceeding upon the bond, the liability of the principal obligor cannot be extended beyond that of the surety.[19]

2. JOINT AND SEVERAL OBLIGORS.—If one of two joint obligors die, the debt is extinguished against his representative, and the surviving obligor is alone chargeable.[20]

3. RAISING QUESTION OF ILLEGALITY.—Securities to an injunction bond cannot go behind the decree to raise a question of illegality as to an agreement on which it is founded.[21]

4. WHEN LIABILITY ACCRUES.—Until the contingency on which the parties agree to pay has happened, and the condition of the bond is broken, no action can be maintained upon it.[22]

F. Procedure on Bond.—Power of Chancery to Assess Damages on Dissolution.—Where no specific provision is made either in the bond, or by any statute or rule of court, and the condition of the bond is simply to pay such damages as the parties enjoined may sustain by reason of the injunction if the court ment, at the same time, against the obligors. It merely orders the dissolution, leaving the obligee to proceed at law against the sureties, if he sustains damage from the delay occasioned by the injunction. Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. Ed. 939. See post, "Procedure on Bond," X, F.

16. Proper condition.—Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. Ed. 939; Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 513, 46 L. Ed. 657.

17. Penalty.—Brown v. Shannon, 20 How. 55, 58, 15 L. Ed. 826.

18. Construction.—Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 514, 46 L. Ed. 657; Cox v. United States, 6 Pet. 172, 8 L. Ed. 359; Duncan v. United States, 7 Pet. 435, 8 L. Ed. 739.

In Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. Ed. 939, it was held that the local law should not have been applied in construing and enforcing an injunction bond given in a court of the United States. See ante, "Condition." X, C, 1.

19. Liability — In general.—Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 179, 13 L. Ed. 939.

"A surety cannot be held beyond the terms or legal effect of his engagement; and when that has respect to the conduct or fidelity of the principal, or to any other matter usually contemplated as arising in the future, it is to be interpreted prospectively, and not retrospectively. But if, from the nature of the case, the subject of guaranty is a past transaction in whole or in part, and the language of the engagement, taken in its natural sense or legal effect, is broad enough to cover it, such language may properly be construed to do so." Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 213, 30 L. Ed. 642. See the title PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

20. Joint and several obligors.—Pickersgill v. Lahens, 15 Wall. 140, 143, 21 L. Ed. 119.

A general statute enacted that a party might stay, by injunction, proceedings in a suit at law on executing a bond, "with one or more sufficient sureties," conditioned, etc. A. a defendant in a case at law, being about to apply for an injunction to stay that suit, did accordingly execute a joint bond with B. as co-obligor; B. having no interest in the suit, nor deriving any benefit from the execution of the bond. Held, that there was nothing in the language of the statute which compelled the bond to be joint merely, instead of joint and several; and that being in terms joint merely, and B. being in fact but a surety, there was no right in the obligee (A. being insolvent) to pursue B.'s estate in equity; B. having died before A., and B.'s estate being so discharged at law. Pickersgill v. Lahens, 15 Wall. 140, 21 L. Ed. 119.

21. Raising question of illegality.—Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 43. See the title RES ADJUDICATA.

22. Accruing of liability.—Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 178, 13 L. Ed. 939.

finally decide that the party was not entitled thereto, some difference of opinion exists as to the power of the court of chancery to assess the damages, and whether the only proper method is not an action at law on the bond.[23] But whilst the court may have the power to assess the damages, yet if it has that power, it is in its discretion to exercise it, or to leave the parties to an action at law. No doubt in many cases the latter course would be the more suitable and convenient one.[24]

Recovery at Law.—An injunction bond, given one who held the legal title to a fund, will enable him at law to recover to the full extent damages touching the entire fund; and a court of equity will follow the law in its proper distribution.[25]

Equity jurisdiction will be sustained when time, expense, and multiplicity of suits will be saved, as also when the case contains an element of trust.[26]

G. Damages—1. In General.—When the condition of the bond declares that the obligors will pay such damages as the obligee may recover against them, it must mean that they will pay such damages as he may recover by a suit on the bond itself.[27]

23. Power of chancery to assess damages on dissolution.—In Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 445, 26 L. Ed. 1060, the court refused to decide the question, but say: "Upon a careful examination we are not satisfied that they (the cases) furnish any good authority for disaffirming the power of the court having possession of the case, in the absence of any statute to the contrary, to have the damages assessed under its own direction. This is the ordinary course in the court of chancery in England, by whose practice the courts of the United States are governed, and seems to be in accordance with sound principle. The imposition of terms and conditions upon the parties before the court is an incident to its jurisdiction over the case; and having possession of the principal case, it is fitting that it should have power to dispose of the incidents arising therein, and thus do complete justice, and put an end to further litigation."

"In the case of Bein v. Heath (12 How. 168, 179, 13 L. Ed. 939), Mr. Chief Justice Taney made this remark: 'A court proceeding according to the rules of equity cannot give a judgment against the obligors in an injunction bond when it dissolves the injunction. It merely orders the dissolution, leaving the obligee to proceed at law against the sureties, if he sustains damage from the delay occasioned by the injunction.' In that case, an injunction bond had been given to stay proceedings on an executory process in the circuit court for the district of Louisiana, and, in an action on the bond, that court had given judgment against the sureties, not merely for the damages arising from the delay caused by the injunction, but for the whole debt, interest and costs, in accordance with the law of Louisiana, where injunction bonds are binding to that extent, and where judgment is usually given against the sureties as parties to the cause, on dismissing the injunction, similar to the proceeding against stipulators in admiralty. This court held that the circuit courts sitting in equity could not take such a bond, or give it such effect, and reversed the judgment. The remark that the bond must be prosecuted at law was a mere passing remark; it was so prosecuted in that case; but from the great experience of the chief justice, it undoubtedly expressed the prevailing practice with regard to ordinary injunction bonds given under the Maryland statute in cases of injunctions to stay proceedings at law. Whether the remark can be understood as having a wider scope is doubtful." Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 437, 26 L. Ed. 1060.

24. Equity will leave parties to action at law.—Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 436, 26 L. Ed. 1060.

25. Recovery at law.—Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 43.

26. Equity jurisdiction.—Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 43.

Where proceeding in equity necessary to settle rights of parties.—"If the injunction bonds were sued upon at law, and judgments recovered, a proceeding in equity would still be necessary to settle the respective rights of the several obligees to the proceeds. The direct proceeding in equity will save time, expense, and a multiplicity of suits, and settle finally the rights of all concerned in one litigation. Besides, there is an element of trust in the case, which, wherever it exists, always confers jurisdiction in equity." Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, 228, 21 L. Ed. 43.

27. Damages—In general.—Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 208, 211, 30 L. Ed. 642.

Where it was contended that the court erred in holding that the bond, construed with the order requiring it, bound the obligors for damages sustained before it was given, the court said: "The order

2. Items Covered by Bond.—Counsel fees are not recoverable on injunction bonds.[28]

XI. Remedies for Wrongful Injunction.

A. Assessment of Damages on Bond.—See ante, "Procedure on Bond," X, F.

B. Action on Bond.—See ante, "Procedure on Bond," X, F.

C. Remedies Other than on Bond.—See ante, "Necessity for," X, B.

XII. Violation of Injunction.

A. In General.—1. What Constitutes.—As to what constitutes contempt, see the title Contempt, vol. 4, p. 535.

2. Power to Punish.—In order that a court may compel obedience to its orders, it must have the right to inquire whether there has been any disobedience thereof. To submit the question of disobedience to another tribunal, be it a jury or another court, would operate to deprive the proceeding of half its efficiency.[29]

3. Not an Execution of Criminal Laws.—A court, enforcing obedience to its orders by proceedings for contempt, is not executing the criminal laws of the land, but only securing to suitors the rights which it has adjudged them entitled to.[30] was 'that the injunction be maintained on the complaining creditors giving bond and security to save the parties harmless from the effects of said injunction.' The last words clearly mean all the effects of the injunction. The condition of the bond was, to pay 'all such damages as he (the obligee) may recover against us in case it should be decided that the said writ of injunction was wrongfully issued.' It seems plain to us that all the damages arising from the wrongful issue of the injunctions were intended to be covered by the bond as well as by the order; in other words, that the bond was intended and understood as a compliance with the requirements of the order. That is the natural and obvious meaning of its language when the two are read together; and the parties signing the bond must be presumed to have been cognizant of the order under which it was given." Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 213, 30 L. Ed. 642.

28. Items covered—Counsel's fees.—Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, 21 L. Ed. 43.

"There was error committed by the Kansas City court of appeals in affirming the action of the trial court in allowing, in the judgment by it rendered, attorneys' fees as an element of damage upon the injunction bond contrary to the controlling rule on this subject enunciated by this court, by which the courts of the United States are governed in requiring the execution of such instruments." Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 46 L. Ed. 657; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 539, 46 L. Ed. 673.

29. Power to punish.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 595, 39 L. Ed. 1092; In re Chiles, 22 Wall. 157, 159, 22 L. Ed. 819; Spalding v. New York, 4 How. 21, 11 L. Ed. 858.

The process of injunction having been issued and served on the defendants, the circuit court has authority to inquire whether its orders have been disobeyed, and when it finds that they have been, then to proceed under § 725, Rev. Stat., which grants power "to punish, by fine or imprisonment, * * * disobedience, * * * by any party * * * or other person, to any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree or command," and enter the order of punishment complained of. In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 600, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

The courts of California under the statute of that state hold that "when a party charged with contempt in disobeying a legal order willfully conceals himself to avoid service of an order to show cause why he should not be adjudged guilty of contempt, the court is not powerless to proceed, or to prevent the continued disregard of its lawful order," but may order, as justice shall require, after due service of an order to show cause, on the attorneys of the party proceeded against. Eureka Lake, etc., Canal Co. v. Yuba County, 116 U. S. 410, 416, 29 L. Ed. 671.

30. Not an execution of criminal laws.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 596, 39 L. Ed. 1092.

The proceeding by injunction is of a civil character, and is enforced by proceedings in contempt; such proceedings are not in execution of the criminal laws of the land; the penalty for a violation of injunction is no substitute for and no defense to a prosecution for any criminal offenses committed in the course of such violation. In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 599, 39 L. Ed. 1092. See, however, the discussions in Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. Ed. 391; New Orleans v. Steam-

B. Knowledge or Notice.—To render a person amenable to an injunction it is neither necessary that he should have been a party to the suit in which the injunction was issued, nor to have been actually served with a copy of it, so long as he appears to have had actual notice.[31]

C. Defense, Justification or Excuse—1. In General.—It is no defense to a contempt of court for violation of an injunction that the injunction was improvidently or erroneously allowed or irregularly served.[32]

2. Statutory Authority for Performance of Act.—Where an act of congress is passed authorizing defendants to do the thing which an injunction, issued as a matter of course on the face of the bill, to which there was no opposition, forbid them doing, they were excused from contempt.[33]

3. Violation of Void Writ.—Where the restraining order, in the nature of an injunction, was issued without authority, the adjudication that the defendants were guilty of a contempt in disregarding that order is void, and their detention by the marshal is without authority of law, and they are entitled to be discharged.[34]

D. Procedure and Punishment—1. In General.—The summary power to commit and punish for contempts tending to obstruct or degrade the administration of justice is inherent in courts of chancery and other superior courts, as essential to the execution of their powers to the maintenance of their authority, and is part of the law of the land, within the meaning of Magna Charta and of the twelfth article of our Declaration of Rights.[35]

Trial by Jury.—Proceedings according to the common law for contempt of court have never been subject to the right of trial by jury; surely it cannot be supposed that the question of contempt of the authority of a court of the United States, committed by a disobedience of its orders, is triable, of right, by a jury.[36]

2. Service of Order to Show Cause.—Ordinarily a corporation has in such a case a right to service of an order to show cause upon some officer or agent, but if its officers or agents keep themselves out of the way for the express purpose of avoiding such a service, it cannot justly complain if service on its attorney is made the equivalent of that which its agents by their wrongful acts have made impossible.[37] ship Co., 20 Wall. 387, 22 L. Ed. 354. And see the title CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 531.

31. Knowledge or notice.—In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 554, 41 L. Ed. 1110. See the title NOTICE.

32. Defense.—In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. Ed. 274; Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 340, 7 L. Ed. 164; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 650.

33. Statutory authority.—A motion was made, on behalf of the plaintiff, for attachments against the president of a bridge company and others, for disobedience of an injunction issued in vacation, on the 27th of June, 1854. Inasmuch as the act of congress of June 27, 1852, afforded full authority to the defendants to reconstruct the bridge, and the decree directing its alteration or abatement could not, therefore, be carried into execution after the enactment of this law, and inasmuch as the granting of an attachment for the disobedience is a question resting in the discretion of the court, the court held that, under all the circumstances of the case, the motion should be denied. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 18 How. 421, 436, 15 L. Ed. 435.

34. Violation of void writ.—In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 221, 31 L. Ed. 402; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. Ed. 861; Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. Ed. 1117; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 507, 31 L. Ed. 216; Worden v. Searls, 121 U. S. 14, 30 L. Ed. 853; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 18 How. 421, 15 L. Ed. 435; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 166, 18 L. Ed. 768; United States v. Council, 6 Wall. 514, 518, 18 L. Ed. 933.

35. Procedure in general.—In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 596, 39 L. Ed. 1092. See also, United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch 32, 3 L. Ed. 259; Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. 204, 5 L. Ed. 242; Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. 505, 22 L. Ed. 205; Spalding v. New York, 4 How. 21, 11 L. Ed. 858; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 672, 31 L. Ed. 205; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 32 L. Ed. 405; Eilenbecker v. Plymouth County, 134 U. S. 31, 36, 33 L. Ed. 801. See the title CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 531.

36. Trial by jury.—Eilenbecker v. Plymouth County, 134 U. S. 31, 36, 33 L. Ed. 801; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 488, 38 L. Ed. 1047. See the title JURY.

37. Order to show cause.—Eureka Lake, etc., Canal Co. v. Yuba County, 116 U.

3. PUNISHMENT—OBJECT OF.—The exercise of the power to punish for contempt "has a two-fold aspect, namely; first, the proper punishment of the guilty party for his disrespect to the court or its order, and the second, to compel his performance of some act or duty required of him by the court, which he refuses to perform."[38] In punishing the guilty party for his disrespect to the court and its order, the court must judge for itself the nature and extent of the punishment with reference to the gravity of the offense.[39] But where the object is to compel him to perform some act or duty required of him by the court, which he refuses to perform, he should be fined and imprisoned until he performs the act or shows that it is not within his power to do it.[40]

INJURIES TO ANIMALS.—See the title ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 322.

INLAND.—See note 1.

Inland Bill.—See the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 2, p. 257.

INNOCENCE.—As to presumption of innocence, see the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43.

INNOCENT PURCHASERS.—See the titles BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 296; CHATTEL MORTGAGES, vol. 3, p. 717; SALES; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

S. 410, 418, 29 L. Ed. 671. See the title SUMMONS AND PROCESS.

To deny the court the power of calling on a concealed corporation through its chosen attorney of record in a suit to appear and answer to a charge of contempt for disobeying the orders of the court duly entered in that suit, would be to deny it the power of vindicating its authority and enforcing obedience to its lawful commands against a party personally subjected to its jurisdiction. Although the proceeding may be criminal in its nature, it grows out of the suit to which the person proceeded against is a party and actually represented by an attorney. Eureka Lake, etc., Canal Co. v. Yuba County, 116 U. S. 410, 417, 29 L. Ed. 671.

38. Punishment—Object of.—Eureka Lake, etc., Canal Co. v. Yuba County, 116 U. S. 410, 417, 29 L. Ed. 671; In re Chiles, 22 Wall. 157, 168, 22 L. Ed. 819. See the title CONTEMPT, vol. 4, p. 531.

39. Extent and nature.—In re Chiles, 22 Wall. 157, 22 L. Ed. 819, citing and construing Rev. Stat., U. S., § 725.

40. Fine and imprisonment.—In re Chiles, 22 Wall. 157, 22 L. Ed. 819. See Spalding v. New York, 4 How. 21, 11 L. Ed. 858.

1. Inland.—"Sir William Blackstone, in his Commentaries (vol. 2, p. 467), distinguishes foreign from inland bills, by defining the former as bills drawn by a merchant residing abroad, upon his correspondent in England, or vice versa; and the latter, as those drawn by one person on another, when both drawer and drawee reside within the same kingdom." Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. 586, 590, 7 L. Ed. 528.

Inland navigation.—Navigation of the Great Lakes is not inland navigation within the meaning of the act of congress of March 3, 1851, entitled "an act to limit the liability of shipowners and for other purposes." Moore v. American Transp. Co., 24 How. 1, 16 L. Ed. 674.

Navigation over Long Island Sound is not inland navigation. Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., 109 U. S. 578, 2 L. Ed. 1038. See the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

Inland waters.—The seventh section of March 12, 1863 declares: "That no property seized or taken upon any of the inland waters of the United States by the naval forces thereof, shall be regarded as maritime prize." In a case involving the construction of that statute the court said: "The term inland as here used was evidently intended to apply to all waters of the United States upon which a naval force could go, other than bays and harbors on the seacoast. In most instances property of the enemy on them could be taken, if at all, by an armed force without the aid of vessels of war. These were seldom required on such waters, except when batteries or fortified places near them were to be attacked in conjunction with the army. As observed by the court in The Cotton Plant (10 Wall. 577, 19 L. Ed. 983), congress probably anticipated, in view of the state of the war when the act was passed, that most of the captures on the rivers would be made by the army. James River is an inland water in any sense which can be given to the term inland. It lies within the body of counties in Virginia. For miles below Richmond, and below the obstructions mentioned, a person can see from one of its banks what is done on the other. Rivers across which one can thus see are inland waters. It matters not that the tide may ebb and flow for miles above their mouths; that fact does not make them any part of the sea or bay into which they may flow, though they may be arms of both." Porter v. United States, 106 U. S. 607, 612, 27 L. Ed. 286.

INNS AND INNKEEPERS.

CROSS REFERENCES.

As to equal enjoyment of the accommodations and privileges of inns, see the title CIVIL RIGHTS, vol. 3, p. 834.

Definitions.—The word "inn" has a technical legal signification. A mere private boarding house is not an inn, nor is its keeper subject to the responsibilities, or entitled to the privileges, of a common innkeeper. "To constitute one an innkeeper, within the legal force of that term, he must keep a house of entertainment or lodging for all travelers or wayfarers who might choose to accept the same, being of good character or conduct."[1]

Liability of Innkeeper for Lost or Stolen Goods.—If a guest applies for a room in an inn, for a purpose of business distinct from his accommodation as a guest, the particular responsibility imposed by the common law does not extend to goods lost or stolen from that room.[2]

Where Statute Requires Written Notice to Be Given Innkeeper.—Where a state statute requires that the innkeeper must be given written notice, in regard to his guest's property, in order to hold him responsible for loss, such notice must be given.[3]

Where Loss Is Result of Guest's Negligence.—A hotel keeper is not liable for a loss occasioned by the personal negligence of the guest himself.[4]

1. Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 40, 27 L. Ed. 835, Harlan, J., in dissenting opinion.

2. Liability of innkeeper for lost or stolen goods.—Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 385, 30 L. Ed. 930.

"Although Fisher was received by the defendants into their hotel, as a guest, with knowledge that his trunks contained articles having no connection with his comfort or convenience as a mere traveler or wayfarer, but which, at his request, were to be placed on exhibition or for sale, in a room assigned to him for that purpose, they would not, under the doctrines of the common law, be held to the same degree of care and responsibility, in respect to the safety of such articles, as is required in reference to baggage or other personal property carried by travelers. He was entitled, as a traveler, to a room for lodging, but he could not, of right, demand to be supplied with apartments in which to conduct his business as a salesman or merchant. The defendants being the owners or managers of the hotel, were at liberty to permit the use by Fisher of one of their rooms for such business purposes, but they would not, for that reason and without other circumstances, be held to have had his goods in their custody, or to have undertaken to well and safely keep them as constituting part of the property which he had with him in his capacity as guest." Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 385, 30 L. Ed. 930.

3. Where statute requires written notice to be given innkeeper.—Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 30 L. Ed. 930.

A statute of Missouri provided that "No innkeeper in this state shall be liable * * * for the loss of any merchandise for sale or sample belonging to a guest, unless the guest shall have given written notice of having such merchandise for sale or sample in his possession after entering the inn." Held, that under this statute, the innkeeper is not liable for the loss of the guest's property where he was not given written notice, even though he knows that such guest has articles for sale and lets one of his rooms for the purpose of allowing him to display the articles for sale. Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 384, 30 L. Ed. 930.

4. Where loss is result of guest's negligence.—Elcox v. Hill, 98 U. S. 218, 25 L. Ed. 103.

A. brought an action against the keeper of a public hotel in Illinois to recover the value of a stock of jewelry, worth $6,300, which he had in his traveling bags at the hotel while he was there as a guest. One of them was not locked, and both were left by him overnight in the coat room of the hotel, he taking from the boy in charge a check therefor. The next morning, A. discovered that the jewelry had been taken from the bag which was unlocked. The other bag could not be found. A. had informed no one connected with the hotel of their contents, although there was a safe there for the custody of such property, and notice of the fact given, as required by the statute of that state. Held, that in the absence of proof that the loss was occasioned by the hand or through the

INNUENDO.—See the title LIBEL AND SLANDER.

IN NULLO EST ERRATUM.—See the title EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF, AND STATEMENT OF FACTS ON APPEAL, vol. 6, p. 10.

IN PAIS.—As to estoppel in pais, see the title ESTOPPEL, vol. 5, p. 937.

IN PARI DELICTO.—See the title ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, ante, p. 737.

INQUEST OF OFFICE.—See the title ESCHEAT, vol. 5, p. 897. "Blackstone defines an inquest of office as 'an inquiry made by the king's officer, his sheriff, coroner or escheator, virtute officii, or by writ to them sent for that purpose, or by commissioners specially appointed, concerning any matter that entitles the king to the possession of lands or tenements, goods or chattels. This is done by a jury of no determinate number; being either twelve, or less, or more. * * * These inquests of office were devised by law, as an authentic means to give the king his right by solemn matter of record; without which he, in general, can neither take nor part from anything.' "[1]

INQUESTS AND INQUIRIES.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 33; BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 257; DEBT, THE ACTION OF, vol. 5, p. 205; EXECUTIONS, ante, p. 84; INTEREST; JURY.

As to estate for life being sold without an inquest upon its value, see the title EXECUTIONS, ante, p. 92. In an action of debt upon a judgment in Louisiana, see the title INTEREST. See, also, the title DEBT, THE ACTION OF, vol. 5, p. 211. As to whether an inquest of office is a "trial" within the sixth section of the Pennsylvania bill of rights, see the title JURY. As to when assessment of damages may be made by court, see the title JURY. As to production of promissory notes, see the title BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS, vol. 3, p. 362. As to appeal to the supreme court from an order of the circuit court of the District of Columbia, quashing an inquisition in the nature of a writ ad quod damnum, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 504. As to order quashing inquisition in condemnation proceeding, see the title APPEAL AND ERROR, vol. 1, p. 942. As to jurisdiction of the circuit court of the District of Columbia, upon motion to quash an inquisition, see the title COURTS, vol. 4, pp. 1164, 1165.

Distinction between Trial by Jury and Inquest of Office.—The distinction between trial by jury and inquest of office is so familiar to every mind as to leave no sufficient ground for extending to the latter that inviolability which could have been intended only for the former. The one appertains to a mere remedy for the recovery of money, which may be altered at any time, without any danger to private security; the other is justly regarded, in every state in the Union, as among the most inestimable privileges of a freeman.[1a]

Writ of Inquiry Regular Mode of Procedure.—The court cannot assess damages; a writ of inquiry is the regular mode of procedure.[2]

Presumption of Sufficient Grounds for an Inquest.—The verdicts of negligence of the hotel keeper, or by a clerk or servant employed by him in the hotel, A. was not entitled to recover. Elcox v. Hill, 98 U. S. 218, 25 L. Ed. 103.

In Illinois where a safe for the keeping of money, jewels, and the like is provided by the hotel keeper, and the notice given as required by the statute, a loser failing to take the benefit of the protection thus furnished him must bear his own loss. To this rule the statute makes one exception. If the loss occurs "by the hand or through the negligence of the landlord, or by a clerk or servant employed by him in such hotel or inn," the liability remains. Elcox v. Hill, 98 U. S. 218, 224, 25 L. Ed. 103.

1. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 431, 41 L. Ed. 770.

1a. Trial by jury and inquest of office distinguished.—Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 552, 8 L. Ed. 751.

2. Writ of inquiry regular mode of procedure.—Armstrong v. Carson, 2 Dall. 302, 1 L. Ed. 391.

As to assessment of damages by the court, see the title JURY.

juries of inquiry will not be set aside upon frivolous grounds. Nor will the effect of any particular piece of evidence upon the minds of the jury be examined; for, unless it appears, that there was no proper evidence before them, it must be presumed that they had sufficient grounds for their inquest.[3]

Right to Offer Evidence to Jury of Inquiry.—"After a judgment by default, the defendant has a right to offer his evidence to the jury of inquiry, to combat the plaintiff's proofs; and * * * where the sheriff refuses to hear the evidence on both sides, the court will direct a new writ of inquiry."[4]

Insufficient Reason for Setting Aside Inquisition.—"The refusal to admit the defendant in a foreign attachment to produce his evidence before the jury of inquiry, is not a sufficient reason for setting aside the inquisition."[5]

Inquisition Quashed for Irregularity.—This is treated in the footnotes.[6]

IN REM.—See PROCEEDINGS IN REM AND IN PERSONAM. See the titles ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 130; DIVORCE AND ALIMONY, vol. 5, p. 425; FOREIGN JUDGMENTS, RECORDS AND JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS, ante, p. 335.

3. Presumption of sufficient grounds for inquest.—Leib v. Bolton, 1 Dall. 82, 1 L. Ed. 46.

4. Right to offer evidence to jury of inquiry.—McClenachan v. McCarty, 1 Dall. 375, 377, 1 L. Ed. 183.

5. McClenachan v. McCarty, 1 Dall. 375, 377, 1 L. Ed. 183.

6. Inquisition quashed for irregularity.—In an early Pennsylvania case, it was held that an inquisition being quashed for irregularity became a nullity, and leaves the case just as if none had been taken. Weaver v. Lawrence, 1 Dall. 379, 1 L. Ed. 185.

INSANITY.

BY ERNEST P. STEINHAUER.

I. Academic Discussion, 1072.
- A. In General, 1072.
- B. Causes of, 1073.
- C. Form of, 1073.
- D. Protection of, 1073.

II. The Inquisition, 1073.
- A. Notice, 1073.
- B. Jury Trial, 1073.

III. Guardian, 1074.
- A. Of Infant of Unsound Mind, 1074.
- B. Sale of Real Property, 1074.

IV. Testamentary Capacity, 1074.

V. Civil Relations, 1074.
- A. Capacity to Contract, 1074.
  1. In General, 1074.
  2. Partial Insanity or Weak Understanding, 1074
  3. Effect of Contracts Made While Insane, 1075.
     a. Deed, 1075.
     b. Power of Attorney, 1075.
  4. Avoidance of Contract, 1075.
  5. Conclusiveness of Verdict as to Sanity, 1076.
- B. Statute of Limitations, 1076.

VI. Criminal Responsibility of Insane Persons, 1076.
- A. In General, 1076.
- B. Instructions, 1076.
- C. Evidence, 1077.

CROSS REFERENCES.

See the titles DRUNKENNESS, vol. 5, p. 496; REASONABLE DOUBT; UNDUE INFLUENCE.

As to expert and opinion evidence upon the question of insanity, see the title EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, ante, p. 200. As to bringing habeas corpus by one committed after acquittal for homicide because of insanity, see the title HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 610. As to effect of insanity upon insurance policy providing that the policy will be void in case insured kills himself, see the title INSURANCE. As to insanity as an excuse for failure to comply with a condition of an insurance policy, see the title INSURANCE. As to insane persons as witnesses, see the title WITNESSES.

I. Academic Discussion.

A. In General.—Insanity is a disease of the mind.[1] When a brain is dis-

1. In general.—Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612, 620, 28 L. Ed. 536.

Instruction defining insanity.—In Davis v. United States, 165 U. S. 373, 378, 41 L. Ed. 750, the court held that the trial court committed no prejudicial error in instructing the jury upon insanity as follows: "The term 'insanity' as used in this defense means such a perverted and deranged condition of the mental and moral faculties as to render a person incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong, or unconscious at the time of the nature of the act he is committing, or where, though conscious of it and able to distinguish be-eased or injured, its functions are impaired or destroyed.[2]

B. Causes of.—The causes of insanity are as varied as the varying circumstances of man.[3]

C. Forms of.—Insanity assumes as many and various forms as there are shades of difference in the human character.[4]

Emotional Insanity or Mania Transitoria.—"What is called emotional insanity, or mania transitoria, is the case of one in the possession of his ordinary reasoning faculties, who allows his passions to convert him into a temporary maniac, and while in this condition, commits the act in question."[5]

Impulsive Insanity.—Impulsive insanity is that by which a person is irresistibly impelled to the commission of an act.[6]

D. Protection of.—Legislative.—The legislature has the power of parens patriæ in reference to insane persons.[7]

Courts.—A lunatic is under the protection of courts of law as well as courts of equity.[8]

II. The Inquisition.

A. Notice.—In lunacy proceedings one is not denied due process of law by being refused an opportunity to defend, when, in fact, actual notice was served upon him of the proceedings, and when, if he had chosen to do so, he was at liberty to make such defense as he deemed advisable.[9]

B. Jury Trial.—In Georgia, if, after a regular conviction and sentence, a suggestion of a then existing insanity is made, it is not necessary, in order to constitute due process of law, that the question so presented should be tried by a jury in a judicial proceeding surrounded by all the safeguards and requirements of a common-law jury trial, and even although by the state law full and adequate administrative and quasi judicial process is created for the purpose of investigating the suggestion.[10] tween right and wrong and know that the act is wrong, yet his will, by which I mean the governing power of his mind, has been otherwise than voluntarily so completely destroyed that his actions are not subject to it, but are beyond his control."

"This was substantially what had been held by this court in previous cases. Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 580, 21 L. Ed. 236; Bigelow v. Berkshire Life Ins. Co., 93 U. S. 284, 23 L. Ed. 918; Insurance Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 232, 24 L. Ed. 433; Manhattan Life Ins. Co. v. Broughton, 109 U. S. 121, 27 L. Ed. 878; Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612, 28 L. Ed. 536; Accident Ins. Co. v. Crandal, 120 U. S. 527, 30 L. Ed. 740." Ritter v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 169 U. S. 139, 42 L. Ed. 693.

2. "Mental" condition.—"When we speak of the 'mental' condition of a person, we refer to his senses, his perceptions, his consciousness, his ideas. If his mental condition is perfect, his will, his memory, his understanding are perfect, and connected with a healthy bodily organization. If these do not concur, his mental condition is diseased or defective." Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 580, 588, 21 L. Ed. 236.

"The intellect and intelligence of man are manifested through the organs of the brain, and from these, consciousness, will, memory, judgment, thought, volition, and passion, the functions of the mind, do proceed. Without the brain these cannot exist. With an injured or diseased brain, their powers are impaired or diminished." Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 580, 589, 21 L. Ed. 236.

3. Causes of insanity.—Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 580, 588, 21 L. Ed. 236.

4. Forms of.—Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612, 620, 28 L. Ed. 536.

5. Emotional insanity or mania transitoria.—Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 580, 584, 21 L. E. 236.

6. Impulsive insanity.—Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 580, 590, 21 L. Ed. 236.

7. Legislative protection.—Mormon Church v. United States, 136 U. S. 1, 58, 34 L. Ed. 481.

8. Protection of courts.—Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 21, 21 L. Ed. 73.

9. Notice.—Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 436, 45 L. Ed. 1165. See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 664.

10. Jury trial.—Nobles v. Georgia, 168 U. S. 398, 405, 42 L. Ed. 515. See the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 5, p. 659.

"It being demonstrated by reason and authority that at common law a suggestion made after verdict and sentence of insanity did not give rise to an absolute right on the part of the convict to have such issue tried before the court and to a jury, but addressed itself to the discretion of the judge, it follows that the manner in which such question should be determined was purely a matter of legislative regulation. It was, therefore, a subject

III. Guardian.

A. Of Infant of Unsound Mind.—An ordinary guardian is all the custodian of either his person or estate that is required for an infant of unsound mind. It is only after he becomes of age, and the power and functions of the guardian cease, that a committee to take charge of his person and estate is needed.[11]

B. Sale of Real Property.—As against the lunatic, a license to sell his real property, under the statute of Wisconsin, is not invalid for insufficient publication of notice of the hearing, the same being required only for the protection of other parties interested in the estate. So far as the rights of the lunatic are concerned, the jurisdiction of the court attaches upon filing the guardian's petition setting forth the facts required by the statute.[12]

IV. Testamentary Capacity.

This subject is treated under its specific title.[13]

V. Civil Relations.

A. Capacity to Contract—1. In General.—Both minds must meet in a contract; and if one is so weak, unsound, and diseased that the party is incapable of understanding the nature and quality of the act to be performed, or its consequences, he is incompetent to assent to the terms and conditions of the contract, whether that state of his mind was produced by mental or physical disease, and whether it resulted from ordinary sickness, or from accident, or from debauchery, or from habitual and protracted intemperance.[14]

2. Partial Insanity or Weak Understanding.—Partial insanity[15] or mere weakness of understanding is not of itself any objection to the validity of a within the control of the state of Georgia. Because we have confined our opinion exclusively to the question before us, that is, the right arising on a suggestion of insanity after sentence, we must not be understood as implying that a different rule would prevail after verdict and up to and including sentence, or as passing upon the question whether, under the fourteenth amendment, a state is without power to relegate the decision of a question of insanity, when raised before conviction, to such apt and special tribunal as the law might deem best." Nobles v. Georgia, 168 U. S. 398, 408, 42 L. Ed. 515.

11. Guardian.—Francklyn v. Sprague, 121 U. S. 215, 229, 30 L. Ed. 936.

12. Sale of real property.—Mohr v. Manierre, 101 U. S. 417, 424, 25 L. Ed. 1052.

13. Testamentary capacity.—See the title TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.

14. Capacity to contract in general.—Johnson v. Harmon, 94 U. S. 371, 373, 24 L. Ed. 271. See the title CONTRACTS, vol. 4, p. 552.

"The fundamental idea of a contract is that it requires the assent of two minds. But a lunatic, or a person non compos mentis, has nothing which the law recognizes as a mind, and it would seem, therefore, upon principle, that he cannot make a contract which may have any efficacy as such." Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 20, 21 L. Ed. 73.

"Why, then, should one who has obtained from him that which purports to be a contract be permitted to hold him bound by its provisions, even until he may choose to avoid it? If this may be, efficacy is given to a form to which there has been no mental assent. A contract is made without any agreement of minds. And as it plainly requires the possession and exercise of reason quite as much to avoid a contract as to make it, the contract of a person without mind has the same effect as it would have had he been in full possession of ordinary understanding. While he continues insane he cannot avoid it; and if, therefore, it is operative until avoided, the law affords a lunatic no protection against himself." Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 21, 21 L. Ed. 73.

Confirmed insanity which deprives a person of mental capacity to distinguish between the right and wrong, in respect to the act in question, renders the person irresponsible for such an act, and disqualifies him to enter into a contract or to execute a valid instrument to convey real or personal estate. Johnson v. Harmon, 94 U. S. 371, 372, 24 L. Ed. 271, concurring opinion of Clifford, J.

"When it appears that a contractor or grantor has not strength of mind and reason sufficient to understand the nature and consequences of his act in making a contract or in executing a deed, the instrument may be avoided, on the ground of the mental incapacity of the party to contract, or to execute the conveyance." Concurring opinion of Clifford, J., in Johnson v. Harmon, 94 U. S. 371, 373, 24 L. Ed. 271.

15. Partial insanity.—"The existence of partial insanity does not unfit individuals contract, if the capacity remains to see things in their true relations, and to form correct conclusions in respect to the subject matter of the contract. Men of such understanding may make valid contracts.[16] But the weakness of intellect may be sufficient ground for setting aside a contract when made upon a nominal or grossly inadequate consideration.[17]

3. Effect of Contracts Made While Insane—a. Deed.—"The deed of an insane person is not absolutely void; it is only voidable; that is, it may be confirmed or set aside."[18]

b. Power of Attorney.—"A power of attorney executed by an insane person, or one of unsound mind, is absolutely void."[19]

4. Avoidance of Contract.—Under the civil code of Louisiana in order to have a contract declared null and void for the insanity of one of the parties, before such party is interdicted, it is necessary to allege in the petition that he was incapable in law of making a binding contract, and that the people at the time who were acquainted with him and conversed with him knew of his condition, so affected for the transaction of business on all subjects, nor from giving a perfectly accurate and lucid statement of what they have seen or heard." District of Columbia v. Armes, 107 U. S. 519, 521, 27 L. Ed. 618.

One may be insane to the extent of being dangerous if set at liberty, and yet may have sufficient mental capacity to make a will, to enter into contracts, transact business and be a witness. Keely v. Moore, 196 U. S. 38, 46, 49 L. Ed. 379.

"The books are full of cases where persons showing mental derangement on some subjects evince a high degree of intelligence and wisdom on others." District of Columbia v. Armes, 107 U. S. 519, 521, 27 L. Ed. 618.

16. Concurring opinion of Clifford, J., in Johnson v. Harmon, 94 U. S. 371, 372, 24 L. Ed. 271.

"Imbecility of mind is not of itself sufficient to set aside a contract, when there is not an essential privation of the reasoning faculties or an incapacity of understanding and acting with discretion in the ordinary affairs of life. Weakness of understanding may be a material circumstance in every case where the charge is that one of the contracting parties has taken undue advantage of the other, or has been guilty of unfair practice or imposition." Johnson v. Harmon, 94 U. S. 371, 379, 24 L. Ed. 271.

It was held in Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 58, 33 L. Ed. 242, that the evidence failed to show any imbecility, dotage or loss of mental capacity on the part of F. in 1869, when the contract was made. About fifteen witnesses produced by the complainants were questioned as to the character and condition of his mind, three, and perhaps four, of whom, speak of him as being weak, ignorant and childish; but the general tenor of the testimony of the others, who had any opinions to express, was directly the reverse. The combined effect of this testimony, taken as a whole, putting out of view the evidence on behalf of the defendants, leaves on the mind a decided impression that F., though to a certain extent illiterate, was a man of good, sound sense, of large experience in business and capable of transacting his own affairs.

17. "Extreme weakness of intellect, even when not amounting to insanity, in the person executing a conveyance, may be sufficient ground for setting it aside when made upon a nominal or grossly inadequate consideration." Conley v. Nailor, 118 U. S. 127, 133, 30 L. Ed. 112, citing Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 103, 6 L. Ed. 429, and Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506, 24 L. Ed. 260.

"Whenever there is great weakness of mind in a person executing a conveyance of land, arising from age, sickness, or any other cause, though not amounting to absolute disqualification, and the consideration given for the property is grossly inadequate, a court of equity will, upon proper and seasonable application of the injured party, or his representative or heirs, interfere and set the conveyance aside." Griffith v. Godey, 113 U. S. 89, 95, 28 L. Ed. 934; Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506, 24 L. Ed. 260.

When a person, from infirmity and mental weakness, is likely to be easily influenced by others, transactions entered into by such person without independent advice will be set aside, if there is any unfairness in them. The principle upon which courts act in such cases, applied to a conveyance of land obtained from a woman advanced in years, of doubtful sanity, living entirely by herself, without friends to take care of her, and confined to her house by sickness. Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506, 24 L. Ed. 260.

18. Deed.—Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 574, 45 L. Ed. 1005. But see Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 21 L. Ed. 73, where the court, after an elaborate discussion of the early authorities, comes to the conclusion that the deed of an insane person is absolutely void.

19. Power of attorney.—Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 26, 21 L. Ed. 73. Compare, Luhrs v. Hancock, 181 U. S. 567, 572, 45 L. Ed. 1005.

and that the party contracting with him knew of his incapacity.[20]

5. Conclusiveness of Verdict as to Sanity.—The verdict of a jury as to the sanity of the grantor at the time of executing a conveyance, is not conclusive, the court being competent to determine for itself the degree of weakness, or of imposition, which will induce it to set aside the instrument.[21]

B. Statute of Limitations.—See the title Limitation of Actions and Adverse Possession.

VI. Criminal Responsibility of Insane Persons.

A. In General.—A lunatic or a person non compos mentis, is not amenable to the criminal laws, because he is incapable of discriminating between that which is right and that which is wrong.[22] The government does not hold him responsible for acts injurious to itself.[23]

B. Instructions.—A charge to the jury is correct which states in substance that if defendant knew the nature and quality of his act when he committed a homicide, and that it was wrong and a violation of the law of the land, for which he would be punished, that he was responsible for the act he committed.[24]

20. Avoidance of contract.—Stockmeyer v. Tobin, 139 U. S. 176, 187, 35 L. Ed. 123.

21. Conclusiveness of verdict as to sanity.—Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 103, 6 L. Ed. 429.

22. Criminal responsibility in general.—Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 20, 21 L. Ed. 73. See, generally, the title CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 5, p. 43.

Confirmed insanity which deprives a person of mental capacity to distinguish between the right and wrong, in respect to the act in question, renders the person irresponsible for such an act, though criminal. Clifford, J., in Johnson v. Harmon, 94 U. S. 371, 372, 24 L. Ed. 271.

"One who takes human life cannot be said to be actuated by malice aforethought, or to have deliberately intended to take life, or to have 'a wicked, depraved, and malignant heart,' or a heart 'regardless of society duty and fatally bent on mischief,' unless at the time he had sufficient mind to comprehend the criminality or the right and wrong of such an act. Although the killing of one human being by another human being with a deadly weapon is presumed to be malicious until the contrary appears, yet, 'in order to constitute a crime, a person must have intelligence and capacity enough to have a criminal intent and purpose; and if his reason and mental powers are either so deficient that he has no will, no conscience, or controlling mental power, or if, through the overwhelming violence of mental disease, his intellectual power is for the time obliterated, he is not a responsible moral agent, and is not punishable for criminal acts.'" Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 485, 40 L. Ed. 499.

It is of the very essence of the heinous crime of murder that it be committed by a person of "sound memory and discretion." Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 484, 40 L. Ed. 499.

"The crime of murder necessarily involves the possession by the accused of such mental capacity as will render him criminally responsible for his acts." Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 485, 40 L. Ed. 499.

23. Not held responsible by government.—Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 20, 21 L. Ed. 73.

24. Instructions.—Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 420, 46 L. Ed. 1225. See ante, "In General," I, A.

In Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 421, 46 L. Ed. 1225, one accused of homicide defended on the ground of insanity because he thought the person he killed was a witch, and the trial court instructed that if he believed in witches and his right to kill them were the product of a diseased brain, he was irresponsible, and if the jury had a reasonable doubt on that question, it should acquit. If his belief were not the product of an insane delusion but simply an erroneous conclusion of a sane mind, he was responsible. The supreme court said: "The court, by the portions of the charge above adverted to, directed the attention of the jury to the distinction between a mere erroneous opinion and an insane delusion, the product of a diseased mind or brain. The subject is somewhat difficult and the line of distinction not always easily drawn, but it exists, and we think that in this case the condition of mind which would render the defendant irresponsible was sufficiently and properly indicated by the court in its charge. It assumed that defendant might have formed an erroneous opinion regarding witches and witchcraft, and yet might not have been insane within the legal definition, and therefore, although possessing such erroneous ideas and acting on them, he might still be responsible criminally for his actions. And on the other hand, if his opinion on the subject were the result of insane delusions, and he acted on them, he was irresponsible, and responsibility must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. We

C. Evidence.—Burden of Proof.—The burden of proving that the accused belongs to a class capable of committing crime rests upon those who affirm that he has committed the crime for which he is indicted. That burden is not fully discharged, nor is there any legal right to take the life of the accused, until guilt is made to appear from all the evidence in the case.[25] The accused is entitled to an acquittal of the specific crime charged, if, upon all the evidence, there is reasonable doubt whether he was capable in law of committing crime.[26] think this was all the defendant could require."

An instruction to the jury that they should acquit the defendant of the charge of murder, if they found he was not able to know that the act of taking life was wrongful, and was not able to comprehend and understand the consequences of such act, is not erroneous where they were also instructed that, to enable them to find him guilty, they must find that, at the time he committed the homicide, he knew and understood that it was wrong to do so, and was able to comprehend and understand the consequences of the act. Queenan v. Oklahoma, 190 U. S. 548, 550, 47 L. Ed. 1175.

25. Burden of proof.—Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 485, 40 L. Ed. 499. See, generally, the title PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

"The law presumes that every one charged with crime is sane, and thus supplies in the first instance the required proof of capacity to commit crime. It authorizes the jury to assume at the outset that the accused is criminally responsible for his acts. But that is not a conclusive presumption, which the law upon grounds of public policy forbids to be overthrown or impaired by opposing proof. It is a disputable, or, as it is often designated, a rebuttal presumption. * * * Strictly speaking, the burden of proof, as those words are understood in criminal law, is never upon the accused to establish his innocence or to disprove the facts necessary to establish the crime for which he is indicted. It is on the prosecution from the beginning to the end of the trial and applies to every element necessary to constitute the crime. Giving to the prosecution, where the defense is insanity, the benefit in the way of proof of the presumption in favor of sanity, the vital question from the time a plea of not guilty is entered until the return of the verdict, is whether upon all the evidence, by whatever side adduced, guilt is established beyond reasonable doubt." Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 486, 487, 40 L. Ed. 499. See, also, the title REASONABLE DOUBT.

Evidence.—See, generally, the titles EVIDENCE, vol. 5, p. 1004; EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, ante, p. 200.

26. Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 484, 40 L. Ed. 499.

In a prosecution for murder, the defense being insanity, and the fact of the killing with a deadly weapon being clearly established, it is the duty of the jury to acquit where the evidence is equally balanced on the issue as to the sanity of the accused at the time of the killing. Davis v. United States. 160 U. S. 469, 484, 40 L. Ed. 499.

Upon a trial for murder if it appears that the deceased was killed by the accused under circumstances which—nothing else appearing—made a case of murder, the jury cannot properly return a verdict of guilty of the offense charged if upon the whole evidence from whatever side it comes they have a reasonable doubt whether at the time of killing the accused was mentally competent to distinguish between right and wrong or to understand the nature of the act he was committing. Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 478, 40 L. Ed. 499.

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY
D 000 321 965 6